açoc ceppa mjxco, mocpac tlachiazque in monaoan, in motaoan, in moomiolque: ca tioquaz, ca tiquiz in njcan ic timjtznonotza, a izquich ic timjtzonâpana, timjtzontetzilo, aco timjtzilpia in timonaoan, in timotaoan, timjtztlatlauhtia, tlê ticmati, tle ticmomachitia, tlê ticmatcatzintli nopiltze, ma iiolic ximovicztiuh, xiqujmontlalcauj in maujoß in motlaoan. Et.[a].

Ivin in quellaquaoaia, in qujchicaoaia, in aiamo cenca ixtlamati, in aço qujn jiopa tevica, motevicaltia,

7. Ibid.: "tendreys la lengua pegada a las cuellas de hambre."

8. Ibid.: "Y dexaras duro, se affigira la dada de la cosa de mantenimiento; que por ventura no se sandaras, y dexo tendreys trabajo, y flaqueza; antes q̃ alcançarde algun remedio, o buena ventura: cuanto de ser affigido, y trabajado, hasta la ultima de paciencia."

9. Ibid.: "dexajando hombre atrasse a los mayores en cosas humildes: como es dar agua a manos, y barrer, &c."

10. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book III, "The Origin of the Gods," p. 40; Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 294 (die hier, hinter der [unübersetzbaren Anrede]); Garibay, op. cit., p. 232 (imperativamente). For xiqual, read xiqualmoquixtl or a similar form. The text is garbled, as is seen in the Aztec column of the left.

441
484

for the first time went with and was one of a company of others [going to] places of which he wished to know, and departing for distant lands. Yet everywhere they cared for him, teaching and instructing him with these words. In such places as the forests and deserts he realized the estate of merchant or vanguard merchant.[11] in canpa ie ontlamatiznequi, injic ie vnpeuc veca, oc noviian quinemjtia, quijtlâtatitia, quijtlâtlachiâtia in jntlatolica, in iuhcan quauhtla, çacatla in amaxcanvia in pochtecaiotl, in ontomecaiotl.

11. Corresponding Spanish text: "Desta manera los mercaderes viejos, a los mercaderes, que nuevamente yuan con otros mercaderes, a tierras estraños a mercadear, los hablauan, y enseñauan; y porque deseauan sus trabajos, y diligencias, en que se ocupan de ser, assi en los poblados, como en los desiertos en la procuracion de su oficio, de diligencia."

Eighteenth Chapter. Here are told [what] the talk and discourse were of these same old merchants which they repeated to their sons who already knew distant lands.

Injc caxtolli vmei capitulo: vncan moteneoa in tlatolli, in jnnenonotzalia catca, in çan ie no iehoantin, puchteca veuetque, in quimjlhujaia in inpilhoan in ie onmatia veca.

And [as for] him who already many times had returned and came back from there and who already had beheld such [distant] places as the inhabited and populated areas, dangerous and ominous places, places of torment, they said little to him; only something well-chosen, measured,[1] approved, complimentary, discreet, agreeable, moderate, pleasing, and commending. No more was it very long and extended; no more on all occasions did they speak, nor annoy him, nor speak lightly, nor harangue inconsiderately.

Auh in aquijn ie mjiecpa iloti, ie mjiecpa mocuepa, in ie onjxtica in iuhcan inentla, inemja, in ouiçan, in tenamauhtian, in tlaihiioujliztitlan: ça quezquijch in quijlhuja, ça eccauhquj, ça ixiccauhquj, ça tlaiecolli, ça tlauelittalli, ça temachiuhquj, ça tlaqualittalli, ça ipan qualli, ça ipan tlauelittalli, ça ipan tlaiecolli, aocmo cenca viiac, aocmo cenca vitlatztic, aocmo cenca noviian ontlatoa, aocmo noviian quinemjtia, aocmo çan ilhujxtlatoa, aocmo ça ilivia tlatoa:

Only this did they say to him: "Here thou art, O youth. No more art thou a child; no longer art thou like one afraid. For already thou hast regarded and witnessed thy dust-covered places, thy explored places, thy traveled areas which thou hast wished to know.

ça iaquich in quijlhuja. Ca ojcan tonca telpuchtle: ca aocmo tipilhontli, aocmo tiuhquj tiemmachonj, ca ie tonjxtica, ie tontlachiztica, ie mjxtlalopan, ie mjxnenela, ie mjxonjcac, in vmpa tontlamatiznequj,

"In such places as forests, deserts, and cities, there is nothing to bring thee defeat, to frighten, daze, impede, or terrify thee. For already thou hast beheld all places, such as the markets, places where the merchants deal. Behold, we know not whether thy mothers and fathers lose thee forever. Perhaps thou goest for good; perhaps thou goest to be lost; perhaps somewhere into a canyon or a desert thou shalt be forced, and shalt perish; perchance in some city thou shalt come to an end. Perhaps once and for all thou art seen. Yet know and carry in thy heart that thou goest fortified by the tears and composition of thy mothers and fathers. And if still something may become the reward of us, the old men, perhaps yet thou shalt come back and make thy return, that once more we may know thee.

in iuhcan in quauhtla, çacatla, in aoacan, in tepeoacl, aocmo tle ic tontlapolotiaz, aoc tle ic tonjxmauhtiaz, tonjxmjqctiaz, aoc tle mjxtxicoloàia, aoc tle mjxixilquetzaz: ca ic noviian tonjxtica, in iuhcan in tlaieconian, in tlacoxia in ontemoca: ca amo ticmati, amoço ie icoen mjxixcaua, in monoan, in motoaua, aço ie icoen tiauh, aço ie cana tonmetztiziuh, aço cana atlauhtli, intlaoal itic timaquijhiuz, timopopoliujtiuz, aço cana tictlantoz in altepetl, aço ie ocamanian mjxco mocpac ontlàtlachia, ca tel iuh quijmatiuh in moiollo, ca moiollo itlan ietiuh, ca ic timellaquauhtiuh, yn jachequja, yn jntlaocal in monoan, in motoan: auh intla oquijla tomkoeual, in tiveuetque, in açoc mjlloch, monecuepal ticmochiujlquijuh, ca oc oppa timjxinimatiuque.

"And now, take care. Travel the road with caution, lest thou stumble upon something. For doubtless,

Auh in ancan tlè ticmemachitia: ma iiolic xocomotequjlli in vtli, ma itla tocoujcaiuuqj: ca amo

1. Real Pulcrito MS: ça yjmmoelqui, ça tlacchamachqui.

441
484

ferocious, cruel, and peopled by evil men, spreadeth the wasteland.[2] Carefully thou shalt go taking by the hand, each of them, gathering in groups, ordering, assembling, and bringing together, thy younger brethren. Do not abandon them disdainfully. Advise them as thou goest, that they may take grass and reeds and with them fashion seats [for their elders], there at the places of rest. However, all this we have given — our sighs, our discourses — to such as teachers, forest people, desert people, merchants, travelers, etc. But no longer is it necessary to relate so much to thee. For here we only encourage thee somewhat. Little by little offer thyself to the torment. Use all thy force. Thou knowest what is required, O my beloved son."

When he had been supplicated, then he also returned a few words. Thus he answered and said:

"I thank you for the favor you have shown me, O brave men. You have left me consolation. Who am I? What am I that I deserve this short talk, your encouragement, your motherliness and fatherliness? For you have opened to me [counsel] which was in your bowels, your breasts, which lay resting, guarded, and folded like precious feathers well-curved and well-pointed; like a green stone, round and well-polished; like fine turquoise, well-rubbed and glistening. Doubtless I shall treasure you; for so, covering me, penetrating my bowels and my breast, and resting in my heart, go your fatherliness and motherliness, which are not due from you. Etc.

"But this I beg you. What will our lord grant? Perchance I shall yet come to look you in the face. For now I leave you. See to the sweeping and cleaning — the little tasks of sweeping, gathering of rubbish, and laying of fires. Let it not grow dark, nor rubbish stand cast about, in my humble house. Continue to do this. I go leaving only my beloved mother, my beloved great-aunt, my beloved elder sister,[3] my beloved aunt, etc. For I go troubled and saddened on their account. Do your duty to them; advise them. Let no one make sport of them. Perchance our lord may somewhere destroy me. So all I thus entrust to you, and my heart is content."

tlacacmelletoc: ca tequanoloc, motequanoloc, amo tleca onoc in çacatl in tlapotl, ma ivian in matitech xiquimonantiuh, xiquimonhuntiuh, xiquimoololotiuh, xiquimotepeuhtiuh, xiquimotecoquiztitiuh, xiquimoñechcatiuh in tlotlicchan: ma tiquimonnotiecuiji, ma xiquimonnoteztiuh: inic contecujinque in çacatzintli, in petzintli: iuan inic contitlalilinque, intecpaltzin, in tempa necoyhtoc, ca tel ixquich o, in oticquimacique in tihiio, in totlatol, in iuhqui in tlacatecpaca, in quauhtlaca, in çacatlaca, in puchtecca in jequac et.[2] ca ximo monequi in quenquich tinitecuiquinque, ca çe ojcan achitzin ic timitzonchicaoa, ma icoanca itlã xnomaquiti in tlaçhiiovilitzli, ma ixquich motlapaltzin, tle ticmomachitia nopilitze:

in jequac otlatlauhtilor, ojman no ic cen cuauhtzintli ic tlacuepa, ic tlamanquiliz, quijoa

Onnechnocuelilique in ocelquichtle: otlacuahqui in amoçiltoznia, ac nehuatl, ac ninomati, in ojcan cen cuauhtzintli nipipiçopilhuia, yn amoyechicaoaltitzin, in amoyecnamatzin, amoyetiaoznia, ca nocontlapou in amoxillantzinco, amoyecatlantzinco actica, in cepouhtoc, in cepouoc, in cuelpachiuhtoc, in iuhqui quetzalli, in vel vitzilihqui, in vel iaque, zuh in iuhqui chalchiuitl, in ololihqui, in vel patlaoc, in iuhqui teoaiuitl, in tlamatilelli, in uel coccoxoca, ayo cana namechonnotlazilitiz, ca ic nimonapantiuh, noxillan, nococualan onactiuh, noçiollo itlan onietiuh, in amoniaoznia, in amoyiaoznia, in amomo anquimaxcuujique. Et.[2]

Auh inin ca namechonnorhtiauhtilia quẽ tlacaoan in jiolloznin tanecujo, açoc amjxinco amocpacxinco njtlachiequjuh ca ie namechonnotlaicaujlia, ma ipan amoetlatohtinque in tlachpanaliztli, in tlachpanalli, in tlachpanaliztli in tlacujujlitzli, in tletlaliztli: macamo cenlaiocticac, tlaçilli onquijticac, l. onquijtoa, in nocnomacaco, ma oc conjxcuej in ça iio nococauhtiuh in nonantzin, in noneçiznin, in nouetiouzin, in nauijzin. Et.[2] ca iza nonnotequipachotiuh, iza nontlacocotiuh, ma ipan anoalmoquijxtiquac, ipan amoetlatohtinque, ma caiac iza mococaiooac, in aço cana nechmopopolhuia tanecujo: ca ixquich no ic amoxtzinco nonnocauhtiuh, vel onietiuh in notlalle.

2. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book VI, cap. xiii, fol. 214: Inchaiuah inquimpoch in amoxpoyn; the corresponding Spanish text reads: "Esto es la lindeza y gentileza de los antiguos. Por ventiquatro que era dicho. Aquej era esto bagaje que esta de lindeza y gentileza se publicaron primeramente nuestros antepasados, cuyos historias primeramente son causa de miedosos y son causa de pasmo o horror."

Note, however, that in Book IX, cap. iii, Thomassin and Quezzatzotzi are identified as dueños del camino.

3. In "Memoriales con Escritos" (Academia de la Historia MS), p. 207, cuñadas is translated sobrinas.

Then all his household wept over it. There were tearful greetings by all the old merchants, men and women. But he who could not weep only continued to sob behind the others, seeming to weep. And afterwards there was a little rejoicing, consolation, and drinking, to drive away and disperse sorrow. So afterwards all departed and went, and each one entered his own home.

Niman ic nechoquijtlo, in jchantlaca, nechoquitlapalolo, in ic nenchintin pachoca veuetque, pachtecá ilamatque: auh in aca auel choca, çan tiacampa tatzaoanotica, mochoquiocanenequj, auh çatepan achitzin ic papaccu, teoillalilo, tlaeuno, injc motlaoolpopoloa, miotlaocolcecemana: ic çatepan netlatlaxujlo, vitzilua, cacalacua in techachan.

441
484

[p.68 is blank]

Nineteenth Chapter. Here are told the offerings which they made for the sake of those who traveled to far places, and how respect was paid for the sake of those who died.

Injc caxtolli vmnavi capitulo: vncan motenoua, in ventli in quichiouia, im impãpa vecauemja ioan injc mouthaoaia in jpampa in mjqujja.

441 And his household thereupon began the penances. They let themselves become dirty. No longer did they wash their heads with soap, though they could bathe their bodies. Nevertheless, no more did they submerge in water. But every eighty days they arranged the washing of heads with soap. Thus they showed and made it known that they did penance for the sake of their children, their young men, who were still absent. All the time they thus went about doing, however long he was gone.

Auh in jchantlaca: ajmaan iquac compeoaltia in tlamaçeoaia, motzaiotia, aocmo mamovia, tel vel maltia yn jntlacapa, iece, aocmo pelaquj: auh nanapoahica qujmattiuj, in mamovicuj: injc qujnextia, qujtemachitia, ca ipampa tlamiçeoa in jnconeuh, in jntelpuch, in oqu jacauhque, inqujch caujtl iuh quj-chiuhtinemj, in jquin quiçaqujuh:

441 765 And if, perchance, he had gone to die, first were notified the old merchants. Their task was to inform and break the news to the people. These introduced a time of mourning into the home of the deceased. Thus they made it known that during four days there would be remembrances; his household would mourn. So they would be visited and consoled, and there would be a burial ritual[1] for their child.

auh intla noce omjquijto, ichoan achto caquitilo, in puchteca veuetque, intequjuh in teiolmelaoazque, in teiolpachiujtizque, ichoantin quicalaquja in choqujztli, in jxaiotl, in jchan omjquijto, ic qujtemachitia, injc nauilhujtl ilnamjcoa, mjccaoatizque in jchantlaca, ioan tlapalolozque, ellaquaoalozque, quimjlolo: in inoiuoah:

[515] And when four days had gone by, then his household washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said, the deceased was bathed; and thereby they destroyed and banished their grief.

auh in oquja nauilhujtl: iquac mamovia in jchantlaca: ic mjtoa, momjccaaltia injc compopoloa, conjilcaoa intlaocol:

441 765 778 And if somewhere he had died in battle, they set up an image of him made of pine torches bound together.[2] They made and formed his image; they adorned his likeness. This cuillotl was only a statue of pine logs which they split into sections and afterwards bound together. And they placed upon it all the paper ornaments, the paper array, the paper jacket, the paper neck-band, the paper stole. They piled up, strewed about it, and distributed them so that they would burn all of them with it. When this was done, when they had adorned the statue, when the one dead in battle had been wept, one more day

auh intla oncan oiacomjc, qujtlaliaia icujllo, qucujllotia, qucujllotilia, ixiptla qujchichiujlia, injn Evillotl: çan ocoquavitl in qujtzatzaianaia, çatepan quj-cujtlalpia: auh ixqujch iztch qujtlalia, in amatlatqujtl, in amanechichiouilli, in amaxiouilli, in amaccatl, in amancapantli, qujtlaolokoltia, qujtlatepeoaltia qujtlamamaca, injc mochi ioan qujdatizque: in ic iuhquj in oqujcencauhque cvillotl, in jquac ic choqujlilox oiacomjc, oc cemjlhujoica, in jcujllo icalpulco, cemjlhujtl in ca, cemjlhujtl in eostica: auh quja-jquac in ioalnepantla, qujdatiaia, vmpa in qujtocaiotiaia, tevitoalco, quauhxicalco, tzompantitlan:

1. Quiçaqujuh: possibly this refers to wrapping of the dead or clothing of a statue.
2. Cuillotl: Corresponding Spanish text: "un cuerpo de cruz, donde estaba, con cruz."

441 his statue spent in his tribal district [temple]. One 765 day it was [there]; one day it remained seated. And 778 then, when it was midnight, they burned it there in [the place] which they called the god's courtyard, at the eagle vessel, [or] on the skull rack.

But if the merchant had only died on the ground[3] — that is to say, if he had not died in battle, if perchance he had only taken sick, in the very same way they prepared his statue, but only in his home did it burn — not at midnight: while yet there shone a little sun, when he already was turning on his left side,[4] when the sun hung low, they burned it.

726 Likewise it was said that at the time of the day sign One Serpent, if it was established precisely at that time, when war was declared and proclaimed among the people, when, it was said, war was announced, at that very time the war began. At that time all the eagle and ocelot warriors set out to battle; all followed, crowded, and filled the road. They arose, they set out, departed, marched, and hastened.

X-787 And if one were born upon the day sign One [Serpent],[5] they said, the readers of the day signs corrected it and bestowed gifts upon him. He would become a receiver of favors, worthy of good deserts and merit; he would prosper and have sustenance. But if he did not do his penances well, according to his day sign, his gifts and favors would not come upon him. He himself would harm and destroy it. It was said that by his own act he neglected it and destroyed it by vice, etc.

[851 He who was then born they did not yet bathe;
553] they bathed him later, on Three Deer, and then gave him a name, for the reason already many times told: the day sign of the third place, when they waited for the day, the readers of day signs considered favorable. So they took this following one for him; this time they arranged and postponed it in order to give him a very strong day sign.

And Two Death, which followed, so they said, was evil; at this time there was nothing of merit. But Three Deer, so they said, was a good day sign; this is already related. The third place was always a good time; it was a time of attainment of merit, as the readers of day signs told one. And Four auh intla çã otlatuiçc ontemecatl, quiçtocaçuçj: intlacamo oiacuiçc, in aço çan ocoolinccujc, çan ie no ivi in quçchichiouia iruçiliio, iece çan ichan in tlatlaia, amo inelteçantia, oc achi tonatiuh, iquac in ie onmoxcaloa, onmopilua tonatiuh quçlatiuia.

No iuan mjeua: in jquac ypan in ce coatl tonalli, intla ipanti, ipan motlalia, in jquac oiaotlatoloc, oniacotlalivujloc, in omjjn, in otecaquitiloc iaoiotl, vel iqua ipan vnpeoaia in ieoc: vncan iaoquiaouia, ipan otlatocoia, ipan vnaoteuualoia, vnmoteua, onmacocuj, onmolinja, eoe, nêcemj, icxicouaua, in jaquich quauhtlocelotl:

auh in aquin ipan otlacat ce oçelotl tonalli, quçtoia, quipiliuia, quçnemactiuia in tonalpouhque, tlacnopilhujanj, illnujc, mâcoaale muchiouac, mocujltanoc, vnca quçquanj iex: auh intlaca mocellamaceua, in iuhquj itonal in, amo ipan muchioa in jnemac, in jcnopil: çan ichoatl quçnitlacalhuja, quçnopopolhuja, mjtua. iaeviian conmocaujlia, quçnotlçoinjctilia. Eᵉ.

yn aquin ipã otlacat in, aiamo caltiuia, quin ipã caltiuia in Ey maçatl: iquac quçtocamaca, ipampa ie mjeccan omjjo: in citiuian tonalli, in jquac tlacomilhujtilitia, quçqualitiuia in tonalpouhque: ichoatl ic contlaçoçquiliuia, vmpa çiçlaçequjniuia, vmpa onotlachichiuia, inic oenca quçtonalchicaoaia.

Auh in quçtoçquilia, vme mjçujatli, iuh quçtoa: amo qualli, ale vncã ca mâcoalli. Auh in ey maçatl: iuh quçtoa qualli tonalli, ic omjjo: in citiuia muchipa qualcan, vncan ca tlacnopilhujlistli in iuh quçcilhujain tonalpouhque. Auh in neui tochtli, in tlanauhcaiotia tonalli, in nauhcaiepa tlavica, tlacom-

3. Ordoñez: ibid., "Y si el tal mercader muerte, de su enfermedad."

4. Molina, op. cit. (Spanish-Nahuatl), Lado diestro.

5. The text reads ce ocelotl: it is correct in the Real Palacio MS.

843 752 And when the swelling appeared, upon his back was as it were a small, blue bump. Or [he might catch] inflammation of the grain.[22] And when the inflammation of the grain appeared, the child cried every night; and on the grain and scrapin were formed small, round or long [welts of] flesh. And in order to cure it, they cut them off and removed the little [welts] of flesh.

Auh inic ueci ximomoua, yeqiltepan ca, iuhqui pantonti, iuhquin tecuic: anoc cuetzpalicuetli. Inic ueci cuetzpalicui pilontli: cuicoui in choca, yuan yquxilco, yuanc motlatlalia tacatzoni, ohtlatzoni, tachacatzoni. Auh inic pati: quimotla, quiquiquixtia in tacatzoni.

843 821 And as for the pregnant woman: before her child had been formed as a being, they restrained [any of] them, when the moon arose, from looking up at it. They said to them: "Do not look at the moon! Your children will suffer sickness of the heart, or else will be hunchbacked!"

Ioan in ocelti: in iquac ximoo vel tlacatl motlalia in ipamauh, quiquitlacaxoltiuia, in iquac ualmomaxtia metztli: inic amo conxopaxtiuiquac, quimiltiuiqui: xiccaxoc xiccoxpixtiqueh in metztli, xiquiquiqui, anoc tenquixiuiz in amocuexuh.

825 777 441 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the monkey's hand.

Inic ompoualli cuptiuilo, yechpa tlatoa: in ocomatli ymacpal.

The merchants sought and cherished greatly a monkey's hand when they trafficked and sold goods anywhere. There they spread it out. It was said that thereby goods quickly were disposed of and soon all which they sold was bought. It was stated: "That which bringeth this about is the monkey's hand" — so foolish were they.

In ocomatli imacpal: in puchteca ceuca quiximoaia, quimoqiaktiuia: in iquac in campa tlamoquia, in tlanamacaia: vncan quiptecoia, quiplmach ic icuahca aquj, icuahca mochi cualo in tlein quiquamaca: quij ichaual iuh quichiua in ocomatli yma: ynic mochipolohtia.

777 264 824 Also of the sellers of mantles — when nowhere was disposed of that which they sold, when no one bought either mantles, or shifts or skirts — it was said: "They make them eat chilis that the goods may be disposed of." And thus did they do it. When they returned to their homes, they said: "Our goods are nowhere disposed of. Give them chilis to eat." Then in their midst they placed perhaps two or three chilis. It was averred that thereby the goods were disposed of. When they so did this, they said that they had made [their mantles] eat chilis.

No ichoaxtin in tilmomacaque: in iquac acan aquj in quiquamaca, in aiac quicua: in aço tilmatli, in anoço cueitl, anoço viquilli, quiplmach: quichiqua-qualtia, inic aquj. Auh inic quichiouia: in iquac oalvia inchan, quitoaia: acan onc in tetiamic: ma xiccochiliquaqualtican: niman ic itic contecpa, aço vnc, anoço Ey in chilli: quiplmach ic aquja, inic iuh quichiouia in, ic quitoa: quichiliquaqualtia.

777 525 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the pestle and the griddle.

Inic ompoualli oce cuptiuilo, ierchpa tlatoa in tomitoti, yuan comalli.

When one who played patolli[23] placed his pestle, and his griddle, and his grinding stone upside down in his house, and hung his pestle somewhere in a corner, it was said that thereby the householder would not lose, but only win.

In iquac aquja patoaia, in ichan, in jacatzoch, ioan in jocomal, ioan in jiuetl: intlapach quiquamaia: auh in tomitoti cana xoxoloco quiquilouia; quiplmach: ic amo quiplmoiaque in chanc, can ic tlachaqui.

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "otra enfermedad, que llaman cuetzpalicuetli, o que lobadillos en las ingles." Mas adelante Codex Mex (Ø correspondiente manuscrito Kansas) 270 dentro 2 Codex Mex [Madrid: Sociedad Mexicanista Española, 1900], p. 54).

23. The corresponding Spanish text refers to patolmi, which is an game.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

money, and therefore emphasize personal wealth in the possession of such a commodity. Manufacture was in the handcraft stage, carried on as a supplement to the main business of raising food. Most households were self-sufficient, making whatever they required in the way of tools, utensils or clothing. However, certain towns had access to natural resources which others had not and developed special skill in exploiting them. A town might have a good clay bed, for example, and its pottery would be far superior to that of surrounding communities. Another village would be especially successful in growing peppers, while a third might have in its territory a good quality of obsidian or flint for making stone tools. Thus such products would be exchanged by one town for the produce of another and even redistributed by the same process. Shells from the Caribbean have been traded from hand to hand as far as the central United States; pottery vases from Salvador were carried to distant Tepic* in Mexico; gold ornaments from Panama appeared as votive offerings in the Sacred Well of Chichen Itza in Yucatan.[1] (See Plate 38.)

Such regional specialization was accompanied by the perfectly natural tendency of individuals to exploit what they made and produced with greatest aptitude. As technical knowledge grew specialization increased, and the market became an important institution. Each town held one at specified intervals to which people came from great distances. At Tlaltelolco the daily market was a wonder of the Western world, exciting by its lavish variety the admiring envy of the Spaniards. The importance of the market still persists in Indian communities, so much so that in Guate-

*Te-pe'ek.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

438 mala the people travel miles to exchange their produce; and 443 so important is the market as a social function that a merchant will not dispose of his produce except at that place, even though offered payment far in excess of its market value.*

437 Barter was the only means of exchange, and value was 436 established by desirability and rarity. Money, an exchange medium of fixed value, did not exist. However, something had to be found which would balance an inequality of exchange by being not too valuable to use in adjusting small transactions and at the same time universally wanted. The cacao bean answered this requirement and was easily portable as well. The Aztecs were extremely fond of chocolate (the word itself is of Aztec derivation), so that beans were gladly converted into the national luxury drink. Quills of gold dust sometimes were used as an exchange medium, as were crescent-shaped knives of thin-beaten copper. These last had not the common acceptance or the utility of cacao beans, although they represented easily portable value.*

317 The most precious substance among the Aztecs was jade, 435 or stones resembling it in texture and color. Both jadeite and nephrite occur in the New World, and the American variety is distinguishable from the Asiatic stone. Uncut stones are seldom seen today, for there is no lapidaries' market in modern Middle America or the United States, whereas jade is still extensively worked in China, so that men find it worth their while to search rivers in Burma for boulders of this rare substance. (See Plate 3.)

435 The testimony of the Conquistador Bernal Diaz is conclusive on this point of value. During the night when Cortes retreated from Mexico the leader, after taking off his share of treasure, turned the surplus over to his troops. Many,

b: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

643
443
656

Nineteenth Chapter, in which is described the ordering of the market place, and [how] the ruler took great care of it.

The ruler took care of the directing of the market place and all things sold, for the good of the common folk, the vassals, and all dwellers in the city, the poor, the unfortunate, so that [these] might not be abused, nor suffer harm, nor be deceived nor disdained. Thus were[4] things bought, or sold: they arranged them in order so that each thing sold would be placed separately—in its own place or station. They were not spread about in confusion.

Market place directors were appointed to office. They cared for, and attended to, the market place and all and each of the things sold—the merchandise which was there. Each of the directors took care, and was charged, that no one might deceive another, and how [articles] might be priced and sold.

[306] Separate were those who sold gold and silver, and green stone, and turquoise, and emeralds, and quetzal feathers, and [those of] the blue cotinga, and the red spoonbill, and all the various precious feathers of birds, which were needed for devices and shields.

[291 278] Separate were those who sold chocolate, aromatic herbs,[1] and vanilla. Apart were those who sold great capes, costly capes, embroidered capes, costly breech clouts, embroidered skirts and shifts, large common capes, maguey fiber capes, and thin maguey fiber capes.

[262] And all food necessary to them also was sold separately: dried grains of maize, white, black, red, and yellow; yellow beans, white ones, black, red; pinto beans; large beans; gray amaranth seed, red amaranth seed, and fish amaranth; white chía,[2] black chía, and the wrinkled variety;[3] salt; fowl; turkey cocks and hens; quail; rabbits, hares, and deer; ducks

Ic caxtolli onnauj capítulo: ipan mjtoa, in tlatecpanaliztli in tianquijzco: auh in ichoatl tlatoanj, cenca qujmocujtlaujaia.

In tlatoanj qujmocujtlaujaia ipan tlatoaia in tianquijztli, ioã ixquich tlanamactli, impampa cujtlapilli, atlapalli, maçeoalli, ioan ixquich aoa, tepeoa in jcnotlacatl, in motolinja, injc amo quequeloloz, injc amo xixicoloz, injc amo ica necacaiaoaloz, injc amo nexictiloz, injc motlacouja, in anoço itla qujmonamaqujlia qujtecpanaia, injc nononqua monamacaz, icecentlamantli tlanamactli, çan iieeian, çan iononian, amo ixneliuhtoca, qujmjxquetzaia, in tianquijzpan tlaiacanque, in qujmocujtlaujaia, in jpan tlatoaia in tianquijztli: ioan ixquich tlanamactli, icecẽtlamantli tlanamactli, tiamjctli, ipan manca, qujmocujtlaujaia cecentlamantin tlaiacanque, in innecujtlaujl carca, injc aiac texixicoz, ioan quenjn tlapatiioaz, quenjn tlanamacoz.

Nonqua onoca in qujnamaca in coztic, ioan iztac teucujtlatl, ioan chalchiujtl, ioan teuxiujtl ioã quetzalitztli, ioan quetzalli, ioã xiuhtototl, ioan tlauhquechol, ioan ixquich nepapan totoiujtl, tlaçotli in jtech monequja tlaujztli chimalli.

Nonqua onoca in qujnamaca cacaoatl, vej nacaztli, tilxochitl. Nonqua onoca in qujnamaca veuej tilmatli, tlaçotilmatli, tlamachio tilmatli, tlaçomaxtlatl, tlamachcuejtl, tlamachvipilli, quachtli, ichtilmatli, aiatl, ioan in ixquich qualonj, in tetech monequj, no nonqua monamaca, tlaolli iztac, iauhtlaolli xiuhtoctlaolli, coztic tlaolli, coztic etl, iztac etl, tilletl, chichiltic etl, çolcujcujltic etl, aiecotli. Nexoauhtli, chichiltic oauhtli, mjchioauhtli. Iztac chia, tililtic chiã, chiantzotzol, iztatl: totoli, vexolotl, çiaoatotoli, çoli, tochi, çitli, maçatl, canauhtli, atzitzicujlotl, pipixcan,

1. Vej nacaztli: Cymbopetalum penduliflorum (Dunal) Baill, in Rimbach, op. cit., p. 315.
2. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 23, supra.
3. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 21, supra. Sahagún (Robredo ed.), III, p. 61, says it is "una semilla como lenteja blanca."

443 and other water birds,[4] gulls,[5] and wild geese;[6]
643 maguey syrup and honey; hot chilis, chili from Atzitziuacan, small chilis,[7] chili powder, yellow chili, chili
656 from the Couixca, sharp-pointed red chilis, long 262 chilis, smoked chilis; small, wild tomatoes,[8] and ordinary tomatoes.

And separately were sold every kind of fruit: the American cherry, avocados, plums, guavas, sweet potatoes, manihot,[9] sapotas,[10] anonas,[11] yellow sapotas, sapotillas,[12] tejocotes,[13] tuna cactus, mesquite beans, marchpane, cacomitzi,[14] cimatl roots,[15] squash cut in pieces, chayote,[16] squash seeds, Cassia seeds;[17] and white fish, frogs, and water dogs; water fly eggs, water flies, lake scum, and red shellfish; and white [314] paper made of the bark of trees, and incense, and [317] rubber, and lime, and obsidian; and firewood, and 412 poles, logs, planks, and chips of wood; digging sticks, pointed oaken poles, hatchets, paddles, staves;
[413] maguey roots,[18] maguey fiber, and cured leather, and sandals; and copper axes, copper needles, and carpenters' and sculptors' copper chisels; and all manner of edible herbs—onions, water plant leaves, thistles,[19] amaranth greens and heads,[20] purslane, mixed greens, varieties of sorrel;[21] tuna cactus fruit, sweet and acid; squash greens, tender young squash, squash blos-tlalalacatl. Necuetzaoac, quauhnecutli, tonalchilli, atzitziouacaiotl chilli, chiltecpin, texiochilli, chilcoztli, coujxcaiotl chillj, mjlchilli, viiac chilli, pocheoac chilli, mjltomatl, xitomatl:

ioan nonqua monamaca, in jxquitlamantli xochiqualli. Capoli, aoacatl, maçaxocotl, xaxocotl, camotli, quauhcamotli, teçontzapotl, eriotzapotl, atzapotl, tzapotl, texocotl, nochtli, mjxquitl, itlaaquitlo, chiancaca, cacomjtl, çimatl, aiotlatlapantli, chaiotli, aiooachtli, quauhaiooachtli, ioan iztac mjchin, cujatl, axolotl, aoauhtli, axaxaiacatl, tecujtlatl, ixcaujtli, ioan iztac quauhamatl, ioã copalli, ioan olli, ioan tenextli, ioan iztli, ioan tlatlatilquaujtl, ioan quaoacatl, quammjmjlli, vapalli, tlaxamanjlli, victli, vitzoctli, tlateconj, aujctli, matlaquaujtl, menelhoatl, ichtli, ioan cuetlaxtli, ioan cactli, ioan tepoztli, quauhxelolonj, ioan tepozcoiolomjtl, ioan tepoztli tlacujcujoalonj, ioan tepoztlaquauhicujlolonj, ioan in ixquich tlamãtli qujlitl qualonj, xonacatl, tzaianalqujlitl, vitzqujlitl, oauhqujlitl, oauhtzontli, itzmjqujlitl, quillanenel, iztac xozocoioli, xozocoiolujujlan, nopalli, xoconochtli, axoxoco, aioiacaqujlitl, aionanacatl, aioxochqujlitl, eçoqujlitl, exotl, elotl, xilotl, oaatl, mjaoatamalli,

4. Atzimaxalatl: "son redondillas, tienen las patas largas, y agudas y angras; tienen las pies largas; son cenicientas y tienen el pecho blanco; dicen que nacen en la provincia de Atzilhuac; corren a esta Laguna de México entre las aguas o lluvia; son muy buenas de comer. Dicen que beben, y los tordos del agua, por tiempo se vendeva en pasos, dicen que las son entrar o bandas en la mar, dentro del agua, y que nunca más parecen" (ibid., p. 170). Cf. also Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 125, n. 1; Cecilio A. Robelo: Diccionario de Anáquimas (Cuernavaca: Imprenta del autor, 1904), pp. 542-543. Immarmaria, op. cit.; I, p. 487 (chichicalhuat) says there are two species—Phalacrocorax urinator BP and Lobipes lobatus L.

5. Pipiazcan: "son blancas y del grandor de palomas, tienen alto vuelo, ordinario sueño en mar, y al tiempo de comer al medio mismo sale dentro a la tierra, cuando estas aves vienen, entendiendo que es tiempo de comer A mar" (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 153). In Immarmaria, op. cit., II, p. 485, there are Larus franklinii SW in Rich, currently called apipiazca.

6. Tlalalacatl: "Anseres mexicani . . . . grandes como las de España; tienen las pies colorados y el pico, son pardillos; tienen buenas carnes; tienen debajo plumas blancas y blandas, (y) de estas plumas se aprovechan para hacer mantas; las plumas de encima son ruines, tienen buenas cuchillas para cortar" (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 169). These (tlalalacatl), according to Immarmaria, op. cit., III, p. 194, are Anser albifrons Gld.

7. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 22, supra.—"Cuarto género de chile llamado chiltecpin, muy tostado y menudado con ello" (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 102)

8. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 20, supra.

9. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 10, supra.

10. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 7, supra.

11. Cf. Chap. 13, n. 6, supra.

12. Sapotas, op. cit.; note also, however, Chap. 13, n. 7, supra.

13. Texocotl: tejocote—Crataegus mexicana Moc. (Immarmaria, op. cit., III, p. 190).

14. Cacomitzi: cacomite—Tigridia pavonia Ker; melanthichal, el edible root (ibid., I, p. 254). Abu Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 657.

15. Cimatl: cimate, a condimento (Immarmaria, op. cit., I, p. 352). In Hernández, op. cit., II, it is identified as Bomarea edulis (Herm.) (p. 659) or D. persiciflorum Mart. y Gal (p. 661).

16. Chaiotl: chayote—Sycios edulis; Sechium edule; Cucumis acutangulus (Immarmaria, op. cit., I, p. 477). In Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 169, Sechium edule Sw.

17. In Hernández, op. cit., I, pp. 171ff., various kinds of quauhxaxacatl are identified as Jacquinia ruscus Linn., Mimosa asiliscana (?) Pohl, Crescen sp., Cassia fistula Linn.

18. Metelhuat: metl (maguey), uilhuatl (principio, comienzo, in Molina, op. cit.).

19. Immarmaria, op. cit., p. 213, notes that Simeón must be in error in translating atzitzquilitl as cardoon, since the latter is not native to Mexico; the Badianus MS (Pls. 38, 73) discusses a thistle (Cirsium sp.). Immarmaria, op. cit., II, p. 62, describes it (quiquelite) as, "En México esparce de chinchada" (xitzhuhu).

19a. See Sauer, op. cit., pp. 565-4, 569. Sauer suggests that "huachinanti may be a corruption of . . . cuachinanti," a chamaedaphne: C. Nuttallii and C. pseudoxus are mentioned.

20. Xonacatl: xocoyol—Oxalis corniculata H. B. K.; O. corniculata L.; O. corniculata Cav.; O. corniculata Dc. (Immarmaria, op. cit., II, p. 154). Immarmaria (op. cit., p. 236) mentions other varieties of Oxalis, but on p. 213 notes that the term xocoyol is used also for Rumex (indigenus Americus), and that xocoyoquilitl likewise identifies two species of Rumex.

6: Sahagún M-S (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

sesa; bean greens[21] and green beans; green maize, tender maize, tender maize stalks; tamales of maize blossoms, tortillas of green maize, and all edible things—tortillas, tamales, tamales and tortillas with honey, large tortillas, and rolled tortillas.

And also there were proprietors among whom were spread out smoking tubes, pipes, and cigars, [some] quite resinous and aromatic; and tobacco bowls; and large pottery braziers and hearths, and earthen basins, and pots, and jars for storing water, and settling jars, and flat cooking plates, and sauce vessels, and earthen cups, and everything [made of] earthenware.

And those who were directors of the market place, if they did not show concern over their office, were driven forth and made to abandon their office. And if someone sold stolen goods—perchance a costly cape, or a green stone,—if it were made known and he did not declare from whom he had bought that which had been stolen, they went to exact the penalty, and he died. Such was the sentence of the lords and judges, so that [men] would be fearful of that which was stolen and no one would buy it. .

It was the duty of the market place folk to make the war provisions—biscuits, and finely ground, dried maize and chía seeds, and dried maize dough, and dried, lime-treated maize dough. With these was the market place charged, and the market place directors, the men and women thus appointed, were charged with assigning the tribute.

elodlazcalli, ioan in jaquijch qualonj, tlaxcalli, tamalli, necutamalli, necutlaxcalli, vei tlaxcalli, tlaxcalmjmjlli. 443 443 656 262

No ioan vncatca, in tlaiacanque in jpan manca acaquauijtl, acaiiitcl, iiectlalli, vel ocotzoio, ioan xochiocotzotl, ioan iiecaxitl, ioan apantlecaxitl, ioã tlequauitli, ioan apauitli, ioan xoctli, ioan atlalilcomjtl, ioan xaiocomjtl, ioan comalli, ioan molcaxitl, ioan in çoquijtecomatl, ioã in jaquijch tlamantli çoquijtlatquijtl. 443 463 656 [276] [145]

Auh in ichoantin tianquijzpan tlaiacanque, intlacamo quimocujtlauia, intequjuh, totoco, ioan caoaltilo in jntequjuh. Auh intla aca tlachtectli quinamaca, aço tlaçotilmatli, anoço chalchiujtl, intla oximachiliioc, intlacamo quinentia in aquin quicohujli, in tlein tlachtectli, quizacutiuh, mjquja, iuhquj tlatonequjliaia, in tlatoque, tecutlatoque, ic mjmacaçia in tlein tlachtectli, aiac vel quicoaia, [685] in jntequjuh catca tianquijzpanãlaca quichioaia iiaujtacatl, in tlaxcaltenpochtli, ioan pinolli, ioan tenoutzalli, ioan nextamalhoutzalli, injc ipan tequjtia tianquijztli, ioan tianquijzpan thiacanque, in tlaixquetzalli oquichti, ioan çioa in tequjtlatoque catca. 443 722 651 705

21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 235, describes quauhtli as "hojas y renuevo de las frijoles"; on p. 338, however, it is given as Mimosa pudica var. Mimosa L.

[p. 70 is blank]

726 balls. Thereupon they shot iron bolts; but only one was pierced, in the forehead, wherefore he then died. Castañeda was the one who shot the arrow. And the chieftains moved in against him and they drove [the Spaniards] into the water, stoning them. And Castañeda there would have perished, but he clung to the boat and thus they carried him to Xocoxitlan.

[349] And one boat lay at Tetenantepoxco, where the walls curve.[7] And another boat lay there at Tocoxco,[8] [491] where the road goes direct to Tepetzinco.[9] It only lay on guard in the water, and at nightfall they took it [away].

And some days thereafter the Spaniards once again resolved [to war upon] us.[10] Then they came, [443] and chose the Quauecatitlan[11] road which led direct 317] to the salt market. But there on the Quauecatitlan road, they could not spread out. So all those of Tlaxcalla, Acolhuacan, and Chalco thereupon filled in the canals.[12] And on the road where they could not spread out, they cast adobes and roof beams; door lintels, pillars, and round logs were set in; they threw bundles of reeds into the water. And when it was filled in, then the Spaniards, disposed [in battle order], very slowly proceeded: a cotton banner led them; they went blowing trumpets and beating drums. And behind them went in position all the Tlaxcallans, and indeed all those of [other allied] [533] cities. Those of Tlaxcalla became very brave; they shook their heads, beat their chests, and sang. The Mexicans also sang. There was chanting on both sides. They intoned whatsoever they remembered. Thus they were able to animate themselves.

And as they reached Tlalhuacan,[13] all the chieftains were crouched; they stretched themselves out very flat, and were well hidden. They hid their ça ce inmjnoc iaquac, njman ic momjqujli: ichcaol in valtemj in castañeda. Auh in tiacaoã itech ietiquizque, atlan qujnnemjtique, qujntetepachoque: auh vncã mjquizquja in castañeda: auh ça acaltitech pilcatia injc qujvicaque xocotitlan.

Auh centetl acalli onoca tetenantepoxco, vncã in colivi tetenamjtl: auh in oc centetl acalli vmpa onoca in totecco: in jpan vtli tlamelaoa Tepetzinco, çan tlatlapixtoca in atlan. Auh in ie ioa qujvica.

Auh iquezquilhujoc ie no ceppa techcentlatallhuj in Españoles: nec vitze, ic qujoalmoxtilique in quavecatitlan vtli, in oallamelauhticac iztaxmacoian. Auh in vncan in quauecatitlan in vtli ca moiauhque. Auh in jxquich tlaxcaltecatl, in acolhoacatl, in chalcatl: njman ie ic catzupa in acalutli: yoan in oca moiauhque vtli: contlaça in xamjtl, yoan in calquavitl, in tecoc in tlaixquatl in tlaquetzalli, in quãmjmjlli, in acatl qujcujtlalpia in contepeoa atlan. Auh in jquac in omotzop nec valmotema in Españoles, cencã ivian in iativitze, qujniacana in quachpanjtl, tlapitativitze, tlatzotzontivitze. Auh imjcampa onotivitze in ie ixquich tlaxcaltecatl, yoan in ie ixquich altepeoa, cenca muchicava moquaquacuecuechoa, meeltzotzona in tlaxcalteca, cujca, no cujca in mexica necoccampa cujco, quecoa in çaqo tlein qujlnamjquj, ic mellaquaoa muchioa.

Auh in oacico tlalhoacan in tiacaoã vel nepacholo, vel mopachoa vel netlatilo, qujtetezontlaliaia, qujchjxtoque in quemman teevitiloa, in quenman quj-

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "cerca de aquella yglesia que se llama cabra hacia" Cano (op. cit.) places it in la Garita de Peralvillo, barrio of Tolpochtlalilco.

8. "Cerca de la Cruz, pueblo Atenantitlán." — Cano, op. cit.

9. El Peñón de los Baños — one of the corners of Texcotzinco, in the lake. However, Rapoje and Barlow, op. cit., p. 46 and map, locate it on a hill in the southeastern part of Tlatelolco.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "determinaron entre si los españoles de darnos guerra por alli."

11. Quauecatitlan acapitalli — "calle que iba derecho de Huexotlan al Mercado de la Sal. . . . prolongaba hasta encontrar el Alhuexotlán y probablemente correspondía con la Calzada de Huexotlán, Mercado, Almaxarrar, Carnaval y Ribera." — Cano, op. cit. Rapoje and Barlow, op. cit., show it in their map in in the northeast part of the city.

12. In Buenaventura, loc. cit., the version is somewhat different from what appears in either the Spanish or Nahuatl text of the Florentine Codex: "por razon de los españoles que los indios habian muerto en su provincia, intentaron á proseguir guerra de nuevo, haciendo juramento solemne que la guerra [illegible] de cesar hasta que vengaran la muerte de sus hermanos los españoles, y no quedase hombre dellos que no muriese en sus manos: al dia siguiente comenzaron á cegar fosfos los acequias y cenaxas de aquas por donde pudiesen entrar los unos donde los burgaleses no podian entrar, y así comenzaron á derribar chozas, y cubrir todas las acequias."

13. Corresponding Spanish text: "en barrio que se llama Tlalmacan que es agora cerca adjo" (San Martín).

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

Temple of Huichilobos, and that he wished to consult the Great Montezuma and have his approval. For this purpose he sent Jerónimo de Aguilar and the Doña Marina as messengers, and with them went our Captain's small page named Orteguilla, who already understood something of the language. When Montezuma knew his wishes he sent to say that we were welcome to go; on the other hand, as he was afraid that we might do some dishonour to his Idols, he determined to go with us himself with many of his chieftains. He came out from his Palace in his rich litter, but when half the distance had been traversed and he was near some oratories, he stepped out of the litter, for he thought it a great affront to his idols to go to their house and temple in that manner. Some of the great chieftains supported him with their arms, and the tribal lords went in front of him carrying two staves like sceptres held on high, which was the sign that the Great Montezuma was coming. (When he went in his litter he carried a wand half of gold and half of wood, which was held up like a wand of justice). So he went on and ascended the great Cue accompanied by many priests, and he began to burn incense and perform other ceremonies to Huichilobos.

Let us leave Montezuma, who had gone ahead as I have said, and return to Cortés and our captains and soldiers, who according to our custom both night and day were armed, and as Montezuma was used to see us so armed when we went to visit him, he did not look upon it as anything new. I say this because our Captain and all those who had horses went to Tlaltelolco on horseback, and nearly all of us soldiers were fully equipped, and many Caciques whom Montezuma had sent for that purpose went in our company. When we arrived at the great market place, called Tlaltelolco, we were astounded at the number of people and the quantity of merchandise that it contained, and at the good order and control that was maintained, for we had never seen such a thing before. The chieftains who accompanied us acted as guides. Each kind of merchandise was kept by itself and had its fixed place marked out. Let us begin with the dealers in gold, silver, and precious stones, feathers, mantles, and embroidered goods. Then there were other wares consisting of Indian slaves both men and women; and I say that they bring as many of them to that great market for sale as the Portuguese bring negroes from Guinea; and they brought them along tied to long poles, with collars round their necks so that they could not escape, and others they left free. Next there were other traders who sold great pieces of cloth and cotton, and articles of twisted thread, and there were cacahuateros who sold cacao. In this way one could see every sort of merchandise that is to be found in the whole of New Spain, placed in arrangement in the same manner as they do in my own country, which is Medina del Campo, where they hold the fairs, where each line of booths has its particular kind of merchandise, and so it is in this great market. There were those who sold cloths of henequen and ropes and the cotaras[1] with which they are shod, which are made from the same plant, and sweet cooked roots, and other tubers which they get from this plant, all were kept in one part of the market in the place assigned to them. In another part there were skins of tigers and lions, of otters and jackals, deer and other animals and badgers and mountain cats, some tanned and others untanned, and other classes of merchandise.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU 7 Aztec NU.7

Let us go on and speak of those who sold beans and sage and other vegetables and herbs in another part, and to those who sold fowls, cocks with wattles, rabbits, hares,

[1] Sandals.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

443 262 deer, mallards, young dogs and other things of that sort in their part of the market, and let us also mention the fruiterers, and the women who sold cooked food, dough [445] and tripe in their own part of the market; then every sort of pottery made in a thousand different forms from great water jars to little jugs, these also had a place to themselves; then those who sold honey and honey paste and other dainties like nut paste, and those who sold 443 lumber, boards, cradles, beams, blocks and benches, each [322 854 373] article by itself, and the vendors of ocote[1] firewood, and other things of a similar nature. I must furthermore mention, asking your pardon, that they also sold many [281 364] canoes full of human excrement, and these were kept in the creeks near the market, and this they use to make salt or for tanning skins, for without it they say that they cannot be well prepared. I know well that some gentlemen [364 514] laugh at this, but I say that it is so, and I may add that on all the roads it is a usual thing to have places made of reeds or straw or grass, so that they may be screened from the passers by, into these they retire when they wish to purge their bowels so that even that filth should not be lost. But why do I waste so many words in recounting what they sell in that great market, for I shall never finish if I tell it all in detail. Paper, which in this country is [314 289 386 276] called Amal, and reeds scented with liquidambar, and full of tobacco, and yellow ointments and things of that sort are sold by themselves, and much cochineal is sold under the arcades which are in that great market place, and there are many vendors of herbs and other sorts of trades. There [693 344] are also buildings where three magistrates sit in judgment, and there are executive officers like Alguacils who inspect [324] the merchandise. I am forgetting those who sell salt, and those who make the stone knives, and how they split them off the stone itself; and the fisherwomen and others who [324 sell some small cakes made from a sort of ooze which they 262] get out of the great lake, which curdles, and from this they make a bread having a flavour something like cheese. There are for sale axes of brass and copper and tin, and [325 gourds and gaily painted jars made of wood. I could 415] wish that I had finished telling of all the things which are sold there, but they are so numerous and of such different quality and the great market place with its surrounding arcades was so crowded with people, that one would not have been able to see and inquire about it all in two days.

[1] Pitch-pine for torches

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

Then we went to the great Cue, and when we were 436 already approaching its great courts, before leaving the [443] market place itself, there were many more merchants, who, as I was told, brought gold for sale in grains, just as it is taken from the mines. The gold is placed in thin quills of the geese of the country, white quills, so that the gold can be seen through, and according to the length and thickness of the quills they arrange their accounts with one another, how much so many mantles or so many gourds full of cacao were worth, or how many slaves, or whatever other thing they were exchanging.

Now let us leave the great market place, and not look 346 at it again, and arrive at the great courts and walls where the great Cue stands. Before reaching the great Cue there is a great enclosure of courts, it seems to me larger than the plaza of Salamança, with two walls of masonry surrounding it and the court itself all paved with very smooth great white flagstones. And where there were not these [364] stones it was cemented and burnished and all very clean, so that one could not find any dust or a straw in the whole place.

When we arrived near the great Cue and before we had ascended a single step of it, the Great Montezuma sent

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

out of the city, as I shall tell later on, and that of 361
Tepeaquilla,[1] and we saw the fresh water that comes from [312] Chapultepec which supplies the city, and we saw the bridges on the three causeways which were built at certain distances apart through which the water of the lake flowed in and out from one side to the other, and we beheld on [505] that great lake a great multitude of canoes, some coming with supplies of food and others returning loaded with cargoes of merchandise; and we saw that from every house of that great city and of all the other cities that were built in the water it was impossible to pass from house to house, except by drawbridges which were made of wood or in canoes; and we saw in those cities Cues and oratories like towers and fortresses and all gleaming white, and it was a wonderful thing to behold; then the houses with flat roofs, and on the causeways other small towers and oratories which were like fortresses.

After having examined and considered all that we had 361 seen we turned to look at the great market place and the 443 crowds of people that were in it, some buying and others selling, so that the murmur and hum of their voices and words that they used could be heard more than a league off. Some of the soldiers among us who had been in many parts of the world, in Constantinople, and all over Italy, and in Rome, said that so large a market place and so full of people, and so well regulated and arranged, they had never beheld before.

Let us leave this, and return to our Captain, who said to 797 Fray Bartolomé de Olmedo, who has often been mentioned by me, and who happened to be near by him: "It seems to me, Señor Padre, that it would be a good thing to throw out a feeler to Montezuma, as to whether he would allow us to build our church here"; and the Padre replied that

[1] Guadelupe.

805 reference to the circle. The third character was the 212 representation of a house, which they call Ce calli [One House]. It is placed to the west with reference to the circle. The fourth character is the likeness of a rabbit, which they call Ce tochtli [One Rabbit]; it is placed to the south with reference to the circle. By means of these characters they counted fifty-two years, assigning thirteen years to each character. And they counted in this manner, One Reed, Two Flint Knife, Three House, Four Rabbit, and so on, so describing circles by means of these characters, until 805 each one attained thirteen years. These, altogether, 796 make up four times thirteen and equal fifty-two 372 years. The purpose or intention of this count is to renew, every fifty-two years, the covenant, contract,
*787 or vow, to serve the idols. Because at the end of the fifty-two-year [cycle] they observed a very solemn feast and made new fire, and extinguished all the old [fires]. And all the provinces of this New Spain took of this new fire. Then they renewed all the statues of the idols and all of their adornment, as well as the intention of serving them for the next fifty-two years. And also they had a prophecy or oracle of the devil that at [the end of] one of these periods the world would come to an end.

805 The third count which these natives used was the 212 art of divination of the fortune or luck which those 787 born would have, whether men or women. It was done in this way. They had twenty characters. The first they named Crocodile, the second Wind, the third House, the fourth Lizard, the fifth Serpent, etc., up to twenty, as is represented in the chart at the end of this Appendix. They said that each of these characters reigned thirteen days, so that all together are two hundred and [sixty] days. Some say that these thirteen-day [periods] are weeks of the month, but this is not so. Rather they are the number of days in which the sign or character ● [443] reigneth. The weeks of the month are of five days, and so there are, in each month, four weeks; and the tianquiztli, or markets, are fixed according to this number of days, or used to be so fixed. So that by periods of five days they established the markets or fairs. And so they had no weeks [of seven days], but rather periods of five days. And nowadays, in many places, they set the markets and fairs according to our seven-day weeks. In this illicit soothsaying hazia la parte del septendrion en respecto del circulo. El tercero caracter era vna pintada que ellos llaman ce calli, esta puesta hazia la parte del occidente, en respecto del circulo. El quarto caracter es la semejança de vn conejo que ellos llaman ce tochtli: esta puesto hazia la parte del medio dia, en respecto del circulo: contauan por estos caracteres cincuenta y dos años, dando a cada vno de los caracteres treze años, y contauan desta manera, ce acatl, vme tecpatl, ei calli, navi tochtli, y ansi dando bueltas, por estos caracteres, hasta que en cada vno se cumpliessen treze años, los quales todos juntos, son quatro vezes treze que hazen cincuenta y dos años: el fin o intencion desta cuenta es, renouar cada cincuenta y dos años, el pacto, o concierto, o juramento de servir a los idolos. Porque en el fin de los cincuenta y dos años, hazian vna muy solemne fiesta, y sacauan fuego nueuo, y apagauan todo lo viejo y tomauan todas las prouincias desta nueua españa fuego nueuo; entonce renouauan todas las estatuas de los idolos y todas sus alhajas, y el proposito de seruirlos otros cincuenta i dos años. Y tambien tenjan profecia o oraculo del demonjo, que en vno destos periodos se auja de acabar el mundo.

La tercera cuenta que estos naturales vsauan, era el arte para adiujnar la fortuna o uentura, que tendrian los que nacian hombres y mugeres. Era desta manera que tenjan viente caracteres: al primero llamauan cipactli, el segundo hecatl, el tercero calli, el quarto cuetzpali, el quinto cosil. &c. hasta viente como esta pintado en la figura, que esta al fin deste apéndix: dezian que cada vno destos caracteres, reinaua treze dias, que todos juntos son dozientos y setenta [sic] dias. Algunos dizen que estos treze dias son semanas del mes y no es ansi sino numero de dias en que reina el signo o caracter: las semanas de los meses son cinco dias y ansi ay en cada mes quatro semanas y la tianquez, o mercados por este numero de dias se señalla, [sic] o solian señallarse, que de cinco en cinco dias hechauã los mercados, o ferias, y ansi no tenjan semana, sino quijntana, y agora en muchas partes hechan los mercados y ferias por nuestra semana de siete en siete dias. En esta cuenta adiujnatoria i no licita entreponense los caracteres de la cuenta de los años; conviene a saber, aquellos quatro caracteres de que arriba se hizo mencion, que es caña,

* See Plates 102-104.

796 mountains. Those who were there watching then raised a cry which rose to the heavens with joy that 372 the world was not ending and that they had another fifty-two years assured.

The last ceremony of new fire which they held was in the year 1507. They held it with full solemnity, because the Spaniards had not come to this land. In the year 1559 ended the next bundle of years, which they call Toximmolpilia. On this occasion they held no public ceremony, because the Spaniards and members of the religious Orders were now in this land. So that this year, 1576, is the fifteenth of the current bundle of years.

796 When they made the new fire and held this cere-778 mony, they renewed their covenant with the devil to serve him, and they renovated all the statues of the devil which they had in his house, and all the ornaments for his service, and those of their houses. And they rejoiced greatly to know that now they held the world to be secure and that it would not come to an end for fifty-two years. It is clear that this device of counting years was an invention of the devil to make them renew the covenant which they made with him every fifty-two years — [the devil] terrifying them with [the threat of] the end of the world and making them think that he lengthened the time and favored them thereby, letting the world move on.

796 Besides this they held, every eight years, a fast on 785 bread and water, for eight days; and at its conclusion they celebrated a feast in which they held a solemn dance by various personages, in which they said that they revealed what would come to pass or what fortune they merited; and they called it Atamalqualiztli.

796 They observed another feast every four years, in 304 honor of the fire [god], during which they pierced the ears of all the boys and girls; and they called it 805 Pillauanalizttli. And during this feast it is likely, and there are conjectures, that they held their leapyear, reckoning six [days] of Nemontemi.

805 The remaining time-count is of the year, which they divided into eighteen months, to each of which 796 they assigned twenty days. And each of these months was dedicated to one god, or to two, and
● 443 during it they held their feast. Each of these months they divided into five-day periods, and held the fairs on the last day of these five in one town, and five days later in another, and another five days later in y los que estauan alli a la mira, leuantauan luego vn alarido que le ponjan en el cielo de alegria que el mundo no se acabaua y que tenjan otros cincuenta y dos años por ciertos.

La vltima solemnjdad, que hizieron deste fuego nueuo: fue el año de mill y quinjentos, y siete: hizieronle, con toda solemnjdad, porqué no avian venjdo los españoles, a esta tierra: el año de mjll y quinjntos y cincuenta y nueue, se acabo la otra gabilla de años: que ellos llaman Toximmolpilia. En esta, no hizieron solemnjdad publica: porque ya los españoles, y religiosos estauan en esta tierra. De manera que este año de mjll y quinjentos y setenta y seis, anda en quinze años, de la gabilla de años que corre.

Quando sacauan fuego nueuo, y hazian esta solemnjdad, renouauan el pacto que tenjan con el demonjo de servjrle: y renouauan todas las estatuas del demonjo, que en su casa tenjan, y todas las alhajas de su serujcio, y las de sus casas: y hazian grandes alegrias, por saber, que ya tenjan el mundo seguro, que no se acabaria por cincuenta y dos años. Claramente consta, que este artificio de contar, fue invencion del diablo, parà hazerlos renouar el pacto que con el tenjan de cincuenta, en cincuenta y dos años: y amedrêtandolos con la fin del mundo, y haziendolos entender, que el alargaua el tiempo y les hazian merced del passando el mundo adelãte.

Demas desta cuenta tenjan que de ocho en ocho años, hazian vn ayuno de pan y agua, por espacio de ocho dias, y hazian al cabo, vna fiesta donde hazian solemne areito de diuersos personajes; donde dezian, que descubrian ventura o que la merecian, y llamauanla Atamalcualizztli.

Otra fiesta hazian, de quatro en quatro años, a honrra del fuego, donde agujerauan las orejas a todos los njños, y njñas, y la llamauan pillauanalizztli. Y en esta fiesta es verisimjle, y ay conjecturas que haziã su bisexto, contando seis de nemontemj.

la otra cuenta del tiempo, es de vn año: el qual repartian en dezjocho meses, y a cada mes le dauan veinte dias: y cada vno destos meses, era dedicado a vno, o a dos dioses: y hazian en el sus fiestas, cada vno destos meses, le repartian de cinco in cinco dias, y hazian las ferias el vltimo dia, destos cinco, en vn pueblo: y dende a cinco dias en otro, y dende a otros cinco dias en otro. De manera que el quarto quin-

[still] another [town]. So that the fourth period of five days was the feast of the god who was honored in the following month. The five days in addition to the three hundred and sixty of the complete year they regarded as idle and unlucky, and so did not take account of them for any purpose. But they kept track of all the days and all the months of the year, and of all the five-day periods of the year, which are four in each month.

These natives had another count which followeth neither the year-count, nor the months, nor the five day periods, which may wrongly be called weeks. This count hath twenty characters, as is represented in the chart behind this page.[1] To each one of these characters they assigned thirteen days, during which one of these characters reigned. Thus each one reigned thirteen days, and the round which these characters with their days made, is of two hundred and sixty days. This round includeth one hundred and five days less than a year. The count was used to foretell the circumstances and events of life which those born [on given day signs] would have. It is a difficult count, full of error, and with no foundation of natural astrology. For the art of judiciary astrology, common among us, is founded upon natural astrology, which is in the signs and planets of the heavens and in their courses and aspects. But this art of soothsaying followeth, or is founded upon, some characters and numbers in which no natural foundation existeth, but [are] only an artifice made by the devil himself. Nor is it possible that any man could have made or invented this art. For it hath no foundation in any science nor in any natural order. Rather it appeareth to be a thing of fraud and deceit than rational or ingenious. I say it was fraud and deceit in order to dazzle and derange people of low capacity and little understanding. Notwithstanding, this art of soothsaying, or rather, diabolical fraud or deceit, was highly regarded; and those who knew and practised it were also greatly honored and esteemed. For they told of things to come, and were regarded as truthful by the populace, although they spoke no truth except by accident and mistake. This art followeth neither years, nor months, nor weeks, nor five-year periods nor olympiads, as some, in their dreams, have said and erroneously affirmed.

tanaxo, era la fiesta del dios que se celebraua en el mes que se seguja: los cinco dias que son mas de los trezientos y sesenta de todo el año, tenjanlos por valdios, y haziagro: y ansi no hazian cuenta dellos para njnguna cosa. Pero cuenta tenjan con todos los dias del año, y con todos los meses del año, y con todas las quijotanas del año, que son quatro en cada mes.

805
796
443

Otra cuenta tenjan, éstos naturales que nj sigue la cuenta del año, nj de los meses, nj de las quijotanas, que impropriamente se pueden dezir semanas. Esta cuenta, tiene viente caracteres, como esta pintado en la tabla, que esta detras desta hoja: a cada vno destos caracteres, atribuyan treze dias: en las quales reinaua uno destos caracteres: de manera que cada vno reinaua treze dias, y el circulo que estos caracteres con sus dias hazian, son dozientos y sesenta dias: el qual circulo, tiene ciento y cinco dias menos, que vn año. Esta cuenta se vsaua para adiujnar las condiciones, y sucesos de la vida, que tendrian los que naciesen. Es cuenta delicula, y muy mentirosa, y sin njngun fundamento de astrología natural. Porque el arte de la astrológia judiciaria, que entre nosotros se vsa, tiene fundamento en la astrologia natural, que es en los signos, y planetas del cielo, y en los cursur y aspectos dellos. Pero esta arte adiujnatoria siguese o fundase en vnos caracteres, y numeros, en que njngun fundamento natural av, sino solamente artificio fabricado, por el mesmo diablo, nj es posible que njngun hombre fabricasse, nj inventasse esta arte; porque no tiene fundamento, en njnguna sciencia, nj en njnguna razon natural: mas parece cosa de embuste y embaimjento, que no cosa razonal, nj artificiosa. Digo que fue embuste y embaimjento, para encandilar, y desatinar a gente de poca capazidad, y de poco entendimjento. No obstante esto, era tenjda en mucho, esta arte adiujnatoria o mas propriamente hablando embuste o embaimjento diabolico: y tambien los que la sabian, y vsauan erã muy hõrrados y tenjdos: porque dezian las cosas por venjr, y del vulgo eran tenjdos por verdaderos, aunque njnguna verdad dezian sino acaso, y por ierro. Esta arte, nj sigue años, nj meses, nj semanas, nj lustros, nj olimpiadas, como algunos soñando dizeron, y afirmaron falsamente.

805
212
787x

1. See Plates 125 and 126.

1 [See cat. 116, pp. 126r, 126s. - Analyst]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

into such a city; and for the many times He has saved me from danger of death, as will be seen later on, I give Him sincere thanks, and in that He has preserved me to write about it, although I cannot do it as fully as is fitting or the subject needs. Let us make no words about it, for deeds are the best witnesses to what I say here and elsewhere.

Let us return to our entry to Mexico. They took us to lodge in some large houses, where there were apartments for all of us, for they had belonged to the father of the Great Montezuma, who was named Axayaca, and at that time Montezuma kept there the great oratories for his idols, and a secret chamber where he kept bars and jewels of gold, which was the treasure that he had inherited from his father Axayaca, and he never disturbed it. They took us to lodge in that house, because they called us Teules, and took us for such, so that we should be with the Idols or Teules which were kept there. However, for one reason or another, it was there they took us, where there were great halls and chambers canopied with the cloth of the country for our Captain, and for every one of us beds of matting with canopies above, and no better bed is given, however great the chief may be, for they are not used. And all these palaces were [coated] with shining cement and swept and garlanded.

As soon as we arrived and entered into the great court, the Great Montezuma took our Captain by the hand, for he was there awaiting him, and led him to the apartment and saloon where he was to lodge, which was very richly adorned according to their usage, and he had at hand a very rich necklace made of golden crabs, a marvellous piece of work, and Montezuma himself placed it round the neck of our Captain Cortés, and greatly astonished his [own] Captains by the great honour that he was bestowing on him. When the necklace had been his streamers, and his cloak, and his breech cloth, and all the things he had received, and his water gourd: All these he burned.

[If the captive was] a man, he burned

And a woman burned all her womanly array—her basket, her spindle whorl, her chalk, her spinning bowl, her warping frame, her cane stalks, her batten, her heddle, her divided cord which held [up the textile], her waist band, and her weaving stick, and her thorns, and her skeins, her shuttle, and her measuring stick.[7] All these she burned herself.

Of these of which they disposed in this wise, it was said that they would be needed where they were going, when they went; when they died, there [these things] would await them.

And when it dawned, all were adorned and arrayed. They put upon them their paper vestments, in which they were to die. When they had adorned them, then they were taken where they were to die. Two escorts led them; they went to take them up, and, lest they faint, laid hold of them. And two [escorts] were to bring [the bodies] down; they went to bring them down when they died, and a flag-bearer went bearing a flag. And two escorted each woman. They did likewise when they took each of the ceremonially bathed captives.

And when they had brought them [there], four captives to be slain went ahead. At the leading at yoan imaxtli, yoã in quezquj itlaçevil, yoã iintzo muchi qujtlatia.

Auh in cioatl, muchi qujtlatia in jnqujch icioatlatquj: in jtana in jmalac, in jtiçauh, in jtzacoalcax, in jtzatzaz, in jotlauh, in jxotzopaz, in jteçac, in jmecamaxal, ineanaia, yoã itzopaia, yoan ivitz, yoan iquatzon, iziouh, yoan yioctacauh: muchi qujtlatia inoma.

Injc iuh qujchioa y, qujlmach vmpa intech monequjz in vmpa iazque, in jquac mjqujz vmpa qujoalchiaz.

Auh in otlatvic, mec tecēcaoalo, techichioalo, qujmonaaquja in amatlatqujtl, in jpan mjqujaque: in oqujmōchichiuhque, mec tevico in vmpa mjqujzque, qujnvica in teanque, vmentin qujntlecavizque, in macana çotlaoa, qujntzitzqujzque: yoã vmētin tetemovjzque, in qujnoaltemovizque, in jquac ommjcque: yoan ce panoa, in qujvicatiuh panjtl: yoan vmentin, teixamjque cioa: çan muchivi in qujnvivica, cecenme tlaaltilti.

Auh in oqujmaxitique: iacattivi in mamalti mjquj navintin: apetlac in qujmjilpilia imjcxi yoã inma:

7. These weaving implements have been tentatively identified with the assistance of Dr. Gladys A. Reichard, Barnard College, Columbia University, N. Y., and Dr. Bertha P. Dutton, School of American Research, Santa Fe. The accompanying drawings of weaving and weaving implements are from Books VIII and X, after Paso y Troncoso.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Sixteenth Chapter, in which it is told how the women were trained.

[Theirs were] the device with which [the loom] was held; the divided cord; the skein; the shuttle; the cane stalks; the wide batten, which swished [as it was used]; the thin batten, one made of bone; the small batten with which they worked designs; the heddle; the flail; the spindle whorl; the spinning bowl; chalk; the shallow spindle whorl when they spun with feathers; the basket for unspun cotton, one for rabbit hair, one for cotton thread, the basket for feathers, and the earthen bowl for feathers; the rack for yarn; the colored wood[1] with which they dyed cotton when they wove; the bowl for colors in which they dissolved pigments; the paper patterns from which they took the shape of whatsoever they made; maguey spines, with which they picked the cotton threads.

They took personal charge of preparing food and chocolate. There were their older women, who had reared them; and their hand-maidens were hunchbacks and dwarfs, who sang and played the [small ground] drum to amuse them.

Injc caxtolli oce capitulo, vncan mjtoa, injc moichecoaia çioa. 286 462

Neanonj, mecamazalli, quatzontli, xiiotl, otlatl, ꝛꝛotzopaztli cacalaca, patlaoac: tzotzopaztli pitzaoac, omjtzotzopaztli, ꝛꝛotzopaztepiton, ic tlamachioa: teçacatl, tlaujteconj, malacatl, tzaoalcaxitl, tiçatl, xaxalmalacatl ic iujtzaoa: ichcatanatli, tochomjtanatli, icpatanatli, iujtanꝛtlj, iujtecomatl: tzatzaztli, tlacujlolquaujtl injc qujcujloa icpatl in qujqujti: tlápalcaxitl, in vncan qujpatla intlapal: amamachiotl, in vncan cana tlein tlamachtli qujchioa; vitztli injc qujuinzcuj icpatl: [386] tlaqualchioa, achioa, qujnomauja: vncate in jnnahoan in qujmjxcaltia, ioan in cocoa tepotzome çihoa, tzapame, cujca, tlatzotzona: injc melelqujxtia. 462 [722 534 522]

1. Tlamalpopoxqui: Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 222) describes the tree as "hermoso, y tienen los otros arboles que parecen plantados sobre el hermoso; es dulcel muy precioso, porque de él se hacen tapaceadas, tecolocles y alhaudas. . . ." Gómez is plentiful in Hernández, op. cit., Pl. 69.

[p. 50 is blank]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

[622
41]

THE CODEX FLORENTINO

expressed in our nursery rhyme: "Rich man, poor man . . ." various other activities, caught with a fresh and humorous eye. Although some of the background details indicate that Spanish influence was already strongly felt a generation after the Conquest, the general details disclose a strong persistence of the Aztec way of life.

[441]

[463]

Chief

Merchant

Lawyer

Doctor

Women

[759]

Sailor, beware

[502
501]

Ant Bite

[p. 112 (c)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 leadership. In Tenochtitlan the supreme chief, tlacatecuhtli, 643 "chief of men," was always chosen from the four and often [776] occupied first the position of "Snake Woman," a name also given to an important fertility goddess, Cihuacoatl.* The functions of these high chiefs are difficult to interpret in terms of Western civilization. Roughly the "chief of men" may be said to have represented the tribe in its external affairs, like war and alliances. As such the office had a greater significance to the Spanish observers who saw its holder as the leader of the tribe. The "Snake Woman" was the executive peak of the internal affairs of the tribe, where civil custom and religious demand governed almost every act. It is important to realize, however, that these chiefs could be deposed by the council at any time, if their services were unsatisfactory.

643 The continual election of such high officers from the same 646 family or lineage, when democratic procedure obtained elsewhere, is harder to explain. Tradition is strong in primitive communities, and a family that produced one effective man might in the next generation produce another. The council in Tenochtitlan chose successive chiefs from a fairly wide range—brothers, sons, nephews and half brothers were scrutinized in the rigid proving ground of public service. Furthermore, a wise council, exercising its tremendous powers, could make a puppet "chief of men" seem effective as its representative in extratribal affairs. Even then, to be considered for election a person of privileged birth had to meet the long series of tests on which eminence was based.

441 Two other specialized fields were open to Aztec youth:
463 trade and craftsmanship. Trade was a new development in *Se'e-wah-co-atl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

a tribal economy which was based on living off the land. 441
The opening up of intertribal contact through settlement 463 and warfare and the growth of material and ritualistic wants, led to the establishment of a class, the pochteca, whose members traveled all over Mexico, exchanging local for foreign produce. They had their own god and apparently lived in a 441 special quarter. From the valley they carried obsidian, cloth 439 and rope, which in the hot country they exchanged for shells, 463 tropical feathers, jade, cacao and other regional riches. In time they performed an important political function, spying out towns to conquer and reporting on the tribute which could be exacted. There is a very modern touch about the economic and political functions of these merchants who so often brought military conquest in their train.' (See Plate 38.)

Craftsmanship, with the growth of technique, must have 463 attracted many men to whom straight agriculture seemed drab and unrewarding. Potters, jewelers, weavers and featherworkers came to pursue these crafts to the exclusion of other labor. The enormous elaboration of the religion called into almost continual activity sculptors, masons and painters. The market, still important in Middle American Indian communities, had a profound social significance, for there, in addition to bartering his products for those of others, an Indian could hear the news and widen his social and intellectual horizons. (See Plates 34–35.)

The priesthood offered a relentless sort of career. Religion 793 penetrated into every part of daily life, and the individual participated in great and complicated rituals. Civic eminence depended greatly on religious observance, and chiefs led in [622] the direction of ceremonies. Therefore, it is hard to recog-

And when (there was) no wind, it was calm; the water spread like a mirror, gleaming, glittering.

And when her feast was celebrated, in the month of Ettalqualiztli, the eating of boiled corn,[48] then was celebrated the feast of the rain-gods.

They placed her image upon a framework; they put a skirt upon her, and a shift; they placed jewels upon her—a plaited neckpiece, from which hung a golden disc.

And they offered her offerings and the fire priests came out to receive her. They strewed aromatic herbs before her.

With the rattle board of the mist and rain gods, they spoke. The city elders, her singers, sang for her.

And then they slew her impersonator—a slave woman, bought and set forth by those who gained their livelihoods as water-carriers—those who brought in water, who fetched water in canoes; those who owned canoes; those who worked in irrigation ditches; and those who made canoes in the market-place, those who sold water for refreshment.[49]

Likewise they arrayed her, made offerings, and ornamented her. For she would go, when they slew her, to a place called Tlalocan. In the temple of the Tlaloca, they opened her breast.

Then Moctezuma paid great honors to [the goddess]. Before her image, he offered incense and slew quail.

Thus they said: "The chief gaineth rain; he doth a penance for his people." And giving thanks, they thus paid honor to the waters.

[For] they remembered that because of her we [may] live. She is our sustenance. And thence come all things that are necessary.

In the same manner they paid honor to the image of man's sustenance, called Chicome coatl; and to the image of the salt [-goddess], named Uixtociuatl. Thus they remembered what they had done; thus they honored the three.[50]

For indeed, through them the peasant earned his livelihood. Thus might he be satisfied; thus, in truth, might he live.

And thus was she decked: she was painted yellow and blue; she was painted blue about the lips and on her face.[51] She wore a green-stone necklace; she had turquoise [mosaic] ear-plugs. She had a blue paper cap with a spray of quetzal feathers. Her shift and her skirt were painted like water. She bore a shield ornamented with water lily leaf and flower. She carried the mist-rattleboard,[52] which she sounded. She wore foam sandals.

Auh yn jquac atle ehecatl, tlamattimanj, atzacatitimanj, 776 petlantimanj, cuecuecoxtimanj.

Auh yn jquac ilhuiqujxtiloia, çan no iquac yn ettalqua- 796 liztli: yn vncan ilhujqujxtililoia tlaloque,

[805]

coloeli in qujchichioaia yxiptla: qujcuetiaia, qujujpiltiaia, [778] qujcoxcatiaia, coxcapetlatl, itech pilcatiuh cuztic teucujila-xomalli:

yoan qujtlamanjliaia, qujnanamiquj yn jtlenamacacauh, yiauhtli, ixpan qujtepevilia, calchicoaoa ilhujtiocmj, qujcujcatia in calpolequc, ycujcacaoaa.

Auh in vel ixiptla, yquac mjquja: tlacotli cioatl in [567] qujcoaia, ichoan qujnextiaia, yn anamacaque: yn atl yc motlaiecultia, yn acaltica atlacuj, yn acaloque, yn apantlaca: [463] yoan acalquetzque tiapaquixco, in qujtechieltia atl.

No iuh qujchichioaia, no iuh qujtlamamacaia, no iuh qujcencaoaia: iuh tlantiuja: in miquja, ytocaiocan tlalocan:
yn vncan intzupan, tlaloque, queltetequjx.

Jn jquac y, no cenca qujmauiztiliaia, yn motecuçuma:
ixpan tlenamacoia, yn jxiptla, qujtlacotenjlia, iuh qujtoaia: qujauhtlatlanj in tlacatl, qujtlamachuja yn jnacaoal: yoan vncan mocuelilmati, ynjc qujnahujztiliaia atl:

qujlnamjquja, ca ic tinemj, ca tonenca: yoan ic muchioa, yn ixquich tetech monequj.

No iuh qujmauiztiliaia, yn jxiptla tonacaiotl, yn jtoca, chicome coatl; yoã yn jxiptla iztatl, ytoca Vixtociotl: ic qujlnamjquja; yn je tlamanjzti:

ca vel ynenca muchioa in macecalli, ic vellamati, ic vel 776 nemj.

Auh yujn, in muchichioaia: mozaoaia, texotica, motenujltec, motexotenujltec, mixcoçalhuj, chalchiuhcuaque, xiuhnacoche, texoamacale, quetzalmjiaoaio, atlacujlolhvipile, atlacujlolhuiujpile, atlacujlolcueie, atlacueçonanchimale, aiuchicaoaqx, cacalaca; poçulcaque.

---

48. Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 148): "este atualli era hecho de maiz cocido, a manera de arroz, y era muy amarillo." Durán (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 218): "el maiz cocido por il solo llamaiale pajolly pero a causa de revolverlo que frijol (atl) le llaman atolly."

49. Corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex reads: ". . . la festejaban . . . todos aquellos, que tienen sus granjerias, en el agua como son los que venden agua, en las canoas: y los que venden agua, en tinajas, en la plaça. . . ."

50. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . porque decian, que estos tres dioses: mantenjan, a la gente popular: para que pudiesen, vivir, y multiplicar."

51. Corresponding Spanish text: ". . . la pintaban, la cara, con color amarilla. . . ."

52. Corresponding Spanish text: "Tenia en la mano, derecha, un vaso, con una cruz: hecho a manera, de la custodia, en que se lleva el sacramento, quando van solo la llevar y era como cetro, dicta diosa." See p. 3, note 44. See also illustration of Chalchiuhtli yoan and Tzapotlan tenan.

blood], so that they terrified those whom they followed.[88] They fought, joining in battle against the valiant chiefs—chosen men [all].

And all [the chiefs], having taken their pleasure with wine, acted like buffoons, imitating and pretending to be warriors, unafraid of death, jostling one another, acting perversely, like warriors. Here they exercised their arms [against those who wore skins], and played at combat like fighters in war, none resting.[89] This was [at Xipe totec's temple] called Tozzocco.

And the young men garbed like Xipe totec, wearing human skins,[90] then went everywhere from house to house, begging. They were placed on zapote-fibre seats; bunches of [corn] were hung on them like jewels; they placed garlands on their shoulders, they covered them with flowers. They gave them to drink.

And if any woman had blisters, or ophthalmia, she said: "Let me make an offering to Totec, when [the Feast] of the Flaying of Men [is celebrated]."

[Xipe's] garb [was thus]: he had the quail-painting on his face.[91] Rubber divided his lips in two parts. On his Yopi-crown[92] was placed [a band] with forked ends. He wore a human skin, the skin of a captive. He had a wig of loose feathers, golden ear-plugs, a zapote-leaf skirt. He had rattles. His shield was red and had circles. His rattle stick[93] was in his hand.

Nineteenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Lord of the Vanguard (Yiacatecutli).[94]

He was the god of the merchants. Greatly they esteemed him, arraying in paper[95] the stout traveling staves[96] with totoca, ynic motlamauhtiliaia: qujnnecalíltiaia, qujnnamjquj- 776 in tiiácaoaa, tlapepenti, tlatzonanti: 796 yoan iñ iaqujchti, çan papaqujnj, yn mjhivintia, tlatlamati, moqujchnequj, moqujchnenequj, amjquizmauhque- [524] tsca momotlanj, iactlaveliloque: vncan moieiecoaia, moiao-mamachtiaia, yn juh mjcalizque iaopan, vmpa mocacoaoia yn aiac, mjtoaia totzcco. [346]

Auh yn totecti njman ie ic noujan, tepan cacalaquj, no 292 tlatlaeoa: tzapeicpalpan tlalilo, qujmocholcuzcatia, quja- 352 zochinezpanaltia, qujmicpacxochitia, qujnztlaoantia. 302

Auh intla aca cioatl, totomonja, ixcocoieia: qujtoa, ma njctlamaniliz, iñ totec, iquac tlacaxipeoaliztli.

Jn inechichioal, mizcolnechimale, tenmaxaltic vltica, 776 yiopitinn contlaliticac maxaliuhquj, conmaqujticac tla-caieoatl, yieoaio malli, tzonchaizoale, tzucujtlanacoche, tzapocueie, tzizile, ichimal tlauhtevilacachiuhquj, chicaoaztli yn jmac icac.

Jnic caxtolli vnnauj capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn jtoca yiacatecutli.

Puchteca intzuh catca: cencx qujmavizttiliaia, qujtlaquen- 776 tiaia amatica: yn jntopil, ymotlatopil, yni nenemja, ynj 463
484

89. The corresponding Spanish text describes the scene thus: "En esta fiesta, hacian como un juego de cañas: de manera que el un vando, era de la parte deste dios, o ymagen del dios totec: y estos todos, yuan vestidos de pellejos de hombres que eujan muerto, y desollados, en aquella fiesta. . . . Los del bando contrario, eran los soldados valientes, y osados, y personas valerosas, y esforçadas: que no temian en nada la muerte: osados, atrevidos, que de su voluntad salian, a combatirse, con los otros. Alli los vnos, con los otros, se exercitaua, en el exercicio de la guerra: peleauajn los vnos, a los otros: hasta su puesto, y de alli, bolujan huyendo, hasta su proprio puesto." Cf. also the description in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124. The game of cañas in the Enciclopedia Universal Ilustrada, Vol. II, pp. 299-300, is described as "Antigua fiesta, juego ó ejercicio caballeresco en que tomaban parte dos bandos ó cuadrillas corriendo á caballo, cavalgando gallardamente y arrojándose cañas de las que se resguardaban con la adarga." A Moorish exercise, in Medieval times adopted also by the Spaniards, it was reserved to the nobility. It took the form of a picturesque war-game requiring considerable skill in horsemanship and spear-throwing.

86. MS Biblioteca del Palacio, Seler, Einige Kapitel, has ximon in the Aztec text, instead of aiac, which is in the Florentine Codex. Seler translates the passage as "they stopped, ceased, at the place called Tozzocco."

87. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124: "Todos los pellejos de los desollados se vestian muchos mancebos, a los cuales llamaban Tototeeti." Cf. also ibid., p. 123, defining Tozzocco as "los muertos a honra del dios Totec."

88. In the MS Biblioteca del Palacio text (Seler, op. cit.), the word is mizqolchiuhtiaiac, translated as "er hat im Gesicht die Wachtelbemalung." Seler also (Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 102) uses the term mizqolchiuhtiaiac (quail face painting).

89. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 466) translates yopi as "the red people" (Tlapanecs), and gives two illustrations to indicate that they wore pointed caps.

90. "The word chicoacuitl means 'wherewith anything is made strong.' Word and symbol obviously refer to the strengthening of the reproductive function, to fertilizing, hence we also see the chicoacuitl with the first sign projecting between the human couples in sexual union." Seler: Tonalamatl of the Aubin Collection, p. 100.

91. Seler suggests that the form of the name should be iyacac-tecuhtli or yacatecuhtli ("the lord, the prince, the leader") (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 57). Torquemada (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 57) says he also was named Yacavichiqui ("el que tiene la nariz agujereda"); Francisco Javier Clavigero, in Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), Vol. II, p. 87, n. 17, adds the name Xiucatecutli.

In op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 4, p. 91, Seler refers to Yacatecutli as meaning "lord of the nose," and to the form Iyacatecotli, which Sahagún uses in the Florentine Codex, as "lord of the departed," explaining the connection of the cult of this god with that of Tezcatlipoca, and linking Yacatecutli with Ixcuiquihqui. Both the latter were among the "old gods."

92. Cut in four points and covered with liquid rubber. (Seler: op. cit., p. 92).

93. The corresponding Spanish text states: ". . . otra una cuba, manjar, que ellos llaman vitzli. Y tambien vsan de otra manera de bacuba,

776 which they journeyed. Wheresoever they slept, there they set 463 them up; before them they did penances, they drew [their]
464 blood, they offered incense that they might be favored by their god, Yiacatecutli—thus they begged and implored his favor.[94]

All manner of places they came to and entered. And hence they were named "the merchants who lead." They took their name from their god, Yiacatecutli.

These vanguard merchants[95] went into the coast-lands,[96] looking well for whatever goods there might be; they stretched over the southern coast-lands, they circled around the coast-lands.

They traveled exhausted by the heat and the winds; weakened, tired in the heat, they walked in great affliction. Their foreheads burned; they shaded the sun's heat with their hands [as] they plodded [under] its rays.

They betook themselves into the deserts; they climbed up and down canyons and mountains—all places. On elbow, on knee, they thus sped, they thus took much time.

[439] Greatly were they wearied, much did they suffer, that they might find precious green stones, emeralds,[97] turquoise,[98] amber, gold; [and] feathers of all manner of birds —the [long tail feathers of the] quetzal[99] and its black [825] and green head and breast feathers;[100] the red spoonbill;[101] the blue cotinga;[102] the parrot; the trupial;[103] the eagle; and the skins of fierce animals, of ocelots.

mozlatocaia, incipa cochinque, vacaa qujtilquetza, inpan tlamaceoa, mjço, qujcopaltemjlia, ynjc qujtlauhtia yn jntenuh yiacatecutli, ynjc qujtlanjlia, ynjc qujmatatacquijlia, yteicneliliz:

noujan acitinemj, calactinemj. Auh ic moteneoa, puchteca yiaque: itech canque, yn itoca intenuh, yiacatecutli:

Ostomeca, anaoac calaquinj, vel qujtemocinemj, in tlein qujmonanauhtizque, anaoatl qujzaqualotinemj, anaoatl qujlacatzocinemj, tonalcllauhtinemj, heecaciuhtinemj, mociauhpouhtinemj, mociauhpouhtiuj, elciciuhtiuj, mociauhquetztiuj, ynellelacitiuh, ynjaqua tlatlatiuh, intonal qujmacujtiuj, intonalonjuh ietiuh:

iztlaoatl qujnanjctinemj, atlauhtli, tepetl, qujtemouja, qujtlecauja, izquijcha ana: inmolicpi, intetepon ic tlatlacça, ic moquequetza:

vel qujciiavj vel qujhiiouja, ynic qujtemoa in chalchiujtl, in quetzalitzli, in tezuiujtl, yn apoçonalli, in teucujtlatl: in nepapan ihujtl, in quetzalli, in tzinjtzican, in tlauhquechol, xiuhtototl, in tozqui çaqua: quauhtli, in tequaneoatl, yn ocelupetlatl.

---

que es vna cosa negra lisjsima, maciza: sin hueco ninguno: que es como junco, de los que se vsan en España." Clark, in Codex Mendoza (James Cooper Clark, ed. and tr.; London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), Vol II, p. 106, gives bamboo (Bambusa spp.).

94. Torquemada (op. cit., 57-8) says they gathered the stones all together, girt with a ribbon, worshipping the stones as well as the god.

95. Traveling tradesmen who went into the tierra caliente (ostomeca anaoac calaquinj) (Seler: op. cit., p. 91). In Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 1104, Seler states: "Yacatecutli (der 'Herr der Nase') oder Iyatecutli ('der Herr der Weggangenen') war der Gott der Karawanenführer der ostomec anaoac calaquini der reisenden Kaufleute, die die grossen Handelsexpeditionen nach der Tierra Caliente leiteten und ausführten."

Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164) refers to the town of Ostuxlan in Anáhuac as one of the towns famous for the Xiuhtototi.

The reference in ibid., Vol. II, p. 350, to the Nanalostomeca, appears to refer to a grade or class of merchants inferior in rank to the Pochteca [103] tlatequa.

96. Anáhuac, in addition to designating the valley of Mexico, especially around the lake, refers also to the area in Southern Mexico, essentially tropical, which borders the sea coast. In the Spanish version of this chapter, Sahagún defines the term as "todas las poblaciones, que estan ribera de la mar." In Book III, Chap. XII, Sahagún states "Patronos hacia Anáhuac, que dista más de cien leguas" (from Tula). Also, "Entraban en la provincia de Anáhuac, no todos, sino aquellos que iban de parte del señor de México con quien estaban aliados y confederados . . . iban todos juntos hasta el pueblo de Tochtepec. En ese pueblo se dividían, unos iban a Anáhuac Ayotlan; otros iban a Anáhuac Xicalanco."—Historia general, Vol. II, p. 354.

Seler defines Anáhuac Ayotlan as the Pacific coastal lands and Anáhuac Xicalanco as the state of Tabasco.—Op. cit., Vol. II, p. 456.

97. "Las esmeraldas que se llaman quetzalitzli, las hay en esta tierra muy buenas; son preciosas, de mucho valor, llámanse así porque Quetzalli quiere decir pluma muy verde, y ytzli piedra de navaja, la cual es muy pulida y sin mancha ninguna, y estas dos cosas tiene la buena esmeralda que es muy verde, no tiene mancha, y muy pulida y transparente es resplandeciente." (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 279.)

98. "Teuchuitl, quiere decir turquesa de los dioses . . . es turquesa fina, y sin ninguna mácula y muy lucida."—Loc. cit.

99. "Las plumas que cría en la cola se llaman quetzalli (y) son muy verdes y resplandecientes, son anchas, como unas hojas de espadaña, dobláganse cuando las toca el aire (y) resplandecen muy hermosamente."—Ibid., p. 163.

100. "El zacuan que tiene en la cabeza esta ave (quetzaltototi) es muy hermosa y resplandeciente, llámanse estas plumas tzinitzcan; tiene esta ave al cuello y el pecho colorado y resplandeciente; se precian estas plumas y llámanse tzinitzcan."—Loc. cit.

There also is a bird by that name: "Hay una ave en esta tierra que se llama tzinitzcan . . . las plumas preciosas que tiene crecidas en el pecho y en las sobaxas y debajo de las alas; son la insignia preciosa y la insignia verdes resplandecientes."—Loc. cit.

101. Tlauhquechol or tezquachol means red quechol; or precious quechol. It is an aquatic bird. "Tiene el pecho, y la barriga, y la cola y las alas de color encarnado muy fino."—Loc. cit.

Seler gives name as Platalea Ajaja L. (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 633). Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 37n., gives Platalea Ajaja rosea L. (roseate spoonbill).

102. Sahagún defines xiuhtaqual as a bird the size of a jay bird (graje) (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164). Seler identifies it as Cotinga cincta[1] S. Coerulea (ibid., p. 634). Clark (loc. cit.) gives Cotinga amabilis Gould.

103. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164: "Cuando vuela y extiende la cola entonces se parecen las plumas aquellas (y) resaltan el color amarillo con las negras, y así parecen como llamas de fuego y como oro, crianse en Anáhuac."

776
463
484
[418]
[439]

And [they brought] vases, and incense-burners, and jars made of calabashes, spoons for stirring cacao, and stoppers for jars.

When they entered lands with which they were at war, and went among people who were far distant, they became like their enemies in their garments, their hair-dress, their speech,[105] [that they might] mimic the natives.

And if they came to an evil pass, if they were discovered, then they were slain in ambush and served up with chili sauce.[106] [But if] any—even one, even two—escaped alive, [such an one] informed Moctezuma.

This one then gave him a gift, and decked him with his amber lip-plug. He did him honor, singling him out as a valiant warrior, thus making him a man of consequence.

And when those who returned arrived home, when they had come back, when they had reached and had contentment in their land, they feasted all, [especially] the merchants and the principal men, that they might make themselves celebrated.

It was called "the washing of the feet."[108] They paid great honor to the cane, to the walking staff, of Yiacatecutli.

In the tribal temple[107] they set it upright. They offered it an offering first, when they laid a feast. And when they summoned people to a banquet, they always offered it an offering when they ate.

And when they ceremonially bathed and slew a man as a sacrifice,[109] he whom they offered was the likeness of their god, Yiacatecutli; or else one of [the following gods], or all of them, whom they worshipped—Chicunquiauitl, or Chalmecaciuatl, Acxomocuil, and Nacxitl, Cochimetl, Yacapitzauac.[109] No one determined, [for] it was of their own free will, whether they should offer up one or two men.

They bought them there at the slave market at Atzcapuzalco; they sorted and arranged them, turning them around many times, examining them, buying the good ones—those of good bodies, without blemish, the best men, in good health, sick in no degree, who were marked by no marks on the body.

Such as these they slew on the feast-day, Panquetzaliztli, when the feast of Uitzilopochtli was celebrated.

Thereupon they garbed them in trappings like those of Yiacatecutli, which were assigned to them.

And before they slew them, first they let them be seen by the people. It was said: "They gave them up [like intlanel iautitlan, in tzacuj, in tzacutica, tetlan onnemj, vel calaquj, motlacacuepa in nechichoalirtica, in nexintica, in tlatoltica qujntlaehecalhuja in chaneque.

Auh in tecomatl, in pocteconatl, in aiutectli, in aquaujtl, yn atzaccaiutl:

Auh intla otlaneçomaltique, intla oittoque: vncan qujnpoioinjctia, qujnchillatilia: ça aca, aço ce, aço vme yn oc nẽ tematitlanpa qujça, iehoatl qujoalnonotzaia in motecuçuma:

ic vncan qujmaca, caqujlia, yapoçonaltenteuh, yc qujmaviziotia, ic qujnezcaiotia, in tiiacauh, vncan ic oqujchtia.

Auh yn jquac calacia, ynchan: vn jmiloch, ynnecuepal oqujchiuhque, yn otlaltechacico, yn otlaltechpachiuhque: inqujch tlacatl qujnotza, in puchteca: yoan in tlatoque, ic motrittidaia:

mjtoa, mocripaca, cenca qujmavirtiliaia yn itopil, yn jdaccaia yiacatecutli:

cana in calpulco qujquetzaia: achto qujtlamanjlia, yn jquac tetlaqualtia: yoan intlaca nel motecoanotza, qujtlamanjlia in çan muchipa yn jtlaquaia.

Auh intla aca tealtiz, iehoatl caltiaia, qujzeoaia in jtzouh yiacatecutli: anoço ceme iehoantin yn mocheoaia, in qujnmotrutiaia in chicunquiauitl, anoço chalmecacioatl, yoan acxomucujl, yoan nacxitl, cochimetl, iacapitzacac, aiac qujiocuja, yiollotlama, yn aço ce, anoço vme, ca altiz tlacatl:

vmpa concovaia yn tlacanecujloca azcaputzalco: motlabtlatilia, motlapapatilia, qujncuecupa, qujmjhitta, yn qualtin qujncoanque, yn acan quenamjque, in tlacaiecti, in tlacamelaoaque, yn acan cucunque, yn atle intlaciuh ca:

776
776
567

ynjc iehoan qujnmictinque, yn ipan panquetzaliztli: yn vncan ilhujqujxtililoia vitzilubuchtli:

yquac qujnchichioaia, qujntlamamaca, intech qujtlalia yn juhquj ynechichical yiacatecutli.

Auh yn aiamo qujnmjctia, achtopa qujnteittitiaia: mjtoa qujmjmextia, ic qujtemachitia in tealtisque:

104. Cf. Torquemada (op. cit., p. 57): Yxcuinhuqui "propiamente representa persona, que tiene vivaça, ò habilidad, para mejor gracieamente, ò engañar, y es sabio, y sagaz (que es propia condicion de Mercaderes) . . . ."

105. Cf. Sahagún (Einige Kapitel, p. 32) citing Hist. Reyes. Colib. Mex. B. II §43.

106. Book IX of the Historia general deals almost entirely with the activities of the merchants. Chapter VI, entitled De las ceremonias que se hacia a los mercaderes cuando llegaban a su casa, que se llama lavatorio de pies, mentions washing mouth and hands.

107. Sahagún defines calpulli as "yglesia del barrio, ò parroche" (Spanish version).

108. Sahagún defines the substantive in this manner: "Estos duchos que majaban o azotes esclavos."—Historia general, Vol. I, p. 213.

109. According to the Spanish version, they were four brothers and a sister of Yiacatecutli. Sahagún (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 4, p. 92) recognizes Cochimetl and Yacapitzauac as synonyms for Yiacatecutli; "Chicunquiauitl or Chalmecacioatl is the name of a goddess of water and the earth"; Acxomocuil is Tamaulipecas; Nacxitl is Quauhtlatoa.

776 Quetzalcoatl, Chalchiuitl ycue, Tlaloc, Popocatepetl, Iztac
782 tepetl, Poiauhtecatl,[117] and any other mountains of which they had vowed to make representations.

And they represented the mountains, they made their 532 images, only in a dough of amaranth seed and maize,[118]
782 made in human form, made to look like men.

They gave them teeth of squash seeds; they provided them
755 eyes of fat black beans. With whatever adornment [the mountains] were represented, thus when they made them, they thereupon arrayed them.

[314 And they made papers, and they spattered them with 289] liquid rubber.[119] And they laid these over them as mantles.

And some of these papers, which were spattered with drops of liquid rubber, they hung on a cord, tied and fastened together, so that they were held in a row before the small molded ones [Tepicme].

They rustled, quivered, and flew in the breeze. Canes of fat, round reeds [held the cord] at both ends; [the canes] were stuck into and supported by the ground. On this were held the rubber-spotted papers.

[415] And a green spotted gourd was split in two and cored.
Before [the Tepicme] they set this, which they called the turquoise cup, for the wine, in which the wine was. Thus they offered [them] wine.

793 And it was the office of the priests alone, who were experi-
532 enced, to make [the Tepicme] and set them in place. None of the householders dared make or adorn them.

And on the fifth [day], when they feasted the priests, it was said, they caused them to forget.

782 When the Tepicme were fashioned, thereupon they held 755 a vigil and made music for them.

During the night, they made offerings four times; they set before the priests, before them who sang the songs for the Tepictoton, round tamales which they gave them.

And four times they offered them food during the night, and they made music for [the Tepictoton].

[198 They whistled with their fingers, they made music for 533] them with shells, with flutes, and with fifes.

[273 Young jesters, in their cups, who cut capers, and amused
463] people, blew the flutes. They also were offered food.

And on the next day they slew the Tepictoton [images]; they slew them, like sacrificial quail, twisting their necks. Then they gathered up and carried away the Tepictoton figures made of a dough of amaranth-seed and maize to the priests' house, where dwelt the priests.

And he who [caused to be] fashioned the Tepicme thereupon returned to his guests, where they were entertained.

273 And in the evening, toward nightfall, then all the old 782 people sat drinking wine—those already advanced in age, the 755

popocatepetl, iztac tepetl, poiauhtecatl: yoan in çaço quexquijtetl tepetl in qujnmeoaz in qujjiquiz.

Auh in qujnpiquja, in qujmixiptlatiaia in tqtepe, çan tzoalli, qujntlacatlaiaia, qujntlacatlachieltiria, tlacatlachiztiçatca:

qujntlantiaia aiouachtli, auh in qujmjxtelolotiaia aiecutli: in quenamj yntlatquj in qujmixiptlatiaia, in qujpiquja çan no iuhquj ynjc qujnchichioaia.

Auh yoan qujchioaia, amatetezujtl, colchachapatrxia, colchipiniaia, qujnquequentiaia:

auh in cuquj amatetevitl, tlaolchipinjlli, tlanlchachapatzalli, mecatitech qujpipiloaia, mecatitech qujnmetechilpiaia, qujnmetechçaloaia, ymjxpan antoc, ic itzacuiloque in tepicme:

hiçamacatoc papapatlacatoc, papatlantoc, ostopilquaujtl, necoc, nemeoc, necoccampa tlatlalacticac, uzmotzonticac, yn itech antoc tetezujtl.

Auh tzilacaiutli, tlaiztlapantli, tlaitztatactli: ymixpan mamanca, chalchiuhxicalli ipam poujia, vctli vnca ca, vctli ic mamanca.

Auh çan ichoan in tlamacazque, yn jntequiuh, in machioeque catca, yn qujnchichioaia, in qujntlaliaia: aiac çan moiocuiaia, in calla in qujnchichioaia.

Auh macujltica in qujntlalhujaia, mjtoa: qujnmelcaoaltiaia in tlamacazque:

yn o ie cauhque tepicme, njman ie ic qujntoçaviia, qujncujcatia:

in cricoal nappa in qujntlamanjlia, tamalololli in qujnmacaia, qujmanaia ymjxpa, in tlamacazque, in tepiccujca:

no nappa in qujntlamacaia cricoal, yoan qujntlapichiliaia, qujnmaquiqujxiliaia tecuciztli in qujnpichiliaia, yoan vilacapitzli, cocoujlotl, vilacapitzoaia, çan telpopochti, papaqujnj, haavienj, nihivintianj, tecocomeltianj, cocoleque, no tlamacoia.

Auh yn otlatvic njman qujmiccia yn tepicme, qujnquechcotona, qujnquechcuj, qujnquechilacatzoa, çatepan qujncrololoa, conecucuj, in tepictzoalli, qujtquj yn calmecac yn vmpa onoque, tlamacazque.

Auh in tepiqujnj, njman ie yc calaqujh yn itlacaouotzalhoan, yn jcoaxoan, vncan mopia, mopixtoque:

auh in ie ioaztiuh, in ie tevtlac niman ie ic tlaxana, motlaouncatlalia in vuetlaca, yn ie chicuaque, yn otlachi-

117. Gods of the air, of water, and of rain (cf. corresponding Spanish text). Popocatepetl and Iztac tepetl (Iztac cloud) are mountain-peaks in the Valley of Mexico; Poiauhtecatl is Mt. Orizaba.

118. Models of dough (vna matrix), in the Spanish columns; Seler renders it "ungesteckten Samen der Sterbkamaben" (Einige Kapitel, p. 27).

119. ". . . unas papeles figuras de gotas de ule, a los cuales papeles llamaban amatetenitl" (Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. 1, p. 128).

The tenth month they named Xocotl uetzi. On the first day of this month, they observed a feast to the god of fire, named Xiuhtecutli or Ixcoçauhqui. On this feast they cast into the fire, alive, many slaves, bound hand and foot, and before they had quite died, they took them forth, dragging [them] out of the fire, in order to tear out their hearts before the image of this god.

Al decimo mes llamauan Xocotl vetzi: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta al dios del fuego llamado xiuhtecutli o Jxcoçauhquj: en esta fiesta echauã en el fuego viuos muchos esclauos, atados de pies y manos, y antes que acabasen de morir, los sacauã arrastrando del fuego para sacar el coraçon delante la ymagen deste dios.

796X
805
776

Chapter 10
Xocotl uetzi

During the feast of Tlaxochimaco, they went forth into the forest [and] cut a tree of twenty-five fathoms' height and brought it, dragging it, to the courtyard of this god. There they pruned off all its branches and raised it upright, and it remained thus standing until the eve of the feast. Then they again laid it upon the earth with much caution and [using] many devices that it might not bump [the ground]. On the day before this feast, early in the morning, many carpenters came with their tools, and they trimmed it and made it very smooth. After having trimmed it and decorated it with many kinds of papers, they tied ropes and other cords to it and raised it up with much shouting and din, and they made it firm.

As soon as the beam or tree was raised and adorned with all of its finery, then those who had slaves to cast alive into the flames adorned themselves with their plumage and rich ornaments, and they stained their bodies yellow, which was the livery of fire; and, taking their captives with them, they performed a dance all that day, until nightfall.

After the captives had kept vigil all that night on the pyramid, and after having performed many ceremonies with them, they cast into their faces some powder which they call yiauhtli, that they might lose their sense of feeling and not suffer so greatly [the

Cap. 10.
Xocotl vetzi

1 c KL Xocotl vetzi c 1[1]
2 d Durante la fiesta de tlasochimaco: d 2[2]
3 e yvã al monte cortauan vn arbol de al- e 3
4 f tura de veinte y cinco braças y trayanle f 4
5 g arrastrando hasta el patio deste dios: g 5
6 A alli le escamondauan todo, y le leuan- A 6
7 b tauan enhiesto y estaua ani enhiesto b 7
8 c hasta la vigilia vigilie de la fiesta en- c 8
9 d tonce le tornauã a echar en tierra cõ d 9
10 e mucho tiẽto y cõ muchos pertrechos e 10
11 f para que no diesse golpe: la vigilia f 11
12 g desta fiesta, bien de mañana venjan g 12
13 A muchos carpinteros con sus herrami- A 13
14 b ẽtas y mondauãle y hazianle muy liso. b 14
15 c Despues de mondado y de auerle com- c 15
16 d puesto cõ muchas maneras de papeles: d 16
17 e atauanle sogas y otros mecates y leuan- e 17
18 f tauanle con muchas bozes y muchõs f 18
19 g estruendos y afixauanle muy bien. g 19
20 A Desque la viga o arbol estaua leuã- A 20[2]
tada y adornada cõ todos sus aparejos: luego los que tenjã esclauos para echar en el fuego viuos aderẽçauãse con sus plumajes y atauios ricos: y tiñjanse el cuerpo de amarillo que era la librea del fuego y lleuando sus captiuos consigo: hazian areyto todo aquel dia hasta la noche.

Despues de auer velado toda aquella noche los captiuos en el cu, y despues de auer hecho muchas ẽrimonjas con ellos, enpoluorizauanlos las caras con vnos poluos que llamã yiauhtli: para que perdiessen el sentido, y no sintiessẽ tanto la muerte, atauanlos

796X
313
[483]
[463]
796X
[302]
[535]
[278]

1. Marginal notation: Augustus ha diez xoxj.
2. Marginal notation: Xocotzi ahuatl.

pains of] their death.

The five remaining days of the year, which are the four last of January and the first of February, they named Nemontemi, which meaneth barren days. And they regarded them as unlucky and of evil fortune. There is conjecture that when they pierced the boys' and girls' ears, which was every four years, they set aside six days of Nemontemi, and it is the same as the bissextile which we observe every four years.

A los cinco dias restantes del año que son los quatro vltimos de Enero y el primero de hebrero llamauan Nemontemi, que quiere dezir dias valdios: y tenjanlos por aziagos y de mala fortuna: ay conjectura que quando agujerauan las orejas a los njños y njñas que era de quatro en quatro años, echauan seys dias de Nenontemj y es lo mjsmo del bisexto que nosotros hazemos de quatro en quatro años.

796X 777 [805] [304]

Chapter 19

These five days they held as of evil fortune and unlucky. They said that those who were born in them had evil outcomes in all their affairs, and were poor and wretched. They named them Nemo. If they were men, they named them Nemoquich; if it was a woman, they named her Nenciuatl. They dared do nothing in these days, because they were unlucky. Especially did they abstain from quarreling, because they said that those who quarreled in these days always remained with that custom. They held as a bad omen stumbling in these days.

These aforementioned feasts were fixed, and were always observed within the month, or a day or two ahead. Other feasts they had [which were] movable, which were celebrated during the course of the twenty signs, which made a round in two hundred and sixty days. And hence these movable feasts, in a year, fell one in one month, and another in another, and always varied.

Capi. 19.

1 A Estos cinco dias tenjan por malafor- A 28
2 b tunados y aziagos: dezian que los que b 29
3 c en ellos nacian tenjan malos sucessos c 30
4 d en todas sus cosas, y eran pobres y mj- d 31
seros llamauanlos Nemo, si eran hombres llamauanlos Nenoquich, y si era muger llamauala Nencioatl, no osauan hazer nada en estos dias por ser malafortunados: especialmente se abstenjan de reñjr: porque dezian que los que reñjan en estos dias se quedauã siempre con aquella costumbre tenjan por mal aguero tropeçar en estos dias.

Estas fiestas dichas eran fixas que siempre se haziã dentro del mes o vn dia o dos adelante: Otras fiestas tenjan moujbles que se hazian por el curso de los veinte signos: los quales hazian vn circulo en dozientos y sesenta dias: y por tanto estas fiestas moujbles vn año cayan en vn mes y otro en otro y siempre variauan.

[551] [578] [787]

Of the Movable Feasts

The first movable feast was celebrated in honor of the sun, in the sign which is named ce ocelotl, in the fourth house, which is named naui ollin. On this feast they offered, to the image of the sun, quail, and they offered incense. And at noon they slew captives before it in honor of the sun. On this same day, all drew blood from their ears—children and those who were grown—in honor of the sun, and they offered it that blood.

De las fiestas moujbles.

La primera fiesta moujble se celebraua a honrra del sol en el signo que se llama ce ocelutl, en la quarta casa que se llama naolin: en esta fiesta ofrecian a la ymagen del sol codornjzes y incensauan: y en el medio matauã capituos delante della a honrra del sol. En este mesmo dia se sangrauan todos de las orejas chicos y grãdes a hõrra del sol y le ofrecian aquella sangre.

796X [776] [785]

The Second Movable Feast

In this same sign, in the seventh house, all the painters and the seamstresses celebrated a feast. They

La segunda fiesta moujble.

En este mjsmo signo en la septima casa haziã fiesta todos los pintores, y las labrãderas ayunauã quarẽta

785 796X 463

785 fasted, [some] for forty days, others for twenty, in order to prevail over chance, in order to paint well
X 796 and to weave textiles well. For this purpose they offered quail and incense, and performed other cere-463 monies—the men to the god Chicome xochitl, and the women to the goddess Xochiquetzal.

dias, otros veinte por alcançar ventura para pintar bien y para texer bien labores, offrecian a este proposito codornices y encienso, y haziã otras cerimonjas los hombres al dios Chicome sochitl y las mugeres a la diosa Sochiquetzal.

The Third Movable Feast

X 796 In the third sign, which is called ce maçatl, in the first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses [776] who are named Ciuapipilti, because they said that then they came down to the earth. They adorned [289] their images with papers and offered them offerings.

La tercera fiesta mouible.

En el tercero signo que se llama ce maçatl: en la primera casa hazian fiesta a las diosas que se llaman cioapipilti porque dezian que entonce deceñdian a la tierra, atauiauã a sus ymagines con papeles, y ofrecianlas ofrendas.

The Fourth Movable Feast

X 796 In the sign which is called ce maçatl, in the second house, which is called ome tochtli, they celebrated a 273 great feast to the god named Izquitecatl, who is the [776] second god of wine: and not alone to him but to all the gods of wine, who were many. On this day they adorned his image very well on his pyramid, and offered him things to eat, and they sang and played [musical instruments] before him. And in the court-
[463] yard of his pyramid they set a large open jar of wine, and those who were wine merchants filled it to overflowing, and all who wished went to drink. They had [415] some canes through which they drank. The wine sellers kept feeding the large jar, so that it was always full. Mostly, those who had newly cut the maguey did this. The first syrup which they took out they took to the house of this god as first fruits.

La quarta fiesta mouible

En el signo que se llama ce maçatl: en la segunda casa que se llama vme tochtli: hazian gran fiesta al dios llamado Yzquitecatl, que es el segundo dios del vino, y no solamente a el: pero a todos los dioses del vino que eran muchos: adereçavan este dia muy bien su ymagen en su cu, y ofrecianle cosas de comida, y cantauan, y tañian delante del: y en el patio de su cu, ponjan vn tinajon de pulcre, y hinchianle los que eran taberneros hasta reberter, y yuan a beuer todos los que querian: tenjan vnas cañas con que beuiã: los taberneros yuan ceuando el tinajon: de manera que siempre estaua lleno: principalmente hazian esto los q̃ de nueuo aujan cortado el maguey, la primera agua mjel que sacauan la lleuauan a la casa deste dios como primjcias.

The Fifth Movable Feast

X 796 In the sign called ce xochitl, in the first house, they celebrated a great feast. The leading men and the lords danced and sang in honor of this sign, and they [301] otherwise made merry. And then they brought forth the richest feathers, with which they adorned themselves for the dance. In this feast the lord gave gifts [438] to the warriors and to the singers and to the palace folk.

La quinta fiesta moujble

En el signo llamado ce xochitl: en la primera casa, hazian gran fiesta, los principales, y señores, baylauan, y cantauan a honrra deste signo, y hazian otros regozijos: y sacauan entonce los mas ricos plumajes, con que se adereçauan para el areyto: y en esta fiesta, el señor hazia mercedes a los hombres de guerra, y a los cantores y a los del palacio.

The Sixth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce acatl, in the first house, the lords and the leading men celebrated a great festival [346] to Quetzalcoatl, god of the winds. This feast they observed in the house called calmecac, which was the house where dwelt the priests of the idols, and where were trained the boys. In this house, which was like

La sexta fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce acatl: en la primera casa, hazian gran fiesta a quetzalcoatl dios de los vientos: los señores y principales: esta fiesta hazian en la casa llamada calmecac, que era la casa donde morauan los satrapas de los ydolos: y donde se criauan los muchachos, en esta casa que era como vn mones-

In this house[1], which was like a monastery, was the image of Quetzalcoatl. On this day they adorned it with rich ornaments and placed before it offerings of perfumes and food. They said this was the sign of Quetzalcoatl.

The Seventh Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce miquiztli, in the first house, the lords and leading men celebrated a great feast to Tezcatlipoca, who was the great god. They said that this was his sign. Since all of them had their shrines in their houses, where they kept the images of this god and of many others, on this day they decorated this image and offered it perfumes, flowers, and food, and sacrificed quail before it, tearing off their heads. This not only the lords and leading men did, but all the people to whose attention this festival came; and the same was done in the tribal temples and on all the pyramids. All prayed, and besought of this god that he grant them favors, for [it was thought] that he was almighty.

The Eighth Movable Feast

In the sign which was called ce quiauitl, in the first house, they celebrated a feast to the goddesses whom they named Ciuapipilti. These, they said, were the women who died in first childbed. They said that they became goddesses and that they dwelt in the house of the sun; and that when this sign reigned, they came down to the earth and afflicted with various sicknesses those whom they met outside of their houses. And hence, in these days, they dared not go out of their houses. They had shrines built in honor of these goddesses in all the suburbs where two streets [crossed], which they called ciuateocalli, or by another name, ciuateopan. In these shrines they had the images of the goddesses, and on these days they adorned them with papers which they called amatestauitl. On this feast of these goddesses they slew in their honor those condemned to death for some crime, who were in the jails.

The Ninth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce quiauitl, in the fourth house (which was called naui ecatl), because this house was very unlucky they slew in it the malefactors who were imprisoned. And likewise the lord had a number of slaves slain as a superstition. And the merchants and traders made a show or demonstration of the jewels in which they dealt, bringing them forth so that all might see them. And afterwards, at night, terio, estaua la ymagen de quetzalcoatl: Este dia la 796^A adereçauan con ricos ornamentos, y ofrecian delante [778] della perfumes, y comida: dezian que este era el signo de quetzalcoatl.

La septima fiesta moujble.

En el signo que se llamaua ce mjquiztli: en la primera casa: hazian gran fiesta, los señores y principales a Tezcatlibuca, que era el gran dios, dezian que este era su sino, como todos ellos, tenjan sus oratorios en [778] sus casas: donde tenjan las ymagines deste dios, y de muchos otros: en este dia, componjan esta ymagen, y ofrecianla perfumes, y flores y comida: y sacrificauan codornizes delante della arrancandolas la cabeça. Esto no solamente lo hazian los señores, y principales: pero toda la gēte, a cuya noticia venja esta fiesta, y lo mjsmo se hazia, en los calpules, y en todos los cues: todos orauan, y demandauan a este dios que les hiziesse mercedes: pues que el era todopoderoso.

La octaua fiesta moujble

En el signo, que se llamaua, ce quiauitl: en la primera casa, hazian fiesta, a las diosas que llamauan [776] Cioapipilti: estas dezian que eran las mugeres que murian del primero parto, dezian que se hazian diosas, y que morauan en la casa del sol, y que quādo reynaua este sino, decendian a la tierra, y herian con diuersas emfermedades, a los que topauā fuera de sus casas. Y por esto en estos dias, no osauan salir de sus casas. Tenjan edificados oratorios, a honrra [784] destas diosas: en todos los barrios donde auja dos calles: los quales llamauan cioateucalli, o por otro [778] nombre cioateupan: en estos oratorios, tenjan las ymagines destas diosas: y en estos dias las adornauan con papeles, que llamauan amateteujtl. En esta fiesta, destas diosas matauan a su honrra los condenados a muerte por algun delicto, que estauan en las carceles.

La nona fiesta moujble.

En el signo llamado ce quiauitl: en la quarta casa [681] que se llamaua nauhecatl, por ser esta casa muy mal- 777] afortunado, matauan en ella los malhechores, que estauan presos. Y tambien el señor hazia matar algunos esclauos, por via de supersticion: y los mercade- [463] res, y tratantes hazian alarde o demostracion de las joyas, en que tratauan, sacandolas, para que las viessen todos: y despues a la noche, comjan, y beujan, to-

[1] [the calmecac. — Analyst]

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce itzcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La treszena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce jtzcujntli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mjsmas casas, hazian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mjsmo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solẽnjdad, de sus electiones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [289] 778 [565] [666] [431] 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and revered her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que tratauan en el agua: assi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuẽta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La sexta decima fiesta mouible.

Desque los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

she walked, much did she rattle, clink, jingle, and tinkle.

And her sandals, her foam sandals,[6] [had] side pieces. The side pieces were of loose cotton yarn with flecks of raw cotton woven in, put in by hand. And the tassels on the sandals were similarly of loose cotton yarn. And the sandal thongs also were of the same loose cotton yarn.

And her shield had water lilies [and flowers];[7] it was as if painted with a water lily leaf [and flower] design, [or] as if it had [that design], and was hung [also] with yellow parrot feather pendants.[8]

And the yellow parrot feather pendants were made [into tassels] like locust heads[9] [made of] eagle feathers and eagle down, and cut [pieces of] quetzal feathers and trupial[10] [feathers], and the red [and yellow wing feathers of the parrot] named teuxollotl;[11] and the shield [was] rimmed with a circle of yellow parrot feathers.

When she danced, she swung the shield around; it was swung in a circle.

And her reed staff was hung with paper spattered with rubber; it had rubber. In three places it had vase-like flowers, and there in the vase-like flowers was incense. On each of the three were [crossed] feathers; they were provided with [crossed] feathers.

When a dance was held, she walked leaning on it and thrusting it into the ground; she went marking the dance rhythm with it.[12]

And for ten days they sang [and danced] in the manner of women. All gathered together and took their places, the salt people and the salt-makers—the old women, the mature women, the maidens, and maidens recently matured.

While yet there was sun, while it yet shone, then they began to dance. They went arranged in order, each in his place, in rows; they held one another with onoc coiolli: yn iquac nenemj cenca yxaoaca, yxamaca, xaxamaca, tzitzilica, tzititzilica, 796x [30]

yoan ycacac ipoçulcac, yn icatnacaz, in cacnacaztli, icpatl potonquj inic tlaqujttli, ynjc tlamaiqujttli: auh yn icactochio, çan ao ie in potonquj: auh yn jcacmecaio, çan ie no ic yn potonquj: 796x 292

yoan ichimal atlacueçonaio, tlaatlacueçonanicuilolli, atlacueçonanjcujliuhquj, tozttlapilollo: 796x 293

Auh in tozttlapilolli, yn jiacachapullo, muchioa, quauhyujtl, quanmoloctli, yoan quetzalpoztectli, yoan çaquan, yoan zollotl, matlatlauhquj, motocaiotia teuxollotl, tozteneloio in chimalli: [237]

In iquac mjtotiaia, qujmamalácachoa yn jchimal, ic momamana: [535]

yoan yoztopil tlaamaiotilli, haamaio, yoan tlaulhujlli, vllo: excan in tecomaio, tetecomaio: auh yn vncan tetecomaio, vncan mamanj yiauhtli, tziuhtli yn ipan mamantiuh, tzitzilnio: [314]

in iquac mjtotia, ic motlaquechitinemj, qujtitilquetzztinemj, ic ontlayiauhtiuh. 796x 535

Auh matlaqujlhujtl, in qujcioapancujcatiaia, ixqujchtin cenqujça, qujcecencaoa yn iztatlaca, yn iztachiuhque: yn jlamatlaca, yoan yn jniolloco cioa, yoan ichpupuchti, yoan in ie ichpupuchchicacti: [463]

oc vnca in tonatiuh, oc tona in peoa mjtotia, tecpantiuj, tetecpantiuj, motecpana, motetecpana mecatica, motocaiotia xochimecatl ynic maana, ynic

6. Cf. ibid., p. 4, n. 22.

7. "Ñ amarrow," in Seler, op. cit., p. 132. The shield design is the same as for Huppa xuxuli (cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 21). Sahagún's Spanish column reads: "Tenja una rodela pintada, que unas ojas anchas, de la yerba que se llama ahuacuyema." In Vol. III of the Rehusdo ed., p. 336, in Dr. Heinrich Leiva's essay: "Ensayo de nomenclatura e identificación de las láminas 98 a 138 (Nos. 368 a 905) del libro XI, de la Historia de las Cosas de Nueva España' escrita por Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún," ahuacuyema is defined as "cabeza de negro. Nimphaja elegans, Hook, Nimfáceas."

8. "Otra manera de papagayos llamaos xuxuli y que estos colores cuando ya son grandes y maduros y crian; entonces tienen las plumas muy amarillas y resplandecientes; entonces mata esta crecidada en ellos, esta papagayos tanto mas es amarillinfrabaos, y por esto le llamaos xuxuli, que quiere decir cosa muy amarilla" (Sahagún, Rehusdo ed., Vol. III, p. 166).

9. "Con flores en las ciñen, hechas de plumas de aguila" (Sahagún, corresponding Spanish text). Chapulin, however, may be an element in Sacatchapulin.

10. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 18, n. 103.

11. "Otra manera de papagayos hay que llamaos cuchu (y) es muy semejante al que llamaos tuxuxuc; tiene el pico amarillo y corvo, la cabeza colorada, y todas las plumas del cuerpo moradas, las grandes y todo lo exterior de las alas, tiene colorado oscuro, matizado con amarillo; las plumas pequeñitas que están sobre la cuerda del ala que llamaos tolcal, son amarillas matizadas de colorado; el collo, como pelo rudo, que tiene cerca de la cola y cerca de las alas, es colorado matizado de amarillo" (Sahagún, Rehusdo ed., Vol. III, p. 166).

12. Cf. ibidem (Sahagún, op. cit.: "hace certaisa gestos en danzar"). In Sahagún's corresponding Spanish: "Cuando bailaua en el areyto, pasaua andando al baxaua, y deuaiaba (sic) a compas del baylo."

1 A [i.e., the god(dess) of the salt-makers, Uixtociuatl. – Analyst]

x796 And the old women and the old men, those who 887 made and refined salt, and sold and trafficked in salt, 463 and those who dwelt in the salt marshes, drank wine.

273 Wine was drunk, and oft became besotted. In their midst they poured out the wine in a flower-decked jar.

iztachiuhque, yn iztatlatique, yoan yn iztanamacaque, yn iztanecujloque, yn iztapan tlaca: tlãtlaoana tlãtlaoano, motlatlaoantia, tlanepantla xochapaztica qujoalmana yn vetli:

x796 One of the men poured out [the wine], and prepared it and distributed it. This one was not one who 273 had made [his wife] pregnant, whose wife was with child. If he who poured out the wine had made [his wife] with child, [then] he would not make one drunk; men would not be drunk. They would only counterfeit drunkenness; no one would become besotted [from] the wine.

ce tlacatl tetlaoantia, qujteteca, qujtemamaca, amo ichoatl in tlavtztia, in vtztli ycioauh. Auh intla tlautztia tetlaoanti, amo teiujntiz, amo yujntiqua: çan teyujcopina, aiac itechquiçaz in vetli.

And when the feast day had ended, when it had [578] been celebrated, at nightfall all then lay about. And some who were well-besotted insulted one another, or belabored others, or cried out at others. And at last they fell exhausted, and slept as they fell. And whoever yet had wine which he had left over, which he had left because he had been sated, which was named sleep-producing wine, afterwards, next day, he drank and finished it.

Auh yn ouetz cemjlhujtl, yn onjlhujtlaque yn oiooac, mec neteteco: auh in cequjntin yn oveliujntique, aço teixco, teicpac nemj, aço temjctia, aço tetzatzilia. Auh çatepan quaquauhtenuetzi, cocochi, cocochuetzi; auh yn aqujn, yn oc qujcaoa vetli, in qujxujcaoa, itoca cochvetli, qujn imuztlaioc inquj, in qujtlamja:

And any who had mishandled others, or brawled 683 with them, or cried out at them, thereupon, when x796 day broke, when they had come to their senses, supplicated [the injured ones to drink] this same wine, that they might satisfy them. And those who had not drunk, who had been cried out at or affronted, they let themselves be satisfied with [drinking] the wine; the offense was pardoned, and he held not against [the supplicants] their dispute, their injuries, etc.

auh yn aqujn temicti, yn aço teaoac, yn anoço tetzatzili, qujniquac yn otlatvic, yn omuzcali: çan ie ßo ie in vetli ic tetlatlauhtia, ynic teiolceuja. Auh yn aioni, in tzatzililonj, in pinauhtilonj, njman moiolceuja ynica vetli, motlapopolhuja, amo qujmolnamiqujlia, yn inneaoaliz, yn innemictiliz etc.

Here ended and concluded the feast of Tecuilhuitontli.

Nican tlamj, nican tzonquiça in Tecujlhujtontli.

And upon the morrow, then the carpenters came forth and assembled as they arrived. They brought with them their tools; there were adzes and hatchets. Well they hewed and smoothed [the xocotl] where it had knots, where the limbs branched out, where it was uneven.

They hewed another pole five fathoms long. They joined it, [so that it would] strengthen the crown of the xocotl. They made the crown very even. They girded all the tip with ropes, fastening and placing [branches and pole] within the ropes.

And when this was done, thereupon the fire priests adorned it with papers. The old priests helped and also those who cast [victims] into the fire aided. These [last] were very powerful and tall—exceedingly tall and big. They were chiefs.

The first was named Coyoua; the second was named Çacancatl;[5] the third was named Ueicamecatl. As such were masked they who pressed ahead with adorning [the xocotl].

And the xocotl image they fashioned [as] of flesh; a dough of fish-amaranth seeds mixed with maize they formed [for this]. They provided pure white papers for it, which they set in place. They bore no design.

Upon it they set [these]: its shoulder sash of paper; its paper breech clout; its papers[6] designed with falcons; its wig made of paper; its xocotl shirts, [of which there were] two. These were not put on, but were attached to the tree, in two incisions. Likewise they placed in another incision large pieces of paper, wide—a yard wide—and ten fathoms long, reaching down one-half the length of the xocotl.

And also they made three amaranth seed tamales, pierced them with sticks, in three places, and set them upon [the image]. And thereupon they bound on the xocotl ropes half way up on the xocotl—ten [of them].

And when all made ready, thereupon they raised it. And then there was much crying out and shouting.

They said: "Go on, there, braves! Pull with all your force!"

Thereupon they went to setting it upright; they went about raising it [by using] the wooden supports and prying it with a lever. And likewise as it moved, as it proceeded to rise, there was much clamor, much shouting, great din.

Auh in otlatvic: njman oalhuj, oalnechicavi in quauhxinque, qujoalitquj, intlatquj oalietiuh in mateporzli, tlaximalteporzli, vel qujpetlaca, qujzipetzoa, in vncan yixe, in vncã titicujtztic, in vncã xixipochtic.

Oc ce qujxima quaoacatl macujlmatl: qujtlaçalhuja, qujtoctia in jxcalo xocotl, vel cõnevivilia in jxcalo, in jquapitzaoacan, qujmecatecuja, qujmecacuja, qujmecatitlantlalia.

Auh in ie iuhquj: njmã ie ic qujtlamamaca, in tlenamacac, tlapalevia in quaquacujlti, no ichoantin tlapalevia, in tetlepãtlazque. Eintin, cenca chicaoque, quaquauhtique, quauhticapopol, quauhcholpopol, tetecutin caica.

In ce itoca: coioua. Injc vme, itoca: çacancatl. Injc ei, itoca: veicamecatl: iuhqujn mjxpolotinemj, motequjmati in tlachichioa.

Auh in jxiptla xócotl, in qujnacaiotiaia: mjchiouhtzoalli qujtlaliaia, çan cemjztac in amatl in qujmamaca, in jtech qujtlatlalia: amo ma tlacujlollo.

In jtech qujtlaliaia: yiamaneapanal, yiamamaxtli, itlotlona, yiamatzõ, ixoxocovipil, ixocovipil, vme: amo omocticac, çan quauhtitech caca: vme itzitziquijlpan: njman no contlalia oc ce itzitziquijlpan, vevei amatl, patlaoac: injc patlaoac, cen iollotli: matlacmatl injc viac, itlacapan acitica in xocotl injc viac.

Auh no eteti tzocioiol in qujchioa, qujquauhço: ezcan in qujquequetza: auh njman ie ic qujilpia in xócomecatl, in vncan inepantla in xócotl, matlactli.

Auh in omocenicauh: njmã ie ic qujquetza, njman ie ic tlacaoaca, tzatzioa:

qujtoa. Ma ecuel tiacahoane, ximotilinjcan, ixquich amotlapal:

njmã ie ic quecotiquetztivi, conquechilitivi, in quauhtonmaçatl, yoan qujquãmjvia: auh in iequene ie iauh, in ie mecotiquetztiuh: cenca tlacaoaca, cenca tzatzioa, cenca chachalacoa:

5. Probably pronounced in unison. Cf. the Jourdanet-Simeon edition, p. 129.
6. Reference could be to either paper or hand (ahuehuetl); in the Spanish text, Sahagún appears to favor paper.

given the name Itztlacoliuhqui, "Curved Obsidian Knife."[9] This [Itztlacoliuhqui is god of] frost. [Cintéotl] accompanied [the other]; they came together —not at a run, but at their leisure, approaching and slowly moving toward the temple, where died [she who was Toci's likeness]. Again they took their places there.

And upon the morrow, when dawn had reddened and it was light, then [the wearer of the skin of Toci's likeness] climbed up to place herself upon the edge [of the pyramid]. And the noblemen, [who] already stood awaiting her, then all converged upon her. Then they ministered unto her. One of them applied feathers to her head and her feet—soft eagle down; another painted her face; another offered her her shirt with the eagle design, and her skirt, which was only painted; another decapitated a quail for her; [still] another set incense before her. [All this was done] very swiftly. Then it was quiet; then all departed.

And when they had left, then came forth her rich vestments, called her paper crown and her market place banner. And her paper crown was wide; in the middle was the market place banner. There were five [banners in all]. In the midst was the one market place banner, and four [of them] were on the sides—two on each side. [This headdress] was called meiouli.[10]

And when they had attired her, then they brought the first four of the captives before [the other captives]. Then they stretched one [of the four] out upon the offering stone; she herself then slew [the victim] as an offering. She cut open the breasts of [all] four in the same way.

When she had slain these four, then she left [the others] in the hands of the fire priests, that they might slay the rest of the captives. Then she went where [earlier] she had gone to get her son; she went to bring her son, Cintéotl or Itztlacoliuhqui. At a little distance, her Huexteca went ahead. They were girt with twisted [paper] breech clouts, and had their mirrors on the smalls of their backs, and she bore her cotton blossom and precious feather spindle [with unspun cotton].

And the midwives [women] and those who sold lime went ranged on both sides, singing. The old priests proceeded, intoning the song, striking a small, lic yiativitze, vmpa itztivi, vmpa tlamattivi in jteupan, in vmpa omjc: oc ceppa vmpa ommotlalia. 796x [292]

Auh in otlatvic, in otlatlavilotleoac, tlatlavillotl eoa, mec oalmoquetza tlatenpan: auh in jxqujch tlacad pipilti, ie qujchixtoque ipan ōnetepeoalo: njman ic qujtlatlamaca: in aca qujpotonja icpac, yoan icxic, quauhtlachcaiotica: in aca qujxaoa: in aca cōmaca iquavipil, yoan icue, çan tlacujlolli: in aca çolin in qujcotonjliz: in aca copalli in contemjlia cenca çan iciuhca: njmā ic cactivetzi, njman ic vivilo a. [302] [292]

Auh in ovivilo ac: njmā ic oalquiça in jveitlatquj moteneoa: yiamacal, yoan itianquizpan: auh in jamacal, çan patlachtic, inepantla icatiuh in tianquizpanjtl, macujlli manj: in tlanepantla icatiuh, ichoatl in tianquizpanjtl: auh navi necococampa oome qujtzatzacutiuh: moteneoa meotli. [292]

Auh in ocōcencauhque, njmā ic ommoiacatia, in mamalti injxpan, navintin: mec ce conteca, in techcac: inoma yioma in qujmjctia, qujmeltetequj: navixtin, ith quinchioa:

in oqujmōmjcti in navixtin, mec immac qujnoalcaoa in tletlenamacaque, injc qujnmjctizque, in oc cequjntin mamalti: mec iauh in vmpa ocanato iconeuh: qujvicatiuh in jconeuh, in cinteutl ano itztlacoliuhquj: qujiacana in jcnecuan vecapa qujtztivi, omocencauhque, inmemecamaztli, yoan incujtlatecauh, im jichcauchiuh, mamalacaquetzallo. [293] [283]

Auh in titici, yoan in tencxnamacaque, necoc onotivi, cujcativi: qujncujcatlazilitivi in quaqacujlti, [463] 796x 534

9. This headdress is illustrated in the Translation of the Codex Borbonicus and of the Aztlan Collection.
10. Cf. corresponding Spanish text. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 177) relates the name to mitl; possibly it could as well be related to maitl.

seized [the game], all fell upon it. All that escaped did not yet die.[4]

And when they did this, thereupon they dispersed and all returned. And the captors yet remained and slew more [game]. And those who caught a deer or a coyote, those Moctezuma favored with capes whose edges were striped with feathers.

If one were a captor, one might array oneself [in it]. And if one were not a captor, one might only place [his cape] in a basket, or sell it. And Moctezuma offered the captors food, and they drank.

And when [game] had been slaughtered on Çacatepetl, thereupon all departed. They took with them only the heads, carrying them in their hands, dripping drops of blood. When they reached their homes, they hung up [the heads]. And they took Moctezuma there.

And when they went out upon the grass, then they offered paper vestments to as many as would die. For [the god] Tlamatzincatl, many of his bathed sacrificial victims were arrayed. For the second [god], Izquitecatl, either two or three. These the wine makers ceremonially bathed,[5] they who made wine for the great chief.

The third for whom they died was Mixcoatl and his consort, a woman named Yeoatl icue. Only two of them died. Only the majordomos secured [the victims]. And also those women, [each one named] Coatl icue, the wives of Tlamatzincatl and Izquitecatl—these also took upon their heads their paper array.

And when [the time] had come, when [it was] verily the feast of Quecholli, then the [space of] twenty days ended. Then went those who were to die, into the sand.[6] After midday, they then took them to the place where they would die. They took them in procession about the offering stone; they went in line. And when they came to encircle [the sacrificial stone], thereupon all came down [from the pyramid]. No more were they taken where they were guarded, but they took them there to the tribal temples. [There] they kept them in vigil all night, and watched and guarded them.

And when it was midnight, thereupon they took hair [from the crowns of their heads]. And when they had cut the hair, thereupon [their belongings] were burned. [If the captive was] a man, he burned tecujcujtivecho, ixquich in tematitlampa quiça, in aiamo imjquja.

Auh in ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic tlaxitinj, oalnecuepalo: auh in tlamanjme, oc ompa ommocaoa, oc tlamjctia: in aquin maçatl oc acic, anoço coiotl, qujntlauhtia in Motecuçoma, tenjvivavanquj in tilmatli:

intla tlamanj, qujmoquentiz: auh intlacamo tlamanj, çan qujtlatiz tanaco, anoço qujmonamaqujliz: yoan in tlamanjme qujntlamaca in Motecuçoma, yoã atii.

Auh in ie iuhquj motlamjctiloc, in jcpac çacatepetl: njman ie ic viloatz, çaiio in intzontecon qujoalhujvica intlan qujmaana, chichipicativitz in eatli, in oacico inchachan, aco qujnpipilou auh çan vmpa concaoa in Motecuçoma.

Auh in jquac çacapan qujxooaia: iquac qujnmacaia in imamatlatquj in jzqujntin mjqujzque: iehoatl in Tlamatzincatl, mjequjntin mochichioaia, itlaaltilhoan: injc ome iehoatl in Izqujtecatl, aço vmentin, anoço eintin: iehoan qujmaltiaia in tlachicque, yoan in tecutlachique:

injquein, mjquja iehoatl in Mixcoatl, yoan inamjc cioatl, itoca: Jeoatl icue, çan omextin, çan calpixque in qujnnextiaia: auh no iehoãtin in cioa, Coatl icue: in jnamjcoan Tlamatzincatl, yoan izqujtecatl: no iquac qujcuja in jmamatlatquj.

Aõh in oacic, in vel iquac ilhujtl, Quecholli injc tlamj cempoalli: vncã xalacoa, vncã xallaquj, in mjqujzque: vmmotzcalo, in tonatiuh: mec qujnvica in vmpa mjqujzque: qujmõiaoalochtia in techcatl, motecpantivi: auh in ocõiaoaloto, njmã ie ic oaltemo, aocmo vmpa vico in vmpa opieloia, ça vmpa qujnvivica in incacalpulco, cioal in qujntoçavia, qujnpia, qujnpipia.

Auh in ie onaci, ioalnepãtla: njmã ie ic tetzoncujva: auh in oqujmõtzoncujque, njmã ie ic motlatlatlilia: in oqujchtli, qujtlatia, in jpan yoan itilma,

4. Reference to the corresponding Spanish text suggests that que quemquimiz might better be read for ãquimiz. Cf. also Seler (op. cit., p. 199).
5. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 1, n. 5.
6. Cf. supra, p. 97, n. 7.

Here is described a feast which was observed every eight years.

For Atamalqualiztli (the eating of water tamales) came to be observed every eight years. At times it was observed [in the month of] Quecholli; or at times it was observed [in the month of] Tepeilhuitl.

For seven days all fasted. Only water tamales, soaked in water, were eaten, without chili, without salt, with neither saltpeter nor lime. And they were eaten [only] at midday.

And he who fasted not at this time, if he were noted, was then punished. And much was this, the eating of water tamales, hallowed. And he who did not this, if he were not seen nor noted, it was said,—he was visited with the itch.

And when the feast arrived, it was said: "Ashes are put on faces," and "They are [bedight with] sea shells."[6] And it was when indeed all the gods danced. Thus, it was named the dance of the gods.

And all came forth [as] humming birds, butterflies, honeybees, flies, birds, giant horned beetles, black beetles—those forms men took; in these guises they came dancing.

And still others were in the guise of sleep. [Some had] garlands of fruit tamales; birds' flesh [tamales formed yet others'] garlands. And before them was the maize bin, filled with fruit tamales.

And also all [these] appeared—those who played the rôles of the poor, those who sold vegetables, those who sold wood. Also appeared one in the guise of a leper. And still more took the forms of birds, large owls, screech owls.[7] And even other [birds] they counterfeited.

And [an image of] Tlaloc was set in place. Before him was [a vessel of] water. It was full of serpents and frogs. And they who were called Maçateca swallowed the serpents [while still] full alive. Each one severally held them only in their mouths, not with their hands. They took them only in their teeth, when they seized them in the water, there before

Oficas mitoa, yn ilhujtl: in chichicuexiuhtica muchioaia. 796x

Auh yn atamalqualiztli, chicuexiuhtica in muchiuhtiuja: in quenmanjan ipan in muchioaia quecholli: auh anoço quenmanjan ipan in tepeilhujtl muchioaia.

Chicomjlhujtl, in neçaualoia: çan tlapactli atamalli, in moquaia, amo chillo, amo iztaio, amo tequjxqujo, amono tenexio: auh tlacatlaqualoia. [795] [262]

Auh yn aqujn amo moçaoaia yn ipan jn, intla machoia, njman tzacujltiloia: auh cenca ymacaxoia y, in atamalqualiztli: auh yn aqujn amo qujchioaia, intlacamo ittoa, anoço machoia, qujlmach xiximotia. [688]

Auh yn jquac ilhujtl quiçaia, motenoa ixnextioa, yoan atecuculetioaia: yoan yn jquac cenca muchintin mjttotiaia in teteu: ic mjtoaia, teuittotiloia:

yoan ixq'ch vncan oalnecia in vitzitzilin papalotl, in xicotli, in çaiolin in tototl, in temoli, tecujtlaololo: yn jpan moquixtiaia tlaca, yn ipan oalmjtotiaia. [535]

Auh yn oc cequjntin ipan moquixtiaia in cochiztli, in xocotamalcozquj, yoan totolnacatl yn jncozquj: yoan ymjxpan ycaca, in tonacacuezcomatl, tenticac in xocotamalli. [262]

Auh no muchi vncan oalnecia, yn ipan moq'xtiaia in motolinja, yn motequjqujlnamaqujlia, yn motequaquauhnamaqujlilia: no yoan vncan oalnecia, in teuxocozquj ypan moquixtiaia: yoan yn oc cequjntin totome, in teculutl, in chichtli ipan quiçaia: yoan oc cequj ipan moquixtiaia. [463]

Auh motlaliaia in tlaloc, ixpan mãca yn atl, vncan temja in cocoa, yoan in cuciame, yoan in ichoantin motenoa, maçateca, vncan qujntoloaia in cocoa, çan ioiolxiuja, cecriaca, incamatica in qujmonanaia, amo inmatica: çan qujmontlanquechiaia, ynjc qujmon- 796x

6. Gurbey ("Rebuldo leyes," p. 319) translates tequitlaqua as "se comenzó la fiesta." Atamalqualiztli appears in the same text, translated as "se hizo cosas diferes del agua." Cf., however, atamalli in Molina, op. cit.
7. Tecuitl: hoho; chichtli: huhuat (loc. cit.). Cf. also Clark, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 117, and Angel María Garibay K, in Tlalocan, Vol. I, p. 359.

Rats with sauce; hot maize gruel of many kinds; maize gruel with honey, with chili and honey, with yellow chili; white, thick gruel with a scattering of maize grains; sour, white maize gruel; sour, red maize gruel with fruit and chili; small, green tomatoes[20] with a maize gruel made with anonas; maize gruel made with amaranth and toasted maize; maize gruel with fish-amaranth seeds and honey; cold maize gruel; maize gruel with wrinkled chía,[21] covered with green chilis or small, hot chilis;[22] white maize gruel with chía,[23] covered with yellow chilis; maize gruel with chía, covered with squash seeds and with chili; maize gruel made of tortilla crumbs, and with ordinary and wrinkled chía, covered with small chilis.

toçanmolli, totonquj atolli, mjiec tlamantli, nequatolli, chilnequatolli, chilcozio, quauhnexatolli tlatzincujtl, iztac xocoatolli, chichiltic, chilxocoatolli, mjltomatl inamjc chcioatolli, ouuhatolli izqujo, mjchiococatolli necuio, iztztic atolli, chiantzotzolatolli, chilchopanj, anoço chiltecpinpanj, iztac chiamatolli chilcozpanj, chianpitzaoac atolli, aiohoachpanj chillo, tlaçiocucpalatolli chiantzotzollo, ioan chianio chiltecpinpanj

565
262

All these foods came forth from within the house of the ruler.

in jxqujch tlamantli, y, tlaqualli icalitic, oalqujca tlatoanj.

643

And daily a man, the majordomo, set out for the ruler his food—two thousand kinds of various foods; hot tortillas, white tamales with beans forming a sea shell on top; red tamales; the main meal of roll-shaped tortillas and many [foods]: sauces with turkeys, quail, venison, rabbit, hare, rat, lobster, small fish, large fish; then all [manner of] sweet fruits.

Auh in momoztlae, ice tlacatl calpixqui qujtequjlia in tlatoanj, in jtlaqual macujltzontli in nepapan tlaqualli, in totonquj tlaxcalli in jztac quatecujcujlli in çhichiltic tamalli, in vej tlaqualli, tlaxcalmjmjili: ioan cenca mjiec tlamantli in jmollo in jvical in totoli, çolli, maçanacatl, tochi, çitli, tuçan, chacali, topotli, tlacamjchin, njman iee in jxqujch necutic xochiqualli.

[644]
262

And when the ruler had eaten, then all the food was divided. Apart, in the city, the lords ate, and all the people from surrounding lands—the ambassadors, the war messengers, the princes, the judges, the high priests, the seasoned warriors, the valiant men of war, the masters of the youths, the rulers of the youths, the keepers of the gods, the priests, the singers, [the ruler's] pages, his servants, his jugglers, and the various artisans, goldsmiths, feather workers, cutters of precious stones, setters of mosaic, sandal makers, and turquoise cutters.[24]

Auh in jquac in oalaqua tlatoanj, njman ic moxexeloa, in jxqujch tlaqualli: nononqua tlaqua in altepetl ipan tlatoque, ioan in jxqujch cemanaoacatl in tlatocatitlanti, in moiautitlique, in tlaçopipilti, in tecutlatoque, achcacauhti, tequjoaque, tiacahoan, tiachcahoan, telpuchtlatoque teupixque, tlamacazque, cujcanjme, in quezqujtlamantli, ixoloa, iiahachhoan, tetlaueuetzqujtique: ioan nepapan toltecatl, teucujtlapizque, amanteca, tlatecque, chalchiuhtlacujloque, cacçoque, teuxinque.

264
[645]
463
565

Then, in his house, the ruler was served his chocolate, with which he finished [his repast]—green, made of tender cacao; honeyed chocolate made with ground-up dried flowers—with green vanilla pods; bright red chocolate; orange-colored chocolate; rose-colored chocolate; black chocolate; white chocolate.[25]

Niman moteca in jcalitic: iecauj in jcacaoauh, xoxouhquj cacaoçintli, quauhnecujo cacaoatl, xochiocacaoatl, xoxouhquj tlilxochio, chichiltic cacaoatl, vitztecolcacaoatl, xochipalcacaoatl, tiltic cacaoatl, iztac cacaoatl

643
264
272

20. Ibid., p. 237; small tomatoes: Sandoz, op. cit., green; Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 499: "los más chicos mahonosos, es decir, de sombra."

21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 364: "Chia arenqada. Salvia ppl" Sammarzano, op. cit., III, p. 466: Salvia polystachia; Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 230: Salvia hispanica Linn.

22. Sammarzano, op. cit., I, p. 496: Capsicum microcarpum Dc.—"Es Mijiec, chile redgrow, como del tamaño de una pulga y muy picante." In Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 475, it is identified as C. frutescens L., var. baccatum L.: "del tamaño de las mosquitas, a las que parece imitar en la pequeñez y en el color."

23. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 364: "Salvia hispánica. L. Salsolar"; Sammarzano, op. cit., I, p. 480: Salvia chian, S. hispánica L.

24. The Spanish text has barbaro, which would require mexicaque.

25. Tiltic and iztac are as they appear in the Codex; chiltic and iztac are probably meant.

SEVENTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the singers bedizened themselves when the ruler would dance; and of that in which they would dance.

Mixcoacalli: there were established all the kinds of singer-dancers of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco. There they awaited the word of the ruler, that he would dance, or try some song, or learn some new song. All this the singers prepared, all that was necessary—two-toned drums, rubber drum hammers, ground drums, rattles shaped like dried poppy heads, copper bells, flutes; players of two-toned drums and ground drums, intoners of chants, leaders of the dance; and all the properties used in the dance.

If the song were to be intoned after the manner of Uexotzinco, they were adorned like men of Uexotzinco, and spoke even as they did; they were imitated with the song and in their adornment and their equipment. Likewise if a song were to be intoned after the manner of Anauac, the speech of the men of Anauac was imitated, and their adornment as well as their equipment. Likewise, if a song were to be intoned after the manner of the Huaxteca, their speech was imitated, and their headdresses were taken, with which to imitate them in coloring their hair yellow; and the masks [had] arrow marks [painted] on the face, noses pierced like jug handles, teeth filed [to a point], and conical heads. And they [were clad] only in their capes. Likewise [they did] other songs.

INJC CHICOME PARRAPHO, vncã mjtoa, injc mocencaoaia qujcanjme, in tlamaceoaz tlatoanj: ioan in tlein ipan mjtotizque. 533 292

Mixcoacalli, vncan tecpanoaia in jxqujtlamantli, mãcehoalcujcanjme in tenochca, ioan tlatilulcatl, vncan qujtlatolchiaia in tlatoanj, in aço mãçeoaz, aço itla cujcatl qujichecoz, aço itla iancujc cujcatl qujnomachtiz, mochi ic moçencauhticatca, in cujcanjme: in jxqujch monequj teponaztli, olmaitl, veuetl, aiacachtli, tetzilacatl, çoçoloctli, teponaçoanj, veuetzonanj, cujcaitoanj teiacanque: ioan in ixqujch tlamantli mãcehoallarqujtl, [534] intla uexotzincaiotl meoaz cujcatl, in iuh muchichioa vexotzinca, ioan in iuh tlatoa: motlaichecalhuja in jca cujcatl; ioan ica inechichioal intlaquj. Çan no iuhquj intla anaoacaiotl meoaz, motlaichecalhuja, in jntlatol anaoaca: ioan jnnechichioal in iuhquj intlatquj. Çan no iuhquj, intla cuextecaiotl meoaz cujcatl, motlaichecalhuja in jntlatol: ioan mocuj tzoncalli in qujntlaichecalhuja, intzon, injc quacoztique, ioan xaiacatl ixtlamjoa iacaujcole, tlantziquatic, quapatlachtic, içan jtilma. Can no iuhquj in oc cequj cujcatl.

[302 304]

EIGHTH PARAGRAPH, which telleth of the houses in which were the slaves.

Malcalli: the majordomos guarded[13a] the captives. They took great care of them as to food and drink. That which they needed, they gave all to the captives.

Totocalli: there majordomos kept all the various birds—eagles, red spoonbills, trupials, yellow parrots, parakeets, large parrots, pheasants. And there all the various artisans did their work: the gold and silversmiths, the copper-smiths, the feather workers,[14] painters, cutters of stones, workers in green stone mosaic, carvers of wood. Caretakers of wild animals,[15] majordomos, there guarded all the wild animals: ocelots, wolves, mountain lions, and mountain cats.

INJC CHICUEJ PARRAPHO, ipan tlatoa, in jnchan catca tlatlacoti 567

Malcalli: calpixque pinpiaia, in mamalti, cenca qujnmocujtlaujaia, in tlaqualtica, in atica: in tlein qujnequja, mochi qujnmacaia in mamalti. 344

Totocalli, calpixque vncan qujnpiaia, in jxqujch nepapan tototl: quaquauhti, tlauhquechol, çaquan, tozneneme, cochome, alome, coxoliti: ioan oncan tlachichioaia, in jxqujch nepapan toltecatl, in teucujtlapitzquj, in tepozpitzquj, in amanteca, tlacujloque, tlaiecque, chalchiuhtlacujloque, quauhtlacujloque Tequanpixque, calpixque, vncan qujnpiaia, in jxqujch tequanj: oçelotl, cuetlachtli, mjztli, ocotochtli. 463 344 231 136

13a. Pinpiaia: probably quinpiaia is meant.

14. "Feather-workers were called amantecas after the district of Amanteca, in Tenochtitlan, where they lived" (Clark, op. cit., I, p. 56, n. 2). Cf. also Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 378.

15. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has nequanpixque for nequanpiaque, and begins with the term a new paragraph. A marginal gloss by Sahagún heads the section, "Cuen de las fieras." soms; bean greens[21] and green beans; green maize, tender maize, tender maize stalks; tamales of maize blossoms, tortillas of green maize, and all edible things—tortillas, tamales, tamales and tortillas with honey, large tortillas, and rolled tortillas.

[p.46 is blank]

And also there were proprietors among whom were spread out smoking tubes, pipes, and cigars, [some] quite resinous and aromatic; and tobacco bowls; and large pottery braziers and hearths, and earthen basins, and pots, and jars for storing water, and settling jars, and flat cooking plates, and sauce vessels, and earthen cups, and everything [made of] earthenware.

And those who were directors of the market place, if they did not show concern over their office, were driven forth and made to abandon their office. And if someone sold stolen goods—perchance a costly cape, or a green stone,—if it were made known and he did not declare from whom he had bought that which had been stolen, they went to exact the penalty, and he died. Such was the sentence of the lords and judges, so that [men] would be fearful of that which was stolen and no one would buy it.

It was the duty of the market place folk to make the war provisions—biscuits, and finely ground, dried maize and chía seeds, and dried maize dough, and dried, lime-treated maize dough. With these was the market place charged, and the market place directors, the men and women thus appointed, were charged with assigning the tribute.

ekolaxcalli, ioan in jxqujch qualonj, tlaxcalli, tamalli, necutamalli, necutlaxcalli, vei tlaxcalli, tlaxcalmjmjlli. 443 643 656 262

No ioan vncatca, in tlaiacanque in jpan manca acaquaujtl, acaiietl, iietlalli, vel ocotzoio, ioan xochiocotzotl, ioan iiecaxitl, ioan apantlecaxitl, ioã tlequaztli, ioan apaztli, ioan xoctli, ioan atlalilcomjtl, ioan xaiócomjtl, ioan comalli, ioan molcaxitl, ioan in çoqujtecomatl, ioã in jxqujch tlamantli çoqujtlatqujtl. 443 463 656 [276] [445]

Auh in ichoanin tianqujzpan tlaiacanque, intlacamo qujmocujtlauja, intequjuh, totoco, ioan caoaltilo in jntequjuh. Auh intla aca tlachtectli qujnamaca, aço tlaçotilmatli, anoço chalchiujtl, intla oiximachililoc, intlacamo qujnextiz in aqujn qujcohujli, in tlein tlachtectli, qujtzacutiuh, mjquja, iuhquj tlatzontequjliaia, in tlatoque, tecutlatoque, ic mjmacaçia in tlein tlachtectli, aiac vel qujcoaia, [685]

in jntequjuh catca tianqujzpantlaca qujchioaia iiaujtacatl, in tlaxcaltotopochtli, ioan pinolli, ioan texoatzalli, ioan nextamalhoatzalli, injc ipan tequjtia tianqujztli, ioan tianqujzpan tlaiacanque, in tlaixquetzalli oqujchti, ioan çioa in tequjtlatoque catca. 443 722 651 705

21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 235, describes ayocquilitl as "hojas y ramas de los frijoles"; on p. 338, however, it is given as Mesembryanthemum Mandoon L.

[p. 70 is blank]

127 majority of the data which could not be considered as a result of Spanish influence were taken as remains of situations from before the Spanish conquest. In every case the principal citerion of accuracy was the congruity presented by the data themselves; particularly in the sifting of data in works written long after the conquest or by authors who did not come to Mexico in this period (Acosta, Torquemada, Clavijero, Gómara, etc.) but who had at hand information and documents which we now lack, or who saw remains atill little modified of the ancient social organization of Tenochtitlan.

The contorted form reflected by some arguments derives principally from the necessity of taking advantage of the few facts about the subject, which are not always specific or categorized, but which refer to secondary or derived cultural traits; and which suggest a prior basic situation necessary to their appearance.

/p. 21/ THE IMPORTANCE OF THE CALPULLI

/p. 23/ Chapter 2

SOCIAL STRATIFICATION

565 463 In the sources for the history of Mexico we find data which beyond doubt demonstrate the existence of social stratification among the Tenochcas and which have let a few authors think that the Tenochcas had social classes. These data are very diverse in nature and very abundant, but here only the more significant will be presented: the division between manual laborers and directors, the paying of tribute, the differentiation in the living standard, the relation between the strata and the calpullis, and the inheritance of property to a determined stratum.

With respect to the division of labor we find a great difference of activities between two types of people: those who undertook manual labor and those who undertook essentially directive tasks. We are told that the macehuales were the common people and laborers (1) and that they worked at their crafts (2), that is, they were manual laborers.

1. Zurita, p. 94.

565
463

2. Acosta, José de, p. 425. "crafts" [oficios] being considered a more or less specialized manual artisan activity.

On the other hand the pillis and the tecuhtlis had as occupations "to serve in war and in public office as governors and ministers of justice... squires... messengers... to oversee the sowing of seed or other things which were done in common or for their festivities and the service of the ruler" (3) and "to watch over the lands of the

3. Zurita, p. 89.

calpulli and defend them, to keep each marked in its proper fashion, and see to the boundaries between each, and where and with whose they bordered and who worked them, and who owned which and which were vacant... and who and when and to whom they were given" (4) and to see to it "that they be not entered upon" (5), and

4. Zurita, p. 90.

5. Zurita, p. 88.

they were "careful to protect the men of the calpulli and speak for them before the governors" (6); that is, that the pillis undertook tasks

6. Zurita, p. 90.

essentially directive or coordinative (7). With these data we can

7. With reference to Tlaxcalla, Muñoz Camargo tells us (p. 103) that the tecuhtlis /p. 24/ and pillis "are thought of as men of quality even when very poor who never carry out mechanical tasks or base or servile undertakings. They never allow themselves to carry a burden or dig with hoes or plows, saying that they are nobles [hidalgos] and that they will not apply themselves to these vile and base things, but rather are they to serve in wars and on the frontiers." This was surely what happened in Tenochtitlan although unfortunately we have no such clear affirmation for this place.

565
463

/p. 24/ assert that among the Tenochcas there was present a marked differentiation with respect to labor: there were people who undertook manual labor and people dedicated to directive activities. These latter, also appear in our data strongly related to the calpulli.

565
463
651

The difference in the social division of labor which we have seen in the last paragraph had possibly as its principal manifestation the position with respect to the paying of tribute: some were tributaries and some received tribute. It is told us in this regard that "the poor macehuales worked all day for their tribute and in order to give food to them (to the lords) to eat; because in a village of a thousand people there are a chief /cacique/ and a hundred lords / principales/ among whom the village is divided into wards... and these eat and drink and loaf at the expense of the poor workers (or macehuales, as we have seen) who support it all; and this is a very old custom in all the provinces of the land" (8), (that is, also in Tenochtitlan and not through

8. López Gerónimo, 11, p. 151. Although the assertion of a confirmed pro-slavist, it is useful and synthesizes many isolated facts.

Spanish influence). From our data we conclude first, that the lords were approximately 10 percent of the population and moreover, that there was a division between people receiving tribute—those undertaking directive work—and people tributary—those who undertook manual work—, and there comes to light again the relationship between this social stratification and the division of land, only that now with respect to the paying of tribute, the lords receiving tribute were those in charge of the town wards. Everything is confirmed in other sources: we are told that the macehuales "worked a plot of land for their lord or head (of the calpulli) for his sustenance and gave him service according to the people there were in the village" (9). Another author tells us that the elders used to say "that the common people

9. Zurita, p. 142.

565 contributed to their natural and legitimate masters in making their 463 houses and cultivating their plots... and they did the same for the 651 lords" (10). Taking into account all that has been said above it is clear that the payment of tribute existed within the same Tenochca group and reflected a difference between two kinds of people, and that there existed a relationship between this stratification and the ward divisions. It also appears from our data that, besides the tribute to the lords, there was a tribute to the rulers [a los "señores"], to the chiefs [a los "caciques"], which is probably to say, to the chiefs of the whole group, not just to the lesser ward lords.

10. Anunciación, p. 237.

565 It is certain that as a result of the role in the division of labor and 511 of the difference between being tributary and tribute-receiving, great differences in the standard of living in the population came about in Tenochtitlan. The macehuales had "neither furniture, nor clothing other than what they wear on their persons, which is very poor, and one or two stones for grinding maize, and a few pots for cooking and a mat on which they sleep... and they eat little... the common [651] people and the plebians are so tyrannized by their Indian lords that most of them have their rations taxed " (11). On the other hand we are told that the lords and rulers were always going to banquets and weddings (12) and that the princes slept in beds (13) and that the

11. Oviedo, III, p. 535. The weakness of the author cited vanishes by reason of its congruence with other authorities.

12. López Gerónimo, II, p. 151.

13. Martín de Anglería, P., p. 470.

[525] rulers had and gambled with "precious stones and jewels and gold and featherwork, slaves, blankets of all sorts, and arms and trappings of war" (14). We have all seen, likewise, the diversity which the categorical assertions such as that of the Codex Alcobiz (Laws which the Indians had) [Leyes que tenian los Indios].

14. Pomar, p. 27. Although the fact refers to Texcoco, it coincides with what is known in less

565
511

codices show between the clothes and gear of the macehuales those of and the lords and rulers in illustrations of Sahagun, Mendoza, etc. All of these are facts which oblige us to think that there were great differences of richness and well-being within the population of Mexico-Tenochtitlan and that these differences existed between the macehuales and pillis.

565
595

Another aspect which showed the differences between segments of the population was sexual life: "it is said that commoners have only one wife; but the lords can have concubines at their wish" (15), and when they married "the noble women brought with them other maid-servants (and with all these women the men had)... much profit for they made them weave and make blankets, and perform other services of this sort" (16).

15. Mendieta, Eclesiastical History [Historia Eclestiástica], p. 297.

16. Motolinía, History [Historia], p. 164.

These data show us not only the well-being of the polygamous lords implicit in having a multitude of wives, but also the economic well-being derived from this polygyny, which was beyond the reach of the macehuales.

565
443

However, it seems that this stratification also included groups of people dedicated to occupations other than agriculture since we are told that the merchants also had lords who went about with the heads of the calpullis (17), which makes us think that not all the merchants

17. Zurita, p. 143.

were /p. 26/ lords, and that therefore there obtained among them also the stratification of which we have been speaking. Complementing and clarifying the situation, we know that the merchants and the artisans, although they cultivated their land, did not give tribute by working the fields but in work of their particular occupation

565 (18) such as masons, carpenters, feather-workers and metal-workers
463

18. Zurita, p. 142.

(19). Although it is not made clear to us whether this tribute of

19. Oviedo, III, p. 535.

"merchants and artisans" was in relation to the rulers of the whole Tenochca group or only to the lords of the corresponding calpulli, it is very possible that in this tributation there occurred the same thing which happened to the workers which we have seen: they paid both. All this makes us think that the stratification which existed among the Tenochcas was not in layers of workers, artisans, merchants, and chiefs, but rather between the chiefs and the governed, be they laborers, artisans, or merchants. This conception is reinforced by our being told that the pochteca tlatoque (a term translated as the lords of the pochteca, that is, merchants) did not go on the trips of the merchants, but that they entrusted their "merchandise" to them that they sell it for them and later they divided the profit (20); which is to say that within the group, differences of occupation were present which resulted in a stratification between people who worked as merchants and people who, because of another class of work (directive, as chiefs, as "lords") received part of the benefits obtained through "marketing." It is told of the artisans of Texcoco that the nobles also learned crafts, but only as a distraction (21). Assuredly a similar situation existed in Tenochtitlan and almost certainly corresponded to the division between pillis and macehuales, in groups of artisans.

20. Sahagún, I., p. 351.

21. Pomar, p. 38.

565 It is advisable to make further clarifications with respect to the 428 division between tributary macehuales and tribute-exacting pillis. One source tells us that although the lords had many women, they considered only one of them the most important and the children she bore [were considered] as inheritors of their position (22). Although the

Chapter 5

SOCIAL DIVISION OF LABOR

463 There is another aspect of the social organization of the Tenochcas which has seemed to indicate that it was not based on kinship through common descent but rather on economic production: the social division of labor by specialized groups similar to guilds. Analyzing the data from the sources for the history of Mexico, it is found that, in this aspect as well as the preceding, the calpulli was a fundamental element.

Whether during a given period the laborers constituted the totality of the population of Tenochtitlan is something which we still do not know. What we do know is that by the time of the arrival of the Spanish a very complex situation was present. Through a reference made during the colonial period we know that all the inhabitants, although they might have another occupation, had their lands for cultivation (1) although they might farm very little (2). This surely

1. Torquemada, II, p. 430.

2. Description of the Archbishopric [Descripción del Arzobispado], p. 278.

was even more general before the arrival of the Spanish, that is, that cultivation was an activity common to the entire population, perhaps excepting the lords; still, it was not the only activity for all people, some having other occupations. Everybody could, "work a stone, twist a rope and procure the materials to make it, and [do] the other tasks which do not require much skill" (3). Complement-

3. Zurita, p. 189.

ing this, there was a differentiation in the activities of the people to produce those things "which were to be sold" (4) and a true labor force market which was offered like any other merchandise (5).

4. Motolinía, Memorials [Memoriales], p. 236.

5. Zurita, p. 83.

463 That is, there was a social division of labor present which we could call artisan. We know of the existence of merchants—people who specialized in the interchange of objects not produced directly by themselves. From this we can infer that there was a division of labor between laborers, artisans, and merchants in addition to that which we have already seen among /p. 48/ manual laborers and directors. Some authors have thought that these merchants constituted a social class (6) or the beginnings of a social class (7) or a

6. Moreno, M., 1931, p. 33; Toscano, S., 1946, p. 782.

7. Acosta Saignes, M., 1945, p. 21.

caste (8) or that the artisans constituted guilds (9) derived from clans

8. Thompson, J.E., 1933, p. 126.

9. Cunow, H., 1926, p. 275-278; Kohler, 1924, p. 29.

which became units of the social division of labor (10). Let us elucidate this.

10. Krickeberg, W., 1939, p. 287.

On one hand the merchants were counted in their calpullis (11),

11. Sahagún, I, p. 44.

that is, they belonged to calpullis. On the other hand, in speaking of the merchants and of the artisans, we are told that there was every class of person in the calpullis (12) and that the merchants and arti-

12. Zurita, p. 143.

sans were "of these wards and calpullis" (13), assertions from which

13. Zurita, p. 105.

463 we can infer that the merchants as well as the artisans and laborers were in the calpullis.

Furthermore, on the one hand, in general the parents educated their children to exercise the same occupations [as they, the parents] (14), and on the other is made a statement of much importance:

14. Mendocino Codex [Códice Mendocino], folio 70; Zurita, p. 110, III; Román y Zamora, II, p. 127, etc.

that upon the birth of children of the common people they placed in their hands miniatures of the instruments of their calling (see p. 28). One gathers from this that from birth it was known what a child's occupation would be when he reached adulthood; and that this occupation usually was that of his father, that is, that there was inheritance of the productive occupation. This surely also happened with the merchants, since we are told that they could only be merchants with the permission of the rulers or because they came to it through inheritance (15). We thus have, beyond doubt, inheritance of occupation in the social division of labor.

15. Zurita, p. 142.

463 It appears that in Tenochtitlan this division of labor occurred by x618 wards, as in Tezcoco (where those in one ward had the same occu-795 pation, all those of the ward must have it and there must be no mixture of others with them (16)), since in all the provinces of Mexico

16. Torquemada, I, p. 146.

the specialization in things to sell was by "wards" (17). Moreover 17. Motolinía, Memorials [Memoriales], p. 236.

—and this is the fundamental proof—one can establish a correlation between names /p. 49/ of "wards" and occupations (see p. 50), drawing together scattered data or Torquemada's and Sahagún's which refer to this division of labor and to the specialization by groups in the worship of the deities. Three affirmations reinforce this correlation: one concerning the magical consecration of the people to an activity which was made before some idol (see p. 28), probably the ward idol; another was that the festivals of some months were "like" guild festivals (18), that is, of isolated groups, probably of wards; and finally, that in the festivals for the idols were involved the members of a single "ward" and not those of others (19).

463
Y618
795

18. Jonghe, p. 292.

19. Magliabecchi, Commentaries on the Section [Comentarios a la Sección] 92.

The result of this correlation between activities, "wards" and deities is presented here in a table, and explains completely for us the character of the social division of labor in Tenochtitlan: it was by "wards" which separated tribal chiefs, pulque-makers, merchants, etc. It is a division which could be called a class one only with difficulty, since it makes no sense, for example, to speak of the class of pulque-makers since, if that were the case, they would be on an equal "class" footing with the merchants. It would appear rather to correspond to a guild division, since the class of a guild is the organization of people who do the same work (20) and that within them obtains the separation between manual workers and directors which was present also among the Tenochcas, as we have already seen (see p. 23). However it would be very strange to speak of a guild of rulers, as we would have to do if we accepted that the division of labor by "wards," which the Tenochcas envinced, was by guilds; and it is to falsify the situation since the lords do not possess the characteristics of manual labor which are basic in a guild organization. I believe I can prove, furthermore, that these "wards" — which probably were calpullis since in general their names do not coincide with those of the tlaxilicallis—were clans, and that therefore the division of labor, like the ownership of the land, the territorial distribution of the population, and the social stratification, were the result of an organization of the Tenochcan population by 463 clans. And thus indeed it is not anachronistic to speak of clans of X618 rulers, nor of clans of pulque-makers.

20. Boak, A.R., and Pirenne, H., 1944.

785

/p. 50/ TABLE OF CORRELATIONS BETWEEN CALPULLI-WARDS, CALPULLI-TEMPLES, OCCUPATIONS AND DEITIES IN TENOCHTITLAN (1)

1. The names are for the most part of calpulli "wards." Nevertheless at times names of temples were taken which certainly corresponded to "wards." They appear in this case not to correspond to tlaxilacallis, except for Tzapotlan.

9:Monzon--54 E-4 (no date) 1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

H63 x618 745

Calpulli or ward	Occupation	Deities
1. Yopico 2, 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11, 12.	Silversmiths, 3, 4, Gold-workers 5, Xochimanques, 6, Water carriers 7, lords and kings 8, Calmecac 9, 11, 12.	Totec 2, 3, Xipe 2, 3, 4, 5, Coatlicue 6, Coatlatona 6, Chalchitlicue 7, 8, 9, Tlaloc 10, Tquiztlimayahuel 11.
2. Huitznahuac 12, 15.	lords 13, fishermen 14, Calmecac 12, 15.	Huitzilopochtli 13, 16, Opochtli 14, Huitznahuac 15, Centzonhuitznahuac 17, Tezcatlipoca 18.
3. Itepeyoc 19.	lords 19.	Huitzilopochtli 19.
4. Amantla 20, 21, 22, 23.	Tultecayotl 22, seam-stresses 23, 25, dyers (female) 23, feather workers (female) 23, painters, 24.	Tizahua, Maculilocelotl, Maculil-tochtli, Xihui, Tlati, Xilo, Tepoztecatl 20, Coyotlinahual 21, Chicomexuchitl 24, Xochiquetzal 25.
5. Pochtlan 20, 26.	merchants 20, 26.	The markets in Amantla with 20, and Yiacatecuhtli 26.
6. Auachtlan 27.	merchants 27.

9:Monzon--55 E-4 (no date) 1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

W3 X618 795

Calpulli or ward	Occupation	Deities
7. Atlauhco 28.	merchants 28.
8. Acxotlan 29, 30.	merchants 29, 30, 31.	Nahui Ehecatl 30, Chiconquiahuitl, Xomocuil, Cochimetl, Yacapitzahuac, Nacxitl, Chalmecacihuatl 31.
9. Tlamatzinco 12, 32.	pulque-makers 32, 33, tavery keepers 34, Calmecac 12, 35.	Tlamatzincatl 12, 32, Izquitecatl 33, Coatlicue 35.
10. Atempan 36.	Medicasters and diviners 37.	Toci 36, Mother of the gods 37.
11. Tzonmolco 37, 39, 12.	Makers of the lord's more important vestments 38, calmecac 12, 39.	Xiuhtecuhtli 37, 38, 40, Huehueteotl 38, Ixcozauhqui 39.
12. Tzapotlan 40.	Sellers of Uxitl 40.	Tzapotlatena 40.
13.	Makers of petates 41.	Nappatecuhtli 41.
14.	Precious stone workers 42.	Chicnahuitzcuintli, Nahualpilli, cinteotli Cihuacoatl 42.

9:Monzon--56 E-4 (no date) 1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

443
x618
795

2. Sahagún I, p. 121, 240.

3. Torquemada, II, p. 58.

4. Torquemada, II, p. 252.

5. Sahagún, II, p. 385.

6. Torquemada, II, p. 254.

7. Sahagún I, p. 40, 116.

8. Sahagún, I, p. 22.

9. Sahagún, I, p. 84.

10. Sahagún, I, p. 84, 87.

11. Torquemada, II, p. 153.

12. Sahagún, I, p. 220. They are included also with Calmecac to Tlillancalco (Cihuacoatl), Tetlanman (Chantico) and Mexico (Tlaloc).

13. Torquemada, I, p. 193.

14. Sahagún, I, p. 39; Torquemada, II, p. 61.

15. Sahagún, I, p. 220.

16. Sahagún, I, p. 137.

17. Sahagún, I, p. 221.

18. Torquemada, II, p. 150.

19. Sahagún, I, p. 215.

20. Sahagún, I, p. 142, 215.

9:Monzon--57 E-4 (no date) 1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

463
x618
795

21. Sahagún, II, p. 389.

22. Sahagún, II, p. 392, 389.

23. Sahagún, II, p. 392.

24. Sahagún, I, p. 112.

25. Sahagún, I, p. 112.

26. Torquemada, II, p. 272; Sahagun, I, p. 225.

27. Sahagún, II, p. 350.

28. Sahagún, II, p. 350.

29. Sahagún, III, p. 49.

30. Sahagún, I, p. 326.

31. Sahagún, I, p. 42.

32. Sahagún, I, p. 190.

33. Sahagún, I, p. 190.

34. Sahagún, I, p. 112.

35. Torquemada, II, p. 151; Sahagún, I, p. 104.

36. Sahagún, I, p. 179. Sahagún in I, p. 238 says that the cuecuextecan young men go to the ward of Atlampa during this festival.

37. Torquemada, I, p. 234.

38. Sahagún, I, p. 29.

39. Sahagún, I, p. 239.

9:Monzon--58 E-4 (no date) 1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

463
X618
795

40. Sahagun, I, p. 20.

41. Sahagún, I, p. 46; II, p. 59.

42. Torquemada, II, p. 60; Sahagún, II, p. 387, 88.

/p. 53/ THE CALPULLI AS A CLAN

Chapter 6

X618

/p. 55/ PROOFS THAT THE CALPULLI WAS A CLAN

The territorial organization of Tenochtitlan, the ownership of land, the division of labor and the social stratification, and other aspects of the social organization of Tenochtitlan which were not treated in the first part of this study, such as education (1) and religion

1. See Education among the Aztecs /La Educación entre los Aztecas/, Monzón, 1946.

(2), in which the influence of the calpulli is of great importance, and which have themselves a determining role, present us with the fundamental problem of the social organization of the Tenochcas: Were the calpullis clans, or simply wards, or guilds, or another type of social organism? Outwardly they have elements of all the foregoing. What was their internal organization? The answer to these questions will give us for sure a correct idea as to the bases of the social organization of the Tenochcas and of its evolutionary stage. Therefore we are going to attempt to answer them. The calpulli (Nahuatl 'large house') is an organism which has been presented as a clan by some authors, or as the remains of a clan by others (see the Introduction), and certainly the calpulli was the Tenochca clan, if the Tenochcas had clans. This granted, in order to know whether the calpulli had in that condition, one very clean and swept and the other covered with newly-felled trees. They replied that it was done so that we should go by the cleared road which led to a city named Chalco, where the people would give us a good reception, for it belonged to their Prince Montezuma, and that they had cut the trees and closed up the other road to prevent our going by it, for there were bad passes on it, and it went somewhat round about before going to Mexico, and came out at another town which was not as large as Chalco. Then Cortés said that he wished to go by the blocked up road, and we began to ascend the mountain with the greatest caution, our allies moving aside the huge thick tree trunks, by which we had to pass, with great labour, and some of them still lie by the roadside to this very day. As we rose higher it began to snow and the snow caked on the ground. Then we descended the hill and went to sleep at a group of houses[1] which they build like inns or hostels where the Indian traders lodge, and we supped well, but the cold was intense, and we posted our watchmen, sentinels, and patrols and even sent out scouts. The next day we set out on our march, and, about the hour of high mass, arrived at a town which I have already said is called Tlamanalco,[2] where they received us well and where there was no scarcity of food.

2. In the chapter referring to the division of labor I touch lightly upon these relationships between calpullis and religion (p. 49) which suggest problems which should be studied more fully.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

When the other towns [in the neighbourhood] heard of our arrival, people soon came from Chalco and joined with the people of Tlamanalco, and they came from Chimaloacan and Mecameca and from Acacingo[3] where the canoes are, for it is their port, and other small towns whose names I cannot now call to mind. All of them together brought a present of gold and two loads of mantles and eight Indian women and the gold was worth over one hundred

[1] Padre Rivera gives the name as Ithualco (Anales Mexicanos).
[2] Amecameca according to Cortés. [3] Ayotzingo.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

the thighs, arms and head and eat the former at feasts and banquets, and the head they hang up on some beams, and the body of the man sacrificed is not eaten but given to these fierce animals. They also have in that cursed house many vipers and poisonous snakes which carry on their tails things that sound like bells. These are the worst vipers of all, and they keep them in jars and great pottery vessels with many feathers, and there they lay their eggs and rear their young, and they give them to eat the bodies of the Indians who have been sacrificed, and the flesh of dogs which they are in the habit of breeding. We even knew for certain that when they drove us out of Mexico and killed over eight hundred of our soldiers that they fed those fierce animals and snakes for many days on their bodies, as I will relate at the proper time and season. And those snakes and wild beasts were dedicated to those savage Idols, so that they might keep them company.

782
266
231
136

Let me speak now of the infernal noise when the lions and tigers roared and the jackals and the foxes howled and the serpents hissed, it was horrible to listen to and it seemed like a hell. Let us go on and speak of the skilled workmen he [Montezuma] employed in every craft that was practised among them. We will begin with lapidaries and workers in gold and silver and all the hollow work, which even the great goldsmiths in Spain were forced to admire, and of these there were a great number of the best in a town named Atzcapotzalco,[1] a league from Mexico. Then for working precious stones and chalchihuites, which are like emeralds, there were other great artists. Let us go on to the great craftsmen in feather work, and painters and sculptors who were most refined; from what we see of their work to-day we can form a

463

[1] Escapuçalco in the text.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

463 judgment of what they did then, for there are three Indians to-day in the City of Mexico named Marcos de Aquino, Juan de la Cruz and El Crespillo, so skilful in their work as sculptors and painters, that had they lived in the days of the ancient and famous Apelles, or of Michael Angelo Buonarotti, in our times, they would be placed in the same company. Let us go on to the Indian women who did the weaving and the washing, who made such an immense quantity of fine fabrics with wonderful feather work designs; the greater part of it was brought daily from some towns of the province on the north coast near Vera Cruz called Cotaxtla, close by San Juan de Ulua, where we disembarked when we came with Cortés.

[837] 463 581 In the house of the Great Montezuma himself, all the daughters of chieftains whom he had as mistresses always wore beautiful things, and there were many daughters of Mexican citizens who lived in retirement and wished to appear to be like nuns, who also did weaving but it was wholly of feather work. These nuns had their houses near the great Cue of Huichilobos and out of devotion to it, or to another idol, that of a woman who was said to be their mediatrix in the matter of marriage, their fathers placed them in that religious retirement until they married, and they were [only] taken out thence to be married.

463 Let us go on and tell about the great number of dancers kept by the Great Montezuma for his amusement, and others who used stilts on their feet, and others who flew when they danced up in the air, and others like Merry-Andrews,* and I may say that there was a district full of these people who had no other occupation. Let us go on and speak of the workmen that he had as stone cutters, masons and carpenters, all of whom attended to the work of his houses, I say that he had as many as he 463 wished for. We must not forget the gardens of flowers 351 and sweet-scented trees, and the many kinds that there were of them, and the arrangement of them and the walks, and the ponds and tanks of fresh water where the water entered at one end and flowed out at the other; and the baths which he had there, and the variety of small birds that nested in the branches, and the medicinal and useful herbs that were in the gardens. It was a wonder to see, and to take care of it there were many gardeners. Everything was made in masonry and well cemented, baths and walks and closets, and apartments like summer houses where they danced and sang. There was as much to be seen in these gardens as there was everywhere else, and we could not tire of witnessing his great power. Thus as a consequence of so many crafts being practised among them, a large number of skilled Indians were employed.

* [i.e., buffoons.—Munyst]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

As I am almost tired of writing about this subject and my interested readers will be even more so, I will stop talking about it and tell how our Cortés in company with many of our captains and soldiers went to see Tlaltelolco,[1] which is the great market place of Mexico, and how we ascended the great Cue where stand the Idols Tezcatepuca and Huichilobos. This was the first time that our Captain went out to see the City, and I will relate what else happened.

CHAPTER XCII.

How our Captain went out to see the City of Mexico and Tlaltelolco, which is the great market place and the great Cue of Huichilobos, and what else happened.

As we had already been four days in Mexico and neither the Captain nor any of us had left our lodgings except to go to the houses and gardens, Cortés said to us that it would be well to go to the great Plaza and see the great

[1] Tutelulco in the text.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

181 like customs and propensities. War, at first defensive, afterwards offensive, became the life of the tribe. Religion demanded it for its bloody rites; revenge, so deeply rooted in Indian nature, called for it at every moment. But especially was it required for the subsistence of the tribe, whose increasing numbers could not live from agriculture on the scanty soil allotted to them, and who, therefore, were compelled to depend upon the spoils gathered from inroads upon their neighbours. If there was no war in progress, the Mexicans deemed themselves "idle."[7] We may therefore presume that the military organization of the Mexicans, their preparations for warfare, and the mode of the latter, are features of 701 importance, and worthy of serious attention.

[852] Every male of the Mexican tribe was born a warrior. When still a babe his father placed alongside of the child a small bow[8] and some arrows, in token of its future duties. There was no military caste at Tenuchtitlan or Mexico; with the exception of children, old people, infirm or crippled persons, and sometimes priests, every one had to go to war. Boys fifteen years old were taken along, and in some instances it was even directed "that no "youth over fifteen years of age should remain; that all had to "go, except children and old people."[9] Thus there was no "standing army" the available force being composed of all the able-bodied men of the tribe of Mexico.[10]

[7] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXI, p. 32). "Pasados algunos años dijo el rey Moctezuma á "Zihuacoatl Tlacaeleltzin general y oydor: pareceme que ha muchos dias que estamos "muy ociosos." This term, "idle," applies to the lack of any war, since immediately thereafter the war against Chalco was kindled by the most wanton provocation on the part of the Mexicans.

[8] Fr. X. Clavigero (Storia del Messico. Cesena, 1780. Lib. VI, cap. XXXVI). Francisco Lopez de Gomara ("Historia general de las Indias." Second part, "Conquista "de Méjico." contained in the collection of Vedia, volume I,—"This done, they put in "the right hand of the child, an arrow if a boy, a shuttle if a girl, to mark that he would "have to improve by the use of arms, and she by spinning and weaving," p. 438, Vedia, I). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XX, p. 430, of Vol. II, says this was done four days after the birth of the child). Clavigero intimates that only those children "whose fathers were warriors," received the token, but this is not at all confirmed. Motolinia ("Historia de los Indios de la Nueva-España" in "Coleccion de Documentos para la "Historia de Mexico," by Señor Icazbalceta, Mexico, 1866, volume I. "Y entonces si "era varon ponianle una saeta en la mano, . . . el varon porque fuese valiente para "defender à si y á la patria, porque las guerras eran muy ordinarias cada año." Tratado I, cap. V, p. 37). There were no hereditary professions or trades, so to say.

[463]

[9] Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXXIV, p. 141, and cap. XC, p. 158). Acosta (Lib. IV, cap. XXVI, pp. 442 and 443).

[10] What the Germans call "Allgemeine Wehrpflicht," existed among the Mexicans on the most extensive scale. But their forces, although always ready, never went permanently outside of the pueblo, for they were not numerous enough, and did not gather that it could not accumulate so as to exert any influence in the 565 hands and in behalf of any individual or of his immediate relatives.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Consequently, aboriginal Mexico could have neither nobility nor patriciate, and when such a privileged class does not exist, it is useless to seek for another to which the term "unprivileged" or "common" can be applied.

In a future essay we shall attempt to prove that the Mexicans 000 had no hereditary caste of "medicine men" or priests. We have elsewhere shown that there was no caste of warriors.[66] The mode of Tenure and distribution of the soil precludes all possibility of the existence of a permanent class of "tillers." It yet remains to cast a glance at the so-called artisans, and at the traders or "merchants."

Neither of these two professions were held to personal improve- 463 ment of their garden lots ("tlalmilli") but, like officers, they could have them improved by others under their names and for their benefit.[67] The statement of Zurita "that a quarter was composed of all kinds of people"[68] disposes of the opinion, that such quarters contained each but members practising a single trade. Thus there was no geographical agglomeration by professions.[69] Again, no rule existed enforcing or establishing hereditament in kind of work, or manner of sustenance. The son might embrace, at his choice, his father's occupation, but nothing

[66] Compare the burial rites of the Mexicans as reported by the majority of old sources.

[67] "Art of War" (p. 98, notes 8, 9, 40). Zurita "Rapport," (p. 48), "Ils étaient tenus seulement au service militaire, pour lequel aucune excuse n'était admise."

[67] "Tenure of Lands" (p. 426, note 98). Consult the authorities therein quoted.

[68] "Rapport" (p. 224).

[69] It is mostly on the authority of Sahagun (Lib. IX, vol. II), that the settlement by professional clusters is admitted. Ixtlilxochitl ("Histoire des Chichimèques," Cap. XXXVIII, pp. 262 and 263, "Duodécima Relacion," p. 388, Kingsborough, Vol. IX) also says that, at Tezcuco, each profession had its own quarter in the pueblo. But an attentive reading of the first author named (Cap. XVIII, p. 392), where he treats of the featherworkers "De los oficiales que labran pluma, que hacen plumajes, y otras cosas de la misma," satisfies us at once of the fact, that the venerable author only refers to worship of certain idols in a certain quarter, and not to compulsory residence therein, of certain kinds of working men. Nowhere does he say that the "Amantecas" were all featherworkers. He mentions a barrio "Amatlan" or "Amantla." Might it be the "Amanalco" of Vetancurt? Compare also Torquemada (Lib. VI, cap. XXX, pp. 59 and 60), Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. XII, pp. 67 and 68). "El conquistador Anónimo" (Col. de Doc. Vol. I). "Le piazze de i mercati," (pp. 392 and 393), although concerning the markets exclusively. Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, p. 138, cap. 138), "i estos andaban por los Barrios, porque en ellos havia de todo género de gentes." Copied after Zurita Vetancurt (Part II, Trat. I, cap. IV), Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. LI, p. 561).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

463 compelled him to do it.[70] It is true, that such as formed gold or silver into pleasing or (as viewed from eastern notions of taste) rather striking shapes, enjoyed some particular consideration; but this was not so much in deference to their skill, as to the material upon which they exerted it. Gold ("teo-cuitlatl") and silver ("Iztac-teo-cuitlatl") were regarded as "offal of gods." Thus they became objects of "medicine," and those who wrought them into useful or decorative articles, were near to the "medicine-men" themselves.[71] Furthermore, the manner and method of working was so slow, it relied so exclusively upon that patient [554] disregard of time which characterizes even the manufacture of a simple arrowhead, that no accumulation of wealth could result from it.[72] Besides, the artisan had, like any other member of the kin, to furnish his share towards the requirements of public

[70] Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," p. 129). "Les chefs inférieurs et les personnes du peuple élevaient aussi leurs enfants avec beaucoup de soin, leur inspiraient l'horreur du vice, leur recommandaient le respect des dieux, les conduisaient aux temples et les faisaient travailler suivant leurs dispositions; cependant, en général, le fils embrassait la profession de son père." Gomara ("Conquista, etc.," Vedia, Vol. I, p. 438). "Los pobres enseñaban á sus hijos sus oficios, no porque no tuviesen libertad para mostrarles otro, sino porque los aprendiesen sin gastar con ellos." Carlos Maria de Bustamante. Tezcoco en los vltimos Tiempos de sus antiguos Reyes," 1826. Parte tercera, (Cap. III, p. 212). "Enseñaban ademas los oficios á que tenian aficion." Clavigero (Lib. VII, [564] cap. V, p. 462). "The sons generally learned the trade of their fathers," but they were not bound to do it, and therefore no "caste."

[71] The words are composed of: "Iztac," white object (Molina II, p. 49), "Teotl" god (II, p. 101), "Cuitlatl" filth, therefore gold was "offal of God," and silver, "white offal of God."

325 The working of gold and silver was regarded, by the Mexicans, as an invention of "Quetzalcohuatl." Sahagun (Lib. III, cap. III, p. 243), "y los vasallos que tenia eran todos oficiales de artes mecánicas, y diestros para labrar las piedras verdes, que se llaman chalchivites, y tambien para fundir plata, y hacer otras cosas; y estas artes todos tuviéron principio y origen de l dicho Quetzalcoatl." (Also Lib. X, cap. XXIX, [685] p. 113, etc.). Theft of gold or precious stones was punished by death through sacrifice. Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 487). Vetancurt (Parte IIa, Trat. I°, p. 484. "Leyes de los Mexicanos").

287 [72] A very remarkable way of manufacturing their most admired works—those made of feathers—is reported by Mendieta (Lib. IV, cap. XII, pp. 405 and 406): "And there is, besides, something else to notice of this featherwork, namely: that if there are twenty artisans, they will undertake jointly the manufacture of one piece ("imágen"), for, dividing among themselves the figure of the image in as many parts as there are of their number, each one takes his piece home and finishes it there. Afterwards they all meet again and put their pieces together, thus finishing the figure in as perfect a manner as if one alone had made the whole." (Copied by Torquemada, Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 489, and, with slight variations, also by Vetancurt, Vol. I, p. 389.) In regard to the manner of working, Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 487), makes the pertinent remark: "All this they worked (as we have said) with other stones, and with flint; and according to the subtlety of the work, I think they must have spent long time in finishing it." See in general E. B. Tylor ("Researches into the Early History of Mankind," Cap. VII, pp. 187 and 188), also Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. IV, pp. 31 and 32).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

life:[73] hence little was left to him beyond his legitimate wants. 463
We see thus, that hardly any chance was given for the formation of a class which, resting upon the kind of occupation, might assume the position of "caste" in the organization of aboriginal Mexican society.

It is repeatedly asserted, and on high authority, that the mer- 441 chants or traders of Mexico enjoyed particular privileges. We must premise here that merchants, in the sense of venders of other people's manufactures or products (thus living off of the difference between cost and proceeds) were known only in one way.[74] The name for merchant was "man who exchanges one

[73] That the artisans or mechanics contributed a portion of their wares in the shape of tribute, is amply proven. See for instance, Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. LI, p. 530. Easily misunderstood!) This passage of Oviedo explains the action of "wrathy chief" towards the "jewellers" and "goldsmiths" at the arrival of Cortés, as related by Tezozomoc, Durán, and by Sahagun. See also: Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," p. 223). Bustamante ("Tezcoco, etc.," Parte III, cap. V, p. 232). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 138). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XV, p. 480). Bancroft (Vol. III, cap. VI, pp. 231 and 232). [651]

[74] The existence of currency, or of money, in the shape of grains of cacao, T shapen 436 pieces of tin or copper, and quills filled with gold dust is generally admitted. See 437 for instance, Prescott ("Conquest of Mexico," Book IV, cap. II, p. 140). H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II, cap. XII, pp. 381, 382, and 383). Cacao played, among the ancient Mexicans, the same role as "wampum" did among the northern Indians, for purposes of exchange, but did not go beyond it. In regard to the so-called copper or tin coins, or rather marks or checks, it is well to examine the matter more closely. Cortés ("Carta Quarta" in Vedia I, p. 111), says very positively that at Tachco, he obtained sundry small pieces of tin like very thin money ("á manera de moneda muy delgada"), which he indeed found to have been used as currency by the natives. ("halló que en dicha provincia, aun en otras, se trataba por moneda"). Bernal Diez (Cap, XCII, p. 89, Vedia II) mentions axes of "brass, copper, and tin" ("hachas de laton y cobre y estaño"), bartered at the market place of Tlatelulco, "and before we left this square ("plaza") we met with other traders, who from what they said, sold gold in grains as they obtained it from the mines, and enclosed in quills of the geese of the land, and so thin ("asi blancos" so white) that the gold might be seen, and by the length and size of the quills they determined how many mantles or "jiquipiles" (bags of 8000 grains) of cacao they were worth, or slaves, or any other things for which they bartered it," ("ó otra qualquier cosa á que lo trocaban"). Gomara ("Conquista, etc.," pp. 348 and 349). "But the chief one is cacahuatl, which serves as coin. . . ." "Their buying and selling consists in exchanging one thing for another. . . ." (Id., p. 451). "No tenian moneda, teniendo mucha plata, oro y cobre, y sabiéndolo hundir y labrar, y contratando mucho en ferias y mercados. Su moneda usual y corriente es cacauatl ó cacao." Oviedo (Lib. VIII, cap. XXX, pp. 316, 317. Lib. XXXIII, cap. LI, p. 530) mentions only cacao as currency. Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XIV, p. 260). "It was customary at these marts ('en estos mercados') to exchange ('trocar') one thing for another, and even nowadays this is sometimes practised; but everywhere cacao is most commonly used. In other parts they used, besides, some small mantles which they call Patolquachtli. . . . . Elsewhere they used plentifully some copper coins, almost like unto ("de hechura") a Tau T, two or three fingers wide and made of thin plates ("planchuela") some thicker, other less thick. Where there was much gold ("donde avia mucho Oro"), small quills filled with it, circulated among the Indians," ("traian unos Canutillos de ello, y andaba entre los Indios mucho de esto"). Alonzo Zuazo ("Carta

The twelfth month they named Teotl eco, which meaneth "The Arrival of the Gods." They celebrated this feast in honor of all the gods; for they said that they had gone to a number of places. They observed a great feast on the last day of this month because their gods had arrived.

Al doseno mes llamauan Teutl eco, que quijere dezir la llegada le los dioses celebrauan esta fiesta, a honrra de todos los dioses, porque dezian que aujan ydo a algunas partes, hazian gran fiesta el postrero dia deste mes, porque sus dioses aujan llegado. 796x [805 776]

Chapter 12
Teotl eco

On the fifteenth day of this month the young men and boys strewed boughs on all the altars and shrines of the gods, both those which were in the houses and those which were along the roads and crossroads. And for this activity which they performed they gave them maize; [to some they] gave a large basket full of maize, and to others two or three ears.

On the eighteenth day arrived the god (who is always a young man whom they called Tlamatzincatl; that is, Titlacauan). They said that, because he was young and strong, he traveled better and arrived first. They then set forth food on his pyramid, and that night they ate and drank, and all made merry, especially the old men and the old women, who drank wine because of the arrival of the god. And they said that with this rejoicing they washed his feet for him.

On the last day of this month was the great feast; for they said that all the gods then arrived. On the eve of this day, at night, they made, on a mat, a very closely packed small cake of cornmeal, in the shape of a cheese. Upon this small cake the gods impressed the print of a foot as a sign that they had come. All night long the principal priest watched, and came and went many times to see when he would descry the print.

Seeing the mark of a footprint, the priest then cried out, saying "Our lord hath come!" Then the priests of the pyramid began to sound horns, and conch shells, and trumpets, and other instruments of those which they then used.

1. Marginal notation: Dedicatio templi Michael.

Cap. 12
Teutl eco

1 A KL. Teutl eco A 10
2 b A los qujnze dias deste mes: los b 11
3 c moços y muchachos, enrramauan c 12
4 d todos los altares y oratorios de los d 13
5 e dioses: assi los que estauan dentro de e 14
6 f las casas como por los camjnos y en- f 15 [465]
7 g cruzijadas, y por esta diligencia que g 16
8 A hazian dauãlos mahiz, algunos dauan A 17
9 b vn chiqujvitl lleno de mahiz, y a otros b 18
10 c dos o tres maçorcas. c 19
11 d A los deziocho dias: llegaua el dios d 20 12 e (que siempre es mancebo que le e 21 [776]
13 f llamauã tlamatzincatl: este es titla- f 22
14 g cauã) deziã que por ser mancebo y g 23
15 A rezio, camjnaua mejor, y llegaua pri- A 24 [273]
16 b mero: luego ofreciã comjda en su cu, b 25
17 c y aquella noche comjan y beujan y c 26
18 d regozijauãse todos: especialmente los d 27
19 e viejos, y viejos que beujan vino, por la e 28 20 f llegada del dios: y dezian que lo f 29'
lauauã los pies con este regozijo.

El postrero dia deste mes era la gran fiesta: porque dizen que todos los dioses llegauan entonce: la vigilia deste dia, a la noche hazian encima de vn petate de harina de mahiz vn mõtonzillo muy tupido de la forma de vn queso: en este montonzillo imprimjan los dioses la pisada de vn pie en señal que avian llegado: toda la noche el principal satrapa velaua y yva y venja muchas vezes a mjrar quando veria la pisada. [252]

En vinjendo el satrapa la señal de la pisada luego daua bozes diziendo, llegado a nuestro señor: luego comenzauan los mjnjstros del cu, a tañer cornetas, y caracoles, y trompetas y otros instrumentos de los [534]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

435 burdened down with gold, drowned ignominiously in the canals. Diaz, however, noted Indian usage and confined himself to four jades which he was able to exchange later and which, in his words, "served me well in healing my wounds and gathering me food."[10]

648 181 The Aztecs did not have our modern esteem for gold, so the Spaniards had great difficulty in getting it at first. The Mexican Indians responded to the invaders' demands for objects of value by offering jade and turquoise, those substances most precious to themselves. Such misguided compliance was highly irritating to Cortes and his men, who had no ethnological training; nor, it is only fair to say, would they have wanted such education, were it available. Gold [325] was valuable to the Aztecs only for the ornaments which could be made from it, and silver may have had an even greater value, since nodules were rare and the Indians had no technique for smelting the ore.[11] (See Plates 46–47.)

262 241 Thus the Aztecs did not hold our ideas of value and wealth. Yet they contributed much to our prosperity and [567 well-being, partly through being forced as slaves to work 466] the gold and silver mines, whose modern economic significance they so little understood, and even more through the enrichment of the world's supply of foods. In addition to corn of several varieties, the Aztecs developed many sorts of beans, a very nutritive addition to human diet because of the high protein content. Squash, gourds, chia, camotes, green and red peppers, alligator pears and tomatoes were products of the versatile Middle American farmer, enriching the Aztec diet and that of the modern world. Trade with [433] southern Vera Cruz brought chocolate, vanilla and pineapples to the Aztec larder.[12]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

651 Tlapan in the mid-sixteenth century gave 62 pesos, 3 tomines of 632 gold quarterly, 3 loads of honey, 5 pots, and 3 loads of wax in pellets.[71]
[316 263 233] Tototepec, likewise about a generation after the Conquest, gave 50 measures of gold dust and certain articles of clothing quarterly, and [146] daily gave the services of seven Indians, and a chicken to the Calpixque.[72] A

34. Tlachquiauco

SOURCES OF THE MAP

635 The province of Tlachquiauco was not large. It contained three 114 principal towns, according to folio 45r of the Mendocino Codex, the folio copied from the recto side of a lost leaf (page "22A") which followed Coyolapan and preceded Xoconochco in the original manuscript. Of the three towns of Tlachquiauco Province, one has not [128] been located, but the other two (lying in northwestern Oaxaca) have been identified as follows on the "Millionth Map" of the American Geographical Society, sheet "Ciudad de México":

[103]

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Achiotlan, 4	S. Miguel Achiutla
Tlachquiauco, 3	Tlaxiaco

The town which has eluded identification is Çapotlan.

Mixtepec (2) and Tlacotepec (1) are added from other sources.

REMARKS ON TOWNS

632 Mixtepec was subject to Tlachquiauco in the days when the latter still held out against the Mexica, and presumably fell with it.[73]

Tlacotepec appears in some of the younger Moctezuma's conquests jointly with Ycpatepec (in the province of Yoaltepec).

Tlachquiauco is a name which has suffered considerable corruption, but there is no novelty in the identification of the town.

Çapotlan appears vaguely linked with Etla and Macuilxochic in one source.[74]

---

[71] PNE, 1: No. 725: "dan cada ochenta dias sesenta y dos pesos y tres tomines de oro en polùo y tres cargas de miel y çinco xarros y tres cargas de çera en pellas." The statement also includes similar data from near-by towns.

[72] PNE, 1: No. 28: "dan cada ochenta dias çinquenta pesos de oro en poluo y çinco naguas y ocho mantillas, y cinco mantas grandes; mas dan siete yndias de seruicio cada dia y una gallina al Calpizque."

[73] PNE, 4: 142: "el caçique de tlaxiaco que era a quien estos de mistepeque reconocian por señor tenia guerra con montecuma."

[74] ENE, 16: 68.

A [i.e. A civil functionary in whose care the public stores were entrusted x - Analyst] child),[99] and those who cultivated them carried the appellation of 423

622
618
"tlalmaitl"—hands of the soil.[100]

The "tlalmilpa," whether held by chiefs or by ordinary members 423 of the kin ("macehuales") were, therefore, the only tracts of land possessed for use by individuals in ancient Mexico. They were so far distinguished from the "tecpantlalli" and "tlatocatlalli" in their mode of tenure as, whereas the latter two were dependent [99] It is just the "pillali" which oppose the greatest difficulties to this investigation, and to a clear conception of the mode of tenure of lands in ancient Mexico. They are generally represented (whenever mentioned), as private domains of the chiefs. Torquemada (Lib. XIV, pp. 545 and 546), distinguishes two kinds of "pillali." The first one he says might be sold.—but he places the restriction upon them, that such as held lands through conquest ("sujecion") or through gift ("merced") of the chief, had to go to the descendants, as majorat; and if they died without heirs, the King, or Lord [428] became such, and they were incorporated into his royal Estates." The other kind was not transmissible at all. Clavigero (Lib. XVII, cap. XIV). We notice here a confusion between official tracts and such lots of the "calpulli" as pertained to the chief's family in consequence of their membership of the Kin. Also between "tribute-lots" and the official tracts, of conquered tribes. Torquemada acknowledges, that the "pillali," upon the death of the family, were incorporated in the calpulli to which that family belonged, "in order that they might pay tribute." This ought to define their true position and nature.

[100] From "tlalli" soil, and "maitl" hand. Hands of the soil. Molina (Parte IIa, p. 427
124), has: "tlalmaitl"—"labrador, ò gañan." This name is given in distinction of the "macehuales" or people working the soil in general. The tlalmaites are identical with the "mayeques." See Zurita (p. 224), "tlalmaites or mayeques, which signifies tillers of the soil of others . . . ." He distinguishes them plainly from the "teccallec" [566] which are the "tecpanpouhque" or "tecpantlaca" formerly mentioned as attending to a class of official lands (p. 221, Zurita). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 138). "These mayeques could not go from one tract to another, neither leave those which they cultivated, and they paid a rent to its masters according as they agreed upon ("en lo que se concertaban") in what they raised. They paid tribute to nobody else but the master of the land." This tends to show that there existed, not an established obligation, a serfdom, but a voluntary contract, that the "tlalmaites" were not serfs, but simply renters. Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. VII, p. 545). ". . . . those that were knights ("caballeros") and descendants of the families of the Kings, and Lords, had their particular lands and their rentals, where many of them held renters ("terrazgueros") which served them, tilled the crops and served them in their houses. These lands were called pillali or "land of nobles and knights." We prefer the etymology "piltontli" "niño ò niña, muchacho ó muchacha" (Molina, II, p. 82), or "piltzintli" niño ó niña" therefore lands of the children,—to the derivation from "pilli." The title of chief was "tecuhtli," and the word "pilli" substituted for it is certainly but in connection with the occupation of a particular place of office, and not a title itself. Bustamante ("Tezcoco, etc.," p. 330. "The sovereigns as well as the inferior Lords and other principals had their own patrimonial estates, and in them their mayeques or Tlalmayes, what these gave of rent were tributes of the Lord," Id. pp. 233 and 234).

The "tlalmaites" appear to have been free from other tributes, and free from com- [446] munal labor outside of the "pillali" (Bustamante, p. 233. Herrera, Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 138). It is not very clear, however, whether this applies simply to the conquering tribe alone, or also to the tlalmaites of conquered tribes, as towards the tribute due by that tribe to their conquerors. The detailed relations between the two are yet somewhat obscure and confuse in some points.

776
796 goods).* Thus it was made known to the people that they 567 would be offered up as sacrifices.

At this time they gave gifts and had a feast.

And their victims they set up in a good place, all in costly mantles which had been placed upon them. [And] they made them dance upon the roof-tops or in the market place. [And] they went singing, ending their song mocking death.

And if any were noted who were very subtle, among [565] those to be offered up as sacrifices; one skilled in songs, one who was ingenious, who was intelligent and able, the noblemen set him aside and put another in his place.

Likewise, if a woman could sew, or if she prepared food
[595] well, or made good cacao—from whose hand good food and drink came; [or if she was] a good interpreter; her also they set aside. The nobles took [such women] as wives.

776 [Yiacatecutli's] array [was thus] put on: his face was covered with white pyrites. He had a tuft of hair on the front of his head like a pillar of stone and a headband with bunches of quetzal feathers. He wore golden ear-plugs. A blue knotted cloth was his cape.[110] He had a costly breech-cloth. He had little bells and shells. He wore princely sandals. His shield bore a coil pattern like a gourd vessel,[111] in quetzal feathers. His traveling staff was in his hand; he had a cane staff.

iquac tetlauhtia, tetlaqualtia.

Auh yn jtlaaltilhoan, iecxan, qujnquetza: mòch tlaçotilmatli, yn jntech qujntlalilia: ipã mjtotiaia in tlapanco, anoço tianquizco: cujcatinemj, tlatlahtlamj yn jncuje, ynje momiquizquequeloa.

Auh intla aca eittec, in cenca mjmati tlaaltilli, yn cujcamatinj, in iolimatquj, yn jte, yn iello: qujqujxtiaja in pipilti, ipan tlacaquetzaia:

no iuhquj, intla cieatl, intla tlamachiuhquj, anoço vellaqualchioa, vel schioa, in qualli yiauh, in qualli intlaqual ymac quiça; vellatolmelaoac: no qujxtilcia, qujnmotlaccioaatiaia in pipilti.

Jn jnechichioal motlatlatlali, mixapetzvi, ytemjlo, ixquatzo, ixquatzone, quetzallalpile, teucujtlaxacoche, xiuhtlalpilli yn jtilma, tlaçomaxtle, tzitzile, ciooale, teccaque, quetzalxicalcoliuhquj yn jchimol, ytlaçcaia ymac cnoc, otlatopile.

Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Lord of the Four Directions (Napa tecutli).

776 It is said that he also belonged among the Tlaloca. He ●467 was the special [god of] the mat-makers' guild, who worshipped him as a god.[112]

And he was also [god] of those who fashioned mats of large, fat reeds, and of those who made frames of reeds.[113]

[773] They spoke in this wise: "For it was he who first taught and showed them how to weave mats and make seats."

He it was who owned, ruled, discovered, began, and initiated [mat-making].

And they spoke thus: "For he it is who causeth the reeds to sprout and grow—the fine thin ones, the coarse ones, the long, fat reeds and the round, white ones, those with sprouts, the black ones, the sharp ones, the thin ones."[114]

776 And when it was his feast day, they spoke thus: "He 796 washeth and bathetth men; he shaketh and sprinkleth rain 467 upon them." [For] greatly they importuned [rain] of him.

And also each year they slew a man who represented him,
[567] a slave.

Jnic cempoalli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl yn jtoca catca Napa tecutli.

Juh mjtoa, ca no intech pouj yn tlaloque: iehoan ymjxcoian, iocatjan, in calpolloc, qujmotecutiaia in petlachiuhque:

yoan tolcuechiuhque, in tlacuechjuhque, ytech moposia:

iuh qujtoaia, ca irhoatl achto qujnmachti, qujmittiti, in petlachioalittli, yn icpalchioalittli:

irhoatl axcaoa cococaoaia, tlatqujoa, tlaxxtile, tlatzintile, tlapeoaltile.

Joan iuh qujtoaia ca irhoatl qujnealhia, qujqujxtia, in toli in tolpitzauac, in tolpatlactli, in tolmjmjlli, xatapili, in tolqujiutl, in tolcaputl, yn jztoli, xomali:

yoan yn jquac ilhujuhquçaia, iuh mjtoa, tepapaca, tealtia, tepan qujtzetzeloa, tepan quipiztia, yn aoachili, cenca tlaihtlanjliloia.

Auh no ce tlacatl, ipan qujxtoaia, tlacotli, in qujmictiaia cexiuhtica:

---

110. Corresponding Spanish version states that "esta cubierto con vna manta azul, y sobre el azul, vna red angosta de manera que azul, se parezca, por las mallas de la red."

111. The xicalcoliuhqui also has been referred to as a conventionalized serpent-head design.

112. Calpolli—clan or gens, which contained, probably, all heads of old families, controlled domestic affairs, distributed its common lands among members (Soler: op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 45, citing Alonso de Zorita: Breve sumario relativo, Vol. II, pp. 73-227). In various of his writings Soler uses the word "guild" when the context suggests its suitability.

113. Corresponding Spanish text says, "hazen cestiços de juncias: que llaman xalcatetli."

114. Cf. Sahagún: op. cit., Vol. I, p. 143 and Vol. III, p. 272.

[618]

They arrayed him [like the god], and he carried in his hand a green gourd vessel, in which was water. With a branch[115] he sprinkled people.

And when not on his feast day, but sometime during the year, [a devotion was paid to Napa tecutli,] another man impersonated him, and they decked him [similarly].

When one of the makers of mats desired that there should be a dance at his house, that he should observe [a devotion], the governors of his guild (calpuleque)[116] escorted [the impersonator of the god], who went sprinkling the people with water, since they had prayed that they might be benefited.

And when he delivered himself of his faults, [the celebrant] brought forth his goods and chattels.

He said: "May I eat not in vain, may I consume not in vain, may I use not for myself alone that which hath benefited me. May all be eaten, drunk, consumed, that a dance be danced for our god, Napa tecutli. May I now live, soon sleep, soon awake again. [The god] knoweth if he will give anything to me, if he willeth that anything be given."

Then he covered the impersonator with a large cotton mantle; who, then clothed, then departed, [with the calpuleque] from [the mat-maker's] house.

And then [the mat-maker] feasted all his kinsmen.

And in the guild hall where was guarded the image [of the god], the mat-makers greatly honored and cared for him. Always they spread out mats and set up mats; they shook [things] out, they swept clean, they removed rubbish, they laid fires. Always they swept [the hall] very clean, they provided incense. No rubbish lay about.

And in this manner was [the god] budight; he was covered with a black unguent; his face had a thick coating of soot—his face was blackened, and it was spotted with a paste of amaranth seed. He wore a paper crown. His hairdress, at the back of his head, was of paper. He wore a paper breech-clout. He had bells and white sandals. He bore the shield [ornamented with] water-lily flowers and leaves. He carried a staff of long thick reeds.

qujchichiuaia, yniac mantinenca, xoxouhqui xicalli: vncan ietinemj atl, vexotica ic teatzelhvia.

Auh yn jquac amo ilhujuh, yn çan nenmajan: oc no ce qujxiptlaiotiaia, qujchichiuaia:

yn jquac tla aca, petlachiuhquj qujnequj ychan qujtoia, qujxepieltia: vmpa qujvicaia, in calpuleque, teatzelhujtiuh, teaxochvitiuh, iuhquin ic qujtlanjliaia, ynjc qujmicneliz.

Youan iuhquin yvic mocujtlaxculiztlaoaia: yn açaca ic vnca itlaquj, yaxca:

qujtoia, macamo njcnenqua, macamo njcnenpolo, macamo njcnixcauj, yn nocneliloca: ma onqualo, ma onjoa, ma onpepeliuj, ma ic opanjtoti in teteouh napa tecutli: ma çaquen njnonemjtia, yn ac iuhquj njcochiz, ac iuhquj njnoaz, iube qujmati, yn açoc itla, nechmomaquj;liz, qujmomacaviliz:

ic quixquentiaia ce quachtli, yn itiptla muchiuaia, ic oalquiça yn ichan:

auh ic muchidacatl, tlatlaquaia yn joaniolque.

Auh yn jcalpolco in vmpa pialoia yxiptla, cenca tlamauiztiliaia, tlâcetiaia, in petlachiuhque, muchipa petlateteca, icpaleteca, tlatzetzeloa, tlachpana, tlacuicuj, tletlalia, muchipa copaltema, tlatzacaliuhtoc tlatzacaliuhtimanj, atle vetztoc, çe tlaçolli.

Auh yuja yn muchichiuaia, motilloçac, mixtilpopoca, mixtilhuj, mjchchiaujtinac, amacale, yiamacuxpal, amamaztle, tzitzile, itaccaque, atlacuçonanchimale, axtapiltepile.

Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of those called the Little Molded Ones (Tepictoton), who were held to be among the Tlaloca.

[The Tepictoton] were also thought to belong among the Tlaloca.

These thus named Tepictoton were only imagined. They made them as representations of various mountains.

And may who were palsied, cramped, stiffened, paralyzed, or may who were threatened with drowning when the wind came over the water, would then vow that they would fashion images; that they would make representations of Juic cempoalli vce capitulo, ynchpa tlatoa yn itocca tepictoton: yn jnnan pouja tlaloque.

No ynnan pouj, itoch tlamjlnia yn tlaloque:

yn jc mjtoaia tepicto, çan qujmotepiqujia, qujmixiptlaiotiaia, in tetepe, in çaço cattle teperl.

Auh yn aquin cuaclujia, cacapanaia, quaquahtia, cocotzouja: ononçe yn aquin atlan miquinequj, ehecatl ipan moquetza atla: vncan monenotiaia ynjc tepiquiz, in qujxipiqui: quetzalcoatl, in chalchiuitl yxoc, in tlaloc:

776
796
567
467

776
467
[356]

776

776
782

115. The corresponding Spanish text repeats "vn ramo de salce" (ramo).
116. According to Durán, (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 223), the calpuleque were "señores ó guardas de barrios."

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

[796
467]

[782 755]

—After Paso y Troncoso

29—Tzapotlan tenan (Chap. 9), Chalchiuhtli yyac (Chap. 11), Chicome xochi (Chap. 7). 30—Tzapotlatenco-Cocoxqui (Chap. 12). 31—Xiqipilli tzoalli (Chap. 29). 32—Tepictoton (Chap. 32). 33—Teotitlan (Tepictoton) (Chap. 32). 34—Appendix, Chap. 18. 35—Appendix, Chap. 18.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER VII

ECONOMY

The Domestic and Tribal Economy of the Aztec People

THE AZTEC SOCIAL SYSTEM provided a means by which 181 people could exist harmoniously together in considerable numbers. The domestic and tribal economy of the Aztecs offered the food, shelter, tools and clothing to which man largely owes his dominant position on earth. The measure of a human society may be gauged by the relationship between the organization of the people themselves and their use of materials to build houses and equip them. The Aztecs' economy had the same basic simplicity as had their social organization; likewise it had the same flexibility in expanding to meet the needs of a growing population.[1]

Agriculture was the basis of Aztec life, and corn, zea mays, 241 was the chief food plant. The cultivation of plants ensured 471 a food supply near at hand, which was not subject to the fluctuations of game and thereby enabled man to take thought for the morrow. The clan system, as we have seen, recognized that the fruits of the land supported the tribe. Therefore, it was only natural that the tribe should own and control the land which supported its members.[2] (See Plate 38.)

The tribal council divided the land among the clans, and 471
421

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

471 421 the leaders of each, in turn, apportioned its share among the heads of families justly and equitably. Sections were also reserved for the maintenance of the chief and the temple staff, for war supplies and the payment of tribute; these were worked communally, with some amount, no doubt, of slave [428] labor. At the death of a tenant the land passed to his sons. If he died without issue the holding reverted to the clan for redivision, as was also the case if a tenant failed to cultivate his plot for a period of two years. Such a system could work equitably and profitably for all concerned so long as a society was relatively static and plenty of arable land was at hand. However, in the Valley of Mexico inequalities developed in the system.

174 The growing population of the Valley tribes used up all the available land, and families or clans had no way of adding to their farm holdings. A plot which produced ample supplies for a small family might yield a bare subsistence or less for a larger one. Normal variation in the richness of soil would result in similar injustices. Under such conditions the chiefs and priests who lived off the public lands would be far better off than the ordinary citizen whose holding, generation by generation, tended to diminish. Thus friction leading to foreign war and internal revolt was bound to result whenever a tribe could not expand its territorial limits to meet the needs of its population. The considerable mi- [167] grations, like those of the Culhuas to Texcoco and Tenochtitlan or the Mixtec people to Texcoco years earlier, had their basis in a pressing economic necessity.[8]

241 311 The Tenochcas, who came late to the Valley, at a time when land was at a premium, had, we have seen, a difficult time in withstanding their hungry neighbors. Forced to re-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

311 578 achieved by the relatively unlimited possibilities of chinampa agriculture.

729 The Tenochcas supplemented their land hunger by an-728 other means. In conquered territories successful warriors 471 received grants of land which were worked by members of the defeated tribe. Small colonies sometimes lived off this [428] land to guard against revolt in the subjugated area. Such property passed from father to son, but if there were no heir it reverted to the tribal authority, not the clan in which the tenant had membership. Other such land must have been held for the benefit of the religious organization. Thus the central authority of Tenochtitlan, and presumably Texcoco as well, held considerable property to support the elaborate pomp of Church and State without straining the resources of the tribesmen. The relative fluidity of such real estate gave the tribal authority a wherewithal to adjust inequalities and dissatisfactions among the more ambitious tribal members. Naturally, as the Aztec peoples were less highly developed socially than ourselves, they did not attain our own elaborate system of rewards and adjustments by means of federal, state and municipal appointments.*

651 A powerful Aztec tribe had another source of support: tribute. The levies often consisted of foodstuffs and raw materials, both native and foreign to the Valley, and also included warriors' and priests' costumes, mantles, pottery and other articles of craftsmanship. Distributed throughout the community these goods enriched both communal enterprise and private convenience.* (See Plates 62, bottom right; 64.)

436 Manufacture and trade were beginning to play an im-
438 portant part in Aztec economy, although not to the extent 32 of societies which have developed media of exchange, like

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

court. The house walls had stone bases and, according to the 342 wealth or taste of the owner, were finished in stone or adobe. The roof was constructed by covering crossbeams with small poles tightly fitted together and spreading a layer of lime plaster over the whole. As there were no windows, the houses had to be shallow. To admit light and air the buildings were usually two rooms deep and prolonged according to taste and wealth. The back room, which contained a hearth for cooking, was completely enclosed save for the door to the outer chamber which was left largely open on the patio side, columns or short wing walls supporting the rafters. Two-story houses probably did not exist before the Conquest, but there are cases where, to have light and circulation of air, a rear court with its surrounding rooms was elevated on a platform to the height of the roofs of the rooms around the patio in front.[24] (See Plate 41.)

Recent excavations in the palace of the chief of Chico- 342
nauhtla, a fief of Texcoco, revealed interesting data on the 177 growth of a chiefly establishment. This palace was continually being rebuilt and expanded to meet the demands of a growing population and richer economy. Patios were arranged at different levels, according to the plan described above. The earliest rooms had the congested quality of a [362]
Teotihuacan plan, but the later chambers were more spacious and open to sun and air. Each renovation called for more space, so that allowing a family of five to each hearth, the entourage of the chief more than trebled in a century and a quarter.[25] (See Plate 43.)

The plan of an Aztec town tended to have a rectangular 361 form, since the division of the land among the clans usually [471] followed a more or less orderly rectilinear pattern. A central

Then they climbed up the ropes. On one rope mayhap twenty climbed, like a cluster hanging upon it. Not all reached the point; only some reached the top. The one who led grasped the xocotl image, which was made only of a dough of amaranth seeds. He took all—its shield, arrow, dart, and dart-thrower.

And the amaranth seed dough [tamales] he scattered down so that they fell to the ground upon those [who watched]. All who stood below looked up. When the amaranth seed dough fell, all stretched forth their hands and shouted as if there were a fight. Some took its head ornaments of amaranth seed dough, which he also scattered upon them. They were carried off by those below.

And when this was done, then he who had captured the xocotl [image] came down. When he descended and reached the ground, then they seized him; the old men [of the temple] took him up to the place of sacrifice and offered him gifts. And all thereupon pulled upon the ropes, exerting themselves greatly, verily destroying the work. And the xocotl then fell to the ground, raising a cloud of dust, breaking into pieces. Into three or four sections it quickly broke apart.

Upon this, all then went; all was quiet and left clear. And then they accompanied the captor of the xocotl to his house, and arrayed him in a brown striped cloak edged with a feathered border.

And if one were a captor [of the xocotl], he might well thus array himself, wrapping about him [such a cloak]; none might therefore dispute him [the right]. But if one were not [such a] captor, he might only keep one in his care. And mayhap he might sell it when he was poor or sick.

And thus they accompanied him to his house; two old priests went carrying him, taking him by the arms. Behind came the priests, blowing horns for him as they went, sounding shell trumpets for him. And he bore upon his back his shield. And when they left him, then they returned [to the temple].

Thus in truth ended here, [thus] concluded, the feast day.

njman ie ic tlecua in mecatitech: in ce mecatl, açocen tecpantli in jtech tleco, iuhqujn tlapipilcac: amo mochintin in vmpanvetzi, çan quezqujntin in vmpanvetzi, in aqujn iacatiuh, vel ichoatl caci in xócotl ixiptla, çan tzoalli: muchi qujcujlia in jchimal, in jmjuh tlaoaçomalli, yoan yiatlauh. 796 [481]

Auh in tzoalli, vmpa qujoaltetepeoa, tepan qujoalcecẽmana, muchi tlacatl, onacopatlachia in tlatzintlan manj, in jquac oalhuetzi tzoalli muchi tlacatl maçoa, iuhqujn ipan nemjmjctilo, iuhqujn tlatlacaoaca: no cequjntin conaci, in jtzõcoiol in tzoalli, no tepã qujoalcecẽmana, namoielo in tlatzintlan.

Auh in ie iuhquj njmã: njman ie ic oaltemo, in xócomanj: in oaltemoc, in otlaltitechacico: njmã ie ic conana: in tlacacouhcan, vmpa qujtlecavia in vevetque, vmpa qujtlauhtia: auh in jxqujch, tlacatl, nimã ie ic qujtilinja in mecatl, vel netilinjlo, vel ontlamj in tlapalivíztli: auh in xocotl, njmã ic vetzi tlalpã, tlalipotoztivetzi, popoztectivetzi, açocencan, anoço nauhcan qujztivetzi. [431]

In ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic viviloa, cactivetzi, cactimomana: auh çatepã, conaoa in jchan in xocomanj, ic caapana camopalli in tilmatli, tenjvivavanquj. [292]

Auh intla tlamanj, vel qujmoquentiz, vel qujmolpilitinemjz, aiac ic qujtlatzovíliz: auh intlacamo tlamanj, çan qujmotlatiliz, çan ipiel ica: auh anoço qujmonamaqujliz, in jquac ic motolinja in jcocoian.

Auh injc cõcaoa ichan: caantivi, qujtzitzitzqujtivi yiacolpã; in quaquacujlti: vmentin, icãpa mantivi tlamacazque, qujtlapichilitivi: ichoatl in teccizti qujpichilitivi: yoã qujmamatiuh in jchimal. Auh in ocõcaoato, mec oalmocuepa: [534] ic vel oncan oontzonquiça, õtlamj in jlhujtl.

777 x 796 605 only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life of woe.[4]

And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a man, they named him Nemoń, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nenciuatl.

[551]

x 796 And when [these days came], nothing was done; the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they beat and cleaned with a cloak.

777 [412] [356]

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

[578] [513]

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

[481]

x 796 And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

754 761

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjliztli, nenqujzcaistl, nenqujçaliztli, ãoneoti-nemjliztli.

Auh in aqujn vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaittililoia, tlatẽmachililoia: auh intla oqujchtli qujtocaiotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenqujzquj, acan ompouhquj acã, ompovi nenoqujch. Auh intla cioatl: Nencioatl.

Auh in jquac y, atle aioaia, çan cactimãca in tecpan inteccali, amo tecutlatoloia, çan calonooaia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaoaztica: çan tlaiecapeviloia, ecaceoaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, totolaaviztztica, anoço tlavivitequja, tlapopovaia tilmatica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cẽca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicujz:

ano ac vel motlavitequja, moticujnjaia, motepotlamjaia; nematca, nenemonia: auh in aqujn motepotlamjaia: qujlhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticçujc, ma ximjmati.

Auh in aqujn ipan y, cocoliztli qujcuja mococoaia: muchi tlacatl qujtoaia, Concocolizcuj, aocmo qujçaz, aocmo motemachiz, in aço patiz, aocmo teumeiolloti, aocmo itech ca netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maqujça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatoaian: mjtoa. Ca ça oicnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oqujmonomavili, oqujmaioculili:

aocmo iuh catca teiollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, neellaquaoaloc, oqujxcauhque injoaioloque, ca oiqujtecaque: aocmo iuhcan qujxmoaiã inon oquẽreltztin, meoatiquetz, inon oihiio qujcujc, ca temauhti in jpan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle itonal, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatiz, tetlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipoaallo in jzqujlhujtl navilhujtl.

4. The Tovar Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 34) adds that people did not gather in the temples, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other ceremony acts.

Tenth Chapter, in which is told how the rulers took their pleasure.

Injc matlactli capitulo, ipan mjtoa injc meellequjxtinia tlatoque. 643

When the ruler went forth, in his hand rested his reed stalk which he went moving in rhythm with his words. His chamberlains and his elders went before him; on both sides, on either hand, they proceeded as they went clearing the way for him. None might cross in front of him; none might come forth before him; none might look up at him; none might come face to face with him.

In jcoac quiça tlatoanj, imac onotiuh, iacapitzac, injc mapilotiuh, injc matlatotiuh qujiacana in jtechiuhcaoan, in jtzoan, necoc vmac in mantiuj, in quitlapeujlitiuj: aiac vel qujiacaujltequj, aiac uel ixpan quiça, aiac vel acopa quitta, aiac uel quixnepanoa, [481] 643 644

He sang; songs were learned; chants were intoned. They told him proverbs and pleasantries to pass the time.

cujca, mocujcamachtia, cujcaeheooa, quitlatlaquechilia, quiçaçanjlhuja, [521]

They played ball. There were his ball-catchers and his ball-players. They wagered [in this game] all [manner of] costly goods—gold, golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, slaves,[1] precious capes, valuable breech cloths, cultivated fields, houses, leather leg bands, gold bracelets, arm bands of quetzal feathers, duck feather capes, bales of cacao—[these] were wagered there in the game called tlachtli.

vllama, vncatca imolpixcaoa, ioan inmolancaoan, quitlanjtoa in jxquich tlaçotli in teucujtlatl, in teocujtlacozcatl, in chalchiujtl, in teuxiujtl, in tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in mjlli, in callj, xoxoiujtilmatli, cacaoapetlatl in vncan netlanjoa, itoca tlachtli: [525 526] [301 576 314]

On the two sides, on either hand, it was limited by walls, very well made, in that the walls and floor were smoothed. And there, in the very center of the ball court, was a line, drawn upon the ground. And on the walls were two stone, ball court rings. He who played caused [the ball] to enter there; he caused it to go in. Then he won all the costly goods, and he won everything from all who watched there in the ball court. His equipment was the rubber ball, the leather gloves, girdles, and leather hip guards.

necocampa imac tlatepantectli, cenca tlaiecchiuhtli injc xipetztic in tlachmatl, ioan in tlalmantli: auh in vncan vel inepantla tlachtli, onoca tlecotl tlaxotlalli in tlalli, auh in jtech tlachmatl, vntetl in tlachtemalacatl manca, in aquin ollimanj vncan tlacalaquja, vncan quicalaquja olli: njman ic quitlanj in jxquich tlaçotli tlatquitl, auh muchintin quitlanj, in jxquichtin tetlatlattaque, in vncan tlachco: itlaujcallo in olli, maiecatl, nelpilonj, queçeoatl. 345 526

Patolli was played with large beans—four large beans with holes bored into the surfaces. The game was won when from their hands they scattered the four beans on a mat painted in widely spaced black [lines], with which the patolli mat was designed. There went to be added the counters—twelve [of them], six the property of each, the counters of each of the contenders. He who won in playing patolli,

Patoa ica aiecotli, vevej etl nauhtetl in tlaixcoionjlli injc motlanj immatica in quichaiaoa in nauhtetl etl, quicujloa ce petlatl, tiltica, papatlactic in tlilli, injc mjcujloa patolpetlatl, in vncan mopouhtiuh tlapoaltetl matlactetl omome chichiquacentetl imaxca intlapoaltenh icecemme in jxnamjquj in motlanj in patoa, quitlanjlia in ixquich tlaçotli, coztic teucujtlacozcatl, chalchiujtl, teuxiujtl, mixopetztli ipan ca chalchiujtl 524 524 525

1. Tlaçotli: the corresponding Spanish has slaves (esclavos). See also below, description of patolli.

727 And all who lived in boats and [in houses] on poles, and those at Tolmayecan,[6] went into the 481 water. On some, the water reached to the stomach; some, to the chest; and on some it reached to the neck. And some were all submerged, there in the deeps. Little children were carried on the backs [of their elders]; cries of weeping arose. Some went on happy and rejoicing as they traveled crowding on the road. And those who owned boats, all the boatmen, left by night, and even [continued to] leave all day. It was as if they pushed and crowded one another as they set out.

727 And everywhere the Spaniards were seizing and robbing the people. They sought gold; as nothing did they value the green stone, quetzal feathers, and turquoise. [The gold] was everywhere in the bosoms or in the skirts of the wretched women. And as for the men, it was everywhere in their breech clouts and in their mouths.

And [the Spaniards] seized and set apart the pretty women — those of light bodies, the fair[-skinned] ones.[7] And some women, when they were [to be] assaulted, covered their faces with mud and put on old, mended skirts and rags for their shifts. They put all rags on themselves.

And also some men were singled out — those who were strong, grown to manhood, and next the young boys, of whom they would make messengers, who would be their servants, and who were known as their runners. And on some they burned [brand marks] on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their cheeks; on some they put paint on their lips.

And when the shield was laid down, when we gave way, it was the year count Three House and the day count was One Serpent.

728 And when Quauhtemoc went to deliver himself up, they then took him, after nightfall, to Acachinanco. And on the morrow, when already a little sun shone, once more the Spaniards, a good many of them, came forth likewise to put an end [to the fray] — girt for war, [in] iron corselets and iron helmets, but not with their iron swords nor their shields. They all only pressed white linen cloths against their noses as they passed by; [for] the dead sickened them; they already smelled foul and stank.

Auh in jxqujch acaltica onoca yoan in tlapechco catca, yoan in tolmaiccan çan atlan in iaque: in aca ixillan acitiuh in atl, in aca ielchiqujpan, in aca iquechtlan acitiuh: auh in aca vel polaquj, in vncan vecatlan: in pipiltzitzinti temamamalo, tlachoqujztleoa: cequjnti mopapaqujltitivi, maavieltitivi: in oconnepanoto vtli Auh in acaleque, in jxqujch acale ça ioaltica in qujz, yoã tel cemjlhujtl in qujzque iuhqujn moquequeztivi injc vi.

Auh in jxqujcan antica tetlatlaçaltiaia in Españoles in teucujtlatl qujtemoa amo tle ipan qujtta, in chalchivitl, in quetzalli yoan in xivitl: novian nemja in inxilla in incuetitlan, in cioatzitzinti. Auh in toqujchtin novian nemj in imaxtlatitlan, yoan in incamac yoan qujmanaia, qujnpepenaia in Cioa in chipavaque, in Cuztic innacaio in cuztique. Auh in cequjntin cioa injc motetlaçaltiaia, mjçoqujvique, yoan tatapatli in qujmocuetiq̃ tzotzomatli in qujmovipiltique, çan moch tzotzomatli in intech qujtlalique.

Auh no cequjntin pepenaloque in toqujchtin iehoantin in chicaoaque in iniolloco oqujchtin yoã in qujn telpupuchtotonti in qujntitlanjzque, in intitlanvan iezque, in moteneoa intlamacazcaoan: cequjntin njñã qujncamatlatiq̃ cequjntin qujncamaicujloque: cequjntin qujntenjcujloque.

Auh in omomã chimalli: injc tixitinque, in xiuhtonalli ei calli. Auh in cemjlhujtlapoalli ce coatl:

Auh in jquac in õmotemacato in Quauhtemoctzin: njmã qujvicaque in acachinanco in ie ioa. Auh in jmuztlaioc in ie achiton tonatiuh, ie no ceppa vallaque in Españoles: vel mjequjntin, no çan iuh tlantivitze, in moiauchichiuhtivitze, tepuzvipilli, in tepuzquacalalatli: auh aoc tle in intepuzmaquauh, yoan aoc tle in inchimal, ça muchintin valmoiacapachotiaque iztac canaoac ica qujntlaieltiaia in mjmjcque in ie iyaia, in ie potonj:

6. Cano, op. cit., mentions Tolmayecac (Tolmayecan?) as probably the same as Ayecac.

7. Literally, of yellow bodies, the yellow ones.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

Rich Man

[482]

Poor Man

Beggar Man

[735]

Goldsmith

Thief

[326]

[685]

Feather Worker

[286]

[701
441
714]

Warriors

PLATES 34-35

AZTEC SOCIETY AND COSTUME FROM

During the mid-sixteenth century the Spanish friar Bernardino de Sahagun made a famous study of the Aztecs, Historia General de Nueva España, which was not published until 1829. He had the Indians prepare copious illustrations to clarify his text, but they did not reach public circulation until 1905. The selections here show, besides the social division

[p. 112(B)]

The thirteenth month they named Tepeilhuitl. In this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the high mountains, which are in all these lands of this New Spain, where large clouds pile up. They made the images of each one of them in human form, from the dough which is called tzoalli, and they laid offerings before these images in veneration of these same mountains.

Al tercio decimo mes llamauan Tepeilhujtl: En este mes házian fiesta a honrra de lo montes emjnoẽtes, que estan por todas estas comarcas desta nueua españa: donde se armã fiublados: hazian las ymagenes en figura humana a cada vno dellos de la masa que se llama tzoal, y ofrecian delante destas ymagenes, en respecto destos mismos montes. 796 [805 778]

Chapter 13
Tepeilhuitl

In honor of the mountains they made a number of serpents, of wood or of the roots of trees, and they fashioned them heads like [those of] serpents. They made also some lengths of wood, as thick as the wrist, and long. They called them ecatotonti. These, as well as the serpents, they overlaid with that dough which they call tzoalli. These pieces they provided a covering in the manner of mountains. Above, they placed the head, like the head of a person. Likewise they made these images in memory of those who had drowned in the water, or had died such a death that they did not burn them, but rather buried them.

After, with many ceremonies, they had placed upon their altars the aforementioned images, they also offered them tamales and other food; and also they uttered canticles of their praises, and they drank wine in their honor.

Upon arrival of the feast in honor of the mountains, they slew four women and one man. The first of these [women] they called Tepexoch. The second they called Matlalcueie. The third they named Xochtecatl. The fourth they called Mayauel. And the man they named Milnaoatl. They decked these women and the man in many papers covered with rubber. And they carried them in some litters upon the shoulders of women highly adorned, to the place where they were to slay them.

1. Marginal notation: October 20 [illegible]

Cap. 13.
Tepeilhujtl.

1	g	EL		g	30
2	A		Hazian a honrra de los montes: vnas	A	1'
3	b		culebras de palo o de rayzes de arboles,	b	2
4	c		y labrauanles la cabeça como culebra:	c	3
5	d		haziã tãbien vnos troços de palo gru-	d	4
6	e		esos como la muñeca largos llamauan-	e	5
7	f		los Ecatotonti: assi a estos como a las	f	6
8	g		culebras los investian cõ aquella masa	g	7
9	A		que llamã tzoal: a estos troços los in-	A	8
10	b		vestian a manera de montes, arriba les	b	9
11	c		ponjan su cabeça como cabeça de per-	c	10
12	d		sona: hazian tambien estas ymagenes,	d	11
13	e		en memoria de aquellos que se aujan	e	12
14	f		ahogado en el agua o avian muerto de	f	13
15	g		tal muerte que no los quemauan, sino	g	14
16	A		que los enterrauan.	A	15
17	b		Despues que cõ muchas cerimonjas,	b	16
18	c		aujan puesto en sus altares a las yma-	c	17
19	d		genes dichas: ofrecianles tambien ta-	d	18
20	e		males y otras comjdas: y tambien los	e	19

dezian cantares de sus loores, y beujan vino por su honrra.

Llegada la fiesta a honrra de los montes, matauan quatro mugeres y vn hombre: la vna dellas llamauã tepexoch: la segũda llamauã Matlalcueie: la tercera llamauan Sochtecatl: la quarta llamauã Mayauel, y al hombre llamauã Milnaoatl: adereçauan a estas mugeres y al hombre cõ muchos papeles llenos de vllj: y lleuauanlas en vnas literas en hombros de mugeres muy atauijadas, hasta donde las aujã de matar. 796 [289 314 293 483 482]

584 age to marry, they spoke to him of their wish to seek a wife for him. And he replied, thanking them for this solicitude which they showed in marrying him. Then they addressed the leading man who had charge of all the young men, whom they called telpochtlato, and they told him that they wished their son to marry, since [the son] held doing so to be good. For this they held a great feast for him and for all the young men whom he had in his care; and for this they held conversation with him, after having given food and drink to him and to all those whom he had [412] in his charge. And at the beginning of the conversation they laid before him an axe for cutting lumber or firewood. This axe was a sign that that young man took his leave, now, of the company of the other young men; for they wished him to marry. And thus the telpochtlato departed content. After this the relatives decided, among themselves, upon the woman whom they were to give [to the son], and summoned the marriage-makers, who were some old, honored women, that they might go to speak with the parents of the young woman. [The marriage-makers] went two or three times, and spoke, and returned with the reply. During this time, the relatives of the young woman spoke among themselves, and, having decided to give her to him, they gave their consent to [777] the marriage-makers. After this they sought a day of good fortune, of a sign of good disposition [among] which were acatl, oçomatli, cipactli, quauhtli. Having chosen one of these signs, the parents of the young man made known to the parents of the young woman the day on which the marriage should be performed, and then began to prepare the necessary articles for [276] the wedding—[those] to eat and to drink, as well as such [things] as capes, smoke tubes, and flowers. 585 This done, they summoned the leading men and all the other people whom they wanted for the wedding. After the feast and [after] many speeches and ceremonies, those acting for the young man came at about nightfall to take the young woman. They car- [482 ried her, with great solemnity, upon the back of a 373] matron, and with many pine torches burning in two rows before her. Many people surrounded her, behind and ahead, until they brought her to the house of the parents of the young man. Having brought her [372] to the house of the young man, they set them both by the hearth, which they always had in the middle of a hall, full of fire. And the woman was at the left hand of the man. Then the mother of the young man casarse, hablauanle en que le querian buscar su muger: y el respondia, haziendoles gracias, por aquel cuydado, que tomauan de casarle: luego hablauan al principal que tenja cargo de todos los mancebos, que ellos llamauan Telpuchtlato: y dezianle como querian casar su hijo, que lo tuuiesse por bueno: y para esto hazianle vn combite a el, y a todos los mancebos, que tenja a su cargo, y para esto le hazian vna platica, despues de auerle dado de comer, y de beuer a el y a todos los que tenja a su cargo: y en principio de la platica, ponjanle delante vna hacha de cortar madera o leña. Esta hacha era señal que aquel mancebo se despedia ya de la companja de los otros mancebos: porque le querian casar, y ansi el telpuchtlato yua contento. Despues desto determjnauan entre si los parientes la muger, que le aujan de dar, y llamauan a las casamenteras, que eran vnas viejas honrradas, para que fuessen a hablar a los padres de la moça, yuan dos, o tres vezes, y hablauan, y bolujan con la respuesta. En este tiempo los parientes de la moça se hablauan, y concertandose de darsela, dauan el si, a las casamenteras. Despues desto buscauan vn dia bien afortunado, de algun signo, bien acondicionado, quales eran acatl, oçumatli, cipactli, quauhtli, aujendo escogido alguno destos signos: los padres del moço hazian saber a los padres de la moça el dia en que auja de hazerse el matrimonjo, y luego començauan a aperejar las cosas necessarias, para las bodas, assi de comer como de beuer, como de mantas, y cañas de humo, y flores. Esto hecho conbidauan a los principales, y toda la otra gente, que ellos querian para las bodas. Despues del combite, y de muchas platicas, y cerimonjas: venjan los de la parte del moço a lleuar a la moça de par de noche, lleuauanla con gran solennjdad, a cuestas de vna matrona, y con muchas hachas de teas encẽdidas, en dos renglos delante della, yua rodeada della mucha gente, detras y delante, hasta que la llegauan a la casa de los padres del moço: llegada a la casa del moço, ponjanlos ambos, junto al hogar, que siempre le tenjan, en medio de vna sala, lleno de fuego, y la muger estaua, a la mano izquierda del varon: luego la madre del mancebo, vestia vn vipil muy galano a su nuera, y ponjale junto a sus pies vnas naoas muy labradas: y la madre de la moça, cubria cõ vna manta, muy galana a su yerno, y atauasela sobre el hombro, y ponjale vn maxtli, muy labrado, a los pies. Hecho esto, vnas viejas, que se llaman titici, atauan la esquina de la manta del moço con la falda del vipil de la moça. Assi se concluya el

X 796 Twenty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of the feast and of the offerings which they made upon the feast day of the sixth month, which was called Etzalqualiztli.[1]

Jnic cenpoalli ommacuilli capitulo, itechpa tlatoa yn ilhujtl, yoan yn jntlamanaliz in quichioaia, yn ipan ic cemilhujtl, ynic chiquacen metztli, in motenecoaia Etzalqualiztli.

Etzalqualiztli: Before the arrival of this feast, which was celebrated, first the priests fasted for the rain god. Before the four days of their fast began, first they gathered reeds there at Citlaltepec. For verily at that place were formed very long reeds called aztapilin or tolmimilli[2]—very long, very high, and very white at the roots; and rounded, like a stone column.

And these they pulled up, cutting them at their white ends, at a place in the water called Temilco, or Tepexic Oztoc.

And when they had plucked them, thereupon they arranged them, they tied them in bundles, they bound them up in their capes, they girt the bundles of reeds in their capes.

[137]

Thereupon they took up [each bundle] in a tump line; they took them up in tump lines. Then [the reeds] were borne upon their backs, carried in the tump lines. And so they lifted up [the reeds]: they were lifted, and [the priests] departed; the departure was made, and they went on their way. None carried the reeds crosswise upon their backs; all bore them quite upright upon their backs.

[482]

And when the priests went to pluck the reeds, and when they returned, the road [which they followed] was deserted. No others took [the path]; travelers followed it no more.

X 796 688

And if they came upon any men, then they despoiled them of their possessions, they robbed them, they stripped them, they wrested from them all that they had: they snatched away their goods. And if these defended themselves, then [the priests] abused them: they threw them upon the ground, they

Etzalqualiztli: ynin ilhujtl, yn aiamo onaxioa, in ipan muchioaia: achtopa motlalocaçaoaia in tlamacazque: nahuilvitl yn aiamo vmpeoa, inneçaoaliz achtopa ontolanaia, vmpa in çitlaltepec: ichica ca cenca viiac yn vmpa muchioaia tullin, itoca aztapilin, anoço tolmjmjlli: cenca viac, cenca vitlatztic, yoan cenca tziniztic: yoan mjmjltic temjmjltic.

Auh yn vmpa conanaia, qujtezcopina, itocaiocan in atlan, temjlco, tepexic, oztoc:

auh yn oconanque, njmã ie ic qujchichioa, qujcujcujtlalpia, qujqujmiloa, qujtotolqujmjloa:

njman ie ic qujmecapallotia, qujmemecapallotia, njman netlamamaltilo, tlamamalo, tlainquamamalo: njman ie ic oaleoa, oaleoalo, viloatz, aiac qujztlapalmama yn aztapili, çan moch queoacamama.

Auh ynjc vih tolanazque, tlamacazque, yoan inic oalmocuepa, cactimoquetza in vtli, aocac qujtoca, aocmo qujtoca in nenenque:

auh yntla acame oqujnnamjcque, njman vncan qujntlacujcujlia, qujntlanamoielia, qujntlacencujlia, qujntlatlaçaltia: auh intla momapatla, njman qujnmjctia, qujntetentimaiauj, qujmihicça qujntitilicça, impan chocholoa, tlalli ic qujujujtequj, qujntlatlal-

1. Sahagún (Robredo ed., Vol. I, p. 92) says: "hacían una manera de puchas, o polendas, que se llamaa etzalli"; and in ibid., p. 149: "este etzalli era hecho de maíz cocido, a manera de arroz, y era muy amarillo." Durán, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 210, defines etzalli as boiled corn and beans. Pino y Tornesano (op. cit., p. 116), in his interpretation of the Codex Borbonicus' account of this month, refers to "las polendas de etzalli hechas de frijol, cuyas semillas negras tenían allí sobre la cuenca, y de maíz, cuyas granos blancos alternan con los otros negros." Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 112) has Bohnenpressrosen for Etzalqualizti. Clark (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 89) regards Etzalqualizti as derived from etl (bean), tzalan (amongst us), and qualizti (eating). In "Relación breve," p. 298, Garibay has "Comida de manojo de frijoles," and in his Llave del náhuatl vocabulary, "[illegible] de puchas."

Tover (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 25) identifies the feasts of this month as those of the working people and lower class, now resting after agricultural work. Hence the offering of etzalli to them.

[22] 565

2. In the Spanish text, Sahagún translates aztapilpitlal as "pesaos jaspeados de pesarios blancos y verdes." Tolmimilli, in the Robredo edition, Vol. III, p. 272, is a kind of pencle. Seler, in Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, p. 53, equates aztapilin with estapilin, and quotes Molina ("pesos largos, gordos y redondos"). Jourdanet and Simeón, in their translation (p. 104, n. 3) write that it is the equivalent of estapilin, "de canal, tipo de madera verde, en palo, principal, grueso"; of tolmimilli, they write: "verde de tallos, jaspeado, en mallas, claroscuro" (loc. cit.).

X 796 Thirty-third Chapter, in which are described the feasts and sacrifices which they offered as a service; which they performed in the days of the fourteenth month, which was called Quecholli.[1]

The fourteenth feast day was called Quecholli.

When Tepeilhuitl ended, nothing was done for another five days. All was quiet.

And when the five days had passed, upon the next day all offered reeds [for arrows]; each seasoned [482] warrior took a load upon his back (those of Tenochtitlan and those of Tlatelulco). They all offered the reeds at the foot of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. And when they had been offered, then they came carrying them and bore them upon their shoulders [to their homes].

[411] And upon the morrow, once again all departed to the courtyard of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, that the reeds might be straightened in the fire. The reeds were to be straightened in the fire. Only this did they do. And when they had straightened [the reeds] in the fire, again they bore them away and went off with their burdens.

And on the third day, [when] once more all departed, the canes were brought. All came together—seasoned warriors, youths, young men of marriage-able age. And the small boys they took up [the X 796 pyramid to the] temple, where they sat blowing their 785 shell trumpets and being bled. They cut their ears, pressed out the blood, and anointed their temples [224] [with it]. It was said: "The deer are [anointed] with blood." They fasted for the deer, that they might hunt [them].

And when they assembled in the temple courtyard, those of Tenochtitlan were spread on one side, those of Tlatelulco on the other. Thereupon were made arrows. It was said: "They form the arrows, or their [bolts of] oak."

X 796 And when arrows were being formed, all did pen- 785 ances; all the men drew blood. And if any were seen 686

Injc cempoalli ōmatlactli omei capitulo: vncan moteneoa in ilhujtl, yoā in nextlaoalli, injc tlacotia: in qujchioaia, in jpā ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl on navi metztli, in moteneoaia, Quecholli.

Injc matlactetl on navi ilhujtl: ichoatl in moteneoa Quecholli:

in ōquiz tepeilhujtl, oc macujlilhujtl in aiatle muchioaia, çan oc cactimanj:

auh in ōquiz macujlilhujtl: in jmuztlaioc, vncā in neacamaco, cecen tlamamalli in conanaia tequjoaque, in Tenuchtitlan, in Tlatilulco: in neacamacoia, vncā in icxitlan Vitzilobuchtli: auh in ōnemacoc, njmā ic qujitqujtze qujquequechpanoa.

Auh in jmuztlaioc, ic no ce, pa ic viloa in jitoalco Vitzilobuchtli, tlatlemelaoaloz, motlemelaoaz in acatl: çan oc ixqujch, in muchioaia y: auh in vmmotlemelauh, oc ceppa çan no oalmotquj, oc ceppa intlatquj oalietiuh.

Auh injc eilhujtl, no ceppa viloa, mootquj in acatl, vel ixqujch cemolinj, in tequjoaque in telpuchtli, in tlapalivi: auh in oqujchpipiltotonti, qujtletlecavia in teucalli, vncā tlatlapiztoque, yoan mjçotoque: qujtequj in innacaz, in jmeztço compatzca, incanaoacā conalaoa: mjtoaia, momaçaiço, qujnneçaviliaia in mamaça, injc amjoaz.

Auh in ocēqujxoato teuitoalco: cecnj moteca in tenuchca, cecnj moteca in Tlatilulca: njmā ic ic muchioa in mjtl: mjtoaia tlacati in tlacochtli, anoço yiaoaio.

Auh in jquac tlacatia, tlacochtli: neçaoaloia, qujneçaviliaia, ixqujch tlacatl, mjçoia: auh in aquj itto,

1. "Precious Feathers" is suggested by Garibay (op. cit., p. 269). Chavero (op. cit., pp. 147-8) states that the month was named for the bird of fine plumage seen at that time on the lake shores; Torquemada (op. cit., p. 288) writes similarly—"... nombre de un Pajaro de plumas azul, y colorada, que al en este Tierra, en especial en estos mananciales, y ojos de Agua, que al pueste del Pueblo de Quecholiar"; see also p. 299. Durán (op. cit., II, p. 297) refers to Quecholli as flecha arrojadiza.

Tovar, while mentioning the bird of rich plumage, adds that captains raised their banners and performed warlike exercises. He describes it as a month of unrest and disturbance (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 32).

532
[687]
[625]

[689]
[526]

[533
534]
[735]

• [482]

—After Peso y Troncoso

• 86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a careless musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies (Chapter 17). 91. The game tlachtli (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

1/A [This caption is in error. - Rumlpt]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

golden shells used upon his ankles; and a shield with a golden disc in the center, and spread quetzal feathers along its [lower] rim, and also with a quetzal feather banner.[18] [He had] the curved staff of the wind god, hooked at the top,[19] and white precious stone stars[20] spread over it; and his foam sandals.

yoã hecamoecujlli, quacoltic, iztac chalchivitl injc citlallotoc yoan ipoçolcac. 431 776 301 272

Behold, these [were] all the things called the array of the gods, which became the charge of the messengers, and yet many more things which they bore as their greeting gifts — the shell-shaped headpiece of gold, with pendant parrot feathers;[21] the golden conical cap,[22] etc.

Oca inqujtlamãtli in, in motenena teutlatqujtl in intlatquj mochiuhtia titlanti, yoan oc cenca mjec tlamantli in qujtqujque in intenamjquja Teucujtlaquatecciztli tozrlapilollo, teucujtlacopilli, etc. 431 301

Thereupon were baskets filled; wooden frames for carrying burdens on the back were loaded. And the five [messengers] named, Moctezuma then commanded; he said unto them: "Go! Linger nowhere! Pray to our lord the god; say unto him: 'Thy servant Moctezuma hath sent us; behold what he offereth you, for [the god] hath come to reach his wretched home in Mexico.'"

Niman ie ic tlatanatemalo, tlacacaxchichicalo. Auh in omotencuhque macujltin; njman ie ic qujnnaoatia in Motecuçoma: qujmjlhuj. Tla xivian, ma cana anvecauhti, xicmotlatlauhtilican in totecujo in teutl: xiqujlhujcan, ca otechalioa in motechiuhcauh Motecuçoma: izcatquj mjtzalmoinaqujlia, ca omaxitico in jchãtzinco mexico: 431 482 202

And when they had gone to reach the coast, they ferried them across, they took them by boat across to Xicalanco. Then once again they departed from there by boat; the water folk took them. Everything was placed and heaped in the boat; they filled the boat with the goods. And when the boat was filled, thereupon they departed. They betook themselves into the water and left to reach the boats [of the Spaniards], they approached their boats.

Auh in oncito atenco, qujmõpanavique, acaltica qujmonvicaque in xicalanco: ie no ceppa vncan oncoãj acaltica qujnvicaque in atlaca, moch onmacalaquj, onmacalten, conacaltenque in tlatqujtl. Auh in ontlaacalhemaloc, njman ie ic vi, onmatoctique, itech onacito in jmacal, itech compachoque in jmacal. 505

Then [the Spaniards] inquired of them: "Who are you? Whence came you?"

njmã qujnoalilhujque. Ac ameoan? campa anoallaque? 648

Then [the messengers] answered them: "We have come from Mexico."

njman iuh qujnnanqujlique. Ca vmpa tioallaque in Mexico:

Again [the Spaniards] said to them: "Perhaps not. Perchance you only claim to come from there. Perhaps you only pretend. Maybe you make sport of us."

oc ceppa qujnoalilhujque. Acaçoemo, aço çan vmpa anmotlamja, aço çan anquujpiquj, aço çã toca anmocacaiaoa.

But when they had verified it, when they had quieted their doubts, then they hooked the prow of the boat with an iron pole, and thus drew them near. Then also they let down a ladder.

Auh in ovel yiollo macic, in oiniollopachiuh. Nõman ic qujoaliacatzopinjque in acalli, tepuztopiltica, ic qujnoaltilinjque: njman no quicalquetzque ecacuztli.

---

18. Ibid.: "Lo que traíale colgado [sic] de la espalda era plumas verdes en la hoja de la rodela [sic] salía una corona de plumas verdes."

19. Ibid.: "un bastón labrado de escuyque de turquesas y en la hoja de arriba pusieron [illegible] plumas verdes a parles resplandecientes en la alto de arriba."

20. Literally, white green stone. The term chalchiuitl, often translated "jade" or "jadeite," may well have included various kinds of stones. Hence, our translation has adopted the term "green stone."

21. Ibid.: "una mejor de oro hecha a manera de corazal macizo el cual respaldo de plumas verdes que colgaban hasta las espaldas."

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "una mejor Rana."

[p. 14 is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Artec NU7

Then all the dwellers in cities beyond the mountains — those of Tlaxcalla, of Tliliuhquitepetl, of Uexotzinco — sped along at the rear. They came girt for war, with their cotton armor, their shields, their bows; their quivers filled and crammed with feathered arrows, some of barbed, wooden points, some blunted, some with obsidian points. They came crouching, and as they went, loosed cries and shrieks while striking their mouths with their hands; they screeched and whistled, and shook their heads.

And some bore burdens upon their backs; they carried rations on their backs. Some carried things [held by a tump line about] their foreheads, or, some, their breasts; some bore things on carrying frames, some in cage-like baskets, some in deep, reed baskets; some bore bundles; they carried them upon their backs; some dragged the great lombard guns, which rested upon wooden wheels. And they moved them along shouting.

njman ie inquich in aoatepeoa, in tlateputzcatl, in tlaxcaltecatl, tliliuhquitepecatl, in vexotzincatl: tlatoqujlitivitze, moiauchichiuhtivitze imjichcavipil, inchichimal, intlatlavitol, inmjmjcon tetentiuh, cacacatzcatiuh in totomjtl, cequj chichiquilli, cequj tihpontli, cequj itzmjtl momamantivi, motenvitectivi, motenpapavitivi, tocujleuhtivi, tlatlanqujquiztivi, moquacuecuechotivi.

Auh in cequjntin tlamama, itacamama, cequjntin tlaixquamama, cequjntin tlaelpanmama, cequjntin tlacacaxvia, cequjntin tlaoacalhuja, cequjntin tlatompiavia, cequjntin tlaquimjlhuja, mamaço tlaquimjlmamama, cequjntin quivilana in vevei, in totomaoac tlequjquiztli, quauhtemalacac oonotiuh, quicāvatztivitze.

[p. 40 is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[415
482
262]

[302]

[302]

— Ajer Faso y Tronco

44. Mexica interpreters for the Spaniards when Moctezuma meets Cortés (Chapter 16). 45, 46. Spaniards take Moctezuma with them as they enter the great palace (Chapter 17). 47. Supplies demanded by the Spaniards (Chapter 17). 48. Moctezuma leads Cortés to the treasure (Chapter 17). 49, 50. Spaniards and allies loot the treasure house (Chapter 17). 51. Mexica noblemen Mexica noblemen (Chapter 19). 52. Mexicans brave supplies for the Spaniards (Chapter 18).

[p. 44(H)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
[714]
[441
482]

—After Paso y Troncoso

73, 75. War breaks out between the Spaniards and the Mexicans (Chapter 21). 74. Maxixcatzin is put in irons (Chapter 21). 76. Iztapalotzin addresses the Mexicans (Chapter 21). 77. Mexicans are seen carrying furs into the palace (Chapter 21). 78. Ornamental design from Book XII. 79. Cortés arrives in Tenochtitlan with more Spaniards and allies (Chapter 22).

[p. 44 (L)]

648 an outcry, and then the tumult rose and spread. Thereafter arrows fell upon the roof-top. But the Spaniards sheltered Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin under their shields lest the Mexicans pierce them with the arrows.

For this reason were the Mexicans in great wrath: because [the Spaniards] had completely destroyed the chieftains [in the Temple Courtyard]; without warning, they had slain them by treachery.[4]

726 Not yielding to force of arms, [the Mexicans] surrounded the palace. They watched various places that none might enter it secretly — that none might in stealth take in tortillas. Hence, at once was stayed all which they had been receiving; forthwith they left no more. In this way they would starve them.[5]

And as for those who would in vain advise [the besieged], or gain merit by secretly giving [one of them] a little food, if they were seen or detected, they then and there slew them. They killed them on the spot. They either struck them on the back of the head, or they stoned them.

At one time some Mexicans were seen carrying in furs. These let word fall that through them some had secretly gone in. Therefore all were strictly commanded that every road and canal be well guarded and watched; that all take great care in the watching. And those who took in the furs [182] [were] carriers,[6] the emissaries of the stewards of Ayotzintepec and Chinantla. Then and there they breathed their last; their work dropped; at the canal they struck them on the back of the head with wooden clubs.[7] Those of Tenochtitlan had only quarreled among themselves, and quite in confusion had seized the carriers. They said: "Surely he is one [of them]!" Then they put him to death. And if they noted someone [wearing] his fine crystal lip rod, then they quickly seized and killed him. They said: "Surely this one also walketh entering within, to serve food to Moctezuma." And if they saw someone who had tied on himself the maguey fiber cape[8] of a carrier, him also they quickly seized. They said: "This one also is a brute who goeth bearing evil tales, and letteth them in to see Moctezuma."

---

4. For [illegible] read [illegible].
5. Literally, "they dried their canalls."
6. Corresponding Spanish text: "los cargadores o pajes de Moctezuma."
7. Plausible: read [illegible].
8. Corresponding Spanish text: "[illegible] maguey [illegible] que llaman capil."

njmã ic ic onvetzi in mjtl in tlapanco. Auh in Moctecuçomatzin yoan Itzquauhtzi, qujnchimalcaltia in Españoles in ma qujnmjnti in Mexica.

Inic cenca qualanque in Mexica: ichica ca vel qujmjztlatique in tlacaoan in ainnemachpan in qujnpoonmjctique, in amo ivivi ic concauhque qujtocaolotinemj in tepancalli: tlatlapia in açaca onjchtacacalaquj, in açaca conjchtacacalaquja tlaxcalli, çan njman ic oemmotzacu in jzqujch in omacoiã, çan njmã aocac tle oncaoaia: iuhqujn qujncujtlaoztique.

Auh in aquique oc nen xonexcaia, tlamatzoaia, motlamacoviaia, in ichtacatzin cõmacaia in tlaqualtzintli: intla oitoque, intla oittaloque, njman vncã qujnmjctia, vncan qujntlatlatia, açe qujncuexcochvitequj, anoçe qujntetepachoa.

Cequjntin mexica ceppa ittaloque, qujcalaqujaia totomjtl: ichoantin tlanexotlaque, inca cequjntin oncalaquj ichtaca, ic cenca netlaquauhmacoztiloc injc vellaquiclos, vel mopiaz in jzquj vtli yoan in jzquj acalutli, vel necujtlavilos vel ixpialoia. Auh in qujcalaqujaia totomjtl tequjque intlaivalhoã in calpixque aiutzintepecatl yoan chinantecatl: njman vncan ihiatl quja, njmã vncã intequjuh vetz, acaloco in qujmõcuexcochvivitecque, vitzantica, çan monotechvia in tenuchca, yoan çan jliviz in qujntzitequja in tequitque, qujtoaia. Ca ichoatl in: njmã ic conmjctia. Auh intla aca conjttaia ichopãlotenteuh: njman qujcujtivetzi, conmjctia: qujtoa, ca no ichoatl in oncalactinemj in contlatlamaca in Motecuçoma: yoan intla aca qujtta, qujmolpilia tequitcaaiatl, no qujcujtivetzi, qujtoa: ca no ichoatl in tlapalpul, in tetzauhtlatolli qujtequjtinemj, cõcalaquja, in conjtta motecuçoma.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

635 Teonochtitlan,[7] Teopantlan,[8] and Ytzucan.[9] Tezozomoc speaks of 175 Coatlalpan as being situated near the Marquesado.[10]

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—Tepeacac and her subject towns paid the following tribute to the Empire:

FOOD

[262] 4 wooden cribs (2 of maize and 2 of beans)[11]

OTHER GOODS

[317] 4,000 loads of lime
[314] 4,000 loads of thick canes
[281] 8,000 loads of canes for arrow shafts
[482] 800 deerskins
8,000 loads of ocayetl "performes que usan para la boca"
200 cacaxtles[12]

632 Tribute of the component towns.—Ahuatlan (a) paid a tribute of 651 cane.[13]

Coatzinco supplied cane, shields made of the same material, spearheads, bows and arrows, and white lime.[14]

[701] Texalucan (b) claimed to have given military service only—the enemies including the distant Coixca.[15]

Çoyatitlanapa (c) paid a tribute of canes, spearheads, white lime, shields made of cane, and wild cotton for padding armor.[16]

---

[7] More exactly, Tepexuxuma, next door to Teonochtitlan. PNE, 1: No. 540.

[8] PNE, 1: No. 559.

[9] PNE, 1: No. 292.

[10] Tezozomoc, Crónica mexicana (1878), pp. 533–534: "los pueblos de Coatla[l]pan y ... la tierra caliente, que ahora llaman del Marquesado."

[11] Wooden frames for carrying goods on the back with a tumpline.

[12] PNE, 5: 82–83: "Dicen que en tiempo de su ynfidelidad fueron vasallos de Motecçoma y sus pasados, y que le seruian y tributauan rrodelas de canas maçiças que en lengua mexicana llaman otlatl."

[13] PNE, 5: 95: "Dicen fueron vasallos de Motecçoma y de los Señores de Mexico, y le seruian con rrodelas de cana maçiça, con canas fuertes, y nauajas para lanças, cal blanca, flecha y arco para pelear."

[14] PNE, 5: 86: "Dizen que fueron vasallos de Motecçuma y sus pasados," making war against the "prouinçia de Coyxco y captiuauan gente que lleuavan a Mexico a Motecçuma para que se sacrificasse." For Coixca, see section on Tepequacuilco, p. 17, n. 41.

[15] PNE, 5: 90: "En tiempo de su ynfidelidad eran de Motecçuma, señor de Mexico, y sus pasados dauanle de tributo cal blanca, canas maçiças grandes, y nauajas para poner en las lanças, y rrodelas de cana maçiça para pelear, y algodon: algodon siluestre para jacos y coseletes que vestian los hombres de guerra, que todo lo rreferido lleuauan a Mexico."

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 After this review of the question of stratification, so to say, among the ancient Mexicans, it may appear strange on our part from Tlatilulcan sources ("Prologo," pp. 4 and 5, Vol. I). This diminishes necessarily in this instance, the value of his otherwise very full and highly important testimony.

The existence of such a body, powerful through wealth as well as through mental and intellectual faculties would, even as much as nobility, at once have destroyed the tribe as such, by breaking up the kins. The inconsistency of such a picture with the historical facts is glaring, and is shown even by the statements of modern writers. Compare for instance, Mr. H. H. Bancroft's statement of the condition of Tlatilulco after its capture by the Mexicans (Vol. V, p. 481), "heavy tributes were imposed, including many special taxes and menial duties of a humiliating nature" with his description of the state of its "merchant princes" (Vol. II, pp. 360 and 361). One fact is evident: if the traders formed occasionally, for certain purposes, clusters of their own, they selected their own leaders or directors and this was the case with trading expeditions as well as with feasts. See on feasts: Sahagun, Lib. IX, cap. III to XIV inclusive, Lib. I, cap. XIX, pp. 29 to 32. Motolinia, Trat. I, cap. VIII, p. 47. Acosta, Lib. V, cap. XXIX, p. 288, etc. Torquemada, Lib. VI, cap. XXVIII, pp. 57 and 58. Lib. XIV, cap. XXVII, pp. 586 and 587. Clavigero, Lib. VI, cap. VII, p. 300. Lib. VII, cap. XXXVIII, p. 336, etc., and others. But as to any separate, permanent government of their own, this rests exclusively upon the authority of Sahagun, whereas it is amply proven, on the other hand, that any crime committed in trade or barter, was summarily disposed of by the regular officers of the kin or tribe without regard to the traders or merchants. We shall furnish the evidence in regard to this point in another note.

That the "pochtecas" occupied but one calpulli, that of Pochtlan, is also disproved, and even by Sahagun himself (Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 31). "En este calpulli donde se contaba el mercader." (Lib. IX, cap. III, p. 347): "respondiante los mercaderes principales de los barrios que son uno que se llama Pochtlan, otro Aoachtlan, y otro Atlanhco como está en la letra"). (Cap. III, p. 349) "convidaban á solos los mercaderes de su barrio; pues el que habia de ir por capitan de la compañia de los que iban, no solamente convidaba á los de su barrio, sino tambien á los que habian de ir con él." Also by Durán ("Rapport," etc., pp. 223 and 234).

Lastly the question of wealth amassed in such quantities as to become an influential power in the merchants' hands, is also summarily disposed of by Sahagun. However often he speaks of riches gathered by them, the following quotations show how it must be understood: (Lib. IX, cap. II, p. 338, Speech of one of the traders) "Cuando lleguemos á nuestro tierra, será tiempo de usar los barbotes de ambar, y las oregeras que se llaman quetzalcoyolnacochtli, y los aventaderos y ojeadores de moscas, las mantas ricas que hemos de traer, y los maxtles preciados, solo esto será nuestra paga, y la señal de nuestra valentia," (p. 341) "y que las otras presias que les dió que arriba se dijéron, solo ellos las usasen en las grandes fiestas . . . ." It thus appears that hoarding of any actual wealth was not to be expected. The lack of currency alone made it almost impossible for want of space, and gold and silver being only used for ornamental purposes and as a part of "medicine," we should mistake in expecting anything like "treasures." Here, as anywhere else, the supply was regulated by the demand, and this demand was in turn created by the numbers of the population, and by the use made of the metal. Since the latter was used only in a few ways, this had its effect on the amount also. Another cause, which is not sufficiently estimated, is found in the fact that carriers had to be used for everything, including food. Now, even if thousands went along (of which there is hardly any proof), the load of each hardly exceeded sixty pounds: "y daban á cado uno de estos que tenian alquilados, para que llevasen acuestas la carga que tenian señalada, y de tal manera las comparaban que no eran muy pesadas" (Cap. III, p. 350, Lib. IX). Don Antonio de Mendoza ("Avis sur les prestations personnelles et les Tumemes, 1er Recueil of Ternaux-Compans), says in 1550, "They must not carry any loads heavier than two arrobas," or about fifty pounds. Bartolomé de las Casas ("Brevissima relacion de la destruycion de las Yndias," Venetia, 1545, Italian and Spanish, p. 101), complains of three to four arobas or to concede, that nevertheless there were two very distinct classes 565 within the area occupied by the tribe enjoying each a very different quality of rights. Now equality of rights is the fundamental principle of kinship;[79] if therefore there was a body connected with the tribe whose rights and privileges were inferior, it follows that the members of this body must have stood outside seventy-five to one hundred pounds, as an excessive load. Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XL, p. 329), sixty pounds. [482]

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

To conclude, I advert to the fact that the traders were held to tribute and especially 441
to offerings for worship, as strictly as any other members of the tribe. I merely refer 556 to Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 158), who embodies in a few words the 565 statements of other writers. Motolinia (Trat. I. cap. IV, p. 76), "No se deavelan en adquirir riquezas," and further on to p. 77; also (Trat. I, cap. IV, p. 31), "otros trabaja ban y adquirian dos ó tres años cuanto podian, para hacer una fiesta al demonio, y en ella no solo gastaban cuanto tenian, mas aun se adeudaban". The picture of the trading expedition is mainly taken from Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. II, III, IV) and Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XXVII). The reception only applies to cases of great importance. But every departure of a merchant as well as his return was feasted by the traders of his "barrios," sometimes with the concurrence of other barrios and of the chiefs and officers.

That, in consequence of their deeds, the merchants and traders were treated with distinction and created chiefs, follows from Sahagun (Lib. I, cap. XIX, pp. 30 and 31), "para que fuese honrado en el pueblo. y tenido per valiente: ponianle un barbote de ámbar, que es una piedra larga amarilla, trasparente, que cuelga del beso bajo, ahujerado, en señal de que era valiente y era noble, y esto se tenia en mucho." But especially (Lib. IX, cap. II, pp. 339-341), "Estos mercaderes eran ya como caballeros, y tenian divisas particulares por sus hazañas"). "Des Cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient un traité" (Ternaux, 1er Recueil, pp. 233 and 234). The custom of giving the rank of chief ("tecuhtli") to traders remained after the conquest when the chief became transformed into the Spanish hidalgo in consequence of a misconception of the former dignity. This is shown plainly by the arch-bishop, Fray Alonso de Montufar ("Supplique à Charles V en faveur des Macéuales, Mexico, 30 Nov. 1554, French translation by Mr. Ternaux, Appendix to his "Cruautés horribles des Conquérants du Mexique," p. 257). It was done to evade taxation.

The true position of the Mexican traders in their tribe and society is also stated plainly by Sahagun (Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 30): "Son estos mercaderes sufridores de muchos trabajos, y osados para entrar en todas las tierras (aunque sean las de enemigos) y muy astutos para tratar con los estraños, asi aprendiendo sus lenguas, como tratando con ellos con benevolencia para atraerlos asi con su familiaridad." (Lib. IX, cap. II, p. 339) "pues que aunque nos llamamos mercaderes y lo parecemos, somos soldados que disimuladamente andamos á conquistar." (Id., p. 341) "Los dichos mercaderes del Tlaltelolco se llaman tambien capitanes y soldados disimulados en hábito de mercaderes que andaban por todas partes." (p. 343) "Cuando quiera que el señor de Mexico queria enviar á los mercaderes, que eran capitanes y soldados disimulados á alguna provincia para que la atalayasen." Zurita ("Rapport," etc., p. 228) "ils jouissaient de certains privilèges, parceque leur profession était utile à l'état." This is textually copied by Bustamante ("Tococo," Parte IIIa, cap. V, p. 232). They were frequently but official spies and used as such, not only by the Mexicans, but against the Mexicans by foreign tribes. Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, p. 180) copied by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 282).

[79] L. H. Morgan ("Ancient Society," Part II, cap. II, p. 85, in relation to Iroquois more particularly). Among the ancient Germans or Teutons, see Heinrich Luden ("Geschichte des teutschen Volkes," 1825, Vol. I, Lib. III, cap. V, on the "Gau," pp. 489 and 493).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

population of "hangers-on to the tribe." This class was yet not very numerous; still it grew slowly and steadily. Prohibited from carrying arms, and therefore from taking any part in warfare other than that of carriers and, perhaps, runners, the heavy drudgery of work was at their charge.[89] Even the tillage of lots appears to have been frequently assigned to them, and it may be that what is commonly termed the class of "macehuales" consisted of the outcasts who improved "tlalmilpa" for the benefit of members of the kin.[90] Besides, it is distinctly implied, if not stated, 565

(Lib. II, cap. XLV, pp. 154-155; cap. LXII, p. 184; Lib. XIII, cap. XII, p. 436). H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II. p. 265) admits two classes of concubines for married people, one of which he calls "the less legitimate wives." Among other authorities, he adduces in evidence Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. I, p. 200): "Tenia esto Olintech treynta mugeres dentro de su casa, con quien el dormia, á las quales servian mas de ciento otras." The same statement is also found in Gomara ("Conquista," etc., Vedia I. p. 226) and others. (The name for the mistress ("manceba") of a married man is "teichtacamecauh" (Molina, I, p. 61), which means literally "thy secret tie," from "Tchuatl"—"thou, "ichtaca"—secretly (II, p. 32), and "mecatl"—rope or cord (II, 56). See in a further note. 595

The most significant statements, however, are those already reported, of Motolinia and of Gomara, that the Indians explained their polygamy by the fact that they kept these women for their work. In other words, they were purchased hands. This is indicated by the following authorities: Gomara ("Conquista," etc., Vedia I, p. 441), "Las malas mujeres de su cuerpo, que lo daban de balde si no las querian pagar, se vendian par esclavas por traerse bien, ó cuando ninguno las queria, por viejas ó feas ó enfermas; que nadie pide por las puertas." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XVI, p. 563): "Havia tambien mugeres, que se daban á vivir suelta, y libertadamente; y para proseguir este mal Estado, que tomaban, tenian necesidad de vestir curiosa, y galanamente, y por la necesidad, que pasaban, porque no trabajaban . . . . llegaban à necesitarse mucho, y haciansse Esclavas;" and the same authority adds (Cap. XVII, p. 568): "y muchas veces los Amos se casaban, con Esclavas suias," without any closer definition however. Finally, the Anónimo says (p. 397): "Nelle nozze di questa patrona principale fanno alcune cirimonie, il che non si osserva nelle nozze dell' altre." 595 567

There is no evidence that a married man could increase the number of his women even with the consent of the parents, in other words, marry a girl. But if the latter had, through her own lewd conduct, become abandoned and cast off, then he could associate with her as his mistress without regard to his wife proper. Also he might purchase (or rather barter for) a female and afterwards make a concubine of her, even if she was of a foreign tribe. Prisoners of war (females) may occasionally have been spared also, but this suggestion rests on very slight evidence (compare "Anónimo," p. 373), and may apply only to prisoners of war purchased from other tribes (Sahagun, Lib. I, cap. XIX. p. 29). [727]

[89] They were the "tamenes," carriers. The Mexican word is "tlamama," from "tlacatl"—man, and "nitla-mama"—to carry a load (Molina, II, p. 51). Don Antonio de Mendoza, "Avis sur les Prestations personelles," etc., p. 358, Ternaux, Recueil). Zurita (pp. 250, 251, and 260) "Lettre des auditeurs Salmeron, Maldonado, Cynos et Quiroga a l'Imperatrice." (Mexico, 30 March, 1531, in 2d Recueil, etc., pp. 143 and 144): "Les Indiens ont de tout temps porté des fardeaux, ils y sont accoutumés . . ." [482]

[90] This is a mere suggestion. The majority of descriptions, however, are such that the "mazehual" may have been, and probably was, a member of the kin. Still, in such cases, when that member could not improve his lots himself, families of "bondsmen" may have done the work for him, and thus become included in the general picture. Quotations are superfluous, since the information is not, as yet, positive enough.

782 And the commoners, the poor, only threw course incense into the fire. And finally the extremely poor, the poverty-stricken, the needy, the discontented, who came last, only cast aromatic herbs in the fire, thus making the offering in their own fires.[5]

642 And it is said that the lords and rulers were installed then, on the day One Dog; and there was a 643 celebration, the royal ceremony, the rites of election,[6] on Four Reed. At that time the lords over the cities
431 came from everywhere. There was feasting, by which it was made known that the new ruler had been installed. Many came in this manner: as their salutations, their gifts of greeting, they bore and carried wrist bands, capes, flowers, tobacco. For whatsoever their cities were famous and renowned, from wherever and howsoever far they traveled, they offered gifts and paid tribute to the ruler, and greeted him and paid him great respect. Their elders, the lords, the orators, the able speakers, who were seated, returned like for like and answered them for him.

431 And in the same manner was it done and responded. Thus was returned their gratitude, in order to reciprocate, to acknowledge, to welcome, and to provide a repast. Flowers, tobacco, drink, food, and confections were presented. But the capes came in bundles. They were only in bales. Only by the bundle were they given and presented. Each brought out first the precious capes, appropriate to them, the ones to which they were entitled, made and completed in [the ruler's] house. Thereupon they gave them their choice and pleased them. What each thought best, or sought out, or what was fitting for him, or suited his liking, or his rank, they gave the lords over the cities; [the ruler's] servants thus honored and gave preference to each [of the lords] individually.

● [482] The gifts hurried, rushed, hastened, and sped borne on their backs, carried and transported by the tump lines. And the leavings, worth nothing, of no value, auh in çan maceoaltzintli, in motolinja, çan cupalxalli in tleco qujtema: auh in çã iequene qujtzacuja, in molhujicnotlacatl, tequjicnotlacatl, in ãxvia, in auellamati: çan ic in jauhtli tleco qujtepeua, ic qujtlamaca in jacoian itleuh:

ioan mjtos in tlatoque vncan motecutlaliaia motlatocatlaliaia, in jpan in ce itzcujotli: auh ipan motequaltiaia, motecpacaia, motlatocapacaia, in nauhcatl, iquac noviian oalhuja, in altepetl ipan tlatoque, coanotzalo, ic machitilo in iancujcan tlatoanj omotlali, mjiec injc oalhuj, in jntetlapaloaia, in jntetlapalol qujoalcuj, qujoalitquj in macuextli, in tilmatli, in xuchitl, in jetl, in çaço tlein imamaujzço, yximachocã imaltepeuh, in campa, in quezqujchca oaleua, qujtlamamaca, qujtlatequjlia in tlatoanj, ioan qujtlapaloa, qujtlatlauhtia, oalmotlalia in jntechiuhcaoan, in tecutlatoque, in vellatoa, in tlatolmati, qujtlacuepilia, qujntlananqujlilia:

auh çan no iuj in chioalo, in namjco, çan ic mocuepa in jnnetlaçotlaliz, injc motlancuj, injc mjximati, injc momalcochoa, injc moonachioa, qujmomamaca in xuchitl, in jetl, in atl, in tlaqualli, in tlaqualtectli: auh in tilmatli çan qujqujmjliuhtiuh, çan qujqujmjlietiuh, çan qujmjltica in qujmomaca, in, in qujmotlauhtia, qujiaiacana in tlaçotilmatli, in tetechtilmatli, in vel intonal icalitic ochioaloc, otlatlan, iquac impan qujnpepena, inpan qujmelitta, qujntlatlattilia, qujmjipantia, qujnpapantia, qujnpapanjtia, in quenamj qujnmacazque altepetl ipan tlatoque: injc nononqua qujnmaujztilia, qujnvecapano, intetlaujcalhuan.

tlaliuj, tlãtlaliuj, tlãtlalhujtiuj, tlãtlaliooa, in tlamamalo, in tlãtlatqujoa, quaquailpitiuh in netlauhtilli: auh in netlacaujlli, ãtle tlaçotli, ãtlatlaçotli, tla-

---

5. Corresponding Spanish text: "Los pobres ofrecían un gracioso, que llamaban copalxalli, en su mismo hogar: y los muy pobres, ofrecían una yerba medida, que se llama yauhtli en sus mismos hogares." — in Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 371, ie in Tagrans hoaida; see also J. E. S. Thompson: Mexico Before Cortez (New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1944), p. 185.

Remesal, op. cit., pp. 239-240, notes that Louis Reffonti, in La sculpture chez les mexicains précolombiens (Paris: Jouve and Boyer, 1900), p. 95, identifies yauhtli as a species of absinthe; A. Gerzo, in Notes sur le calendrier et la hiérarchie des anciens mexicains (Rome: Imprimerie Polyglotte Vaticane, 1909), p. 54, says it is definitely narcotic. Jacinto de la Serna's "Manual de ministros para conocer y extirpar las idolatrías de los indios," in Jacinto de la Serna, Pedro Ponce, and Fr. Pedro de Feria: Tratado de las idolatrías, supersticiones, dioses, ritos, hechicerías y otros costumbres gentílicas de las razas aborígenes de México (México: Ediciones Fuente de Cultura, n.d.), p. 249, identifies yauhtli as peyhuatl, which, according to Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 298, is "Nombre vulgar que en el norte del país, en México, se da a una planta parecida al cempaxúchil (Tagetes minuta), cuyas hojas huelen a anís."

6. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book VIII, "Kings and Lords," p. 64. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), VIII, 18, 14: "La fiesta de su elección, que llamaban mochimaqueua."

532
x787

[76]

[402]

[176]

— Ajer Paso y Troncoso

54. Twelve House, Thirteen Lizard, and Ten Crocodile (Chapter 15). 57. Uitzilopochli (Chapter 17). 58, 59. Merchants (Chapter 18). 60, 61. Three Deer and bathing of child (Chapter 19). 62. Uitzilopochli (Chapter 20).

[p. 126 k]

The tenth month they named Xocotl uetzi. On the first day of this month, they observed a feast to the god of fire, named Xiuhtecutli or Ixcoçauhqui. On this feast they cast into the fire, alive, many slaves, bound hand and foot, and before they had quite died, they took them forth, dragging [them] out of the fire, in order to tear out their hearts before the image of this god.

Al decimo mes llamauan Xocotl vetzi: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta al dios del fuego llamado xiuhtecutli o Jxcoçauhquj: en esta fiesta echauã en el fuego viuos muchos esclauos, atados de pies y manos, y antes que acabasen de morir, los sacauã arrastrando del fuego para sacar el coraçon delante la ymagen deste dios.

796x
805
776

Chapter 10
Xocotl uetzi

During the feast of Tlaxochimaco, they went forth into the forest [and] cut a tree of twenty-five fathoms' height and brought it, dragging it, to the courtyard of this god. There they pruned off all its branches and raised it upright, and it remained thus standing until the eve of the feast. Then they again laid it upon the earth with much caution and [using] many devices that it might not bump [the ground]. On the day before this feast, early in the morning, many carpenters came with their tools, and they trimmed it and made it very smooth. After having trimmed it and decorated it with many kinds of papers, they tied ropes and other cords to it and raised it up with much shooting and din, and they made it firm.

As soon as the beam or tree was raised and adorned with all of its finery, then those who had slaves to cast alive into the flames adorned themselves with their plumage and rich ornaments, and they stained their bodies yellow, which was the livery of fire; and, taking their captives with them, they performed a dance all that day, until nightfall.

After the captives had kept vigil all that night on the pyramid, and after having performed many ceremonies with them, they cast into their faces some powder which they call yiauhtli, that they might lose their sense of feeling and not suffer so greatly [the pains of] their death

Cap. 10.
Xocotl vetzi

1	c	KL	Xocotl vetzi	c	1[1]
2	d		Durante la fiesta de tlasochimaco:	d	2[2]
3	e		yuã al monte cortauan vn arbol de al-	e	3
4	f		tura de veinte y cinco braças y trayanle	f	4
5	g		arrastrando hasta el patio deste dios:	g	5
6	A		alli le escamondauan todo, y le leuan-	A	6
7	b		tauan enhiesto y estaua assi enhiesto	b	7
8	c		hasta la vigilia vigilie de la fiesta en-	c	8
9	d		tonce le tornauã a echar en tierra cõ	d	9
10	e		mucho tiẽtõ y cõ muchos pertrechos	e	10
11	f		para que no diesse golpe: la vigilia	f	11
12	g		desta fiesta, bien de mañana venjan	g	12
13	A		muchos carpinteros con sus herrami-	A	13
14	b		ẽtas y mondauãle y hazianle muy liso.	b	14
15	c		Despues de mondado y de auerle com-	c	15
16	d		puesto cõ muchas maneras de papeles:	d	16
17	e		atauanle sogas y otros mecates y leuan-	e	17
18	f		tauanle con muchas bozes y muchos	f	18
19	g		estruendos y añxauanle muy bien.	g	19
20	A		Desque la viga o arbol estaua leuã-	A	20[3]

tada y adornada cõ todos sus aparejos: luego los que tenjã esclauos para echar en el fuego viuos aderecauãse con sus plumajes y ataujos ricos: y tiñjanse el cuerpo de amarillo que era la librea del fuego y lleuando sus captiuos consigo: hazian areyto todo aquel dia hasta la noche.

Despues de auer velado toda aquella noche los captiuos en el cu, y despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas con ellos, enpoluorizauanlos las caras con vnos poluos que llamã yiauhtli: para que perdiessen el sentido, y no sintiessẽ tanto la muerte, atauanlos

796x
313
[493]
[463]
796x
[302]
[535]
[278]

1. Marginal notation: Comienza la diez uezi.
2. Marginal notation: Tornauã abajo.
3. Marginal notation: Poni al mirando.

And upon the morrow, then the carpenters came forth and assembled as they arrived. They brought with them their tools; there were adzes and hatchets. Well they hewed and smoothed [the xocotl] where it had knots, where the limbs branched out, where it was uneven.

They hewed another pole five fathoms long. They joined it, [so that it would] strengthen the crown of the xocotl. They made the crown very even. They girded all the tip with ropes, fastening and placing [branches and pole] within the ropes.

And when this was done, thereupon the fire priests adorned it with papers. The old priests helped and also those who cast [victims] into the fire aided. These [last] were very powerful and tall—exceedingly tall and big. They were chiefs.

The first was named Coyoua; the second was named Çacancatl,[5] the third was named Ueicamecatl. As such were masked they who pressed ahead with adorning [the xocotl].

And the xocotl image they fashioned [as] of flesh; a dough of fish-amaranth seeds mixed with maize they formed [for this]. They provided pure white papers for it, which they set in place. They bore no design.

Upon it they set [these]: its shoulder sash of paper; its paper breech clout; its papers[6] designed with falcons; its wig made of paper; its xocotl shirts, [of which there were] two. These were not put on, but were attached to the tree, in two incisions. Likewise they placed in another incision large pieces of paper, wide—a yard wide—and ten fathoms long, reaching down one-half the length of the xocotl.

And also they made three amaranth seed tamales, pierced them with sticks, in three places, and set them upon [the image]. And thereupon they bound on the xocotl ropes half way up on the xocotl—ten [of them].

And when all made ready, thereupon they raised it. And then there was much crying out and shouting.

They said: "Go on, there, braves! Pull with all your force!"

Thereupon they went to setting it upright; they went about raising it [by using] the wooden supports and prying it with a lever. And likewise as it moved, as it proceeded to rise, there was much clamor, much shouting, great din.

Auh in otlatvica: njman oalhuj, oalnechicavi in quauhxinque, qujoalitquj, intlatquj oalietiuh in mateportli, tlaximaltepoztli, vel qujpetlaoa, qujxipetzoa, in vncan yixe, in vncã titicujtztic, in vncã xizipochtic. 796 778 [412 463]

Oc ce qujxima quaoacatl macujlmatl: qujtlaçalhuja, qujtoctia in jtzcalo xocotl, vel cõnevivilia in jtzcalo, in jquapitzaoacan, qujmecatecuja, qujmecacuja, qujmecatitlantlalia.

Auh in ie iuhquj: njmã ie ic qujtlamamaca, in tlenamacac, tlapalevia in quaquacujlti, no ichoantin tlapalevia, in tetlepãtlazque. Eintin, cenca chicaoaque, quaquauhtique, quauhticapopol, quauhcholpopol, tetecutin caica. [793]

In ce itoca: coioua. Injc vme, itoca: çacancatl. Injc ei, itoca: veicamecatl: iuhqujn mjxpolotinemj, motequjmati in tlachichioa.

Auh in jxiptla xócotl, in quinacaiotiaia: mjchioauhtzoalli qujtlaliaia, çan cemjztac in amatl in quimamaca, in jtech qujtlatlalia: amo ma tlacujlollo.

In jtech qujtlaliaia: yiamancapanal, yiamamaxtli, itlotloma, yiamatzõ, ixoxocovipil, ixocovipil, vme: amo onacticac, çan quauhtitech caca: vme itzitziquijlpan: njman no contlalia oc ce itzitziquijlpan, vevei amatl, patlaoac: injc patlaoac, cen iollotli: matlacmatl injc viac, itlacapan acitica in xocotl injc viac.

Auh no etetl tzocoiotl in qujchioa, qujquauhço: excan in quiquequetza: auh njman ie ic qujilpia in xócomecatl, in vncan inepantla in xócotl, matlactli.

Auh in omocencauh: njmã ie ic quiquetza, njman ie ic tlacaoaca, tzatzioa:

quitoa. Ma ecuel tiacahoane, ximotilinjcan, isquich amotlapal:

njmã ie ic quoatiquetztivi, conquechilitivi, in quauhtonmaçatl, yoan quiquãmjvia: auh in iequene ie iauh, in ie meoatiquetztiuh: cenca tlacaoaca, cenca tzatzioa, cenca chachalacoa: [483 401]

5. Probably quacuacatl in manuscript. Cf. the Jourdanet-Simeon edition, p. 129.
6. Reference could be to either paper or bread (tlaxilonca); in the Spanish text, Sahagún appears to favor paper.

blood], so that they terrified those whom they followed.[86] They fought, joining in battle against the valiant chiefs—chosen men [all].

And all [the chiefs], having taken their pleasure with wine, acted like buffoons, imitating and pretending to be warriors, unafraid of death, jostling one another, acting perversely, like warriors. Here they exercised their arms [against those who wore skins], and played at combat like fighters in war, none resting.[87] This was [at Xipe totec's temple] called Tozcco.

And the young men garbed like Xipe totec, wearing human skins,[87] then went everywhere from house to house, begging. They were placed on zapote-fibre seats; bunches of [corn] were hung on them like jewels; they placed garlands on their shoulders, they covered them with flowers. They gave them to drink.

And if any woman had blisters, or ophthalmia, she said: "Let me make an offering to Totec, when [the Feast] of the Flaying of Men [is celebrated]."

[Xipe's] garb [was thus]: he had the quail-painting on his face.[88] Rubber divided his lips in two parts. On his Yopi-crown[89] was placed [a band] with forked ends. He wore a human skin, the skin of a captive. He had a wig of loose feathers, golden ear-plugs, a zapote-leaf skirt. He had rattles. His shield was red and bad-circles. His rattle stick[90] was in his hand.

totoca, ynjc motlamauhtilizia: qujnnocalitizia, qujnnamjquj- 776 in tiiacoan, tlapepenti, tlatzonanti: 796

ynan in iuqujchti, çan papaqujnj, yn mjhivintia, tlatlamati, moqujchnequj, moqujchnemequj, amjquizmauhque, [524] toca momoctlanj, iuctlaveliloque: vncan moiniccoaia, moiazmauhchiuia, yn juh mjcalinque iaepan, vmpa mocacaoaia yn aiac, mjtoaia tozcco. [346]

Auh yn totecti njman ic ic noujan, tepan caralaquj, no tlatlaoua: tzapeicpalpan tlalilo, qujmocholcuncaia, qujeochinoapanaltia, qujmicpacxochitia, qujtlaoantia. [292 352 302]

Auh intla aca cioatl, totomonja, ixtocmiia: qujtoa, ma njctlamanilia, in totec, iquac tlacazipeualistli.

Jn iuechichioal, mizcolnochimale, tzmaxaltic vltica, 776 yiopitzan contlaliticac maxaliuhquj, conmaqujticac tlacaiouatl, yiouaio malli, tzonchaianale, tzucujtlanacoche, tzapocueie, tzitzila, ichimal tlauhtevilacachiuhquj, chicaoastli yn jmac icac.

Ninetenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Lord at the Vanguard (Yiacatecutli).[91]

He was the god of the merchants. Greatly they esteemed him, arrayed in paper[92] the stout traveling staves[93] with Jnic caxtolli vnnauj capitulo, ynchpa tlatoa, in teotl: yn jtoca yiacatecutli.

Puchteca intruh catca: cenca qujmavirtilizia, qujtlaquentiaia amatica: yn jntepil, ymotlatopil, yni nemmja, ynj 776 463 484

85. The corresponding Spanish text describes the scene thus: "En este festa, hacian como un juego de cañas: de manera que si un vando, ou de la parte deste dios, o paugen del dios totec: y estos tudos, yuan vestidos de pellejos de hombres que eujan muerto, y desollados, en aquella fiesta. . . . Los del bando contrario, eran los soldados valientes, y esforçados, y personas valientes, y esforçadas: que no tenjan en nada la muerte: osados, atrevidos, que de su voluntad salian, a combatirse, con los otros. Alli los vnos, con los otros, se corrieuan, en el exercicio de la guerra: peregujan los vnos, a los otros: hasta su puesto, y de alli, bolujan hazyendo, hasta su proprio puesto." Cf. also the description in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124. The game of cañas in the Enciclopedia Universal Ilustrada, Vol. II, pp. 299-300, is described as "Antiguo fiesta, juego ó ejercicio caballeresco en que tomaban parte dos bandos ó cuadrillas corriendo á caballo, caracoleando gallardamente y arrojándose cañas de las que se empuñaban con la adarga." A Moorish exercise, in Medieval times adapted also by the Spaniards, it was reserved to the nobility. It took the form of a picturesque war-game requiring considerable skill in horsemanship and spear-throwing.

86. MS Biblioteca del Palacio, Sahagún, Tercer Apéndi, has oncan in the Aztec text, jointed of aiac, which is in the Florentine Codex. Sahagún translates the passage as "they stopped, ceased, at the place called Tozcco."

87. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124: "Todos los pellejos de los desollados se vestian muchos mancebos, a los cuales llamaban Tatocoti." Cf. also ibid., p. 123, defining Tocoanai as "los mancebos a honra del dios Totec."

88. In the MS Biblioteca del Palacio text (Sahagún, op. cit.), the word is mizcolchiuhtiuac, translated as "er hat im Gesicht die Wachtelbemalung." Sahagún also (Treatment of the Aztec Collection, p. 102) uses the term mizcolchiuhtiuac (quail face painting).

89. Sahagún (Commentar Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 466) transliterates yopi as "the red people" (Thepanca), and gives two illustrations to indicate that they were painted caps.

90. "The word chimmalli means 'whatever anything is made among.' Wind and symbol obviously refer to the strengthening of the reproductive function, to fertilizing, hence we also see the chimpanelli with the four sign projecting between the human couples in sexual union." Soler: Treatment of the Aztec Collection, p. 100.

91. Soler suggests that the form of the name should be yiacatecutli or yacatecutli ("the lord, the prince, the leader") (Collected Works, Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 27). Tezozomoc (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 27) says he also was named Yacatecuhqui ("el que tiene la nariz aguileña"); Francisco Javier Clavigero, in Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), Vol. II, p. 87, n. 17, adds the name Xicotencutli.

In op. cit., Vol. III, pt. 4, p. 91, Soler refers to Yacatecutli as meaning "lord of the nose," and to the form Iyacatecutli, which Sahagún uses in the Florentine Codex, as "lord of the departed," explaining the connection of the cult of this god with that of Tezcatlipoca, and linking Yacatecutli with Iztapalququi. Both the latter were among the "old gods."

92. Cut in four points and covered with liquid rubber. (Soler: op. cit., p. 92).

93. The corresponding Spanish text states: ". . . en una cuba, metida, que ellos llaman vilaci. Y tambien traen de otra manera de bacula,

776 which they journeyed. Whenever they slept, there they set 463 them up; before them they did penance, they drew [their]
464 blood, they offered incense: that they might be favored by their god, Yiacatecutli—thus they begged and implored his favor.[94]

All manner of places they came to and entered. And hence they were named "the merchants who lead." They took their name from their god, Yiacatecutli.

These vanguard merchants[95] went into the coast-lands,[96] looking well for whatever goods there might be; they stretched over the southern coast-lands, they circled around the coast-lands.

They traveled exhausted by the heat and the winds; weakened, tired in the heat, they walked in great affliction. Their foreheads burned; they shaded the sun's heat with their hands [as] they plodded [under] its rays.

They betook themselves into the deserts; they climbed up and down canyons and mountains—all places. On elbow, on knee, they thus spent, they thus took much time.

[439] Greatly were they wearied, much did they suffer, that they might find precious green stones, emeralds,[97] turquoise,[98] amber, gold; [and] feathers of all manner of birds—the [long tail feathers of the] quetzal[99] and its black [825] and green head and breast feathers;[100] the red spoonbill;[101] the blue cotinga;[102] the parrot; the trupial;[103] the eagle; and the skins of fierce animals, of ocelots.

mochtecuzia, inchpa cuchinqui, vecuz quijtlequetza, inpan tlamacazo, mijco, quijcajcahuanjlia, yajc quijtlauhtia ya jaxcoah yiacatecutli, yajc quijtlanjlia, yajc quijmatatzapujlia, yaicnelilia:

ainujan acitinemj, calactinemj. Auh ic motomoca, puchuca yiaqui: inch canqui, ya inca inteuh, yiacatecutli:

Ontomoca, atzonc: calaquijuj, vel quijmocinemj, in tlein quijmomanahuitiqui, anacatl quijzaqualotinemj, anacatl quijlacatectinemj, tonalctiauhtinemj, hecacichtinemj, mocichqualtinemj, mocichpouhtinemj, ehicichtinj, mocichqueztinj, ymellelacitiah, yaiququa tlatlatiah, intonal quijmacujtinj, intomalonjuh intiah:

intlacatl quinamjcitinemj, atlachtli, tepetl, quijtocuja, quijtlacuja, inquijchca ana: intonlcipi, intoxpan ic tlatlacqa, ic tuquequetza:

vel quijctiuvj vel quijhiocuja, yaic quijtomoa in chalchiujtl, in quetzalitzli, in tozziujtl, ya apaçmalli, in tocujtlatl: in tepepan ihujtl, in quetzalli, in tzinjtzcan, in tlauhquechol, xiuhtototi, in tozli, çaqua: quauhtli, in tequanemi, ya ocelopetlatl.

---

que se van calle negra linjana, manjaj sin todo ningunos: que se vienen juntos, de los que se van en España." Clark, in Codex Mendoza (James Cooper Clark, ed. and tr.; London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), Vol II, p. 106, gives bamboo (Bambusa spp.).

94. Tezozomoc (op. cit., 37-8) says they gathered the stones all together, gave with a ritual, worshipping the stones as well as the god.

95. Traveling tradesmen who went into the tierra caliente (ejemplares enemaca calaquqia) (Sahagún: op. cit., p. 91). In Gesamtalter Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 1104, Seler states: "Yacatecutli (der 'Herr der Nase') oder Ipanatecutli ('der Herr der Wegzugangenen') war der Gott der Kaufmannsgilden der ostwärts zwischen der tierra caliente der Tolteken und Aztekenen."

Sahagún (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164) refers to the town of Ocuxiuc in Atzitzinac as one of the towns famous for the Xiuhtototi.

The reference in ibid., Vol. II, p. 330, to the Nonohualcatecuxiuc, appears to refer to a guide or chief of merchants inferior in rank to the Pochteca [103] Ocuxiuc.

96. Atzitzinac, in addition to designating the valley of Mexico, especially around the lake, refers also to the area in Southern Mexico, especially tropical, which borders the sea coast. In the Spanish version of this chapter, Sahagún defines the area as "todas las poblaciones, que están cabeza de la mar." In Book III, Chap. XII, Sahagún states "Tlalcuexo hasta Atzitzinac, que dicen más de cien leguas" (from Tula). Also, "Estuvieron en la provincia de Atzitzinac, es todos, sino aquellos que dan de parte del señor de México con quien estuvieron ahuelos y confederados . . . dicen todos juntos hasta el pueblo de Tuxtepec. En un pueblo se dividían, unos dicen a Atzitzinac Ayotlan; otros dicen a Atzitzinac Xicalanco."—Historia general, Vol. II, p. 354.

Seler defines Atzitzinac Ayotlan as the Pacific coastal lands and Atzitzinac Xicalanco as the coast of Tabasco.—Op. cit., Vol. II, p. 456.

97. "Las esmeraldas que se llaman quetzalitzli, las hay en esta tierra muy buenas; son preciosas, de mucho valor, llámanse así porque Quetzalli quiere decir plumas muy verdes, y xiuhli quiere decir verdejo, la cual es muy pulida y sin manchas ningunas, y estas dos cosas tiene la buena esmeralda que es muy verde, no tiene manchas, y muy pulida y transparente es resplandeciente." (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 279.)

98. "Tozzitzitl, quiere decir turquesas de las dicen . . . es turquesa fina, y sin ningunas manchas y muy lucida."—Loc. cit.

99. "Las plumas que crían en la cola se llaman quetzalli (y) son muy verdes y resplandecientes, son anchas, como unas hojas de espadaña, dobláganse cuando las toca el aire (y) resplandecen muy hermosamente."—Ibid., p. 163.

100. "El tocado que tiene en la cabeza este ave (quetzalcuatl) es muy hermoso y resplandeciente, llámase a estas plumas tzinitzcan; tiene esta ave el cuello y el pecho colorado y resplandeciente; se previene esta pluma y llámanla tzinitzcan."—Loc. cit.

There also is a bird by that name: "Hay una ave en esta tierra que se llama tzinitzcan . . . las plumas preciosas que tiene crecen en el pecho y en las orejas y debajo de las alas; son la cosa preciosa y la cosa verdes resplandecientes."—Loc. cit.

101. Tlauhquechol or tzoquechol means red spoonbill or roseate spoonbill. It is an aquatic bird. "Tiene el pecho, y la barriga, y la cola y las alas de color encarnado muy fino."—Loc. cit.

Seler gives name as Mazatlan Ajaia L. (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 653). Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 376n., gives Platalea Ajaia name L. (roseate spoonbill).

102. Sahagún defines xiuhtototi as a bird the size of a jay bird (grajo) (op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164). Seler identifies it as Cotinga cinerea S. Cuerodes (ibid., p. 654). Clark (loc. cit.) gives Cotinga amabilis Gould.

103. See Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 164: "Cuando vuela y extiende la cola entonces se parecen las plumas amarillas (y) revuelven el color amarillo con las negras, y así parecen como llama de fuego y como oro, relumbra en Atzitzinac."

And [they brought] vessels, and incense-burners, and jars made of calabashes, spoons for stirring cacao, and stoppers for jars.

When they entered lands with which they were at war, and went among people who were far distant, they became like their enemies in their garments, their hair-dress, their speech,[180] [that they might] mimic the natives.

And if they came to an evil pass, if they were discovered, then they were slain in ambush and served up with chili sauce.[181] [But if] any—even one, even two—escaped alive, [such an one] informed Moctezuma.

This one then gave him a gift, and decked him with his amber lip-plug. He did him honor, singling him out as a valiant warrior, thus making him a man of consequence.

And when those who returned arrived home, when they had come back, when they had reached and had commitment in their land, they feasted all, [especially] the merchants and the principal men, that they might make themselves celebrated.

It was called "the washing of the feet."[182] They paid great honor to the cane, to the walking staff, of Yiacatecutli.

In the tribal temple[183] they set it upright. They offered it an offering first, when they laid a feast. And when they summoned people to a banquet, they always offered it an offering when they ate.

And when they ceremonially bathed and slew a man as a sacrifice,[184] he whom they offered was the likeness of their god, Yiacatecutli; or else one of [the following gods], or all of them, whom they worshipped—Chicomquiauitl, or Chalmecacioatl, Acxomocuil, and Nacxitl, Cochimetl, Yacapitzauac.[185] No one determined, [for] it was of their own free will, whether they should offer up one or two men.

They bought them there at the slave market at Azcapotzalco; they served and arranged them, turning them around many times, examining them, buying the good ones—those of good bodies, without blemish, the best men, in good health, sick in no degree, who were marked by no marks on the body.

Such as these they slew on the feast-day, Panquetzaliztli, when the feast of Uitzilopochtli was celebrated.

Thereupon they garbed them in trappings like those of Yiacatecutli, which were assigned to them.

And before they slew them, first they let them be seen by the people. It was said: "They save them up [like intlantl iautitlan, in tzacuj, in tzacutica, tetlan onnemj, vel calaquj, motlacacuepa in nechichioalitica, in tezintica, in tlaxoltica quintlachecalhuja in chanaque.

Auh in tecomatl, in pectecomatl, in aiutectli, in aquauitl, yn ozaccaiutl:

Auh intla otlaneçomaltique, intla oittoque: vncan quinpoiomjctia, quinchillatilia: ça aca, aço ce, aço vme yn oc nõ tematitlanpa quiça, ihoatl quinalmotocaia in motecuçuma:

ic vncan quimaca, caquijlia, yapoçmaltemouh, yc quimaviziotia, ic quinzacaiotia, in tlacauh, vncan ic oquichoia.

Auh yn iquac oalacia, ynchan: vn imiloch, yuncuepal oquichiuhque, yn otlaltechacico, yn otlaltechpachiuhque: iaquich tlacatl quinotza, in puchteca: yoan in tlatoque, ic momititiaia:

mjtoa, mocxipaca, cenca quimavizilitiaia yn itopil, yn jtlaçcaia yiacatecutli:

cana in calpulco quiquetzaia: achto quitlamanjlia, yn iquac tetlaqualtia: yoan intlaca nel motecoanotza, quitlamanjlia in çan muchipa yn jtlaquaia.

Auh intla aca tealtia, ihoatl caltiaia, quizcuaia in jiccuh yiacatecutli: anoço cenca ihoantin yn mochcoaia, in quinmotecutiaia in chicomquiauitl, anoço chalmecacioatl, yoan acxomocuijl, yoan nacxitl, cochimetl, iacapitzauac, a'ac quiiocuja, yiollocdama, yn aço ce, anoço vme, ce aleiz tlacatl:

vmpa cencouaia yn tlacatecujloca azcapotzalco: motlahtlatilia, motlapapatilia, quincuecuepa, quimjhitta, yn qualtin quincuaque, yn acan quenamjque, in tlacaiocti, in tlacamelaque, yn acan cucuque, yn atle intlaciuh ce:

ynic ihoan quinmictique, yn ipan panquetzaliztli: yn vncan ilhuiquintilioia vitzilubochtli:

yquac quinchichioaia, quintlamamaca, intech quitlalia yn iuhquj ynochichioal yiacatecutli.

Auh yn ximo quinmjctia, achtopa quinteititiaia: mjtoa quinmjmextia, ic quitemachitia in tealtiaque:

776
463
484
416
439
292
263
265
431
301
301
776
796
778
776
796
567

180. Cf. Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 57): Ynmolchiquaqui "proporcionaio vestimentas parecidas, que tienen vizcaya, á habilidad, para mejor gracionamente, á engañar, y se sabio, y sagaz (que es propio condicion de Mercaderes) . . . ."

181. Cf. Seler (Lenoir Kodex, p. 22) citing Hist. Reys. Colib. Mex. B. II §43.

182. Book IX of the Historia general deals almost entirely with the activities of the merchants. Chapter VI, entitled De las ceremonias que se hacia a los mercaderes cuando llegaban a su casa, que se llamaba lavatorio de pies, mentions washing mouth and hands.

187. Sahagún defines calpulli as "vecindad del barrio, á parroquia" (Spanish version).

188. Sahagún defines the ceremonies in this manner: "Estos ducchos que mataban a estos esclavos."—Historia general, Vol. I, p. 213.

189. According to the Spanish version, they were four brothers and a sister of Yiacatecutli. Seler (Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 4, p. 93) recognizes Cochimetl and Yacapitzauac as synonyms for Yiacatecutli; "Chicomquiauitl or Chalmecacioatl is the name of a goddess of water and the earth"; Acxomocuil is Tezcatlipoca; Nacxitl is Quetzalcoatl.

648 Then [the others] said: "We have come from Mexico."

[The Spaniards] answered them: "If in truth you are Mexicans, what is the name of the ruler of Mexico?"

They replied: "O our Lords, his name is Moctezuma."

431 643 292 648 Therefore they offered them all the various things which they bore with them; costly capes such as those which here are named: [the mantle] with the sun design, the blue-knotted one, the one with the jar design, the one with eagle down, the one with the serpent mask, the one with the wind jewel, the one with turkey blood design, or the one with the whirlpool design, or the one with the smoking mirror.

648 When they had presented them all these various [capes, the Spaniards] gave them gifts in return. They offered them green and yellow necklaces,[6] which looked like amber.

And when they had taken [the gift], when they had seen it, much did they marvel.

And [the Spaniards] addressed them; they said to them: "Go [in peace]! First of all we go to Castile. We shall not tarry in proceeding to arrive in Mexico."

Thereupon [the Spaniards] departed. Thereupon also [the others] went; they turned back.

● 484 And when they had disembarked on dry land, then they went forthwith to Mexico. Day by day and night by night[7] they traveled, in order to come and notify Moctezuma, and be first[8] to arrive telling him the truth, and to inform him. They went carrying their goods, which they had received.

500 And upon this they declared to him: "O our Lord, my noble youth, mayest thou destroy us! For behold, this we have seen; behold, this we have done, there where thy grandfathers stand guard for thee, before the ocean. We went to see our lords the gods, in the midst of the water. All thy mantles we went to give them. And behold, they gave us of their noble goods. They said: 'If in truth ye have come from Mexico, behold, this ye shall give the ruler Moctezuma. Thus will he know us.'"

Çan njman qujtoque, ca vmpa in mexico tiosllaque.

Qujnoalnanqujlique intla nelli anmexica tle itoca in tlatoanj mexico?

Qujmonjlhujque. Totecujovane ca Motecuçoma itoca.

Njmã ie ic quinmaca in jxquitlamantli qujtqujque tlaçotilmatli: iuhquj in, ichoatl in, in njcã motenoa. Tonatiuhio xiuhtlalpilli: tecomaio, xaoalquauhio, coaxaiacaio, ecacozcaio, Tolecio, anoço amalacaio, Tescapocio:

in jxquitlamãtli in in qujmõmacaque, qujnoalcuepcaiotilique, qujnoalmacaque coxcatl, xoxoctic, coztic: iuhqujnma in apoçonalnenequj:

auh in oconcujque, in oquittaque, cenca tlamaviçoque, yoan qujnoalnaoatiqua: qujnoalilhujque: xivian oc ie tivi in castilla, amo tivecaoazq̃ tacitivi in mexico:

njmã ie ic vi, njman ie no ic vitze, oalmocuepque.

Auh in otlalhoacca quiçaco, njman oallamelauhque in Mexico, cecemjlhujtl, cecenal in oalnenenque, injc quinonotzaco in motecuçoma, in melaoac in jvelia:ca qujlhujco, qujcaquitico: intlatquj oalmochiuhtia in oquicujto.

Auh njman ie ic quinonotza. Totecujoe, notelpotzine, ma xitechmotlatlacili ca izcatquj otiquittaque, izcatquj otiochiuhque, ca in vmpa mitzonmotlapielilia in moculhoan, in teuatl izco. Ca otiqujmittato in totecujoan, in teteu in atl itic: in jxquich motilmatzin otiquinmacato: auh izcatquj techmacaque intlatquitzi. Qujtoque; intla nelli vmpa oanoallaque mexico, izcatquj anquinmacazque in tlatoanj Motecuçoma, ic techiximatiz:

6. Spanish text: Los españoles dieron a los indios unas de cuentas, unas verdes y otras amarillas." This was the result of the interview between the Indians and Juan de Grijalva, in the expedition of 1518.

7. Ibid.: "en un dia, y en una noche."

8. Sahag., op. cit., p. 654, has fuel luen, translated "first of all."

Sixth Chapter. Here is told how the messengers of Moctezuma returned here to Mexico and came to relate to Moctezuma that which they had seen.

Thereupon [Cortés] dismissed them, and let them descend to their boats. And when they had climbed down into the boats, they rowed with great force. Mightily did they ply their oars. Some paddled with their hands.

Fleeing with all their force, they came saying to one another: "O warriors, [use] all your strength! Row with haste, lest something here overtake us — lest something here befall us!"

Speedily they hastened to reach by water the place called Xicalanco; there they no more than quickly caught their breath, that once again they might with energy hasten on. Then they came to reach Tecpan tlayacac, whereupon they also hastened and hurried on, and soon came to reach Cuetlaxtlan. [From there] they likewise departed in haste, [having] in this place taken some rest.

And [those] of Cuetlaxtlan said to them: "Rest yet but a brief day; catch your breath!"

But they replied to them: "Nay, we may only go on swiftly. We must give the news to the lord, the ruler Moctezuma. We must tell him what we have seen, which is terrifying — the like of which hath never been seen. Had you, perchance, already, ere now, heard of it?"

Then they speedily departed from there and soon came to reach Mexico. It was deep night when they went reaching [the city]; they came in here quite by night.

And when this was happening, [Moctezuma] could enjoy no sleep, no good. Never could one speak to him. That which he did [was] only as if it were in vain. Oftimes he sighed; he was spent, downcast. He felt delight in no savory morsel, joy, or pleasure.

Wherefore he said: "What will now become of us? Who, forsooth, standeth [in command]? Alas, until now, I. In great torment is my heart, as if run through with chili water, so that it burneth and Inic chiquacen capitulo: vncã mjtoa, in quenjn itiitlanoan Motecuçoma, oalmocuepque in njcan mexico quijlhujco in motecuçoma in quijttaque.

Niman ic ic qujncauh, qujncoaltemovique in jmacalco: auh in ovaltemoque acalco, njman ic ic tequjtlancloa, ontetemj in tlancloa, cequjntin matlanelos.

centlaquauh oalmotlaloa, qujmolhujtivitze, tiacoane ixqujch amotlapal, xitequjtlanelocan, ma itla njcan taxti ma itla njcan topan muchiuh iciuhca acitivetzico in atl iitic in jtocaiocan xicalanco, çan tequjtl vncan oalihiocujtiqujzã, ic ic no ceppa centlaquauh oaltotoca: njman acico in tecpan tlaiacac, njman ic no ic oalmeoaltia, oalmotlaloa, acitivetzico in cuetlaxtlan, çan no oalqujztiqujzque, vncan ihiocujque.

Auh in cuetlaxtecatl qujmjlhuj ma oc cemjlhujtzintli ximocevicã ma oc amjhio xiccujcan.

Auh qujlhujque, ca amo ca çan ticiuhtivi tictononochilizque in tlacatl tlatoanj Motecuçoma, tictolhujlizque in tlein otiqujttaque, in cenca temamauhti, in aic iuhquj omottac, cujx ie cuel ie teachto, tocoocaqujz:

njman iciuhca oalpeuhque, acitivetzico in mexico, çan ioaltica in acico, çan oalioalcalaoque.

Auh in jquac in aoqujcochiz, aoqujtlaqual qujmatia, aoc ie qujlhujaia in çaço tlein qujchioaia, ça iuhqujn nentlamatia, iuhqujn achica elcicivi, mociauhquetza, mociauhpoa, aoc tle velic, aoc tle tepac, aoc tle teavialti ipan qujmatia, ipampa in qcjtoaia, tlein ic topan muchiuz, ac nel icac, ha ieppa nehoatl, vel patzmjquj in noiollo, iuhqujnma chilatequjlo, vel tonecoa chichinaca campa nel totecue.

787 Sixteenth Chapter, which telleth of the ninth sign, called One Serpent.[1] It was considered a good day sign, if those same ones then born did not harm it. And the merchants expected much of it, because of their way of livelihood.

One Serpent set in. It was said to be a good day sign. Of one born on it, they said his deserts and merits would be to become wealthy. There would be wherewith to eat and drink. And in war, in time of battle, he would become a brave warrior and a chieftain; he would attain renown, honor, glory, and fame. Perchance he would be a ruler or a lord. And if it were a woman, she would be quite rich; she would be a good provider; she would be well-born. She would look to and guard the services and the property of our lord. She would be a guardian and administrator. Much would she gather, collect, save, and justly distribute among her children.

But it was also said that although such became the deserts of one then born (as is already said in many places), if he did not diligently do penance, if he paid not good heed, he indeed failed, and personally brought upon himself that he lost through neglect, and destroyed and ruined what were his deserts. This was because he neglected things, worked unwillingly, was lukewarm, and lacked forethought and diligence. Indolent, he let nothing be done. He was careless, exceedingly careless, slothful, negligent, listless, and slow; a great and heavy sleeper. And he was incorrigible. He would only neglect things through laziness; advice offended and angered him.

So it was said of him: "So he is; he made no provision for food, for there was constant running about." There was no getting to bed, no arising; he stretched his limbs, quite exhausted by fatigue and effort. To no purpose did he give or publicly display wealth and prosperity, and the joys and comforts of wealth.

787 441 484 And it was said that on One Serpent the merchants and vanguard merchants,[2] the exploring Injc caxtolli oce capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, injc chicunauhtetl machiotl, in jtocã ce coatl: quilmach qualli tonalli: intlacamo çan ichoantin qujtlaconzque in vncan tlacati: auh in puchteca cenca qujmatatacaia, in jpampa in jnnetlaiecoltiliz.

Moquetza ce coatl: injn mjtoaia, qualli tonalli: in aquijn ipã tlacatia, qujtoaia: ilhujle, maceoale iez, mocujltonoz, oniez in qujquaz, in qujz, auh in iaoc, in iaopan, oqujchtiz, tiacauhtiz, momavizçoaiz panvetziz, maviçoaz, moteniotiz, aço tlatocatia, tecutiz, auh intla cioatl, vel motlacamatiz, vel motlaiecoltiz, vel motlacatiz, qujttaz, qujpiaz in jteicnehliz, in jcocoauh totecujo, tlaçaloanj, tlapachoanj iez. vel qujntlaçalhujz, qujntlapachilhujz, qujntetzontiz, qujntlatlamachiz in jpilhoan, auh ioan mjtoa, maçivi in iuhquj in inemac mochioa, in jpan tlacati (ca ie omjto mjieccan) intlacamo ie vellamaceoa, intlacamo vel mocozza, catle vnqujça, ca ixcoian conmocaujlia, qujmjxcaoaltia, qujmopolhuja, qujmopopolhuja, in jmaceoal ocatca: ipampa içan tlatlacomati, tlaavilmati, tlaquelchioa, tlatlacanequj, qujtenmati, acontlaeltia, aiel atle conmochichioaltia, vel cujtlatzcopic, cujtlatzcocopic, cujtlananaca, cujtlaçotlac, cujtlatzol, qujtenmatirl, cochpal, cochmjmjl: ioan auel monotza, çan qujtenmati, qujquammati, qujtlauelchioa, in tlatolli, ichoatl injc mjtoa: ca nel amaxcauja, in qualonj, ca netotoqujlilo, amo neteteco, amo nequequetzalo: vel ixqujch maana, vel ontlamj in ciauiztli, in tlapaliuiztli, amo çan motencnmaca, amo çan teixpanvetzai, in necujltonolli, in netlamachtilli, in netlacamatiliztli, in netlacamachiliztli.

Ioan mjtoa: in jpan in ce coatl, cenca qujqualittaia in puchteca, in oztomeca, in jaque, in nẽnemjnj, in

1. In the MS, apparently ce ayolut has been corrected to read ce coatl.
2. V. supra, Chap. 12.

787 441 484 merchants[3] and traveling men, those who entered distant lands, regarded [the day] as very favorable. It was their day sign and time count, when [a merchant] took to the road and set forth to far lands.

441 484 And he who was about to set forth, when he had prepared himself and filled and made ready the carrying-frames, then summoned, gathered, assembled together, assembled together,[4] and notified his elders, the old merchants. They were given drink, food, and wine, in order to make it publicly known that this one now wished to depart and go hence; to break away; that he still wished to abandon the people and disappear. And, it was said, he still wished to be extinguished from view for a time. In this way he made it clear to the people; he made it very clear to the people. That is to say, it was well known to those who yet tarried in their homes, to those who went nowhere.

vecacalaquijnj, intonalpan catca, intlapoalpan catca, iehoatl qujtztivia, vncan vmpeoaia in veca:

auh in aqujn ie vmpeoaz in omochichiuh, in otlacacaxten, in otlacacaxchichiuh: njman tetlalhuja, qujncentlalia, qujnnechicoa, qujnnechicoa, qujnmachitia in jveveiovan, in puchteca veuetque, atlica, tlaqualo, tlaoano, injc teixpan motlalia, in aqujn ie oncholoteoaznequj, ie onmoquetzteoaznequj, ie onueuetzteoaznequj, in oc ontetlalcaujznequj, oc ompoliuhtoznequj, ioan mjtoa: oc onmjxceujznequj, quexqujch caujtl injc teixco ovevetz, omach teixcoveuetz, qujteaznequj cenca ie macho, in jc ie vecaoa ichan, in jc aoccampa iauh.

3. Cf. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 371.

4. In the MS, quymoctlaxtoa is repeated.

The Seventeenth Chapter telleth of the admonitions of the old merchants when they counseled their sons as they were about to depart and gain their livelihoods in distant places, when for the first time they wished to go and set forth.

Inje caxtolli omome capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in jntenonotzaliz puchteca, in veuetque, in qujmjlhujaia inpiilhoan, in jquac ie oncoazque, in veca motlaiecoltizque, in qujn jiopa iaznequj, vmpeoaznequj. 44/ 484

And then the old men besought each one; they greeted, animated, and encouraged him; they prepared and singled him out; they greeted him with tears, prepared him to receive misery and torment, etc.

Auh njman ic ceceiaca qujtlatlauhtia in veuetque: qujtlapaloa, qujchicaoa, quellaquaoa, qujtztziloa, ico qujlpia, qujchoqujztlapaloa, qujtlaquammaca in netuiinjliztli, in tlahiiovilizitli. Etc.

They said to him: "Thou art here, O my son, my beloved son; O youth, my beloved youth! O noble youth, thou hast sought out, beckoned to, and summoned thy mothers and fathers, the merchants, the vanguard merchants, the exploring merchants. Verily, here thou lookest into their faces; thou knowest them. Ah! They will leave and offer thee a word of advice and counsel. This they have carried and borne; it tutored and trained,[1] so that they benefited in such places as the mountains and the deserts.

Quijlhuja ca njcan tonca nopiltze, nopiltzine, telpuchtle, notelputze, telputztze: ca otiquijmonteme, otiquijmontzatzili, otiquijmonnenotzallan, in monaoan, in motahoan, in puchteca, in oztomeca, in iaque: ca njcan imjacio, ymjcpac, titlachia, tiquijmonjximati, ỉ mjtzcaviliaque, ỉ mjtzmacazque in cententli, yn cencamatl, in jntlatquja, yn jntlamamaia, in jntlacazcaltiaia, in jntlacaoapaoaia, injc otlamaviçoque, in iuhcan in quauhtla, in çacatla:

"And this is the word of advice and counsel with which I console thee, who art my beloved son. So I become thy mother and father; so thou hast me as protector and comforter. Thou who art poor shalt already set forth from and leave the city, thy home — Mexico, Tlatiluco, or Tenochtitlan. Already thou art about to abandon and forsake thy kinsmen; already thou art about to abandon thy home, the rooms of thy house, thy homeland, the resting-place of thy head, thy child's crib, thy hair-tuft. Already thou comest to One Serpent, the straight way, the wide road;[2] already thou followest along and goest toward the desert and the plain.

auh injn ca njcan cententli, cencamatl, ic njmjtziollalia, ic njmjtzchicaoa in tinopiltzin, inic njmona, njmota, injc timonanmati, injc timotamati: timotolinja, ca ic tonmoquetzaz, ic tocontlalcaviz in altepetl, in mochan in mexico, in tlatilulco, anoço in tenuchtitlan, ic tiquijmoncauhtiaz, ic tiquijmõcauhteoaz, in moaaniolque: ic tontlacauhteoaz in mochan, in mocalitic, in moqujxcan, in moiolcan ỉ moquechtetzon ionocan, in momanaoal, anoço monatetzon, ic toconnamjquja in ce coatl, in vtli melaoac, in vchpantli, ic tocontocaz, ic tocennamjquja in jxtlaoatl, in vei tlalli.

"Wretched art thou, O my son, O youth! Exert all thy force. Where, in sooth, shalt thou live? Shalt thou perchance die here? O that somewhere the Timotolinja nopiltze, telpuchtle, ma ximellaquaoa, can nel timonemjtiz? cuiz njcan timomjqujliz? ma cana ixtlauhto, popouhto: in inchoquja, in jntlaocol,

1. Cf. Angel Maria Garibay K.: Llave del náhuatl (Guadalajara: Imprenta Mayo, S. A., 1940), p. 109, for one of [illegible] chocoyoa, chocoyoaia, chocoyoaliztli, and chocoyoaqui could be rendered as "protection." Cf. Olmos, op. cit., p. 211, and Simeon, op. cit.

2. Cf. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), IX, 5: "Es cosa [illegible] que es una de las cosas curiosas o dignas de la era [illegible]."

tenes, the pity of thy elders, the old ones, may go as reward and recompense, to gird and clothe they. For[3] thus did thy elders go. For they went learning of war, performing the way of life of the road. So with struggle they gained and sought [honors] from him by whom we live. So they prayed.[4]

"But [as for] this: then to it! Be covered and engulfed by torment. For now shalt thou come to know, feel, and deal exclusively with misery, hunger, starvation, thirst, emptiness,[5] fatigue.[6] For verily thy provisions have ended—that with which one hath traveled. Perhaps thou shalt chew dry tortillas—parched tortillas, wretched, tough-cooked things, ill-smelling tamales. Perhaps thou shalt drink sour, bitter water, dirty and foul.

"And verily, thou shalt draw near to, approach, and come against the menacing river, which seemeth a torrent, roaring and crashing as it sweepeth by. It carrieth everything with it and goeth destroying great trees. And there shalt thou wait some days; thou shalt be isolated by the water; thou shalt suffer with thy pangs of hunger and unrest.

"If thou wouldst gain honor by such as this, O my son, be not shameless; do not faint; be not womanish. Give thyself completely to the torment; enter into it; deliver thyself to it with all thy force, so preparing for it, etc. For verily thou seekest and travelest into such places as thy elders, the old men, served. For they thus hurled themselves at and delivered to torment, and exposed themselves to danger and adversity. For not without reason did the merchants take and find leadership and the wisdom of old age, become leaders, and receive their authority in exchange.

"And of this, O poor youth, if something should be thy reward and deserts, if our lord should show esteem by something for thee, thou must first feel and profit by the pain, the afflictions, the privations, the ambushes. Such is exacted from those who go from city to city. Yet there will be times of need. Thou shalt become tired and worn out; thou shalt stand exhausted; thou shalt go wearied by heat, spent by winds. Thy face will become dust-covered and in motechiuhcaoan, in vevetque: in ajcan ic mijcaspana, ic mijtaquimjlea: a cuchiaque in motechiuhcaoan, ca iuecouh, intlachinol oquijnemiaque, oquijchiuhtiaque in vtli, in nemmjlizti, injc oquijtlamatataquilitiaque oquijtlaitlanjlitiaque in tloque in naoaque, injc ixillan, ioacatlan omamaiauhtiaque:

auh injn, macuele tiualinj, ma xocontimalo in tlaihiiovilizti, ca ic tocuamatiz, ic toconjxcuijz, ic tocoxcomatiz in netolinjlizti, in apjzmjquijlizti, in teociujlizti, in amjquiliztli, in atetzocoquijlizti, in ciammjquijlizti: auh in nel otlatlan in motacatzin, in motlaocaia: cujx a tlemoquahtiz, in tlaxcalquappitztli, in tlaxcalhotopochtli, in totopochtzintli, in tamaliiacatzintli: auh cujx a tlemjtiz in xococ atl, in alchichic, in tlaelutl, in atzoatl.

Auh ca itech tacitiuh, itech tipechiujtiuh, itech timoxotzonatiuh in temamauhti atl, in iuhquj çolonj, in iuhquj tetecujcatiuh xxxamacatiuh ic iauh, in moch qujujca quitzincuhtiuh, vevei quauitl: auh ca vncan tiquexquillujtiz, timatzaquaz, titlaihiiouiz in mocujtlaxcoltica, in moxtequjlizticа:

intla tlemaujçez, in iuhquj in, nopiltze, ma titlapinauhti, ma tidlacuecuetlaxo, ma timocioatlamachti, iê xicmocenmaca, itlan xaquj, xicmotlaquammaca, ic ximotetzilo in tlaihiioujlizti. Et.[9] ca nel ic in tictemoa, ca ic in tictotocac, ca iuhcan otlacotique in motechiuhcaoan, in veuetque, ca ic omonmotlaque oquijmomacaque in tlaihiioujlizti: injc amo oquijtlaçotlaque in jntzontecon, yn jmelchiqujuh, ca amo cacujque quinencujque injc oquijtaque in tachcauhiotl, in veuioti, injc ic petlati, ic icpalti, injc ic contlanevi in jnpetl, in jmicpal in puchteca.

Auh in y, timotolinja telpuchtle, intla itla mocnopil, momalcoeal mochioaz intla itla ipan mjtzpoaz totecujo: ca oc toconjttaz, oc tocoxmaujçez in tococo, in tetolinj, in tiecolizti, in teiacacpa quijquja: in iuh quimotzaqua in aoacan, tepeoacan: cã oc vmpa onequjçaz, ticiamenjquiz, timociapponaz, timociauhquetztiaz, titonalciauhtiaz, teecaciauhtiaz, tiztlahzin timochiuhtiaz, tiztlahtenhpipixcauhtiaz, mjxquatzin tlatlatiaz, mjtonaltzin tlemacujtiaz, vel tima-

3. Real Palacio MS. 22.

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "Y en esto, ganarejo la honra que mereciere: como la ganaron los hombres ancianos, en la guerra, con esto vivo trabajar, alcançaron de nuestro señor, los siguiendo que tenemos." Cf. Florentine Codex, Book VI, cap. xiii, fol. 202r (modified, [illegible]).

5. Amoxcuepalliztli: [illegible]

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "et necessar que se esforçarás, y dispide [illegible]: para cuando los trabajos, que se [illegible] [illegible] y sed, y [illegible], y falta de [illegible]."

doubly white. Thy forehead will burn; thou shalt wipe the sweat off with thy hand; indeed thou shalt be bathed [in it]. In the corner, by the wall, behind the door, thou shalt hang thy head. Thy stomach will stick to thee [from hunger].[7]

"Thou shalt go into, entering, and leaving, city after city. Thou shalt be in danger; it will not be well with thee. That is to say, perchance it will not prosper; perhaps thy stock of goods, thy just deserts, thy dealings, will not result well. Thou shalt be long-suffering; thou shalt shed tears. Thy good deeds will not bear fruit, for fatigue will take thy measure. Indeed, thy breath and courage will end.[8]

"Perhaps somewhere in a gorge, at the mouth of a canyon, on some high place, at the base of a rock, at the foot of a tree, shalt thou sleep. Perchance somewhere thou shalt be destroyed; our lord will end thy existence. And perhaps thou shalt never come to make thy way back. For no one knoweth.

"Yet may it be well with thee. Go praying to our lord for mercy. Be not negligent. Think only of and be dedicated to penances. Be diligent in providing water for the washing of the face and hands, and in sweeping and gathering up rubbish.[9]

"Leave no one behind thee, etc.[10] Do not take to thy feet leaving one unaided behind thee. That is to say, do not go retreating in haste, running to the rear, fleeing in battle, following thy nose back. Remember one thing: go knowing, devoted, and dedicated to suffering. Perhaps he by whom we live will give thee something as thy deserts and merit.

"Perhaps once more thy mothers, thy fathers, and thy kinsmen will look thee in the face. Verily, what thou shalt eat and drink will be the advice we here give thee. For with all this we gird, fortify, and bind thee. We thy mothers and fathers implore thee: pay good attention; look well; take care, O my son. Go in peace, leaving thy aunts and uncles, etc."

In this manner did they animate and encourage the one not yet much experienced—who perhaps liviz in texomolo, in tecaltech, in tetlatzacujltitlan, timotololtitiez, mocujtlazcol motech motetecatiez, timâsquiz, timocacalaqujz, timoqujqujztiz: in soacan, tepeoacan, timotzotzonaz, timocacapanjz, qujtoanequj: ac aço can tle uel onmochioaz, ac aço can tle onmaqujtiz in motiamjc, in mocnopillo, in monentlamatia, ca uel icnoioaz in moiollo, mjxaiotzin ticmatentiez: amo ticazcanviz, in mocnelliloca, ca timjhiiotamachioaz, vel ontlamjz in mjhiio in motlapaliujz:

441
484

in aço cana atlauhitic, atlauhcamac, tlacopac, tetl itzintlan, quavitl itzintlan timocochitiz, in aço cana timopopoliujtiz, mjtztlatiz totecujo: auh in anoçoc mjloch, monecuepal ticchioaqujuh: caiac vntlamati, ma oc iĉ moiolic: xicnootlaocolnonochilitiuh in totecujo, ma timoxiccauh, ma xoconjxcauj, xocõcenmati in tlamaceoalizzli, xicmocujtlauj in tecatzaqujlizzli, in temãtequjlizzli: auh in tlachpanalizzli, in tlacujcujlizzli, macamo ce mõnjca, moteputzco xiqual. Ez macamo ce mõnjca, moteputzco xiqual. Ez macamo cemjcampa, moteputzco xiqualquetztiuh in mocxi, qujtoznequj, macamo xitzintlaçcatiuh, macamo xitzinqujztiuh, macamo xitzinqujzcatlaiecotiuh, xioalnacazizztiuh, maca tle xiqualiinamjctiuh: ma çan centlamjc xoconmattiuh, ma xoconcenmattiuh, xoconixcaujtiuh, in tlaihiioujlizzli, açida mjtzmãceoaltin, mjtzilhujltiz in tloque, naoaque:

açoc cippa mjxco, mocpac tlachiazque in monaoan, in motaoan, in moaniolque: ca tiquaz, ca tiquiz in njcan ic timjtznonotza, a izqujch ic timjtzonãpana, timjtzontetzilos, aco timjtzilpia in timonaoan, in timotaoan, timjtztlatlauhtia, tlĉ ticmati, tle ticmomachitia, tlĉ ticmatcatzintli nopiltze, ma iiolic xinovicatiuh, xiqujmoatlalcauj in maujoã in motlaoan. Er.

Ivin in quellaquaceia, in qujchicaoaia, in aiamo cenca itzlamati, in aço quin jioqu tevica, motervicaltia,

7. Ibid.: "tendreyo la barriga pegada a las cuestias de hombre."

8. Ibid.: "Y dauos duelo, os afligiro la duda de la cosa de nuestro merecimiento: que por ventura no se cumplirá, y duelos tendreyo trabajo, y llorar; como q̃ abrasado alguna cosa, o buena ventura: porque de ser afligido, y trabajado, hasta la ultima de paremia."

9. Ibid.: "derrojando hombrosamente a los muyores en cosas humildes: como es dar agua a mamar, y barrer, etc."

10. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book III, "The Origin of the Gods," p. 40; Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 294 (dio hier, hinter die [unverständlichen Worte]); Gulliver, op. cit., p. 232 (unpublished). Por supuesto, usted siguió[illegible] es a similar term. The text is garbled, as is most in the Aztec informant of the 1500.

441
484

for the first time went with and was one of a company of others [going to] places of which he wished to know, and departing for distant lands. Yet everywhere they cared for him, teaching and instructing him with these words. In such places as the forests and deserts he realized the estate of merchant or vanguard merchant.[11] in canpa ie ontlamatiznequj, injc ie vmpeou veca, oc novjian qujnemjtia, qujtlãtlatitia, qujtlãtlachiel-tia in jntlatoltica, in iuhcan quauhtla, çacatla in amaxcanvia in puchtecaiotl, in oztomecaiotl.

11. Corresponding Spanish text: "Deste manera los mercaderes viejos, a los mercaderes, que nuevamente pedí con otros mercaderes, o tierras estraños a mercadear: los hablaban, y esforçaban: y pusieron delante los trabajos, y dificultades, en que se mueve de ser; assi en los poblados, como en los desiertos en la provincia de su oficio, de mercaderia."

Eighteenth Chapter. Here are told [what] the talk and discourse were of these same old merchants which they repeated to their sons who already knew distant lands.

Inic caxtolli vnei capítulo: vncan motenecoa in tlatolli, in intenonotzaliz catca, in çán ie no ichoantin, puchteca veuetque, in qujnjlhujaia in inpilhoan in ie onmatia veca.

And [as for] him who already many times had returned and come back from there and who already had beheld such [distant] places as the inhabited and populated areas, dangerous and ominous places, places of torment, they said little to him; only something well-chosen, measured,[1] approved, complimentary, discreet, agreeable, moderate, pleasing, and commending. No more was it very long and extended; no more on all occasions did they speak, nor annoy him, nor speak lightly, nor harangue inconsiderately.

Auh in aquja ie mjiecpa iloti, ie mjiecpa mocuepa, in ie onjtztica in iuhcan inentla, inemja, in ouican, in temamauhtian, in tlaihiioujlizztlan: ça quexqujch in qujlhuja, ca eecauhquj, ça ixiecauhquj, ça tlaiecolli, ça tlauelittalli, ça tamachiuhqui, ça tlaqualittalli, ça ipan qualli, ça ipan tlauelittalli, ça ipan tlaiecolli, aocmo cenca viiac, aocmo cenca vitlatztic, aocmo cenca noviian ontlatoa, aocmo noviian qujnemjtia, aocmo çan ilhujztlatoa, aocmo ça iliviz tlatetoa:

Only this did they say to him: "Here thou art, O youth. No more art thou a child; no longer art thou like one afraid. For already thou hast regarded and witnessed thy dust-covered places, thy explored places, thy traveled areas which thou hast wished to know.

ça izqujch in qujlhuja. Ca njcan tonca telpuchtle: ca aocmo tipiltontli, aocmo tiuhquj titenmachonj, ca ie tonjztztica, ie tontlachixtica, ie mjxtlalopan, ie mjxnentla, ie mjxonjcac, in vmpa tontlamatiznéquj,

"In such places as forests, deserts, and cities, there is nothing to bring thee defeat, to frighten, daze, impede, or terrify thee. For already thou hast beheld all places, such as the markets, places where the merchants deal. Behold, we know not whether thy mothers and fathers lost thee forever. Perhaps thou goest for good; perhaps thou goest to be lost; perhaps somewhere into a canyon or a desert thou shalt be forced, and shalt perish; perchance in some city thou shalt come to an end. Perhaps once and for all thou art seen. Yet know and carry in thy heart that thou goest fortified by the tears and compassion of thy mothers and fathers. And if still something may become the reward of us, the old men, perhaps yet thou shalt come back and make thy return, that once more we may know thee.

in iuhcan in quauhtla, çacatla, in aoscan, in tepeocá, aocmo tle ic tontlapolotiaz, aoc tle ic tonjxmamauhtiaz, tonjxmjmjctiaz, aoc tle mjztzicololtiz, aoc tle mjtzixtilquetzaz: ca ic noviian tonjztztica, in iuhcan in tlaieoaian, in tlacotia in ontomeca: ca amo ticmati, anoço ie iccen mjtzixcaoa, in monaoan, in motaoan, aço ie iccen tiauh, aço ie cana tonuetzitiuh, aço cana atlauhtli, ixtlaoad itic timaqujltitoz, timopopoliujtitoz, aço cana tictlantoz in altepetl, aço ie cenmanian mjxco mocpac ontlitlachia, ca tel iuh qujmattiuh in moiollo, ca moiollo itlan ietiuh, ca ic timellaquauhtiuh, yn jachoquiz, yn jntlaocol in monaoan, in motaoan: auh intla oquijda tomácoxal, in tiveuetque, in açoc mjlach, monecuepal ticmochiujliquiuh, ca oc ceppa timjztzixinatizque.

"And now, take care. Travel the road with caution, lest thou stumble upon something. For desolate,

Auh in azcan tlé ticmomachitia: ma iolic xocnmotequjli in vtli, ma itla tocoujcxinamjc: ca amo

1. Read Palabra XIII: ye yuxuxuhqui, ye izxuhxuxuhqui.

441
484

ferocious, cruel, and peopled by evil men, spreadeth the wasteland.[2] Carefully thou shalt go taking by the hand, each of them, gathering in groups, ordering, assembling, and bringing together, thy younger brethren. Do not abandon them disdainfully. Advise them as thou goest, that they may take grass and reeds and with them fashion seats [for their elders], there at the places of rest. However, all this we have given — our sighs, our discourses — to such as teachers, forest people, desert people, merchants, travelers, etc. But no longer is it necessary to relate so much to thee. For here we only encourage thee somewhat. Little by little offer thyself to the torment. Use all thy force. Thou knowest what is required, O my beloved son."

When he had been supplicated, then he also returned a few words. Thus he answered and said:

"I thank you for the favor you have shown me, O brave men. You have left me consolation. Who am I? What am I that I deserve this short talk, your encouragement, your motherliness and fatherliness? For you have opened to me [counsel] which was in your bowels, your breasts, which lay resting, guarded, and folded like precious feathers well-curved and well-pointed; like a green stone, round and well-polished; like fine turquoise, well-rubbed and glistening. Doubtless I shall treasure you; for so, covering me, penetrating my bowels and my breast, and resting in my heart, go your fatherliness and motherliness, which are not due from you. Etc.

"But this I beg you. What will our lord grant? Perchance I shall yet come to look you in the face. For now I leave you. See to the sweeping and cleaning — the little tasks of sweeping, gathering of rubbish, and laying of fires. Let it not grow dark, nor rubbish stand cast about, in my humble house. Continue to do this. I go leaving only my beloved mother, my beloved great aunt, my beloved elder sister,[3] my beloved aunt, etc. For I go troubled and saddened on their account. Do your duty to them; advise them. Let no one make sport of them. Perchance our lord may somewhere destroy me. So all I thus entrust to you, and my heart is content."

tlacacemelletoc: ca tequanioteoc, motepanioteoc, amo tlaca onoc in çaçatl in tlacotl, ma ivian in mastech xiquimonantiuh, xiquimondantiuh, xiquimonololotiuh, xiquimotepeuitiuh, xiquimoncoçaquitiuh, xiquimõnechicotiuh in moteiccaoan: ma tiquimonnoxiccaujli, ma xiquimonnoxttiuh: injc conteujlizque in çacatzintli, in pepetzintli: ioan injc contlalilizque, intzicpaltzin, in campa necujloian, ca tel isquich o, in otiquinmacaque in tihiio, in totlatol, in iuhquj in tlacaopeoaia, in quauhtlaca, in çacatlaca, in puchteca in jaque et.[2] ca amo mononequj in quexquich timjtzacaquitizque, ca ça ninan achitzin ic timjtzonchicaoa, ma iocuica itlã zonmequjlti in tlaihiiovilistli, ma izquich motlapultzin, tle tiemomachitis nopilitze:

in jquac otlatlauhtilloc, niman no ic cen camatzintli ic tlacuepa, ic tlanaoquilia, quitta

Oannechmocnelilique in ocelequichtle: otlacauhquj in amoiollotzin, ac nehoatl, ac ninomati, in nican cen camatzintli nipquicnopilhuja, yn amotechicaoalistzin, in amotenaniotzin, amotetaiotzin, ca nocontlapoa in amoxillantzinco, amotoxcatlantzinco actica, in cepouhtoc, in cepouhoc, in cuelpachiuhtoc, in iuhquj quetzalli, in vel vitoliuhquj, in vel iaque, auh in iuhquj chalchiujtl, in ololiuhquj, in vel petlacac, in iuhquj teoxiujtl, in tlamatilolli, in uel cuecuexoca, aço cana namechonnotlazililiz, ca ic nonnapantiuh, noxillan, notoxcatlan onactiuh, neiollo itlan onietiuh, in amonaiotzin, in amotaiotzin, in amono anquinnazcaujlique. Et[2]

Auh inin ca namechonnotlatlauhtilia quẽ tlacoaz in jiollotzin totecujo, açoc amjtzinco amocpactzinco nitlachiequjuh ca ie namechonnotlalcaujlia, ma ipan anmotlatoltizque in tlachpanalistli, in tlachpanalli, in tlachpanaltzintli in tlacujcujlistli, in tletlaliliztli: macamo ontlaioaticaz, tlaçolli onqujxticaz, l. onquixtoz, in nocnoxacalco, ma oc conjxcauj in ça iio noxoncauhtiuh in nonantzin, in noteçitzin, in nouelltioatzin, in naujtzin. Ez.[2] ca ica nonnotequipachotiuh, ica nontlacoxtiuh, ma ipan anoalmoquixtiaque, ipan anmotlatoltiaque, ma caiac ica mocacaioaz, in aço cana nechmopopolhuja totecujo: ca izquich no ic amotetzinco nonnocauhtiuh, vel onietiuh in noiollo.

2. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book VI, cap. xliii, fol. 214: Indicaxuch inquimpach in ximoquiqui, the corresponding Spanish text reads: "Rasa es la brecha y guardad de los enemigos. Por mechapoloa que aora decir. Aquej en este lugar que era de brechas y guardadas se pudieron primeramente nuestros antepasados, aquej hizieron primeramente sus casas de mejorales y sus casas de gente o barrio."

Note, however, that in Book IX, cap. iii, Tiacatecatl and Çacatecatl are identified as dieses del camino.

3. In "Memoriales con Rasilias" (Academia de la Historia MS), p. 207, cuitlahuili is translated cuidada.

Then all his household wept over it. There were tearful greetings by all the old merchants, men and women. But he who could not weep only continued to sob behind the others, seeming to weep. And afterwards there was a little rejoicing, consolation, and drinking, to drive away and disperse sorrow. So afterwards all departed and went, and each one entered his own house.

Nonan ic nechoquijtilo, in jchantlaca, nechoquiztlapalulo, in ic muchiuhtin puchteca veuetque, puchteca ilamatque: auh in aca auel choca, çan teicampa tzõtzoiontica, mochoquizcanenequj, auh çatepan achitzin ic papacoa, neiollalilo, tlaoano, injc motlaocolpopeloa, motlaocolcecẽmana: ic çatepan netlatlalcaujlo, viuilo, cacalacoa in techachan. 441 484

[p.68 is blank]

000 Nineteenth Chapter. Here are told the offerings which they made for the sake of those who traveled to far places, and how respect was paid for the sake of those who died.

Injc caxtolli vnnavi capitulo: vncan motencoa, in ventli in qujchioaia, im impãpa vecanemja ioan injc mozttlaoaia in jpampa in mjquja.

441 And his household thereupon began the penances. They let themselves become dirty. No longer did
● 98f they wash their heads with soap, though they could 515 bathe their bodies. Nevertheless, no more did they submerge in water. But every eighty days they arranged the washing of heads with soap. Thus they showed and made it known that they did penance for the sake of their children, their young men, who were still absent. All the time they thus went about doing, however long he was gone.

Auh in jchantlaca: njman iquac compeoaltia in tlamaçeoaia, motzoiotia, aocmo mãmovia, tel vel maltia yn jntlacapa, iece, aocmo polaquj: auh nanapoaltica qujmattiuj, in mamovitiuj: injc qujnezttia, qujtemachitia, ca ipampa tlamãçeoa in jnconeuh, in jntelpuch, in oqu jxcauhque, ixqujch caujtl iuh qujchiuhtinemj, in jquin qujçaqujuh:

441 And if, perchance, he had gone to die, first were 765 notified the old merchants. Their task was to inform and break the news to the people. These introduced a time of mourning into the home of the deceased. Thus they made it known that during four days there would be remembrances; his household would mourn. So they would be visited and consoled, and there would be a burial ritual[1] for their child.

auh intla noce omjqujto, iehoan achto caqujtilo, in puchteca veuetque, intequjuh in teiolmelaoazque, in teiolpachiujtizque, iehoantin qujcalaquja in choquiztli, in jxaiotl, in jchan omjqujto, ic qujtemachitia, injc naujlhujtl ilnamjcoz, mjccaoztizque in jchantlaca, injc tlapalolozque, ellaquaoalozque, qujmjloloz in inconeuh:

[515] And when four days had gone by, then his household washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said, the deceased was bathed; and thereby they destroyed and banished their grief.

auh in oqujz navilhujtl: iquac mamovia in jchantlaca: ic mjtoa, momjccaaltia injc compopoloa, conjilcaoa intlaocol:

441 And if somewhere he had died in battle, they set up an image of him made of pine torches bound 765 together.[2] They made and formed his image; they 778 adorned his likeness. This evillotl was only a statue of pine logs which they split into sections and afterwards bound together. And they placed upon it all the paper ornaments, the paper array, the paper jacket, the paper neck-band, the paper stole. They piled up, strewed about it, and distributed them so that they would burn all of them with it. When this was done, when they had adorned the statue, when the one dead in battle had been wept, one more day auh intla cana oiaomjc, qujtlaliaia icujllo, qucujllotia, queujllotlalilia, ixiptla qujchichiujlia, injn Evillotl: çan ocoquavitl in qujtzatzaianaia, çatepan qujcujtlalpia: auh ixqujch itech qujtlalia, in amatlatqujtl, in amanechichioalli, in amazicolli, in amacozcatl, in amaneapantli, qujtlaolololtia, qujtlatepeoaltia qujtlamamaca, injc mochi ioan qujtlatizque: in ie iuhquj in oqujcencauhque evillotl, in jquac ie choqujliloz oiaomjc, oc cemjlhujtica, in jcujllo icalpulco, cemjlhujtl in ca, cemjlhujtl in eoatica: auh qujnjquac in ioalnepantla, qujtlatiaia, vmpa in qujtocaiotiaia, tevitoalco, quauhxicalco, tzompantitlan:

1. Qujmjloloz: possibly this refers to wrapping of the dead or clothing of a statue.
2. Evillotl: Corresponding Spanish text: "es ceniza de tea, atadas unas, con otras."

787X
825
484●

Second Chapter, in which is related the evil omen which they regarded in two ways: so it was when they heard that the white hooded hawk[1] cried out; and what the merchants did when somewhere on the road such befell them; perhaps it cried out at them.

Ic ome capitulo, vncan mjtoa: in tetzaujtl catca, in çan necoc tlachiaia: in juhquj catca, in jquac qujcaquja, in tzatzia oactli: ioan in tlein qujchioaia, puchteca in jquac cana iuhquj vtlica, in jnpan muchioaia in anoço inpan tzatzia.

Likewise they considered it an omen of evil when the white hooded hawk screeched at someone. As they said, it spoke in two [ways],[2] sometimes good and sometimes bad.

No ioan, qujtetzammatia: in jçic aca ipan vevetzca, oactli: in juh conjtoa, vme vitz qujtoa: in quenman qualli, quenman amo qualli.

When it displayed good, then they heard its words which it said as it screamed: "A good time! A good time!" When this was the case, none were frightened; the travelers were in no way terrified by it. Rather, they rejoiced. It was as if their hearts were gladdened, because perhaps they would come upon something pleasing; perchance in something they would be favored; they would attain something beneficial.

In jçic qualli qujnextia, ic qujcaquj in jtlatol injc vevetzca qujtoa: ieccan, ieccan, in jquac, yn, amo netemmacho: atle ic momauhtia, in nenenque: çan ie papaquj: iuhqujn ocovetzi in iniollo: ipampa, aço itla qualtzin, in jpan ie oniasque: aço itla ipan mopovatiuj: itla qualli, qujcnopilujzque.

But when they heard that it laughed too long, in a high pitch, — as if its bosom and side were in pain; or as if it screamed swollen with joy, [then], as if they were sick and frozen, none spoke aloud. They went with heads hanging, with necks loose. No longer [was there] control. Because of this they felt that perhaps something wueful would now betide them; they would come upon something perilous. Either some one of them would die; or sickness would come or somewhere they would be ambushed. This befell them when, perhaps, [they were] somewhere among the mountains, in a gorge, in the midst of the desert,[3] in the middle of the woods, in a thicket, within and among the trees. And if it were merchants, vanguard merchants, wayfarers, whom it befell that at them the white hooded hawk laughed, they said that perhaps now they should come upon something, or their goods would be carried away by the water, or some evil men, thieves

Auh in ic oqujcacque, in juhquj oxmjmjctoc, ic vetzca, tlatlapitzaoa: in juhquj, ixillan, ijomotlan, onquasquauhti: in juhquj, mocacanaoa, paquj, vevetzca: iuhqujn ontlanavi, iuhqujn ocevetzi, aocac naoati: ça tlatoliuj, ça tlaquechpiliuj, aiocmo tenaoatili: ic qujmatia, aço itla ovi, inpan ie ommuchioaz: itla ouj, ic conmonamjctizque: anoço ceme aca ie mjqujz: aço ie vitz cocoliztli, anoço çana inpan, ie oalmotzaquaz. In jnpan muchioa, yn, aço cana tepetzalan, atlauhitic, ixtlaoatl itic, quauhnepantla, quauhioacatla, quauhitic, quaujtl itic: auh intla puchteca, oxtomeca, nenemjnj: iuhquj inpan omochiuh, in jnpan ovevetzcac oactli: qujtoaia. Aço, ie itla, coemonamjctizque: aço ie ontlaatoctizque: anoço ie acame, tlaveliloque, inmac ie ommaqujzque, ichtecque, tetlaçujcujlique, tetlatlaçaltique, tetlanamoelique, inmac ie ontlatlaçazque, qujntlacujcujlizque, qujntlacencujlizque, qujntlatlaçaltizque, qujntlanamoelizque: anoço cana ceme, ic onquauhtenue-

1. Cf. Edward Seler: Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis G. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. IV, p. 48; he mentions that the bird was thought an evil omen in travelling merchants.

2. Probably idiomatic. More literally, ome vitz qujtoa could be rendered "in two ways came what it said."

3. Quauhnepantla. Alonso de Molina, in Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880), translates the term as either woods or desert.

X 787 825 484

who had escaped from their hands, who pilfered, plundered, and robbed, would now wrest goods from their hands, and plunder, strip, sack, and rob them. Or somewhere, some of them might now faint and collapse, to be cast aside. Or they would be eaten by wild animals—the fare of brutes; they would become the game of wild beasts. Or somewhere they would be encircled by, and encounter, war.

tzinque, ie onvetzinque, ie onmomaisujtque: aoez, ie onteqquancoalcque, tequitlaqualtin, tequanjme istlaqualhoan, ie ommuchioazque: anoçe, cana inpan ie oalmotzaquaz iaeiotl: ie conmonamjctiaque.

X 787 484

When this was so, he who was leader, who went commissioned leader, who proceeded as principal there along the road, then began to encourage them. He greeted his younger brethren with tears, his charges who were being taught. Along the way he instructed them and said to them:

In jquac yn, in aqujn tachcauh, in tachcauhchiuhtiuh, in tachcauh icatiuh vtlipan, vncan peoa, in qujmelaquaoa, in qujnchoqujztlapaloa, iteiccaoan, itlahoapavalvan: in vtli ipan qujmixtlamachtia, qujmjlvia.

"Be of good cheer, O my sons, O my younger brothers. Of what profit is it that we are afflicted? Let no one be sad or heavy of heart. In truth for this we came: we came to die; so went our hearts heavy and foreboding. Thus we went from and left our homes and the houses of others:[4] our aunts, our uncles, our nephews, our elder sisters. For this reason they shed tears for us; they poured out upon us their weeping, their sorrow, that perhaps here, somewhere, on the desert, on the plains, in the gorge, in the forest, in various places will lie scattered our bones and our hair; in many places our blood, our redness, will spread, poured out and slippery. For in truth this hath been our reward. Let no one feel womanish in heart. Yield completely to death; pray to our lord. Let none think of or brood over [our condition]; for only later shall we know of whatsoever things[5] we may strike against. Then, in the end, we may weep for ourselves.

Ximellaquauacan, nopilhoane, noteiccaoane, quennel titotolinja: macaiac tlaocuja, nentlamati in jiollo, ca nel ic tioallaque, in timjqujco: ca iuh oalietia, iuh qujoalmattia in tciollo: injc ticoalalcaujque, tiquallalotique in tonca, in teca: in tauj, in totla, in tomach, in toueltiuh: ca ie injc techchoqujli, injc topan qujpino, in ichoqujz, in jtlaocul: aço cana ajcan, iztlahoatl, atlauhtli itic, quavitl itic, cecemmantoz in tomjo: in tozzon, nonoqujuhtoz, aalacatoz in tezço, in totlapallo: ca nel otomaceoaltic, ma caiac qujciotlamachti in ijollo: xicmotlaquammacacan in mjqujztli, xicmotlatlauhtilican in totecujo: ma caiac tle itic qujnemjti, qujlnamjqujj: ma ça qujn jc ticmatizque, in çaço tle itech titotzotzonativi: vncan ic ommaian, tontochochoqujlizque:

"For truly, this is how we come giving honor[6] and luster to our lords, the merchants who lead, raising them to glory and lifting high their heads. Ere now they have gone knowing and marveling at such things. We are not then the first to discover and behold what will befall us. Strengthen your hearts, O my sons!"

ca nel ichoatl injc tiquinteiotico, tiqujmjtauhcaiotico, tiqujntonaleoaco, tiqujntzonteconacocujco intotechiuhcaoan, in puchteca, in jiaque: ca ieeppa iuh quimattivi, iuh qujmaujçotiuj, camo qujn tehoan iancujcan ie toconnextizque, ie toconjttazque, in tlein topan muchioaz: ximellaquaoacan, nopilhoane.

X 787 484 782

And if somewhere night fell, they gathered, joined, crowded, and assembled themselves somewhere at the foot of a tree or the opening of a gorge,

Auh intla cana oimpan ioac, cana quaujtl iztiotlan, anoço atlauhcamac, ommololoa, ommocemololoa, ommotepeuhtitlalia, monechicoa, qujcujtlalpia, quj-

4. Probably tonaz and aoz are to read tuaz and tuaz. In Bernardino de Sahagún, "Memoriales en 3 columnas," Historia de las cosas de Nueva España (Francisco del Paso y Troncoso, ed.; Madrid: Hauser y Menet, 1986), Vol. VII, p. 390, the phrase is ya tuaz, ya tuaz. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "quando parientes de nuestras madres."

5. "Memoriales en 3 columnas," p. 391, ahora he puesto dos. Insertar documentación, he puesto dos.

6. In loc. cit., te lo ciquimpuestos.

and bound and tied, fastened together, and placed on the ground, all their staves, which represented their god Yiacatecutli. Here, before him, they did penances, bled themselves, cut their ears, and drew straws through them; so they only yielded to whatsoever might befall them. But no one worried or speculated whether it might befall them as the white hooded hawk had foreboded to them.

And perhaps they quite escaped, [or] perchance nothing happened to them who were then terrified when the time of their fright had occurred. If nothing befell them, their hearts were therefore again a little lifted; they raised their heads and revived their spirits; for their fates were so established that fear should no longer be with them.

But the fearful ones, the younger brothers who were not of firm fortune, not of rugged day signs, when they learned of [the omen], went fearing it. No longer were they happy; they talked no more — no longer did they speak aloud; nowhere were their hearts content. Things only worsened as they traveled; they only went engraving on their minds whatever they imagined. No longer with calm, but vainly, did they a little way follow the land; rather, they thought that perchance soon they would somewhere come upon what in truth meant the omen which had occurred and by which they had been frightened.

It hath already been said, nevertheless, that no one knew whether, indeed, it would be verified, or would not be so. For its words were understood, since it spoke in two [ways], to be good and evil.

ercucujtlalpia, qujcemjlpia, qujcemmana in jntopil, in jpan qujxoaia in intecuh: Yiacatecutli. Vncan ixpan tlamaceoa, mjço, monacaztequj, tlacoqujxtia, ça qujmocemmacatoque, in tlein inpan, ie ommuchioaz: auh aocac ontlamati, aocac itlamatia, intla iuhquj inpan muchioa, in juhquj ic oqujntetzauj oactli. 787x 484● 782

Auh anoçe çan maquiça, acaço tle inpan muchioa: in vncan in nemauhtiaia, in jomaujzcujian omochiuhca. Intla ↗tle inpan omochiuh, ic oc ceppa achitzin, oalmoolizcalia: oalaquetza ommoquaahioujia: ic ommotonallalilia: injc intech oacca maujztli: 787x 484 auh in mauhcatlaca teteiccaoa, in amo tonalchicaoaque, in amo tonallapaliuj: ça ie in qujmattiuj, in qujmamattiuj: aocmo paquj, aocmo tlatna, aocmo naoati, aoccan aujz in jiollo: ça tlanauhtiuj, in nenemj, ça imjtic tlacujcujiotiuj, in tleinmach qujlnamiquj: aincmo iujian, in oc nen achi qujtoca tlalli: ça ie in qujmati, aço qujn cana in ie commonamjctizque, in tlein vel qujtoznequj, intetzauh omochiuh: injc omotetzaujçue.

Ie omjto, tel aiac qujmati, in aço vel neltiz: in acanoçomo, ca itlatol itech mocaquj: injc ome vitz qujtoa, qualli ioan amo qualli.

[p 156 is blank]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

in that condition, one very clean and swept and the other covered with newly-felled trees. They replied that it was done so that we should go by the cleared road which led to a city named Chalco, where the people would give us a good reception, for it belonged to their Prince Montezuma, and that they had cut the trees and closed up the other road to prevent our going by it, for there were bad passes on it, and it went somewhat round about before going to Mexico, and came out at another town which was not as large as Chalco. Then Cortés said that he wished to go by the blocked up road, and we began to ascend the mountain with the greatest caution, our allies moving aside the huge thick tree trunks, by which we had to pass, with great labour, and some of them still lie by the roadside to this very day. As we rose higher it began to snow and the snow caked on the ground. Then we descended the hill and went to sleep at a group of houses[1] which they build like inns or hostels where the Indian traders lodge, and we supped well, but the cold was intense, and we posted our watchmen, sentinels, and patrols and even sent out scouts. The next day we set out on our march, and, about the hour of high mass, arrived at a town which I have already said is called Tlamanalco,[2] where they received us well and where there was no scarcity of food. When the other towns [in the neighbourhood] heard of our arrival, people soon came from Chalco and joined with the people of Tlamanalco, and they came from Chimaloacan and Mecameca and from Acacingo[3] where the canoes are, for it is their port, and other small towns whose names I cannot now call to mind. All of them together brought a present of gold and two loads of mantles and eight Indian women and the gold was worth over one hundred

---

[1] Padre Rivera gives the name as Ithualco (Anales Mexicanos).
[2] Amecameca according to Cortés. [3] Ayotzingo.

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Astec NU7

131
491
487
503

VALLEY OF MEXICO

[p. XV]

Twenty-fourth Chapter. Here is told how the Spaniards and those of Tlaxcalla set out and fled from Mexico by night.

And after dark, when midnight came, thereupon came out the Spaniards, crowded together, and all of the men of Tlaxcalla. The Spaniards took the lead, and the Tlaxcallans followed behind, covering the rear, like their walls, their rear guard. They went carrying a wooden bridge, which they proceeded to lay across the canal over which they passed.[1]

At the time, it was drizzling; there was a fine sprinkle, a gentle spray, of rain. They crossed easily some of the canals, at Tecpantzinco, Tzapotlan, and Atenchicalco. But when they went to attain Mixcoatechialtitlan,[2] the fourth canal, then it was seen that they were leaving. A woman fetching water spied them, whereupon she cried out and said: "Mexicans! Come here quickly! Already they leave! Your foes are already slinking away!" Then also a man cried out from the top of the [pyramid] temple of Uitzilopochtli. His cries spread well out over the people; everyone heard him. He said: "O chieftains, O Mexicans! Your foes are already setting out! Hasten here by war boat and along the roads!"

And when it was heard, then there was an outcry. On this, the war boatmen broke forth. They rushed; they plied the poles furiously; the boats struck and bumped one another. They came to [a place called] Mictlantonco Macuilcuitlapilco.[3] And from two sides the war boats calme upon them. They pressed upon them, the war boats of those of Tenochtitlan and the war boats of those of Tlatilulco. And a number went afoot, direct to Nonoalco, making their way toward Tlacopan, intending to cut off their advance.

Injc cerapoalli onnavi Capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Españoles yoan in tlaxcalteca qujzque, choloque in mexico ioaltica. 726

Auh in ovaliovac in oncic ioalnepantla, njmã ie ic qujça in Españoles: ommotenque, yoan in ie iaqujch tlaxcaltecatl: in españoles iacattivi, auh in tlaxcalteca tlatoqujlitivi, tlatzinpachotivi, iuhqujnma intenanoan, intzacujlhoan muchiuhtc:, qujvicatiaque quauhtlapechtli contecatiaque in acaloco in jpan ompanotiaque: [312] in jquac in aoachqujauhtimanj, aoachcretzeliuhtimanj, aoachpixauhtimanj, oc cequj in vel companavique acalotli Tecpantzinco, Tzaputla Atenchicalco. Auh in oncito mjxcoa mjxcoatechialtitlã injc nauhcan acaloco: ie vncan ittoque, in ie qujça: ce atlacujc civatl, in qujmjttac: njman ie ic tzatzi: qujto. Mexica, xioalnenemjcan, ie qujça, ie navalqujça in amoiaovan: njmã no ce tlacatl tzatzic in jcpac vitzilobuchtli vel tepan motecac in jtzatziliz, iaqujch tlacatl qujcac: qujto. Tiacavane, mexicae, ie onqujça in amoiauoan, vallatotoca in acalchimalli, yoan in vtli ipan. 487 [203]

Auh in ocacoc: njmã ie ic tlacaoaca: njmã ie ic tlatzomonj in acalchimaleque, totoca, tequjtlanelon, macalhujtequj, macalhujtectivi, tlamattivi mjctlantonco, macujlcujtlapilco: auh in acalchimalli, necoc in impan valmonamjc, in impan valmopic, in tenuchca imacalchimal, yoã in tlatilulca imacalchimal: yoan cequjntin icxipã iaque, nonoalco tlamelauhque, tlacupampa iztiaque, qujniacatzacujliaquja: 726

1. The Aztec would permit reading "bridge" and "canals."—According to all other sources, they carried only one wooden bridge, which was seized in the first canal (that is, at Tecpantzinco, before the present site of the Post Office) and could not be used for the rest of the canals (personal communication, Rafael Garda Granados).

2. Mixcoa is repeated in the Nahuatl MS.

These places were all at canals near the main temple square, on the road to Tlacopan. Cano (op. cit.) says of Atenchicalco and Mixcoatechialtitlan that they were on the Calzada de Tacuba between S. Juan de Letrán and Guerrero; Tzapotlan was on the same calzada in the barrio of Tzapotlan.

3. The corresponding Spanish text refers to "un lugar que se llamaua mictlantonco, macuilcuitlapilco"; Cano (op. cit.) mentions a Macuilcuitlapilco, "que permanece a Sn. Pablo y monumento Relaguia (49-187)."

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Aztec NU7

Thirty-seventh Chapter. Here is told how the Mexicans laboriously uncovered by night the waterways which the Spaniards had filled in by day.

Injc cempoalli on caxtolli omume capitulo: vncan mjtoa in ꝗnin Mexica in cohuvitiaia in qujtlatlapoaia in atl in ioaltica, in vncan catzupaia Españoles in tlaca. 726

And our foes went filling in the canals. And when the enemies had gone, once more [the Mexicans] took up the rocks with which the foes had filled them in. When dawn broke, once again it was even as it had been the day before. Often they so did, where [the Spaniards] had filled in the canals—immediately taking up the stones, the wood, etc.—so that by a little the war was lengthened, and gradually [the Spaniards] broke through [the Mexicans]. For these canals were looked upon as great walls.

Auh in toiaovan, catzuptivitze in acalotli. Auh in onoiaque in iavme ie no ceppa qujqujxtia ín tetl injc otlaxtzupca iaume: in otlatvic ie no ceppa iuhcan, in juhcan catca iallhqa: muchipa iuh qujchiuhque in vncá catzupaia in acalotli, in çan njmá qujvalqujxtiaia in tetl in quavitl. &c. ic achi vecaoac in iauiotl, aiaxcan in qujnvalpetlaque: auh in acalotli in, iuhq'n vei tenamjtl ipan momatia. 726 487

And [as for] the Spaniards and all the Tlaxcallans, their common charge was the road, the highway to Yacacolco, and to Tlilhuacan and Atezcapan.[1] And Yacacolco, Cuepopan,[2] Apeuazcan,[3] and Atlicuhyan, with which went Ayacac[4] and Totecco, were the charge of those of Xochimilco, Cuitlauac, Mizquic, Colhuacan, and Itztapalapan. It became their common task to give battle in boats.

Auh in Españoles yoan in jxqujch tlaxcaltecatl incentequjuh in vtli, in vei vtli iacacolco, yoan in tlilhoacan in atezcapan. Auh in iacaculco, in cuepopan, in apeouzcan, yoan atlicuhian injc iaticac aiaxac, in totecco intequjuh muchiuh in Xuchmjlcatl, in cujtlaoacatl, in mjzqujcatl, in culhoacatl in Jtztapalapanecatl, incẽtequjuh muchiuh in acaltica in tlaiecoaia.

And the boatmen and archers of Atlicuhyan and Ayacac girded themselves to come to grips with them. They lost no time. In truth, they were evenly matched. [It was] as if it rained barbed spears; like serpents, arrows streamed and poured. When they hurled them with spear throwers, it was as if a deep yellow mass spread over the foes.

Auh in atlicuhca, yoan aiacacalque in acaleque, in tlamjnanj, vel muchicaoa injc quinnamjquj, amo moquequetza, vel moneneuhcavia, iuhqujn tzetzelivi in tlatzontectli, iuhqujn coatl motlamjna mopiaça in mjtl: in jquac atlatica qujtlaça iuhqujn cozpul ommoteca in impan iaume: 726 [411]

And a number of chieftains—the Tezcacoacatl Xiuhcoacatzin, the Tepanecatl Quaquatzin,[5] Uitzitzin, and Itzcuintzin, people of Yacacolco, whose houses were situated there, neither tarried, nor abandoned their beloved women and children. With difficulty they went to bring them safely to a house by another canal which was in Amaxac.

auh in cequjntin tlacaoan in Xiuhcoacatzin quaquatzi, Tezcacoacatl, Tecpanecatl, Vizzitzin, Itzcujntzin: in iacaculca vel ipan mantivia in calli: amo moquequetzaia, amo qujxiccavaia in Cioatzintli, in piltzintli, aiaxcan in qujmõcaltechpachoto in oc ce acalotli itech in amaxac icac.

1. A barrio fronting that of Tlaxcallans: an area now bounded N. by Calle de Montezuma; E., Comonfort; S., Orquesta; and W., the Miale in Tlalnepantla and the water's edge.—Cline, op. cit. R. H. Barlow ("Los años omitidos," p. 42) locates it "cerca las calles de Jaime Nunó y de Gonzáles Bocanegra."

2. Cuepopan or Tlaxpanhuacan, an area bounded now, N., by Calle de Montezuma; E., Gabriel Leyva; S., Pedro Moreno (once a canal); and Lerdo.—Cline, op. cit.

3. To the east of the Plaza de Tlaxcala.—Ibid.

4. Atlicuhyan and Ayacac were probably in the barrio of Tolpanahuacán.—Ibid.

5. Ibid., op. cit., p. 108, groups the names and cities as given here.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

THE ROAD TO XOCONOCHCO

The tribute collectors of the Empire reached Xoconochco—which was 487 so far away from the heartland that it paid only twice a year, as the month symbols on the Matricula page attest—by the same route that modern land travelers follow, that is, south and east of the Nudo de Cempoaltepetl. Ahuizotl, at the end of the fifteenth century, invaded certain key places, which linked this province thereafter with Tochtepec. The activities of Moctezuma II filled certain gaps without altering our general picture for this area.

The main centers occupied by the Mexicans to assure the route across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec and down the Sierra Madre to Soconusco are indicated on the map between provinces 29 and 30, Tochtepec and Xoconochco. The list, which might be expanded, has been formed from the conquest lists of the Mexican rulers.[a]

The reason why these towns do not appear in the Matricula as comprising a separate tributary province is debatable. They may have been depicted on some page now lost, or the Mexicans may have demanded from the towns only the right of transit.

[a] Barlow, "Materiales para una cronología del Imperio de los Mexicanos," RMEA (1946), 8: 207–215.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

assistants at his disposal — runners — who not only accompanied 648 the convoys of tribute, but through whom a regular communication 651 might be kept up with the Mexican tribe. On the strength of this, 202 it has been fancied that not only a road-system analogous to that of the Romans, pervaded the entire area of actual Mexico, but that a perfect postal system was in full and successful operation. In regard to the first assumption we beg to refer to the letter of the Licentiate Salmeron, dated Mexico, 13th August, 1531, and directed to the council of the Indies:[303] "I believe that all 487 through the land roads should be opened which would be prac- 202 ticable both for beasts of burthen and for carts. It would greatly 491 increase the security of our possessions. Since the Indians had no beasts of burthen, their paths were straight and narrow, and so direct that they would not deviate an inch in order to avoid climbing the most rugged mountains." Over these Indian trails, where occasionally heavy culverts of stone, filled up gaps and spanned narrow ravines,[304] the tribute was forwarded to the pueblo of Tenuchtitlan, and the necessary runners moved swiftly, to and fro, as occasion required. But there was no regularity in this intercourse. There were no relays, and the Indian messenger relied, in order to traverse the wide belts of waste lands between tribe and tribe, upon his own endurance and upon the bag of provisions which he carried along.[305]

On solemn occasions, the convoys of tribute were not merely 651 escorted by runners and watchmen detailed for that purpose by 489 the "calpixqui," but that officer, himself, accompanied them and entered Mexico-Tenuchtitlan at their head.[306] The articles were carried to the "Tecpan" and then the duties of the "chief of men" in regard to tribute in general ended. For this tribute was not due to him, but to the tribe, and it was the tribal representa-

[303] "Recueil Général de Pièces sur le Mexique" (H. Ternaux-Compans, pp. 191 and 192).

[304] The collection of Lord Kingsborough has, among others, the pictures of so-called bridges. Anyone can see at a glance that they are mere heavy culverts. Mr. H. H. Bancroft ("Native Races," Vol. IV, p. 828) figures a bridge at Huejutla, but his argument in favor of its being an aboriginal construction appears to me very unsatisfactory. The masonry covering the mound at Metlaltoyuca shows, according to his own words (Id. p. 481): "there is no evidence that the arch was intentionally self-supporting."

[305] We must always discriminate between delegates, entrusted with certain business to transact, and therefore also clothed with a certain authority, and mere runners. ("Correos"—"Ychcha (tilantli" Molina I, p. 30, from "Ichcha"—quick and "tilantli"—he who goes on an errand, II, pp. 32 and 113). The latter are very well described by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, pp. 535 and 536), although he presupposes relays at regular intervals. This was not the case, as the march of Cortés amply proves.

[306] "Codice Ramírez" (p. 62).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

assistants at his disposal — runners — who not only accompanied the convoys of tribute, but through whom a regular communication might be kept up with the Mexican tribe. On the strength of this, it has been fancied that not only a road-system analogous to that of the Romans, pervaded the entire area of actual Mexico, but that a perfect postal system was in full and successful operation. In regard to the first assumption we beg to refer to the letter of the Licentiate Salmeron, dated Mexico, 13th August, 1531, and directed to the council of the Indies:[303] "I believe that all through the land roads should be opened which would be practicable both for beasts of burthen and for carts. It would greatly increase the security of our possessions. Since the Indians had no beasts of burthen, their paths were straight and narrow, and so direct that they would not deviate an inch in order to avoid climbing the most rugged mountains." Over these Indian trails, where occasionally heavy culverts of stone, filled up gaps and spanned narrow ravines,[304] the tribute was forwarded to the pueblo of Tenuchtitlan, and the necessary runners moved swiftly, to and fro, as occasion required. But there was no regularity in this intercourse. There were no relays, and the Indian messenger relied, in order to traverse the wide belts of waste lands between tribe and tribe, upon his own endurance and upon the bag of provisions which he carried along.[305]

On solemn occasions, the convoys of tribute were not merely escorted by runners and watchmen detailed for that purpose by the "calpixqui," but that officer, himself, accompanied them and entered Mexico-Tenuchtitlan at their head.[306] The articles were carried to the "Tecpan" and then the duties of the "chief of men" in regard to tribute in general ended. For this tribute was not due to him, but to the tribe, and it was the tribal representa-

[303] "Second Bundl de Pièces sur le Mexique" (H. Ternaux-Compans, pp. 191 and 192).

[304] The collection of Lord Kingsborough has, among others, the pictures of so-called bridges. Anyone can see at a glance that they are mere heavy culverts. Mr. H. H. Bancroft ("Native Races," Vol. IV, p. 806) figures a bridge at Huejutla, but his argument in favor of its being an aboriginal construction appears to me very unsatisfactory. The masonry covering the mound at Medialtoyuca shows, according to his own words (Id. p. 461): "there is no evidence that the arch was intentionally self-supporting."

[305] We must always discriminate between delegates, entrusted with certain business to transact, and therefore also clothed with a certain authority, and mere runners. ("Correos"—? Tolchen (Ixtaxtl" Molina I, p. 38, from "Ixtuhca"—quick and "ixtaxtl"—he who goes on an errand, II, pp. 38 and 112). The latter are very well described by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, pp. 335 and 336), although he presupposes relays at regular intervals. This was not the case, as the march of Cortés amply proves.

[306] "Codex Ramirez" (p. 62).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

651 tives to whom it was delivered.[307] If the gathering of tribute 489 thus required a set of officers necessarily placed beneath the orders of the military chieftain, another set was needed for its preservation and judicious distribution. If the one consisted of stewards dwelling outside of the pueblo, the other was composed exclusively of home-stewards. Every convoy was therefore "consigned" to a proper officer, whose duty it was to receive it and then abide the directions of his superiors as to its apportionment.[308]

[643] We have already mentioned the "Cihuacohuatl" as the officer, 647 who was responsible to the council for the administration of the 651 stores and the proper distribution thereof, though he had beneath him another officer, to whom this duty was really and practically assigned. Torquemada and those who have followed his school, call this subordinate "great crop-gatherer," "Huey calpixqui,"[309] whereas Tezozomoc and Durán apply to him the title of "man of the house of chests" "Petlacalcatl"[310] In both cases, however, he is represented as "chief steward," to whom all the others should render account. He superintended the distribution of the tribute,[311] and to him the kins came for their share—perhaps the largest of all. Unfortunately, we are unable to establish the principles upon which the division took place. All that we know is, that the tribe received one portion and the kins or "calpulli" the other, and that the "man of the house of chests," under whose eyes the distribution took place, afterwards looked to those stores, in particular, which were reserved for the tribe, i. e.: for the demands of the tribal government.[312] Therefore, the "man of the house of chests" frequently appears to be under the direct orders of the "chief of men," who could apply to him, more particularly, for such articles as were required for the exercise of tribal hospitality including gifts, and for displays of finery on particularly solemn occasions.[313] It is true that, as we have elsewhere shown, particular tracts of land, "tecpan-tlalli," were reserved among tributary tribes for the demands of the official [307] Tezozomoc (Cap. X, p. 18). Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 186).

[308] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 81): "A los dichos pueblos fué un mayordomo para cobrar este tributo, como para todos los demas pueblos, que en Mexico havia un mayordomo, y otro en el mismo pueblo para mayor sugecion y vasallage."

[309] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. VI, pp. 344, 345), copied by Vetancurt (Parte IIa, Trat. IIº, cap. Iº, pp. 270 and 271), Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. X, pp. 468 and 469).

[310] Also by the Codex Mendoza (Interpretation to plates XX, XXI, etc.).

[311] See note 309, also Tezozomoc and Durán.

[312] This is so frequently mentioned by Tezozomoc, that I forbear detailed quotations.

[313] Tezozomoc ("Crónica Mexicana," sundry places, too numerous to refer to).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The streets of Tenochtitlan were the canals bordered by 363 footpaths, and frequent bridges allowed easy access to all parts of the town. Three great causeways led north, west [491] and south to the mainland, touching it respectively at Tepeyac, now Guadalupe, Tlacopan, now Tacuba, and Coyoacan. Canals paralleled these main roadways where they entered the city proper, following them as far as their terminus at the main plaza. Two aqueducts also joined the city to the 312 mainland. The one to Chapultepec seems to have been constructed exclusively to carry water and had two channels, so that when one was being cleaned or repaired the other could remain in use. The Coyoacan aqueduct, built later by Ahuitzotl, may well have followed the great southern causeway. The problem of sanitation must have been serious, but 364 boats were tied up at strategic points for public use, and when [241 filled their contents were sold to fertilize the fields. Pottery 432] vessels were kept in the houses to preserve urine, which the [415 Aztecs used as a mordant in dyeing cloth. Hence sunlight 386] and these simple methods for getting fresh water and disposing of offal kept down the pestilence that beset the city in Spanish times when the ancient methods of sanitation were abandoned.[18]

A city so advantageously situated had no need of fortifi- 712 cations, and formal military architecture was rare. The tem- 212 ples, which dominated the city, were natural strong points; indeed, the hieroglyph for the capture of a town was the burning of a temple, an indignity to which no people would submit unless driven from this last rallying point.

The temples had stone or rubble walls surmounted by a 346 high roof, the construction of which consisted of a cribwork of logs, either thatched with straw or covered with plaster.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

ing on such wonderful sights," wrote Bernal Diaz, "we did not know what to say or whether what appeared before us was real, for on one side in the land there were great cities and in the lake ever so many more, and the lake itself was crowded with canoes, and in the causeway were many bridges at intervals, and in front of us stood the great City of Mexico, and we . . . we did not even number four hundred soldiers."[2]

Although socially and governmentally Tenochtitlan was distinctly an American Indian tribal town, outwardly it appeared the capital city of an empire. A bird's-eye view would have revealed an oval island connected with the mainland by three causeways which converged at the center of the city. These roads were cut by waterways over which removable bridges extended. The edges of the island were fringed by the green of the "floating gardens," while at the center the shiny white of the houses predominated, and the verdure was reduced to tiny green squares in the patio gardens. Thrust above the quadrate masses of the roof tops loomed the various clan temples, each set on its platform in the form of a truncated pyramid. The city had few streets or open spaces but was gridded with canals crossed by portable bridges. The two principal plazas were those of the Temple of Tlaltelolco and of the religious center of Tenochtitlan proper, open spaces which gave a welcome relief from the pyramids and official palaces clustered about them. There must have been a curiously living quality about this grouping, the temples seeming to ride like horsemen among the serrated ranks of the houses. (See Plate 37, top.)

Were a visitor to traverse Tenochtitlan from south to north, he would have been struck by the rich variety of sights.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 ture writing to see that each subject town had fulfilled its 644 quota or else were calculating the share that should be turned over to the various clan stewards. Another patio presented a more animated scene. Here acrobats were practicing their feats and poor, warped dwarfs were composing grosser contortions to win a chiefly smile. In another set of buildings [367] was housed the zoo, where serpents undulated sluggishly and where, from behind wooden bars, peered the greedy, yellow eyes of jaguars and ocelots. In a side room a human arm projecting from a basket of raw meat showed how the bodies of some sacrificial victims were utilized.

491 The highway to Tlaltelolco extended north from this great 517 plaza, which even today is the center of the city. This wide
174 road, with a canal beside it, was filled with the same indecisive multitude that thronged the southern artery. The setting sun had brought people out on their roof tops. Some leaned over parapets to watch the crowd below, while idlers, squatting in a shaded bit of the street, took equal interest in the slow movements of the householders above them.

868 A path and a canal, debouching into the main avenue, led 174 to a small square, in the center of which loomed a pyramid. From the patio of an adjacent building shrill cries arose and the dull clash of wooden instruments. Within, a number of boys were receiving instruction in the manual of arms. Each equipped with a small buckler and a flat wooden club, they learned the art of cut and parry under the scornful eye of a warrior. They dealt and received hard blows, but the clubs were not toothed with wedges of obsidian, the volcanic glass that made hand-to-hand combat so vicious in war. Another group was practicing with the atl-atl, or throwing stick. The marksman laid his spear along a narrow wooden trough with

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Astec NU7

131
471
487
503

VALLEY OF MEXICO

[p. XV]

131
491
361
363

TENOCHTITLAN-TLATILULCO

[p. xvii]

[p. xviii is blank]

726 balls. Thereupon they shot iron bolts; but only one was pierced, in the forehead, wherefore he then died. Castañeda was the one who shot the arrow. And the chieftains moved in against him and they drove [the Spaniards] into the water, stoning them. And Castañeda there would have perished, but he clung to the boat and thus they carried him to Xocotitlan.

[349] And one boat lay at Tetenanteputzco, where the walls curve.[7] And another boat lay there at Totecco,[8] where the road goes direct to Tepetzinco.[9]
[491] It only lay on guard in the water, and at nightfall they took it [away].

And some days thereafter the Spaniards once again resolved [to war upon] us.[10] Then they came, [443] and chose the Quauecatitlan[11] road which led direct 317] to the salt market. But there on the Quauecatitlan road, they could not spread out. So all those of Tlaxcalla, Acolhuacan, and Chalco thereupon filled in the canals.[12] And on the road where they could not spread out, they cast adobes and roof beams; door lintels, pillars, and round logs were set in; they threw bundles of reeds into the water. And when it was filled in, then the Spaniards, disposed [in battle order], very slowly proceeded: a cotton banner led them; they went blowing trumpets and beating drums. And behind them went in position all the Tlaxcallans, and indeed all those of [other allied] [533] cities. Those of Tlaxcalla became very brave; they shook their heads, beat their chests, and sang. The Mexicans also sang. There was chanting on both sides. They intoned whatsoever they remembered. Thus they were able to animate themselves.

And as they reached Tlalhuacan,[13] all the chieftains were crouched; they stretched themselves out very flat, and were well hidden. They hid their ça ce inmjnoc ixquac, njman ic momjqujli: ichoatl in valtemj in castañeda. Auh in tiacaoã itech ietiquizque, atlan quinnemjtique, quinteteepachoque: auh vncã mjquizquja in castañeda: auh ça acaltitech pilcatia injc quivicaque xocotitlan.

Auh centetl acalli onoca tetenanteputzcõ, vncã in colivi tetenamjtl: auh in oc centetl acalli vmpa onoca in totecco: in jpan vtli tlamelaoa Tepetzinco, çan tlatlapixtoca in atlan. Auh in ie ioa quivica.

Auh iquezquilhujoc ie no ceppa techcentlatalhuj in Españoles: nec vitze, ie quioalmottilique in quauecatitlan vtli, in oallamelauhticac iztanamacoian. Auh in vncan in quauecatitlan in vtli ca moiauhque. Auh in jxquich tlaxcaltecatl, in aculhoacatl, in chalcatl: njman ie ic catzupa in acalutli: yoan in oca moiauhque vtli: contlaça in xamjtl, yoan in calquavitl, in tecoc in tlaixquatl in tlaquetzalli, in quãmjmjlli, in acatl quicujtlalpia in contepeoa atlan. Auh in jquac in omotzop nec valmotema in Españoles, cencã ivian in iativitze, quiniacana in quachpanjtl, tlapiztivitze, tlatzotzontivitze. Auh imjcampa onotivitze in ie ixquich tlaxcaltecatl, yoan in ie ixquich altepeoa, cenca muchicava moquaquacuecuechoa, meztzotzona in tlaxcaltecã, cujca, no cujca in mexica necoccampa cujco, queoa in çaço tlein quijnamjquj, ic mellaquaoa muchiua.

Auh in oacico tlalhoacan in tiacaoã vel nepacholo, vel mopachoa vel netlatilo, qujtetetzontlaliaia, quj-chjxtoque in quemman tecvitilos, in quenman quj-

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "cerca de aquella yglesia que se llama chico hacia." Cano (op. cit.) places it in la Calzada de Peralvillo, hacia el Tepeyac-Ixhtlahuaca.

8. "Cerca de la Cruz, pueblo Amacatitlán." — Cano, op. cit.

9. El Pedido de los Indios — east of the center of Tenochtitlan, in the lake. However, Kapp and Barlow, op. cit., p. 46 and map, locate it as a hill in the southwestern part of Tlatelolco.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "determinaron entre sí los españoles de darnos guerra por allí."

11. Quauhcatitlan acquedil — "calle que iba derecho de Moyadoc al Mercado de la Sal. . . . prolongaba hacia encontrar el Albarradón y probablemente correspondía con la Calzada de Moyadoc, Mercado, Almacenes, Carnaval y Ribera." — Cano, op. cit. Kapp and Barlow, op. cit., show it in their map as in the northeast part of the city.

12. In Ramírez, loc. cit., the version is somewhat different from what appears in either the Spanish or Nahuatl text of the Florentine Codex: "por causa de los españoles que los indios habían muerto en su presencia, tornaron á proponer guerra de nuevo, haciendo primeramente adelantar que la guerra no había de cesar hasta que ganaran la muerte de sus hermanos los españoles, y no quedase hombre delles que no muriese en sus manos: de ahí adelante comenzaron á cegar todas las acequias y canales de canoas por donde pudiesen entrar los canoas donde los bergantines no podían entrar, y así comenzaron á derribar casas, y allanar todas las acequias."

13. Corresponding Spanish text: "en barrio que se llama Tlilmacac que es agora casas mejor" (San Martín).

strong voice." Then they spoke to a seasoned warrior named Tlamayocatl, and then Mayeuatzin commanded and said to him: "Go forth and tell those of Cuitlauac: 'O men of Cuitlauac! Your ruler Mayeuatzin hath sent me! Behold him! There he standeth upon the small pyramid!'" And when those of Cuitlauac had heard him, they answered him: "Nay, ye have slain him!" Then he said unto them: "Nay, he is not dead! Look well upon him! There he now standeth!" And [Mayeuatzin] spoke forth: "I have not died. Let nothing injure my lip rod, my green stone [jewels], my devices!" And when he ended his speech, then a cry arose [among the Indians who were with Spaniards], whereupon there was fighting. Then they pursued [the Mexicans]. But in the market place, there at Copalnamacoyan, the battle, gradually abating, lasted long.

And once our foes of Tliliuhquitepec and Atetemollan* together conferred and took note of a narrow road which led between house clusters. It was the path of a nobleman named Tlacatzin. And when our foes had already entered, then the chieftains drove them forth. And a man, a chieftain and a seasoned warrior named Tlapanecatl, whose home was at Atencapan, then engaged them. Our foes then quickly seized him. And the [Mexican] chieftains then rushed and went shooting arrows at our foes. Then they made [the enemy] loose the captured chieftain. But our foes then smote him in the calf of the leg, there where the leg is bled. Then [the enemy] departed; the fighting ceased.

itoca: Tlamaiocatl: nec quimoteia in Maichoatzin: 726 quilhuja. Tla zoniauh, tla xiquimonjlhuj in cujtlaoaca: Cujtlavcac, oncchoaliva in amoclatocauh in Maichoatzin, xocoujttacan nechca moquetzticac mumuoo. Auh in oqujcacque cujtlaoaca, quivalitoque. Ca amo, ca oanquijnjctique: nec quimonjlhuja. Ca amo mjquj, vel, xocottacan ic in nechca icac: yoan quivalitoa, ca amo njmjquj, ma itla nechitlacalhujti, in notençac, in nochaichiuh, in notlaviz: auh in ocontzonequjxti in jchtol, nec tlacaoaca: njman ic ic necaliua, nec quivalitoca. Auh in tiazquizco in vmpa copalnamacoian, aiazcan in mocauh, vncā vecaoac: [293] in iauiotl.

Auh ceppa tecentlatalhujque in toiaovan in Tlil- [491] iuhquitepeca, atetemoleque: ic quimottilique in vpitzactli in calla quiztica, yiovi catca ce palli: itoca, Tlacatzin. Auh in ic calaquj in toiaovan: nec quintoca in tiiacaoan. Auh ce tlacatl tiacauh, tequjoa, itoca Tlapanecatl, atencapā ichan catca: nec quinoalnamjquj, njmā ic quicujtivetzque in toiaovan: auh in tiiacavan, njmā ipan onmotepeuhque, quinmjntivi in toiaovan: njmā ic contetlaçaltito in cacica tiiacauh. Auh in toiaovan nec quivalmetzvicque: vncā in jneccoaian: njman ic iaque, ômocacauhque in mjcali.

* Corresponding Spanish text: "se reunieron los ancianos de Atenchi."

[p. 108 is blank]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

[632] Anecuilco (near Çeuctla) is added on the authority of the sixteenth-[114] century relación of this and of the following town. (These two are 131 included in the province of Çihuatlan somewhat arbitrarily, in the interest of symmetrical disposition.) Anecuilco and its companion Citlaltomaua "tributaban al rrey que era de Mexico que se llamava Monteçuma."[5] It lay behind the high mountains east of Citlaltomaua [491] (whose location is considered below), eight leagues of "muy mal
[133] camino ... de muchas bueltas" distant.[6] The river upon which it was situated sprang from the sierra of Tlacatepetl, taking the name of Xiquipila in its lower reaches from another pueblo on its banks, and emptying in the southeast into the "playa y boca que dizen de Nagualan." A tributary of this river was called the Nexatl.[7] All of these names save that of the sierra Tlacatepetl have disappeared. However, since Citlaltomaua lay on the Río Coyuca (as appears below), this other river springing from the Tlacatepetl must be the present Río Papagallo. The Río Sabana, which is the only other possibility, has a source nearer the coast than the sierra mentioned. The rest of Anecuilco's location depends on that of Citlaltomaua.

Apancalecan may be either the Atenchancaleca of Gaspar Xuarez,[8] two leagues from "the Villa" (Zacatula), or Echancaleca (No. 863 of the same document), one league from the Villa. (All three names [103] mean "Place of the Owners of Houses by the Sea.") In any case, like [101] Zacatula, it appears too far east on the accompanying map.

Citlaltomaua was eight leagues from the sea, seven from Coyuca [491] de Benítez (d) and seventeen "leguas de muy malos caminos de Acapulco, azia el sueste." It lay to the south of the high and broken mountains of the Tlacatepetl. Two leagues below it a river was formed which emptied "en la mar del sur en la playa que dizen de Coyuca." An estancia of Citlaltomaua, the only one of these names (except for the sierra of Tlacatepetl) which can be found today, lay about "una legua hazia el nascimiento del sol." This was called Tepetiztla (e)[9] and appears as "Tepetixtla" on some maps today, others giving it as "Tepetlixpa."

[5] PNE, 6: 158.
[6] PNE, 6: 165.
[7] PNE, 6: 160.
[8] PNE, 1: No. 854.
[9] PNE, 6: 155–159.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER LXXXVI.

How we began our march to the City of Mexico, what happened to us on the road, and what Montezuma sent to say.

WE set out from Cholula in carefully arranged order as we were always accustomed to do, the mounted scouts examining the country ahead and some very active foot soldiers accompanying them, so that should they come to any bad ground or other obstacle they might help one another; then [followed] our cannon all ready for action, and the musketeers and crossbowmen, and then the horsemen in parties of three so that they could help one another, then all the rest of the soldiers in good order. I don't know why I call all this so clearly to mind, but when writing about war, one feels obliged to make mention of it, so that it can be seen how we marched always "with chin on shoulder." Marching in this way we arrived that day at some ranchos standing on a hill about four leagues from Cholula, they are peopled from Huexotzingo, and I think they are called the Ranchos of Yscalpan. To this place soon came the Caciques and priests of the towns of Huexotzingo which were near by, and they were friends and allies of the Tlaxcalans, and there also came people from other small towns, which stand on the slopes of the volcano near their boundary line, who brought us food and a present of golden jewels of small value, and they asked Cortés to accept them and not consider the insignificance of the gift but the good will with which it was offered. They advised him not to go to Mexico as it was a very strong city and full of warriors, where we should run much risk. They also told us to look out, if we had decided upon going, for when we had ascended to the pass we should find two broad roads, one leading to a town named Chalco, and the other to another town called Tlamanalco,[1] both of them subject to Mexico; that the one road was well swept and cleared so as to induce us to take it, and that the other road had been closed up and many great pines and other trees had been cut down so that horses could not use it and we could not march along it. That a little way down the side of the mountain along the road that had been cleared, the Mexicans (thinking that we must take that road) had cut away a piece of the hill side, and had made ditches and barricades, and that certain squadrons of Mexicans had waited at that point so as to kill us there. So they counselled us not to go by the road which was clear, but by the road where the felled trees were, saying that they would send many men with us to clear it, and as the Tlascalans were also with us, between them they would clear away the trees, and they said that that road came out at Tlamanalco.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

Cortés received their present very kindly and told them that he thanked them for the counsel they had given him, and that with God's help he would not abandon his march but would go the way they advised him. Early the next morning we began our march, and it was nearly midday when we arrived at the ridge of the mountain where we found the roads just as the people of Huexotzingo had said. There we rested a little and began to think about the Mexican squadrons on the intrenched hillside where the earth works were that they had told us about.

Then Cortés ordered the Ambassadors of the great Montezuma who came in our company to be summoned, and he asked them how it was that those two roads were [1] Bernal Díaz seems to have gone wrong in his topography. At the gap between the two volcanoes the roads probably divided, one (to the right) going by way of Tlamanalco to Chalco, the other (more direct) going to Amecameca. The Spaniards probably took the more direct (the blocked up) road to Amecameca, and did not go to Tlamanalco at all. Cortés, in his second letter, says that he went to Amecameca, and does not mention Tlamanalco.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

assistants at his disposal — runners — who not only accompanied the convoys of tribute, but through whom a regular communication might be kept up with the Mexican tribe. On the strength of this, it has been fancied that not only a road-system analogous to that of the Romans, pervaded the entire area of actual Mexico, but that a perfect postal system was in full and successful operation. In regard to the first assumption we beg to refer to the letter of the Licentiate Salmeron, dated Mexico, 13th August, 1531, and directed to the council of the Indies:[303] "I believe that all through the land roads should be opened which would be practicable both for beasts of burthen and for carts. It would greatly increase the security of our possessions. Since the Indians had no beasts of burthen, their paths were straight and narrow, and so direct that they would not deviate an inch in order to avoid climbing the most rugged mountains." Over these Indian trails, where occasionally heavy culverts of stone, filled up gaps and spanned narrow ravines,[304] the tribute was forwarded to the pueblo of Tenuchtitlan, and the necessary runners moved swiftly, to and fro, as occasion required. But there was no regularity in this intercourse. There were no relays, and the Indian messenger relied, in order to traverse the wide belts of waste lands between tribe and tribe, upon his own endurance and upon the bag of provisions which he carried along.[305]

On solemn occasions, the convoys of tribute were not merely escorted by runners and watchmen detailed for that purpose by the "calpixqui," but that officer, himself, accompanied them and entered Mexico-Tenuchtitlan at their head.[306] The articles were carried to the "Tecpan" and then the duties of the "chief of men" in regard to tribute in general ended. For this tribute was not due to him, but to the tribe, and it was the tribal representa-

[303] "Second Rapport de Pinar sur le Mexique" (H. Ternaux-Compans, pp. 191 and 192).

[304] The collection of Lord Kingsborough has, among others, the pictures of so-called bridges. Anyone can see at a glance that they are more heavy culverts. Mr. H. H. Bancroft ("Native Races," Vol. IV, p. 522) figures a bridge at Huajutla, but his argument in favor of its being an aboriginal construction appears to me very unsatisfactory. The masonry covering the mound at Metlaltoyuca shows, according to his own words (Id. p. 462): "there is no evidence that the arch was intentionally self-supporting."

[305] We must always discriminate between delegates, entrusted with certain business to transact, and therefore also clothed with a certain authority, and mere runners. ("Correos"—"Tolchos tlitlantli" Molina I, p. 38, from "Iolchos"—quick and "tlitlantli"—he who goes on an errand, II, pp. 98 and 113). The latter are very well described by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, pp. 555 and 556), although he presupposes relays at regular intervals. This was not the case, as the march of Cortés amply proves.

[306] "Codex Ramírez" (p. 62).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

tions. The original inventors and innovators are lost in the 249 black obscurity of American history, but the fruit of their ingenuity plays an important part in our modern economy.

As opposed to this wealth of plants, the Aztecs were poor 231 in domesticated animals. They had several varieties of dog, one of which was bred for food, but they never used this [492] animal for transport as did Indians of our Northern plains. The turkey was their chief domesticated fowl, although [235] there is some evidence that they bred geese, ducks and quail also. In plantations of the nopal cactus they carefully tended [237] the cochineal bug for the rich crimson dye it yielded when crushed. A second insect, the maguey slug, still retains its 262 place as a delicacy of the Mexican table, served with another typically Aztec dish, guacamole,* a thick mixture of tomato, alligator pear and chile.

Hunting, when possible, produced food, but as early as 224
Upper Middle Culture times the deer were nearly all killed 222 off. The seasonal migrations of the birds, which still visit 226
the lakes of Mexico, offered a profusion of geese, ducks and 223 other wild fowl. Small fish, netted or speared with a trident, were sometimes consumed, and the eggs which a certain fly lays on the lakes were made into a paste still eaten in Mexican communities. The high functionaries, since they were 262 supported by the community, kept a much better table than 556
the poor, who lived meagerly off the produce of their own fields; the daily repast of Montezuma was described by the Spanish conquerors as the height of Lucullan luxury.[18]

Tools showed relatively little variation from Middle Cul- 412
ture to Aztec times. The coa, or digging stick, was the chief farming instrument, and the metate and mano even now re-

*Wah-ca-mo'-lay.

De las Cerimonjas

SECOND BOOK, WHICH TREATETH OF THE FEASTS AND SACRIFICES BY WHICH THESE NATIVES HONORED THEIR GODS IN THEIR STATE OF INFIDELITY.

LIBRO SEGUNDO QUE TRATA DE LAS FIESTAS, Y SACRIFICIOS: CON QUE ESTOS NATURALES, HONRRAUAN A SUS DIOSES, EN EL TIEMPO DE SU INFIDELIDAD.

805 x796 First Chapter, concerning the calendar and the feasts of fixed date, the first of which is the one which followeth.[1]

The first month of the year was called, among the Mexicans, Atl caualo, and in other parts Quauitl eua. This month began upon the second day of February, when we celebrate the Purification of Our Lady. On the first day of this month, they celebrated a feast in honor—according to some—of the Tlaloc gods, whom they held to be gods of rain; [or]—according to others—of their sister, the goddess of water, Chalchiuhtli icue; [or]—according to [still] others—in honor of the great priest or god of the winds, Quetzalcoatl. And we may say that [they celebrated the feast] in honor of all of these. This month and all the rest, which are eighteen [in number], each have twenty days.

[176 184]

Capitulo primero, del canlendario, de las fiestas fixas, la primera de las quales es lo que se sigue.

El primero mes, del año se llamaua entre los mexicanos Atl caoalo: y en otras partes quauitl eoa. Este mes començaua en el segundo dia del mes de Hebrero quando nosotros celebramos, la purificacion, de nuestra señora. En el primero dia deste mes: celebrauan vna fiesta a honrra (segun algunos) de los dioses tlaloques, que los tenjan por dioses de la pluuja: y segun otros de su hermana, la diosa del agua, chalchiuhtli ycue: y segun otros a honrra del gran sacerdote, o dios de los vientos quetzalcoatl: y podemos deziz, que a hõrra de todos estos. Este mes, con todos los de mas, que son deziocho tienen a cada veynte dias.

Atl çualo or Quauitl eua x796 In this month they slew many children; they sacrificed them in many places upon the mountain tops, tearing from them their hearts, in honor of the gods of water, so that these might give them water or rain.

● [493] The children whom they slew they decked in rich finery to take them to be killed; and they carried them in litters upon their shoulders. And the litter were adorned with feathers and flowers. [The

5ª	d	KL	Atl caoalo, o quauitl eoa	d	1ª
1	e		En este mes matauan muchos njños	e	2
2	f		sacrificavanlos, en muchos lugares en	f	3
3	g		las cumbres de los montes: sacandoles	g	4
4	A		los coraçones a hõrra de los dioses del	A	5
5	b		agua, para que les diesse agua o llujia.	b	6
6	c		A los njños, que matauan: com-	c	7
7	d		ponjanlos con ricos ataujos para lleuar-	d	8
8	e		los a matar, y lleuauanlos, en vnas	e	9
9	f		literas, sobre los hõbros: y las literas,	f	10

1. The first nineteen chapters, largely a digest of more expanded material in Chapters 20-38, are presented consecutively; most of the translations will be found in this later section. For these nineteen chapters the original has no corresponding Nahuatl text.
2. Marginal notation: Cuatro dias celebrabã. 3. Marginal notation: Cuentas del calldario mexicano.

The thirteenth month they named Tepeilhuitl. In this month they celebrated a feast in honor of the high mountains, which are in all these lands of this New Spain, where large clouds pile up. They made the images of each one of them in human form, from the dough which is called tzoalli, and they laid offerings before these images in veneration of these same mountains.

Al tercio decimo mes llamauan Tepeilhujtl: En este tiẽpo hazian fiesta a honrra de lo montes emjnẽtes, que estan por todas estas comarcas desta nueua españa: donde se armã fiublados: hazian las ymagenes en figura humana a cada vno dellos de la masa que se llama tzoal, y ofrecian delante destas ymagenes, en respecto destos mismos montes.

796 805 778

Chapter 13
Tepeilhuitl

In honor of the mountains they made a number of serpents, of wood or of the roots of trees, and they fashioned them heads like [those of] serpents. They made also some lengths of wood, as thick as the wrist, and long. They called them ecatzontli. These, as well as the serpents, they overlaid with that dough which they call tzoalli. These pieces they provided a covering in the manner of mountains. Above, they placed the head, like the head of a person. Likewise they made these images in memory of those who had drowned in the water, or had died such a death that they did not burn them, but rather buried them.

After, with many ceremonies, they had placed upon their altars the aforementioned images, they also offered them tamales and other food; and also they uttered canticles of their praises, and they drank wine in their honor.

Upon arrival of the feast in honor of the mountains, they slew four women and one man. The first of these [women] they called Tepexoch. The second they called Matlalcueie. The third they named Xochtecatl. The fourth they called Mayauel. And the man they named Milnaoatl. They decked these women and the man in many papers covered with rubber. And they carried them in some litters upon the shoulders of women highly adorned, to the place where they were to slay them.

1. Marginal notation: Quedar de dar cuenta.

Cap. 13.
Tepeilhujtl.

1	g	EL		g	30
2	A		Hazian a honrra de los montes: vnas	A	1°
3	b		culebras de palo o de rayzes de arboles,	b	2
4	c		y labrauanles la cabeça como culebra:	c	3
5	d		haziã tãbien vnos troços de palo gru-	d	4
6	e		esos como la muñeca largos llamauan-	e	5
7	f		los Ecatzontli: assi a estos como a las	f	6
8	g		culebras los investian cõ aquella masa	g	7
9	A		que llamã tzoal: a estos troços los in-	A	8
10	b		vestian a manera de montes, arriba les	b	9
11	c		ponjan su cabeça como cabeça de per-	c	10
12	d		sona: hazian tambien estas ymagenes,	d	11
13	e		en memoria de aquellos que se aujan	e	12
14	f		ahogado en el agua o avian muerto de	f	13
15	g		tal muerte que no los quemauan, sino	g	14
16	A		que los enterrauan.	A	15
17	b		Despues que cõ muchas cerimonjas,	b	16
18	c		aujan puesto en sus altares a las yma-	c	17
19	d		genes dichas: ofrecianles tambien ta-	d	18
20	e		males y otras comjdas: y tambien los	e	19

dezian cantares de sus loores, y beujan vino por su honrra.

796 [273]

Llegada la fiesta a honrra de los montes, matauan quatro mugeres y vn hombre: la vna dellas llamauã tepexoch: la segũda llamauã Matlalcueie: la tercera llamauan Sochtecatl: la quarta llamauã Mayauel, y al hombre llamauã Milnaoatl: adereçauan a estas mugeres y al hombre cõ muchos papeles llenos de vlli: y lleuauanlas en vnas literas en hombros de mugeres muy atauiadas, hasta donde las aujã de matar.

796 [289] [314] [293] [483] 482]

And they took [the children] to many [different] places.

[First was] Quauhtepec.[9] And the one who died here bore the same name—Quauhtepetl. His paper vestments were brown.[9]

The second place where one died was the top of Mount Youhcatl.[9] The human banner [the child to be sacrificed] had the same name—Youhcatl. His paper vestment was black striped with red.

The third place was Tepetzinco,[9] where died a girl called Quetzalxoch, a name which they took from Tepetzinch,[9] [also] named Quetzalxoch. Her array was blue.

The fourth place was Poyauhcatlan,[10] just at the foot and in front of Mount Tepetzinco. The name of him who died was Poyauhcatl. Thus he went adorned: he was bedight in rubber, stripes of liquid rubber.

The fifth place, there in the midst of the lake, was a place named Pantitlan. He who died there had the name Epcoatl. The vestments in which he went, having put them on, were set with snail shells.

The sixth place to which they carried [a victim] was the top of [the hill of] Cocotl,[11] and also he went bearing the name Cocotl. His array was varicolored—part red, part brown.

The seventh place was on the summit of Yiauhquemac, and also the human banner bore the name Yiauhquemac. The clothing which he bore was completely brown.

These were the places where [the children] died, as blood-offerings, as human banners.

And all went with head-bands[12] with sprays and sprigs of quetzal feathers; they had green stone necklaces, and they went provided with green stone bracelets; they provided them with bracelets of green stone. Their faces were painted with liquid rubber, and spotted with a paste of amaranth seeds. And their liquid rubber sandals: they had sandals of liquid rubber. All went in glorious array; they were adorned and ornamented; all had valuable things on them. They gave them paper wings;[13] wings of paper they had. They were carried in litters covered with quetzal quauhtepe:: auh yn vmpa onmiquija, çan ie no ie yuoca itiuja, in quauhtepetl: yn jamatlaqui, yiapaltic.

Auh injccan in quijnoncaznia;

Jnic vecil miquija, icpac in tepetl iouhcatl: çan ie no iuoca ietiuh, iuhcacteruijtl, iouhcatl: yn jamatlaqui, tiltic, chichiltic ic onomoqui.

Jnic ennan, tepetzinco: yn vmpa onmiquija cioatl, iuoca quetzalxoch, yuch cannia, in tepetzintli, quijtocatiuia quetzalxoch, yn itlatqui cueca tentotic.

Jnic nauhcan, poiauhtlã, çan itzintla, çan ixpan in tepetl, tepetzinco: iuoca ietiuja in miquia poiauhtecatl, ynic mochichiuhtiuja, vipiinoac, tlauhjectli.

Jnic macujlcan, vmpa in atl itic iuoxiocan pantitlan, in vmpa, onmiquija, iuoca ietiuh, epcoatl: yn itlatquj, in caquijtiuja, epncpanjuhcqui.

Jnic chiquacecan: vmpa quinjcaia cocotl icpac, no iuoca ietiuja cocotl: yn inochichioal cueca, chictlaquaqui, cectlapal chichiltic, cectlapal yiaqqalli.

Jnic chicuecan, icpac yn jiauhquemac: çan no iuoca ietiuh, yiauhquemac, in tlacatecujtl: yn itlatquj ietiuh, tlacamaquijlli, yn jiaqqalli.

Jaquican yn, in miquija nextlaoalti, tlacatecuhti:

auh muchinti, ynmaxtlatzon ietiuh, quetzalxiximiqui, quetzaimjaoaio: in chalchiuhcoaqui ietiuh, yuan momacuecteiiioj, quijmomacuecteiiioj chalchiujtl: tlaixobujlti, quijnixolhujaia, mjxmichiouajque, yuan ymolcac, ymolcac ietiuh, muchiotin mamaçoiioj, tlacomacuahi, tlachichioalti, muchi tlaçotlaoqui, yn jiauh ietiuh, tlaçotlantiuj, qujmamatlapalhia, amatl,

[4]. Maps of the Valley of Mexico in Colonial times locate most of the places and features mentioned by Sahagún, but the frequent repetition of place-names is an issue confusing. Of Quauhtepec, Sahagún's Spanish text says: "en este sitio compusieron que este nombre del Tlaxcalteca."

[7]. Tlapaltic, Sahagún (Spanish text) has colorado (deep red, flesh colored); later he has bermejo (bear colored, fulvous) for yiapaltic. For yiapaltic, Seler (op. cit., p. 50) has gelbbraun; Molina (op. cit.), color tirado de negro; Simeon (op. cit.), brown or black.

[8]. The Spanish text confirms: "en este sitio compusieron que este nombre quauhtepec."

[9]. Lat. obs: "en aquel monumento, que este dentro dicho lugarcito, Tepetzinco del Quauhtlan."

[10]. Lat. obs: "en los montes, que este en los cimientos de Quauhtlan, y allí este representado."

[11]. Lat. obs: "en un monte que este entre Quauhtlan cocotzin."

[12]. Seler (op. cit., p. 57) made pomatoblasts, which he translates as Ihre Kopfbinden, for tlaçotlantiuj.

[13]. Sahagún (Bot. ed.) says "papelillos como alas de papel como mariposas." feathers, red in these [the children] were kept

[796] and adorned [the figures]; they molded them [with amaranth seed dough].

[778] And some molded them well into the night. Thus did they fashion them: they daubed liquid rubber upon the faces [of the figures][8] and they laid [a spot of] fish amaranth seed paste upon [each of] their cheeks;[9] they covered them with banners of white paper spattered with liquid rubber, and they fitted upon them paper headdresses and their forked heron feather ornaments.

[314 289]

[765] And of those who had died in the water, they placed images only upon circular mats,[10] and made them of a dough of amaranth seed.[11]

And when it dawned, then they were set in each one's house, upon reed resting places made of thin, fine reeds; or wide ones; or large, white ones; or hollow reeds.[12] Upon these they placed them.

And when this was done, when they had set them in order, thereupon they laid offerings before them. [262] They offered them fruit tamales, and chili sauce, or clac dog meat, or turkey. And they offered incense to them.

When this was done, one said [of the figures]: "They are seated in the houses." And if one was rich, there was singing and wine was drunk in their honor; and elsewhere they only brought them offerings.

And upon the feast day, there died some women, [who were] representations of the mountains.

[776] The first was named Tepenoch; the second, Matlalcueie; the third, Xochtecatl; the fourth, Maiauel, representing the maguey; the fifth was named Milnauatl. This [last was] a man, representing a serpent.

[314 289] Their array [consisted of] paper headdresses and paper vestments daubed with liquid rubber—with much rubber; a great deal of rubber. And the array and adornment of Milnauatl were in the same manner.

[493] Early in the morning they started to go, carrying them upon their shoulders on litters. It was said: "They provide them with litters." They went carrying them there. They went there in litters; they carried them in a roundabout procession. Only the women carried [the litters] on their shoulders. They went singing for them.

quiztlapichiltivitze, iuhquin tlacaocacitiviz, ninõ ie ic tetlacatilio, techichiualo quinquepechoa:

auh in cequiuti oc vecauan, in quinquepechoa, inic quiztlacatilia, quimixolhuia, yuan mixhiauhtli in quimõtlalilia incampan, quimõquentia in tetevid, yuan quimõquia imamacal, yiaxtzoon.

Auh in aclan miquia, çan iacuiro in quiztlaliaia, in imixiptla, tzoalli in quiachichiouia.

Auh in ocatvic: mec tetlatlalilo in techachan, tulpepechpan, aço tolpiztzaoac, aço tulpatlactli, aztapili, aço azali in impã quiztlaliaia:

Auh in ie iuhqui, in oncencaoaloc: ninan ie ic quiztlamanjlia: in quimanilaia xocotamalli, yuan tlatonilli, aoaço itacuinacatl, aoaço tetolin: yuan quiztlemanaquijia.

In iquac in motenoua cali oncac: auh in netlacamachoua, cuicatilo, yuan tlatlamanjlilo: auh in cana çan inquich in quiztlamanjliaia.

Auh in ipan in illuitl, miquia cequintin cioa, imixiptlaoan Tetepe.

Inic ce itoca Tepenoch. Inic vme: Matlalquac. Inic ei: Xochtecatl. Inic nauí, Maiauel: ixiptla metl. Inic macuilli: itoca Milnauatl: inin oquichtli, iniptlan coatl:

in iuechichiual, in imamamacal, in imamatlaquj: tlaolhujlli, cenca ollo, moca olli: auh in Milnauatl, çan no iuhqui in iuechichiual, in jtlaquj:

ioatzinco in quimpeualtia in quimapaloiaoaj, tlapechtica: motenoua, quiztlatlapechvia, vncan mamantivi, vncan yicativi in tlapechco, quiztlatlaiaualchtia: çan no cioa in tlamapaloa, quiacuiçatitivi.

8. The corresponding Spanish text reads, besides: "Los rostros de cada un monte tenia dos caras, una de persona, y otra de culebra. . . ."
9. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2, n. 15.
10. According to Sahagún (loc. cit.), "metían o ponía debajo de ellos, estados con mapas de cuatro."
11. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 22, n. 116.
12. In the Bulmarde ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 285, auali is explained: "Hay otra que se llama tecuapilli, es como carrizo y dicen como cañitas huecas; otras especies llaman que se llaman auali y colgaz otras del techo, y encima de estas ponen mapas los dioses cuando los ponen."

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

C48 nephew of the Great Montezuma, and he begged us to have the goodness to wait until he arrived.

He did not tarry long, for he soon arrived with greater pomp and splendour than we had ever beheld in a Mexican [493] Prince, for he came in a litter richly worked in green feathers, with many silver borderings, and rich stones set in bosses made out of the finest gold. Eight Chieftains, who, it was said, were all Lords of Towns, bore the litter on their shoulders. When they came near to the house where Cortés was quartered, the Chieftains assisted [643] Cacamatzin to descend from the litter, and they swept the ground, and removed the straws where he had to pass, and when they came before our Captain they made him a deep reverence, and Cacamatzin said—

"Malinche, here we have come, I and these Chieftains to place ourselves at your service, and to give you all that you may need for yourself and your companions and to place you in your home, which is our city, for so the Great Montezuma our Prince has ordered us to do, and he asks your pardon that he did not come with us himself, but it is on account of ill-health that he did not do so, and not from want of very good will which he bears towards you."

When our Captain and all of us, beheld such pomp and majesty in those chiefs, especially in the nephew of Montezuma, we considered it a matter of the greatest importance, and said among ourselves, if this Cacique bears himself with such dignity, what will the Great Montezuma do?

When Cacamatzin had delivered his speech, Cortés embraced him, and gave many caresses to him and all the other Chieftains, and gave him three stones which are called Margaritas, which have within them many markings of different colours, and to the other chieftains he gave blue glass beads, and he told them that he thanked them

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

[622
41]

THE CODEX FLORENTINO

expressed in our nursery rhyme: "Rich man, poor man . . ." various other activities, caught with a fresh and humorous eye. Although some of the background details indicate that Spanish influence was already strongly felt a generation after the Conquest, the general details disclose a strong persistence of the Aztec way of life.

Chief

[441]

Merchant

Lawyer

[463]

Doctor

Women

[759]

Sailor, boatman

Ant Bite

[502
50]

[p. 112 (c)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

361 174 Approaching along the causeway, the traveler of that time passed first between expanses of open water. Then gradually tiny islands of green appeared, made of masses of mud dredged up from the bottom of the shallow lake and held [241] in place by wickerwork. White-clad farmers dexterously [311] [501] poled their tiny dugouts through the maze as they went about the cultivation of their gardens. These irregular islets merged gradually into a more orderly grouping where the accumulation of soil had become stabilized as the roots, striking downward, had established anchorage in the lake bottom and created solid ground. This artificially made land reduced the open water of the lake to mere canals. (See Plate 37, bottom.)

[363 505] Save for the broad causeways, roads there were none; and along the canals the traveler saw, in increasing numbers, boatloads of produce headed toward the city. Here and there among the green of the crops and trees he caught glimpses of thatched roofs and wattled walls, the huts of the farmers. Then adobe walls of more substantial dwellings began to encroach on the gardens, and the waters of the lake shrank to a canal following the roadway. The adobe walls gave way to the fronts of more pretentious houses plastered white or washed with powdered pumice, a dull, rich red. Now the visitor could realize how the city expanded through the successive creation of artificial islands which bore first a crop, then a modest hut and finally became integral with the masonry of the city proper.

363 174 The causeway had now changed from a simple means of communication into a principal street with all its social complexity. Since canals took the place of roads, space for a saunter was so rare that the causeways were as much recrea-

776 white clay. He had a spray of fine knives, with quetzal feathers.[79] The burden on his back had [a fan of] red macaw feathers. His sun flag was upon it. The sun sign was on his paper vestment,[80] and on his shield. Red was his staff, which had a heart. He had a necklace of the claws of an animal. He had a paper breech-clout. He had rattles and shells. He had sun-shoes.

ceuçpôtzinaqui yn jilmamatl, yeuaxqueu ipan itec, tecuxtlato yn jacuaqueu, tecuxtlato yn jchimal, chalchiu yxillaxqui, aquimaqueu, yuamacuxtli, cuitlatl, cuitlatl, ixcuacuac.

Seventeenth Chapter, which tells of the god whose name was Left (Opochtli), whom anciently men here worshipped as a god.

This Opochtli was one of the Tlaloes. He was the god of those who lived on the water, who worshipped him.

[773] They said that he made and revealed his ceremonies and inventions—the net, the fish-thrower, the three-pronged harpoon,[81] the pole for propelling boats,[82] [and] the bird-snare.

776 And when his feast was celebrated, offerings of water,

796 food, [and] wine were made; and the cane of corn plants,

[213] scented smoke, incense, and sweet-smelling herbs. These they spread before him, thus welcoming him. They shook their cards-boards at him. They strewed toasted [pop-]corn grains like hailstones, or like scattered dice. And also his old men, his old women, and the city elders made music for him.

776 As his garb, he wore a paper crown; he was covered with black ungüento—a liquid rubber covering; he had a heron-feather spray with single quetzal feathers. He wore a paper breech-clout [and] had a paper vestment [over his shoulders] with the sun-emblem.

Jnic caxtolli vnaueue capítulo, yuaxqui tlamo, yn itoca, yn itoca ceca opochtli: yn quijnemaxtiaia in ueueteca, aiaxca tlaca.

Inin opochtli, ipan mitoaia, tlaloc: ofuca ueueteca ceca, quijnemaxtiaia.

Jnic quijtoaia, ca ichaual ichaualiztli, yxiuauiztli, quijyauiz, quijnitiz in mocuel, yn ocuel, yn mijauachtli, yn ocuitl, tecuxquitl.

Auh yn iquac ilhuiqujxtilitiaia, ol, chaquitli, octli, in ueueti ouchtiaia: yeuan cimaquilli, mochiul, yiuel, cuquilli, yiauhtli, quijquetilitiaia, ic quijnonoiquiqui: chicaueuetli cuecuelachtlaia mocuechtil quijchaiztlaia: inhuqui uctitl pouia: no yuh quijnjxtitiaia, yn ioueiccaua, yn jlamiccaua, calpolqui.

776 Jn juechichiual ceca: ueueue, tlatçalli, tlaolalilli, ueueteca, quemalquiztli, ueueuetl, ueueuquauac, ueueuia.

Eighteenth Chapter, which tells of the god named Our Lord the Flayed One (Xipe totec).[83]

He was the god of the sun-shoes people, the proper god of the Zapotecs.

776 His gifts, [which] he dealt out, his particular ceremonies, his

753 attributes, with which he visited people, which he gave them, [were] blisters, sores, smallpox, ophthalmia, maladies causing watery eyes, infected eyelashes, lice about the eyes, fogging of the eyes, filling of the eyes with flesh, withering of the eyes,[84] cataracts, glazing of the eyes.[84]

776 These who were affected, we men then ailmented, would 796 thereupon vow to him, saying [that] therefore we would keep on, having donned it, his skin, on the celebration of the Feast of the Flaying of Men.

All bentmed persons in a company, wrapped in skins [of men], [blood-]stained, dripping [blood], gleaming [with Jnic caxtolli vnaueue capítulo, yuaxqui tlamo, in itoca: yn itoca, xipe totec.

Auaxqui itech: tequanco in vel itech catca, yn inuquich pouia, yn inchan yiuchiual, yn inuicuel: ic tonaxtlaia, ic tonaxia, ichaual quijnaxcaia, in tetemajlitli, papaloctlitli, cuquetlitli, iacxitlitli, ichichiualitli, ixuquipiqui jlitli, ixuauquitlitli, ixuauhpachilitli, ixuacuechilitli, ixuaqujtitli, ixuaxiccitli, ixuaxcyxitli.

Jn aquja ipan mochtiaia, yn cuculitli tequjchi, yuiqua tonmomaxtiaia, yuiqua mijauia: yuic tonuquja yn jiuaia, yuic ilan aquia, yn jquac ilhuiqujxtilitiaia: tonxaxaia, tacuxpoualitli:

tlapaualtiaia, tonxaia, mijauqujxtia tonmaxtia, mochiul cuitatoj, chichiuaxtoj, chichiqui-xtoj, tecuxtlatoj in 79. Cf. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. II, p. 208 (tecpanchichiquilli).

80. Cf. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 591) for explanation of ueueteca del sol.
81. ". . . un dardo de tres puntas que se llama mitzcuachalli."—Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 172. The corresponding Spanish text on Opochtli, contains the other information: ". . . y en otras fiestas, aunque no diaria, otra tres puntas, [mezquina invention, parece mitzcuachalli] el mitzquachalli (sic?) con mahetes y en que hiere, a los peces; y también el al mesmo usaua."
82. Standing in the bow, they propelled it with a long pole. The Spanish text uses the same verbs, ear, which is colloquially humorous.
83. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, p. 169) cites Herrera (Hist. gen., Lib. III, cap. 13) to indicate that Xipe enjoyed special honor in the Tezcoco dances. A clear discussion of the "pujamos y disparamos" is given in Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. III, p. 131. See also note 69.
84. Meaning problematical.

A 796 in five days the feast day of Toxcatl would come, then they began to sing [and dance].

New, during this time, Moctezuma came not forth; those who had been [the impersonator's] companions provided the people with food and favors.

On the first day they sang [and danced] at a place called Tecaxuman. On the second day, in the place where they kept the image of Titlacauan, in the house of the keeper who guarded it. On the third day, at Teperzinco, in the midst of the lagoon. On the fourth [day], at Tepepulco, which is also near Tepetzinco.

●[501] After they had sung [and danced], then he embarked in a canoe. The women went traveling with him; they went consoling him and keeping him merry. Then the canoe arrived; then it touched the shore: then it was beached at a place called Acaquilpan or Cuualtepec.

For here he was abandoned, a little [distance] from Tlapitzauhcan. The women then returned; and only they who had freely become his pages accompanied him while he yet lived.

[346] So, it was said, when he arrived where he was to die, [where] a small temple stood, called Tlacochcalco, he ascended by himself, of his free will, to the place where he was to die. When he climbed the first step, as he passed one [step], he there broke, shattered, his flute, his whistle, etc.

And when he had mounted all the steps, when he had reached the summit, then the priests fell upon him; they threw him on his back upon the sacrificial stone. Then [one] cut open his breast, seized his heart, and raised it as an offering to the sun.

For in this manner were all [these] captives offered up. But his body they did not roll down; rather, they lowered it. Four men carried it.

And his severed head they strung on the skull-rack. Thus he ended in the adornment in which he died. Thus he there ended his life, there he terminated his life, when he went to die there at Tlapitzauaian.

And this betokeneth our life on earth. For he who [538] rejoiceth, who poseseth riches, who seeketh and coveteth our lord's sweetness, his gentleness—riches and prosperity—thus endeth in great misery. For it is said: "None come to an end here upon earth with happiness, riches, and wealth."[12]

A 796 778 And heye in Mexico, when [it was the month of] Toxcatl, was set up and formed a figure of Uitzil-cujlti, oquijuh macujlilhujtl quiçaz yn ilhujtl Toxcatl, in penu cujcujca:

yn iquac y, yn izquilhujtl y, aocmo onmachistia yn motecuçoma, oc ie yeemjx caxca, tetlaquahtia tetlauhtia, ynic cemilhujtl cujcujca, inxaiocan tecaxma: ynic omjlhujtl, vncan in pialoia, in teixiptla in titlacauan, yn ichã aquja calpixquj, yn oquijpaia: ynic eilhujtl tepetzinco, vmpa in anepantla, ynic nappa tepepulco, çan no itlan in tepetzinco.

Yn on cujcujcac njman ie ic onmacalaquja, itlan ietihuj in cioa, quijollaltitiuj, quellaquauhtiuj: vmpa vnquiça, vmpa onatenquiça, vmpa quimonacana in acalli, ytocaiocan acaquilpan, anoço cuoaltepec:

ipampa ca vncan entecaoaloia, achi ie ytlan in tlapitzauhcan: in cioa vncan oalmocuepa: auh ça ichoã in matian muchioa, yn jachoan ocatca, yn oquitocatinenca in iõc oc nemj.

Juh mjtoa yn oacic, in vncan mjquja teucaltontli icaia, itoca tlacochcalco: çan inomia in tleco, çan monomatlecauja, in vmpa mjquja: in ce tlamamatlatl contlecauja, in ce conpanauja, ce vncan quixamanja, quipuztequj yn itlapitzal, yn jvilacapitz, etc.

Auh yn oquipantlaz, yn izquj tlamamatlatl, yn opanuetzito tlacpac: njman quicujtiuetzi in tlamacazque, conaquetzititeca in techcac: njman ie ic queltetequj, conanilia yn iiollo, no conjauhia in tonatiuh:

ca çan muchi tlacatl iuh mictiloia, in mamalti. Auh yn jtlac amo quioalmjmjlooaia, çan quioaltemoujaia, quinauhcaujaia:

auh yn jxoxtencõ, tzompatitech conquauhço, iuh tlantica, yn iuh ipã omjc ynechichiual: ie vmpa ontlamj yn jnemjliz, vmpa contzonquistia yn jnemjliz, yn vmpa omjquito Tlapitzaouian.

Auh ynin ca quinezcaioia, in tlaticpac tonemjliz: ca in aquin paquj, motlamachtia, in quitta in quimauiçoa in itzopelica, yn jaujiaca in totecujo, in necujltonolli, in netlamachtilli: injc tzonquiça vey netolinjliztli: ca inh mjtoa, aiac quitlamictiuh in tlaticpac, paquilistli, necujltonolli, netlamachtilli.

Auh yn nican mexico, yn iquac Toxcatl: motlalia

12. This is a reference to the characteristics of Tezcatlipoca. See Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 2.

796K
532
292
[501]

—After Paso y Troncoso

22-23. Ezzalqualiztli (Chapter 25)
24-25. Tecuilhuitontli (Chapter 26)
26-28. Uei tecuilhuitl (Chapter 27)
29. Tlaxochimaco (Chapter 28)

[p. 102 G]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648

[501]

[415]

—After Paso y Troncoso

97, 97. Mexicans remove bodies and loot from the Tolnua canal (Chapter 25). 98. Massacre at Coloaxayac (Chapter 25). 99. Spaniards climb up to Tzacalhuyacan (Chapter 25). 100, 101. People of Tzacalhuyacan welcome the Spaniards (Chapter 26). 102. Spaniards prepare to depart from Tzacalhuyacan (Chapter 26).

[p. 44(0)]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

648 splendour of the other Caciques who came out to meet us, who were the Lord of the town named Cuitlahuac,[1] and the Lord of Culuacan, both of them near relations of Montezuma.

342 And then when we entered that city of Iztapalapa, the appearance of the palaces in which they lodged us! How spacious and well built they were, of beautiful stone work and cedar wood, and the wood of other sweet scented trees, with great rooms and courts, wonderful to behold, covered with awnings of cotton cloth.

351 When we had looked well at all of this, we went to the orchard and garden, which was such a wonderful thing to see and walk in, that I was never tired of looking at the diversity of the trees, and noting the scent which each one had, and the paths full of roses and flowers, and the many fruit trees and native roses, and the pond of fresh water. [501 There was another thing to observe, that great canoes were able to pass into the garden from the lake through an 503] opening that had been made so that there was no need for their occupants to land. And all was cemented and very splendid with many kinds of stone [monuments] with pictures on them, which gave much to think about. Then the birds of many kinds and breeds which came into the pond. I say again that I stood looking at it and thought that never in the world would there be discovered other lands such as these, for at that time there was no Peru, nor any thought of it. [Of all these wonders that I then beheld] to-day all is overthrown and lost, nothing left standing.

648 Let us go on, and I will relate that the Caciques of that town and of Coyoacan[2] brought us a present of gold, worth more than two thousand dollars, and Cortés gave them hearty thanks for it, and showed them much affection, and he told them through our interpreters things concerning

[1] Coadlabaca in the text. [2] Cuyuacan in the text.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

600 excepting the southern edge round Mixcnic, and is now one vast maize field.

Zochimilco is reduced to a swamp traversed by many water-ways and the water from its springs is being utilized for the supply of drinking water to the City. Texcoco alone remains, in a shrunken condition, and no further drainage of its waters is contemplateo, as the evaporation from its surface is one of the main factors contributing to the equable climate of the valley.

THE CITY OF MEXICO.

361 The two towns of Tenochtitlan and Tlaltelolco appear to have risen side by side, each retaining control of its own local affairs, until the time of Axayacatl, the sixth ruler of Tenochtitlan (1473), when, after a fierce battle in the streets of the City, Tlaltelolco was conquered, its chiefs killed, and it became a part of the City of 361 Tenochtitlan. It is, however, this growth of the City in two distinct 346 parts that accounts for the existence of the two centres of religious worship, the great teocalli of Tenochtitlan with its surrounding courts and temples (where the Cathedral of Mexico now stands), and the still larger and more important teocalli of Tlaltelolco and the adjacent temples, courts, and priests' houses, etc., which are so fully described by Bernal Díaz in the text.

361 The following quotation is from the writings of the "Anonymous Conqueror," who himself beheld Mexico in the days of Montezuma:— 363 "The great city of Temistan (Tenochtitlan), Mexico, has and had many wide and handsome streets; of these two or three are the principal streets, and all the others are formed half of hard earth like [501] a brick pavement, and the other half of water, so that they can go out along the land or by water in their boats and canoes which are made of hollowed wood, and some are large enough to hold five persons. The inhabitants go abroad some by water in these boats and others by land, and they can talk to one another as they go. There are other principal streets in addition, entirely of water which can only be traversed by boats and canoes, as is their wont, as I have already said, for without these boats they could neither go in nor out of their houses.

342 "And this is the fashion of all the other towns which I have said are situated on the fresh water part of this lake. There were, and still are, in this City very handsome and fine houses belonging to the chieftains, so large and with such offices (Estancias), dwelling rooms, and gardens both above and below that they are wonderful to behold. I entered the house of a principal lord more than four times on purpose to see it, and I always walked about until I was tired, and I never managed to see the whole of it. It was the custom to have near the entrance of all the Lords' houses very large halls and offices around blessed Mother that helped us. To return to our story, the gist of his message was, that he would come in spite of us and of his uncle to speak to us and to kill us. 721

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

When the great Montezuma heard that insolent reply, he was greatly angered, and at once sent to summon six of his most trusted captains. And he gave them his seal, and he also gave them some golden jewels, and ordered them to go to Texcoco, and secretly to show that seal to certain Captains and relations of his, who were on bad terms with Cacamatzin on account of his haughtiness, and so to manage that they should make prisoners of Cacamatzin and those who were in his confidence, and bring them before him at once. When those Captains had departed, and it was understood in Texcoco what it was that Montezuma had ordered, as Cacamatzin was greatly disliked, he was taken prisoner in his own palace while he was discussing the subject of the war with his confederates, and they brought five of them as prisoners in his company. [643]

As that city stands close to the lake, they got ready a great pirogue with awnings, and they placed Cacamatzin and the other prisoners in it and with a great crew of rowers they brought them to Mexico. When they had disembarked, they placed Cacamatzin in a richly adorned litter fit for a king such as he was, and with the greatest show of respect they brought him before Montezuma. [501]

It seems that in his interview with Montezuma, he was even more insolent than he had been before, and Montezuma knew of the plots he had made to raise himself to the lordship of Mexico, about which he learnt further complete details from the other prisoners who had been brought to him. If Montezuma was angry with his nephew before, he was now doubly so, and he promptly sent him to our Captain to be held as a prisoner, and the other prisoners he ordered to be set free.

Cortés went at once to the palace to Montezuma's

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

[622 41]

THE CODEX FLORENTINO

expressed in our nursery rhyme: "Rich man, poor man . . ." various other activities, caught with a fresh and humorous eye. Although some of the background details indicate that Spanish influence was already strongly felt a generation after the Conquest, the general details disclose a strong persistence of the Aztec way of life.

[441]

Chief

Lawyer

Merchant

[463]

Doctor

Women

[759]

Sailor, boatmen

[502 501]

Ant Bite.

[p. 112 (c)]

And thereupon, when were slain [the captives and the likenesses of the rain gods], then the priests came down. They brought down all the offerings—the rubber-spattered sacrificial banners, and the maguey fiber capes painted with designs, also called cloud-face capes, and the green stones, the quetzal feathers, and the incense pieces in the form of men. And they brought down the cloud vessel, now filled with hearts.

Then they took these directly to the water's edge, to a place called Tetamaçolco.

And when they had arrived there, then they loaded a canoe; they filled it with all the offerings. And all the priests embarked. Then [the canoe] was driven by poles. It was filled by those who poled, who clung [to the poles]. They poled speedily. All the poles were blue, painted and colored blue, and covered with liquid rubber, with an adornment of rubber painted on.

And when they had reached mid-water, at a place called Pantitlan, there they then brought in the canoe. And when they brought it in, thereupon shell trumpets were sounded. The fire priest arose by the prow of the canoe, and then they gave him the cloud vessel, which was now filled with hearts. Thereupon he cast it in the midst of the water, before the stakes [which were in the water]. It fell striking the water with a splash.

And then the water foamed, boiled, and cast up bubbles, which burst. Foam was formed on the water.

Thereupon were hung out, tied upon the stakes, upon the poles, the sacrificial banners. And they bound on green stones. And some [of the green stones] they cast, scattered, and strewed upon the face of the water.[20]

And when this was done, then they went forth. And when they had gone, when they had left, when they were near the opening in the [row of] stakes [which were set in the water], then [the fire priest] took up the incense burner and upon it arranged four sacrificial banners. Thereupon he offered and dedicated [the incense burner with papers], and cast it down, throwing, hurling it [into the water].

And when he had cast it [into the water], then they turned the canoe about. Then they circled back, and used their poles. Some took the prow; some steered.

And when they had reached Tetamaçolco, whence

Auh in ie iuhquj yn onmjcoac, njman ie ic oaltemoa in tlamacazque: qujoaltemouja yn ixqujch nextlaoalli, in teteujtl: yoan ichtilocatl tlacujlolli, yoan itoca aiavixo: yoan in chalchiujtl, yoan quetzalli, yoan copalli, tlatlacatlachiu: yoan qujoaltemouja in mixcomjtl, vncã tetentiuh yn iollotli:

njman qujtlamelaoaltia atenco, itocaiocã tetamaçolco.

Auh yn oacito njman ie ic conacalaquja, conacaltema yn ixqujch nextlaoalli: yoan onmacaltema yn ixqujchti tlamacazque, njman ie ic tlanclolo, contemj onpipilcatoque in tlancloa, tequjtlancloa, in aujctli muchi texoio, tlatexoujlli, tlatexoaltilli, yoan tlaulxauhtli, tlaulxaoalli, vlxuhquj.

Auh yn oacito anepantla, itocaiocan pantitlan, njman ic concalaquja yn acalli: auh yn oqujcalaqujque, njman ie ic tlapitzalo: in tlenamacac acaliacac onmoquetza, njman conmaca in mixcomjtl, yn vncan tentiuh iollotli: njman ie ic contlaça anepantla, ynixpã cuenmantli, iuhquin ontlachaquanitiuetzi, ontlatzoponitiuetzi:

auh njman poçoni yn atl, momoloca, quaqualaca, xixittomj, xixitemomoloca, apopoçoquillotl motlatlalia:

njman ie ic mopipiloa, moolpia in teteujtl, in quauhtitech yn itech cuenmantli: yoan in chalchiujtl qujilpia, yoan cequj atlan contepeoaia, conchaiaoa, concenmana.

Auh in ie iuhquj, njman ie ic oalqujxoa: auh yn oqujxoaloco, yn oalqujxooac, yn vncan qujiaoatenpan, yn iqujiaoaioc cuenmantli: njman ic concuj in tlemaitl, vncan conmamana nauhtetl teteujtl: njman ie ic conjiana, yn oconjtauh, mec conmaiauj, ica onmajauj, contlaça, ica ontlamotla:

auh yn oacontlaz mec qujmalacachoa yn acalli: mec oalnecuepalo, tlanclolo cequj tlaiacatitiuj, cequj tlacuexcochtitiuj.

Auh yn oacico tetamaçolco, yn vncan neacalaqujlo, 20. See Plate 22. Refer also to Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Plate 33.

821
823
502

The Wind

That which was known as [the wind] was adressed as Quetzalcoatl. From four directions it came, from four directions it traveled. The first place whence it came was the place from which the sun arose, which they named Tlalocan. This wind which came from there they gave the name of the Tlaloc wind. Little did it frighten men; lightly did it blow. With it, one could go in a canoe; with it one could land; with it one could cross the water.

[775]

The second place whence it came [the north] was called Mictlampa; and this was named the wind from the land of the dead. This was much feared, and caused much terror. Violently did it blow, when it set in, and the canoes could not contend with it. They could not travel forward. They could not venture forth; they could not pass across; they could not get under way in the water. Rather, all the boatmen came out and left [their craft] because of fear—those who gained their livelihood on the water, the fishermen who used nets, or who speared [the fish]. When they saw that it was Mictlampa ehecatl which arose, then they feared evil and were troubled. They hurried, hastened, and greatly quickened their pace, plying the pole—plying it rapidly. They strained their arms, that they might come out and beach [the canoe] on the shore, on the edge of the water, near the water line. And so they said: "Often it drowneth men and sinketh canoes."

The third place whence it came [the west] was known as Cuatlampa; it was named Cuatecayotl and Cuatlampa ehecatl. Also it was called One Wind, or Maçaua; for it came from Maçauacan. And this one did not blow fiercely. Nevertheless, it was very cold. Men suffered much from [its] cold; they became livid and stiff from cold. It made them shiver; it was deadly. It made men tremble, shake, and quake; it exhausted them; it gave them stomach pains, or pains in the lungs, or the head. And yet, with it they could go ashore from the water. It did not frighten men nor terrify them.

And the fourth place whence came the wind [the south] was there from Uitztlampa. It was named Uitztlampa ehecatl. And this one was much feared and held in dread. All feared harm. It made men speechless with terror; it made them silent with fear. Because it blew swiftly, it frightened them greatly. They said: "When it arises, it uprooteth and breaketh trees: and it teareth walls to pieces—old walls

Ehecatl

Motenecoaia: ic quinotzaia quetzalcoatl. Nauhcampa oallauh, nauhcampa oalitztiuh. Inic ceccan oallauh: vmpa in iquiçaiampa, tonatiuh, quinoaia tlalocã: inin ehecatl, vmpa oallauh, quinocaiotiaia, tlalocaiotl: amo cẽca temauhti, amo cenca totoca, uel ipan acaltica vilua, yel ipan quixoa, in atlan: vel ipã panoa.

Inic occã oallauh, moteneua mictlampa: auh inin motocaiotia mictlampa ehecatl. In hin uel imacaxo, uellãmauhtia: cenca totoca, in icoac moquetza, amo vel quisnamiqui in acalli: amo vellauiltecõ, amo uel tlastlapalolo, avel istlapal vilua, auel tlanecuilolo in atlan: çan mauhcaquixoa, mauhcaquiça in tlapanauique, in atlãca, in tlãtlamãque, in tlamjnque. In oquittaque, ca mictlampa ehecatl in omoquetz: ic cenca motenmati, motequipachoa, uel motequimati, ompilcatoque, ompipilcatoque, in tlancloa, in tequitlancloa: vel momaquauhtilia, inic uel onquiça, onmacana atenco, atexipalco, achichiiacpa: iuh quinoa, ca miccpa, teatlanmictia, quipolactia in acalli.

Inic ecaçã oallauh: moteneua cioatlãpa, motocaiotia, ciouteccaiotl, cioatlampa ehecatl: iõ quitocaiotia ce ehecatl, anoço maçaoa ipampa vmpan oalitztiuh maçauacan. Auh in hin, amo no cenca totoca: iccc cenca iztic, uel tecemjti, tepinecaltri, tepinuch, tetztiliiqui, tetetzilquisti, tetiztilquiti, teuiuiioquilti, tecuecuechquiti, tecuecuechmiquiti: tezillanquauhtili, teiomotlanquauhtili, tetzoqteconeuh. Auh uel, uel ipan quixoa in atlan, amo temauhti, amo temauinciuiti.

Auh inic nauhcampa, oallauh ehecatl, vmpa uitzlampa: motocaiotia uiztlampa ehecatl. Auh inin, cenca vel imacaxo, mimacaci: netenmacho, aoc tenauitili, aoc tetlauhti: ipãpa cenca totoca, cenca tlamauhtia. Quixoa, in icoac moquetza: vel quixjaoca, quipoioqui in quauid: yoan quixiniqa in tepantli, in tepançolli, in xacalli: quecatoctia in tlatzacalli, in chimancalli. Auh in vei ãl vel cõtinja, quinpoaqua, and straw huts. The wind carrieth off fences and enclosures. And it stirreth up the sea; it maketh them froth and foam. It formeth waves; there is a great din as of waves breaking. There is a great crackling noise." And it tossed and cast canoes into the air. Just so, indeed, did the north wind sink them.

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

quipoçonahtia, cacocoonistic: ishquin tetecuicatimani, cocoinocatimani: ash in acalli cacocoaiani, cacoctlaqui: vel no ishqui, quimanaqui in nictlamqui chocoal.

821
823
502

Lightning: the Lightning Flash

They addressed it as, and named it, many things—the mist which went winding [like a serpent], the thunderbolt, the reed staff. When lighting flashed and lit up repeatedly, we were blinded, we lost our sight, our vision was darkened. It startled us; we were terrified. It was unbearable to look at; it was dazzling. Everywhere it flashed repeatedly—again and again—like the light of the dawn breaking over and over. Thus did it come; it came twisting and winding.

Tlapetlanjlhtl, tlapetlanjliatli: much ic quinotzaia, quinocaiotaia, aimhcocolli, tlapetlanjlquauitl, ontepilcoauitl. In icoac tlapetlani, tlitlapetlani: tiquoaoa, tiamimiqui, titimauhtia, tiocuiciuetzi: aimamiquilizti, aimamiquizti, nouiian tlatlanezimoquetza: ishquin tlauizcalli moquequetza: nic ollauh oolcocolohtiuh, cuecuelohtiuiz.

821

[p. 16 is blank]

Sixth Chapter. How is told how the messengers of Moctezuma returned here to Mexico and came to relate to Moctezuma that which they had seen.

Thereupon [Cortés] dismissed them, and let them descend to their boats. And when they had climbed down into the boats, they rowed with great force. Mightily did they ply their oars. Some paddled with their hands.

Fleeing with all their force, they came saying to one another: "O warriors, [use] all your strength! Row with haste, lest something here overtake us — lest something here befall us!"

Speedily they hastened to reach by water the place called Xicalanco; there they no more than quickly caught their breath, that once again they might with energy hasten on. Then they came to reach Tecpan Ixpayac, whereupon they also hastened and hurried on, and soon came to reach Cuetlaxtlan. [From there] they likewise departed in haste, [having] in this place taken some rest.

And [those] of Cuetlaxtlan said to them: "Rest yet but a brief day; catch your breath!"

But they replied to them: "Nay, we may only go on swiftly. We must give the news to the lord, the ruler Moctezuma. We must tell him what we have seen, which is terrifying — the like of which hath never been seen. Had you, perchance, already, ere now, heard of it?"

Then they speedily departed from there and soon came to reach Mexico. It was deep night when they went reaching [the city]; they came in here quite by night.

And when this was happening, [Moctezuma] could enjoy no sleep, no good. Never could one speak to him. That which he did [was] only as if it were in vain. Oftimes he sighed; he was spent, exhausted. He felt delight in no savory morsel, joy, or pleasure.

Wherefore he said: "What will now become of us? Who, forsooth, standeth [in command]? Alas, woe is me, I. In great torment is my heart, as if run through with chili water, so that it burneth and Inic chiquacen capítulo: vncã mijtoa, in quenjn ijtlaoaan Motecuçoma, oalmocuepque in njcan mexico quijlhujco in motecuçoma in qujtaque.

Niman ic ic qujcaah, qujpoalhuevique in jmacalco: auh in ovalhuemoque acalco, njman ic ic tequjdanelos, oititenj in tlanelos, cequjntin matlaxelos.

centlaquaah oalmotlalos, qujmolhujtivitac, tiacaoac inquich amotlapal, xiccquitlanciocan, ma itla njcan tuxti ma itla njcan topan mochiuh icuhca acitivetzico in ati itic in jtocaiocan xicalanco, çan tequjtl vncan oalihiocujtiqijqã, ic ic no ceppa centlaquaah oaltonoca: njman acico in tecpan tlaiocac, njman ic no ic oalmocaltia, oalmotlalos, acitivetzico in cuetlaxtlan, çan no oalqujztiquizque, vncan ihiocujque.

Auh in cuetlaxtecatl qujmjlhuj ma oc cemjlhujtintli ximocevicã ma oc mmjhio xiccujcan.

Auh qujlhujque, ca amo ca çan ticualtivi tictomochilitaque in tlacatl tlatoanj Motecuçoma, tictolhujlitaque in tlein otiquijtaque, in cenca temamauhti, in aic iuhquj omottac, cujx ic cuel ic teachto, toconcaquja:

njman icuhca oalpeuhque, acitivetzico in mexico, çan iouhica in acico, çan oalitualalaque.

Auh in jquac in uequjzachin, uequjzaqual qujmatia, aoc ic quijhujxia in çaço tlein quichiouia, çã iuhquja neatlamatia, iuhquja achica cicicivi, mocimiquetza, mocimelpoa, aoc tle velic, aoc tle tepac, aoc tle tuevialti ipan qujmatia, ipampa in qujmatia, tlein ic topan mochiuaz, ac nel icac, ha ixpopa nehoatl, vel petzmjqui in noiollo, iuhquimon chilmoquijlo, vel tatamo chichiuaca ompa nel tatacac.

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726
[764]

[502]

[764]

—After Paso y Troncoso

86. Burning of Moctezuma's body (Chapter 23). 87. Itzquauhtzin's body is carried away (Chapter 23). 88. Burning of Itzquauhtzin's body (Chapter 23). 89. Spaniards set forth from their quarters in Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 90. Spaniards are detected leaving (Chapter 24). 91-93. Flight from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 94. People of Tenochtitlan counter the Spaniards (Chapter 25).

[p. 44(N)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Astec NU7

532
726

[502]

[701
502]

— After Paso y Troncoso

119. Spaniards attack Cuauhquan (Chapter 30). 120. Spaniards crumble the wall at Xoloco (Chapter 30). 121. Fighting at Xoloco (Chapter 30). 122. Spaniards pierce the wall at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 123. Allies of the Spaniards fill the canals (Chapter 31). 124. Spanish horsemen ride in at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 125. Spanish horseman spears a Tlaxilacan (Chapter 31). 126. Mexican warriors unhorse and kill the Spaniard (Chapter 31). 127. Slaves cross land from warboats (Chapter 31).

[p. 44 (R)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

53
648
714
[502]
[724]

—After Paso y Troncoso

138, 139. Spaniards are fought off and withdraw (Chapter 32). 140. Warriors of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Cuitlahuac arrive to work treachery upon the Mexicans (Chapter 33). 141. Quauhtemoc and a fuhtleman (Chapter 33). 142-145. The treachery of those of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Cuitlahuac is prevented (Chapter 33).

[p. 44 (T)]

131
H71
H87
503

VALLEY OF MEXICO

[p. XV]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

648 splendour of the other Caciques who came out to meet us, who were the Lord of the town named Cuitlahuac,[1] and the Lord of Culuacan, both of them near relations of Montezuma.

342 And then when we entered that city of Iztapalapa, the appearance of the palaces in which they lodged us! How spacious and well built they were, of beautiful stone work and cedar wood, and the wood of other sweet scented trees, with great rooms and courts, wonderful to behold, covered with awnings of cotton cloth.

351 When we had looked well at all of this, we went to the orchard and garden, which was such a wonderful thing to see and walk in, that I was never tired of looking at the diversity of the trees, and noting the scent which each one had, and the paths full of roses and flowers, and the many fruit trees and native roses, and the pond of fresh water. [501 There was another thing to observe, that great canoes were 503] able to pass into the garden from the lake through an opening that had been made so that there was no need for their occupants to land. And all was cemented and very splendid with many kinds of stone [monuments] with pictures on them, which gave much to think about. Then the birds of many kinds and breeds which came into the pond. I say again that I stood looking at it and thought that never in the world would there be discovered other lands such as these, for at that time there was no Peru, nor any thought of it. [Of all these wonders that I then beheld] to-day all is overthrown and lost, nothing left standing.

648 Let us go on, and I will relate that the Caciques of that town and of Coyoacan[2] brought us a present of gold, worth more than two thousand dollars, and Cortés gave them hearty thanks for it, and showed them much affection, and he told them through our interpreters things concerning

[1] Coadlabaca in the text. [2] Cuyuacan in the text.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

241 Iztapalapa and Xochimilco, and at the present day a similar form of cultivation, although the gardens are no longer floating, may be seen at Xochimilco and along the banks of the Viga Canal, the water-way connecting Xochimilco with the City of Mexico.

These gardens are divided into long narrow strips with canals running between just wide enough for the passage of a dug-out canoe. The Indian cultivator poles his canoe along the narrow channels and scoops up the soft mud from the bottom to spread it over the land, and splashes the water over the growing plants with his paddle. It was probably this method of cultivation which gave [361] the mainly rectangular arrangement of the streets of the City of Mexico, the more unsymmetrical canals showing the original water ways between the mud banks, while the aggregation of chinampas may have left an irregular margin of outlying houses and gardens.

363 The very slight difference in level between the Lake of Texcoco and 503 the site of the City made the latter liable to frequent inundations, and this difficulty was met by the inhabitants by engineering works of considerable importance. A causeway was built passing through the island town of Tlahuac, dividing the Lake of Chalco from that of Xochimilco, and a second causeway separated the waters of Xochimilco from those of Texcoco. The City of Mexico had probably already been joined to the mainland, for purposes of communication, by the causeways of Tlacopan (Tacuba) and Tepeyac (Guadalupe), and a third and longer causeway was added by connecting the City with the barrier holding back the waters of Xochimilco; this third causeway was known as the causeway of Iztapalapa. The lakes of Zumpango and Zaltocan were also traversed by causeways, but it is not now possible to locate their position.

363 These various causeways did much to control the movement of 503 the waters of the lakes during the rainy season, but they were 731 not sufficient to prevent serious inundations, and native tradition and a picture in a Mexican codex[1] go to prove that during the reign of Motecuhzoma (Montezuma) Illhuicamina, between the years 1440 and 1450, a very wet season caused the waters of Lake Texcoco to rise so much that the City was almost destroyed and the inhabitants had to take refuge in their canoes and piraguas. Montezuma applied for assistance and advice to his friend Netzahualcoyotl the King of Texcoco, and under his sage direction a great dyke was constructed, known as the "Albarradon of Nezhualcoyotl."

731 "This gigantic dyke started from Atzacualco on the North and 503 followed a straight line to the South as far as Ixtapalapa at the foot of the hill called la Estrella. This great work, which was sixteen kilometres[2] in length, was constructed of stone and clay and crowned with a strong wall of rubble masonry, and was protected on both sides by a strong stockade which broke the force of the waves.

[1] "Codex Telleriano Remeusio." [2] Ten miles.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

"The dyke divided the lake into two parts, the larger to the East was known as the Lake of Texcoco, from the city situated on its shores, the lesser to the West was called the Lake of Mexico because the capital was surrounded by its waters on all sides. From this arrangement Mexico derived an aggregate of inestimable benefits. The great lake, like all lakes having no outlet for their waters, was salt, notwithstanding the volume of all the rivers which flowed into it, or in fact it owed its saltness to this very flow which carried in its current the soluble salts which the falling rain has robbed from the land. The salt water saturating the soil has little by little rendered it sterile, and in addition, the carbonate of soda and the thousand other impurities with which it is charged are hostile to animal life to such an extent that fishes could not live in it, neither to-day nor at the time of the Conquest, as was stated by the writers at that epoch, although the water was then less salt than it is at the present. As the lakes of fresh water to the south poured their surplus water into the lake of Mexico through the narrows of Culhuacan and Mexicaltzingo, those waters spread through the western lake, the Lake of Mexico, and completely filled it, separated as it was from the salt lake by the dyke of Netzahualcoyotl. In this way the basin of fresh water was converted into a fish pond and a home for all sorts of aquatic fowl. Chinampas covered its surface, separated by limpid spaces which were furrowed by swift canoes, and all the suburbs of this enchanting capital became flowery orchards."[1]

It will be noticed in the Upsala map that within the dyke men are depicted catching fish, while no fishermen are shown in the Lake of Texcoco, which was, however, then, as it is now, the home of numberless wild fowl. The great dyke was provided with numerous openings for the passage of canoes, but these openings were furnished with sluice gates which could be closed during the rainy season when the water of Texcoco rose and threatened to flood the City, and could be opened again to let out the fresh water from Mexico when the rapid evaporation during the summer months had lowered the level of Texcoco.

The fluctuations of level in the lakes of Chalco and Xochimilco were probably always less than in Lake Texcoco owing to the great number of copious springs of beautifully clear water which well up around their margins, especially on the west side, as well as in the lake of Xochimilco itself.

[1] Francisco de Garay, El valle de Mexico, apuntes historicos sobre su hidrographia, pp. 13 & 14.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

000 of poles and thatch of Indian tribes, none of whom had risen above a state of barbarism. Much no doubt was due to the natural surroundings; the white City with its numerous teocallis was embowered in trees and surrounded by the blue waters of the lake sparkling under a tropical sun, a lake that was alive with a multitude of canoes passing and repassing to the other white cities on its shores, and in every direction the horizon was closed with a splendid panorama of forest-covered hills, while to the south-east the eye always rested with delight on the beautiful slopes and snow-covered peaks of the two great volcanoes. It is an enchanting scene to-day, in spite of the shrinkage of the lakes, the smoke from factory chimneys, and the somewhat squalid surroundings of a modern city, and but little effort of imagination is needed to appreciate the charm that it must have exercised in the days of Montezuma.

The Viga Canal still survives as a water-way by which produce is brought into Mexico from the market gardens or chinampas of Lake Zochimilco, and it was only at the end of the eighteenth century that the canal which ran from the Viga Canal along the south side of the great square past the convent of San Francisco was finally filled in. For many years the roadway beside it was known as the "Calle de Canoas," and the names Puente de la Leña (Fire wood bridge), Portal de las Flores, etc., still mark the localities where the different commodities were sold on the banks of the Canal. Indeed, the course of many an old water-way can still be traced in the modern City by the names which have clung to the localities since the days of the conquest and are now attached to the streets.

●503 The Upsala map seems to show that there was an embankment or pallisade along the east side of the City, necessary as a protection against the wash of the waves from the lake, but on the other sides the entrance of the numerous canals was probably through tree-lined chinampas and orchards, similar to the approach to Xochimilco at the 351 present day. Gardens and groves were evidently numerous in the City itself; the Mexicans were distinguished for their love of flowers, and there is no climate where gardening is more remunerative than in these tropical highlands when water is plentiful. The flowering plants cultivated on the roofs of the houses must have added greatly to the picturesque aspect of the streets and canals.

356 Bernal Díaz tells us how clean the surroundings of the great temple 354 were kept, where not a straw or a spot of dust could be seen (filth seems to have been confined to the temples themselves where the horrid rites of their religion were performed), and this cleanliness probably extended to the City itself, for it will be observed by any traveller in Mexico or Central America that the purely Indian villages of considerable size are almost always kept swept and tidy, while this is not the case in the towns and villages inhabited by the mixed race.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

361
503
363

[facing p. 52 (A)]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

361
503
363

[Facing p. 52 (B)]

all had set forth, at the place of embarkation, thereupon all bathed, and then departed.

And the canoe they then went and beached, at its resting place, at the place for beaching canoes.

And when dawn broke, thereupon all the priests washed the blue color from their foreheads, over at the priests' bathing place.

And whoever had hidden himself away, who had fled, hiding, during the fast for Tlaloc, when men were arrested [for misdemeanors], then, when the blue stain was washed from their heads, they cast him [into the water].

And when this was done, then all departed. Then they took outside the reed mats, bringing them from the priests' dwelling. They were carried out, and they cast them behind the priests' dwelling.

Enough. Here endeth [the account of] the feast day, Etzalqualiztli.

in neacalaqujloia, njman ie ic neaaltilo, mec viviloa. 796K

Auh yn acalli, njman ic vi qujtecazque, yn jonoia, yn acaltecoian: [504]

auh yn otlatujc, njman ie ic nequatexopaco: in tlamacazque vmpa yn jnnealtiaian, tlamacazque. [515]

Auh yn aqujn çan motlati, in çan mjnax, in iquac netlalocaçaoaloia, yn axioac, qujniquac ica nequatexopaco: vmpa atlan qujpapachoa. [681]

Auh yn ie iuhquj mec viloatz, mec tlaqujqujxtilo, tlaeeoalo in tolpepechtli in vn: ..i calmecac: tlaqujqujxtilo, calteputzco contlatlaça.

Je ixqujch, vncan tlamj y, yn ilhujtl, in etzalqualiztli.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

361 174 Approaching along the causeway, the traveler of that time passed first between expanses of open water. Then gradually tiny islands of green appeared, made of masses of mud dredged up from the bottom of the shallow lake and held [241] in place by wickerwork. White-clad farmers dexterously [311] [501] poled their tiny dugouts through the maze as they went about the cultivation of their gardens. These irregular islets merged gradually into a more orderly grouping where the accumulation of soil had become stabilized as the roots, striking downward, had established anchorage in the lake bottom and created solid ground. This artificially made land reduced the open water of the lake to mere canals. (See Plate 37, bottom.)

[363 505] Save for the broad causeways, roads there were none; and along the canals the traveler saw, in increasing numbers, boatloads of produce headed toward the city. Here and there among the green of the crops and trees he caught glimpses of thatched roofs and wattled walls, the huts of the farmers. Then adobe walls of more substantial dwellings began to encroach on the gardens, and the waters of the lake shrank to a canal following the roadway. The adobe walls gave way to the fronts of more pretentious houses plastered white or washed with powdered pumice, a dull, rich red. Now the visitor could realize how the city expanded through the successive creation of artificial islands which bore first a crop, then a modest hut and finally became integral with the masonry of the city proper.

363 174 The causeway had now changed from a simple means of communication into a principal street with all its social complexity. Since canals took the place of roads, space for a saunter was so rare that the causeways were as much recreagolden shells used upon his ankles; and a shield with a golden disc in the center, and spread quetzal feathers along its [lower] rim, and also with a quetzal feather banner.[18] [He had] the curved staff of the wind god, hooked at the top,[19] and white precious stone stars[20] spread over it; and his foam sandals.

Behold, these [were] all the things called the array of the gods, which became the charge of the messengers, and yet many more things which they bore as their greeting gifts — the shell-shaped headpiece of gold, with pendant parrot feathers;[21] the golden conical cap,[22] etc.

Thereupon were baskets filled; wooden frames for carrying burdens on the back were loaded. And the five [messengers] named, Moctezuma then commanded; he said unto them: "Go! Linger nowhere! Pray to our lord the god; say unto him: 'Thy servant Moctezuma hath sent us; behold what he offereth you, for [the god] hath come to reach his wretched home in Mexico.'"

And when they had gone to reach the coast, they ferried them across, they took them by boat across to Xicalanco. Then once again they departed from there by boat; the water folk took them. Everything was placed and heaped in the boat; they filled the boat with the goods. And when the boat was filled, thereupon they departed. They betook themselves into the water and left to reach the boats [of the Spaniards], they approached their boats.

Then [the Spaniards] inquired of them: "Who are you? Whence came you?"

Then [the messengers] answered them: "We have come from Mexico."

Again [the Spaniards] said to them: "Perhaps not. Perchance you only claim to come from there. Perhaps you only pretend. Maybe you make sport of us."

But when they had verified it, when they had quieted their doubts, then they hooked the prow of the boat with an iron pole, and thus drew them near. Then also they let down a ladder.

yoã hecaxonecujlli, quacaltic, iztac chalchivitl injc 431 citlallotoc yoan ipoçolcac. 776
301
292

Oca ixquitlamãtli in, in motencoa teutlatquitl in 431 intlatquj mochiuhtia titlanti, yoan oc cenca mjec tla- 301 mantli in quitquijque in intenamjquja Teucujtlaqua-tecciztli toztlapilollo, teucujtlacopilli, etc.

Niman ie ic tlatanatemalo, tlacacaxchichicoalo. Auh 431 in omotencuhque macujltin; njman ie ic quinnaoatia in Motecuçoma: quimjlhuj. Tla xivian, ma cana 462 anvecauhti, xicmotlatlauhtilican in totecujo in teutl: 202 xiquilhujcan, ca otechalica in motechiuhcauh Motecuçoma: izcatquj mjtzalmomaquilia, ca omaxitico in jchãtzinco mexico:

Auh in oacito atenco, quimõpanavique, acaltica 505 quimonvicaque in xicalanco: ie no ceppa vncan on-eoaq̃ acaltica quinvicaque in atlaca, moch onmacalaquj, onmacalten, conacaltenque in tlatquitl. Auh in ontlaacaltemaloc, njman ie ic vi, onmatoctique, itech onacito in jmacal, itech compachoque in jmacal.

njmã quinoalilhujque. Ac ameoan? campa an- 648 oallaque?

njman iuh quinnanquilique. Ca vmpa tioallaque in Mexico:

oc ceppa quinoalilhujque. Acaçomo, aço çan vmpa anmotlamja, aço çan anquijpiquj, aço çã toca anmocacaiaoa.

Auh in ovel yiollo macic, in oiniollopachiuh. Nõman ic quinoaliacatzopinjque in acalli, tepuztopiltica, ic quinoaltilinjque: njman no quioalquetzque eca-oazzli.

18. Ibid.: "lo que rodela estaua bordada con plumas ricas en la haze de la rodella [sic] salia vna ronda de plumas ricas."

19. Ibid.: "vn bastón labrado de mexayas de turquesas y en la bueltas de arriba puestas vnas piedras ricas o perlas enmejoradas en la cha de arriba."

20. Literally, white green stone. The term chalchiuitl, often translated "jade" or "jadeite," may well have included various kinds of stones. Hence, our translation has adopted the term "green stone."

21. Ibid.: "vna mijra de oro hecha a manera de caracol marino ell vnas rapacejas de plumas ricas que colgauan hasta las espaldas."

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "vna mijra llana."

[p. 14 is blank]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

"Ciudad de México," has been used as the skeleton of the present map; 635 the filling-in has come largely from Xuarez' report. Towns which 114 have been identified are given below, the left-hand column containing 128 their names as written in the Codex Mendocino and the right-hand column containing the equivalents when present on the modern map. The number following each name indicates the location of the town on the accompanying map (at the back of this book). A question mark in parentheses means that the location of the town is uncertain.

[103]

MENDOCINO	MILLIONTH MAP
Apancalecã (?), 2	[Missing]
Coyucac, 8	Coyoquilla
Nochcoc, 10	Nuxco
Panotlan, 9	[Missing]
Petlatlan, 6	Petatlán
Xihuacan, 5	[Missing]
Xolochiuhyan, 7	Jolochuca
Yztapan, 3	[Missing]
Çacatulan, 1	[Missing]
Çihuatlan, 9 [sic]	[See Remarks on Towns]

Aside from doubtfully identified Apancalecan, two pueblos of the Mendocino list remain entirely unidentified. These are Colima and Coçohuipilecan. This Colima can hardly be the Colima of the modern state of the same name, because of the distances involved. Coçohuipilecan, however, appears as "Coçohuipillan" in the conquest list of Ahuizotl, among other names of this province.

For reasons explained below, to these towns from the Matricula and its Mendocino copy may be added the pueblos of Acapulco (13), Anecuilco (12), and Citlaltomaua (11).

REMARKS ON TOWNS

Acapulco, like Coçohuipilecan, is one of the towns conquered by 632 Ahuizotl. Its absence from the tribute list is due to its slight impor- [505] tance in aboriginal days—to nonseafarers the celebrated port facilities 131 meant nothing at all. It is even possible that the tribute list may refer to an Acapulco near Zacatula, mentioned in the relación of that town, in which case Yopitzinco may have extended farther west along the coast.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

out of the city, as I shall tell later on, and that of 361
Tepeaquilla,[1] and we saw the fresh water that comes from [312] Chapultepec which supplies the city, and we saw the bridges on the three causeways which were built at certain distances apart through which the water of the lake flowed in and out from one side to the other, and we beheld on [505] that great lake a great multitude of canoes, some coming with supplies of food and others returning loaded with cargoes of merchandise; and we saw that from every house of that great city and of all the other cities that were built in the water it was impossible to pass from house to house, except by drawbridges which were made of wood or in canoes; and we saw in those cities Cues and oratories like towers and fortresses and all gleaming white, and it was a wonderful thing to behold; then the houses with flat roofs, and on the causeways other small towers and oratories which were like fortresses.

After having examined and considered all that we had 361
seen we turned to look at the great market place and the 443 crowds of people that were in it, some buying and others selling, so that the murmur and hum of their voices and words that they used could be heard more than a league off. Some of the soldiers among us who had been in many parts of the world, in Constantinople, and all over Italy, and in Rome, said that so large a market place and so full of people, and so well regulated and arranged, they had never beheld before.

Let us leave this, and return to our Captain, who said to 797
Fray Bartolomé de Olmedo, who has often been mentioned by me, and who happened to be near by him: "It seems to me, Señor Padre, that it would be a good thing to throw out a feeler to Montezuma, as to whether he would allow us to build our church here"; and the Padre replied that

[1] Guadelupe.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

armament.[140] Thus the largest bodies were assembled, furnished 726 with weapons, and organized under their respective leaders of all grades on very short notice, awaiting the signal from the chief commander to sally forth, either by canoes across the lake,[141] or along the causeways, to the mainland. Each warrior carried 726 mostly his own frugal provisions[142] which the women of each 724 household had prepared; "corn-bread, meal-cakes, ground beans, "corn-meal seasoned with pepper;"[143] but special carriers also accompanied the force, loaded with a surplus of food, with robes for tents, reeds for huts and bowers, and with cooking utensils like kettles, pans, baskets; also with mats.[144] Sometimes these [140] It also happened that an interval of twenty days (a Mexican month) elapsed between the proclamation of war and the final departure. At least, in most cases, a few days were spent in preparations, since the Mexicans had to give time to their outside allies or subjects to prepare, also. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI): "The Mexicans in "the interval prepared the arms in all the quarters,—shields, swords, and made and "finished many rods ('tlatzontectli'), also slings, and pebbles to be thrown with "cords." (Id., Cap. LVII) "Within twenty days they prepared and fitted out all kinds "of arms, first in the five quarters of Mexico-Tenuchtitlan: Moyotlan, Teopan, Ytza-"cualco, Cuepopan, and Tlatiluico, now called Santiago." In many cases, however, an instantaneous mobilization of the whole force became necessary. Mexico, in times of peace, had to be always ready for war. See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[141] Canoes, "acalli" (water-houses, from "atl," water, and "calli," house), were used for the traffic with the main land, but also largely for the carrying of warriors. It is well known what important part they played against the Spaniards during the siege. For the movements of the Mexicans against a hostile tribe, both on land and water, see Durán (Cap. XIV, p. 121), wherein he describes the attack upon Cuitlahuac, both by canoes and on dry land. [505]

[142] Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "porque demas de lo que los reyes proueyan de sus "grandes trojos y graneros, cada soldado llevaua á questas su particular comida, "todo lo que podia llevar, atada á la carga el espada y la rodela, etc., etc."

[143] The women prepared the food, but it also occurred that the stewards dispensed it. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 49): "With this the stewards and calpixques of the tribes "gave to their quarters maize for to make biscuit, tlacactutopochtli, pinole, ground "pepper, chian, beans, and all what pertained to it, providing themselves with every-"thing necessary for certain day stated." The "tlaxcaltotopochtli" (from "tlaxcalli," corn-bread, and "totopochtli," burnt-bread) would be biscuit of maize-meal, and it is therefore called "vizcocho." The pinolli, or pinole, corn-meal mixed with pepper, was an important victual. The food of the Mexicans, in general, outside of the meats (exclusively fowl and some game) and aquatic animals, consisted of maize in various forms, and of pepper, "chilli," as seasoning. Cacao furnished their main beverage, and stores of it were taken along. See, also, Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369: "maiz tostado "y otro molido y hecho harina, frijol molido, pan biscochado, tamales mohosos y cura-"dos al sol, grandes fardos de chile, cacao molido hecho en pellas"). They also used maize to compose a beverage called "yolatl," which possessed particularly vivifying qualities (See note of Sr. Ramirez to p. 290 of Durán), and which they dispensed even on the battlefield (Durán, Cap. XXXVII; Tezozomoc, Cap. LII). [263] [272]

[144] These carriers are called "tamemes," and are generally regarded as having been slaves. But they probably were outcasts from the bond of kinship, or the men of newly conquered tribes (like Tlatiluico for a time after its capture), upon whom this degrading work (because woman-like!) was imposed as a penalty. Slaves were not nu- [554] [558]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 finely graded scale of social eminence. (See Plates 33–36.)

425 511 A married man received a plot of land directly from the clan or else took over his father's fields if the latter were too old to work. Diligent husbandry, eked out by making stone tools, pottery or practicing some such craft for barter, could produce a good living. Unmarried men helped their fathers and were able to add to their prestige by taking part in the numerous military campaigns.

[721] 555 Since the capture of victims for sacrifice was the chief glory of war, an able soldier who could subdue his enemies and drag them to the rear received much honor. According to the number of captives taken, a warrior had the right to wear an increasingly elaborate costume. Consistently success- [575] ful warriors could enter an order, like the Knights of the Eagle or the Ocelot (often referred to as Tiger), which performed special dances and rituals. Sometimes a warrior of unusual prowess received additional grants of land or more often obtained an increased portion of the clan's share of tribute. Having reached an established position by this means, he had a more important voice in clan councils and might attain a seat in the council itself. A special honorific, tecuhtli [554] (grandfather), which corresponds to chief among the North American Indians, distinguished these men. The title signified high social, but not official, rank, and from these men who had distinguished themselves by probity, bravery and religious observance, high elective and appointive posts were filled.[8]

624 In this stratum there were many positions of honor and influence, which, like petty political offices in small North American towns, were held in connection with some other means of livelihood. There were officials who kept order in the markets and tribunals which settled disputes in clan

565 contributed to their natural and legitimate masters in making their 463 houses and cultivating their plots... and they did the same for the 651 lords" (10). Taking into account all that has been said above it is clear that the payment of tribute existed within the same Tenochca group and reflected a difference between two kinds of people, and that there existed a relationship between this stratification and the ward divisions. It also appears from our data that, besides the tribute to the lords, there was a tribute to the rulers [a los "señores"], to the chiefs [a los "caciques"], which is probably to say, to the chiefs of the whole group, not just to the lesser ward lords.

10. Anunciación, p. 237.

565 It is certain that as a result of the role in the division of labor and 511 of the difference between being tributary and tribute-receiving, great differences in the standard of living in the population came about in Tenochtitlan. The macehuales had "neither furniture, nor clothing other than what they wear on their persons, which is very poor, and one or two stones for grinding maize, and a few pots for cooking and a mat on which they sleep... and they eat little... the common [651] people and the plebians are so tyrannized by their Indian lords that most of them have their rations taxed " (11). On the other hand we are told that the lords and rulers were always going to banquets and weddings (12) and that the princes slept in beds (13) and that the

11. Oviedo, III, p. 535. The weakness of the author cited vanishes by reason of its congruence with other authorities.

12. López Gerónimo, II, p. 151.

13. Martín de Anglería, P., p. 470.

[525] rulers had and gambled with "precious stones and jewels and gold and featherwork, slaves, blankets of all sorts, and arms and trappings of war" (14). We have all seen, likewise, the diversity which the categorical assertions such as that of the Codex Alcobiz (Laws which the Indians had) [Leyes que tenian los Indios].

14. Pomar, p. 27. Although the fact refers to Texcoco, it coincides with what is known in less

565
511

codices show between the clothes and gear of the macehuales those of and the lords and rulers in illustrations of Sahagun, Mendoza, etc. All of these are facts which oblige us to think that there were great differences of richness and well-being within the population of Mexico-Tenochtitlan and that these differences existed between the macehuales and pillis.

565
595

Another aspect which showed the differences between segments of the population was sexual life: "it is said that commoners have only one wife; but the lords can have concubines at their wish" (15), and

15. Mendieta, Eclesiastical History [Historia Eclestiástica], p. 297.

when they married "the noble women brought with them other maid-servants (and with all these women the men had)... much profit for they made them weave and make blankets, and perform other services of this sort" (16).

16. Motolinía, History [Historia], p. 164.

These data show us not only the well-being of the polygamous lords implicit in having a multitude of wives, but also the economic well-being derived from this polygyny, which was beyond the reach of the macehuales.

565
463

However, it seems that this stratification also included groups of people dedicated to occupations other than agriculture since we are told that the merchants also had lords who went about with the heads of the calpullis (17), which makes us think that not all the merchants

17. Zurita, p. 143.

were /p. 26/ lords, and that therefore there obtained among them also the stratification of which we have been speaking. Complementing and clarifying the situation, we know that the merchants and the artisans, although they cultivated their land, did not give tribute by working the fields but in work of their particular occupation

X 796 space], once more they circled back and returned [whence they had started].

[535] And when it all ceased, already it was late at night,

● [512] already time for all to sleep, as when one noddeth; today [that would be] at about the ninth hour.

[534] And when all had stopped, when the ground drum was undone, then all dispersed, all went, all betook themselves to their homes. The great noblemen, [373] when it was done, were accompanied by torches; they went lighted by torches, carried for them, to their homes.

And the women who had danced then were assembled, after there had been the song and dance, and they led them off. Even so was done with the leaders of the youths. They gathered [the women] together, grouped them, rounded them up, placed them together, assembled them, hunted them out,—lest they might go off somewhere, lest someone might accompany them, lest some debauched youth might go with [one of them].

[565] None the less, the noblemen addressed the matrons, that they might go and release some [of the women] or go and leave [one]. Not of their free will did [the women] go elsewhere; it was done on persuasion.

[431] And when they released them, [the girls] were given presents. Gifts were given, and food was given. And likewise, favors were offered the leaders of the women, the matrons. They kept for themselves and carried that which they saved to their homes.

X 796 And the young warriors, the young warriors who 836 had distinguished themselves, who were worthy of 684 honors, made their plea for the women only in secret, not before others; perchance in his home [such an one] awaited her, perchance elsewhere he called her. Just so, they are privily.

[548] And the woman came forth only at night and spent only the night [with him]; she departed when it was well into the night.

And if one was noted living in concubinage, thus he aroused anger; thus he gave offense. For this all assembled and held council there in the song-house.

Here, before everyone, they punished him. Because of [his crime] they cut off his warrior's hair dress; they took from him all his belongings—his [831] adornment, his lip plug. Thereafter, they beat him sorely with a pine stick, verily causing him to swoon; they singed his head with fire; smoke rose, and blisters formed on his body.

And when they had indeed caused him to swoon, then they cast him forth.

vmpa tlantec, oc cepa momalacachoa, in cujtlauje, oalmocuepa.

Auh in necaoaloa, ie tlaquauhioca, ie netetequiz-pan: yn iuh mixtlazilia axcan aço ie chicunauj ora.

Auh in ie izquich, yn onecacaoaloc, yn ompet ve-uetl, mec cecenmanoa, viujloa, yn izquichtin viuj yn inchachan: in veuei pipilti, onca caoalo, tlavilpan, tlaujlilotiuj, qujntlatlaujlitiuj yn inchan.

Auh yn cioa yn otenaoaque, njman mocentlalia, in ie oncujcoianoloc, in qujiacana, yn iuhq' yn tiach-caoan muchioa, qujnnechicoa, qujntecpichoa, qujm-ololoa, qujncenquijxtia, qujcentecpichoa, vel qujm-ixpepena, yn ma aca canapa ia, yn ma aca moteujcalti, in ma aca telpuchtlauelíloc qujujca:

tel in pipilti, qujmonilhujaia in cioa tlaiacanque, ynic cequjntin qujncaoatiuj, tecaoatiuj: amo çan moiocoiaia yn canapa via, tetencopa muchioaia.

Auh yn ontecaoaia, vmpa motlauhtiaia, vmpa tlauhtiloia; yoã vmpa tlamacoia: auh no tlatlauhti-loia, in cioatechcaoan, in cioatetiacanque, motlacauja, motlatlacauja, quitquj yn inchachan innetlacaujl.

Auh in teachcaoaã, inteachcauh, tlaiacatia, in ma-uiztililonj, çan ichtaca in qujnnaoatia cioa, amo teix-pan, aço ichan in qujchietiuh, anoço canapa in quj-naoatia: çan iuhquj, yn ichtacaquaia.

Auh in cioatl, çan oalioualquiça, çan moioealpoloa, oc ueca ioan in quiça:

auh intla aca ituz, in momecatitinemj, ic tlaquala-njaia, ic tlaiolitlacoaia, ica necentlalilo, yca nenono-tzalo; in vncan cujcacali:

vncan teixpan qujtlatzacujltia, ic qujtzotzocolte-quj, muchi qujcujlia in izquich ytlatquj, yn inechi-chioal, yn itempilol: çatepan qujujujtequj, ocoquauh-tica, vel qujhiiocaoaltia, qujquatlechichinoa, tlẽtleca-leoa, haaquaqualaca, yn inacaio.

Auh yn ouelqujhijocaoaltique, yca oalmaiauj:

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

constant guard over him." Montezuma heard the expression, and weighed it in his mind, and when Cortés came to pay his court to him, he heard of it, and was so angry about it, that he had Pedro López, good soldier as he was, flogged in our quarters, and from that time on all the soldiers who came on guard, went through their watch in silence and good manners. However it was not necessary to give orders to many of us who stood guard over him about the civility that we ought to show to this great cacique; he knew each one of us and even knew our names and our characters and he was so kind that to all of us he gave jewels and to some mantles, and handsome Indian women. As I was a young man in those days, whenever I was on guard, or passed in front of him, I doffed my headpiece with the greatest respect, and the page Orteguilla had told him that I had been on two expeditions to discover New Spain before the time of Cortés, so I asked Orteguilla to beg Montezuma to do me the favour of giving me a very pretty Indian woman, and when Montezuma heard this he told them to call me, and he said to me: "Bernal Díaz del Castillo, they tell me that you have quantities of cloth and gold, and I will order them to give you to-day a pretty maid. Treat her very well for she is the daughter of a chieftain, and they will also give you gold and mantles," and I answered him with much reverence, that I kissed his hands for his great favour, and might God our Lord prosper him, and it seems that he asked the page what I had replied to him, and he told him; and Montezuma said to him, "Bernal Díaz seems to me to be a gentleman," for as I have said, he knew all our names, and he told them to give me three small slabs of gold and two loads of mantles.

Let us stop talking of this and tell how of a morning after saying his[1] prayers and making sacrifices to his idols, he took his breakfast, which was a small matter, for he ate no meat, only chili peppers,[1] then he was occupied for an hour in hearing suits from many parts brought by Caciques who came to him from distant lands. I have already stated in the chapter that tells about it, the manner in which they came in to do their business and the reverence that they showed to Montezuma, and that at such times he always had in his company twenty elderly men who were his judges to decide cases, and as this has been already noted I will not repeat it. It was then that we found out that from among the many women whom he had as his mistresses, he gave wives to his Captains and to very favourite chieftains, and he even gave some of them to our soldiers, and the one he gave to me was a lady from among them, and her bearing clearly showed it, and she was called Doña Francisca. So Montezuma passed his life, sometimes laughing and sometimes thinking about his imprisonment.

[1] [i.e. Montezuma. — Analyst]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

I wish to state here, although it has nothing to do with our story, as some inquisitive persons have asked me just why the soldier mentioned by me, who called Montezuma a dog, and even that not in his presence, was flogged by order of Cortés, (there being so few of us soldiers), so that the Indians should hear about it. I say so [again], that at that time all of us and even Cortés himself, when we appeared before the great Montezuma, paid respect to him by always doffing our headpieces and besides being King of New Spain, his person and his rank entitled him to it, and he was so kind and well mannered that he did honour to us all. In addition to all this, one may well remember that our lives were at stake, and at a word to his vassals, they would have removed him from his prison and made war on us. Observing his bearing and royal generosity, and seeing that he always had with him

[1] Ají.

X 796 poles.[13] For four days this was done. Thereupon they came out of the water and all took up their array. Then all returned and went back whence they came, in the same manner in which they had come, sounding shell trumpets and naked, unclothed.

And when they had reached [home] and had gone into their houses, thereupon were thrown down [352] and spread out the white [and green] reed mats throughout the priests' houses.

Thereupon all wrapped and covered themselves with their capes. Then all threw themselves upon the ● [513] white [and green] reed mats. Cold, they lay frozen, as if dead—sleeping open-eyed, crouched, hunched up. Some just slept open-eyed; some fell into a stupor; some slept only lightly; some dreamed; some cried out in their sleep; some started up, snored, grunted, groaned, whimpered. They lay twisted in their sleep.

After midday they all arose. And when they had risen, then was adorned the fire priest, that he might offer and burn incense. He went everywhere, among all the temples; the old priests went ahead of him.

X 796 And when they had come to offer incense in all 264 [the accustomed] places, then food was eaten; food was eaten by each one. All were gathered in a circle, grouped in a ring. Severally, they were offered food, all kinds of sauce. For four days they only dipped into the sauce.

And if anyone mistook his sauce [for another's], then they detained him, they seized him so that he was taken. And when [the food] was eaten, none let fall a drop of the sauce on to the ground. [If] sauce was dropped on the ground, if anyone spilt [even] a little of the sauce, for all this he was detained and was punished.

X 796 And when this was done, when they had eaten, then all went to gather fir branches,[14] or canes—green maize stalks.

And when they had gone forth, when they had gone to pluck them, [the branches or canes] were bound together; they were tied in small bundles. And when they had made bundles of them, when it was time to strew them about, then they dispersed; all ran, hastening, carrying the reeds upon their shoulders.

Quickly they placed them in all the demons' temples.

mandi: nauilhujtl yn juh mochiouia yn: auh yn ie iuhquj mec oalquixoa yn atlan, nechichioalo, njman ie oalnecuepalo, jcuitlaujc oalujloa, çan ie no iuj in Vitze, tlapitzinujtze, pepetlauhtiujtze, tlapetlauj.

Auh yn onacico, yn onmocacaltemaco, njman ie ic motecteca, moçoçoa yn aztapilpetlatl, yn noujan calmecac:

njman ie ic netlatlalpiliło, nequequentilo, mec netetteco, yn aztapilpetlapan, cecec mjcoatoc, cececztoque, yitzitiotoque, mococotectlalia, motatapaiollalia: cequjntin çan iitztoque, cequjntin cocochi, cequjntin çan cochcanaoatoque, cequjntin temiquj, cequjntin cochtlatoa, cequjntin cochitleoa, tlaqua-qualaca, tlacotaliuj, tlaqujqujnaca, tlatetena, tlanecujliuj in cochioa:

qujn cennepantla tonatiuh in necheoalo. Auh in onecheoaloc, mec muchichioa in tlenamacac, ynic tlenamacaz tlatotoniz, noujian qujça in izqujcan tetzupan, qujiacantinemj in quaquacujlti.

Auh yn ôtlenamacato noujian: njman ie ic tlaqualo tlatlaqualo, neiaiaoalolo, neolololo: ceceiaca qujmonmaca yn intlaqual, yn quenamj molli qujmonmaca, navilhujxti in çan ice qujpalozque.

Auh intla aca qujpatilizque ymol, ic caci, ic conaci, ic onazioa: yoan in jquac tlaqualo, aiac achi qujchipinja yn molli, yn vncan tlalpan; tlatlalteco in molli, intla aca achi qujchipinja molli, muchi ic nezioa, ic netlanamjctilo.

Auh in ie iuhquj ynon tlaqualoc, njman ie ic viloa yn acaoiatl mocuiz, ie yn acatl, acazzoouhquj.

Auh yn ocalujloac, yn onmocujto: njman ie ic tlacuitlalpilo, acquj molpia: auh ynon tlacujcujtlalpiloc, in ie inman motemaz, njman ic tlatzomonj, netlalolo, netlatlalolo, qujquechpanoa in acatl:

qujtetentiquijça yn izqujcan in tetzupan tlatlacatocalo.

13. "Varales huecados," in Sahagún's Spanish text.
14. Sahagún says: "para que en ofrenda fuesse mas acepta iban a buscar laurel silvestre, que ellos llamaban ocotzquil, que es cosa muchos por esse monte" (Bustamante ed., Vol. I, p. 233). See also supra, p. 59, n. 3.

X 796 And when they had burned, they there buried their [765] charcoal and ashes.

And of those slain in battle, their streamers, their costly banners, their shields, and their capes, and their breech cloths they placed upon a dry maize stalk, tied on. From it hung loose twisted, red cotton [237] thread. At its end there hung a [dead] hummingbird, and four hundred [white] heron [feathers]. Many cords were pasted with feathers. At the ends hung heron [feathers]. They left these in the eagle bowl, where they burned.

And the sixth day was named "They come upon the grass."[1] And for this reason they named it "They come upon the grass," [that] grass was scattered [in the Temple of Mixcoatl]. This [was] grass from un-[793] der the pine trees. Here were ranged in their places the old women [who served the temple]. Before them lay a mat.

Thereupon came forth women with children. Each one heaped upon the mat five sweet tamales. All together, by fives, they laid them [there]. They came to give their children to the old women. And the old women came to take the children; they then dandled them in their arms. Then, those who danced their children in their arms gave them [back] to their mothers.

Then [the mothers] departed to their homes. This began in early morning. And it was time to eat when they finished. And when this was done, then all departed to hunt. They went to Çacatepec, there by Ixillan tonan.

And when ten days still remained in this month, as hath been said above, they then celebrated a feast [776] in honor of the god of the Otomí, who was named Mixcoatl, in the manner which will be set forth.

And when they had arrived there at Çacatepec, [342 513] nothing was done. Only when they arrived, they all made grass shelters, in which to sleep; all lit fires, to warm themselves.

And at dawn, thereupon food and drink were eaten and drunk. Then all arrayed and wrapped mantles about themselves.

X 796 Then all departed; all were ordered and disposed 224 in a row, stretching like a rope nowhere broken. All, in this manner, encircled all the deer, coyotes, rabbits, and hares; cautiously they closed in upon them.

And when they had come upon them, then all auh in ontlatlac, in jtecollo, yoan inexo, vncã contoca.

Auh in oiaomjeque in inmecapan, yoan intlaçopan, yoan inchimal, yoã intilma, yoan inmaxtli, oosquauhtitech in qujtlaliaia, quilpiais, itech pilcatiuh chichilicpatl, potonquj ic tlamalintli, yiacac pilcatiuh vitzitzilin, yoã cẽtzonaxtatl, mjec in mecatl, quipotonjaia hivitica, yiacac pilcatiuh axtatl, vmpa concaoa in quauhxicalco, vmpa tlatlaia.

Auh injc chiquacentlamantli: moteneoa, çacapã quixtoa: auh injc moteneoa, çaçapan quixtoa, motetzeloa, çacatl: iehoatl in ocoçacatl, vncan motecpana in jlamatque, ce petlatl imixpan onoc.

Nimã ie ic oalmoiacatia in pilhoaque çioa, contentimanj petlapan mamacujltetl in tzopelic tamalli: ceniauh, in mamacujltetl contema: quimõmacativi in impilhoan, in ilamatque: auh in jlamatque, quinoalantimanj in pipiltotonti, njmã quimonjtoia inmac: njmã ic quimõmaca, in tenanoan, in oquimonjtotilique inpilhoan:

njmã ic iatimanj in inchachan, oc iooatzinco in penaia. Auh in ie tlaqualizpan in necaoalo: auh in ie iuhquj, njman iecviloa in amjouz, vmpa tlamattivi in çacatepec, vmpa in jxillã tonan:

Auh in jmatlacioc metztli y, in tlacpac omoteneuh: vncan quilhujquixtiliaia, in inteouh otomj: in mjtoaia Mixcoatl in jpanjn moteneoaz.

Auh in onaxioac in vmpa çacatepec aiatle muchioaia, çan oc quixquich haxtioa nexpacaltilo, in vncan cocochioa, tlatlatlatilo, necxcolo.

Auh in otlatvic, njman ie ic tlatlaqualo ãtlioa: njmã ie ic nechichioalo, nehuapanalo:

mec viloa, netecpanalo, nevipanolo: iuhquin mecatl motilinja, acan cotonj: muchi tlacatl im juh, quinizoaloa in jxquichtin mamaça, in coiotl, in tochtli, in citli: çan jvian impan ommonamjquj.

Auh in ovel impan ommonamjc, mec tenamoiaalo, house, going around the fireplace. Then they came out. Then in the lead were those carrying [the gifts] in their arms, quietly going to the tribal temple—the bathed ones following, coming after [the others].

1. "Ye calle o la grama" (zacapan quixtoqui), according to Garibay (loc. cit.).

And when they had come to the tribal temple, thereupon the bathed ones danced in the courtyard. And they placed the gifts in the tribal temple. And they placed aside the capes, the breech clouts, the skirts, the shifts. Then first came the bidden guests. [The owners] offered gifts to each of them. And the women stood apart, in line. They also offered gifts to them.

And this was the office of only the merchants, who bathed and purchased [the slaves].

And when those had been completely arrayed who had come together and been given gifts, then they took the victims [that] they might go into the sand.[8] When they reached the [pyramid] temple of the demon, then all climbed up to the temple. When they had come to the top, then they circled about the sacrificial stone, and climbed down [the other] side.

And when they had come down to the ground, when they had reached the earth, then all ran to their tribal temples. And some went slowly. When they entered [the tribal temples], then [the merchants] took from them their paper vestments, and then they were placed upon mats. They served food, or wine, to whoever might wish it. All night they had them keep vigil.

And when midnight arrived, then they ranged them in a row, and cut hair from the crowns of their heads. When they had cut the hair from their heads, then they put it away for themselves (as hath been told in [the account of] Quecholli).

And when this was done, then were eaten [tamales of a dough of] amaranth seed, all at the same time, everywhere in the houses of the common folk. None failed to eat the amaranth seed [tamales]. And no one broke the amaranth seed [tamales] with his hand; they sliced it with [a length of] maguey fiber. And when the amaranth seed [tamales] had been eaten, thereupon were taken up the straw mats; they rolled them up and set them, in order, outside the door. Thereupon they lay upon the earth, the cold ground, [on] old capes, or old pieces of maguey fiber cloth, of which they made couches for themselves.

And upon the morrow, when it was still a little dark, then [he who carried the figure of] Paynal in tlanapaloa, vmpa tlamattivi in calpulco, ça tetocativi in tlaaltilti, ça tlatzacutivi. 796 ✗

Auh in oacto calpulco: njman ie ic mjtotia, in tlaaltilti, in jtoalco: auh in tetlauhtilli, qujcalaquja in calpulco: no nonqua qujtlalia in tilmatli, in maxtlatl, in cueitl, in vipilli: mec ommoiacatia in tlacoanotzalti, qujoalmacatimanj, ceceniaca in innetlauhtil: auh in cioa, nonqua mocempanoa: no qujnoalmacatimanj, in innetlauhtil:

auh inin çan mjxcavia in pochteca, in tealtianj, in tecoanj. [441]

Auh in ōtecencaoaloc, in oncenvetz, in ontetlauhtiloc: njman ie ic qujnvica in tlaaltilti, xalaqujzque: in onacique tlacateculotl iteupan, mec tleco in teucalticpac, in vmpanvetzito: mec qujoaliaoaloa in techcatl, can jc oaltemotimanj, centlapal.

Auh in otemoco tlalchi, in otlaltitech acico, mec oalmotlatlaloa in incacalpulco: auh in cequjntin, çan jvian in iativi: in ōcalaqujto, njmā ie ic qujntlatlalilia in jmamatlatquj, mec motlalia in petlapā qujnchieltia in tlaqualli, anoço vetli, in catle cōnequjzque, ceioal in qujntoçavia.

Auh in oacic iocalnepantla: mec qujntecpana, in qujntzoncujzque: in oqujmontzoncujque, mec motlatlatilia (in juh onjto ipan quecholli).

Auh in ommochiuh y, mec tzoalqualo, cēvetzi in novian maceoalpan, aiac in maca tzoalqua: auh in tzoalli, aiac imatica qujcotonaia: ichtli injc qujxotlaticate: auh in ontzoalqualoc, njmā ie ic meeoa in petlatl, qujjilacatzoa, qujjaoac qujoalmamana; njmā ie ic neteteco, çan tlalpan, tlalizticapan, ça tilmaçolli, anoço aiaçolli in cōmmopepechtia, in commopepechia. [264]

[513]

Auh in otlatvic ça oc achi tlatlaiovatoc, njmā ie ic oaltemo in teucalticpac in Paynal in jcpac Vitzil-

8. Cf. p. 87, n. 7, supra.

777 only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life x 796 of woe.[4]
805 And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a [551] man, they named him Nemon, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nencioatl.
x 796 And when [these days came], nothing was done;
the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were 777 judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or [402] a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they [356] beat and cleaned with a cloak.

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was [578] strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might
● [513] wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All [481] walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

x 796 And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more 754 will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he 761 will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjliztli, nenquiçaliztli, honeoatinemjliztli.

Auh in aquin vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaittililoia, tlatêmachililoia: auh intla oquichtli quitocaiotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenquizqui, acan ompouhqui acã, ompovi nenoquich. Auh intla cioatl: Nencioatl.

Auh in iquac y, atle aioaia, çan cactimãca in tecpan intecçali, amo tecutlatoloia, çan calonooaia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaõaztica: çan tlaiecapeviloia, ecaceoaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, totolaavitztica, anoço tlavivitequia, tlapopovaia tilmatica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cêca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicujx:

ano ac vel motlavitequia, moticujnjaia, motepotlamjaia; nematca, nenemoaia: auh in aquin motepotlamjaia: quilhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticcujc, ma ximjmati.

Auh in aquin ipan y, cocoliztli quicuja mococooaia: muchi tlacatl quitoaia, Concocolizcuj, aocmo quiçaz, aocmo motemachiz, in aço patiz, aocmo teumeiolloti, aocmo itech ca netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maquiça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatoaian: mjtoa. Ca ça oicnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oquimonomavili, oquimoioculili:

aocmo iuh catca teiollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, neellaquaoaloc, oquixcauhque injoaiolque, ca oiquitecaque: aocmo iuhcan quizooaiã inon oquêteltzin, meoatiquetz, inan oihiio quicujc, ca temauhti in jpan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle itonal, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatia, tetlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipooallo in jzquilhujtl navilhujtl.

4. The Tovar Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 36) adds that people did not gather at the temple, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other ceremony were.

into the forest, or on the desert, or into the water. A younger one, or whosoever wished, went perhaps half a league to place the spines. [The penitent] bore his shell trumpet and went blowing [it] where he placed the thorns. Wherever he came to be, he went blowing a trumpet.

vitztlalia, itecciz ictiuh, tlapitztiuh, in canj yn evitztlaliaia, yn oacito vmpa oallapitztiuh.

Sixth: When the priests slept, no two lay [together]. All lay quite separate. None were covered together.

Jnjc. 6. ynjc cochia tlamacazque, aiac vme temj, çan muchintin, mixcavitoque, aiac monepan tlaquentia.

Seventh: The food they prepared for themselves, together; for it was their own food which they ate. And if anyone returned with food from his house, he ate it not alone.

Jnjc. 7. çan mocenchioaia in tlaqualli, in quiquaia, ca oncatca in jnneuhia, in quiquzia. auh intla haca conmacaia ical itlaqual amo yioca conqua.

Eighth: At midnight, when, as was said, night divided in half, everyone arose and prayed. If anyone failed to do so because he slept, if he did not awake, then, for this, all gathered together and drew blood from his ears, or his breast, or his thighs, or the calves of his legs. Because of this, fear verily fell [upon the people].

Jnjc. 8. in iooalnepantla in iquac mjtoa iooalli xellivi, muchi tlacatl meoaia tlatlatlauhtiaia, yn aqujn tlacochcaoa, yn amo hiça njman ica necentlalilo, qujçoçoia ynacaztitech, yielpan, ymetzpan, itlanitzco vel ica maviztli vetzi.

Ninth: None then were proud; none then were unruly. All lived well ordered [lives]. If at times it appeared that one perhaps drank wine, or was given to women, or committed a great [fault], then they went to apprehend him. No mercy was shown. He was burned, or strangled, or cast into the fire alive or shot with arrows. And if he sinned only lightly, they drew blood from his ears, his flanks, or his thighs with magney spines or with a [sharpened] bone.

Jnjc. 9. çã njmã aiac tlacuecuenoviaia, ça njman aiac mocuecuetzoaia, vellatecpanpa yn nemoaia, intla ça nen quenman necia aço vetli qui, aço cioanotza, in anoço itla vej quichioa, njman quitzacutivia, amo tlaoculiloia, tlecujlolo, anoço mecanilo, anoço tlecujlolo ioioltoc, anoço mimino, yn çan tepiton quitlacoa qujçoço yn inacazco, in jiomotla in imetzpa, vitztica, anoço omitica.

Tenth: The small boys were so raised that if they did nothing of great evil, they then drew blood from their ears, or switched them with nettles.

Jnjc. 10. in pipiltotonti ic oapaoallo, çan njman atle vel conitlacoa, njman quinçoço in inacazco, anoço quintzitzicazvia.

Eleventh: At midnight the principal [priests] went down into the water and bathed there in the water.

Jnjc. ii. in iooalnepãtla apantemoia in ie tachcaoa, atlã õmaltiaia.

Twelfth: When it was a time of fasting, everyone observed it. Verily, [only] at the moment when midday arrived did indeed all eat—even the small boys. And when it was the fast which they name Atamalqualo, then they ate but sparingly.[2a] Some ate [only] at midnight and yet again went to eat at midnight; some ate at noon, and yet again went to eat at noon. No chili, no salt did they eat; neither, that they might sleep, [did they] even [drink] water. They said that the fast was broken if they ate or drank even a little.

Jnjc. 12. yn iquac oncatca neçaoaliztli, vel muchintin quipiaia, vel iquac yn oacic nepantla tonatiuh tlaquaia vel muchintin in pipiltotonti. auh in iquac oncatca neçaoaliztli in quilhuja atamalqualo, njman amo tlapaloa, cequjntin iooalnepãtla in tlaquaia, oc no iooalnepãtla in tlaquatiuh cequjntin nepantla tonatiuh in tlaqua, oc no muztla nepantla tonatiuh in tlaquatiuh, atle chilli atle iztatl quiquaia; ano tle ic cochi in manel atl, quitoa moneçaoalhujltequi intla itlaton cõqua, conj.

Thirteenth: Very carefully were they taught good discourse. If one spoke not well, if one greeted others

Jnjc. 13. cenca vel nemachtiloia in qualli tlatolli,

2a. "Thyndus, si. cuejar el pan sual panoja, quitlo comera" (Molina, op. cit.).

adultery. They accused him before Moctezuma, who then condemned him to be stoned before the people.

FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is discussed the council chamber of the brave warriors devoted to war.

Tequiuacacalli or Quauhcalli: there were the brave warriors, the generals, and the commanding generals,[9] whose personal charge was command in war.

Achcauhcalli: there were the constables, the brave warriors who were the ruler's executioners. These who brought to an end [the life of] any upon whom sentence had fallen [were] the Quauhnochtli, Atempanecatl, and Tezcacoacatl. And if they erred in something, they exacted the penalty of them and they died.

Cuicacalli: there were the masters of the youths and the rulers of the youths, there established in order to oversee what was by way of work. And every day, when the sun had already set, they turned their attention to dances. They went quite naked. So they went to the house of songs; so they danced with song, proceeding with, about their necks, only [a cape] made like a net. They set in place and proceeded with their forked heron feather ornaments and the red cord with which they bound their hair; and [they had] their turquoise ear plugs and sea shell lip pendants. All the youths, when they danced and sang, ceased when it was well into the night, when for the first time the fire priests and [other] priests blew the shell trumpets. None of [the youths] entered their homes; none slept at home. Rather, they went straight to the young men's houses, which were everywhere. There they slept, stretched out quite naked. Only little did they sleep. On the morrow, when it was still dark, they set forth, to lodge in the house of the ruler.

And when the ruler knew something ill of them—either drunkenness or concubinage;[10] or that they wrought something to their advantage behind the back of the ruler; [or] that without his command they levied tribute on the town, perchance of chocolate, or of food, which became a tribute, and it was done without leave, and [that] they exacted as tribute whatsoever they wished, then the ruler commanded that they be jailed in wooden cages. He condemned them to pay the penalty; perchance they strangled pan motecuçuma, njman qujoallatzontequjli, injc teixpan tetepacholoc. 692 563 684

IC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa in jnnenonotzaia in tiacahoan in jpampa iaujotl. 692

Tequjoacacalli, quauhcalli, vncan catca in tiacaoan tlacochcalcatl tlacatecatl, in jnneixcaujl iautequj: 701

Achcauhcalli vncan catca in achcacauhti in tiacahoan in jtemjcticaoan catca tlatoanj, ichoantin qujtzonqujxtiaia in aqujn tleia ipan omotzontec, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl, tezcacoacatl, auh in jtla qujtlacoaia, qujtzacutiuja mjquja. 696

Cujcacalli, vncan catca in tiachcahoan, in telpuchtlatoque vncan tlatecpanoaia injc qujchiaia tleintequjtl, auh in momuztlae, in jquac ie calaquj tonatiuh: tlamaçeoaliztli ipan qujmatia, çan petlauhtiuja, injc viia cujcacali, injc oncujcoanoaia çanijo inquech in onactiuja, iuhqujn matlatl ic tlachiuhtli, imaztaxel conmantiuj, tochacatl injc qujlpia intzonchichilicpatl: ioan ixiuhnacoch, ioan intempilol eptli, ixqujch in telpuchtlì in oncujcoanoia icoac necaoaloia in tlaquauh tlapoiaoa, in jcoac iancujcan tlapitzaia tlenamacaque tlamacazque, amo ac ichan calaquja, amo ac ichan oncochia, ca njman vmpa tlamelaoaia, in noujian telpuchcalli mamanca: in oncan cochia, çan pepetlauhtoca, çan achi in concochia, momoztlae in oc ioboan qujça in ontecpanoa, yn ichan tlatoanj. 561 [624] 535 [291] [301] [342] [513]

Auh in jcoac itla qujnmachilia in tlatoanj, açotlaoanaliztli, anoço nemecatiliztli, anoço itla icampa qujqujxtia, in tlatoanj: in amo itencopa, itla qujtetequjtia in calla açoatl, tlaqualli tequjpan iecauj, moioccia, qujtetequjtia injc intech monequj, njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco qujntlalia, qujntlatzontequjlia, injc qujtzacutiui, açoqujnmecanja, anoço qujntetepachoa, anoço quauhtica qujnujujtequj teixpan, injc mjctilo, injc maujztli qujteca tlatoanj. 561 681

9. Tlaxcalcalcal, tlacatecatl: see Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 27; Jens, op. cit., p. 79; Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 182, n. 3; III, pp. 57-58.
10. After conmanetlaoli, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has omoçe tetlacuitlaoli—or adultery.

And they fastened the new

with a rope about the waist, and [guards] held them tightly [with it] when they [went forth to] urinate. And when it was midnight, then hair was cut from the [crowns of] the heads of all of them; they cut their hair as hath been told and published. And when their hair had been cut, then feathers were pasted [to their heads], and also they pasted feathers [to the heads of] the women. And, as during the night, none of the guards might sleep by day.[10]

ic tetzoncujoa, qujntzoncuj: in juh omjto, in juh omoteneuh: auh in onteztoncujoac: njmã ie ic tepotonjlo, no qujnpotonja in cioa: auh in juh ceiooal, aocac ma ontlacacochi in tlapixque. 796x [514]

And when day began to break and it grew bright, thereupon (as hath been told) were burned the [bathed ones' raiment]; when these were burned, then once more they entered indoors. And some did not burn their belongings, but offered and gave them to others.

Auh in otlavizcalli moquetz, in ie tlatlalchipaoa: njmã ie ic motlatlatlatilia (in juh omjto) in ommotlatlatlatilique: njmã ie ic no ceppa calaquj in inician: auh in aca ąmo qujmotlatlatilia in jaxca, çan qujtetlauhtia, çan qujtemamaca.

And when it dawned [again], then all were once more adorned. Thereupon they went to the place where they were to die; they went ordered in rows. When they reached where they were to die, then they danced and sang spiritedly. It was said that [they sang until] their voices cracked; that they were hoarse.

Auh in otlatvic, njmã ic no ceppa techichioalo: njmã ie ic vi in vmpa mjqujzque, motecpana: in onacique vmpa mjqujzque: njmã ie ic mjtotia, mocujca ellaquaoa: omach intonqujtzatzaian, omach ihiçaoacaque: [533]

And when the sun had passed the zenith, then descended [he who was adorned in the likeness of] Paynal. He led and was first among the captives, who would become the fundament [of the ceremonially bathed victims]. When the captives died, then [they slew] the ceremonially bathed ones, who [were adorned in the likeness of] Ixcoçauhqui.

Auh in ie ommotzcaloa tonatiuh; njmã ie ic oaltemo in Paynal, qujnoaliacana, iacattivi in mamalti, in impepechoan muchioa: in ommjcque mamalti: njmã ichoã in tlaaltilti in ixcoçauhq̃.

And when they had completely ended the slaying, when it was so, [then] all the chiefs and lords, who were men due great reverence, were ready, and stood waiting in complete array. Moctezuma led them. He had put on the turquoise diadem, the royal diadem.

Auh in ocentlanque mjquj in ie iuhquj: auh in jaqujchtin tlatoque, in tetecutin in cenca mavizzilionj, ie ic manj, ça qujchixtimanj omocencauhq̃, qujniacana in Motecuçoma: ocontlali xiuhvitzolli, in tlatocaiotl: 796x 301 [643]

And all put on their turquoise nose plugs and [their] turquoise ear pendants, [made of] fine turquoise. And some [had] only [ear pendants] made of wood and painted like turquoise. And they put on their sleeveless jackets and turquoise [blue] waist bands well ornamented, and the Xolotl jewel which had the form of a dog. [It was] made of paper and painted turquoise [blue]. And [they put on] breech clouts of paper painted with black stripes. And these were painted only with black.

yoan contlalia iacaxivitl in muchinti, yoã conaquja xiuhnacochtli, vel xivitl. Auh in cequjntin çan quavitl in tlachioalli, tlaxiuhicujlolli yoan cõmaquja xicolli, xiuhtlalpilli, vel tlaicchioalli, yoã in xolocouqui iuhqujn chichiton ic ietiuh; amatl in tlachioalli, tlaxiuhicujlolli, yoan iamamaxtli, acaxilquj injc tlacujlolli: auh çan tlilli injc tlacujlolli.

And in their hands were staves, which were small and shaped like weaving sticks and painted in two colors—red above and chalky white below. In either

Auh in immac oonotiuh quavitl, çan tepitoton tlatiotzoquztectli, chictlapãquj; in aco chichiltic, auh 796x 293 [386]

10. "En aquelle mesmo 'mesmo derrojo' seems to be the corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex. See, however, Angel María Garibay K.: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, Vol. II (1946), p. 171, for a discussion of these in comparison.

The Iztac Ciuatl Ciuaquacuilli.

793 The Iztac ciuatl ciuaquacuilli also kept watch there and took care of the [Temple of] Atenchicalcan; and she was in charge of the sweeping and the laying of fires [there]. And any who made supplications [to the goddess] spoke to the Iztac ciuatl ciuaquacuilli. This one determined all that was done here at [the Temple of] Atenchicalcan.

Ciboaquacujlli iztac ciboatl.

In ciboaquacujlli iztac ciboatl çã no vmpa tlapiaia, vmpa tlamocujtlavjaia in atenchicalcan yoan ipan tlatovaia in tlachpanaliztlj in tletlaliliztli, yoan in aqujn vmpa monetoltiaia, ichoatl conilhujaia in ciboaquacujlli iztac ciboatl, muchi ichoatl quitzontequja in tlein vncan muchivaia atenchicalcã.

The Keeper of the God Ixcoçauhqui, at Tzonmolco.

The duties of the Keeper of the God Ixcoçauhqui, at Tzonmolco, [concerned] the wood of the god Xiuhtecutli. He caused it to be cried abroad that it be gathered in the forests. And those who gathered it were only those youths whose right it was [to gather it]. And when they had gathered the wood of the god Xiuhtecutli, they piled it up in the priests' dwelling at Tzonmolco.

Iscoçauhquj tzõmvlco teuhoa.

In jscoçauhquj tzõmulco teuhoa itequjuh catca, in xjuhtecuquavitl, qujtzatziliaia injc mocujtiuh quauhtla, auh in concuja çan ichoantin in telpupuchtin intequjuh catca, auh in oquicujto xiuhtequavitl, vmpa conquetzaia in tzõmulco calmecac.

Tlaçolquacuilli.

The Tlaçolquacuilli was charged that he should guard and take care of [the Temple of] Mecatlan. And he put on his sleeveless jacket, and he had his gourd for tobacco. Much did he venerate the Temple here at Mecatlan. None might urinate here; and if anyone did urinate here, then they seized him and brought him within. There they punished him and drew blood from him.

[514 688]

Tlaçolquacujlli.

In tlaçolquacujlli, itequjuh catca, vncan tlapiaia, vncan tlamocujtlavjaia in mecatlan, auh in qujmaqujaia, iziçol yietecõton ietinemj, cenca tlamavizotiaia in teupan, in vncan mecatlã, aiac vncan maxitzaia, auh in aqujn vncan omaxix, njman quitzitzquja, qujcalaqujaia calitic, vmpa quitlatzacujltiaia quiçoçoia.

The Keeper of the God at Tecpantzinco.

The Keeper of the God at Tecpantzinco guarded and cared for [the Temple of] Tecpantzinco. And his task was to have charge of the offerings. He caused it to be cried abroad that offerings be made here at [the Temple of] Tecpantzinco.

Tecpantzinco teuhoa.

In tecpantzinco teuhoa, vncã tlapiaia, tlamocujtlavjaia in tecpãtzinco, yoan itequjuh catca ipan tlatovaia in ventli quitzatzilitiia injc tlamanaloz vncan tecpãtzinco.

Epcoaquacuilli Tepictoton.

793 532 The Epcoaquacuilli tepictoton was concerned with the songs. When anyone molded figures [of the mountain gods], he consulted with him that he Epcoaquacujlli tepictotõ.

In Epcoaquacujlli tepictoton ipã tlatovaia in cujcatl, iquac in aqujn tepiquiz ichoatl ichoatl conjlhujaia in qujmisquetzaz, qujnnavatiz in cujcanjme, with eagle down — with tufts of feathers. It was called tenwelli. And the shield banner was painted like the blood banner. And his four arrows he held together with his shield. And his left arm band was hanging from his arm; it was composed of [strips of] coyote fur, and from it hung paper cut in strips.

And when dawn broke, when it was now the feast day, early in the morning, then those who had made vows before him unwrapped him. Before him they stood in one row and offered him incense; before him they laid all manner of gifts — feast foods, rolls of amaranth seed dough. And this was when they had not yet taken him up and elevated him to Itepeyoc. And all the men, the young, seasoned warriors, were as if determined and eager to proceed with and observe the feast, and thus show, exhibit proudly, and demonstrate it to the Spaniards.

All hastened and ran, as they made their way toward the temple courtyard, in order there to dance the winding dance. And when all had assembled, then the start was made; then began the chanting and the winding dance. And those who had fasted twenty days, and[9] those who had fasted a year, stood aside facing the others. Those who hemmed in [the dancers had[1] their pine cudgels; whosoever tried to leave [the dance] they menaced with the pine cudgels. But one who would [leave to] urinate took off his net cape and his forked heron feather ornament. But one who did not at once obey, who would not be excluded, or who was mischievous, they soundly beat his back therefor, [or] his thighs, [or] his shoulders, and thrust him outside. They cast him out by force; they threw him on his face — he went falling on his face; he fell forth on his ear. No one in their hold took his leave.

The elder brothers of Uitzilopochtli — those who had fasted for a year — were much feared, looked upon with terror and awe, and dreaded. And those at the head, the great leaders, the participants, might leave. They did not detain them. Yet all the small boys, those with the lock of hair at the back of the head, with the back lock of hair, and those with the jar-shaped hair dress — they who had taken a captive with others' help, — the leaders, those called leaders of young men, who were unmarried, who had gone [to war] to take one or two [captives], they also held away. They said to them: "Go along there, knaves! You shall give a good example! Appear not before us!"

9. Yoan is repeated in the MS.

796
778
[293]

Auh in otlatvic in ie illhujuh ipan, in ioatzinco ie ic quixtlapoa in jvic monetoltia, ixpan oncenpanti quj-tlenamaqujlia, ixpan qujmana in izqujcan ventli in tlacatlaqualli, in tzoalilacatzolli. Auh in jquac in, aocmo quitlecavique, aocmo cacoqujxtique in itepeioc: auh in ixqujch tlacatl in telpopochtequjoaque iuhqujn nececēquetzalo, iuhqujn in ioiolipā in jlhujtlazque, in ilhujtlamatizque, injc qujntlattitizque, qujntlamaviçoltizā, qujntlaixtlatizque, in Españoles:

796
778
535
[785]
[292]
514
[688]

tlatotoca, netlalolo, vmpa itztiova in teuitoalco, injc vmpa necocololoz. Auh in ococenqujzoac: njmā ie ic peoalo, ie ic vmpeoa in cujco yoan necocololoz. Auh in mocenpoalçauhque, yoan yoan in mocexiuhçauhque nepan jxtinemj: in tetzaqua imoocoquauh, in aquin quiçaznequj ic quitlaiciecalhuja in ocoquavitl: auh in aquin maxixaz quitlalitiuh icuechi, yoan iaztaxel. Auh in aquin çan njman atlatlacamati, in amo tetlaçaltoca in aquen tlatta, vel ic qujcujtlavitequj, qujmetzvitequj, caculhujtequj, caliticpa contopeoa, conchiccanaoa, conjxiquetza, mjhixiquetztiuh, nanacazitztiuh aiac temacnaoati:

[785]
[302]

cenca ichoā tlamamauhtiaia, tlamauhtiaia, cemjmacaxoa, cemjmacaxtincatca in jachvan vitzilobuchtli in mocexiuhçauhque. Auh in tlaiacatia in vevei tachcavan, in vevei chiva tel huel quiçaia, amo quintzacujliaia: auh in ie ixqujch telputzintli, in cuexpaltzine in cuexpaltzitzineque, yoan in tzotzocolçque, in tepallamanj, in yiaque: in moteneoa in telpuchiaque, in ce ic nemj, in ce cacitinemj, in anoço vme cacitinemj no qujntzaquaia: qujmjlhujaia, vmpa xiviā on nocne, anquitzittitia, amo techitto.

[p. 52 is blank]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

443 deer, mallards, young dogs and other things of that sort
262 in their part of the market, and let us also mention the fruiterers, and the women who sold cooked food, dough
[445] and tripe in their own part of the market; then every sort of pottery made in a thousand different forms from great water jars to little jugs, these also had a place to themselves; then those who sold honey and honey paste and other dainties like nut paste, and those who sold
443 lumber, boards, cradles, beams, blocks and benches, each [322 854 373] article by itself, and the vendors of ocote[1] firewood, and other things of a similar nature. I must furthermore mention, asking your pardon, that they also sold many [281 364] canoes full of human excrement, and these were kept in the creeks near the market, and this they use to make salt or for tanning skins, for without it they say that they cannot be well prepared. I know well that some gentlemen
[364 514] laugh at this, but I say that it is so, and I may add that on all the roads it is a usual thing to have places made of reeds or straw or grass, so that they may be screened from the passers by, into these they retire when they wish to purge their bowels so that even that filth should not be lost. But why do I waste so many words in recounting what they sell in that great market, for I shall never finish if I tell it all in detail. Paper, which in this country is [314 289 386 276] called Amal, and reeds scented with liquidambar, and full of tobacco, and yellow ointments and things of that sort are sold by themselves, and much cochineal is sold under the arcades which are in that great market place, and there are many vendors of herbs and other sorts of trades. There
[693 344] are also buildings where three magistrates sit in judgment, and there are executive officers like Alguacils who inspect [324] the merchandise. I am forgetting those who sell salt, and those who make the stone knives, and how they split them

[1] Pitch-pine for torches

X 796 [279] Any who wished, to whom it was pleasing, who wanted to, of the youths who had been drunk, [did so].

in çaço aquin connequja, conmonectiaia, ontlaeleujaia in mihivintia telpopochti.

[755] And some of them had so made vows that they would hide away the skins; because perchance they were covered with sores, or perhaps had an infection of the skin, or had maladies of the eyes, since for some this was successful and thus they recovered. Some did not recover.

Auh cequintin ic monetoltia, yn eoatlatiaque: ipampa aço papalanja, aço çaçaosti, anoço iztocoia: tel in aca, ipanti, ic pati, in aca amo pati:

[301 289] Each one of the captors came forth from his house, and appeared in and went wearing the [captive's] skin. They went with paper streamers[8] upon their shoulders and upon the calves of their legs.

ceceiaca inchan in tlamanjme oalpeoa, oaleoa conmaqujtiuj in eoatl, amateteujtl, ymacolpan mamãtiuh, yoan in tlanitzco.

[515] And so they went jumping, pressing on, arriving together. So [foul] did they smell [that verily] the stench wounded the head. [It was] repellent. All men held their noses when they were met, when they went among people.

Auh ynic vih, chocholotiuj, hiaxtiuj, centlalli mantiuh, ynjc yiaque, vel tetzonujtec, aisnamjquiztli: çan neiacapacholo ynjc namjco, ynic tetla qujça.

And the skins, crumpled and crackling, were hardened. And some carried them in baskets—dried up; frayed, stiffened.

Auh yn eoatl, ocotoczauh, ocacalachoac, oquaoac: auh in cequj ça chiqujuhtica qujnapaloa, yn ouelitpioac, yn oquelochauh, oquappizoac.

[431 531 291] And the captors came in lead of the tototecti. They bore their incense-ladles. They went with their gifts tied up in bundles—mantles perchance painted with designs, or in dark brown,[9] or crimson, or in two colors diagonally divided,[9] or with edges adorned with feathers—with feathers surrounding the edge.

Auh in tlamanjme, qujniacan.uj in tototecti, intletlema, intletlema ietiuh: qujmoolpilitiuj yn innetlauhtil, tilmatli, aço tlacujlolli, anoço camopalli, anoço nochpalli, anoço nacazmimquj, anoço teniujoaoanquj, yhujtenoaoanquj, yhujtentlaiaoalo.

And when they had arrived at the place where the skins were hidden away, on the top of the Temple of Yopitli, Yopitli's Temple, each one dedicated [incense] to the four directions; the captors offered incense, raising [toward the sky] their incense-ladles, and shaking them.

Auh yn oatioac, yn eoatlatiloian, yn icpac teucalli iopitli, iopiteucalli: nauhcampa ceceiaca ontlaiiaoaia, in tlamanjme ontlenamacaia, conjiaoa yn jntlema, conujujaua.

And those who stood clothed in the skins then undid them, and stood divested [of them]. And when they had taken the skins off, they cast them down, they threw them into a cave. And the captors went down to the bottom [of the temple pyramid] and quickly left and poured out the coals into the incense-burner.

Auh yn onacticac eoatl, njman mototoma, mototonticac: yn oqujoalcopin eoatl, contlaça ica onmaiauj yn oztoc. Auh in tlamanj, oaltemo tlatzitla, qujoalcauhtiqujça, qujoaltentiqujça, tlehquazco in tecolli.

X 796 515 And they who had come to dispose of the skins, which they had gone about wearing, washed themselves not with water, but with flour—with corn meal, with which they rubbed their faces. They scrubbed their faces with flour.

Auh yn oqujcaosto eoatl, yn onmaqujtiuja, amo mixamja atica, çan iotextli, tlaoltextli, inic onmixxaxaqualoa, ynic onmjxmamatiloa, mixioteruja:

6. See Chapter 20, n. 4.
7. In Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Alterthumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher & Co., 1902-23), Vol. II, p. 525, Seler translates camopalli as "Papierfarbene (oder grüne) Decke. In Einige Kapitel, p. 79, he has "Papierfarbene (von der Grünen Farbe der Knollen der Batatas edulis)." Molina (op. cit.) has color morado verde.
For nochpalli, Seler (loc. cit.) writes: "Karminfarbene (von der Farbe des Nochtli, der Kakteen-Schildlaus)."
8. Cf. Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, loc. cit., and Einige, p. 531.

They departed hence to go to the temple to bathe. These who bathed they did not rub, but struck and slapped, [with a noise] like the breaking of ocean waves. Thus came to an end and disappeared the grease. And also this was the time for the washing of heads. The captors washed their heads and washed off the sweat with a soap [called amolli].[9]

For while all had fasted for their captives, they had never bathed; they had remained in filth until twenty days had passed. Likewise those of their household had never bathed. Then all bathed and washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said: "The hair was washed," or, "The filth was washed away." [For] so were they covered with filth.

And thereafter the owner of the captive set up in the courtyard [of his house] a woven twig ball on three small feet.[10] Upon it he placed the paper adornment with which had been adorned the Totec [when he died].[11]

And from here he brought out one pleasing to look upon, acceptable, and strong. He likewise was adorned [with the paper vestments of Xipe]. It [illegible] he took after people; he dispersed them; the man vexed them. He ran; he went using his shield as shelter and rattling his rattle-board. They went after him in disorder; they showered him with stones, and pelted him and attacked him with stones.

Everyone feared him, and let him pass. They said: "Now cometh he who hath washed his head."[12]

And if he seized someone, if he snatched at anyone, he despoiled him of and ran off with his cloak; and however many cloaks he took, he carried them to the house of the captor and cast them on the ground in the middle of the courtyard.

Thereupon the captor planted his "pole of the flaying of men" in the courtyard; it betokened that this man [the captor] had flayed a captive.

Moreover, at this same time he put up[on the point of the pole], so that it hung,—having removed the [remaining] flesh,—the thigh bone[13] of the captive, and suspended with it the sleeveless knotted cord jacket and a small spray of heron feathers.

And he wrapped the thigh bone with paper, and provided it a mask. And this was called the god-captive.[14] vncã oneoa, in teupan, ynic maltitiuh, ynin nealtiaia, amo qujnmamatilooaia, çan qujntzotzona, qujntlatlatzinja, iuhqujn tlatlatzcatimanj, ic poujia, ic vel qujça in chiaoalitzli. Auh no yquac, netzonpaco in tlamanj, motzopaca, mamouja: 796[x] 515 [388] ipampa inic oquinneçaujlique, yn inmalóa, aic omaltique, omotzoiotique, inic oquiz tempoalilhujtl: cenvetzi yn inchantlaca, yn aic omaltique, qujnmuchiquacmaltia, mamoujia: ic mjtoa netzõpaco, anoço netzopaco, ynjc omotzoiotique:

auh çatepan itoalco, qujquetza in male, qujtlalia quauhtzontapaiolli, ey icxi, tzicujlicxe, ytech qujtlatlalia: yn jamatlatequj, ynjc omochichioaia totec. 796[x] [778]

Auh vncan conana ce tlacatl talqualittalli, tlauelittalli chicaoac: ie no cppa ie ic muchichioaia, ipan teiotoca, tececénmapa, tlacatl qujcocomonja, motlaloa· mochimalcahtitiuh, qujcacalatztiuh ychicaoac qujcaoatztiuj, qujteiotoca, q'tepachotiuj, qujtecicali:

muchi tlacatl qujmauhtia, ipan macauj: qujtoa, le tiitz teiztompacquj:

auh intla aca cana, intla aca qujcujtiuetzi, qujpepetlaoa, qujtlatlalochtia yn jnlma: in quezçuj qujtecujlia tilmatli, ychan concaoa in tlamanj, itoalnepantla tlalli ic qujujujtequj in tilmatli.

Çatepan itoalco qujquetza, itlacaxipeoalizquauh, in tlamanj: ic qujnettia, yno ce tlacatl quixipeuh malli. 796[x] 778

Auh yoan yn jquac y, tlaacopilouia: auh ynaca oc conchololtiaia, yn iquezttepol malli: yoan mecaxicolli, aztapatlacotonli itech pilcac. [291 237]

Auh in quezttepolli, amatica qujqujqujmiloaia, qujxaiacxiuia: auh ynjn motocaiotiaia, malteutl. [289]

9. Molina: op. cit., Spanish-Nahuatl section (xabon).
10. Corresponding Spanish text: "un globo redondo, hecho de paxaro."
11. Ibid.: "Pusoso encima los papeles con que se avia adornado, el capitan quando muerto."
12. Cf. Sahagún: Historia de Mexico, p. 93, n. 1: [illegible] "C'est-à-dire que réjouit (pensa) le seigneur, le maître (teuctli, ou [illegible] dans lesquels, que d'emploie [illegible] quand dort; noble d'une haute famille)." This would imply a double connotation.
13. Sahagún's Spanish text suggests that the thigh bone was then suspended. Seler, in Bonger Kapitel, p. 81, has "trophy."
14. Gottesgefangenfeuerk, in Seler, loc. cit.

all had set forth, at the place of embarkation, thereupon all bathed, and then departed.

And the canoe they then went and beached, at its resting place, at the place for beaching canoes.

And when dawn broke, thereupon all the priests washed the blue color from their foreheads, over at the priests' bathing place.

And whoever had hidden himself away, who had fled, hiding, during the fast for Tlaloc, when men were arrested [for misdemeanors], then, when the blue stain was washed from their heads, they cast him [into the water].

And when this was done, then all departed. Then they took outside the reed mats, bringing them from the priests' dwelling. They were carried out, and they cast them behind the priests' dwelling.

Enough. Here endeth [the account of] the feast day, Etzalqualiztli.

in neacalaquiloia, njman ie ic neaaltilo, mec viviloa. 78X

Auh yn acalli, njman ic vi qujtecazque, yn jonoia, yn acaltecoian: [504]

auh yn otlatujc, njman ie ic nequatexopaco: in tlamacazque vmpa yn jnnealtiaian, tlamacazque. [515]

Auh yn aqujn çan motlati, in çan mjnax, in iquac netlalocaçaoaloia, yn axioac, qujniquac ica nequatexopaco: vmpa atlan qujpapachoa. [681]

Auh yn ie iuhquj mec viloatz, mec tlaqujquixtilo, tlaccoalo in tolpepechtli in vn: ..i calmecac: tlaqujquixtilo, calteputzco contlatlaça.

Je ixquich, vncan tlamj y, yn ilhujtl, in etzalqualiztli.

at [the village of] Uitzilopochco. It was there at the [spring called] Uitzilatl, in a cave. With cypress[4] branches they stopped [the mouths of the jars] as they went. They proceeded bearing [the water] with them.

vmpan ca vitzilatl, oztoc, avevetica in qujoaltzatzacutivi, intlan qujoalaantivi: 796[x] 778

When they had taken [the water] hence, they thereupon sprinkled it upon [the victims], there at the foot [of the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. And there they gave [the victims] their paper vestments, their paper adornment, in which they were to die. And they painted them with stripes, in blue, from their feet up to their knees; and from their hands up to their elbows. And their faces they stained in horizontal stripes of alternate colors, light blue and yellow.[5] And they inserted nose plugs made of an arrow and a half disc.

in oqtjoalhujcaque: njman ie ic qujmatzelhuja, vncan in jcxitlan Vitzilobuchtli, yoan vncan qujnmamaca in jmamatlaqui, in jmamanechichioal in jpan mjqujzque, yoan qujntzao vavana in imjcxic, inmetzpan tlatlamj, yoan in inma, imacolpã tlatlamj: yoã imjxtlan tlatlaana, ic tlatlapantiuh in tezõtli, in coztic, yoan qujmontlalilia iacapilolli, mjtl muchioa, yoan anecuioti. 796[x] 302 [301]

And when it was so done, when they had adorned them, when they had prepared them, then [the bathers, they who owned the slaves,] took them to the tribal temple, but they came hence quickly. Thereupon each [owner of a victim] went to his house [with his slaves]. There they took apart and set down [the victims'] array, placing [their ornaments] in palm leaf baskets for them. And there, together, [the owners] began the singing and dancing, going in company with their women.

Auh in ie inhquj in oqujmõchichiuhque, in oqujmõcencauhque, njman ic qujnvivica in incacalpulco, çan oalqujqujxtiqujça, njmã ie ic vivi in inchachan tealtique, vmpa qujnxixitinja, qujntlatlalilia in intlatquj, qujmõtanatemjlia. Auh vncan in tẹoaft compeoaltia in cujcoianoa, qujnvivicativi in incioaoan. 796[x] 567

And when they had come to the fifth day [before the feast], then they who owned the slaves[6] and the old men of the tribal temple began a fast. They ate only at midday,[7] and bathed themselves at midnight. Having bathed there at the cloud house, they then departed from the tribal temple.

Auh in oacic, vncã tlamacujlti: njmã vncã compeoaltia in moçaoaia tealtique, yoan in calpulvevetque: tlacatlaquaia, yoan maltiafa in ipalnepantla: vmpã aiauhcalco in ommaltiaia, vncan oneoa in calpulco. [515]

And the woman who was to bathe [the slaves] bathed herself at the water's edge. She set up one thorn, stained with blood, on the bank. And when the four days of fasting ended, then at nightfall the serpent dance was danced. The bathed victims danced the serpent dance, as well as their owners, who had bathed them, and those who were to seize them, and those who were to bring them down [from the temple, when they were slain], and those who

Auh in cioatl tealtia, çan vncã in jatenco ommaltia: ce vitztli cõquetza atenco ezço: auh in ozõquiznavilhujtl, injc moçaoa: njmã ic oaliova in coanecujlolo, coanecujlloa in tlaaltjtlti, yoã in tealtique, yoan in tranque yoan in tetemovique, yoã im panoa- [535] que quiere decir, hombre, porque los hombres y muchachos para que engordaran, para que no correr fuera sabroso cuando los hubieran de matar y comer; semejantemente estos sacerdotes en Atlacuihuayan, porque allí hubo fiesta de ellos y allí los vendían los que trajeban en andanas."

The Real Palacio MS (Codine, op. cit., p. 317) reads: "Auh inic mitoa tonhuani yehica in ichcauh mocuiqui cuitlaxcoa mocuetlaxtia in inquich cuacuauhtli"—"y es dicho el que hubo gente porque a su cuidado siempre la hubieron con aquel cuitlaxcoa, cada uno de los águilas."

4. Sahagún (Cultural Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 99) calls chicohuaxtli crossing appears (an emblem of kingly power). In Sahagún (Bulmalo ed., Vol. III, p. 312) it is defined as Tecuilloxo mocuetzaxtia Tzon.; the corresponding Spanish text has "hojas de cedro." See J. Ignacio Dávila Garibi, Epítome de colores aztecas (México: Editorial Cultura, T. G., S. A., 1949), Vol I, pp. 156ff., for some notes on the etymology of chicohuaxtli.

5. Sahagún, in Codex Vaticanus 3738, 97r (Codex Vaticanus B) (Boston: Druck von Gebr. Unger, 1902), p. 8, describes this face painting (ixtlon chalipan) as Guisado de Guerra-mujer. The stripes, although of different color, are characteristic of Tezcatlipoca.

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "dueños de los esclavos."

7. "Comían al medio día" (loc. cit.); "He eaten (our dinner) are Tage (are Mittag)"—Sahagún, Biblioteca Kapital, p. 284; "comida a medio" (Codine, op. cit., p. 312).

X 796 as the ends, with cord, held together with cords so that as one struck, they made a crackling noise. Verily, they belabored and hurt one another.

[824] And if [the young warriors] caught a priest, if one was taken, they rubbed him with [powdered] magney leaves; sorely he burned and itched; [it was] as if his flesh crept. And if one of the young warriors was caught, the priests bled his ears with a [magney] thorn, and his arms, his breast, and his thighs, [so that] he cried out loud.

[352] And if [the priests] chased the young warriors there into the royal palace, they looted it, taking all the [reed] mats, the cord mats, the seats with backs, the couches, the backless seats. And if they found horizontal, two-toned drums, or ground drums, they removed them, taking all [with them].

And if [the young warriors] took after the priests, entering the priests' dwelling, they also robbed them, removing from them mats, shell trumpets, and seats.

And they dispersed from thence, and all stopped toward evening when a little sun still shone.

And the fourth day [of Atemoztli] was named "Ashes Are Scattered." The old people said: "For the bathed ones, who died," it was said, "yet walk [upon the earth] for four days. Not yet do they depart to the land of the dead. And when ashes are scattered, then they go down into the land of the dead."

[515 348] And then were burned the paper vestments in which they had died, which had been laid in reed baskets. And then all washed their heads with soap; all bathed. Then all departed hence, thus dispersing each [to his own house].

Here ended the feast of Panquetzaliztli, after it had already taken the four days from [the month of] Atemoztli.

piaia, quicacatzilpiaia, quiretevilpiaia, quimecatzecujaiaia, quimecatitlan tlaliaia ynic moujujtequj: iuhquin tlatlatzcatimanj, vel mococoltia, vel mococoaia.

Auh intla oce cacique tlamacazquj, intla oce axioac, quimealtia, cenca cuecuetzoca, quequazquja: yuhquin iolmiquj ynacaio. Auh intla ce axioa, telpuchtli, in tlamacazque quiçoçoia vitztica yn jnacazco, yn jacolpan, yn ielpan, yn jmetzpan, vel quitzatzatia.

Auh in telpupuchti, intla quinteocaticalaquizque, in vmpa tecpan, tlanamoia, muchi quinamoia in petlatl in petlamecatl, in tepotzoicpalli, in netlaxonj, in tzinicpalli: auh intla quipãtilia teponaztli, in veuetl muchi quiqujxtia, muchi quicuj.

Auh intla quinteocaticalaquizque tlamacazque in calmecac, no quintlanamoielia, quintlaçaçaquilia, muchi quinquixtilia, in petl-tl, in tecciztli, in icpalli: auh çan vncã xixitinj, necacao:'o, oc achi tonatiuh ie teutlac.

Auh inic navilhujtl motenecoa, nexpixolo: quitoaia in vevetque. Ca in tlaaltilti in omicque: quil oc nemj navilhujtl, aiamo vi in mictlan: auh in iquac nexpixolo, quinjquac temo in mictlan; yoã iquac motlatia, mopetlacaltema, in imamatlatquj in ipã omicque, yoan iquac neamovilo, nexaltilo, mec viviloa, ic cecẽmanoa.

Nicã tzõquiça in illujtl Panquetzaliztli, ie cuel ic naujlhujtl cõcuilia in Atemuztli.

Thirty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of the feasts and the ceremonies which they observed in the days of the sixteenth month, which was called Atemoztli.

The sixteenth feast was called "The Falling of the Water."[1]

As for naming it "The Falling of the Water," it was when for the first time threatened, rumbled, and thundered the rains. All the common folk said, "Water cometh down"; or, "The Tlaloca descend."

And when this happened, the fire priest at the Temple of Tlaloc went [about his tasks] very soberly, devoutly, in faith and hope that in its time the rain would threaten.

And when the rain threatened, then he forthwith arose and took up his incense ladle, the stem of which was long and rounded, and it rattled. The incense ladle ended [in the form of] a serpent. And the head of the serpent also rattled; it also [was] hollow.

Then he speedily fanned the coals into a flame. Then he swiftly filled it with incense, doing only this. Then he offered incense, raising the ladle as an offering to the four directions, rattling [the ladle] greatly, to and fro. Then he went to all the courtyards of the temples, offering and burning incense everywhere. Thus he besought and called upon the Tlaloca. Thus he prayed for rain.

And a number of the common folk made vows that they would make figures of the mountain [gods].[2] And five days [before the feast], they arranged and bought paper, and liquid rubber, and obsidian knives, and they bought maguey fiber.

They paid great honors [to the mountain gods], and did penances that they might make the figures and cover them [with paper]. No soap was used in bathing; only their necks did they wash.[3] Neither might [a man] lie with a woman, nor a woman with a man.

And until dawn of the day of the feast, when the twenty days of Atemoztli were completed, all the Inic cempoalli on caxtolli capítulo: itechpa tlatoa in jlhujtl, ynan in tlamaviztililiztli, in qujchioaia in jpan ic cemjlhujtl ic caxtolteti occe metztli in motenoa Atemuztli. 796X

Injc caxtolteti, occe ilhujtl ichoati in motenoa Atemuztli:

injc motenoa Atemuztli, ca iquac iancujcan oalanj, ossoalaca, titicujca in qujavitl: qujtoaia in jzquich macoxolli, atemo, anoço temo in tlaloque.

Auh in jquac y, in tlalocan tlenamacac, cenca tlaocuztica, tlateumattica, muchizcaca, motemachitica: in quenmã oalanjz qujavitl:

auh in oealan qujavitl, njmã ic moquetztiquiça, qujcujtivetzi in jdema, vel hujtlatztic, çan pitzaton in jquauhio, cacalaca in tlemaitl, oostl ipan qujça: auh in jtzontecon oostl no cacalaca, no iollo: [445]

njmã qujtzopilotivetzi in tlexochtli, in tletl njman contentivetzi in jiauhtli, ça mjxcavia: mec tlenamaca, nauhcampa in conjaoa, cenca cacalaca, ixsoaca, ichuiaca: mec iauh novian nemj, novian quiça in tenjtoaloo, novian tlenamaca, novian tlatotonja, ic tlatemachia, ic qujnecza in tlaloque, ic qujauhtlatlanj. [823]

Auh in cequjntin macenalti, monetoltiaia injc tepiquizque: auh macujltica in amatemaia, in amacoaia, ynan olli, ynan itztli, ynan ichtli in qujcoaia: [314 269]

cenca qujmaviztiliaia, ynan qujneçaviliaia injc tepiquizque, yoã tequentiquc: auo mamoviaia injc inuhtiaia, çan moquechaltiaia, amono cioacochia: auh in cioatl amono oquichcochia. [515 834]

Auh in ic iuh oallavi ilhujtl, in jquac tlacempoalti Atemuztli, iuh cioatl in nemoa, vel neixpoloio, in

1. "Dejada de el agua," according to Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 299), "porque ay hier onde llover, y nacer algunos ellos." Garibay, (op. cit., p. 313) has the same.
Concerning the term Atemoztli, Tezoz refers to Sequera, extraordinary deluges in the region, mentioned in Thévet, Kohler and Ohnen, op. cit., p. 32.
2. The Pelaez MS (Garibay, loc. cit.) places this in the lacuna of the text: "se mandaban a [illegible] [illegible]"—"se ordenaban de los cinco en hacer los dioses ellos (Tlaquilones)."
3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.

they placed them to one side. They strewed them in the water, and none, verily, might taste the husks. Because of this, care was therefore taken that none should be scorched, burned, or dropped into the fire.

And only during one day were they eaten. By night they were done; all finished. They left nothing for the next day.

And when it grew dark, the old men and the old women drank, alone. It was said: "They refresh themselves."

And after this they set up the image of the fire [god], Izcoçauhqui, Xiuhtecutli, Tlalxictentica, Cueçaltzin, Nauhyoueue. They gave him figure and substance of a dough of amaranth seed. These things they whose office it was, did—the men of the tribal temple, known as the Tzonmulca[2]—who especially worshipped [fire] as a god.

And when the twentieth day came, it was said: "Iscalli hath ended." They who provided ceremonially bathed victims then published and made it known to others [that they had secured sacrificial victims, each] setting forth in public his ceremonially bathed one, a slave whom he had bought, made [to be] the likeness of Izcoçauhqui; the owner then adorned him, causing to be placed upon him all the array of Izcoçauhqui. Thus it was said: "The bather [of the victim] gathereth [his wealth]."

And for this reason did one say "the bather [of a victim]": he continually bathed his victim with hot water all the time until he went to his death; all the time he caused him to know that death would be his lot at an appointed time; that he would die in the count of Tlacaxipeualiztli.

And before he died, he favored him greatly. The bather was careful of [the victim]; he enriched him [with gifts]; he restored all to him. All the food which he offered him was good.

And a harlot was provided as his guardian. Constantly she amused him; she caressed him; she made him laugh and be merry. Taking him about the neck, she rejoiced, she embraced him. She caught his lice [for him]; she combed his hair and arranged his hairdress. She made him forget his sorrows. And when the time came for the bathed one to die, the harlot took everything; she rolled and bundled up all the belongings of the bathed one. That which he wore he placed upon her; that which he had used in iztoatl: ipampa ic momalhujaia inic amo aca mochichinoa, motlatiz, tleco onvetzia. 796x [252]

Auh çan vel cemjlhujtl in qualoia: in ie icoa otlatlatlan, moch tlamja, aoctle qujmocavia in jmuztlaioc.

Auh in oiooac tlatlaoana in vevetque in jlamatque, çanjoque: mjtoaia, Texcalcevia. [273]

Auh in jquac y, quitlaliaia in jxiptla tletl Izcoçauhquj, Xiuhtecutli, Tlalxictentica, Cueçaltzin, Nauhioveve, tzoualli in quitlacatlaliaia, in quinacaiotiaia: ichoan qujchioaia in jtech povia calpoleque, moteneua: Tzonmulca, oc cenca ichoan in qujmoteutiaia.

Auh injc onaci cempoalilhujtl: mjtoa, Iscalli tlamj: in tealtianj, iqtuac quitcittitia, quiteixmachtia, teixpan quiquetza in jtlaaltil iez, in oquicouh tlacotli: in jxiptla muchioa Izcoçauhquj, iquac ic quichichioa itech quitlalilia in jxquich in jnechichioal Izcoçauhquj ic mjtoaia, tlaixnextia in tealtianj: [567] auh injc mjtoa, tealtianj: in jtlaaltil muchipa caltia, atotonjltica in jxquich cavitl mjquitiuh, in jxquich cavitl quimatitiuh in vncã imjquiz tequipã in jtlapoalpan: in mjquiz ipan tlacaxipenaliztli.

Auh in aiamo mjquj, cenca quimavizmatia, quiçeçẽmatia in tealtianj, quitlanenectia quitlacuecuepilia: muchi qualli tlaqualli in quimacaia:

auh ce avienj, in jtepixcauh muchioaia: muchipa caviltia, caavilia, quicamanalhuja, quivetzquitia, quiquequeloa, iquechtlan ixquj, quiquechnaoa, caatemja, quizziziquaozvia, quipepepetla, quitlaoculpopoloa: auh in jquac ie imjquixpan tlaahtilli: in avienj moch concuj, ontlacemololoa, concemololoa in jxquich in jtlaqui tlaahtilli: in oquiquequemja, in jtech oquitlatlaliaia in oquititlanja, in jpã oiztlacatinenca, 796x 548 [515]

2. Tzonmulco: temple of the fire god; also one of the division of Tenochtitlan. It is mentioned in the Appendix, p. 177, as the sixty-fourth building. Cf. Sahagún (Bustamante ed., Vol. I, p. 227; Vol. V, p. 74).

302 tance upon their heads; it was dyed with indigo,[1] so
386 that their hair shone. The teeth were stained with cochineal; the hands and neck were painted with designs—the necks were covered [with painting]. The stomach and breasts were [also] painted with designs.[1]

515 They bathed in the sweat house and with [soap
562 and] water. They were held in esteem. They were modest, good, and of noble [mien]. Thus did they [343] speak—attentively, and respectfully of others; they were diligent and considerate.

1 [i.e. the Aztec women -- Analyst]

Motema, mahaltia, momamauizmati: pinocanj, qualli maujztic, injc tlatoa: temauhcaittanj, teimacaçinj, hiçiuhcaioque, moiolitlacoanj.

1. Xiuhquilitl. Urbina (op. cit., p. 566) mentions two kinds: xiuhquilitl pinolxac, Indigofera sihl Linn., and xiuhquilitl pachiuac, Coldenia procumbens Klotzsch—both producing a blue dye.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

And as we went along we spoke of the good manners and breeding which he showed in everything, and that we should show him in all ways the greatest respect, doffing our quilted caps when we passed before him, and this we always did, but let us leave this subject here, and pass on.

CHAPTER XCI.

Of the manner and appearance of the Great Montezuma and what a great Prince he was.

643 THE Great Montezuma was about forty years old, of good height and well proportioned, slender, and spare of flesh, not very swarthy, but of the natural colour and shade of [302] an Indian. He did not wear his hair long, but so as just to cover his ears, his scanty black beard was well shaped and thin. His face was somewhat long, but cheerful, and he had good eyes and showed in his appearance and manner both tenderness and, when necessary, gravity. He [515] was very neat and clean and bathed once every day in the afternoon.[1] He had many women as mistresses, [595 837] daughters of Chieftains, and he had two great Cacicas as his legitimate wives, and when he had intercourse with them it was so secretly that no one knew anything about it, except some of his servants. He was free [515] from unnatural offences. The clothes that he wore one day, he did not put on again until four days later. He 643 had over two hundred chieftains in his guard, in other 644 rooms close to his own, not that all were meant to converse with him, but only one or another, and when they went to speak to him they were obliged to take off their rich mantles and put on others of little worth, but they had

---

[1] Blotted out in the original: "about the hour of (Ave Maria) evening prayer."—G. G.

000 Ninetenth Chapter. Here are told the offerings which they made for the sake of those who traveled to far places, and how respect was paid for the sake of those who died.

Injc caxtolli vnnavi capitulo: vncan moteneoa, in ventli in qujchioaia, im impãpa vecanemja ioan injc mortlaoaia in jpampa in mjquja.

441 And his household thereupon began the penances. They let themselves become dirty. No longer did 984 they wash their heads with soap, though they could bathe their bodies. Nevertheless, no more did they 515 submerge in water. But every eighty days they arranged the washing of heads with soap. Thus they showed and made it known that they did penance for the sake of their children, their young men, who were still absent. All the time they thus went about doing, however long he was gone.

Auh in jchantlaca: njman iquac compeoaltia in tlamaçeoaia, motzoiotia, aocmo mãmovia, tel vel maltia yn jntlacapa, iece, aocmo polaquj: auh nanapoaltica qujmattiuj, in mamovitiuj: injc qujnextia, qujtemachitia, ca ipampa tlamãçeoa in jnconeuh, in jntelpuch, in oqu jxcauhque, ixqujch cãujtl iuh qujchiuhtinemj, in jqujn qujçaqujuh:

441 And if, perchance, he had gone to die, first were 765 notified the old merchants. Their task was to inform and break the news to the people. These introduced a time of mourning into the home of the deceased. Thus they made it known that during four days there would be remembrances; his household would mourn. So they would be visited and consoled, and there would be a burial ritual for their child.

auh intla noce omjqujto, ichoan achto caqujtilo, in puchteca vtuetque, intequjuh in teiolmelaoazque, in teiolpachiujtizque, ichoantin qujcalaquja in choqujztli, in jxaiotl, in jchan omjqujto, ic qujtemachitia, injc naujlhujtl ilnamjcoz, mjccaoatizque in jchantlaca, injc tlapaloloazque, ellaquaoaloazque, qujmjloloz in inconeuh:

[515] And when four days had gone by, then his household washed their heads with soap. Thus it was said, the deceased was bathed; and thereby they destroyed and banished their grief.

auh in oqujz navilhujtl: iquac mamovia in jchantlaca: ic mjtoa, mõmjccaaltia injc compopoloa, conjilcaoa intlaocol:

441 And if somewhere he had died in battle, they set up an image of him made of pine torches bound 765 together.[2] They made and formed his image; they 778 adorned his likeness. This cuillotl was only a statue of pine logs which they split into sections and afterwards bound together. And they placed upon it all the paper ornaments, the paper array, the paper jacket, the paper neck-band, the paper stole. They piled up, strewed about it, and distributed them so that they would burn all of them with it. When this was done, when they had adorned the statue, when the one dead in battle had been wept, one more day auh intla cana oiaomjc, qujtlaliaia ieujllo, qucujllotia, queujllotlalilia, ixiptla qujchichiujlia, injn Evillotl: çan ocoquavitl in qujtzatzaianaia, çatepan qujcujtlalpia: auh ixqujch itech qujtlalia, in amatlatqujtl, in amanechichioalli, in amaxicolli, in amacozcatl, in amaneapantli, qujtlaolololtia, qujtlatepeoaltia qujtlamamaca, injc mochi ioan qujtlatizque: in ie iuhquj in oqujcencauhque evillotl, in jquac ie choqujliloz oiaomjc, oc cemjlhujtica, in jeujllo icalpulco, cemjlhujtl in ca, cemjlhujtl in eoatica: auh qujnjquac in ioalnepantla, qujtlatiaia, vmpa in qujtocaiotiaia, tevitoalco, quauhxicalco, tzompantitlan:

1. Qujmjloloz: possibly this refers to wrapping of the dead or clothing of a statue.
2. Evillotl: Corresponding Spanish text: "un estatua de tea, ansiosa usar, con cara."

Thirty-sixth Chapter, which telleth of the sweat house.

Although the sweat house were very hot, where all bathed, if one known as a twin went there, then he would dispel the steam and destroy [the heat], however hot the sweat house were — even if he went to stand only at the doorway; even more so if he were to bathe among [the others]. But thus could he remedy it; it was said that four times he himself cast potsherds on the ground and sprinkled them with water. It was thought that thus he would not dispel the heat. It would be even hotter.

And when two were born who were called twins, it was said that wherever something was dyed, when [someone] dyed rabbit fur, they might not enter there. If they were to enter there, it was said, they would cast a spell over it; they would blow the colors off. It would come out badly — it would become multicolored, especially [if the dye were] chili red. But thus was it remedied: [the dyer] made him taste the dye water. It was said that in this way the rabbit fur would not be damaged.

Likewise, neither might those known as twins enter where tamales were cooking; because, it was said, if they came in there, they would also bewitch the tamales and the cooking pot. They would not cook, though [left there] all day. The tamales would each one cook only on one side. And in order to remedy it, so that it would not thus happen, when perhaps they went to enter, they placed the cooking pot on the fire. And if by chance the tamales were placed in the pot in [their] presence, they made them lay one [of them] in place. It was said that thus the tamales would not be harmed.

Injc cempoalli on castolli ocs capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa: in temazcalli. 343

In temazcalli, in vncan netemalo: intlanel cenca totonquj, intla vmpa iaz, in moteneoa cocoa: njmã quipouhtitlaça, quipoloa injc cenca totonquj ocatca in temazcalli: intlanel çan quiiaoac onmoquetzatiuh: oc cenca intla tehoan motemaz. Auh injc patiz quijl nappa in vel inoma contlaçaz, in conatequiz tapalcatl: quijl ic amo quipoloa, injc totonquj: çan oc cenca totonquj iez.

Ioan in vmẽtin tlacati, in mjtoa cocoa, quijlmach in canjn tlapalo, in quipa tochomjtl: amo vel vmpa calaquj: yntla vmpa calaquiz, quijlmach quixoxa, quipitza in tlapalli: amo qualli in quiça, çan mocujcujcujloa: oc cenca yehoatl in chichiltic. Auh injc pati, achi contlapaloltia in tlapalatl: quijl ic amo ytlacaviz in tochomjtl.

No ioan in iehoantin in mjtoa cocoa, in cahjn mopaoaci tamalli: amono vel vmpa calaquj: ichica quijlmach intla vmpa calaquixque, no quixoxa in tamalli, ioan in comjtl: amo vel ycuci, intlanel cemjlhujtl: çan chichicoycuciz in tamalli. Auh injc pati, injc amo iuh muchioaz: in jquac tla ocalaquijto, contlatiz in comjtl. Auh intlanoçe ijxpan mocontema tamalli, centetl ipan contlalilia: quijl ic amo ytlacaviz in tamalli.

Thirty-seventh Chapter, which telleth of the time when the teeth of small children dropped.

When the teeth of small children dropped out, the mothers cast them into a mouse-hole, or they said to their children: "Place it in the mouse-hole." For it was said that if they were not to do this, the small child's teeth could not grow; he would remain quite toothless.

• • •

Injc cempoalli on castolli onome capitulo, itechpa tlatoa: in jquac vetzi intlan pipiltotonti. 856

In jquac vetzi intlan pipiltotonti: yn tenanoan itlacoiocco contlaça in quimjchin, anoçe inpilhoan, quimjlhuja: ytlacoiocco zictlali in quimjchin: ichica quijl intlacamo iuh quichioazque, amo vel ixoaz in jtlan piltontli: çan tlancotoctic iez.

• • •

Estas supersticiones harm the Faith, and therefore it is well to recognize them. Only these few have Estas abusiones, enpecen a la fe: y por eso, conujene sabellas, y predicar, contra ellas. Anse puesto, 000 a band] from ear to ear, which was called "black sweat," and they also applied pyrites [to it]. And some extended a black [stripe], called "a plaster of rubber," to their faces, and also it was sprinkled with pyrites.

And thus was their hair shorn: All were shorn like young warriors; together, all were shorn alike in the manner of young warriors. And those who had their temples closely cropped, were well shaven down, well scraped clean with a sharp piece of turtle shell. And they applied yellow ochre to their [remaining] hair; they colored it the color of maize flowers.

And thereupon, when they danced, they carried before them torches, pine fire brands, which flamed with much crackling and hissing. And as they carried them, the leaders of the youths [went] squatting because of the burden, as if running with thighs bent. And the resin, as it were, fell in large drops, and the live coals scattered and fell one by one. And the [charred] pine wood fell bit by bit to the ground.

And along the sides the lighting was only from fire ladles held in the hand. They who gave light were youths who had fasted twenty days. They were spread out in a circle, ranged on the sides. On one side were those of Tenochtitlan, and on the other side were those of Tlatilulco.

And they did not dance; they did only one thing —they only provided light. And they were on guard and kept close watch on people; their office was to be attentive that none might dishonor a woman; that none might look upon a woman, lest one might jest [with a woman].

If anyone was seen even only intending it, or trying it, maybe later—next day or two days hence—they punished him. They beat him with flaming pine boughs.[6] Verily, they left him for dead.

And when all were dancing, sometimes Moctezuma emerged and came forth to dance, and sometimes he came not forth. Only if he wished he did so.

And that they might go in line when they danced, they held one another by the hand or about the waist.

And some they grasped by the hand; all grasped hands. And thus they kept on with their feet, that they might take the dance steps all together with their feet. And they whirled about repeatedly; and they passed by the braziers, proceeding among [them]. They went back and forth among the rows of braziers. When they had reached the end [of the no ca petzujaia, auh in cequjntin imixtlan caana tilli: itoca aujtolli no ca petzuja. 796x 302

Auh ynic moximaia, muchintin motiachcauhximaia, cenuetzia in motiachcauhximaia: yoan yn incanaoacan qujconaloaia, vel qujcoconaloaia, vel caiochiquja: yoã qujtecoçãnujaia, qujtomjiolhujaia. [714]

Auh in ie iuhquj yn iquac ie mjtotia, tlepilli, ocopilli, qujniacana tlatlatiuh, cuecuetlacatiuh, cocomocatiuh: auh in qujnapaloa telpuchtequjoaque cenca eticiuj, iuhqujn tzitzintlacça: auh yn ocotzotl, iuhqujn chachapaca, yoan in tlexochtli tetepeuhtiuh, cecenmantiuh: yoan in ocotl oalichachaiaca. [373] [516]

Auh in tlatenco, çan matlematica in tlaujlo: iehoantin in tlaviaia telpopuchti, in mocempoalçauhque, tlaiaoalotimãca, ixtlapantimanj: cectlapal manj in tenochca, no cectlapal manj, in tlatilulca. [785]

Auh amo mjtotia, çan qujxcaujaia, çan ixqujch tetlaujliaia: yoan tlapieia, vel teixpieia, vel ymix intequjuh catca, ynic aiac ytla vncan qujmotequjtia, ynic aiac vncan teixtlaxiliz, yn açaca vncan vetzcatiuh: [834]

intla aca oittoc, çan oc conjxxotia, coniximati, açoqujn jmoztlaioc, anoço qujn iviptlaioc, in qujtlatzacuiltia, qujujujtequj ocoquauhtica, tlàtlatlatiuh, ca micquj in qujcaoa. [684]

Auh yn iquac netotilo, in Motecuçoma, in quenmanjan, oalquiçaia, oalmjtotiaia: auh in quenmanjan amo oalquiçaia, çan yiollo tlamatia: 796x 535 auh ynic tecpantiuj, in mitotia, monaoa, mocujtlanana.

Auh in cequjntin, inmatiteeh maana, nematitech neaano: auh ynic qujauhtiuj, yn imicxi, ynic tlayiaoa, çan ceniauh yn imicxi: yoan ontzitzinquiça, itlan qujqujztiuj in tlaujltetl, itzalan quiquiztiuj, itic cacalactiuj, yn ixqujpantli tlaujltetl: yn oacito yn

6. See Plate 22.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

535 chants survive without, alas, the musical notation. These dancers, acting out mythical events pertaining to the lives of the gods, must usually have been highly theatrical. Thus as with other peoples of the past, religious service fulfilled the function of the drama.[19] (See Plate 62, bottom left.)

[212] The pictographic writing of the Aztecs was too simple to 537 record a literature. However, the many references to oratory
538 and the wealth of allusions and synonyms referring to the gods and goddesses give a picture of rich fantasy and poetic imagination. The emphasis on the spoken word, the complex background of the religion, the closeness of the supernatural world, would not have produced lean, accurate prose. Rather a semipoetic, highly symbolic verbiage came from the practice of oratory and the chanting of prayers. Thus a rhythmic and rich verbosity existed as a form of polite address that, given a system of writing, might have been transmuted into literature.[20]

517 These activities, which we sanction in our own culture under the terms of arts and letters and to the practitioners of which we assign honor as creative artists, were existent in Aztec society. The status of these practices, however, was very different from their position in our own culture. Much of that area of our own life divided up into the infinite gradation of commercial, legal and governmental pursuits fell within the span of the individual Aztec's normal social life. That energy and activity which we exhaust in religion, art, belles-lettres and science was combined by the Aztecs in the observance of their religious requirements. The nature of their religion and its position in Aztec life and social practice are fundamental to a realization of the nature of their culture.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 ture writing to see that each subject town had fulfilled its
644 quota or else were calculating the share that should be turned over to the various clan stewards. Another patio presented a more animated scene. Here acrobats were practicing their feats and poor, warped dwarfs were composing grosser contortions to win a chiefly smile. In another set of buildings [367] was housed the zoo, where serpents undulated sluggishly and where, from behind wooden bars, peered the greedy, yellow eyes of jaguars and ocelots. In a side room a human arm projecting from a basket of raw meat showed how the bodies of some sacrificial victims were utilized.

491 The highway to Tlaltelolco extended north from this great 517 plaza, which even today is the center of the city. This wide
174 road, with a canal beside it, was filled with the same indecisive multitude that thronged the southern artery. The setting sun had brought people out on their roof tops. Some leaned over parapets to watch the crowd below, while idlers, squatting in a shaded bit of the street, took equal interest in the slow movements of the householders above them.

868 A path and a canal, debouching into the main avenue, led
174 to a small square, in the center of which loomed a pyramid. From the patio of an adjacent building shrill cries arose and the dull clash of wooden instruments. Within, a number of boys were receiving instruction in the manual of arms. Each equipped with a small buckler and a flat wooden club, they learned the art of cut and parry under the scornful eye of a warrior. They dealt and received hard blows, but the clubs were not toothed with wedges of obsidian, the volcanic glass that made hand-to-hand combat so vicious in war. Another group was practicing with the atl-atl, or throwing stick. The marksman laid his spear along a narrow wooden trough with 524 525 won[2] all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were round, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, slaves, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if then he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a [787] great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

ololiuhquj anoço teuxiujtl, quetzalli, tlacotli, calli, mjlli, tlaçotilmatli, pepechtli, veuej tilmatli: chalchiuhtenteti, teucujtlanacochtli, xomoiujtilmatli. Auh in aquin patoanj, in qujchaiaoa in etl, intla centetl etl ic teoquechili, in moquetzticaz etl, in vmpa ic tzinmjmjltic: cenca tetzammachoia, cenca tlamaujçolli ipan mottaia: njman muchi qujtlanj, in jxqujch tlaçotli, in motlanjtoa in macanel aiamo açi in quezqujtetl aqujlli, injc netennonotzalo, injc netzopalo.

526 411 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green [301 643] stones or fine turquoises. The ruler placed it about his wrist.

Tlatlamjna tlaujtoltica, tipontica, totomjtica, tlacochtica: itlaujcallo, matzopetztli ipan ca, uej chalchiujtl, ololiuhquj, anoço teuxiujtl in jmaquechtlan qujtlalia tlatoanj.

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With [223] these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

Tlatlacaloazuja, tlatlamotla ican tlacalhoàztli, iujcallo telolonatlàtl mjmjltic injc mopetlaoa telolotli, ic qujmotla tepitoton totome, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca totomatlatl: injc qujmaçi nepapan totome, 351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

moxochimjltia, moxochitepantia, caquja, in jxqujch nepapan xochitl, vncatca intetlavemetzquiticahoan in qujmellelquixtiaia, in qujcecemelcia: ioan quauilacatzoque in qujpaquiltia mjiec tlamantli in jntlachioal teuetzqujti, ioan mauiztic, in jca ixocpal tlanjpa injc tlàmati çe tlacatl, tomaoac in quanmjmjlli in qujtotia ica ixocpal aquetztoc acopa in conmaiiuj quammjmjlli ça ichoatl in jxocpal ic tlamati, mjiec tlamàtli, in tececemelti in qujchioa, vncatca imaachoan, ixoloan in qujnujcatinenca in qujmehellelquixtiaia, tzapame, villame, tepotzome, teachme, quinpiaia quaquauhti, oçelome, cujcujtlachtin, ocotochtin, nepapan tototl.

522 524 There were their jesters who provided them solace and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

517 [732] [231] Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There were their servants, their pages who attended them and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS reads quidamiaoa (he wagered) instead of quidamiaia.

And Afterwards, at night,

*796 they ate and drank, and held flowers and those canes of perfume. And they sat in their seats. And each one [302] began to boast of what he had gained, and of the distant parts which he had reached. And he belittled [521] the others for their counting for little; [for] neither did they have as much as he, nor had they gone to distant places, as he had. In this the ones made a great mock of the others for a long space of the night.

mauan flores: y aquellas cañas de perfumes, y assentauanse en sus assientos: y començaua cada vno a jactarse, de lo que auja ganado, y de las partes remotas, donde auja llegado: y valdonaua a los otros de que eran para poco, nj tenjan tanto, como el, nj aujan ydo a partes remotas como el: en esto tenjan gran chacota, los vnos con los otros, por gran rato de la noche.

The Tenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they named ce malinalli, in the second house, named ome acatl, they celebrated a great festival; for they said that this was Tezcatl-[778] ipoca's sign. In this feast they fashioned the image of Omacatl, and one who felt devotion took it to his house that it might bless him and cause his goods to increase. And when this took place, he kept it and preferred not to let it go. He who would let this image go, waited until the next time when the same sign reigned. Then he returned it whence he had taken it.

La decima fiesta mouible

En el signo que llamauan ce malinalli: en las segunda casa llamada vme acatl, hazian gran fiesta: porque dezian que esto sino era de Tezcatlibuca: en esta fiesta hazian la ymagen de Omacatl, y alguno que tenja deuocion, lleuauala a su casa: para que le bendiziesse, y le hiziesse multiplicar su hazienda, y quando esto acontecja tenjala, y no la queria dexar: el que queria dexar esta ymagen esperaua, hasta que otra vez, reynasse el mjsmo signo: entonce la lleuaua adonde la auja tomado.

The Eleventh Movable Feast

In the sign called ce tecpatl, in the first house, they brought forth all the ornaments of Uitzilopochtli; they cleaned them and shook them out; and they put [them] in the sun. They said that this was his sign and that of Camaxtli. This they did at Tlacatecco. Here they set out, on this day, many kinds of food, very well cooked, like that which the lords eat. They presented all of them before his image. After they had remained there a while, the officials of Uitzilopochtli took them up and divided them among themselves, and ate them. And they also incensed the image and offered it quail. They struck off their heads before it, so the blood should be shed before the image. And the lord offered all the precious flowers which the lords used, before the image.

La onzena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce tecpatl. En la primera casa sacauan todos los ornamentos de Vitzilobuchtli, los linpiauan, y sacudian, y ponjan al sol: dezian que este era su signo, y el de camaxtle: esto hazian tlacatecco: aquj ponjan, en este dia, muchas maneras de comjdas, muy bien gujsadas, como las comen los señores: todas las presentauan, delante de su ymagen, despues de auer estado vn rato alli, tomauanlas los officiales, de Vitzilobuchtli, y repartianlas entre si, y comjanlas, y incensauan tambien a la ymagen, y ofrecianla codornizes, descabeçandolas delante della: para que se derramasse la sangre delante la ymagen: y ofrecia el señor todas las preciosas flores, que vsan los señores, delante la ymagen.

The Twelfth Movable Feast

[753 776] In the sign named ce oçomatli they said that the goddesses called Ciuapipilti came down to the earth and [that] they harmed the boys and girls, afflicting them with palsy. And if anyone, at this time, sickened, they said that [the Ciuapipilti] had caused it: that he had come upon them. And the fathers and mothers on these days did not let their children go outside the [784] houses, so that they might not come upon these goddesses, whom they held in great dread.

La dozena fiesta mouible.

En el signo llamado ce Oçumatli: dezian que decendian las diosas llamadas cioapipilti, a la tierra: y dañauan a los njños, y njñas, hiriendolos con perlesia. Y si alguno en este tiempo enfermaua, dezian que ellas lo aujan hecho, que se auja encontrado con ellas: y los padres, y las madres, estos dias no dexauan salir a sus hijos, fuera de casa: porque no se encontrassen, con estas diosas, de las quales tenjan gran temor.

Tenth Chapter, in which is told how the rulers took their pleasure.

When the ruler went forth, in his hand rested his reed stalk which he went moving in rhythm with his words. His chamberlains and his elders went before him; on both sides, on either hand, they proceeded as they went clearing the way for him. None might cross in front of him; none might come forth before him; none might look up at him; none might come face to face with him.

He sang; songs were learned; chants were intoned. They told him proverbs and pleasantries to pass the time.

They played ball. There were his ball-catchers and his ball-players. They wagered [in this game] all [manner of] costly goods—gold, golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, slaves,[1] precious capes, valuable breech clouts, cultivated fields, houses, leather leg bands, gold bracelets, arm bands of quetzal feathers, duck feather capes, bales of cacao—[these] were wagered there in the game called tlachtli.

On the two sides, on either hand, it was limited by walls, very well made, in that the walls and floor were smoothed. And there, in the very center of the ball court, was a line, drawn upon the ground. And on the walls were two stone, ball court rings. He who played caused [the ball] to enter there; he caused it to go in. Then he won all the costly goods, and he won everything from all who watched there in the ball court. His equipment was the rubber ball, the leather gloves, girdles, and leather hip guards.

Patolli was played with large beans—four large beans with holes bored into the surfaces. The game was won when from their hands they scattered the four beans on a mat painted in widely spaced black [lines], with which the patolli mat was designed. There went to be added the counters—twelve [of them], six the property of each, the counters of each of the contenders. He who won in playing patolli,

Injc matlactli capitulo, ipan mjtoa injc meellel- 643
qujxtiaia tlatoque.

In jcoac qujça tlatoanj, imac onotiuh, iacapitzac, [48]
injc mapilotiuh, injc matlatotiuh qujiacana in jte- 643
chiuhcaoan, in jtaoan, necoc vmac in mantiuj, in 644
qujtlapeujlitiuj: aiac vel qujiacaujltequj, aiac uel iv-pan qujça, aiac vel acopa qujtta, aiac uel qujxnepanoa,

cujca, mocujcamachtia, cujcacheooa, qujtlatla- [521]
quechilia, qujçaçanjlhuja,

vllama, vncatca imolpixcaoa, ioan inmolancaoan, [525
qujtlanjtoa in jxqujch tlaçotli in teucujtlatl, in teo- 526] cujtlacozcatl, in chalchiujtl, in teuxiujtl, in tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in mjlli, in callj, [301
cotzehoatl, teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalmachoncotl, 576 xomoiujtilmatli, cacaoapetlatl in vncan netlanjoa, 314]
itoca tlachtli:

necocampa imac tlatepantectli, cenca tlaiecchiuhtli 345
injc xipetztic in tlachmatl, ioan in tlalmantli: auh in 526
vncan vel inepantla tlachtli, onoca tlecotl tlaxotlalli in tlalli, auh in jtech tlachmatl, vntetl in tlachtemalacatl manca, in aqujn ollimanj vncan tlacalaquja, vncan qujcalaquja olli: njman ic qujtlanj in jxqujch tlaçotli tlatqujtl, auh muchintin qujntlanj, in jxqujchtin tetlatlattaque, in vncan tlacheo: itlaujcallo in olli, maieoatl, nelpilonj, queçeoatl.

Patoa ica aiecotli, vevej etl nauhtetl in tlaixcoionjlli 524 injc motlanj immatica in qujchaiaoa in nauhtetl etl, qujcujloa ce petlatl, tlilica, papatlactic in tlilli, injc mjcujloa patolpetlatl, in vncan mopouhtiuh tlapoal-tetl matlactetl omome chichiquacentetl imaxca intlapoaltenh icecemme in jxnamjquj in motlanj in patoa, qujtlanjlia in ixqujch tlaçotli, cozzic tetacujtlacozcatl, 524
chalchiujtl, teuxiujtl, matzopetztli ipan ca chalchiujtl 525

1. Tlaçotli: the corresponding Spanish has slaves (esclavos). See also below, description of patolli.

everyone ate and drank. The old merchants lay guarding and watching, smoking, inhaling the fragrance, and taking their pleasure. Smoke drifted upward and was overspread. Food was spread out in abundance; nothing was lacking. Of this it was thus said: the merchants heated things; they placed them in the sun.

And when it grew dark, there was drinking. All of the old merchant men and women assembled. When they became drunk, then they vaunted, boasted, and bluttered over their wealth, their achievements, their valor, and especially wheresoever they had set foot; that is to say, wheresoever they had gone to arrive; the things which they had discovered, the manner of their return, their coming back. So they had gone to perform their labors and to circle about the surrounding provinces, to encounter the waste lands, to descend into the gorges — everywhere entering places of danger and drawing into fields of battle. And verily in some places they were besieged and ambushed. Perhaps only one or two escaped the hands of the enemy, coming to leave word with and inform the people that they had first broken and scattered the rampart and enclosure of eagle and ocelot warriors.

So there they made light of, scoffed at, exposed, revealed, abused, and tortured those who knew no places, who had gone nowhere, who nowhere in any degree had set foot anywhere; who only at the ashes of his fire called himself a warrior[19] and lived prudently[20] and impudently only here in the market place. Only here, the market place, did he frequent, buying, selling, and deceiving. And this was when, because of their suffering, these cast into the fire — or it fell by the wayside — their rearing, because they were troubled and moved by the counsel of their fathers and mothers. So there at the place of congregating there was dispute, discussion, abuse, fault-finding, and belittling. They sat jostling and besmearing one another, disputing and quarreling among themselves, contending, refuting, and bragging. They paid no heed to others' answers; they did not consider others to be superior.[21] They chattered.[22] Likewise, they were often arrogant; each one had his own opinion; they made little of and puctli mantoc, tlaqualli qujqujztoc, atle monectoc, ichoatl injc mjtoa, ca tlatonaltia, tlatotonja, in puchteca. 441 527 556

Auh in oiooac tlatlaoano, mocecentlalia in puchteca veuetque, in puchteca ilamatque, intla otlaiujntic, vncan qujmopopoaltia, qujmeecaltia, ic mjxmotlatoque, yn innecujltonol, yn intlaiecoliz, yn jmoqujchtiliz, oc cenca ichoatl: in canjn icac imjcxi, qujtoznequj: in canjn acitinemj, in quexqujch ic conmati, in quexqujch imjloch, innecuepal, ic quichiuhtinemj, injc qujlacatzotinemj anaoatl, injc ixtlaoatl qujnamjctinemj, injc atlauhtli quitemovitinemj, in noviian calactinemj, in ovica, in iaotitlan qujztinemj: auh in nel cana impan oalmotzaqua, qujnpoiomjctia, aço ça ce, vme, in tematitlampa qujça, in qujoalcaoa tlatolli, in oalteitoa, ichoan achtopa qujpetla, qujxitinja, in quauhtenamjtl, quauhtlatzacujlli, ocelotenamjtl, ocelotlatzacujlli. 441 527 554 521

ic vncan qujquequeloa, ica maujltia, qujtlatlacaqujtia, qujcocoa, qujtotoneoa, qujcocolhuja, qujchichinachilia yn jiollo, in acan onmati, in acampa ianj in acan quentel, in acan icac icxi, in çan njcam inextitlan mooqujchitoa, çan njcan tianqujzco in mjmantinemj, tlaxtlapalotinemj, çan njcan in motitianquja, tlatlanecujloa, tlatlaxiccuj, auh ie vncan in jtoneuhcacopa, motlecomaiavi vevetzteoa, yn intlazcaltilhoan, in jntlaoapaoalhoã, injc vel imjtic oaaçic intzcoco, in teitic aaçic intlatol, in jntahoan, yn jnnaoan, injc vncan in necentlaliaia maaoa, mononotza, moquequeloa, mopâpatla, mopapatzaoa, moquezicçatoque, moçoqujmoclatoque, motlatzoujlitoque, moquâquatoque, mjxquâquatoque, motlatolxpeuhtoque, moieboatocatoque, âmotenaqujlmatque amo motenpanavillanj, chachalacatoque, no çac in jzmoquixtia: muchi tlacatl cecenteti itlatol, atle ipan qujmotztilitoque, amo commopovilitoque in jnnecujltonol, yn jnnetlamachtil: huel nononqua mutachcauhnequj, mocecentecpoa, cecentecuti, cecenme mo-

19. Mocopiqichiuc in the Real Palacio MS. Nicaxo: niaxo is unsure.
20. Mimiltiuxui in loc. cit.
21. Possibly amoxcmopalmoc pe and amo mocmpanavillanj are intended.
22. Chachalacatoque in the Real Palacio MS.

441 527 554 521

held in no esteem the riches and prosperity of others. Indeed, each one alone wished to be best; each one thought himself a lord, a superior person; each one thought of himself as the only one, the best. Each spoke for himself; none would talk to them or say a word in their behalf, unless he were a vanguard merchant, one who knew distant lands; unless he were very rich, dealt in goods in his house, or were a buyer of slaves,[33] a ceremonial bather of captives to be sacrificed; unless in his house were carrying frames stuffed and creaking; unless in his house one drank from black jars, gourd vessels, etc.

This was because each one of the merchants himself placed things in the sun at his own house on the day sign Four Wind.

mati, mocococamati, nononqua motlatalhuja, aiac vel inoan tlatoa, aiac vel inpal onmocencamavia: intlacamo oztomecatl, intlacamo veca matinj: ioan intlacamo cenca mocujltonoa, intlacamo ontlaaaquj ichan, intlacamo tecoanj, intlacamo tealtianj, intlacamo cácatzcatoc, nánatzcatoc ichan cacaxtli: intlacamo poctecontica, aiotectica atlioa ichan et.ª.

Ipampa injc ceceniaca tlatonaltiaia, puchteca in jncacalitic: in jpan jn tonalli nauecatl.

33. Or "one who commissioned guests."

524 won[2] all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green
525 stone, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were round, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, slaves, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if then he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a ololiuhquj anoço teuxiujtl, quetzalli, tlacotli, calli, mjlli, tlaçotilmatli, pepechtli, veuej tilmatli: chalchiuhtenteti, teucujtlanacochtli, xoxoiujtilmatli. Auh in aquja patoanj, in qujchaiaoa in etl, intla centetl etl ic tecquechili, in moquetzticaz etl in vmpa ic tzinmjmjltic: cenca tetzammachoia, cenca tlamaujçolli ipan motaia: njman muchi qujtlanj, in jxqujch tlaçotli, in motlanjtoa in macanel aiamo açi in quezqujtetl aqujlli, injc netennonotzalo, injc netzopalo.
[787] great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

526 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with 411 a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green [301] stones or fine turquoises. The ruler placed it about [643] his wrist.

Tlatlamjna tlaujtoltica, tipontica, totomjtica, tlacochtica: itlaujcallo, matzopetztli ipan ca, uej chalchiujtl, ololiuhquj, anoço teuxiujtl in jmaquechtlan qujtlalia tlatoanj.

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With [223] these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

Tlatlacaloazuja, tlatlamotla ican tlacalhoaztli, iujcallo telolonatlatl mjmjltic injc mopetlaoa telolotli, ic qujmotla tepitoton totome, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca totomatlatl: injc qujmaçi nepapan totome, 351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

moxochimjltia, moxochitepantia, caquja, in jxqujch nepapan xochitl,

● 522 There were their jesters who provided them solace
524 and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

vncatca intetlaveuetzqujticahoan in qujmellelqujztiaia, in qujcecemeltia: ioan quaujlacatzoque in qujpaqujltia mjiec tlamantli in jntlachioal teuetzqujti, ioan maujztic, in jca ixocpal tlanjpa injc tlâmati çe tlacatl, tomaoac in quanmjmjlli in qujtotia ica ixocpal aquetztoc acopa in conmaiauj quammjmjlli ça ichoatl in jxocpal ic tlamati,

517 Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There were their servants, their pages who attended them
[732] and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, [231] servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

mjiec tlamâtli, in tececemelti in qujchioa, vncatca imaachoan, ixoloan in qujnujcatinenca in qujmebellelqujztiaia, tzapame, villame, tepotzome, teachme, qujnpiaia quaquauhti, oçelome, cujcujtlachtin, ocotochtin, nepapan tototl.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia M5 reads quichaoaz (he wagered) instead of quichaoja.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Mazeouth Chapter, in which it is told how the women were trained.

[Theirs were] the device with which [the loom] was held; the divided cord; the skein; the shuttle; the cane stalks; the wide batten, which swished [as it was used]; the thin batten, one made of bone; the small batten with which they worked designs; the heddle; the flail; the spindle whorl; the spinning bowl; chalk; the shallow spindle whorl when they spun with feathers; the basket for unspun cotton, one for rabbit hair, one for cotton thread, the basket for feathers, and the earthen bowl for feathers; the rack for yarn; the colored wood[1] with which they dyed cotton when they wove; the bowl for colors in which they dissolved pigments; the paper patterns from which they took the shape of whatsoever they made; maguey spines, with which they picked the cotton threads.

They took personal charge of preparing food and chocolate. There were their older women, who had reared them; and their hand-maidens were hunchbacks and dwarfs, who sang and played the [small ground] drum to amuse them.

Injc cuxalli ocz caplculo, vncan mjtoa, injc molehecoaia çion. 286 462

Nenconj, mecomaxalli, quatzontli, xiiotl, otlatl, tzotzopaztli cacalaca, petlacac: tzotzopaztli pitzacac, omjtzotzopaztli, tzotzopaztepitzon, ic tlamachioa: teçacatl, tlaujtcoaj, malacatl, tzacalcaxitl, tiçatl, xaxalmalacatl ic injxtaoa: ichcatanatli, tochomjtanatli, icpatzanatli, injxtanatlj, injtecomatl: tzatzaztli, tlacujlekpanujtl injc qujcujloa icpatl in qujqujti: tlapalcaxitl, in vncan qujpeoha inclapal: amamachiotl, in vncan cana tlein tlamaclatli qujchioa; vitztli injc qujuitzcuj icpatl: [386] tlapalchioa, achioa, qujnomauja: vncate in jnnahoan in qujmjxcalhia, ioan in cocoa tepozzone çihoa, tzapame, cujca, tlamotzona: injc melelequjxtia. 462 [722 534 522]

1. Tlamiquipanoaiti Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 222) describes the tints as "Tecuxque, y chiuo los cuales usaron que parecen plumas colore d'hermosjs: se debid como pintadas, porque de ll se fueron tapanaxtlas, tecuxcalles y ollocuxtes. . . ." Cline is plotted in Thomas, op. cit., IX, 18.

[p. 50 is blank]

When he wished to be amused, the ruler commanded that they play patolli, that is a mat on which patolli was played be painted black, in widely spaced stripes. So was it painted that there might be kept the count whereby the game could be won. And then also holes were drilled into the surfaces of four large beans with which patolli was played and the game was won. And in the same way the majordomos did [as in the ball game]:[15] they spread out all the costly goods and belongings of the ruler, there where patolli was played, where [players] represented the ruler. And then, if the ruler were bested, then the majordomos brought out other [players]; and they changed all the vassals whom the ruler had set in place that patolli be played.

In tlatoanj, in jquac qujnequja iiellelquiçaz tlanaoatiaia injc patoz, mjcujloa cc patolpetlatl, ica tlilli, papatlactic in tlazotlalli ic mjcujloa, in vncan nepoalo ic netlanjoa: auh njman no mjacoionja nauhtetl aiecotli, injc patolo injc netlanjoa: auh çan ic no iuhquj qujcinoaia in calpixque, injc mochi tlaçotli in jtlatquj, in jaxca tlatoanj, qujoalteca in oncan patoloian, in qujtetlanitalhuja in tlatoanj, auh in icoac, intla otlanjhoac tlatoanj, njman tepatla in calpixque: ioan qujpatla in jaqujchtin maçeoalti, in ocontlalica tlatoanj in patoloia. 643 522 525 524

SIXTH PARAGRAPH, in which is described the ruler who was good of heart and kindly.

The ruler was very indulgent of others, very merciful, and kindly. When he wished, he set forth along the road, following it. If any poor vassal, who made bold to hail the ruler, greeted him pleasingly, then [the ruler] commanded the majordomo to give him a cape, a breech clout, and a place for him to sleep, and that which he might drink, and eat—dried grains of maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if a lowly woman made bold to greet the ruler, he likewise granted and accorded her her shift, her skirt, a place for her to sleep, what she might drink and eat—grains of dried maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if some poor indigent were to fashion or make so many skin drums, or a song of honor, if then he dedicated them to the ruler, if he gave them [to him, the ruler] showed great compassion and indulged him; he gave him a house, he enriched him; he gave him whatsoever goods lay in the house; and he gave him a steward who daily might care for him, give him to eat, provide him his breakfast, wherewith to break his fast, and provide him wherewith to sup. And he gave him all [manner of] gifts—costly capes, beds, wealth, women, and a slave, and honor.

INJC CHIQUACEN PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, in aqujn tlatoanj qualli iiollo, teicnoittanj. 643 431

In tlatoanj, cenca tetlaocuilianj, cenca teicnoittanj, ioan teicnelianj, in icoac qujnèquja, qujçaz in otli qujtocaz: in aqujn motolinja maçeoalli, in motlapaloa, injc qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, intla ouelquitlapalo in tlatoanj: njman qujnaoatia in calpixquj, qujmacaz tilmatli, maxtlatl, ioan icochia, ioan in qujz, in qujquaz, tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla motolinjanj çioatl motlapaloz qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, çan no iuh qujcnelia, qujtlauhtia in jujpil, in jcue, icochia, in qujz, in qujquaz tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla aca motolinja, icnotlacatl, oqujchiuh, oqujtlali, quezquj vetetl mauizio cuicatl, intla njman itech qujpoa tlatoanj, intla qujmaca, cenca qujcnelia, qujtlaocolia, qujcalmaca qujcujltonoa, qujmaca in quezqujch tlatqujtl in jtic onoc calli, ioan qujmaca calpixquj injc momoztlae qujmoçujtlaujz qujtlaqualtiz, qujtenjxitiz, qujneuhcaiotiz qujcochcaiotiz: ioan qujmaca in izqujch netlauhtilli in tlaçotilmatli, in pepechtli in necujltonolli, çioa, ioan tlacotli, ioan mauizioti.

15. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: "y de alli arrojan su juego, con que jugaban, y quemaron lejos; y otros cosas como estas se dicen."

[p. 60 is blank]

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

dishes and food which Montezuma gave them they ate 643 standing up with much reverence and without looking at 264 his face. He was served on Cholula earthenware either [415] red or black. While he was at his meal the men of his guard who were in the rooms near to that of Montezuma, never dreamed of making any noise or speaking aloud. They brought him fruit of all the different kinds that the land produced, but he ate very little of it. From [415 time to time they brought him, in cup-shaped vessels 832 of pure gold, a certain drink made from cacao which 272] they said he took when he was going to visit his wives, and at the time he took no heed of it, but what I did see was that they brought over fifty great jugs of good cacao frothed up, and he drank of that, and the women served this drink to him with great reverence.

Sometimes at meal-times there were present some very [522 ● ugly humpbacks, very small of stature and their bodies 732] almost broken in half, who are their jesters, and other Indians, who must have been buffoons, who told him witty sayings, and others who sang and danced, for Montezuma was fond of pleasure and song, and to these he ordered to be given what was left of the food and the jugs of cacao. Then the same four women removed the table cloths, and with much ceremony they brought water for his hands. And Montezuma talked with those four old chieftains about things that interested him, and they took leave of him with the great reverence in which they held him, and he remained to repose.

As soon as the Great Montezuma had dined, all the men 643 of the Guard had their meal and as many more of the other house servants, and it seems to me that they brought out over a thousand dishes of the food of which I have spoken, and then over two thousand jugs of cacao all frothed up, as they make it in Mexico, and a limitless quantity of fruit, so that with his women and female

And the wine server, if he saw that those whom he gave wine did not become intoxicated and in a stupor, but only sat staring and grimacing, once again turned to the left, made a beginning from the left — that is, beginning where he had left off, with those of last place, the lesser in rank. So at that place he made a beginning in order to make them drunk. Thus he went reversing and rearranging the process of making them drunk.

So there was singing: there were songs of sadness and tears; or only broken singing, each one as he liked, each outdoing the others. There was the giving of pleasure, of much contentment. There was the encouragement of one another, and tearful greetings. And some only hummed, singing secretly, or did nothing. And some did nothing else but sit content and rejoicing, laughing and making witty remarks, making others burst into laughter as if their sides were sore. They sat exhausted with mirth[11] if they heard something which moved them to or diverted them with laughter. It was as if dogs were barking.[12]

Just so was it done at banquets and feasting, and assemblages and gatherings of people, and their recitation and the giving of dances, etc., when someone had a feast for the child to place it in the cradle, and the place where he was put in the cradle was watched.

auh in tetlaoanti intla quimjttz quintlaoantia, yn amo ivinti, in amo jamanja, in çan itztoque, ixpepeiontoque, ic no cuel iẽ copuchilochtia, tlaopuchcopa quipeoaltia. q. n. in vncã oquicauh, in tlatzaccan, in tlacuitlapilco, ic nẽ vncan quipeoaltia, ynjc tetlamamaca, ynjc tetlaoantia, ic quicueptiuh, quipapatlatiuh in iztlaoãtiliz: 574 273 851

ic necuicatilo, netlaoculcujcatilo, nechoquizcuicatilc, anoço çan cuicaçacamolo, no çac tle queoa, necujcapanauilo, necomeltilo, nececomeltilo, neellaquaoalo, nechoquiztlapalolo, auh in aca çan tẽtencuicatica, yhichtacacujcatica, aiac ica quichiuhtica: auh cequjn çan qujxcavia in pactoque, im papactoque, vevetzcatoque, camanalotoque, vetzquiztequittoque, iuhqujn inxillã quaquauhti, ommimjctoque in vetztca, yn onoitla quicacque, in tevetzquiti, tevetzquiceuh, iuhqujn tlananalco. 851 574 [533] [522]

Oyvin in muchiouia coaiotl in tecoanotzaliztli, in teoẽtlalilizti, tenechicolizti, tecevilizti, teintotilizti. et.[1] Yn iquac aca quitlaqualiaia in piltzintli, ynjc tlaçoçolaquja, tlaçoçolaquiloian nepielo.

11. Fourteen of the Bad Palaces 162.

12. Thousand sources in ibid.

[p. 120 is blank]

blood], so that they terrified those whom they followed.[88] They fought, joining in battle against the valiant chiefs—chosen men [all].

And all [the chiefs], having taken their pleasure with wine, acted like buffoons, imitating and pretending to be warriors, unafraid of death, jostling one another, acting perversely, like warriors. Here they exercised their arms [against those who were skins], and played at combat like fighters in war, none resting.[89] This was [at Xipe totec's temple] called Tonecco.

And the young men garbed like Xipe totec, wearing human skins,[87] then went everywhere from house to house, begging. They were placed on zapote-fibre seats; bunches of [corn] were hung on them like jewels; they placed garlands on their shoulders, they covered them with flowers. They gave them to drink.

And if any woman had blisters, or ophthalmia, she said: "Let me make an offering to Totec, when [the Feast] of the Flaying of Men [is celebrated]."

[Xipe's] gayb [was thus]: he had the quail-painting on his face.[90] Rubber divided his lips in two parts. On his Yopi-crown[91] was placed [a band] with forked ends. He wore a human skin, the skin of a captive. He had a wig of loose feathers, golden ear-plugs, a zapote-leaf skirt. He had rattles. His shield was red and had circles. His rattle stick[92] was in his hand.

tetoca, ynjc motlamauhtilisia: qujnnecalilticia, qujnnamjquj- 776 796 in tiiacaoan, tlapepenti, tlatzonanti:

yeoan in ixquichti, çan papaquinj, yn mjhivintia, tlatlamati, moqujchnequj, moqujchnenequj, amjquizmauhque, [524]
teca momotlanj, iaotlaveliloque: vncan moiriecoaia, moiaomamachtiaia, yn juh mjcalizque iaopan, vmpa mocacaoaia yn aiac, mjtoaia totecco. [346]

Auh yn totecti njman ie ic noujan, tepan cacalaquj, no tlatlaeoa: tzapoicpalpan tlalilo, qujmocholcuxcatia, qujnzochineapanaltia, qujmicpacxochitia, qujntlaoantia. [292 352 302]

Auh intla aca cioatl, totomonja, ixcocoiteia: qujtoa, ma njctlamanilia, in totec, iquac tlacaxipeoalirtli.

Jn inochichioal, miacolnechimale, tenmaxaltic vltica, 776 yiopitzon contlaliticac maxaliuhquj, conmaqujticac tlacaieoatl, yieoaio malli, tzonchaiaoale, tzucujtlanacoche, tzapocueie, tzitzile, ichimal tlauhtevilacachiuhquj, chicaoaztli yn jmac icac.

Ninetenth Chapter, which telleth of the god named Lord at the Vanguard (Yiacatecutli).[93]

He was the god of the merchants. Greatly they esteemed him, arraying in paper[94] the stout traveling staves[95] with Jnic caxtolli vnnauj capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa, in teutl: yn jtoca yiacatecutli.

Puchteca intzuh catca: cenca qujmaviztilisia, qujtlaquentiaia amatica: yn jntopil, ymotlatopil, yni nenemja, yni 776 463 484

88. The corresponding Spanish text describes the scene thus: "En este fiesta, bevian como en juego de cebat: de manera que el vn vando, era de la parte deste dios, y venagen del dios totec: y estos andavan vestidos de pellejos de hombres que eujan muerto, y desollados, en aquella fiesta. . . . Los del bando contrario, eran los soldados valientes, y esadas, y personas valientes, y esforçadas: que no tenjan en nada la muerte: andaba, atropejaba, que de jn valientad salian, a combatirse, con los otros. Alli los vnos, con los otros, se exercitaua, en el exercicio de la guerra: parapujan los vnos, a los otros: hasta su puesto, y de alli, bolujan huyendo, hasta su proprio puesto." Cf. also the description in Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124. The game of cebat in the Enciclopedia Universal Ilustrada, Vol. II, pp. 299-300, is described as "Antiguo fiesta, juego ó ejercicio caballeresco en que tomaban parte dos bandos ó cuadrillas corriendo á caballo, cascabeleando gallardamente y arrojándose cebas de las que se empandaban con la adarga." A Moorish exercise, in Medieval times adopted also by the Spaniards, it was reserved to the nobility. It took the form of a pointless war-game requiring considerable skill in horsemanship and spear-throwing.

86. MS Biblioteca del Palacio, Seler, Einige Kapitel, has ocoan in the Aztec text, instead of aiac, which is in the Florentine Codex. Seler translates the passage as "they stopped, ceased, at the place called Tonecco."

87. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 124: "Todos los pellejos de los desollados se vestian muchos mancebos, a los quales llamaban Totetecti." Cf. also ibid., p. 123, defining Totetecti as "los mancebos a honra del dios Totec."

88. In the MS Biblioteca del Palacio text (Seler, op. cit.), the word is mizyelchinbiteiac, translated as "er hat im Gesicht die Wachtelbemalung." Seler also (Translations of the Aztec Collection, p. 102) uses the term mizyelchinbiteiac (quail face painting).

89. Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, p. 466) translates yopi as "the red pelpple" (Tlapanteca), and gives two illustrations to indicate that they were pointed caps.

90. "The word chiuhtzoli means 'whatever with anything is made strong.' Word and symbol obviously refer to the strengthening of the reproductive function, to fertilizing, hence we also see the chimmatli with the fire sign projecting between the human couples in sexual union." Seler: Translations of the Aztec Collection, p. 100.

91. Seler suggests that the form of the name should be iyoan-tecuhtli or yacantecuhtli ("the lord, the[prince, the leader") (Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 3, p. 37). Tezozomoc (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 37) says he also was named Yacantecuhqui ("el que tiene la nariz agujerada"); Francisco Javier Clavigero, in Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), Vol. II, p. 87, n. 17, adds the name Xicontecuhtli.

In op. cit., Vol. II, pp. 4, p. 91, Seler refers to Yacatecuhtli as meaning "lord of the nose," and to the form Iyacatecuhtli, which Sahagún uses in the Florentine Codex, as "lord of the departed," explaining the connection of the cult of this god with that of Tezcatlipoca, and linking Yacatecuhtli with Itzcuinqui. Both the latter were among the "old gods."

92. Cut in four points and covered with liquid rubber. (Seler: op. cit., p. 92).

93. The corresponding Spanish text states: ". . . era una cuba, macizo, que olia llamar velad. Y tambien vsan de otra manera de barada,

"The eleventh month they named Ochpaniztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the mother of the gods, named Teteo innan, or Toçi, which meaneth "Our Grandmother." They danced in silence for the honor of this goddess, and in great silence slew a woman dressed with the ornaments with which they represented this goddess.

Al vndecimo mes llamauan Ochpanjztli: El primero dia, deste mes, haziã fiesta a la madre de los dioses llamada Teteu inna o Toci, que qujere dezir nuestra abuela: baylauan a honrra desta diosa en silencio y matauan vna muger en gran silencio vestida con los ornamentos que pintauan a esta diosa.

796X [805 776]

Chapter 11
Ochpaniztli

Five days before this month began, all the feasts and merry making of the previous month ceased. Entering this month, they danced eight days without singing and without beating the two-toned drum. These past, there came forth the woman who was the likeness of the goddess whom they name Teteo innan, arrayed with the ornaments with which they pictured the same goddess; and a great number of women came forth with her, especially the medicine women and midwives. And they split into two bands and fought, pelting each other with balls made of tree parasites and from the leaves of the tuna cactus and with balls made from the leaves of reeds, and with flowers which they call cempoalxochitl. This merry making lasted four days.

These ceremonies and others of like kind ended, they brought it about that that woman should not know she was to die, so that she should neither weep nor be saddened; for they held that to be an omen of evil. The night when she was to die having fallen, they decked her very richly, and persuaded her that they were taking her so that some great lord might sleep with her; and they bore her in great silence to the pyramid where she was to die. Having taken her up, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder, and swiftly they struck off her head, and then they flayed her. And a stout youth put on her skin.

This one who wore the skin of the woman whom they had slain they then bore off with great solem-

1. Marginal notation: September he dice mes.

Cap. 11.
Ochpanjztli.

Cinco dias antes que començasse este mes: cessauan todas las fiestas y regozijos del mes pasado entrando este mes, baylauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin teponaztli: los quales pasados, salia la muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃ llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de mugeres con ella: especialmente las medicas y parteras: y partianse en dos vandos y peleauan apedreandose con pellas de pachtli y con hojas de tunas y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espadañas, y con flores que llamã cempoalsochitl. Este regozijo durauã quatro dias.

Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras desta calidad: procurauan que aquella muger no entendiesse que auja de morir porque no llorasse nj se entristeciesse porque lo tenjan por mal aguero: venjda la noche en que auja de morir, ataujauanla muy ricamente, y haziãla entender que la lleuauan para que dormjesse con ella algun gran señor: y lleuauanla con grã silencio al cu, donde auja de morir: subida arriba, tomauala vno a cuestas espaldas con espaldas, y de presto la cortauãn la cabeça, y luego la desollauan: y con mancebo robusto vestiase el pelejo.

Este que vestia el pelejo desta que matauan: lleuauanle luego con mucha solenjdad y acõpañan-

534 535 754 524 137 787

The seventeenth month they called Tititl. In this month they celebrated a feast to a goddess whom they named Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, and by [still] another name, Cozcamiauh. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman, and as soon as they had torn out her heart they struck off her head and performed a dance with it. He who went before carried the head by the hair, in his right hand, making [with it] the gestures of the dance.

Al mes decimo septimo llamauan Tititl. En este mes haziã fiesta a vna diosa que llamauã Jlamatecutli, y por otro nombre Tona, y por otro nombre cozcamjauh, a honrra desta diosa: matauan vna muger, y desque le aviã sacado el coraçon cortauanle la cabeça y hazian areyto con ella, el que yva adelante lleuaua la cabeça por los cabellos en la mano derecha, haziendo sus ademanes de bayle.

796X [805 776] [535]

Chapter 17
Tititl

This woman whom they slew in this feast they arrayed in the adornments of that goddess whose likeness [she was], called Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, which meaneth "Our Mother." This woman, thus bedight with the adornments [which are] set forth in the description, danced alone. A number of old men made music for her; and, dancing, she sighed and wept, mindful that soon she was to die. After midday, the priests arrayed themselves in the ornaments of all the gods, and went before her, and took her up to the pyramid where she was to die. Having stretched her out upon the sacrificial stone, they tore out her heart, and they struck off her head. Then one of those who went adorned as a god took [it], and, [with him] foremost, carrying it by the hair, they performed a dance with it. He who bore it in his right hand guided [them], and he made the dance gestures with it.

On the same day that the servants of the idols slew this woman, they performed certain mock-battles, and made merry, running—some behind the others—up and down the pyramid, enacting certain ceremonies.

On the next day, all the common folk made a number of sacks, like pockets, with some cords attached, as much as a fathom long. They filled these

1. Marginal notation: [illegible]

Cap. 17.
Tititl.

1 c KL
2 d A esta muger que matauan en esta
3 e fiesta: componjanla con los atauios de
4 f aquella diosa cuya ymagen tenja que
5 g se llama Jlamatecutli y por otro nom-
6 A bre Tona quiere dezir nuestra madre
7 b esta muger anti compuesta con los 8 c atauios estan puestos en la historia,
9 d baylaua sola: hazianla el son vnos vie-
10 e jos, y baylando suspiraua y lloraua,
11 f acordandose que luego auia de morir:
12 g pasando el medio dia, componjanse los 13 A sacerdotes con los ornamentos de todos
14 b los dioses, y yvan delante della, y su-
15 c bianla al cu, donde auia de morir:
16 d echada sobre el tazon de piedra, sa-
17 e cauanla el coraçon, y cortauanla la ca-
18 f beça, tomaua luego vno de aquellos
19 g que yva adornado como dios, y delan-
20 A tero de todos y lleuandola por los ca-bellos: hazian areyto cõ ella guiaua el que la lleuaua en la mano derecha y hazia sus ademanes de bayle con ella.

c 19
d 20
e 21
f 22
g 23
A 24
b 25 c 26
d 27
e 28
f 29
g 30
A 31
b 1
c 2
d 3
e 4
f 5
g 6
A 7

796X 535

El mesmo dia que matauã esta muger los ministros de los ydolos, haziã ciertas escaramuças y regozijos: corriendo vnos tras otros el cu, arriba y el cu abaxo haziendo ciertas cerimonjas.

796X

El dia siguiente todos los populares hazian vnas talegas como bolsas, con vnos cordeles atadas tan largos como vn braço: hinchian aquellas talegas de

796X 565 524 [415]

2. Marginal notation: [illegible]

X 796
565
524

sacks with soft things, like wool, and they carried them hidden under their capes, and they struck, with the bags, all the women whom they might meet in the streets. This game reached such lengths that the boys also made bags and with them mauled the girls so much that they made them weep. Many other ceremonies were performed in this celebration, which are set forth at length in the account of this feast.

cosas blandas como lana y llegauanlas escondidas debaxo de las mantas, y a todas las mugeres que topauan por la calle, dauanlas de talegazos: llegaua a tanto este juego, que tambiẽ los muchachos hazian las talegas y aporreauan con ellas a las muchachas tãto que las hazian llorar. Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian esta fiesta q̃ estan a la larga puestas en la historia desta fiesta.

Tenth Chapter, in which is told how the rulers took their pleasure.

Injc matlactli capitulo, ipan mjtoa injc meellelquixtiaia tlatoque. 643

When the ruler went forth, in his hand rested his reed stalk which he went moving in rhythm with his words. His chamberlains and his elders went before him; on both sides, on either hand, they proceeded as they went clearing the way for him. None might cross in front of him; none might come forth before him; none might look up at him; none might come face to face with him.

In jcoac quiça tlatoanj, imac onotiuh, iacapitzac, injc mapilotiuh, injc matlatotiuh quijacana in jtechiuhcaoan; in jtaoan, necoc vmac in mantiuj, in quitlapeujlitiuj: aiac vel quijacaujltequj, aiac uel ixpan quiça, aiac vel acopa quitta, aiac uel quixnepanoa, [48] 643 644

He sing; songs were learned; chants were intoned. They told him proverbs and pleasantries to pass the time.

cujca, mocujcamachtia, cujcaehenoa, quitlatlaquechilia, quiçaçanjlhuja, [521]

They played ball. There were his ball-catchers and his ball-players. They wagered [in this game] all [manner of] costly goods—gold, golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, slaves,[1] precious capes, valuable breech cloths, cultivated fields, houses, leather leg bands, gold bracelets, arm bands of quetzal feathers, duck feather capes, bales of cacao—[these] were wagered there in the game called tlachtli.

vllama, vncatca imolpixcaoa, ioan inmolancaoan, quitlanjtoa in jxquich tlaçotli in teucujtlatl, in teocujtlaçoucatl, in chalchiujtl, in teuxiujtl, in tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in mjlli, in calli, cozcahoatl, teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalmachoncotl, xomoiujtilmatli, cacaoapetlatl in vncan netlanjoa, itoca tlachtli: [525 526] [301 576 314]

On the two sides, on either hand, it was limited by walls, very well made, in that the walls and floor were smoothed. And there, in the very center of the ball court, was a line, drawn upon the ground. And on the walls were two stone, ball court rings. He who played caused [the ball] to enter there; he caused it to go in. Then he won all the costly goods, and he won everything from all who watched there in the ball court. His equipment was the rubber ball, the leather gloves, girdles, and leather hip guards.

nexocampa imac tlatepantectli, cenca tlaiecchiuhtli injc xipeztic in tlachmatl, ioan in tlalmantli: auh in vncan vel inepantla tlachtli, onoca tlecotl tlaxotlalli in tlalli, auh in jtech tlachmatl, vntetl in tlachtemalacatl manca, in aquin ollimanj vncan tlacalaquja, vncan quicalaquja olli: njman ic quitlanj in jxquich tlaçotli tlaequjtl, auh muchintin quitlanj, in jtquichtin tetlatlattaque, in vncan tlachco: itlaujcallo in olli, maieoatl, nelpaloaj, queçeatl. 345 526

Patolli was played with large beans—four large beans with holes bored into the surfaces. The game was won when from their hands they scattered the four beans on a mat painted in widely spaced black [lines], with which the patolli mat was designed. There went to be added the counters—twelve [of them], six the property of each, the counters of each of the contenders. He who won in playing patolli,

Patoa ica aiecotli, vevej etl nauhtetl in tlaiecoionjlli injc motlanj immatica in quichxiaoa in nauhtetl etl, quicujlou ce petlatl, tiltica, papatlactic in tlilli, injc mjcujlou patolpetlatl, in vncan mopouhtiuh tlapoaltetl matlactetl omome chichiquacentetl imaxca intlapoaltenh icecemme in jxnamjquj in motlanj in patoa, quitlanjlia in inquich tlaçotli, cozzic teucujtlacoucatl, chalchinjtl, teuxiujtl, matzopetztli ipan ca chalchiujtl 524 524 525

1. The word: the corresponding Spanish has slaves (esclavos). See also below, description of patolli.

524 525 wen[2] all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were round, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, slaves, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if then he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

[787]

526 411 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green stones or fine turquoises. The ruler placed it about his wrist.

[301] [643]

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

[223]

351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

522 524 There were their jesters who provided them solace and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

517 Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There were their servants, their pages who attended them and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

[732] [231]

ololiuhqui anoço teuxiujtl, quetzalli, tlacotli, calli, mjlli, tlaçotilmatli, pepochtli, vexej tilmatli: chalchiuhtentetl, teuxujtlanacochtli, xomoimjtilmatli. Auh in aquja patonij, in qujchaiaua in etl, intla centetl etl ic tzequochili, in mocquetzticac etl, in vmpa ic tzinmjmjltic: cenca tetzammachoia, cenca tlamatjquilli ipan zoctzia: niman mochi qujtlanj, in jnqujch tlaçotli, in motlanjtoa in macanel aiamo açi in quexaquj tetl aqujlli, injc ne-nennonotzalo, injc netzopalo.

Tlatlamjna tlauiztica, tipoptica, tetemjtica, tlacochica: itlaujcallo, matzopetztli ipan ca, uej chalchiujtl, ololiuhqui, anoço teuxiujtl in jmaquechtlan qujtlalia tlpanij.

Tlatlacaloeuja, tlatlamotla ican tlacalhoeztli, iujcallo tetlolonaztlatl mjmjltic injc mopetlaca telolotli, ic qujmotla tepitoton totome, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca totomatlatl: injc qujmaçi nepapan totome, monochimjltia, monochitepantia, cequja, in jxqujch nepapan xochitl, vncatco intetlivenetzquijticahoan in qujmelleloquiztinia, in qujcoccochtia: ioan quauhjlacatzoque in quj paquiltia mjiec tlamantli in jutlachical teuexquojo, ioan mauizticac, in jca iuocpal tlanjpa injc tlimati çe tlacatl, tomanac in quanmjmjlli in quitotia ica iuocpal aquecztoc ichpa in conmaiauj quanmjmjlli çe ichoual in jxocpal ic tlamati.

mjec: tlamâtli, in tecoccmelti in qujchiua, vncatca imaachoan, iztoan in quiuujcaxincaca in qujmechelleloquiztinia, tzapame, villame, tepotzame, teachme, quipipinia quaquauhti, ocelome, cuicuitlachtin, ocotochtin, nepapan tonti.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS reads quitlaxiuiac (he wagered) instead of quitlaxiuiac.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529.-1590) 1954
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[175
782
732]

[524]

[231]

[533
524]
732]

[695
696]

[696]

[533
534]

[534
535]

[231]

—Hier Pato y Teomoxo—

tomeras (concluded), 61. Two-headed men (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards landing on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of patoli (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatilin (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(6)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

When he wished to be amused, the ruler commanded that they play patolli, that a mat on which patolli was played be painted black, in widely spaced stripes. So was it painted that there might be kept the count whereby the game could be won. And then also holes were drilled into the surfaces of four large beans with which patolli was played and the game was won. And in the same way the majordomos did [as in the ball game]:[15] they spread out all the costly goods and belongings of the ruler, there where patolli was played, where [players] represented the ruler. And then, if the ruler were bested, then the majordomos brought out other [players]; and they changed all the vassals whom the ruler had set in place that patolli be played.

In tlatoanj, in jquac qujnequja iiellelqujçaz tlanaoatiaia injc patoz, mjcujloa ce patolpetlatl, ica tlilli, papatlactic in tlaxiotlalli ic mjcujloa, in vncan nepoalo ic netlanjoa: auh njman no mjxcoionja nauhtetl aiecotli, injc patolo injc netlanjoa: auh çan ie no iuhquj qujcnioaia in calpixque, injc mochi tlaçotli in jtlatquj, in jaxca tlatoanj, qujoalteca in oncan patoloian, in quitetlanitalhuja in tlatoanj, auh in icoac, intla otlanjhoac tlatoanj, njman tepatla in calpixque: ioan quipatla in jxqujchtin mâçeoalti, in ocontlalica tlatoanj in patoloia. 643 522 525 524

SIXTH PARAGRAPH, in which is described the ruler who was good of heart and kindly.

The ruler was very indulgent of others, very merciful, and kindly. When he wished, he set forth along the road, following it. If any poor vassal, who made bold to hail the ruler, greeted him pleasingly, then [the ruler] commanded the majordomo to give him a cape, a breech clout, and a place for him to sleep, and that which he might drink, and eat—dried grains of maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if a lowly woman made bold to greet the ruler, he likewise granted and accorded her her shift, her skirt, a place for her to sleep, what she might drink and eat—grains of dried maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if some poor indigent were to fashion or make so many skin drums, or a song of honor, if then he dedicated them to the ruler, if he gave them [to him, the ruler] showed great compassion and indulged him; he gave him a house, he enriched him; he gave him whatsoever goods lay in the house; and he gave him a steward who daily might care for him, give him to eat, provide him his breakfast, wherewith to break his fast, and provide him wherewith to sup. And he gave him all [manner of] gifts—costly capes, beds, wealth, women, and a slave, and honor.

INJC CHIQUACEN PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, in aqujn tlatoanj qualli iiollo, teicnoittanj. 643 431

In tlatoanj, cenca tetlaoculianj, cenca teicnoittanj, ioan teicnelianj, in jcoac qujnequja, qujçaz in otli qujtocaz: in aqujn motolinja maçeoalli, in motlapaloa, injc qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, intla ouelqujtlapalo in tlatoanj: njman qujnaoatia in calpixquj, qujmacaz tilmatli, maxtlatl, ioan icochia, ioan in quiz, in qujquaz, tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla motolinjanj çioatl motlapaloz qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, çan no iuh qujcnelia, qujtlauhtia in jujpil, in jcue, icochia, in quiz, in qujquaz tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla aca motolinja, icnotlacatl, oqujchiuh, oqujtlali, quezquj veuetl mauizio cuicatl, intla njman itech qujpoa tlatoanj, intla qujmaca, cenca qujcnelia, qujtlaocolia, qujcalmaca qujcujltonoa, qujmaca in quexqujch tlatqujtl in jitic onoc calli, ioan qujmaca calpixquj injc momoztlac qujmocujtlauiz qujtlaqualtiz, qujtenjxitiz, qujneuhcaiotiz qujcochcaiotiz: ioan qujmaca in ixqujch netlauhtilli in tlaçotilmatli, in pepechtli in necujltonolli, çioa, ioan tlacotli, ioan mauizio tl.

15. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: "y de allí traían la bola, con que jugaban, y pintaban [illegible]: y otras cosas como arriba se dice."

[p. 60 is blank]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

796 century, wrote of the game and the ball used by its players.[16]
526 (See Plate 57, bottom left; Fig. 3.)

525 There were also games of chance which were played with 796 a semisacred significance. One such game, patolli, utilized a board shaped like a cross, with spaces ruled in the arms, not unlike a version of the old-fashioned parchesi of our childhood. Macuilxochitl, Five Flower, the god of all games, was sometimes portrayed in connection with players of patolli.[18]

796 Another important entertainment involved the erection of 526 a high pole at the top of which a movable platform was socketed. Men dressed as gods or the birds into which the gods transformed themselves, and, fastened by ropes wound around the platform, leaped off into space. As they did so the ropes, unwinding, rotated the platform and gave the effect of flight to the circling performers. Each turn brought the birdmen nearer to the ground, and they were wont to alter their center of balance and adjust their wings, producing the effect of the rise and fall of soaring birds. This modest application of the principle of gliding must have created a spectacle of color and beauty. The ceremony is still performed in parts of Mexico, and the Volador, or flying place, of Tenochtitlan was, until very recently, the site of the "Thieves' Market" in Mexico City.[18]

782 The application of human sacrifice to the most simple cere-
174 monial act of thanksgiving offers a grisly contrast to the spirit in which these rituals were carried out. However, social and religious behavior are calculated to preserve human existence and ensure man's well-being, regardless of how warped the methods may become. It follows that the idea of sacrificing precious possessions to attain such ends would lead to the offering of the most precious gift of all, human life, cal organization of the region as a whole was far from that of an empire. In reality a multitude of independent city-states seethed with intrigue and war and were further disunited by differences in language, dialect, physical type and geographic economy. An invader, with a strongly disciplined force small enough to live off the country and thus to stay in the field, could have an astonishing success, particularly if he had a taste for intrigue. Cortes, as events proved, was the ideal man for such a purpose, and he was further favored by the psychological reaction of the Aztecs to his arrival.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The years before the Spanish Conquest had, to the Aztecs, been full of portents suggestive of future evil. There seems to have been in the air that same sense of paralysis that the French knew to their cost in 1939 and 1940. Montezuma, the war chief of the Aztecs and an amateur of witchcraft, had had an experience calculated completely to shake his nerve. He and Nezahualpilli, the chief of Texcoco, had fallen to arguing about the respective merits of their soothsayers, since the Texcocan held that strangers were going to rule the land of Anahuac. So convinced was Nezahualpilli of the correctness of his interpretation that he wagered his kingdom against three turkey cocks, the result to be decided by a ritualistic ball game with Montezuma. The latter won the first two games, but Nezahualpilli took the last three in a row. The defeat must have been disheartening to Montezuma, not only because he had so much to fear from the future, but also because his own experts had been held so cheap. (See Fig. 3.)

In close succession followed a series of phenomena, each bearing its message of woe to come. A column of fire was seen every midnight throughout the year; two temples were

Tenth Chapter, in which is told how the rulers took their pleasure.

Injc matlactli capitulo, ipan mjtoa injc meellel- 643
qujxtiaia tlatoque.

When the ruler went forth, in his hand rested his reed stalk which he went moving in rhythm with his words. His chamberlains and his elders went before him; on both sides, on either hand, they proceeded as they went clearing the way for him. None might cross in front of him; none might come forth before him; none might look up at him; none might come face to face with him.

In jcoac qujça tlatoanj, imac onotiuh, iacapitzac, [48]
injc mapilotiuh, injc matlatotiuh qujiacana in jte- 643
chiuhcaoan, in jtaoan, necoc vmac in mantiuj, in 644
qujtlapeujlitiuj: ãiac vel qujiacaujltequj, aiac uel ix-pan qujça, aiac vel acopa qujtta, aiac uel qujxne-
panoa,

He sang; songs were learned; chants were intoned. They told him proverbs and pleasantries to pass the time.

cujca, mocujcamachtia, cujcaeheoua, qujtlatla- [521]
quechilia, qujçaçanjlhuja,

They played ball. There were his ball-catchers and his ball-players. They wagered [in this game] all [manner of] costly goods—gold, golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, slaves,[1] precious capes, valuable breech clouts, cultivated fields, houses, leather leg bands, gold bracelets, arm bands of quetzal feathers, duck feather capes, bales of cacao—[these] were wagered there in the game called tlachtli.

vllama, vncatca imolpixcaoa, ioan inmolancaoan, [525
qujtlanjtoa in jxqujch tlaçotli in teucujtlatl, in te- 526]
cujtlacozcatl, in chalchiujtl, in teuxiujtl, in tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in mjlli, in callj, [301
cotzehoatl, teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalmachoncotl, 576 zomoiujtilmatli, cacaoapetlatl in vncan netlanjoa, 314]
itoca tlachtli:

On the two sides, on either hand, it was limited by walls, very well made, in that the walls and floor were smoothed. And there, in the very center of the ball court, was a line, drawn upon the ground. And on the walls were two stone, ball court rings. He who played caused [the ball] to enter there; he caused it to go in. Then he won all the costly goods, and he won everything from all who watched there in the ball court. His equipment was the rubber ball, the leather gloves, girdles, and leather hip guards.

necocampa imac tlatepantectli, cenca tlaiecchiuhtli 345
injc xipetztic in tlachmatl, ioan in tlalmantli: auh in 526
vncan vel inepantla tlachtli, onoca tlecotl tlaxotlalli in tlalli, auh in jtech tlachmatl, vntetl in tlachtemalacatl
manca, in aqujn ollimanj vncan tlacalaquja, vncan qujcalaquja olli: njman ic qujtlanj in jxqujch tlaçotli
tlatqujtl, auh muchintin qujntlanj, in jxqujchtin tetlatlattaque, in vncan tlachco: itlaujcallo in olli, maiecatl, nelpilonj, queçeoatl.

Patolli was played with large beans—four large beans with holes bored into the surfaces. The game was won when from their hands they scattered the four beans on a mat painted in widely spaced black [lines], with which the patolli mat was designed. There went to be added the counters—twelve [of them], six the property of each, the counters of each of the contenders. He who won in playing patolli,

Patoa ica aiecotli, vevej etl naubtetl in tlaixcoionjlli 524
injc motlanj immatica in qujchaiaoa in nauhtetl etl, qujcujloa ce petlatl, tlitica, papatlactic in tlilli, injc mjcujloa patolpetlatl, in vncan mopouhtiuh tlapoal-tetl matlactetl onome chichiquacentetl imaxca intlapoalteuh icecemme in jxnamjquj in motlanj in patoa, qujtlanjlia in ixqujch tlaçotli, cozzic teucujtlacozcatl, 524
chalchiujtl, teuxiujtl, matzopetztli ipan ca chalchiujtl 525

1. Tlaçotli: the corresponding Spanish has slaves (esclavos). See also below, description of patolli.

524 won' all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green
525 stone, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were strung, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, slaves, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if then he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a [787] great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

526 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with 411 a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green [301 stones or fine turquoises. The ruler placed it about 643] his wrist.

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With [223] these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

522 There were their jesters who provided them solace
524 and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

517 Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There [732] were their servants, their pages who attended them [231] and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

ololiuhqui, xnoço tzuziujtl, quetzalli, tlacuili, calli, mjlli, tlaçoilmatli, pepochtli, vecuj tilmatli: chalchiuhtzuzuzi, xoxoujtlaxocchtli, xonoujtilmatli. Auh in aquja patoanj, in qujchaiaoa in etl, inda cemzul etl ic tzequochili, in mocpactzinca etl, in vmpa ic tzinmjmjltic: cenca tzitzinmachoia, cenca tlamauiçolli ipan mottaia: njauia mochi qujtlanj, in jxquich tlaçotli, in mochanjxco in macuxel aiamo açi in quezquj-tetl aqujlli, injc nemanonotzalo, injc netzopelo.

526 Tlatlamjna tlanjuhtica, tiponica, tomaujtica, tla-411 cochtica: itlauçcallo, mamopeztli ipan ca, uej chalchiuitl, ololiuhqui, xnoço tzuziujtl in jmaquechtlan qujchalia tlatzauj.

[301 Tlatlacaoanja, tlatlamoda icac tlacalhoztli, injcallo tetelomatlatl mjmjltic injc mopethoa tetelotli, ic qujmoda tepiaoua tonane, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca tonmatlatl: injc qujmaçi nepapan tonane,

[223 monochimjltia, monochitepantia, caquja, in jxquich nepapan xochitl,

351 vncatca intetlavenetaqujtocahoan in qujmelchqujztinia, in qujxonmechtia: ioan quauhjacatzaqui in quj-paqujltia mjjec tlamatti in jutlachical tzuetzquja, ioan mauiçtic, in jca iuocpal tlanjpa injc tlamati çe tlacatl, tomatac in quammjmjlli in qujxoia ica iuocpal aquetzac acopa in conmaiauj quammjmjlli çe ichtaca in jxocpal ic tlamati,

517 mjjec tlamatti, in tecoxmachi in qujchiua, vncatca
[732 iuauchoua, iuoloua in qujmjçotzincaca in qujmchel-[231 hqujztinia, tzapame, villame, tepoxoame, tzochme, ququxtlaia quauhxoxoli, ocelome, cuicuijlachtin, ecatochtin, nepapan tzuzul.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS reads quilitoctoc (he snapped) instead of quilitoqui.

342 And in the great palace, the ruler's residence, like-
643 wise was watch kept all night. Never did the fire go [373] out. It was watched all night and made to burn with 644 pine torches there in the residence of the ruler—at 722 the Tlacxitlan, and the Teccalli, and the Tecpilcalli, the Quauhcalli, the Achcauhcalli, the Cuicacalli, the Cuocalli, and the residences of the lords throughout the city, and the priests' houses, and the majordomos' houses—where assembled the majordomos,—and the young men's houses which were placed in all the neighborhoods.[13] Then the youths filled the houses as they kept guard. None slept in his [own] home. The task of the youths was to go into the forest, in [373] order that watch be kept within the city; for nightly there was light and fires were burned; thus was guard maintained.

Auh in vei tecpan in tlatoca, çan no iuhquj ceioal in tlapialoia, aquenman eeuja in tletl: çeioal in tlapialoia, ioan tlaujloia ocotica, in vncan iieian tlatoanj, ioan tlacxitlan, ioan teccali, ioã tecpilcalli, quauhcali, achcauhcali, cujcacali, ioan coacali, in jntenetlaliaian tlatoque altepetl ipan, ioan calmecac, ioan texãcali in jnneçenquixtiaia calpixque, ioan telpuchcali, in noujian tlãtlãxilacalpan mamanj: vncã icacaltemj in telpupuchti in tlapia, aiac ichan oncochia, intequjuh catca in telpopochti, in quauhtla ializtli, injc tlapieloia iitic altepetl injc çeçeioai tlaujloia tlatlatiloia, injc tlapieloia.

643 FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the 542 ruler was amused.

The ruler, when he beheld and knew that the common folk and vassals were very fretful, then commanded that the ball game be played, in order to animate the people and divert them. He commanded the majordomos to take out the rubber ball, and the girdles, and the leather hip guards, and the leather gloves with which the ruler's ball players were dressed and arrayed. And things were arranged on the ball court; there was sprinkling, there was sanding, there was sweeping.

643 And all which the ruler was to wager in the game
●525 —the valued capes, the duck feather capes, the costly breech clouts, the green stone lip plugs, the golden ear plugs, the green stone necklaces, the golden necklaces, the wrist bands with large, precious,[14] green stones upon them, and all the precious capes and bedding—the majordomos brought out and placed in the ball court. And those who were to challenge and play ball against the ruler then matched all his costly goods. And all the poor folk placed [for] the ruler, each one, old capes like those which the vassals wore. And if they won from the ruler, then the majordomos brought out others and laid out all the costly goods which they had won of the ruler, and also they gave to the vassals all which they had won of the ruler.

INJC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: ipan mitoa, in quenjn mellelquixtiaia, tlatoanj.

In tlatoanj in jcoac quittaia, ujmatia ca cenca nentlamati in cujtlapilli, atlapalli maceoalli: njman tlanaoatiaia, injc ollamaloz, injc teellaquaoaia, injc tepaquiltiaia tlatoanj: quinnaoatiaia in calpixque, injc quioalcujxque in olli, ioan nelpilonj, ioan queçeoatl, ioan maieoatl: injc mocencaoa injc mochichioa, in jollancaoan tlatoanj, ioan tlacencaoalo in tlachco, tlaujlilo, tlaxalujlo, tlachpano:

ioan in ixquich quitlanjtoz tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli in xomoiujtilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in chalchiuhtentetl, teucujtlanacochtli, chalchiuhcozcatl, teucujtlacozcatl, matzopeztli chalchiujtl vei ipan ca, tlaçotl: ioan in ixquich tlaçotilmatli, ioan pepechtli quioalquixtia in calpixque, quioallalia in tlachco. Auh in ichoantin quinamjquixque, in collamjzque tlatoanj: njman jq'tiamjctia, in jxquich itlatquj tlaçotli: auh in ie ix motolinja maceoalli, icceiaca contlalia tlatoanj ica iiaiaçol in iuhquj quijquemj maçeoalli. Auh intla oquitlanque tlatoanj, njman tepatla, in calpixque quitema in ixquich tlaçotli tlatquitl, in oquitlanjlique tlatoanj: auh in maceoalti no quinmaca in jxquich oquitlanilique tlatoanj.

---

13. Tlacxitlan/pan: see Antonio Mendoza: El calpulli en la organización social de los tenochca (México: Instituto de Historia, 1949), p. 51, where the term tlacxitlalli is defined as a small barrio or street. According to Orozco y Berra, op. cit., I, p. 369, "los pueblos quedaron subdivididos en nueve calpulli ó barrios, cuatro los pertenecientes arriba, cuatro calpulli divididos por calles ó tlacxitlalli."

14. Tlaçol: the corresponding Spanish text refers to dueos, in which case the Aztec should read tlaçol.

When he wished to be amused, the ruler commanded that they play patolli, that a mat on which patolli was played be painted black, in widely spaced stripes. So was it painted that there might be kept the count whereby the game could be won. And then also holes were drilled into the surfaces of four large beans with which patolli was played and the game was won. And in the same way the majordomos did [as in the ball game]:[18] they spread out all the costly goods and belongings of the ruler, there where patolli was played, where [players] represented the ruler. And then, if the ruler were bested, then the majordomos brought out other [players]; and they changed all the vassals whom the ruler had set in place that patolli be played.

In tlatoanj, in jquac qujnequja iiellelquiçaz tlanaoatiaiz injc patoz, mjcujloa ce patolpetlatl, ica tlilli, papatlactic in tlaxotlalli ic mjcujloa, in vncan nepoalo ic netlanjoa: auh njman no mjxcoionja nauhtetl aiecotli, injc patolo injc netlanjoa: auh çan ie no iuhquj qujchioaia in calpixque, injc mochi tlaçotli in jtlatquj, in jaxca tlatoanj, qujoalteca in oncan patoloian, in qujtetlanitalhuja in tlatoanj, auh in icoac, intla otlanjhoac tlatoanj, njman tepatla in calpixque: ioan qujpatla in jxqujchtin maçeoalti, in ocontlalica tlatoanj in patoloia. 643 522 525 524

SIXTH PARAGRAPH, in which is described the ruler who was good of heart and kindly.

The ruler was very indulgent of others, very merciful, and kindly. When he wished, he set forth along the road, following it. If any poor vassal, who made bold to hail the ruler, greeted him pleasingly, then [the ruler] commanded the majordomo to give him a cape, a breech clout, and a place for him to sleep, and that which he might drink, and eat—dried grains of maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if a lowly woman made bold to greet the ruler, he likewise granted and accorded her her shift, her skirt, a place for her to sleep, what she might drink and eat—grains of dried maize, beans, amaranth seed. And if some poor indigent were to fashion or make so many skin drums, or a song of honor, if then he dedicated them to the ruler, if he gave them [to him, the ruler] showed great compassion and indulged him; he gave him a house, he enriched him; he gave him whatsoever goods lay in the house; and he gave him a steward who daily might care for him, give him to eat, provide him his breakfast, wherewith to break his fast, and provide him wherewith to sup. And he gave him all [manner of] gifts—costly capes, beds, wealth, women, and a slave, and honor.

INJC CHIQUACEN PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, in aqujn tlatoanj qualli iiollo, teicnoittanj. 643 431

In tlatoanj, cenca tetlaoculianj, cenca teicnoittanj, ioan teicneliauj, in jcoac qujnequja, qujçaz in otli qujtocaz: in aqujn motolinja maçeoalli, in motlapaloa, injc qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, intla ouelqujtlapalo in tlatoanj: njman qujnaoatia in calpixquj, qujmacaz tilmatli, maxtlatl, ioan icochia, ioan in qujz, in qujquaz, tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla motolinjanj çioatl motlapaloz qujtlapaloz tlatoanj, çan no iuh qujcnelia, qujtlauhtia in jujpil, in jcue, icochia, in qujz, in qujquaz tlaolli, etl, oauhtli. Auh intla aca motolinja, icnotlacatl, oqujchiuh, oqujtlali, quezquj veuetl mauizio cuicatl, intla njman itech qujpoa tlatoanj, intla qujmaca, cenca qujcnelia, qujtlaoccolia, qujcalmaca qujcujhtoua, qujmaca in quexqujch tlatqujtl in jitic onoc calli, ioan qujmaca calpixquj injc momoztlae qujmocujtlaujz qujtlaqualtiz, qujtenjxitiz, qujoeuhcaiotiz qujcochcaiotiz: ioan qujmaca in ixqujch netlauhtilli in tlaçotilmatli, in pepechtli in necujltonolli, çioa, ioan tlacotli, ioan mauizioti.

18. Cf. corresponding Spanish text: "y de allí arrojan su juego, como que jugaban, y pusieron lugar; y otras cosas como arriba se dice."

[p. 60 is blank]

565 contributed to their natural and legitimate masters in making their 463 houses and cultivating their plots... and they did the same for the 651 lords" (10). Taking into account all that has been said above it is clear that the payment of tribute existed within the same Tenochca group and reflected a difference between two kinds of people, and that there existed a relationship between this stratification and the ward divisions. It also appears from our data that, besides the tribute to the lords, there was a tribute to the rulers [a los "señores"], to the chiefs [a los "caciques"], which is probably to say, to the chiefs of the whole group, not just to the lesser ward lords.

10. Anunciación, p. 237.

565 It is certain that as a result of the role in the division of labor and 511 of the difference between being tributary and tribute-receiving, great differences in the standard of living in the population came about in Tenochtitlan. The macehuales had "neither furniture, nor clothing other than what they wear on their persons, which is very poor, and one or two stones for grinding maize, and a few pots for cooking and a mat on which they sleep... and they eat little... the common [651] people and the plebians are so tyrannized by their Indian lords that most of them have their rations taxed " (11). On the other hand we are told that the lords and rulers were always going to banquets and weddings (12) and that the princes slept in beds (13) and that the

11. Oviedo, III, p. 535. The weakness of the author cited vanishes by reason of its congruence with other authorities.

12. López Gerónimo, II, p. 151.

13. Martín de Anglería, P., p. 470.

[625] rulers had and gambled with "precious stones and jewels and gold and featherwork, slaves, blankets of all sorts, and arms and trappings of war" (14). We have all seen, likewise, the diversity which the

14. Pomar, p. 27. Although the fact refers to Texcoco, it coincides with what is known in lem

423

50. Ixtlilxóchitl, II, p. 170. We are also told that they were called itonal intlacatl which means something like "the sign of the birth of the people," that is, perhaps they were those of the ruler's lineage.

[the plots] were many and good, but they could not be disposed of, that is, sold (51). It is possible that the remainder of the tecuhtlallis were the lands of the calpullis which could be rented for the benefit of the calpulli (see p. 39). In any case we can accept that in part these lands appear to be lands of the calpullis the tribute from which was for the tecuhtli or tecuhtlis, and that in part the tlatocamilli indeed appear to have been lands possessed by a very limited group, worked by lessees, but by a group with very special and surely hereditary characteristics. Perhaps they were the lands "of the king's household," painted in flesh-color.

51. Zurita, p. 105.

The forms studied up to now are communal, the produce of which is divided among those who work them and their chiefs, in different ways. We are finally going to consider a type of land ownership which is completely different from them because it appears to be private property.: We are told that some kinsmen of the rulers, [525] and some lords and merchants, had lands which they could gamble and sell (52). It would appear from this simple fact that there was a true free commerce in land; but such was not the case. In the first place in what we have just set down we see that only some of the kinsmen of the rulers, some of the lords and some of the merchants possessed land in this way. If the lords were not at most more than ten percent of the population (see p. 24), the number of such owners must have been very small. In the second place, with respect to the merchants, we can say that if, as we have seen, they evinced a division between nobles and plebians (p. 25), the most likely thing is that the plebian merchants /p. 45/ could not be owners who disposed of their lands freely, as neither could the common macehuales nor even those ennobled through acts of valor (53).

52. Oviedo, III, p. 535.

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

understand more fully the things about our holy faith, and the great power of the Emperor our Lord.

Then sometimes Montezuma and Cortés would play at Totoloque, which is the name they give to a game played with some very smooth small pellets made of gold for this game, and they toss these pellets to some distance as well as some little slabs which were also made of gold, and in five strokes [tries] they gained or lost certain pieces of gold or rich jewels that they staked. I remember that Pedro de Alvarado was keeping the score for Cortés, and one of his nephews, a great cacique, was marking for Montezuma, and Pedro de Alvarado always marked one point more than Cortés gained, and when Montezuma saw it he said courteously and laughingly that he did not like Tonatio (for so they called Pedro de Alvarado) to keep the score for Cortés, because he made so much yxoxol in what he marked, which in their language means to say that he cheated, in that he always marked one point too many. Cortés and all of us soldiers who were on guard at the time, could not restrain our laughter at what the great Montezuma said. It may now be asked why we laughed at that expression, and it was because Pedro de Alvarado, although he was so handsome and well mannered, had a mania for excessive talking, and as we knew his temperament, we all laughed so much. To return to the game, if Cortés won, he gave the jewels to those nephews and favourites of Montezuma who attended on him, and if Montezuma won he divided them among us soldiers on guard, and in addition to what he gave us from the game, he never omitted giving us every day presents of gold and cloth, both to us and to the captain of the Guard who, at that time, was Juan Velásquez de Leon, who showed himself in every way to be the friend and servant of Montezuma.

I also remember that at one time there was on guard

A 787 plundered and fled, he pilfered, he stole from people in the streets; he broke into people's houses; he deprived them of their raiment.

çan iuh ovilouiçi, muchi quimotequipçia in ofli, in patolli, pâpatza, ôollanza, motlachanjoua, tetlachanjoua, mouixicoa, tezixicoa, tezixictlanj, ostetlatlalia, muchi quitlanjoua in jchan onoc, muchi panoico, tlachco, quitlanjoa, in jatemoa; in jnoepachol itatzia, inantzin, muchi quichteccaquiçtia, in açoc cana itlatzia tlatlio, çan nen quiçiçqui, çan nempanca in motlanjoua, aoc tle in quiçequetza, aoc tle in jitetlanjcol, inic tlanamjctia, inic vel oviti, aoc tepapatla, panoico, tlachco, oviti, chiquaxi, quichiquatilia, anoço quimomachtia in ollamôli, panollamôli, ollamôle, panollamôle:

A 787 ● 525

Living only in dangerous luxury, he was completely given to the rubber ball game, and to patolli. He continually played patolli, or the tlachtli game.[3] He lost; he lost the possessions of others. He was deceived. He deceived others or tried to deceive them. He detained others. He wagered everything which was in his home. He used up everything in patolli and tlachtli. All the treasures and support of his beloved mother and father he spirited away, even if some little thing had been hidden. In vain he practised deceit; to no purpose he wagered. There was no more that he could lay down as stakes, nothing more for him to wager, to match, to embarrass [rivals]. He no longer overcame others in patolli or tlachtli, or embarrassed, despoiled, or took all the wagers, even though he understood the language, the rules, of tlachtli and patolli.

A 787

And he was not of good condition; he in no way excelled others. He was completely clothed in rags and tatters. He had no bowl nor jar. And he visited and inflicted pain, misery, and suffering on one.

suh amo ivian iectli, amo ivian tecauh, monquitica tlotocomatli, tatapatli, ôcaxe, ôcome: inan tecoco, tetolinj, cocolizzli quitcititia, ic temotla:

And although he might take captives in war, it was said that he achieved only misery. Though he might become a seasoned warrior, he lived only in complete misery, torment, poverty, and need. He went about with his rags and tatters in pieces about his neck. His old maguey fiber cape hung from him in shreds. Indeed, he went about on earth very destitute.[4] Or else somewhere he would be sacrificed as a captive; he would die as a ceremonially bathed captive; he would be ritually bathed as a sacrificial captive.

suh in manellamaz isoc, mjtoa çan icneiotl in caci, in manel tequiçoacati, çan icneiotl ic mâpêtinemj, tetoneoatinemj, in jiollo, aoneoatinemj, aonmonamjquj, in jtzotzoma, in jtatapa, iquechtlan cotontinemj, in jaiaçol quichichiquailpia, uel ompa onquiztinemj in tlaltiçpac, anoço cana teumjquix, tlaaltilmjquiz altiloa:

But if perchance something should be his deserts, it would not endure. He might become very deserving in his youth; at once, in his youth, the good counsel and teaching begin. On emerging mature, not genuine on earth was the little which he might attain.[5] suh intla ça noço itla imâcoualtiz, amo cazcanviz, vellamaceoaz, in jpiltian, çan niman ipan pilpeoaz in vel monotzaz, vel moncaliz, çan vei quiçaz, amo ivian, tetlan, quauhtitlan, in jtla quiçaquilhuiz.

2. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book VIII, "Kings and Lords," Chapter 10.

3. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book VI, op. cit: ompa onquiçqui tlachtiçpac: "He entered a ceremonial pelota, a stony or ceremonial pelota." (Dibble ed., VI, 41, 38).

4. Corresponding Spanish text: "por mucho que haga parajismo, donde pagarlo: no se podra ocupar de nada seguro."

843 And when the swelling appeared, upon his back
752 was as it were a small, blue hump. Or [he might catch] inflammation of the groin.[22] And when the inflammation of the groin appeared, the child cried every night; and on the groin and armpits were formed small, round or long [welts of] flesh. And in order to cure it, they cut them off and removed the little [welts] of flesh.

Auh injc neci ximomo, yeiztlapan co, iahqujo poomatli, iahqujo tzoxic: anoço cuetzpalicivitli. Injc neci cuetzpalicivi pilnantli: cuxioui in chocu, yoan yquxaiico, yeiuac motlehalia nacoxoxoui, ohiuxoui, nelacxoxoui. Auh injc pati: quijmatla, quijquijxtia in nacoxoxoui.

843 And as for the pregnant women: before her child
821 had been formed as a being, they restrained [any of] them, when the moon arose, from looking up at it. They said to them: "Do not look at the moon! Your children will suffer sickness of the heart, or else will be hunchbacked!"

Ioan in ozcatl: in jquac ximmo vel tlacatl motlalia in jxonxoxoh, quijtlacaxaltiuia, in jquac calmomaca metztli: injc ximo conacqujxtiuaque, quijmjlhuiuia: macamo xocoxjtiacan in metztli, xujujquja, anoço xoquiuiz in xocoxoxoh.

825 Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the monkey's 777 hand.

Injc ompoualli caqitulo, yuchqa tlatoa: in ocomatli ymacpal.

The merchants sought and cherished greatly a 441 monkey's hand when they trafficked and sold goods anywhere. There they spread it out. It was said that thereby goods quickly were disposed of and soon all which they sold was bought. It was stated: "That which bringeth this about is the monkey's hand" — so foolish were they.

In ocomatli imacpal: in puchtecca cenca quitemaia, quimoqialtiaia: in jquac in campa tiamqujja, in tlanamacaia: vncan quijtocaia, quijmach ic icuhca aquj, icuhca mochi conio in tlein quijnamaca: quj ichoot! iuh quichioa in ocomatli yma: ynic mochapolhia.

777 Also of the sellers of mantles — when nowhere 264 was disposed of that which they sold, when no one 824 bought either mantles, or shifts or skirts — it was said: "They make them eat chilis that the goods may be disposed of." And thus did they do it. When they returned to their homes, they said: "Our goods are nowhere disposed of. Give them chilis to eat." Then in their midst they placed perhaps two or three chilis. It was averred that thereby the goods were disposed of. When they so did this, they said that they had made [their mantles] eat chilis.

No ichoacatin in tilmamimacaque: in jquac acan aquj in quijnamaca, in xiac qoioa: in aço tilmatli, in anoço cueitl, anoço vipalli, quijmach: quichilquaqualtia, injc aquj. Auh injc quichioaia: in jquac calvia iachan, quijnaia: acan oac in xoiamjc: ma xocochilquaqualtican: njman ic ijcic contema, aço vme, anoço Ey in chilli: quijmach ic aquja, injc iuh quichioaia in, ic quijna: quichilquaqualtia.

777 Twenty-first Chapter, which telleth of the pestle 525 and the griddle.

Injc ompoualli oce caqitulo, iechqa tlatoa in temolcol, yoan comalli.

When one who played pamoli[23] placed his pestle, and his griddle, and his grinding stone upside down in his house, and hung his pestle somewhere in a corner, it was said that thereby the householder would not lose, but only win.

In jquac aquja pamoia, in jchan, in jtezcoioh, ioan in jcomal, ioan in jmetl: intlapach quijnamaia: auh in temolcol cana xamoloa quijpilouia; quijmach: ic ano quijtlanizque in chane, çan ic tlachanjz.

22. Corresponding Spanish text: "una enfermedad, que llaman cuetzpalicivitli, o una lobadillo en las ingles." Wm. dos Codex Mex (El manuscrito mexicano Tolosano FM dos 2 Codex Mex [Madrid: Biblioteca Ibero, 1988]), p. 54).

23. The corresponding Spanish text refers to pelota, which is an error.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

249 The maguey plant, or agave, was important to household economy for its sap, which was fermented to make a kind of [273] beer. Not only was this pulque used both as a tipple and a ceremonial intoxicant, but it had an important nutritive effect as well in counterbalancing the lack of greens in the [283] Mexican diet. The plant itself had many other uses. Its fibers could be twisted into twine or rope and woven into con- [412] tainers or even clothing. The thorns were excellent needles and had a more lugubrious use as instruments for mortifying the flesh in religious penances. The leaves as a whole some- [342] times were employed in constructing shelters or roofing huts. Small wonder that the maguey and the corn plants were symbolized as goddesses and worshiped accordingly.

[248] The Aztecs cultivated cotton in many varieties. Tobacco [276] they smoked for the most part in hollow reeds as a sort of 249 cigarette. Late in their history they also used elbow-shaped [314] pipes, probably for some ceremonial purpose, much as our modern Pueblos restrict pipe smoking to rain-inducing rituals. They consumed quantities of copal gum as incense during religious ceremonies and obtained rubber from Vera Cruz and the south, as well as from the dwarf guayule plant found in northern Mexico. The Aztecs, like us, found this [526] material indispensable to their culture, for balls in their ceremonial game, tlachtli, and as a gum to fix feathers and other adornments to costumes. Bitumen, which came from the oil [317] seepages in Vera Cruz, had its function as an adhesive and as a body paint. In western Mexico the Indians prepared a [237] serviceable lacquer which they used to coat gourds and wooden trays. This incomplete list of plants and substances cultivated and exploited by the Aztecs and their neighbors gives an idea of our deep indebtedness to these past civilizaflung, down the steps; but his head joined the other skulls 796 spitted on the rack beside the temple.[13] (See Plate 61, top.) [782]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Every one of the great monthly sacrifices had a dramatic significance, and a list of the principal feasts, the gods they honored and the month of their occurrence is set forth on Table XVII. Several authors have availed themselves of Friar Sahagun's matchless descriptions to set forth the elaborate rituals which we have lightly sampled here. The elements of time, training and elaborate preparation of costume, it can be readily seen, must have absorbed a large part of the resources of the tribe. The tentacles of ritual extended throughout the tribal activities, so that even games and sports were transformed into acts of religious meaning, although the participants undoubtedly derived a great deal of fun from their performance.

The ball game, tlachtli, was such a game, played in a court 796 shaped like the capital letter I. Walls extended on either side 526 of the stem of the I, and in the middle of each a stone or wooden ring was set vertically, in contrast to the horizontal position of a basketball hoop. The players tried to pass through this ring a hard rubber ball, which they could only strike with their elbows, hips or legs. There must have been some other method of scoring than by goals alone, since these, very naturally, were of rare occurrence—so much so that, in the event of one, players and backers had the right to snatch the wearing apparel of their adversaries. The game was played far and wide, courts having been found from the Republic of Honduras to southeastern Arizona. It has a special interest for us in that the first description of rubber, so important in our modern economy, was when Oviedo, in the sixteenth

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

796 century, wrote of the game and the ball used by its players.[14]
526 (See Plate 57, bottom left; Fig. 3.)

525 There were also games of chance which were played with 796 a semisacred significance. One such game, patolli, utilized a board shaped like a cross, with spaces ruled in the arms, not unlike a version of the old-fashioned parchesi of our childhood. Macuilxochitl, Five Flower, the god of all games, was sometimes portrayed in connection with players of patolli.[15]

796 Another important entertainment involved the erection of 526 a high pole at the top of which a movable platform was socketed. Men dressed as gods or the birds into which the gods transformed themselves, and, fastened by ropes wound around the platform, leaped off into space. As they did so the ropes, unwinding, rotated the platform and gave the effect of flight to the circling performers. Each turn brought the birdmen nearer to the ground, and they were wont to alter their center of balance and adjust their wings, producing the effect of the rise and fall of soaring birds. This modest application of the principle of gliding must have created a spectacle of color and beauty. The ceremony is still performed in parts of Mexico, and the Volador, or flying place, of Tenochtitlan was, until very recently, the site of the "Thieves' Market" in Mexico City.[16]

782 The application of human sacrifice to the most simple cere-
174 monial act of thanksgiving offers a grisly contrast to the spirit in which these rituals were carried out. However, social and religious behavior are calculated to preserve human existence and ensure man's well-being, regardless of how warped the methods may become. It follows that the idea of sacrificing precious possessions to attain such ends would lead to the offering of the most precious gift of all, human life, who did not draw his blood, they stripped him, nevermore restoring his cape to him. The overseers took it from him for good.

And when the arrows were being formed, no [man] lay with a woman. And the old men drank no wine; they became not drunk; they abstained and left the wine alone.

And when arrows were made, they brought out their measure; all were made of equal length. And the arrow-points were of equal length. None were larger than others; nothing was joined to them.

Thereupon, [when] the reed [shafts] were cut, they went to put them into the hands of those who fitted and put on the arrow-points. Securely they tied the [ends of] the reeds, binding them well with magey fibres, so that the arrow shafts would not split back. They set [the points] in glue,[2] so that they were held fast, so that they were well embedded.

And when they had [thus] prepared them, then they applied pine pitch to the heads and the ends. This was done quite quickly.

And when they were finished, thereupon they were bound together; they tied them in [bundles of] twenty. And when they were assembled, then everyone was arranged in rows, all ordered in line, in procession, to leave [the bundles] there at the foot of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. There they heaped [the bundles] together. And when they had come to make [this] offering, then all departed [to their homes].

And the fourth day was called "Arrows are made for the homes." All men made arrows in their homes. Thus all passed the time; thus all tried [their skill] and practised, having set up, at a distance, [the leaf of a] magey plant, which they shot with arrows. Hence were apparent those who were good marksmen, the able bowmen, those who could well wield the bow.

And upon the fifth day, one was concerned only with the dead. For them they made small arrows, each one measuring a hand's length, and put upon them only a little resin. And their points were only sticks. They bound four arrows and four pine torches with loose cotton thread, and laid them where the dead lay buried. And they placed [there] two sweet tamales. There [they remained] all day. And at sundown they thereupon burned them for [the dead] in the same place. There they set them on fire.

2. Cf. Sahagún (Bustamante ed.), Vol. III, pp. 241, 298.

in amo mjço quipepetlaoaia, aocmo quimaca in jtilma, iccen qujtqujlia in tepãmanj. 796[x]

Auh in jquac tlacatia mjtl, aiac cioacochia: auh in vevetque, amo quja in vctli, amo tlaoanaia, motlacaaltiaia, qujmocaaultiaia in vctli. [834 273]

Auh in muchioaia mjtl, oalquiça itamachiuhca, çan muchixquich, in muchioaia: auh in tlaxichtli, çã muchixquich, atle chicoviac, atle tlapatiliaia:

njmã ie ic tlateco in acatl, inmac qujoallaztivi, in tlatlaxichaquja in qujtlaxichaquja, vel qujchtecuja in acatl, vel ichtica qujtetecuja, injc amo cujtlatzaianjz in tlaxichtli: tzacupã in cõquetza, injc vel tilinjz, injc vel tzitzicaz. 796[x] 411 [283] [381]

Auh in ocõcencauhque: njmã ie ic cocotzovia, in jquac, yoan itzintlan, çan iciuhcã muchioa. [314]

Auh in oiecauh, njmã ie ic tlacujtlalpilo, cecempoalli in mocujtlalpia: auh in otlacenquiz, njmã ie ic onnetecpanalo, onnevipanolo, oncempantioa in mocaoaz in vmpa icxitlan Vitzilobuchtli, vncan concentecpichoa: auh in õnomamanato, njmã ic viviloa.

Auh injc navilhujtl, mjtoaia, calpãnemjtilo, ixquich tlacatl momjtiaia intechachan, çan iuhquj injc neaviltilo, tel ic neiciecoloia, ic nemamachtiloia: ce veca qujoalquetzaia metl, qujmjmjna, vncan neci in aquique vel qujmaiavi, in vel momaimati, in vellamjna. 796[x] 526

Auh injc macujilhujtl, ça mjacaviaia in mjmjcque, qujnchichiviliaia, mjtotonti, çeçemjztitl, no achitoton ic conoococtzovia: auh in jtlaxichio, çan tlacotl: navi mjtl, no navi ocotl, concujtlalpia ica potonquj, impã contetema, in vncan toctitoque, mjmjcque: yoan ontetl tzopelic tamalli, contetema, vncan cemjlhujtia: auh in ie oncalaquj tonatiuh, njman ie ic qujntlatlatilia, in çan ie no vncan: vncan contlecavia: 796[x] 765

Tenth Chapter, in which is told how the rulers took their pleasure.

Injc matlactli capitulo, ipan mjtoa injc mocellel- 643
qujxtiaia tlatoque.

When the ruler went forth, in his hand rested his reed stalk which he went moving in rhythm with his words. His chamberlains and his elders went before him; on both sides, on either hand, they proceeded as they went clearing the way for him. None might cross in front of him; none might come forth before him; none might look up at him; none might come face to face with him.

In jcoac quiça tlatoanj, imac onotiuh, iacapitzac, [481]
injc mapilotiuh, injc matlatotiuh qujiacana in jte- 643
chiuhcaoan, in jtaoan, necoc vmac in mantiuj, in 644
qujtlapeujltiuj: iiac vel qujiacanjltequj, aiac uel iv-pan quiça, aiac vel acopa qujtta, aiac uel qujxnepanoa,

He sang; songs were learned; chants were intoned. They told him proverbs and pleasantries to pass the time.

cujca, mocujcamachtia, cujcaehcooa, qujtlatla- [521]
quechilia, quiçaçanjlhuja,

They played ball. There were his ball-catchers and his ball-players. They wagered [in this game] all [manner of] costly goods—gold, golden necklaces, green stone, fine turquoise, slaves,[1] precious capes, valuable breech clouts, cultivated fields, houses, leather leg bands, gold bracelets, arm bands of quetzal feathers, duck feather capes, bales of cacao—[these] were wagered there in the game called tlachtli.

vllama, vncatca imolpixcaoa, ioan inmolancaoan, [525
qujtlanjtoa in jxquich tlaçotli in teucujtlatl, in teo- 526] cujtlacozcatl, in chalchiujtl, in teuxiujtl, in tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in milli, in calli, [301 cozzehoatl, teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalmachiocozcatl, 576 xomoiujtilmatli, cacaoapetlatl in vncan netlanjoa, 314]
itoca tlachtli:

On the two sides, on either hand, it was limited by walls, very well made, in that the walls and floor were smoothed. And there, in the very center of the ball court, was a line, drawn upon the ground. And on the walls were two stone, ball court rings. He who played caused [the ball] to enter there; he caused it to go in. Then he won all the costly goods, and he won everything from all who watched there in the ball court. His equipment was the rubber ball, the leather gloves, girdles, and leather hip guards.

necocampa imac tlatepantectli, cenca tlaiecchiuhtli 345
injc xipetztic in tlachmatl, ioan in tlalmantli: auh in 526
vncan vel inepantla tlachtli, onoca tlecotl tlaxotlalli in tlalli, auh in jtech tlachmatl, vntetl in tlachtemalacatl manca, in aquin ollimanj vncan tlacalaquiça, vncan qujcalaquja olli: njman ic qujtlanj in jxquich tlaçotli tlaiquitl, auh muchintin qujntlanj, in jxquichtin tetlatlattaque, in vncan tlachco: itlaujcallo in olli, maiecatl, nelpilonj, queçeoatl.

Patolli was played with large beans—four large beans with holes bored into the surfaces. The game was won when from their hands they scattered the four beans on a mat painted in widely spaced black [lines], with which the patolli mat was designed. There went to be added the counters—twelve [of them], six the property of each, the counters of each of the contenders. He who won in playing patolli,

Patoa ica aiecotli, vevej etl naubtetl in tlaixcoionjlli 524
injc motlanj immatica in qujchxiaoa in nauhtetl etl, qujcujloa ce petlatl, tlitica, papatlactic in tlilli, injc mjcujloa patolpetlatl, in vncan mopouhtiuh tlapoal-tetl matlactetl omome chichiquacentetl imaxca intla-poaltzuh icecemme in jxnamjquj in motlanj in patoa, qujtlanjlia in ixquich tlaçotli, cozzic teucujtlacozcatl, 524
chalchiujtl, teuxiujtl, matzopetztli ipan ca chalchiujtl 525

1. Tlaçotli: the corresponding Spanish has slaves (esclavos). See also below, description of patolli.

524 525 wear* all the costly goods: golden necklaces, green stones, fine turquoise, bracelets on which were round, green stones or fine turquoise, quetzal feathers, shows, houses, fields, precious capes, mats, large capes, green stone lip plugs, golden ear plugs, duck feather capes. And he who played patolli, who cast the beans, if there he made one [of them] stand, if the bean stood up there on its thicker end, it was taken as a [787] great omen; it was regarded as a great marvel. Then he won all the costly goods. [The other] lost even though he had not yet attained the specified number of throws. Thus were all agreed; thus all came to the end [of the game].

● 526 411 They shot with bow and arrow—with a bow, with a shaft, with bird arrows, with darts. With this belonged a bracelet on which were large, round, green [301 643] stones or fine turquoises. The archer placed it about his wrist.

They used a sling, and cast stones with the sling. With these belonged a net for the small stones, rounded so that the small stones were polished. With [223] these they cast stones at small birds. They hunted with a bird net; with it they captured various birds.

351 Flower gardens were laid out; flower beds were laid out. They put in them all the various flowers.

522 524 There were their jesters who provided them solace and gave them pleasure. And [there were those] who rolled a log with their feet thus bringing pleasure in many ways. Their deeds were laughable and marvelous; for with the soles of his feet one man [lying] below this did—he made a thick, round log dance with the soles of his feet [while] he lay upon his back and cast the log upward. With only the soles of his feet he did this.

517 Many things they did to bring men pleasure. There were their servants, their pages who attended them [732] and gave them solace; dwarfs, cripples, hunchbacks, [231] servants. They kept eagles, ocelots, wolves, mountain cats, and various birds.

chalchihuitl, anoço teuxiuitl in jmaquechtlan quijtalia tlaxuuj.

Tlatlamjna tlauiqolica, tipoonica, tonxuijica, tlacochica: ixtlauiçallo, matzopetzli ipan co, uej chalchiuitl, ololiuhqui, anoço teuxiuitl in jmaquechtlan quijtalia tlaxuuj.

Tlatlacaloxuija, tlatlamoda ican tlacalhoxtli, injcallo tekolomatlatl mjmjltic injc mopethoa telolodi, ic quijmoda tepiuxca tuxome, tlatlapechmatlauja in jca tomatlatl: injc quijnaçi nepapan tuxome, mouchimjltia, mouchitepantia, caquija, in jaquijch nepapan xochitl, vacatca intetlavecuaquijticaboan in quijmelelquiztinin, in quijcoxmelcia: ioan quauijlacatzoque in quijpaquijtia mjjec tlamatti in jutlachiouh teuxaquijti, ioan mauijztic, in jca iuocpal tlanjpa injc tlômati çe tlacatl, tomaoac in quauauijmjlli in quijxoxia ica iuocpal aquexuac acopa in cocoxmiauj quauauijmjlli çe ichcatl in jaocpal ic tlamati, mjjec tlamâdi, in teccocmelti in quijchioa, vacatca inmachoan, inolooa in quijmjcaxincaca in quijmochellaquijxinia, tzapoane, villane, tepotzoane, teachne, quijquinia quaquatlati, eçelone, cuicuijtlachtin, ocotechtin, nepapan tzatzi.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS reads quitlaxoloa (he wrapped) instead of quitlaxuuj.

532
[687]
[625]

[689]

[526]

[533
534]

[735]

[482]

—After Bye y Tovarno

• 86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a careless musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies[1] (Chapter 17). 91. The game ulaxtli (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

[1] [This caption is in error. - Analyst]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

362 174 serious faces showed that, already conscious of their participation in the tribal life, they heeded their uncle's precepts as to conduct befitting boys and men. A fat little girl squatting in the doorway vainly tried to imitate with her stubby fingers and toy implements the graceful movements of her mother as she produced fine threads by the cunning manipulation of her spindle. Lolling on a cushion, a young man [276] idly smoked a cigarette in a cane holder as he picked thoughtfully at the scarcely healed lobe of his ear, tattered by penitential bloodletting with cactus spine and obsidian blade.

174 A fiesta was going on in another house, and one heard the 527 rich vibration of wooden drums and the high squeal of reed flutes. The patio was full of people, gay in the bright colors of their holiday clothes, and the air was heavy with the cloying scent of lilies. The sharp smells of rich sauces cunningly mixed from many peppers embroidered this odor, and occasionally a light breeze wafted the cool, mystic scent of incense. Somebody was celebrating his birthday, since in the background one saw a painted figure adorned with amate paper, representing the god who presided over that event. A little apart from the feasters, who partook of their entertainment with dignified pleasure, were a group of old men whose clownish gestures and burlesque solemnity could be easily associated with the cups of pulque that a slave was industriously filling for them. Not for nothing had these elders passed through the rigid self-denial of young manhood; they were permitted alcoholic indulgence in their old age whenever a feast came to pass. A last backward glance revealed the musicians, garlanded with flowers, blowing their flutes and conch shells, while one man beat the head of a cylindrical drum and another the wooden tongues in the side of the two-toned teponaztli.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Farther up the street the priests seemed to increase in number. More individuals wore the trappings of high office, such as nodding panaches of quetzal plumes and cloaks, the designs of which were worked in feathers like the personal insignia on their circular shields. Evidently the visitor was near the center of the town, and presently the causeway ended in a great open square, where the temples rose above the majestic planes of their pyramidal foundations. In the hard bright light of early afternoon, heat waves joined the smoke of incense in rendering indistinct and unearthly the outlines of the temples.

The short black shadows suggested unspeakable things. Was it imagination or reality, that sickening smell of a filthy butcher shop, that hung in the air in revolting contrast to the immaculate pavement of the temple courtyard? Imagination is too personal and egocentric a sensation for an Indian community, and the great block of the skull rack gave an answer only too firmly founded on fact. Thousands of skulls, threaded on poles, were piled up in orderly symmetry, and the black cavities of their orbits and nasal apertures suggested the marks on infernal dice. Undisturbed by this monument to human sacrifice, a few young men were practicing in a ball court near by. They thrust at a solid rubber ball with agile hips and elbows, in an effort to drive it through two rings set transversely to the walls in the length of the court.

A circular stone placed a short distance away was the scene of a most cruel game. Here, on certain ceremonial days, a tethered captive was forced to defend himself with a wooden club against the onslaught of an adversary whose weapon 643 644 that the ruler and the lords ate; only once a day did they eat.

783 785 And at night, when midnight arrived, the ruler and the lords arose, covered with the fasting capes. And they took up their incense ladles and cotton bags filled with incense, and maguey spines; and they were shod in their foam sandals. And these keepers of the gods, the long-haired ones, took them in their midst—they took them above, to [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, to offer blood at midnight. And they offered incense; there they cast incense before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli.

In the same manner they came down. They went in order. The keepers of the gods, the long-haired ones, took them in their midst, with their faces veiled in fasting capes designed with bones. When they had descended, then they went to bathe—the ruler and the lords. Thus did they do penance at night.

For four days they fasted, with faces veiled in fasting capes. And for as many days, at noon, they offered incense before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli. Likewise, for as many nights, at midnight, they offered incense and made blood offerings before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli, and they bathed themselves.

Auh iioaltica, in jcoac ioalnepantla oaçic, meoa in tlatoanj, ioan in tecutlatoque, ic ommotlapachoa in neçaoalquachtli: ioan concuj in jntlema ioan icpaxiquipilli in vncan temj copalli, ioan vitztli, ioan conmocactia in jmpoçolcac: auh in ichoantin teupixque papaoaque, qujntlacoaantiuj, in qujujca, icpac vitzilopuchtli, injc ommjço iooalnepantla, ioan ontlenamaca oncopahtema, in jxpan vitzilopuchtli.

çan no iuj oaltemo tecpantiujtze, qujntlacoaana in teupixque papaoaque, ic ixtlapachiuhtiuj in neçaoalquachtli omjcallo, in ooaltemoque, njman ic huj in maltizque, in tlatoanj, ioã tecutlatoque, injc iooaltica tlamaceoaia, naujlhujtl in moçaoaia ic ixqujmjliuhticatca in neçaoalquachtli, auh izqujlhujtl in nepãtla tonatiuh, in ontlenamacaia ixpan vitzilopuchtli: çan no izqujioal, in ioalnepantla tlenamacaia, ioan onmjçoa in jxpan vitzilopuchtli, ioan maltiaia.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which it is related how they ended the penance, and took the ruler to the courtyard of the palace; and the others they took to their homes.

And after this, when the four days and four nights were ended during which the ruler and lords had fasted and done penance—at that time the ruler came forth, that they might escort him there to the great palace, the ruler's residence. And also at that time the lords entered their homes.

[777] And when this had come to pass, then the ruler chose a propitious day on which the ruler's feast might be observed. He commanded all the majordomos to accord others and give them all capes, and costly devices, and shields.

INJC EY PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa, in quenjn qujtzonqujxtiaia tlamaçeoalíztli, ioan qujujcaia in tlatoanj, in tecpan itoalco: ioã in oc cequjntin qujnujcaia in jnchan.

Auh in ie iuhquj in otzonqujz naujlhujtl, ioan nauhioal, in oonmoçauh, in ontlamaçeuh tlatoanj, ioan tecutlatoque, qujnjcoac qujça in tlatoanj, injc concaoa in vmpa vei tecpan tlatocan. Auh in tecutlatoque, qujn no icoac calaquj in jnchan.

Auh in ie iuhquj: njman ic qujpepena in tlatoanj, in qualli tonalli, in jpan motlatocapacaz, qujnnaoatia, in jxqujchtin calpixque, in jxqujch tilmatli, ioan tlaçotlanquj tlaujztli, ioan chimalli, in qujtetlauhtiz, in qujtemacaz.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how the ruler made summons to a feast.

● 527 648 Then he bade to a feast those from every city. He asked to the banquet the ruler of Michoacan, and the ruler of Cuextlan, and the ruler of Metztitlan, and the lords of the Totonac country, and the lords of Tlaxcala, and the ruler of Cholula, and the lords

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa, in quenjn qujchioaia tecoanotzalíztli, in ichoatl tlatoanj.

Niman ic tecoanotza, in noujian altepetl ipan, qujcoanotza in mjchoacan tlatoanj, ioan cuextlan tlatoanj, ioan metztitlan tlatoanj, ioan totonacapan tlatoque, ioan tlaxcallan tlatoque, ioan cholollan tlatoanj, ioan uexotzinco tlatoque, ioan tenjtla tla-of Uexotzinco,[8] and the lords of foreign lands, and the lords of Tzapotlan, and the lords of Anauac, and the ruler of Tehuantepec, and all the lords posted on the shores of the oceans, and all the lords of the cities encircling Mexico—the ruler of Texcoco and the ruler of Tlacopan.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

And when all the invited lords had assembled—[both] friendly and unfriendly lords—he provided them food. He gave them drink and food; costly goods he gave them all: capes without price, and valuable breech clouts, and devices, and costly shields. There was dancing; there was a procession; there was singing, night and day, as the ruler provided them solace.

And at that time he also gave gifts to all the noblemen, brave warriors, and lords, and judges, and rulers of the youths, and all the singers, and all the keepers of the gods, fire priests, and [other] priests.

And when the feast ended, then all the bidden guests departed.

FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how the ruler adorned himself when he was to war upon some city.

And then, when some days had passed, the ruler proclaimed war—that they would go to set forth somewhere to war. He gave costly devices and shields to the noblemen and to all the brave warriors and men [at arms]. And the ruler himself went to war. To set forth to battle and to conquer, he took all the warriors, and the lords of all the cities about, that they might set forth to war and conquest. And when they had gone forth to conquer and to wage war, they rejoiced greatly over the number of captives whom they had taken, since they would slay them all before [the image of] Uitzilopochtli in order with them to observe his feast. And he accorded honor to all the brave warriors and captors; with many things did he favor them. He gave them costly capes, and breech clouts, and long labrets, and head bands; and he gave them titles by which they would be honored and obeyed as men [at arms] and brave warriors.

toque, ioan tzapotlan tlatoque, ioan anaoac tlatoque, 643 ioan tequantepec tlatoanj: ioan in jxqujchtin tla- 527 toque, ilhujcaatentli qujtztoque, ioan in jxqujchtin- 648 tlatoque in altepetl ipan, qujiaoalotoque mexico, tetzcuco tlatoanj, ioan tlacopan tlatoanj.

Auh in jcoac ocenqujzque in jxqujchtin tlacoa-notzaltin tlatoque, in jicnihoan tlatoque ioan iiauhoan: njman ic qujntlaqualtia, qujnmaca in atl, in tlaqualli, tlaçotlanquj, qujntlauhtia in jxqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan tlaçomaxtlatl, ioan tlaujztli, ioan tlaço-tlanquj chimalli, netotilo maceoalo, cujco, ceioal cemjlhujtl, in tepaqujltia tlatoanj, auh in jcoac no qujntlauhtia, in jxqujchtin pipiltin, [431] tiacaoã, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tel-puchtlatoque, ioan ixqujchtin cujcanjme, ioan ix-qujchtin tzupixque tlenamacaque, tlamacazque:

auh in otzonqujz tecoanotzalizztli, njman ic ompeoa in jxqujchtin tlacoanotzalti.

INJC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa, 643 in quenjn mocencaoaia, in tlatoanj, injc cana iautiz, 292 altepetl ipan.

Auh çan njman iquezqujlujioc, iaotlatoa in tla- 726 toanj, injc cana iauqujxoalotiuh, qujntlauhtia in 724 tlaujztli tlaçotlanquj ioan chimalli im pipilti, ioan in jxqujchtin tiacaboan, oqujchti: auh iioma in tlatoanj in iauh iauc, in oniaoqujça, in ontepeoa qujujca in jxqujchti iauqujzque, ioan in noujian tlatoque alte-petl ipan inic oiaoqujça, ontepeoa: auh in jcoac ōtepeoato, oiaoqujçato cenca paquj, in qnexqujch malli ocanato, injc mochintin ixpan vitzilopuchtli qujnmjctiaia, inic inca ilhujqujxtiaia. Auh in ix-qujchtin tiacaoan, tlamanjme, qujnmaujxiotia, mjiec tlamātli injc qujmjcnelia, qujntlauhtia in tlaçotil-matli, ioan maxtlatl, ioan teçacatl, ioan tlalpilonj, ioan qujntocamaca injc maujztililozque, injc tlacamachozque, injc oqujchti, tiacaoã.

8. In ibid., uexotzinco dataqui is followed by yaqui mixtecapan dataqui, and rulers of the Mixtec country.

[p. 66 is blank]

65

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

sistance. Another name for the same profession was "man who takes more than he gives" "tiamicqui,"[76] a surname or slur. Lastly they were called "puchtecatl."[77] It is with this title that traders appear, among the ancient Mexicans, as privileged people. But such they became always only under peculiar circumstances. At certain intervals of time a number of men gathered, forming a company for the purpose of visiting the market places of other tribes and exchanging their home products for those of distant regions. Such an enterprise was always a great venture, and required a peculiar organization. The participants were to be numerous enough to resist the assaults of straggling bands, but they should not appear so numerous as to arouse suspicion. They should be well armed, but at the same time anxious to avoid collision. They needed a certain number of carriers, not only for the wares which they took along, but for their supplies, still the number of these carriers could not be too great. Such an expedition was in reality not a private, but a tribal undertaking. Its members not only carried into distant countries the industry of their tribe, but they also had to observe the customs, manners, and resources of the people whom they visited. Clothed with diplomatic attributes, they often were less traders than spies. Thus they cautiously felt their way from tribe to tribe, from Indian fair to Indian fair, exchanging their stuff for articles not produced at home, all the while carefully noting what might be important to their own tribe. It was a highly dangerous mission. Frequently they never returned, being waylaid, or treacherously butchered even while enjoying the hospitality of a pueblo in which they had been bartering.

The safe return however of such a party to the pueblo of Mexico was always an important and joyful event. The reception was sometimes, in solemnity of exercises and in barbarous venden comales," "que venden cestos," "que vende petacas" (Cap. XXIII, p. 56, etc.), "oficial de navajas," "Los que hacen esteras" (Cap. XXIV, p. 69). In general, nearly all the aboriginal manufacturers are mentioned by him also as selling the products of their industry, and vice versa. H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II, pp. 383 and 384, cap. XII).

[76] Molina ("Vocabulario" Parte Ia, p. 84). "Tianamacac," "tendero," "á vendedor de algo," Parte IIa, p. 127; "nite-tianamictia," "dar o trocar una cosa por otra, o recompensar" (p. 127, II). Exchange and sale appear almost synonymous.

[76] Molina (Parte Ia, p. 84). From "nite-tiamicaquitia," "mohatrar" (II, p. 112).

[77] Molina (I, 84), also (II, 83, 84). Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. III, p. 348, cap. V, pp. 354, 355, cap. X, p. 372, etc.), calls them also: "naoaloztomeca," literally "peddlers of the Nahuatl." Molina (II, 78). The derivation of both words I am unable to give.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

441 pomp, second only to that of the tribal forces returning from a 527 successful campaign or foray. The traders went first to the central place of worship, there to stoop before the idols in token of adoration. From the great "medicine-lodge" the band repaired to the "tecpan," where they met the council of the tribe and its leading officers. Sometimes in presence of a concourse of people, and again if required, in "secret session" the traders communicated, for the benefit of the tribe, any results of their explorations. After this their particular quarters gave them appropriate receptions also, and in some instances even the whole tribe celebrated their return with solemn dances, and a distribution of victuals corresponding to what in our time would be called a popular feast.

439 In order to realize the substantial results of such expeditions
441 we must bear in mind, that whatever they brought back had to 556 be carried by men. As already intimated, the number of these men was limited. They could not, without jeopardizing the object of their mission or enterprise, take large bodies of assistants along. Besides, as these assistants also had to carry their own food, providing for many journeys through uncultivated ("neutral") wastes, this also restricted the amount of material brought home. However precious that material might be to the Mexican tribe, it was certainly limited in quantity. Finally, custom demanded that the most highly priced articles should be offered up to worship, to the stores of the tribe and of the kins. Little material gain therefore, remained to the courageous travellers themselves. The proceeds of their enterprise were largely for the benefit of the community and the reward bestowed upon them by that community rather than the profits derived from any traffic, composed the personal gain of the participants. This reward consisted of presents out of the public stores, and especially in the marks of distinction bestowed upon them.

441 Thus the so-called "merchants" of ancient Mexico became 556 equivalent to distinguished braves, and their deeds entitled them
565 frequently to the rank of chiefs. But if, on one hand, they had no opportunity to secure anything like personal wealth, on the other the rewards of merit did not attach to their offspring. No class of traders, no caste of merchants, can therefore have existed, and if a certain well-earned consideration attached itself to the person of those who embraced occasionally such a hazardous

For, so was it said, he had fallen into great sin.[5] There rags and tatters lay strung out; there misery and orphanhood were the reward. And there was the great flood, the great crag, the pit, where there was a falling into the flood, or from the crag, or into the pit.[6] And there lay the snare, where one was snared.

So was it said of him to whom it so befell that his fate and merits had been good; only of his own will and by his own act he had harmed, destroyed, and ruined it, etc.

And if a woman were born upon the day One Flower, it was said that she would be an able embroiderer. But nevertheless, in order to gain her deserts, and to achieve skill in embroidering, she should do great penances, and fast, and draw blood when the day sign One Flower set in. But if she did not do penances, if she took not good heed, if her upbringing and training were not good, she herself harmed her day sign.

Likewise it befell her (as was told here) that her labors were in vain; she merited complete poverty and misery. Thus her deserts only came to an end, to naught; they became corruption. She became a harlot, a courtesan. She sold herself; she became a paramour. For it was said that just so was her day sign, One Flower; for it fell two ways. They said it was good and evil.

Also it was said that when One Flower set in, then began, continued, and was always held, a dance, a procession. But only Moctezuma in his own heart knew — [for] no one [else] determined — for how many days he established his dance. Perchance for forty days there would be dancing.

And that it might be known that a dance had been arranged, two poles with flowers were set up; they remained at the palace of the ruler. Thus was made known the day of the flowers: there would be enjoyment of and rejoicing over the day of flowers.

At that time the ruler determined and requested the kinds of song to be intoned — perhaps after the manner of those of Cuextlan;[7] the drunkards of Cuextlan;[8] or of Huexotzinco or Apalhuac; or the merchants; or those of Nonoalco, or Coscatlan; or of

ca iuh mjtoa, tlaalavi, tlapetzcavi, ítlacacemellecan vncan vilantoc in tzotzomatli, in tatapatli, vncã mãcualo in jcnoiotl, in jcnotlacaiotl: auh vncan icac, in vei atoiatl, in vei tepexitl, in tlaxapuchtli, vncã neatoiavilo, netepexivilo, netlaxapuchvilo: ioan vncan manj in tzonoaztli, vncan netzonoazvilo: 787X ic mjtoa, in aqujn iuhquj ipan muchioaia, y, qualli ocatca: in jtonal, in jmãceoal, ça inêviian, ça onmonevianvi, in oconmjtlacalhuj, in oconmopôpolhuj, yn oconmotlaçolmjctili. Etc.

Auh intla aca cioatl, ipan tlacatia ce suchitl: mjtoaia, vuellamachchiuhquj iex: auh iece injc vel qinonopilhujz imãceoal, injc vel qujtzaz tlãmachtli, cẽtlamaceoaia, moçaoaia, mjçoia in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl tonalli: auh intlacamo tlamaceoa, intlacamo vel monotza, intlacamo vellapapaoalli, vellazcaltilli mochioa, çan no qujtlaueliaia yn jtonal: [785] no iuhquj ipan muchioaia (in iuh omjto njcan) atle onquçaia, çan moch icnoiotl, netolinilíztli in qujmomaceviac auh injc ça ontlatzontia, ontlatzonqujxtia, ça aujlqujzcaiotl, in jnemac mochioa, aavienjti, manujltia, monanamaca, motzitzinnamaca: ic mjtoa, ca nel iuhquj itonal in ce suchitl, ca vme vitz qujtoa, qualli, ioã ãqualli.

No yoan mjtoa, in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl: vncan oncempeoa, vncan vnmocemana, in muchipa maceoalo, netotilo, çan iee qujmati in Motecuçuma yiollotlãma aiac qujioccoia, in quezquilhujtl, qujtlaliz ymaceoaliz in aço vmpoalilhujtl manjz mãceoalíztli: 527● 535 ãuh injc necia, ynjc temaceoalíztlalhujloia, vme suchiquavitl oalmoquetzaia, oalmomanaia tecpan, tlatocan: yc monextia in suchilhujtl, suchipacca, nezuchitlamachtilo:

vncã tlatlãlamj, tlanenequj in tlatoanj, in catle cujcatl coneoan, in anoço cuextecaiotl, tlaoancacuextecaiotl, vexotzincaiotl, anaoacaiotl, ostomecaiotl, nonoalcaiotl, coscatecaiotl, tenjcaiotl, tepetlacaiotl, chichimecaiotl, metztitlancalcaiotl, otomcujcatl, quata- 527 533

5. Florentine Codex, Book VI, fol. 191*v*: tlaalavi, tlapetzcavi ín tlalácapan. See also fol. 210*v*.

6. Cf. also loc. cit. The passage is manipulated.

7. Probably Huexotzinco. See, however, Sahagún (Carlisle ed.), X, 29, 79-82 (cf. Vol. I, p. 9, for reference system, to be used hereafter except in special cases).

8. Cf. ibid., IV, 7, 2.

527 the Tenime;[9] or those of Tepetlan; or the Chichi-533 meca; or those of Metztitlan; or the Otomí warriors or of the Quaquata; or the rabbit songs; or songs with two-toned drums, etc.; or women's songs; or those of the girls with the lock of hair at the side of the head. Or perchance only songs of debauchery, or of bragging; or of the sick, or of the cripples; or of the shorn ones; or of vice, etc.

cujcatl, tochcujcatl, teponazcujcatl. Etc. çioacujcatl, atzotzocolcujcatl, auh in anoço çan aujlcujcatl, iacuecuechcujcatl, cococujcatl, quappitzcujcatl, quatepequjcujcatl, aujlcujcatl. Etc.

So it was said that verily the [day sign of the] 535 flower was in place.

ye mjtoaia ca nel onjcac in xuchitl.

And then the majordomos gathered together all 292 the ruler's dancing array which he requested, and 527 which he might exhibit; whatever he might desire
643 to dance in, in which he would show himself to the people.

Ioan vncã qujcenqujxtiaia, in cacalpixque in jxquich imácecollatquj tlatoanj, qujtlanenectia, qujtlãtlatitia, in catle coneleuja, ipan onmjtoia, ipan ontetlattitiz:

And then he gave devices to the chieftains, the 527 insignia-bearers, the Otomí, the shorn ones, the com-
643 manding generals, the generals, those who struck,
431 encircled, overtook, hemmed in, and spied on the people.

ioan vncan qujntlavizmacaia, in tiacacan, in tetlajecteaoa, in otomj, in quaquachicti, in tlatlacatecca, in tlatlacochcalca, in tevitequjnj, in temalacachoanj, in teviltequjnj, in tetzacujianj, in tetlallanvianj:

And at that time, in truth, favors were accorded 643 and distributed. He singled out, by means of gifts,
527 all the singers, the singers from the common folk,
533 the song-writers, the composers, the beaters of drums —the ground drums, the two-toned drums; two-
535 toned drum players, those who started the singing, those who led, those who gave the pitch, and those 431 who whistled with their fingers; and the leaders and conductors of the dance, the dancers, those who urged the dancers on, those who distributed them, those with trembling voices, those who made noises like a weasel;[10] the circle dancers, and all who belonged and worked with those mentioned.

yoan vel oncan mocnaviaia, mopixqujxia, tlatemachiaia, netlauhtiltica, in jxquich cujcani, mácecolcujcanj, in cujcatlalianj, in cujcapiqujnj: auh in tlatzotzonquj, in vevetzonquj, teponaço, teponaçoanj cujcaito, cujcaanquj, cujcatlazquj, yoan in mapipitzoanj: auh in teiacanquj, in teiacananj, mjtoianj, motlaqujtoiánj, tlamoiauhquj, tocacuecuechoanj, tocujlechoanj, tlacocoloanj: moch ichoan intech povia, intech açia, in mjtoa:

Before them came their food, the prepared foods:
262 —tamales with beans forming a sea-shell on top;
527 fruit tamales; tamales of a dough of maize treated with lime; hard tamales with maize grains thrown in; tamal-stones; large tortillas; coarse, white tortillas; rolled tortillas; doubled tortillas, tortilla pies; tortillas shredded, or wrapped about turkey; tamales formed in rolls; tamales of maize; ground-up tamales; crumbled tortillas; folded tortillas; meat with grains of maize.

ixpampa vitz, itlaqualtzin, in tlaqualtertli, in quatecujcujlli, xocotamalli, tenextamalli, tetamalli, tlatzincujtl, tamaltetl, vei tlaqualli, quauhtlaqualli, tlaxcalmjmjlli, tlacuelpacholli, tlaçiocuepalli, tlaxcaleotezttli, tozolqujmjlli, tamalmjmjlli, tamalatl, tamalcuecuechtli, papaiaztlaxcalli, papaiantlaxcalpacholli, nacatlaoio.

And when they had tired and were wearied of 527 dancing, then they took and burned the two flowered ripples. And then they fashioned and adorned still

Auh in iquac otlatziuh, in ocontlatzilhuj mácecolliztli, njman qujcalaqujxia, qujtlatiala, in vnic xuchiquavitl: auh iquac oc centlamãtli, ic qujxpdaiotiaia, 9. Cf. ibid., 2, 29, 94-95; genre tlahtoani was a term generally understood by natives.

10. In describing the sound made by the weasel Sahagún, Book V, chap. vi, reads auh inic ilamo pipiloua, tzitzquin mapipiloua: tzcuilloua mapipiloua . . . See also, Olmos, op. cit., p. 237 (manuscript).

another flowered pole. This they ignited, set fire to, and burned. And so silence reigned and it was still; it remained calm in the city; no one stirred or made a noise. For the flowers had burned; they had been destroyed by fire.

But none the less, in the home of each nobleman and lord there was much singing and rejoicing. Only and alone at the palace was the dancing ended. All the people rejoiced completely.

quichichioia, çan no ouchiquauitl: ichoutl tlatlaia, quitlatiaia, quitecaviaia: ic cactimomanaia, cactiuetzia tlamatimoemana in altepetl, aoc ac tlaolinja, tlachalanja: ipampa ca omotlati ozlatlac in ouchitl:

auh tel in cocoiaca iuchan pipiltl, tlatoque, vel cuicoia pacoaia, çaniio, çaniiocan ip tecpan mocaoaia in mácoualiztli, in mochi tlacatl in cempaquja.

527

[p 28 is blank]

Twelfth Chapter, which telleth of still other houses. Some were only indifferent and some were in no way good.

Inic matlactlomocze capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in oc cequj calli, cequj çan tlanepantla ca, cequj vel njman amo qualli. 787X

The time of the day sign Four Wind was said to be good and bad. For then were slain those called doers of evil, the adulterers. They placed their heads in a noose and choked, strangled, or hanged them, or struck them on the back of the head, or crushed their skulls under a rock. Only at night were they killed; when it dawned, and they were already bloated, they cast them each into the water. Likewise then died some of the captives. Through them, so it was said, Moctezuma received new life (as hath been told) on [the day sign] One Rain, when [the Goddesses] descended. And this was also the time that the [aforementioned] demons and sorcerers destroyed people. And since there was fear on this day sign, Four Wind, everywhere they put cardoon[1] into the smoke openings [of the houses]. They stuffed and crammed it in. Thereby, so it was said, they frightened them away.

In jpan nauhecatl tonalli, mjtoa qualli, ioan amo qualli, ca vncan mjctiloia, qujnquechmecanjaia, qujnquechtzonviaia, qujnmecanjaia, qujnpiloa, qujncuexcochvivitequj, qujnquatepipitzainja, in moteneoa tlaçolchiuhque, in tetlaxinque, çan iooan in mjctiloia, in oallavi ie tlacujtlapoçaoa, atlan qujmonmamaiavi. No ioan cequjn vncan mjquja in mamalti, iuh mjtoa: ca iehoan inca motzcaltiaia in Motecuçoma (in iuh omoteneuh) ipan ce qujauitl in vncan temoa: auh ie no vncan tepopoloaia, in omoteneuhque tlatlacateculo, in nanaoalti, auh injc imacaxoia, in ipan in tonalli nauecatl in tlecalco noujian caaqujaia, in tlacateculovocovitztli, qujpopotzaqujaia, qujcacacatztaia: iuh mjtoa ca ic qujnpeviaia. 681 684 727 761 789 824

But the merchants,[2] those known as distinguished traders[3] and vanguard merchants,[4] who were rich, greatly esteemed and honored this [day sign]. For then they laid out in the sun[5] all the precious things which they had hidden away—the green stone, the objects made of [ordinary] green stone and resplendent green stone; the round ones, round like

Auh in iehoantin pochteca, in moteneoa: acaoteca, in oztomeca, in motlacamati, iê qujveimatia, qujmaviztiliaia, ca vncan qujtotonjaia, in ixquich tlaçotli qujtlatiaia, in chalchiujtl, in chalchiuhtli, in quetzalchalchiuhtli, in ololiuhqujtl, in tomatic, in acatic, in ie ixqujch cozcatl, in coxcapetlatl, in patlaoac, in pitzaoac, xiujtl: auh in jxqujch nepapan ivitl, in quetzalli 441 527 556

1. Xoxouhqui. — Francisco J. Santamarina: Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), Vol. II, p. 154: jamicia — Bromelia pinguin L. "En México, nombre vulgar de una planta de las regiones tropicales, que crece como un metro de altura y cuya hoja remojada o ha de la piña. . . . propiedad antiescorbática."

2. Tlamatinimi also as "men of Pochtlan," a barrio of Tenochtitlan occupied by merchants, whose gods were Tlipan, Macuilxochitl, Xilonen, Tlaloc, Ilhuicatl, Cuauhtlehuanitl, Chimalma, Ixcuinanqui, Yacatecuhtli (Arturo Monzón, op. cit., p. 58). See also Alfonso Caso: Instituciones indígenas precortesianas (México: Instituto Nacional Indigenista, 1954), pp. 23-24, for a résumé of the social and economic importance of the pochteca.

3. Atamalcualli as pochtecatlahtoani, "mayor o principal entre los mercaderes . . . tanto como si diéramos que es gobernador de los mercaderes, y entre los mercaderes . . . es entiendese al que es mayor principal, gobernador, o señor, o que es casi padre y maestro de todos los mercaderes" (Sahagún, Garibay ed., X, 16, 5).

Jens, op. cit., p. 240 (citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 69): "eher eidechsenähnlicher Fabelmann in der eidechsenhaft dem Ion von Mexiko gelegenen Landschaft Cholula." Acatecuhtli was a merchant's barrio in Tenochtitlan; gods were: Nuni Ehecatl, Chimalpanecatl, Xantecatl, Cuchimilcatl, Yacapitzauac, Nacxitl, Chalmecatecuhtli (Monzón, loc. cit.).

4. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, "The Gods," p. 18 and n. 5. Jens, op. cit., p. 238, citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 1070: "Meine mit dem Grün Gemischte . . . . der auf Wanderschaft gehende Kleine und Mächtigkeiter zusteht als der auf weite Reisen gehende Grünfeinmann, auch Kaufmann i. A."

5. Ibid., p. 148.

441
527
556

tomatoes, the cylindrical ones;[6] and all the neck bands, and the matted neck bands; and large and small pieces of turquoise; and all the different kinds of feathers — quetzal tail feathers: the well-pointed ones, the well-curved ones, the wide ones, the long ones, which, they said, indeed extended a fathom. And these were just the tail feathers. And those they called down feathers,[7] the very small ones, the chili-green ones and the crest feathers of the quetzal;[8] and feathers of the red spoonbill[9] [zoquechol], which is now called tlauhquechol; and the blue cotings, the amethyst-colored ones,[10] the yellow parrot,[11] the multicolored parrot, the trupial,[12] the red and yellow parrot,[13] the scarlet parrot,[14] the blue parrot,[15] the dove; and aquamarine feathers, etc. And skins of wild animals, and mats of wild animal [skins]; and wooden chocolate-beaters; and gourd stoppers.[16]

Verily, all their goods, which lay strewn [and scattered in the tribal quarter] temples[17] they arranged in order and in rows upon precious capes. They sorted, ordered, and disposed them. Then they offered incense and beheaded quail. Of this it was thus said: "They place things in the sun." And when they had placed them in the sun, and when they had offered incense during the day, later,[18] in vel iaque in vel vitoliuj, in patlacac, in viiac, in qujlhuja cexciacatl içan moteca: auh in çan totocujtlapiltic, ioan in qujlhuja quetzaliacatl, in çan tepitoton, in chilchotic, ioan in tzinjtzcan, in tzoquechol: in xacan mjtoa tlauhquechol, ioan in xiuhtotorl, in aiopal, in tozcujtl, in toxcujcujl, in çaquan, in cochoivitl, in chamolin, in cujtlatzozotli, in coçôtli, in xiuhapalli. Etc. yoan in tequaneoatl, in tequanpetlatl, auh in aquaujtl, in atzaccaiotl:

in ie mochi intlatquj in teinìoc, [¶ pixauhtoc. yn calpulco] in teucali, tlaçotilmapan, qujcentêcaia, qujcuecuentiliaia, qujtlatlamantiliaia, qujviujpanaia, qujtetecpanaia, vncan tlenamacaia, tlacotonaia, iehoatl injc mjtoa: tlatotonja, auh in jquac otlatotonjque, in otlenamacaque, cemjlhujtl, catepan tlatlaqualo, aatlioa, mopixtoque, in pochteca veuetque, nepiclotoc, tlachichinalotoc, tlanecutoc, tlaujaxtoc, pucticoatoc,

---

6. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book XI, cap. viii, fol. 295: ioyc tlatlalili, ohdac, ocotic xicxic, tomatic, chiquimolec, tlachquimalcoti, tlachiquimalli, tlacomapalli, tlachtlacuilochtlalli, for which the corresponding Spanish text reads: "Labores como pindas unas redondas y apretadas, otras largas y rollizas, y apretadas, otras triangulares, otras cortadas al cayo, otras cuadradas."

7. Quetzal xoxo plug, in Jens, loc. cit.

8. Tzinitzcan. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 2 and 4, describes both the crest of the quetzal and a bird of the same name: Tzquanoxoc tzcuxcan, 7. cuchujqui (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 344). In Sáez, Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1959), Vol. V, p. 2, it is quetzal tail and down feathers of dark green with metallic sheen; in ibid., Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 137, a bird with black and green feathers.

9. Tlauhquechol. In ibid., Vol. IV, p. 62, white and red spoonbill; Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 63, red heron; p. 124, red spoonbill; p. 137, rose-colored heron. Cf. also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 5: Ajaja ajaja (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 356).

[136]

10. Sahagún (op. cit., XI, 2, 9) mentions an ayoquan found in mountains above Cuernavaca and Michoacan — of painted, black beak and black feathers except those of the tail, which are half-white; another bird of the same name is a waterfowl of yellow beak; feathers at joint of wing are green; long wing and tail feathers are brassy, with white and green; body feathers are red. Ajaxuia ajaxui (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 324).

In "L'ordonnance des matières mexicaines et leur art de travailler la pierre et de faire des ornements en plumes," Congrès International des Américanistes, Compte-Rendu de la Huitième Session Tenue à Paris en 1890 (Paris: Ernest Leroux, 1892), note to § 48, Edward Seler translates ayopul as tapaxt ordinaire, referring to Molina, op. cit., chrisul amarillo — ayopulmichtl.

11. Sáez, Collected Works, Vol. IV, p. 33. Cf. also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 16; Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 210.

12. Sáez, op. cit., Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 114. Gyrocotinque Mexicanum (Sahagún, Garibay ed., Vol. IV, p. 372).

13. Sáez, op. cit., Vol. IV, p. 33. Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 371: "zaquanic de loro, del género Chrysotis." Cuchu ac cuchul — "Papagayo rojo y morado." Amaxuxu ahuxuxu ahuxuxu (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. IV, p. 328).

14. Ibid., IX, 1, 2. Cf. also, however, chamolin (chamol) in Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 461: "Nombre vulgar que en el Estado de Guerrero, en Mijoc, se da al tabachin o chamolchichil." Chamolchichil. Asc., chamoli (pimarlo) — "tabachin o flor del amarillo (Poinciana pulcherrima)."

15. Cf. Sahagún, loc. cit.

16. Corresponding Spanish text: cuyadores de calabazas para acocotes.

17. An omission in the Florentine Codex, to be noted in comparing the passage with the text of the Real Palacio MS, placed in brackets, brings the Nahuatl closer to Sahagún's corresponding Spanish.

18. Compare: the colillo is missing in the original.

everyone ate and drank. The old merchants lay guarding and watching, smoking, inhaling the fragrance, and taking their pleasure. Smoke drifted upward and was overspread. Food was spread out in abundance; nothing was lacking. Of this it was thus said: the merchants heated things; they placed them in the sun.

puctli mantoc, tlaqualli quijquixtoc, atle monectoc, ichoatl injc mjtoa, ca tlatonaltia, tlatzoonja, in puchteca. 441 527 556

And when it grew dark, there was drinking. All of the old merchant men and women assembled. When they became drunk, then they vaunted, boasted, and blustered over their wealth, their achievements, their valor, and especially wheresoever they had set foot; that is to say, wheresoever they had gone to arrive; the things which they had discovered, the manner of their return, their coming back. So they had gone to perform their labors and to circle about the surrounding provinces, to encounter the waste lands, to descend into the gorges — everywhere entering places of danger and drawing into fields of battle. And verily in some places they were besieged and ambushed. Perhaps only one or two escaped the hands of the enemy, coming to leave word with and inform the people that they had first broken and scattered the rampart and enclosure of eagle and ocelot warriors.

Auh in çioouc tlatlacoano, mocecentlalia in puchteca veuetque, in puchteca ilamatque, intla otlaiujntic, vncan qujmopopoaltia, qujmecoaltia, ic mjxmotlatoque, yn innecujltonol, yn intlaiecoliz, yn jmoqujchtiliz, oc cenca ichoatl: in canjn icac imjcxi, qujtoxnequj: in canjn acitinemj, in quexqujch ic conmati, in quexqujch imjloch, innecuepal, ic quichiuhtinemj, injc qujlacatzotinemj anaoatl, injc ixtlaoatl qujnamjctinemj, injc atlauhtli quitemovitinemj, in noviian calactinemj, in ovica, in iaotitlan qujatinemj: auh in nel cana impan oalmotzaqua, qujnpoiomjctia, aço ça ce, vme, in tematitlampa qujça, in qujoalcaoa tlatolli, in oaltritoa, ichoan achtopa qujpetla, qujxitinja, in quauhtenamjtl, quauhtlatzacujlli, ocelotenamjtl, ocelotlatzacujlli. 441 527 554 521

So there they made light of, scoffed at, exposed, revealed, abused, and tortured those who knew no places, who had gone nowhere, who nowhere in any degree had set foot anywhere; who only at the ashes of his fire called himself a warrior[19] and lived prudently[20] and impudently only here in the market place. Only here, the market place, did he frequent, buying, selling, and deceiving. And this was when, because of their suffering, these cast into the fire — or it fell by the wayside — their rearing, because they were troubled and moved by the counsel of their fathers and mothers. So there at the place of congregating there was dispute, discussion, abuse, fault-finding, and belittling. They sat jostling and besmearing one another, disputing and quarreling among themselves, contending, refuting, and bragging. They paid no heed to others' answers; they did not consider others to be superior.[21] They chattered.[22] Likewise, they were often arrogant; each one had his own opinion; they made little of and ic vncan qujquequeloa, ica maujltia, qujtlatlacaquitia, qujcocoa, qujtotoneoa, qujcocolhuja, qujchichinachilia yn jiollo, in acan onmati, in acampa ianj in acan quentel, in acan icac icxi, in çan njcam inextitlan mooqujchitoa, çan njcan tianqujaco in mjmantinemj, tlaxtlapaloxinemj, çan njcan in motitianquja, tlatlanecujloa, tlatlaxiccuj, auh ie vncan in jtoneuhcacopa, motlecomaiavi vevetzteoa, yn intlazcaltilhoan, in jntlaoapaoalhoß, injc vel imjtic oaçic intecoco, in teitic aaçic intlatol, in jntahoan, yn jnnaoan, injc vncan in necentlaliaia maaoa, mononotza, moquequeloa, mopâpatlo, mopapatzaoa, moquexiçatoque, moçoqujmotlatoque, motlatzoujlitoque, moquâquatoque, mjxquâquatoque, motlatolxopeuhtoque, moichoatocchtoque, ãmotenacujlmatque amo motenpanavillanj, chachalacatoque, no çac in jxmoquixtia: muchi tlacatl cecentetl itlatol, atle ipan qujmotztilitoque, amo commopovilitoque in innecujltonol, yn jnnetlamachtil: huel nononqua mutachcauhnequj, mococentecpoa, cecentecuti, cecenme mo-

19. Mocuqujchitoa in the Real Palacio MS. Nicuec, ichoa is unsure.

20. Mitoltiaoual in loc. cit.

21. Possibly cmotenacujltoque and amo cmotenpanvillanj are intended.

22. Chachalacatoque in the Real Palacio MS.

441 held in no esteem the riches and prosperity of others.
●527 Indeed, each one alone wished to be best; each one 554 thought himself a lord, a superior person; each one
521 thought of himself as the only one, the best. Each spoke for himself; none would talk to them or say a word in their behalf, unless he were a vanguard merchant, one who knew distant lands; unless he were very rich, dealt in goods in his house, or were a buyer of slaves,[23] a ceremonial bather of captives to be sacrificed; unless in his house were carrying frames stuffed and creaking; unless in his house one drank from black jars, gourd vessels, etc.

This was because each one of the merchants himself placed things in the sun at his own house on the day sign Four Wind.

mati, mocecocamati, nononqua motlatalhuja, aiac vel inoan tlatoa, aiac vel inpal onmocencamavia: intlacamo ontomecatl, intlacamo veca matinj: ioan intlacamo cenca mocujltonoa, intlacamo ontlaaaquj ichan, intlacamo tecoanj, intlacamo tealtianj, intlacamo cácatzcatoc, nánatzcatoc ichan cacaxtli: intlacamo poctecontica, aiotectica atlios ichan et.[a].

Ipampa injc ceceniaca tlatonaltiaia, puchteca in jncacalitic: in jpan jn tonalli nauecatl.

23. Or "one who ransomed guests."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

172
212

172
346

172
531
323

172
532
323

PLATE 29

CHART SHOWING NATURE OF AZTEC ARCHAEOLOGICAL MATERIAL

TOP ROW: Excerpts from historical picture manuscripts. 1. Arrival of the nations, in 1300, who brought a knowledge of writing (Mapa Quinatzin); 2. New Fire Ceremony of 1403; 3. New Fire Ceremony of 1455; 4. New Fire Ceremony of 1507 (2–4 from Codex Telleriano-Remensis); 5. The capture of Tenochtitlan in 1519 (Codex of 1576). SECOND ROW: Last three constructions at Tenayuca, corresponding perhaps to the cyclical renovations of 1403, 1455 and 1507. THIRD ROW: First three, Aztec pottery, Types II, IIIa, IIIb, found respectively in the cyclical dumps for 1403, 1455, 1507, and a fourth type, IV, made from 1507 through the Spanish Conquest of 1520–21. FOURTH ROW: First row, Aztec figurines made prior to 1403. Last four, made between 1403 and the Conquest, representing Xochiquetzal, Xipe, Xochipilli and Tonantzin respectively.

[p. 96(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

439
323
● 531

PLATE 30

TRADE POTTERY, AZTEC PERIOD

Vessels like these from Puebla and Tlaxcala were much prized in Central Mexico and obtained by trade or tribute. At the top, a design composed of a feather fan and concentric circles, taken from a hemispherical bowl. The middle cup utilizes a simple grecque pattern, while at the bottom the hieroglyph for the day Reed set against a black background decorates the neck of a vase, the body of which is painted a lustrous red.

[p. 96(B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

323
●531

PLATE 32

AZTEC POTTERY

TOP: Design from bowl of the Aztec IV period, representing a marine worm, water plants and a fish. SECOND ROW: Trichrome vessels from the 1403 cyclical dump at Chicomoztoc. THIRD ROW: Left: Pentachrome trade bowl found in 1507 dump at Chicomoztoc; Right: Local trichrome bowl from the same dump. BOTTOM ROW: Bowl with orange-and-black design on red and two black-on-orange plates from the 1507 dump at Nonoalco.

[p. 96(D)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531

Rich Man

[482]

PLATES 34-35.

AZTEC SOCIETY AND COSTUME FROM

During the mid-sixteenth century the Spanish friar Bernardino de Sahagun made a famous study of the Aztecs, Historia General de Nueva España, which was not published until 1829. He had the Indians prepare copious illustrations to clarify his text, but they did not reach public circulation until 1905. The selections here show, besides the social division

Poor Man

Beggar Man

[735]

Goldsmith

[326]

Thief

[685]

Feather Worker

[286]

Warriors

[701
411
714]

[p. 112(B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

●531

[622 441]

THE CODEX FLORENTINO

expressed in our nursery rhyme: "Rich man, poor man . . ." various other activities, caught with a fresh and humorous eye. Although some of the background details indicate that Spanish influence was already strongly felt a generation after the Conquest, the general details disclose a strong persistence of the Aztec way of life.

[441]

Chief

Merchant

Lawyer

[463]

Women

[759]

Sailor, brewer

[502 501]

Ant Bite

[p. 112 (C)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

steps in every case. A final polishing with some simple abra- 324 sive like water and sand often completed the process. Some hard stones seem to have been detached from their matrix by applying the abrasive and sawing with a cord of rawhide or a tool of harder stone. The Middle American people also [412] developed tubular drills of bone and reed, which, rotated by a bow and aided by an abrasive, could hollow out vases or bore out places that were otherwise inaccessible to the clumsy tools of the time.[8]

Save for descriptions and drawings, the destruction of 286 time and man has left us only a few examples of the weaver's art. Weaving of some kind is very old, and no people, however primitive, exist in the world today who do not make at least some kind of basketry. Textiles are made as a rule by higher groups, but they are found in the American continent as part of the material equipment of peoples who had not yet learned how to make pottery. An early example of cloth, combining threads of cotton with some fiber like yucca, was found in the Lower Middle Culture horizon of Zacatenco.

The long practice of weaving must and did have a sig- 286 nificant effect on decoration, for the rectangular patterns, to 531 which the weaver is confined, influence all of Indian art in Continental America. Design and the arrangement of elements are more important than form in Indian art. While many geometrical patterns appear in pictures of Aztec clothing, fine embroidery could produce the effect of curvilinear designs or even naturalistic patterns drawn from the regional flora. Batik and tie dyeing also enriched the decoration of [386]
Aztec clothing. Other processes produced the effect of velvet and brocade, and some garments even imitated in tex-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

286 ture and pattern the skins of animals. Judged on a visual 531 basis, the designs on Aztec clothing were by no means inferior to those of the celebrated textile art of Indian Peru. However, we have no positive evidence that technical development of Aztec weaving was equal to Peruvian, for those ancient South American weavers knew and practiced every method known to man and even a few unique to themselves.[6] (See Plates 33–36; 62, bottom left; 64.)

287 Feather mosaic is probably an old craft, since evidence seems to show that it was known to the Upper Middle Cultures. Feather- and the technically allied fur-cloth appear in primitive horizons in North America. The process consisted in tying the stems of feathers into a fabric during the weaving process. Featherworkers adorned shields in this way, dispersing the feathers to represent animals or else purely decorative designs. They made cloaks, too, and created sumptuous insignia worn on the head or harnessed to the body. In these objects the blending of colors was so delicate and perfect as to rival paintings. As late as the nineteenth century, although the art had declined, the Mexicans still depicted landscapes and scenes from daily life in this medium, and today they make charming pictures for the tourists with cardboard, feathers and glue.[7] (See Plate 45.)

321 Feather mosaic had an early counterpart in stone and 324 shell; we found a turquoise mosaic in a Lower Middle Culture grave. The wooden handles of sacrificial knives were sometimes ornamented in this way, as were masks, shields and even small gold ornaments. A tour de force of the mosaic worker is a wooden shield from the Mixteca, on which little pieces of turquoise were fitted together in a relief sculpture depicting a religious scene.[8] (See Plates 48; 60, bottom right.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

321 Mosaic workers utilized stones of different colors and 324 shells of various kinds. Pure designs were common, but ele-●531 ments representing the costume or the body paint were 341 shown when the mosaic covered a figure in wood or stone. An application of mosaic on a larger scale was frequent in architecture, a veneer of cut stone being applied to the rubble of a platform or building. The temples of Mitla, Oaxaca, influenced by the same Mixteca-Puebla culture to which Aztec civilization owed its origin, are masterpieces of this technique, for individual blocks have their surfaces carved to fit together in an intricate geometric design.[9] (See Plate 11, bottom.)

322 The woodworkers, owing to the impermanence of their medium, have left little to exhibit their prowess, but the few surviving masks, idols, drums and atl-atls, or throwing boards, bear ample witness to their superb craftsmanship. The very fact that they had to work wood with stone tools makes their achievement noteworthy. Their copper tools were dull and unserviceable in cutting even the softer woods, and these implements came into use relatively late in Aztec times.[10] (See Plate 54, bottom.)

335 Wood was used extensively in buildings for roof beams and doorjambs. A beam in the palace at Texcoco was ninety feet long and five feet thick, so that its preparation and transport must have been an arduous task. There was probably little use of planks in Aztec building, since it would be difficult to prepare them with the rudimentary equipment at Aztec disposal, and adobes and plaster were easier to make and just 396 as serviceable. Wooden canoes, however, were essential for life in the lakes. Some were dugouts hollowed out by fire, but others, to judge from the type used by the Xochimilcan of pottery, and in the chapters in Indian history we have 323 seen how every tribe, almost every village, had its own particular style, which changed gradually through slow shifts in the popular taste as time wore on. In the absence of written records the archaeologists fortunately have been able to rely on pottery styles to peg out in time and space the relationships of these ancient and forgotten tribes and thus lay a basis for New World history.[14]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Aztecs, like all the other New World peoples, did not use the potter's wheel but built up their vessels with strips of clay, relying on their keen eye and sensitive fingers to achieve the desired shape. They did not use molds to form their vessels, as was occasionally done in late Teotihuacan times; nor, apparently, did they make use of the kabal, a block on which Yucatecan potters rested their vessels and which they turned with their feet in shaping the raw clay.

The Aztecs had an abundance of finely textured clay, 323 orange after firing, from which they fashioned vessels for 531 the storage and service of food. The potters of Culhuacan used this ware first, making plates with flat bottoms resting on cylindrical legs.[15] On the floors they painted curvilinear designs which were sometimes faintly naturalistic. In the second period, when the manufacture of this ware became popular all over the northern Valley, the vessels were made more coarsely, and the hollow legs degenerated to thick, elongated cones.[16] The decoration was converted into an abstract combination of curvilinear motifs that had the quality of European script writing. In contrast to the usual recti- 212 linear quality of Middle American design, it may be more 177 than a coincidence that the introduction of this style at the beginning of the fourteenth century was contemporaneous

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

with the traditional date of the diffusion of picture writing by the peoples from the Mixteca. (See Plate 29, third row.)

The third phase of this style, made during the fifteenth century, saw a gradual conversion of the linework into crude, continuous patterns, but the construction of the vessels proper was much finer.[17] A few potters rejected this slovenly manner and drew elaborate geometric designs. The closely parallel lines in some of these patterns were done freehand on the curved interior surfaces of the bowls, revealing extraordinary control in draftsmanship. Perhaps in trade, perhaps in tribute, many foreign vases were introduced at this time and stimulated the local potters to develop new styles of their own.

In the fourth period, during the chieftaincy of Montezuma, the potters broke away from these extremes of concentrated meticulousness and slovenly linework. Naturalism found favor, with birds, fish and plants used as designs and executed with that careless finesse of brushwork which characterizes Japanese sepia drawing. After the Conquest draftsmen accustomed to working in this style were able to copy accurately such elements of Spanish design as the double eagle of Charles V and the coats of arms of nobles.[18] (See Plate 32, top.)

Polychrome pottery was made locally, usually consisting of a red slip, or wash, adorned with a geometric design in black and white. Coarse construction with painfully careful, if crude, draftsmanship characterized the fourteenth-century ware. In the fifteenth century the hands of the potters loosened so that they were able to paint more sophisticated designs on vessels as thin and delicate as any pottery ever made in the Americas. Trade wares were rare at first and emanated chiefly from Puebla, but in the fifteenth century the quality and quantity increased, indicating the effects of trade and tribute. The historical reports that Texcoco was culturally superior to Tenochtitlan are borne out by archaeology; the Texcocan wares, although following the same styles as the Tenochcan, were better made and had a greater variety of design. Also there is evidence of more trade with foreign tribes.[19] (See Plates 30–32.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Goblets were made for pulque; graters were made for grinding chilis, and clay vessels were made for every conceivable use; one form was a small oval platter with a special compartment for sauce, resembling the "blue-plate special" dishes of our modern restaurants. The circular roaster or griddle for cooking tortillas came in with Mazapan culture and continued to be popular through Aztec times. The bottoms of griddles were roughened so that heat would penetrate rapidly and evenly to the dough on the smoothed upper surface.

Clay utensils had their use in weaving. The Aztec spinner rested the end of her distaff in exquisite little cups, often charmingly ornamented. Her spindle weights were also made of baked clay. In the fourteenth century these were heavy and had holes large enough for a heavy spindle. Often their burnished black or red surfaces were cunningly adorned with stamped or incised designs representing conventional patterns or human and animal figures. In the fifteenth century the spindle weights became much smaller, so that at times it is hard to distinguish them from beads. This reduction in size perhaps indicates the spinning of more delicate cotton threads.

The spindle weight, or whorl, has an important bearing

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER IX

THE FINE ARTS

A consideration of those aspects of Aztec craftsmanship which we segregate as Fine Art

THE AZTECS did not have a term for "fine arts," nor did they speculate about aesthetics nor make objects to be contemplated for their beauty alone. They had none of the socially sterile attitudes toward art which we adopt in our own culture. Instead, they recognized the value of superior workmanship and used its products to honor the gods who were intermediaries between man and the infinite power of the universe. Aztec art, in this respect, is no different from the great traditions ancestral to our modern aesthetic. Religion has always evoked man's best in thought and deed so long as human society believed that religion was essential to its survival.[1]

Aztec art was powerful in architecture and sculpture, weak in painting and drawing. The dance was more advanced than music, and literature, in the absence of an effective method of writing, was confined to the evanescent output of oratory. The years and the elements have left us only such examples as could survive the ravages of time, and we have no way, except by analogy with living groups, to ascertain the Aztec attitude toward their creations in those fields of endeavor which we moderns dignify as art.

X 796 [278] Any who wished, to whom it was pleasing, who wanted to, of the youths who had been drunk, [did so].

in çaço aquin cinnequja, cinnonectiaia, ontlaelcujaia in mihivintia telpopochti.

[755] And some of them had so made vows that they would hide away the skins; because perchance they were covered with sores, or perhaps had an infection of the skin, or had maladies of the eyes, since for some this was successful and thus they recovered. Some did not recover.

Auh cequintin ic monetoltia, yn eoatlatizque: ipampa aço papalanja, aço çaçaoati, anoço ixcocoia: tel in aca, ipanti, ic pati, in aca amo pati:

[301 289] Each one of the captors came forth from his house, and appeared in and went wearing the [captive's] skin. They went with paper streamers[6] upon their shoulders and upon the calves of their legs.

ceceiaca inchan in tlamanjme oalpena, oaleoa conmaqujtiuj in eoatl, amatetujtl, ymacolpan mamãtiuh, yoan in tlanitzco.

[515] And so they went jumping, pressing on, arriving together. So [foul] did they smell [that verily] the stench wounded the head. [It was] repellent. All men held their noses when they were met, when they went among people.

Auh ynic vih, chocholotiuj, hiaxtiuj, centlalli mantiuh, ynic yiaque, vel tetzonujtec, aimamjquiztli: çan neiacajuchcolo ynic namjco, ynic tetla qujça.

And the skins, crumpled and crackling, were hardened. And some carried them in baskets—dried up, frayed, stiffened.

Auh yn eoatl, ocotoczauh, ocacalachoac, oquaoac: auh in cequj ça chiqujuhtica quinapaloa, yn cuelitepioac, yn oquelochauh, oquappizoac.

[431 531 291] And the captors came in lead of the tototeci. They bore their incense-ladles. They went with their gifts tied up in bundles—mantles perchance painted with designs, or in dark brown,[7] or crimson, or in two colors diagonally divided,[8] or with edges adorned with feathers—with feathers surrounding the edge.

Auh in tlamanjme, qujniacac: uj in tototecti, intletlema, intletlema ietiuh: quimoolpilitiuj yn innetlauhtil, tilmatli, aço tlacujlolli, anoço camopalli, anoço nochpolli, anoço nacazminquj; anoço teniujoaanquj, yhujtenoaanquj, yhujtentlaiãtoalo.

And when they had arrived at the place where the skins were hidden away, on the top of the Temple of Yopitli, Yopitli's Temple, each one dedicated [incense] to the four directions; the captors offered incense, raising [toward the sky] their incense-ladles, and shaking them.

Auh yn oaxioac, yn eoatlatiloian, yn icpac teucalli iopitli, iopiteucalli: nauhcampa ceceiaca ontlaiiaoaia, in tlamanjme ontlenamacaia, conjiaca yn jntlema, conujujaoa.

And those who stood clothed in the skins then undid them, and stood divested [of them]. And when they had taken the skins off, they cast them down, they threw them into a cave. And the captors went down to the bottom [of the temple pyramid] and quickly left and poured out the coals into the incense-burner.

Auh yn onacticac eoatl, njman mototoma, mototonticac: yn oqujoalcopin eoatl, contlaça ica onmaiauj yn oxioc. Auh in tlamanj, oaltemo tlatzitla, qujoalcauhtiqujça, qujoaltentiqujça, tlehquazco in tecolli.

X 796 515 And they who had come to dispose of the skins, which they had gone about wearing, washed themselves not with water, but with flour—with corn meal, with which they rubbed their faces. They scrubbed their faces with flour.

Auh yn oqujcaoato eoatl, yn onmaqujtiuja, amo mixamja atica, çan ioxtli, tlaoltextli, inic onmixxaxaqualoua, ynic onmjxmatmatiloa, mixioexuja:

6. See Chapter 20, n. 4.

7. In Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher & Co., 1902-23), Vol. II, p. 525, Seler translates camopalli as kastanienfarbene or as orange-farbene Decke. In Rosige Kapitel, p. 79, he has "kastanienfarbenen (von der Brunnen Farbe der Kaudiles der Bienen ähnlich)." Molina (op. cit.) has color morado oscuro.

For nochpolli, Seler (loc. cit.) writes "karminfarbenen (von der Farbe der Nochtuna, der Kochenille)."

8. Cf. Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, loc. cit., and Ibid., p. 531.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

565
531
292

Eighth Chapter, in which are told the various articles with which they adorned the rulers and noblemen—which they placed on them when they were bedight in capes and breech clouts.

Injc chicuei capítulo, vncan mjtoa in jzqujtlamatli: in nechichioaia tlatoque in pipilti in jntechqujtlahaia, injc mocencaoaia in tilmatli in mazatlatl.

The cape with the serpent mask design, bordered with eyes;[1]	Cozzaiacaio tilmatli, tenjxio,
The cape with the conch shell design, bordered with eyes;[2]	tecucizio tilmatli tenjxio,
The cape with a design of stone discs, bordered with eyes;[3]	temalacaio tilmatli tenjxio,
The cape with the obsidian serpent design, bordered with eyes;[4]	itzcoaio tilmatli tenjxio,
The cape with wine-god jar design, bordered with eyes;[5]	vmetochtecomaio tilmatli tenjxio,
The cape with the butterfly design, bordered with eyes;	papaloio tilmatli tenjxio,
The cape with an eagle's face painted on it, bordered with eyes;[6]	xocalquauhio tilmatli tenjxio,
The red-bordered ocelot cape, in the middle of which stood an ocelot;[7]	ocelotentlapalli iitic icac oçelotl,
The cape of dark green diagonally divided, in the middle of which stood an obsidian eagle;[8]	chicoiapalli nacazmjoquj iitic icac itzquauhtli,
The cape of blue knots diagonally divided,[9] on which a spear-eagle stood;	xiuhtlalpilnacazmjoquj, tlacochquauhtli vncan icac,
The maguey fiber cape, with an ocelot tail pendant;	quetzalichtilmatli ocelocujtlapillo
The cape of shining maguey fiber [ornamented with] flattened heads;	quetzalichpetztli, quapetlacio tilmatli,
The orange cape with the wind jewel[10] [design] and the feathered border;	camopalecacozcaio, tenjujio tilmatli,
The orange cape with a striped border;	camopalteneoanquj tilmatli,
The light blue cape with a wind jewel design, which had a border of feathers with spirals;	apalecacozcaio tilmatli, itjtica tentlaiaoalo,
The carmine-colored cape with an eye border;	nochpaltilmatli tenjxio,

1. Tab. 1 fo. 6, book VIII, f. 6. Ms. Florentine. Codex Ashburn. Ms. border with eyes or spots. Also see corresponding Spanish text.
2. Cf. James Cooper Clark: Codex Mendoza (London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), III, fol. 68.
3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.
4. Cf. Clark, op. cit., fol. 31.
5. Cf. ibid. ibid.
6. Cf. ibid., fol. 69. An alternative translation might be "the eagle's face bordered cape."
7. Cf. ibid., fol. 31. See also Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, II, p. 522.
8. Sahagún: see, however, Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 181.
9. Xiuhtlalpilli might refer to a design suggested by the ceremony of tying the years.
10. See, however, corresponding Spanish text, in which pectoral is described as a flower; see also Book VIII of the Codex, fol. 16a.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 292 531

The tawny cape with a spiral border;	quappachtentlaiaoalo tilmatli,
The coyote fur cape with a spiral border;	coiotchcatentlaiaoalo tilmatli,
The tawny, knotted cape;	quappachtlalpilli tilmatli,
The cape with scorpion design stripes;	colotlaxochio tilmatli,
The tawny cape with the water spider;	quapachatocaio tilmatli,
The tawny cape with the butterfly;	quappapaloio tilmatli,
The ocelot cape;	oçelotilmatli,
The cape with the eagle's leg;	quauhtetepoio tilmatli,
The cape with the ocelot skin itep design;[11]	oçelotiacalcoliuhquj tilmatli,
The ocelot cape;	oceloçilmatli,
The half-ocelot, half-eagle cape;	oçeloquauhtlatlapanquj tilmatli,
The tawny cape provided with the design of an eye upon a hooked element;[12]	quappachixcoliuhquj tilmatli,
The cape with the design of a ladder on the earth;	tlallecaoazio, tilmatli,
The cape with an embroidered, radiating design;	tlamachmoiaoac tilmatli,
The cape of duck feathers with a colored border;	xomoiujtilmatli tentlapallo,
The cape of duck feathers with [a design of] flattened heads;	xomoiujtilmatli quappatlacio,
The white duck feather cape, bordered with eyes;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli tenjxio
The duck feather cape, with [a design of] young ears of maize;	xomoiujtilmatli eloiic
The wolf skin cape;	cujtlaichujtilmatli,
The blue knotted [cape], bordered with eyes;	xiuhtlalpilli tenjxio,
The cape with a sun [design], bordered with eyes;	tonatiuhio tilmatli tenjxio,
The old cape with the eagle head design;[13]	quauhtzontecoiio tilmatli mamanquj,
The cape with the war symbol;	tzuatl tlachinoltilmatli,
The cape with the basket flower design;[14]	oacalxuchio tilmatli,
The cape with the young maize ear flower design;[15]	eloxuchio tilmatli,
The cape with the colored prince's flower design;	tlapaltecuxuchio tilmatli,
The cape with the dahlia design;[16]	acucuxuchio tilmatli,
The cape with the plumeria flower design;[17]	cacaloxuchio tilmatli,
The cape with the poinsettia design;[18]	cuetlaxxuchio tilmatli,
The white-duck feather cape, diagonally divided;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli nacazmjnquj,
The white duck feather cape, with the face of a wolf;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli cujtlachixio,

11. Ocelotiacalcoliuhquj (ocelotl, tiacalli, coliuhquj—curlicu, gnarl, twisted): gnarl vessel with curved decorations. The nature of weaving makes it a stepped design.

12. Cf. xopantzitzin[in Primeros memoriales, Cap. IV.

In the Real Academia de la Historia MS, pipiltecuhcuhquj tilmatli follows quappachxoxoliuhquj tilmatli.

13. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, p. 161 (quauhtzontli).

14. Pansaw flower design, in Edward Seler: Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Thompson, eds.; Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. II, Part 3, p. 95 (Anoikarpus sp.?). Emily Walcott Emmart, in The Badianus Manuscript (Codex Barberini, Latin 241) (Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press, 1940), p. 234, calling it a basket flower, says it is a species of cuauhcozcatl. Francisco de Santamaría, in Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), II, p. 102, identifies the huauhtzontli (-ohtli) as Phyllodrendron affine, Hemsl.

15. Seler, op. cit., p. 96 (Magnolia sp.?). Emmart, op. cit., p. 275, mentions tlaxochi elotzochitl belonging to the Compositae.

Yellocxochitzinteuhtli, here listed in the Real Academia de la Historia MS, is entered in the Florentine Codex.

16. In Francisco Hernández: Historia de las plantas de Nueva España (México: Imprenta Universitaria, 1942), I, p. 24, this is Dahlia coccinea Cav.; in Seler, loc. cit., D. variabilis; in Emmart, op. cit., p. 309, Dahlia sp.

17. In Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 806, Plumeria acutifolia Poir; in Seler, loc. cit., P. rubra; in Emmart, op. cit., p. 309, P. rubra L. Santamaría, op. cit., I, p. 251, identifies the cacaloxóchitl as P. rubra L., P. bicolor R. & P., and P. acutifolia Poiret. Cecile Hulse Matschat, in Mexican Plants for American Gardens (Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1935), pp. 23, 177, has P. acuminata, and refers to it as "frangipani" and "temple flower."

18. In Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 958, Euphorbia (Poinsettia) pulcherrima Willd; in Seler, loc. cit., Poinsettia pulcherrima.

565 The cape of colored feathers, with embroidery; tlapalinpilmatli tlamachio, 292 The cape with the face of a wolf; cuitlachizio tilmatli, 531 The cape with the tips of eagle wings; quauhxamjzcuio tilmatli,
The cape with a border of poppers flowers; xoxopqjzcuhio tilmatli,
The cape with the ivy design;[20] quauxoxouhtilmatli,
The bed covering cape; wewej tilmatli pepechtli,
The mattress;[20] quechpepechtli,
The large cape used to keep oneself dry; wewej tilmatli nenecuiloni,
The breech clout with the ivy design embroidered at the ends;[20] quauxoxouhtlamachio maxtlatl,
The breech clout with the market place design; tianquizio maxtlatl,
The breech clout with the eagle's leg design; quauhcecepoio maxtlatl,
The breech clout with the turquoise mosaic mirror design; xiuhtecacio maxtlatl,
The breech clout with the butterfly design at the ends;[20] acapapaloio maxtlatl,
The breech clout striped in many colors; centzonmaxtlatl tlatlachpalpoalli,
The breech clout made of twenty pieces,[20] with the wind jewel design at the ends;[20] cempoalpol acahecacocuio,
The tawny colored breech clout with embroidered ends; quappachmaxtlatl acan tlamachio,
The carmine-colored breech clout with the ocelot head; nochpalmaxtlatl, ocelotzontecuio
The ocelot breech clout with a step design; ocelotzicalcoliuhqui maxtlatl,
The coyote fur [breech clout] with the eagle head;[20] quauhcoyomuio,
The breech clout with feathered discs at the ends; acuipomalacuio maxtlatl,
The breech clout with radiating embroidery at the ends. acatlamachuoiaoac maxtlatl.

19. Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 257; IV, p. 257.
20. Pewej tilmatli pepechtli, quechpepechtli: cf. Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880), Spanish-Nahuatl section—silbidoles, silbidos.
21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 97, needs pace for sure.
22. Cf. Spanish text, fol. 16r.
23. The Florentine Codex reads xoxpichtomaxtlatl before quauhcoyomuio, found in the Real Academia de la Historia MS.

[p. 26 is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 .NU7 Aztec NU7

643
714 Twelfth Chapter, in which it is told how the rulers were arrayed when they went to the wars.

Inic matlactlomome capítulo, ynca mononotzaloc: inic mochichiuaia in tlacopa, in quiçiçiuaia ixquan.

The costly red spoonbill headdress set off with gold, having very many quetzal feathers flaring [from it], and with it, borne upon his back, the skin drum upon a carrying frame, and decorated with gold.

[237]

Tlauhquechololmatli tlaçoçoqui, cuetic tzacuitlaio: cuecu mijac in quetzalli icacuetlacacuic: inipal in tlamamalli, vequi in cuitlati tlachichiuhti, cuetic tzacuitlaio:

And they dressed him in a red shirt, made of red spoonbill feathers [decorated with] flint knives[1] [fashioned of] gold; and his xapote leaf skirt was made all of quetzal feathers.

ioan in itlacuel cuamaçoçoqui tlachichiuhqui, tlauhquechololqui inic tlachichiuhti: cuetic tzacuitlaol in jxtecpaio, ioan in jxtepecoc mochichiuhtoc çan moch quetzalli.

The shield was ringed with thin gold, and its pendants were made of precious feathers.[2]

Chimalli, cuetic tzacuitlaol, in tlamatzmalli iacuacuio, tlaçoçiqui in jxtlapilolio mochichiuhtoc, chalchihuitl, tlacuapipiltzli in chalchiuhqui, in vecuj, chalchiuiqui, ioan xiuhuitzolli.

[He had] a green stone necklace of round, large, green stone and fine turquoise combined.

The ruler placed upon his head a blue cotinga feather headdress which was set off with gold, and had quetzal feathers flaring [from it]. Over the upper part of his body he put a shirt of blue cotinga feathers.

[237]

xiuhuitzolli, cuetic tzacuitlaio, quetzalli in jxcuetlacacuio, in jxmamoc cuamaçoçoqui tlamauj: ioan in jtlac cuamaçoçoqui xiuhuitzolol,

And as a burden for his back [he had] a blue skin drum fashioned on a frame, and [ornamented] with gold.[3]

ioan in tlamamalli xoxoubqui vequi in cuitlati tlachichiuhti cuetic tzacuitlaio

All quetzal feathers was its xapote skirt; and its pendants were all costly feathers. And the [ornaments of] flint knives, for its covering of blue cotinga feathers, were of thin gold [plate].

çan moch quetzalli in jxtepecoc, mochi tlaçoçiqui in jtlapilolio, cuetic tzacuitlaol in tlamamalli in jxtecpaio, in xiuhuitzolol,

The ocelot Xipe was made of ocelot skin; its flint knife [decoration] was made of gold.

ocelotzoc, ocelotzol inic tlachichiuhti, cuetic tzacuitlaol inic tlachichiuhti in jxtecpaio, çe moch quetzalli in jxtepecoc,

In xapote leaf skirt was all of quetzal feathers.

The ocelot drum, the burden on his back, was of gold [decorated] with [wavy lines called] hawk scratches.

[531]

ocelotzcuitlatl in tlamamalli cuetic tzacuitlaol inic tlachichiuhqui.

The shield was covered with blue cotinga feathers and had a disc of gold in the center.

Chimalli xiuhuitzolica tzacuyj, cuetic tzacuitlaol ic ixtapo,

1. Tecuipoio: the corresponding Spanish text refers to espejo de pedernal, whose our translation was "flint knives." The shape of the espejo is similar to that of a knife. Cf. also Sahagún, op. cit., and Seler, op. cit., II, p. 394, where discussion is much complicated.

2. The Real Academia de la Historia MS follows manuscript which por muchos quetzalli por chalchiquitlis [chalchiuhtlaxo-quetzal feathers, to which small greenstones (of gold) are added or the point].

3. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Y colgaua detras glaueano, hecho de cipreses, con muchos pequeñuelos, pesaua de oro muchuelo, como para llaues cerrar." This passage Seler (op. cit., II, p. 394) translates as "Dann wird auf den Rücken eine Trommel gemacht, der durch Gerüst hindurchreicht, der mit Gold Überzogen ist."

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

643
714
●531

The quetzal feather butterfly was the burden for the back; with it belonged the yellow parrot feather shirt, [decorated] with hawk scratches in gold.

The shield with a golden disc had a golden butterfly in the middle. [There was] a quetzal feather claw,[4] with gold. The shirt [which belonged to this] was of yellow parrot feathers.

The golden hood had horns of quetzal feathers; its shirt was of yellow parrot feathers.

The silver hood had quetzal feather tufts held in cups. With it belonged a shirt of yellow parrot feathers with hawk scratch [decorations] in gold.

[There were] the quetzal feather banner of the spear house; the silver banner with a spray of quetzal feathers held in a cup at the top; and the golden banner with a spray of quetzal feathers held in a cup at the top.

The finely wrought obsidian butterfly was of quetzal feathers and gold; its teeth and claws were all of precious feathers; and it had quetzal feather horns.

The finely wrought butterfly of [the goddess] Xochiquetzal [was made of] precious feathers; and its horns were of gold and quetzal feathers.

[There was] a quetzal feather crest-like device. With it belonged a blue cotinga-feather shirt; the shield was covered with blue cotinga feathers and had a disc of gold in the center.

The Xolotl head of yellow parrot feathers, with balls of quetzal feathers, was ornamented with gold. With it belonged a shirt of yellow parrot feathers with hawk scratch decorations in gold.

The blue Xolotl head was ornamented with quetzal feathers and gold. With it belonged a blue shirt.

The white Xolotl head was ornamented with quetzal feathers and gold. With it belonged a white shirt.

The bright red Xolotl head was ornamented with quetzal feathers and gold; its shirt was likewise bright red.

The headdress of tropial feathers was ornamented with quetzal feathers and gold. With it belonged a shirt of yellow parrot feathers.

The yellow demon of the air was made all of gold, and had quetzal feathers and balls of quetzal feathers.

The blue demon of the air had quetzal feathers, was made all of gold, and had balls of quetzal feathers.

quetzalpapalotl in tlamomalli, mamjc toçcuatl, cuitic teucujtlatl injc tlotlosjtecpoj.

Chimalli teucujtlaxica itixapo, teucujtlapapalotl ijpic mamj quetzalmapilli, cuitic teucujtlaio, toçcuatl in jmaio.

Cuitic teucujtlaquacalalatli, iquetzalquaquauh, ieuaio cuitic toçcuatl.

Iztac teucujtlaquacalalatli, quetzaltecomaio: inamjc toçcuatl cuitic teucujtlatl ic tlotlosjtecpoj quetzalpanjtl tlacuchcalcuiotl. Iztac teucujtlapanjtl, quetzaltzontecomaio. Cuitic teucujtlapanjtl, quetzaltzontecomaio.

Itzpapalotl tlaçotlanquj quetzallo, cuitic teucujtlaio, in jtlan, in jiztli muchi tlaçoiujtl: iquetzalquaquauh.

Xochiquetzalpapalotl, tlaçotlanquj in tlaçoiujtica: iuan cuitic teucujtlaio, iquetzalquaquauh quetzalpetzactli, xiuhtocuatl injcallo in chimalli xiuhtecutica teucquj, cuitic teucujtlatl ic itixapo, tzoquauxolotl iquetzaltemal, cuitic teucujtlaio, toçcuatl inamjc, cuitic teucujtlatl injc motlotlosjtec, xoxouhquj quauxolotl, quetzallo cuitic teucujtlaio in jnamjc xoxouhquj cuatl.

Iztac quauxolotl, quetzallo, cuitic teucujtlaio in jnamjc iztac cuatl.

Chichiltic quauxolotl, quetzallo, cuitic teucujtlaio, in jmaio, çan no chichiltic.

Çaçaquatzontli, quetzallo, cuitic teucujtlaio toçcuatl inamjc, tozticximjtl: muchi cuitic teucujtlatl injc tlachiuhcli, quetzallo, iquetzaltemal.

Xoxouhquj tozticximjtl, quetzallo, muchi cuitic teucujtlatl injc tlachiuhcli, iquetzaltemal.

---

4. Cf. discussion in Seler, op. cit., II, pp. 1006, as well as corresponding Spanish text—"a manera de chapa, y en medio de ella avia una flechadura, de plumas ricas, y con oro."

The white demon of the air was of gold, and had quetzal feather balls.

The yellow, Huaxtec, pointed, conical cap had a golden [disc] in front and was girt with quetzal feathers. And the shirt was of yellow parrot feathers [decorated with] hawk scratches. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; gold were his ear pendants, with quetzal feather spindles.

The white, Huaxtec, pointed, conical, paper cap had quetzal feathers bound at the base and a [disc] of gold at the front; its spindles were of quetzal feathers and gold. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate, and gold were his ear pendants.

[For] the bi-colored Huaxtec, the shirt was half blue and half yellow. His conical, pointed cap was also bi-colored—half blue and half yellow, and it had quetzal feathers girt at the base and a golden [disc] at the front. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; his ear pendants were gold; and his spindles were of quetzal feathers.

The golden conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups. The silver conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups.

[There were] shell trumpets and clay pipes which were blown in battle so that the warriors might set forth together to fight. The standard, [which was] of gold, and the quetzal feather banner dispatched the men to battle. When it was seen that already all the standards were raised, then the warriors set forth together to do battle.

The quetzal feather sun [consisted of] a golden sun, and in the middle of it was a circle of quetzal feathers. The young maize flower crest had, as its leaves, quetzal feathers, and [was ornamented] with flint knives [fashioned of] gold. On his temples were plate-like pieces of gold. The wooden sword [was provided] with obsidian blades [set in] a groove at its edge. The headdress of quetzal and heron feathers [ornamented] with gold, [had] single quetzal feathers, and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it. There was] the ocelot wine jar, whose foam had single quetzal feathers [set in it], and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it].

Iztac tzitzimijtl, cuaitic teucujtlaio, iquetzalhemal. 643

Coatic cuentecatl icopil ujtzauhquj, izquauteucujtlaio, quetzaltica cujtlalpic: auh in ecatl, toçomatl matlotlomijtec, coatic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol, coatic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal. 714 531

Iztac cuentecatl iamacal ujtzauhquj, quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquauteucujtlaio, imamalacaquetzal teucujtlaio: coatic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coatic teucujtlatl.

Chictlapanequj cuentecatl, çectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coatic in ecatl, icopil ujtzauhquj, no chictlapanequj, cectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coatic quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquauteucujtlaio, coatic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coatic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal.

Coatic teucujtlacopilli quetzaltecomaio. Iztac teucujtlacopilli, quetzaltecomaio, tlapitzalli teruçiatl, ioan quiçquiztli in mopitzalisac injc çemeua iauqujzque, injc mjcali: in quachpanjtl, coatic teucujtlapanjtl: ioan quetzalpanjtl in teruçitia in isac, in omotac ie meetiquetza in jaquj quachpanjtl. Niman çemeua in iauqujzque, injc mjcali, 534 727 quetzaltocatiuh, coatic teucujtlatl in tonatiuh ijsic mantiuh in quetzalli iacatic. Xilonochipetzactli, quetzalli in jiaxaio, coatic teucujtlatl in jiecpaio, in jcanacacle mamantiuh: coatic teucujtlatl in tlacomaltectli. Maquauitl itztec in jiauco tlatectli, quetzalacuauitl, teucujtlaio, quetzalxitilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiac quetzalli, oçtlotlachicomjtl, in jpeçoca quetzalxitilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiac in quetzalli. 643 714 [441]

[p. 36 has no textual material]

291
531

Fifteenth Chapter, in which is described the adornment of the women.

Ic cuetzalli cuphulac vocan mjtra in jnnechichiouia in çioa.

The orange colored shift gathered at the waist; the shift [decorated with] yellow parrot feathers; the shift with the stamp device at the neck; the shift with flowers overspread; the shift of smoky color; [shifts] with large embroidered [figures] at the throat, with [designs] of cut reeds; the shift with feathers; the tawny colored shift; the shift of coyote fur; the duck feather shift; [the shift] with dyed rabbit fur; the shift with the gourd and thistle [design]; the shift overspread with dahlias;[1] [the shift] with the eagle head in a setting, done in feathers; the shift with a border of flowers;

Vitzteocuçjtlalpic vipilli, xonoloio vipilli, quechnenecujlhoaxio vipilli, xuchimoiaoac vipilli, pocujpilli, veuej tlamachtli ieuquj, tolnzaianquj, potoncaio vipilli, quappuchio vipilli, coioichcaio vipilli, xomoujvipilli, tlapaltechoaxica xicalnezaoi[illegible] vipilli, acoxuchimoiaoac vipilli, iuqc vaiacallo potoncaio xuchitoio vipilli.

The skirt with an irregular [design], having a wide border; the skirt with serpent skins, having a wide border; the skirt with the step meander, having a wide border, the skirt with squared corner stones, having a wide border; the skirt with thin, black lines, having a wide border; the white skirt [like a] bed covering, having a wide border; the ocelot skin skirt, having a wide border; the skirt with brown pendants, having a border; the skirt with coyote fur pendants, having a border;

Chicuecujtl, patlaoac in jten: coatlaxipeoallo cueitl, patlaoac in jten, xicalcolinhquj cueitl, patlaoac in jten, tetenacaxio cuejtl, patlaoac in jten, tilpipitzaoac cueitl, patlaoac in jten: cacamolhuhquj iztac cueitl, patlaoac in jten, octlocuejtl, patlaoac in jtl; quappuchipilcac cuejtl, tene: coioichcapipilcac cuejtl tene.

301 Amber ear plugs; white crystal ear plugs; golden ear plugs; silver ear plugs; white obsidian ear plugs.

Apoçonalnacochtli, tenjlonacochtli iztac, coztic teucujtlanacochtli: iztac teucujtlanacochtli, itztacochtli iztac.

302 386 Their faces were painted with dry, colored [powders]; faces were colored with yellow ochre, or with bitumen. Feet were anointed with an unguent of burned copal incense and dye. They had hair hanging to the waist, or to the shoulders; or the young girls' lock of hair; or the hair [twisted with black cord and] wound about the head; or the hair all cut the same length. [Some] cut their hair short, [so that] their hair reached to their noses.[2] It was cut and dyed with black mud—[so] did they place impo-

Moxaoaia, tlapalhoxalxica: moxaoaia, tecuçalhtica: mochapopoxaoaia: copalaxtica mocxiaiuja, tzoxquemac, quatequepac, xiuxocoleque, maxtlaoa, motzonquetzalhica, quipantequj in jztzon, quinacanepanoa in jztzon: tlaxcoca, mopatincuj, quijnamaujzmati in jztzonxeron: moxiulhquilpa, injc pepetlaca iztzon: matlantlapalhujia, motlinochezujia, momaocujloa, moquechicujloa, moquechtetenna, mochiquipohicujloa, mochichiauticujloa.

1. In Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 70, [illegible] is identified as Dahlia coccinea, Cav. Sahagún (op. cit., I, p. 59), however, says of [illegible]: "Ha hábitos, semejanza de calabazas rosadas, indígenas del país, conocidas también por chiauhtli." (Lagenaria vulgaris, var.)." Manuel Urbina, in "Plantas medicinales de los antiguos mexicanos," Anales del Museo Nacional de México, segunda época, Tomo I, pp. 515sqq., 519, mentions two kinds of [illegible] (cuauchili, quetzal), of one of which Hernández is quoted to the effect that it has "flores coloradas purpúreas." Dr. Oliver in [illegible] (Mem. de Antropología, II, p. 279), giving Pennisetum atropurpureum D. C. for [illegible], Urbina [illegible] it as Arctotis atropurpurea, Hook. et Hook.

2. Alisar la jetzon, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has mocuquetzpalnic—they left a tuft of hair over the forehead.

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

NATURE OF THE PROVINCE

Inhabitants and languages.—The Mendizabal-Jiménez Moreno linguistic map indicates great linguistic complexity for this province: Náhuatl, Mixtec, Tlapenec, and Matlame.

Olinalan, celebrated for its lacquer-work, probably carried on that activity in pre-Hispanic times. From adjacent Tlalcoçauhtitlan Province, perhaps only a few kilometers away, "bateas" went as tribute to Texcoco.[a] Provincial borders in 1519.—Because half the towns of the province cannot be identified on the maps of unexplored Guerrero, the north of this province is a great blank. It bordered, probably, on Huaxtepec Province in that direction, as on the west with Tlalcoçauhtitlan, on the east with Yoaltepec, and on the south with Tlapan, all of them fellow tributaries.

Regional names.—Somewhere in the dubious northeast began the region known as Totollan.[b]

TRIBUTE

Tribute of the whole province.—Quiauhteopan was a rich mining region, as is shown by the following list of its tribute to the highlands:

CLOTHING

400 large mantles
1 warrior's costume with shield*

FOOD

100 jars of bee honey*

OTHER GOODS

40 large copper bells
80 copper axeheads
1 dish of little turquoises*

Tribute of the component towns.—Olinalan, in the mid-sixteenth century, rendered a sizable quarterly tribute of base gold, cacao, money resulting from the sale of cacao, and sixty little jars of honey (over [a] See the section on Tlalcoçauhtitlan, above.

[b] FNE, 5: 57: "Piaztla ... está en la provincia de los Totoltecas de lengua mexicana diferente de los de la Misteca sujetos a la dotrina de la cabecera de Acatlan." Of the same town, it is said farther on (5: 77): "En este pueblo se habla la lengua mexicana corrupta, porque es de la provincia de Totola."

824 Third Chapter, which telleth of flowers artificially arranged.[3]

Inic ey capítulo, itechpa tlatoa, in xuchitl yn ye tlatlalilli.

531 Flowers arranged with artifice: there were many kinds thus named, flowers artificially arranged — flower shields; flowers for clipped heads, or for shorn ones, or drums; or spreading [flowers]. As to these flowers the ancients were also deluded. They said: "It is not our right to smell in the midst — the center — of them; he alone, he who pervadeth all, Tiqlacxuan, may smell that place. Our right is only to smell them there at the edges."

Xuchitl ie tlatlalilli: ca mjiec tlamantli inic motocaiotia in xuchitl tlatlalilli, chimalxuchitl, quatzonxuchitl, quachic, vevetl, moixuac: In itechpa yn xuchitl, no motlapololtiaya in vevetque, quitoaia: ca amo tonemac in tlanepantla, in itecpantla tiquinecuijque ça çan icelitzin vel vncan motlanecuijltia in tloque naoaque, in tiltlacaoan: çanijo tonemac, in vncan titlanecuijque in itenco.

824 Fourth Chapter, which telleth of dried grains of maize.

Inic navi capítulo, itechpa tlatoa in tlaulli.

As to dried grains of maize, in many ways were the women none the less deluded. First, when they cooked it or set it in ashes — behold their folly: when they would place it in the olla with ashes, first of all they breathed upon it. It was held that in this way it would not take fright; thus it would not fear the heat. It was said that thus they mitigated the heat.

[352]

Second, they deceived themselves in this way: if they saw or came upon dried grains of maize lying scattered on the ground, then they quickly gathered them up. They said: "Our sustenance suffereth: it lieth weeping. If we should not gather it up, it would accuse us before our lord. It would say: 'O our lord, this vassal picked me not up when I lay scattered upon the ground. Punish him!' Or perhaps we should starve."

In itechpa in tlaulli: mjiec tlamantli oc noma, ic motlapololtia in cioa. Inic centlamantli: in jquac quicuxitia, in anoço quinecaquetza: izcatquj in jonetlapololtiliz, in jquac ic contemaque in nexcomjc: oc achtopa conahaiovia, quijmach ic amo momauhtiz, ic amo motonalmauhtiz: quijmach ic contonallalilia.

Inic vntlamantli, inic xuxtlacavia: intla oquijtaque, in anoço oypan quiçato tlaulli chachaiuxtoc tlalpan: nijman conpepentiuetzi, quitoa: motolinja in tonacaiutl, mochochoquijlinoc: ca intlacamo ticpepenaxque, ca techtzixpanuja in jxpantzinco totecujo: ca quimolhujiliz. Totecujoe, inin macoualli: ta amo nechpepen, in jquac tlalpan nicnemanoca: ma zicmatlatzacuijhili: auh anoce timiauaxque.

856 Fifth Chapter, which telleth of stepping over one.

Inic xxxcuijlli capítulo, itechpa tlatoa in tecuencholhujiztli.

As to stepping over one, the natives also [were] deluded. When some child lay stretched out across one's path, if someone stepped over him, then they chid him who passed over him, saying to him: "Why dost thou step over him?"

It was said that thereby the child would grow no more; he would be only small. And in order to cure him, so that [this] might not befall the child, once again he stepped back over him.[4] Thus was it remedied.

In itechpa tecuencholhujiztli: no centlamantli innetlapololtiliz in njcan tlaca: in jquac tla aca melavatoc piltontli, necujlludetoc: intla aca ooncuencholhuj, nijman caoa in aquin occuencholhuj, quijhuja. Tle ipampa in ticcuencholhuja:

quijmach ic ayocmo manaz in piltontli, ça izquijchton icz: auh inic compatiuia, inic amo ipan muchioaz piltontli, oc ceppa quijoalpanchollujia: ic vmpatia.

3. Xuchitl yn ye tlatlalilli. Corresponding Spanish text: "las flores, que se compusieron de muchas flores."

4. Quijoalpanchollujia. Corresponding Spanish text: "vuelo nuevamente tornar a pasar sobre el, por la parte contraria."

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

172
212

172
346

172
531
323

172
532
323

PLATE 29

CHART SHOWING NATURE OF AZTEC ARCHAEOLOGICAL MATERIAL

TOP ROW: Excerpts from historical picture manuscripts. 1. Arrival of the natives, in 1300, who brought a knowledge of writing (Mapa Quinatzin); 2. New Fire Ceremony of 1403; 3. New Fire Ceremony of 1455; 4. New Fire Ceremony of 1507 (2-4 from Codex Telleriano-Remensis); 5. The capture of Tenochtitlan in 1519 (Codex of 1576). SECOND ROW: Last three constructions at Tenayuca, corresponding perhaps to the cyclical renovations of 1403, 1455 and 1507. THIRD ROW: First three, Aztec pottery, Types II, IIIa, IIIb, found respectively in the cyclical dumps for 1403, 1455, 1507, and a fourth type, IV, made from 1507 through the Spanish Conquest of 1520-21. FOURTH ROW: First two, Aztec figurines made prior to 1403. Last four, made between 1403 and the Conquest, representing Xochiquetzal, Xipe, Xochipilli and Tonantzin respectively.

[p. 96(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

His later years were weighted with trouble with Tenochtitlan. He had married a sister of Montezuma II and, as she was unduly free in granting favors to the young men of the court, in 1498 he took advantage of his legal right to kill her. The Tenochcas took this act as a gross personal affront and directed every effort, short of war, to overcoming their ancient ally.[11]

Axayacatl of Tenochtitlan died in 1479, while Nezahualpilli was young in his rule, and his brother Tizoc, who had previously been the war chief, took his place. Tizoc's most important act of office was to begin the reconstruction of the great temple to Huitzilopochtli, the War God, and Tlaloc, the Rain God. In commemoration of his conquests he also had carved the so-called Sacrificial Stone. This monstrous-sized vessel for burning human hearts has a relief on the edge, depicting Tizoc dressed as Huitzilopochtli seizing captives representing tributary tribes. Most of the towns, unfortunately, must have been merely reconquered, since their names appear in the previous conquest lists of earlier rulers. It is not a complete surprise to read in some accounts that Tizoc died of poison administered by chiefs disgusted at his lack of military success.[12]

Ahuitzotl* succeeded his brother Tizoc in 1486. His first task was to complete the great temple the others had begun, in the dedication of which the gathering of sacrificial victims played an important part. He invoked the aid of Nezahualpilli, and the allies made a two-year campaign into northern Oaxaca, amassing no less than twenty thousand victims, the high point of the sacrificial cult in Mexico. At the start of the dedication the captives stood in two rows, and Nezahual-

*Ah'-weet-zotl.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[696]

[871]

[613
292]

[796]

[644]

PLATE 39

SOCIAL OBLIGATIONS, REWARDS AND PUNISHMENTS

TOP: Left: Boys are taken by their fathers to the school or Calmecac. These people are of the poorer classes. Right: Four chiefs sentence criminals to death by noose and clubs for outrageous crimes. MIDDLE: Left: Warriors of proven worth engage in ceremonial combat. They wear the costume of warriors' orders or of chiefs. Right: A tribal ruler invests two leading men with badges and trappings of rank. BOTTOM: Right: Montezuma had professional entertainers, hunchbacks, jugglers and musicians.

[p. 128(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532

PLATE 40

EAGLE KNIGHT, NATIONAL MUSEUM

This head represents the ideal warrior, steadfast, hardy and devout. The "very parfit gentle knight" of the Middle Ages would meet his peer in this noble Aztec. Photograph by Sumami.

[p. 128(B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

342
532

PLATE 42

AZTEC ARCHITECTURE

TOP: An Aztec palace at Tenoco from the Mapa Quinatzin, drawn in elevation without perspective. Nezahualcoyotl and Nezahualpilli, father and son, face each other in the throne room. In the courtyard six vassal chieftains, including the chief of Chicomoztoc (No. 46). The right side of the court is walled by storehouses for tribute; at the left is a temple, designated by the scribe as a hall of science and music. The top rooms are for the judges (left) and the arsenal (right). The bottom rooms house the war council and visiting ambassadors. BOTTOM: Left: House of wattle and daub, still used in Mexico. Right: A chief's house with adobe walls on stone foundations, wooden pillars for the entrance and fresco painting on the façade.

[p. 128(D)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
601
342

PLATE 44
AZTEC ARCHITECTURE

The Lienzo Chalchihuitzin Vasquez shows the chief and the founder of his line in the central house. The topmost row of figures discloses his descent, and the smaller houses joined to his palace by roads are those of his subjects. The people in the two large houses at lower right and left are allies. Post-Conquest painting on cloth.

[p. 128 (F)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

that could tear through human flesh at a single stroke, and 324 this type of knife, not found in earlier horizons, was produced commonly with the extra care in chipping which is to be expected in a ceremonial object. (See Plate 16.)

The three-legged metate, or grinding stone, was not better 412 made in Aztec times than before. In Middle Culture and 177 Toltec times it had an edge, so that the metlapil (son of the metate, i.e., mano, or grinding stone) was beveled and fitted within the confined space. The Aztec metate was flat, and the mano had swollen handles, projecting on either side of the grinding surface of the metate. I have never had the misfortune to break my back grinding corn in a metate, so that I have no way of knowing whether this represents a technical advance or a mere change in style.

The demands of ritual necessitated stone boxes for burn- 324 ing and storing human hearts. These boxes were pecked out 532 of lava and lavishly decorated inside and out with reliefs, [796] referring symbolically to the gods for whom the sacrifice was made. Some of these eagle cups (cuauhxicalli*) fall into that area of superior craftsmanship we designate in our own culture by the term "fine art." The great circular cup, ordered by Tizoc and miscalled the Sacrificial Stone, eight feet in diameter and two and one half feet thick, attained the stature of a monument. Stone incense burners, often in the form of the Old God, were common in Toltec and rare in Upper Middle Culture times. The quantity of religious sculpture, produced chiefly in late Aztec times, to judge from the style, did not detract from the quality of the workmanship, so strong was the control of religious and social factors.[2] (See Plate 55, bottom right.)

*kwow-shee-ca'lli.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

287
532

PLATE 45

AZTEC FEATHERWORK

TOP: Nineteenth-century survival of a famous Aztec craft of which few examples have resisted the ravages of time. BOTTOM: Montezuma's headdress, now in the Vienna Museum. Cortes sent it to the Emperor Charles V, who gave it to his nephew.

287
292

[p. 144(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

326
301
532

PLATE 46

AZTEC GOLDWORK

TOP ROW: Small gold ornaments from Oaxaca reveal exquisite workmanship. MIDDLE: A buckle representing the god Xipe has a strong sculptural quality. BOTTOM: Left: A gold worker from the Codex Florentino makes a mosaic ornament like that at right, in which turquoise mosaic enhances a gold reproduction of the shield and arrows, constituting the sign for war.

[p. 144 (B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

301
326
532

PLATE 47

AZTEC GOLDWORK

Almost all Aztec goldwork went into the Spanish melting pot. Most surviving examples come from Oaxaca, where the supply was doubled by Caso's discovery of Tomb 7 at Monte Albán, represented by upper left and bottom and opposite-page middle. The lip ornament (upper right) has a movable tongue that makes a very lively serpent indeed. These few examples give an idea of the range of form and skill of the Aztec goldsmith.

[p. 144(c)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

321
324
532

PLATE 48

AZTEC MOSAIC WORK

Mosaic work was one of the most elegant crafts and demands color reproduction to give a just impression. The mask in jade and turquoise, now in Rome, was part of the original loot of the Conquest. The skull (below), a British Museum treasure, is composed of light bands of turquoise and dark cross of lignite, set on a human skull, cut away in back to form a mask, possibly representing Tezcatlipoca.

[p. 144 (D)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

531 with the traditional date of the diffusion of picture writing
[212 by the peoples from the Mixteca. (See Plate 29, third row.)
177]

The third phase of this style, made during the fifteenth century, saw a gradual conversion of the linework into crude, continuous patterns, but the construction of the vessels proper was much finer.[17] A few potters rejected this slovenly manner and drew elaborate geometric designs. The closely parallel lines in some of these patterns were done freehand on the curved interior surfaces of the bowls, revealing extraordinary control in draftsmanship. Perhaps in trade, per-[177] haps in tribute, many foreign vases were introduced at this time and stimulated the local potters to develop new styles of their own.

In the fourth period, during the chieftaincy of Montezuma, the potters broke away from these extremes of con-
•[532] centrated meticulousness and slovenly linework. Naturalism found favor, with birds, fish and plants used as designs and executed with that careless finesse of brushwork which characterizes Japanese sepia drawing. After the Conquest draftsmen accustomed to working in this style were able to copy accurately such elements of Spanish design as the double eagle of Charles V and the coats of arms of nobles.[18] (See Plate 32, top.)

Polychrome pottery was made locally, usually consisting of a red slip, or wash, adorned with a geometric design in black and white. Coarse construction with painfully careful, if crude, draftsmanship characterized the fourteenth-century ware. In the fifteenth century the hands of the potters
223 loosened so that they were able to paint more sophisticated 531 designs on vessels as thin and delicate as any pottery ever 177 made in the Americas. Trade wares were rare at first and

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

283 401 on discussions as to whether or not the Aztecs knew the wheel. The weight had the function of a flywheel in accelerating the rotation of the distaff. The explorer Charnay apparently mistook spindle whorls for wheels which might have been attached to toy clay animals. His ingenuous explanation is not seriously considered today, for later research has proved the existence of jointed dolls both in Toltec and Aztec times. These had holes in their bodies through which strings were passed, attaching the arms and legs, which were similarly perforated. In 1940 Dr Stirling discovered some clay animals which rested on rollers, tubes of clay probably connected by wooden axles, socketed to holes in the legs. This knowledge does not seem to have been put to any efficient use. In the history of invention there are several similar cases, notably the Chinese discovery of gunpowder. They used it to make a noise in ceremonies, but not until the Europeans took over the substance did its application have any practical purpose.

532 323 In Aztec times stone sculpture was the usual medium used in reproducing the human form. The figurine cult, which in Middle Culture and Toltec times manifested the chief development of the plastic arts, became insignificant. The use of the mold did not induce superior craftsmen to fashion even the originals. Yet in these dull reproductions of gods and goddesses there still lurks that ability to capture the spark of essential vitality so characteristic of this field of art in earlier times. Curiously enough, the goddesses, more kindly and less ridden with abstract virtues than the gods, usually awoke a response in these ancient idol makers that resulted in perfectly charming little figures.[20] (See Plate 29, bottom row.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

at Cuernavaca revealed a temple intact in all except its roof. 174
The temple of the Tepozteco, perched high in the hills over 346
Tepoztlan,* is another nearly perfect example of Aztec architecture on a small scale. A pit sunk in a vacant lot across the street from the cathedral in Mexico City reached the corner between the stair and the western wall of the great temple of Huitzilopochtli, War God of the Aztecs, and the massive size and ornate decoration prove that the startled descriptions of the Spaniards did less than justice to this tremendous monument. A recent excavation in a cliff overhanging Malinalco, near Tenancingo, state of Mexico, brought to light a temple complex, largely hewed from living rock, which thrusts the famous Egyptian rock tombs of Abu-Simbel into the limbo of provincial opera-house scenery.* (See Plates 28, bottom; 37, top; 50–51.)

The Aztec temple had a platform, the sloping sides of 346 which were generally broken by three terraces. A steep, broad 532 stair flanked by balustrades, occasionally with a third dividing it into two, gave access to the top. Carved stone blocks, projecting in rows from the sides of the platform, represented snakeheads, skulls or some other symbolic form of the cult. At the foot of the balustrades huge serpent heads with gaping jaws added to the architectural design and created awe in the beholder. The stair rose broad and steep, focusing the attention on the sacrificial block at the top, over which victims were stretched to await the searching knives of priests.

Behind the block stood the temple or temples, which generally had a back room for the idol and an antechamber for the priests. The walls were usually of dressed stone and

*To-pos-ts'n.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

346 532 sometimes ornamented with carving or relief. The roof, which was thatched in poor or primitive temples, in important shrines was made of beams laid like a corncrib, growing smaller toward the top. Plaster laid on twigs or poles sealed the roof against the rain and was carved with designs symbolic of the god inside. The interiors were noisome places, coated with blood and smoke, for incense was burned in profusion, as were the hearts of sacrificed victims. The proportions of terrace to terrace, temple to platform, stair to façade, were maintained irrespective of size, producing an effect of height and mass which yet in no way detracted from either the platform or the temple. This sense of proportion extends into every aspect of Aztec art and craftsmanship.

327 346 532 Some temples were cylindrical and rested on square or circular platforms.[1] These were dedicated to Quetzalcoatl, often represented as Ehecatl,* God of the Wind, to whose passage a rounded surface offered no obstacle. Sometimes the door of such a temple was fashioned in the form of a serpent head, while the circular building suggested its body. A superb temple of this type is part of the Malinalco group mentioned above, which is hollowed out of the living rock. The door is carved at either side in low relief to suggest a serpent head in profile, while the whole also can be visualized as a snakehead in full face, of which the open mouth constitutes the door. A bench circles around the walls within, and the skins of eagles and ocelot, emblematic of the rising and setting sun, are carved in relief as if they hung from the wall to drape over the bench. An altar in the center of the room represents another eagle. This elaborate concept is

*Ay'-hay-cat.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
324

PLATE 40

AZTEC ART

Porphyry mask, Tenyo, Vera Cruz. This mask is an outstanding example of Aztec art, even though it was made outside of the borders of their domain. This carving and the Eagle Knight on Plate 40 are perhaps the finest secular sculptures from the Aztec period.

[p. 160(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
324
805

PLATE 52

AZTEC ART

TOP: The Calendar Stone, thirteen feet in diameter, represents the history of the world. It is arranged in concentric circles, at the center of which is the sun set within the sign Four Motion, the date of the present era. The dates of the preceding eras are given in the four arms of the Motion sign. The twenty day names encircle the central symbols, and they are enclosed by glyphs for turquoise and jade, signifying "precious" and the color of the heavens. Beyond this band radiate sun's rays and star symbols, while the outer border consists of two great fire snakes, symbolizing time. BOTTOM: The National Stone, a monolithic block in the Mexican National Museum, suggests how the Calendar Stone was probably set on a platform. Its symbolism represents the Sacred War, the eternal conflict between the contracting and opposing forces of nature.

[p. 160(D)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
324
776

532
324
346

PLATE 53

AZTEC ART

TOP: This feathered snake in the Mexican National Museum may well symbolize Quetzalcoatl, God of Learning and the Priesthood. This representation differs from the fire snake in that it lacks a raised crest over the head. BOTTOM: The enormous snake at the foot of the balustrade to the great temple in Mexico is a dramatic architectural ornament, frequently employed in Aztec temple building. Snakes were the major ornament at Tenayuca (Plate 50, above) and many other Aztec buildings, appearing also far to the east in Mexican Chichen Itza.

[p. 160(E)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

●532
776
324
778

534
322
532

PLATE 54

AZTEC ART

TOP: Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods, a highly important member of the pantheon. This representation, over eight feet high, displays her power in terms of such fearsome attributes as two snakeheads, a necklace of a skull, hands and hearts, a skirt of writhing snakes and claws on her feet. The bottom of the statue's feet is carved to represent the earth monster. BOTTOM: Wooden drum with two tongues (teponaztli) in the form of an ocelot. The smooth, simple outlines contrast with the macabre congestion of the presentation above.

[p. 160(F)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 55
AZTEC ART

TOP: Another presentation of Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods. An earth goddess, she is also associated with death, so that in this case her head is a human skull. BOTTOM: Left: Small rock-crystal skull representing the Death God. This is a fine example of Aztec lapidary work. Right: A box, symbolically carved, to hold human hearts. Note the glyph for jade, i.e., "precious," banding the sides of the container.

[p. 160(G)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532
324
778

PLATE 56

AZTEC ART

TOP: This Corn Goddess is envisaged as a young girl. Her soft Indian beauty is brought out with the same sure simplicity which characterizes the warriors on Plates 40 and 49. BOTTOM: A colossal head, nearly four feet high, of Coyolxauhqui, sister of the War God. She is shown dead. Simple handling of details enhances this monumental conception.

[p. 160(H)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

324 346 532 carved from the solid rock cliff and is a marvelous blend of architectural design and sculptural skill.[8]

532 The Aztec sculptors worked in relief and in the round, in heroic and in miniature size, and were equally able in symbolic and naturalistic conceptions, which they could execute in whatever medium was available. Our modern appreciation of their work is hampered by the prominence of religious motifs, which often detract by crowded detail or grotesque fantasy from the clean lines of their basic proportions. Aztec art, we have insisted, was never completely secular. Yet, in compensation, the Aztecs allowed a lively appreciation of natural elements to enter purely religious conceptions wherever possible.

323 532 322 From the time of the Middle Cultures the Mexicans used baked clay extensively for sculpture and worked out in it their artistic standards. The few surviving examples of wooden sculpture suggest that this medium was carved in accordance with stone techniques and did not, as in Egypt and Greece, serve as a training ground for standards later transferred to stone. If anything, the plastic methods of Mexico had their origin in a long and continuous handling of clay. Both media entail an emphasis on surface and contour; and the technical process of reducing stone by pecking and polishing, if more laborious, is not, in the last analysis, very different from the final smoothing and finishing of a work in clay. Thus the sculptors achieved a delicate appreciation of the contours and lines of the human form.

776 532 Partly owing to the past tradition and partly because the images of the gods were set in the temples, the Aztec artists showed their figures in passive attitudes, more often seated than erect. The austerity of their life led the Aztecs to

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 attribute similar attitudes to their gods, and, as a result, the 532 soft emotionalism so characteristic of European art is almost totally absent. Thus Aztec sculpture is even more forbidding and gloomy than other Middle American arts, which have at first a depressing effect on observers accustomed to Old World aesthetics.[9] (See Plates 40, 49, 52–56.)

532 The same sense of proportion so evident in Aztec architecture produced a monumental quality in their sculpture. The smallest piece has the same dignity that attends the most massive temple carvings. A photograph reveals no impression of the original scale, and in one case the head of a goddess was carved identically in a small piece of jade and a four-foot block of basalt, with no loss of plastic or monumental values to either.[10]

In relief sculpture the forming of the object and the disposition and subordination of details show the mastery of design inherited by eyes trained in centuries of weaving. The vast block of the thirteen-foot Calendar Stone is carved with as delicate an appreciation of the relative values of space as similar designs painted on pottery vessels or graven on jade. (See Plate 52.)

532 The finest Aztec sculpture, to the Western eye, repro-778 duces the young gods and goddesses that presided over the crops. Thus the Aztec body, long of trunk, short of limb, softly rounded in its well-fleshed strength, is simply and accurately portrayed with passive grace. The patient and resigned features were perfect subjects for the sculptor and his medium. Some gods could assume the guise of animals, and the sculptors took full advantage of their close observation of nature to carve a coyote with ear atilt or to dignify a red basalt grasshopper with the armored malevolence of an insect in heroic scale. The serpent, emblem of Quetzalcoatl, symbol of time and the year, representative of mystery and power, was frequently carved. The sinuous curves ending in the savage symmetry of the head offered a challenge which the sculptors accepted with a success that evokes the mysterious horror of the Aztec universe. (See Plates 53, 56.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532 778

The grotesque gods are abstract and horrible to our modern eye. Coatlicue,* the "Lady of the Serpent Skirt" and mother of Huitzilopochtli, was thought of as powerful and awesome, so the task of the sculptors was to transmute those qualities into stone. The great statue in Mexico, whose head is twin serpents, whose necklace human hands and hearts, whose feet and hands are viciously armed with claws and whose skirt is a mat of writhing snakes, brings into a dynamic concentrate the manifold horrors of the universe. A smaller carving, simpler and less detailed, produces this same effect, implying that the very essence of fear was honored and worshiped. An altar of red lava, dug up in the street behind the cathedral, is grimly adorned with ranked skulls, but the design is so harmonious that death becomes an abstraction, part of a distant universe of fear, and not the imminent individual disaster which besets us moderns. (See Plates 54–55.)

The Calendar Stone embodies a finite statement of the infinity of the Aztec universe. In the center is the face of the Sun God, Tonatiuh, flanked by four cartouches which singly give the dates of the four previous ages of the world and together represent the date of our present era. The twenty names of the days circle this central element, and they, in turn, are ringed with a band of glyphs denoting jade or turquoise, which give the idea of being precious and sym-

532 805

*Co-at-le'-kwzy.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532 805 bolize the heavens and their color. This strip is girdled by the signs for stars, through which penetrate designs emblematic of the rays of the sun. Two immense Fire Serpents, symbolic of the Year and Time, circle the exterior to meet face to face at the base. Boring back through these forms to the significance behind them, we have a grandiose conception of the majesty of the universe.[11] (See Plate 52, top.)

349 532 In recent years, under the Presidential Palace in Mexico City, a monolith over a meter high was found, which represented a platform and a stair crowned at the top by a similar solar disk. Reliefs on the sides show Huitzilopochtli, God of War, and Tezcatlipoca, God of the Smoking Mirror, symbolizing the sacred war between night and day. Probably the Calendar Stone was set up in much the same manner, and it is tantalizing to think of the lost reliefs which explained and ornamented the great disk when it was in position.[12] (See Plate 52, bottom.)

532 805 782 The historical accounts record that the Calendar Stone was made in 1479 and the great eagle vase of Tizoc during his rule from 1481 to 1486. A trough, extending from the basin to the edge of the vase, has been explained as a drain for blood to run out. However, the design is not keyed to this drain, and the purpose of the basin is to burn hearts, not to receive blood. Therefore, the furrow was probably made by the Spaniards, who sought either to use the vase as a nether millstone or tried unsuccessfully to smash it as an example of idolatry.[13]

532 The dates of these two monuments indicate that this was the time when Aztec civilization burst into flower. It is a tribute to Aztec artists that, originally fettered by the more lowly tasks of handicraft, they could accept the tremendous economic, social and religious stimulation of their sudden 532 rise to power as a license to convert craftsmanship into great religious art.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Aztecs did not create their art forms or their religion, 532 which seems to have seeped in from the Mixteca-Puebla 771 country. There the religious manuscripts and the ritualistic 177 concepts hewn in stone and painted on vases were more complex and better drawn than their Aztec equivalents. Unfortunately, as yet, archaeological investigation has not extended to more than a sampling of this potentially rich area of Mexican civilization. However, the Valley people, given the opportunity, eagerly accepted these forms and created their own versions of the parent art.[14] (See Plates 57, top; 58, 59.)

The same elements portrayed in stone monuments ap- 532 peared in smaller objects. Wooden drums and atl-atls had relief carvings the equal of the temple ornaments in all except scale. The same divinities were graven in bone against a background of turquoise mosaic. The goldworkers reproduced in miniature the images of the gods and goddesses and the symbols of their cult, carrying out in costume ornament the elements of the ritual in which they were used. Lapidaries succeeded in reducing jade, obsidian, rock crystal, opal, moonstone and amethyst into tiny sculptures which carry the same emotional authority as the grand-scale art. The bulk of first-rate material is enormous. It would seem that the products of tribal craftsmanship had been raised en masse into arts. Virtually overnight a cluster of primitive villages had transformed themselves into great creative centers.[15] (See Plates 45–48; 55, bottom left.)

Painting and drawing did not reflect this transmutation.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532 True, we have recovered a few examples, but they come from sources which produced fine sculpture. The surviving frescoes at Tizatlan and Malinalco are in no way superior to the drawings in the codices or manuscripts. The use of color is lavish, but the drawing is crabbed and conventional, confining itself to correct delineation of ceremonial elements rather than to the combination of composition, perspective and color values into a significant emotional experience. Apparently the finer workers devoted themselves to sculpture, while drawing and painting, subordinated in the outward expression of ritual, fell to less skillful hands. Yet design was a requisite in a work in two dimensions, and, considered on this basis, the symmetrical disposition of the figures renders less serious the anatomical flaws and rigidity of presentation.[18] (See Plate 57, top.)

The pictographic annals often exhibit an engaging charm in the little historical scenes recorded. The humor cannot be entirely fortuitous. There is something inherently fascinating about drawing little men that impels a draftsman to humanize his figures with a resultant and welcome loss to their dignity. Even the supremely competent draftsmen who decorated the Egyptian tombs in the Fourth Dynasty could not resist a casual impishness. Aztec drawing was hardier than the sculpture and was able to survive until the close of the sixteenth century. The Indians copied old records, and some annals were carried on in the same style until 1560. The friars used Indian artists to illustrate reports on indigenous affairs, and there are several manuscripts in which Indian and European drawing methods are inextricably and delightfully mingled. Pictured history has always had its appeal, to which emphasis of the essential and the suppression of the irrelevant, implicit in drawing, largely contribute. 532

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

In our present day, with all the superb methods of photographic recordings and reproductions, the comic strip has a vogue unparalleled in our history.[17] (See Plates 62–63.)

Aboriginal music has largely disappeared. The friars 533 534 quickly adapted the chants and dances of Europe to Indian needs and substituted Christian for Indian ritual practices, using song and dance as formulas easily understood by primitives. To judge from the instruments, Aztec music was strong in rhythm but lacking in tone. The two-tone and one-tone drums could emit sonorous rhythms, but the bone and clay flutes pipe pitifully and are not gauged to a fixed scale. The conch shell could be blown with varying notes, according to the intensity of the blast, although it was more suitable for summoning people than for making music. Whistles, rattles of clay and gourds, bells and shell tinklers enhanced the effect of carefully regulated rhythms. Notched bones, often human, were rasped with a stick and produced quite pleasant sounds. A strange type of drum, which seems to have been indigenous, had an amazing resonance attained by beating an inverted gourd floating in a large container of water.[18] (See Plates 39, bottom left; 61, middle right.)

The dance was highly important, but native steps seldom 535
persist except in the most primitive outlying districts, for [177 797] they were transformed by the friars into Christian patterns. The chroniclers describe dances of many types in which masses of people participated. It is impossible that the Aztecs, with their profound sense of design and form, should not have had elaborate rituals in which great bodies of people moved in complex patterns to complicated rhythms. Song was used to reinforce the ceremony, and the words of some

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

361
778

302
776

PLATE 37

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Tezcatlipoca, Smoking Mirror, from fresco at Tlaxlan. BOTTOM: Left: The Codex Florentino plan of Tenochtitlan (cf. Plate 37). A. The shrines of Huitzilopochtli and Tlaloc. B. Priest. C. Priests' quarters. D. Temple platform. E. Eagle warrior's quarters. F. Ball court. G. Skull rack. H. Temple of Xipe. I. Sacrificial stone. K. Old temple of Huitzilopochtli. L. Five Lizard (date) and Macuilxochitl, God of Flowers. M. Five House (date) and same god. N. Dancing places. Q. Image of Xipe. P. Doors into sacred enclosure. Right: Gold ornament representing the vertical universe; at top gods play ball, symbolizing the sky and the movement of the planets, next the sun disk, then a flint knife, representing the moon, and finally the earth monster.

[p. 176(A)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

778
532

776
532

PLATE 58

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Altar at Teotihuacan with symbols of agricultural worship. Note glyph at top center. MIDDLE: Codex Florentino, special ceremony involving gods' descent to earth, with birdmen, snake dancers, rain-gods and priests dressed as the chief gods of the pantheon. BOTTOM: Vienna Codex, scene partly ceremonial and partly historical. Gods, dates, temples, chiefs and fire making are shown.

[p. 176 (B)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

PLATE 59

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Left: Tlaloc, God of Rain. Right: Quetzalcoatl, God of Learning, in guise of Ehecatl, God of Wind. BOTTOM: Page from Tonalamatl of Codex Borbonicus. The goddess Itzpapalotl, presiding over the fifteenth week, One House, is shown in the large division. The broken tree signifies Tamoanchan, a legendary homeland; the house below, with a man on top and the night sign in the door and the spider above, signifies the realm of darkness. The other symbols are offerings. The rectangular divisions refer to the days and their Gods. The day signs and numbers begin at the lower left with One House and end at top left with Thirteen Eagle. A Night God is drawn in each day square, beginning with Pitzinteculitli and ending with Chalchihuitlicue (Table XVI, 194). The squares above the bottom row and to the right of the vertical row reveal the Gods of the Day Hours and their birds, beginning at the left with Xiuhtecuhtli and ending at the top with Ilamatecuhtli (Table XV).

532
212 776

[p. 176 (C)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
782

PLATE 60

AZTEC RELIGION

TOP: Left: Priests and laymen sacrifice two victims in honor of the War God. Right: War captive on sacrificial stone defends himself against members of the warrior orders. BOTTOM: Left: Sacrificial knife with mosaic handle representing an Eagle Knight, in the British Museum. These pictures from the Codex Florentino reveal the technique of using a stone knife to make a deep enough incision to reach the heart and tear it out. Right: Sacrifice to the Sun.

411
532
782

[p. 176(D)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

787 destroyed, one by a sudden fire, the other by lightning unaccompanied by thunder. A comet was seen by day, and sudden waves came up on the Lake of Texcoco. A sixth sign was a woman's voice crying, "My children, we are lost." Monsters appeared and were brought before the chief, only to disappear as soon as he had seen them. Most sinister of all

[532]

FIG. 3. The years before the Spanish Conquest had been full of evil omens for the Aztecs. To determine whether the dire predictions of Nezahualpilli, chief of Texcoco, were correct, Montezuma played and lost a ritualistic game of "basketball" with him as depicted above. Codex Florentino was a bird brought in by some hunters. This bird had a mirror in its head, revealing the heavens, and when Montezuma peered at it a second time a host of armed men was disclosed. When the chief brought his soothsayers to witness this augury and to explain its significance, the bird flew away. Distorted as these occurrences seem to us, they must have had a most upsetting effect on the population of the Valley of Mexico.[2] (See Figs. 4, 28A–B.)

175 Consequently the emotional condition of the people was peculiarly receptive to the rumors, drifting in from the southeast, which told of four-legged monsters with human bodies issuing from their backs. As these strange beings moved up the coast Montezuma's spies and ambassadors began to bring back more precise reports as to their nature, and even presents and messages for their chief. (See Fig. 5.) 175

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[787
532]

FIG. 4. Montezuma views the magical bird in the head of which was a mirror, showing first the heavens, then hosts of armed men, foretelling, according to tradition, the Spanish Conquest. Codex Florentino

The strangers were human, for they were vulnerable, receiving wounds and dying from assaults upon them. They had new and strange weapons, noisy and lethal, for cannon, muskets, crossbows and steel swords were unknown to the Aztecs. Also novel and dreadful adjuncts of war were the horses and the savage mastiffs of the Spaniards. In battle the strangers were invincible, operating in a manner completely

[532]

FIG. 5. The Spaniards land in 1519 at the site of Vera Cruz. Their ship and equipment are carefully shown. At the right, Marina, Cortes' interpreter, is exercising her diplomacy on a native. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[532]

FIG. 6. Aztec sorcerers, sent from the highland, offer bewitched food to Cortes and his staff, who disdain the viands. Codex Florentino

[726] foreign to Indian principles of war. The simple Indian methods of mass attack were of little avail against the maneuvering of a well-drilled force, for the native tactics could only bring the merest fraction of their fighting force in direct contact with the enemy.

[754] The Spaniards also resisted witchcraft on the occasion when Montezuma seriously applied it. However, scorcery, according to native standards, was at best a two-edged weapon, so that it is doubtful if this failure had any other than a confirmatory bearing on the Indian attitude of mind toward the supernatural quality of the Spaniards. The problem that beset Montezuma was not that the invaders were themselves gods, but that they were the symbols, the vicars on earth, as it were, of vast unearthly forces bent on establishing a new social order. As such the Spaniards required the most gingerly handling.[3] (See Fig. 6.)

175 669 When the Spaniards were approaching the capital a political problem entered to complicate the spiritual one. The city-states, or pueblos, between the Valley of Mexico and the coast were independent communities and, even if tributary to the Valley powers, were often reluctantly so. Therefore, many of these tribes, like the Totonacs, welcomed the invaders as the spearhead for an open revolt. Others, like the completely independent and warlike Tlaxcalans, put the power of Cortes to a practical test in open battle and, when the Spaniards won, became the most loyal of Cortes' supporters. Cholula, a large town loosely allied to the Aztecs, met the Spaniards as friends, plotting to overcome them by treachery, a good Indian political maneuver instigated, perhaps, by Montezuma. The Spaniards, suspecting such a move, counteracted its efficacy by a judiciously executed massacre, thus, if not gaining a friendly community, at least creating a noncombatant one. (See Figs. 7–9.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Montezuma and his more cautious counselors watched this

FIG. 7. Cortes and his army, on passing the great volcanoes southeast of Mexico City, ask the way. Note the smoke issuing from the crater of Popocatepetl. Codex Florentine

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175
643
[532]

FIG. 8. Montezuma, upset by the magical premonitions of disaster and by the failure of his sorcerers, does not know whether to flee or hide in a cave. Codex Florentino slow ascent from the coast with apprehensive interest. He has been condemned by many commentators as an appeaser and has been made the scapegoat of this great debacle of Indian civilization. Yet consider his position. While the leading man in his community, he was not an authoritarian monarch. For mass action he had to rely on the group decision of the clans comprising his tribe, as well as on the very doubtful allegiances of the vassal states, whose immediate needs transcended any sacrifice of a far-reaching political nature. Thus not only the demands of the harvest season but also the fear of damage to the communal property made communities loath for war. Montezuma had no method of enforcing a long-range diplomatic policy, such as is so characteristic of European and oriental political history. Nor must the extraordinary gifts of Cortes and his Indian mistress Marina be underrated. The pair played on Indian psychology as master pianists would execute a duet on the piano.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

 175

His hands tied by both practical and psychological considerations, Montezuma received Cortes and the Spaniards without having struck a positive blow. Then ensued a new chapter in the story. Cortes promptly seized Montezuma as a hostage, and the latter's power to influence his tribesmen disintegrated. A mass revulsion against the invaders slowly began to crystallize, but it was confined to the city itself, without extending to the neighboring towns. People kept themselves within their houses; the market closed, yet no overt act was made. Cortes was allowed to leave for the coast to subjugate his new commander Narvaez, without open hostilities on the part of the Aztecs. (See Figs. 10–13.)

The storm broke during Cortes' absence. Some inhabitants

[532]

FIG. 9. Cortes meets high dignitaries from Tlaxcala, the pueblo most loyal to the conquerors. Marina interprets while supplies of corn, tortillas, turkeys, etc., are accumulated. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

[Text continues on p. 249. --- Analyst]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
175

FIG. 10. The Spanish forces reach Tenochtitlan, the modern Mexico City, and Montezuma and his nobles come to greet Cortes. Codex Florentino

FIG. 11. Marina's value to Cortes cannot be underestimated. Here she is ordering an Aztec to perform some duty. To judge from the speech scrolls he complies with ill grace. Codex Florentino

FIG. 12. A great aid to the Spanish military success was the use of cavalry. Here we see mounted crossbowmen, whose weapons were no less deadly than the firearms of the day. Codex Florentino

FIG. 13. Cortes seizes Montezuma as a hostage. The Aztec chief tries to calm his rebellious subjects who treat him with the contempt due a traitor. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 of Tenochtitlan had assembled to celebrate the feast of the god Huitzilopochtli. Alvarado, a tough soldier, lacking all Cortes' gifts of intrigue, scented trouble in this gathering, the actual innocence of which he had no way of knowing. Following the Spanish technique at Cholula, he fell upon the celebrants and killed them all. The city rose like one man and drove the garrison to cover. Actuated by the single motive of revenge against the invaders, the Aztecs were ready to destroy the Spanish garrison. However, the structural weakness of the Indian government became bitterly evident when the chiefs permitted Cortes and his reinforce-

[532]

FIG. 14. Following a series of outrages committed by the invaders, the citizens rise in arms against the Spanish. The Spaniards and their Tlaxcalan allies are besieged in the palace of Axayacatl. In this scene a field piece is shown in action, while the horsemen are held in reserve for a sortie. Lienzo de Tlaxcala ments from the army of Narvaez to join the beleaguered [726] troops of Alvarado. The ceremonial aspect of war in Indian Mexico did not envisage the splitting of an adversary's army and the separate destruction of its weakened parts, a rudimentary law of European military tactics.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

Yet once the Spaniards were united in the city they ceased to be a military problem and became the emotional focus of the Indians' wrath and fear. They had to shut themselves up in the palace of Axayacatl to resist the force of this uprising in which the whole tribe participated. The Aztecs, having immobilized their enemies, visited their hate and rage in a manner unparalleled in the annals of Indian campaigns. Every citizen joined in hurling missiles at the besieged in-

[532]

FIG. 15. Here the Spanish are dislodging the Aztecs from a temple, where the Indians had gathered to enfilade them. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[532]

FIG. 16. Wooden tanks were built by Cortes to protect his men when Aztecs took up positions on the housetops out of reach of the sallies of Spanish cavalry. This spirited picture reveals the tanks separated by a canal into which a horse had fallen. The Aztecs on the roofs impede its rescue. Lienzo de Tlaxcala vaders, and masses of warriors blocked every sally the Spaniards made from their refuge. (See Figs. 14–15.)

The Spaniards could not maneuver in the narrow footpaths along the canals, and the portable fortresses they constructed of wood, the first tanks used in the New World, were useless against enemies on housetops and in canoes.[4] (See Fig. 16.) The Spaniards lost heavily, and the unfortunate Montezuma met his death either at the hands of his own people, whom he was trying to calm, or, as two excellent authorities have it, at those of the Spaniards.[5] After having passed a week shut up in the palace Cortes decided to withdraw from Tenochtitlan. Just before dawn his forces made

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 their way through the hushed streets out along the causeway to Tacuba.

A woman getting water from a canal, saw them and raised the alarm. The whole male population surged forth along the roofs and through the streets. Some seized canoes and attacked the flanks of the marching column. The Aztecs tore up the bridges, and many Spaniards, laden down with gold, sank ignominiously beneath the waters or, while trying to keep afloat, were clubbed to death by warriors in boats. Alvarado, ever the precipitous man of action, confronted a wide gap in the causeway, plunged his lance into the lake bottom and in full armor vaulted over to the other side.[6] The panic increased, and order was not restored until the Spaniards reached Tacuba. Cortes sat under a giant cypress and wept as he took toll of his losses. Three quarters of the Spanish army had been lost in this rout and in the preceding siege. (See Fig. 18.)

The Spaniards found a temporary sanctuary on the hill of Los Remedios. Their adversaries, instead of following up

[532]

FIG. 17. A handful of the Spaniards reach the mainland. The Aztecs, instead of following up their advantages, plunder the bodies of the killed and drowned. Be it remembered, however, the Spanish carried off the entire Aztec treasure. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

[532]

FIG. 18. Supplies run low and Cortes secretly tries to reach the mainland along a causeway. His retreat is discovered and the Aztecs, massing their forces in canoes, wreak havoc on the Spanish forces. Tearing up the bridges, the Aztecs further hindered the retreat and all but destroyed the invading army. Lienzo de Tlaxcala their advantage, plundered the dead and tried to recover the booty stolen by the Spaniards from the Aztec treasury. They lost a precious opportunity to destroy the remnants of the Spanish army by not carrying their attack to its logical conclusion. (See Fig. 17.)

However, the Indians did make some effort toward concerted action later. The Texcocans, formerly the principal allies of the Aztecs, gathered their forces together and tried to intercept the Spaniards as they made their way cross country to the homeland of their allies, the Tlaxcalans. At Otumba battle was joined. The Indians in their battle formation could not overcome the mobility and tactical sense of the Spaniards. Wounded as every man was, and exhausted from lack of food and sleep, they kept their discipline; and a desperate charge by the cavalry reached the chiefs, who fell before the Spanish swords. Once their leaders were slain, the scant Indian discipline dissolved, and the tribesmen took flight. The Spaniards made their way to Tlaxcala to recuperate and to await reinforcements.

[p.253]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175

Montezuma was succeeded by his brother Cuitlahuac, and he, dying of the fever after four months, was replaced as war chief by their nephew, the heroic Cuauhtemoc. This strong and courageous leader was unable to overcome the mutual distrust of the Indian communities for each other. When the Aztecs might have joined together with other tribes to overwhelm the Spaniards by sheer weight of numbers, they did nothing.

In the meantime Cortes, having rested his army, began to consolidate his position. He made two series of campaigns, one eastward to the sea and the other in a south and westerly direction in the present state of Morelos. Utilizing Indian allies both as carriers and as a screen to conceal his more serious tactical movements, he subjugated town after town.

[532]

FIG. 19. Due to the hesitancy of the Aztecs, Cortes was able to reach Tlaxcala and refit his army. Here we see military supplies being brought from the coast. In the left center a minor disaster, involving the drowning of several Indian allies, is depicted. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175

[532]

FIG. 20. Cortes' plan to retake Tenochtitlan involved isolating the island city from the mainland. Tenochtitlan is shown in the center of the picture, surrounded by the lake on which float the war canoes of its defenders. The Spanish forces devote themselves to reducing the mainland towns. Lienzo de Tlaxcala

[726] In each case the Indian war convention of a single decisive mêlée proved worthless against the versatility of the Spanish attack. Cortes soon pacified the eastern country sufficiently to try to regain Tenochtitlan. (See Fig. 19.)

175 648 Typical Indian perfidy, from our point of view today, but common sense to the people of that era, virtually accomplished the downfall of Mexico. The Texcocans, closest allies of the Aztecs, and for that reason perhaps the most jealous

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175
648

•[532]

FIG. 21. Cortes built brigantines to defend his flanks while moving along the causeways into Tenochtitlan. In this picture a brigantine comes to the aid of Cortes and his allies, who are beset by Aztecs afoot and in canoes. Lienzo de Tlaxcala of their success, resented the part Montezuma had taken in forcing the election of a war chief. When the Aztecs had had a strong chance of maintaining their supremacy after Cortes' retreat from Mexico the Texcocans valiantly took the field at Otumba. Now they switched to the Spanish side, seeing a chance of assuming a dominant position in Valley of Mexico affairs. Their defection gave the Spaniards a base on the Lake of Mexico and a means of mopping up whatever tribes remained unsubjugated in the previous campaign.

175 Having quieted the countryside, Cortes put into effect his plan of siege. He launched a fleet of small galleys armed with cannon, which had been constructed in Tlaxcala and brought piecemeal across the mountains, to be assembled on 175 the lake. These ships were to sweep the lake clear of canoes and protect the Spanish flanks as they moved in across the three causeways to the island city, Tenochtitlan. Cortes divided his forces in three parts to move along these approaches and close in on the capital. (See Figs. 20, 22.)

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

The galleys soon cleared the lake of any hostile fleets of canoes, and the Spaniards began to invest the city. The Aztecs, fighting for their lives, stubbornly defended their position. Every night they sallied forth to destroy the bridges the Spaniards had made across the canals during the day. In fighting of this kind the Spaniards could not manipulate

[532]

FIG. 22. The Spanish flotilla puts to sea. These galleys, equipped with oars and a sail and armed with a cannon in the bow, could play havoc with the Aztec war canoes. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 their troops, and neither side had any great advantage. The Aztecs, however, still persisted in trying to take prisoners to sacrifice to their War God instead of exterminating their enemies whenever the occasion offered. To offset this gain the thousands of Indian allies, who flocked to the Spanish side to participate in the expected victory, jammed the causeways and hampered rather than helped the besiegers. (See Fig. 21.)

[532]

FIG. 23. Time and again the brigantines relieved situations like this where armed tribesmen in canoes sailed up to attack the Spanish rear. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

 175

[532]

FIG. 24. The Spanish military problem was to raze enough of the city to permit the use of cavalry. The drawing at the right shows the gunboats taking part in an offensive with this end in view. Codex Florentino

Cortes decided to change his manner of campaign, and his solution, while reasonable to us, must have been little short of miraculous to the tribesmen. He sent the Indian allies forward to tear down all the houses they could find and fill the canals with the debris. When counterattacked, the allies retired, leaving room for the Spaniards on horse and foot to deal with the Aztecs. Each day the Spanish forces gained more room to maneuver and thus could count on recovering more ground on the morrow. The Aztecs, animated by a rare unity, fought desperately but without avail. (See Figs. 23–24.)

Toward the end of the siege an event occurred which 175 indicated to the now-desperate Aztecs hope of eventual re- 648 lease in a common rising against the invaders. The people from the islands at the south of the lake, the Xochimilcas and

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175 their neighbor tribesmen, filtered through the Spanish gal-
648 leys by night and told the Aztecs that, as neighbors, they would make common cause against the whites. Overjoyed, Cuauhtemoc and his chiefs loaded them with ornaments, fine mantles and cacao beans, precious for the favorite drink of the Aztecs, chocolate. When night closed in again on the beleaguered city the Aztecs were startled by a great commotion. The new allies were trying to drag off the Aztec women and children as slaves. It is pleasant to record that this knavery received its just reward, and the Xochimilcas were all either slaughtered or disposed of in sacrifice.

175 Only when its members were too weak to resist and could

[532]

FIG. 25. Pestilence was a formidable ally on the Spanish side. Colds, smallpox, measles, and the like, were unknown to the Indians who, lacking any sort of immunity, died by the thousands. Codex Florentino

[532]

FIG. 26. A factor in the downfall of the Aztecs was their custom of taking captives for sacrifice rather than to kill in direct battle. The heads of the sacrificed victims, both men and horses, were displayed in front of the temples. Codex Florentino

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175

FIG. 27. Cuauhtemoc, who conducted the defense of Tenochtitlan, is received with all the honors of war by Cortes and his consort, Marina. In the upper right Cortes may be seen greeting Cuauhtemoc's wife and family. The legend translated reads: "With this event, the Mexicans were finished." Lienzo de Tlaxcala no longer deal wounding blows did the garrison yield. Cuauhtemoc and his family took to the lake in a canoe, as did many others. He was picked up by one of the Spanish galleys and brought before Cortes, where his dignity and chiefly demeanor received the respectful attention of the Spanish general staff. The request for treasure brought the answer that there was none: it lay under the lake with the Spaniards who were slain the preceding winter in their disastrous flight from the city. Cuauhtemoc then underwent

[Text continues on p. 264.--- Analyst]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175
532
212

FIGS. 28A–28B. The story of the Conquest of Mexico in native characters. In the cartouches are to be seen the symbols One Reed and Two Knife, the Aztec names for the years 1519 and 1520. Under One Reed is a Spaniard from whose horse's foot depends the shield, club and arrows symbolic of war. At the right the bearded Cortes

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

175
532
212 sits in the temple of Tenochtitlan, represented by the cactus. An Indian with the glyph of Montezuma offers a tribute of gold beads. Under Two Knife we find Alvarado massacring the Indians at the great temple and at upper right a comet in the sky. Codex Vaticanus A

[Fig. 28 B]

776 Quetzaltepetl, Chalchiuitl yeme, Tlaloc, Popocatepetl, Itztac
782 tepetl, Poiauhtecatl,[117] and any other mountains of which they had vowed to make representations.

532 And they represented the mountains, they made their 782 images, only in a dough of amaranth seed and maize,[118] made in human form, made to look like men.

755 They gave them teeth of squash seeds; they provided them eyes of fat black beans. With whatever adornment [the mountains] were represented, thus when they made them, they thereupon arrayed them.

[314 And they made papers, and they spattered them with 289] liquid rubber.[119] And they laid these over them as mantles.

And some of these papers, which were spattered with drops of liquid rubber, they hung on a cord, tied and fastened together, so that they were held in a row before the small molded ones [Tepictoni].

They rustled, quivered, and flew in the breeze. Canes of fat, round reeds [held the cord] at both ends; [the canes] were stuck into and supported by the ground. On this were held the rubber-spotted papers.

[415] And a green spotted gourd was split in two and cured. Before [the Tepictoni] they set this, which they called the turquoise cup, for the wine, in which the wine was. Thus they offered [them] wine.

793 And it was the office of the priests alone, who were experienced, to make [the Tepictoni] and set them in place. None 532 of the householders dared make or adorn them.

And on the fifth [day], when they feasted the priests, it was said, they caused them to forget.

782 When the Tepictoni were fashioned, thereupon they held 755 a vigil and made music for them.

During the night, they made offerings four times; they set before the priests, before them who sang the songs for the Tepictoni, round tamales which they gave them.

And four times they offered them food during the night, and they made music for [the Tepictoni].

[198 They whistled with their fingers, they made music for 533] them with shells, with flutes, and with fifes.

Young jesters, in their cups, who cut capers, and amused
[273 people, blew the flutes. They also were offered food.

1163] And on the next day they slew the Tepictoni [images]; they slew them, like sacrificial quail, twisting their necks. Then they gathered up and carried away the Tepictoni figures made of a dough of amaranth-seed and maize to the priests' house, where dwelt the priests.

And he who [caused to be] fashioned the Tepictoni thereupon returned to his guests, where they were entertained.

273 And in the evening, toward nightfall, then all the old 782 people set drinking wine—those already advanced in age, the popocatepetl, itztac tepetl, poiauhtecatl: yeuan in çaçe quetzaltepetl tepetl in quintemoaz in quipiquiz.

Auh in quipipiqoja, in quinintiplatiniz in tetepe, çan tzoalli, quintlacatlaliaia, quintlacatlachieltivia, tlacatlachiztiçaxca:

quintlantiaia aiocuechli, auh in quinjtzelolotiaia aiocutli:
in quemanj yztlatqui in quinixiplatiaia, in quipipiquja çan no inhqui yxic quinchichiouia.

Auh yeuan quichiouia, amatetenjtl, colchachapetrria, colchipiniaia, quiauqueçmeniaia:

auh in coçqui amatetenvitl, tlaolchipinjlli, tlaolchachapetzalli, tlacatiuech quipipiloaia, tlacatiuech quinemetchilpiaia, quinemetchçalouaia, ymjxpan antoc, ic itzacuinçoc in tepicme:

hiçenacatoc pepeqatlacatoc, pepatlantoc, cempilquauitl, necoc, nenecoc, necoccampa tlatlalacticac, tezoxmeticac, yn itech antoc tetenjtl.

Auh tilacaintli, thiztlapantli, thiztitzatzcli: ymixpan mamanca, chalchihuicalli ipan pouia, vetli vnca ca, vetli ic mamanca.

Auh çan iehoan in tlamacazqui, yn jeuaquinh, in machiztequi catca, yn quinchichiouia, in quintlaliaia: aiac çan moiocuiaia, in calla in quinchichiouia.

Auh macujltica in quintlalhujaia, mjtoa: quinmelacaoltiaia in tlamacazqui:

yn o ic tzauhque tepicme, njmaa ic ic quintoçaviia, quinçujcaxia:

in ceiuoal napa in quintlamanjlia, tamalolelli in quinmacaia, quinmanaia ymjxpã, in tlamacazqui, in tepicouiqca:

no napa in quintlamacaia ceiuoal, yeuan quintlapichiliaia, quinmaquiquitiliaia tecuicuilli in quinpichiliaia, yeuan vilacapitzli, cocouitoti, vilacapitzoaia, çan tlapopochti, papaquinj, hauieuj, tlilivitzinj, tecomeltianj, cocolequa, no tlamacaxia.

Auh yn otlatvic njmaa quinmicxia yn tepicme, quinquechcotoua, quinquechcuj, quinquechilacatzoa, çatepan quinacemololoa, cocolcuj, in tepictzalli, quitquj yn calmecac yn vuqa ouqui, tlamacazqui.

Auh in tepiquipj, njmaa ie yc calaquijh yn itlacamotzalhoua, yn jcuoaoua, vncan tzopia, mopiztequa:

auh in ie iouatiuh, in ie tevtlac nimaa ie ic tlaxoua, motlaocuacatlalia in vevetlaca, yn ie chicauaqua, yn otlachi-

117. Gods of the air, of water, and of rain (cf. corresponding Spanish text). Popocatepetl and Itztac tepetl (Iztac cimatl) are mountain-peaks in the Valley of Mexico; Poiauhtecatl is Mt. Orizaba.

118. Made of dough (vno masa), in the Spanish columns; Sobre maniere ja gropuscrlaw Samen der Stachelmelone (Einige Kapitel, p. 27).

119. ". . . unos papeles llenos de gotas de uli, a los cuales papeles llamaban amatetenjtl" (Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 120).

776
●532

1—Huitzilopochtli. 2—Tlaloc. 3—Tezcatlipoca. 4—Tlahuizcalpantecuhtli.

—After Paso y Troncoso

TR 532

—After Paso y Troncoso

5—Quetzalcoatl. 6—Cinteotl. 7—Chicome ocelotl. 8—Tetes innan.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

9—Tlapoltlac teuan. 10—Cinapipiltl. 11—Chalchiuhtli yeua. 12—Tlapoltecuil.

—After Paso y Troncoso

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
● 532

—After Paso y Troncoso

13—Xiuhtecutli. 14—Macuilxochitl or Xochipilli. 15—Omacatl. 16—Ixtlilton.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

17—Opochtli. 18—Xipe totec. 19—Tlacatecolotl. 20—Hapa tecuhtli. —After Paso y Troncoso

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

—After Paso y Troncoso

31—Tzacutzonmil. 32-33—Tepictoton.
37—Chalchiuhtli pow (Chap. II). 38—Tlaloque (Temple of Tlaloc) (Chap. II).

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

[796
467]

[782 755]

—After Paso y Troncoso

29—Tzapotlan tenan (Chap. 9), Chalchihtli yeue (Chap. 11), Chicome ocatl (Chap. 7). 30—Tlapalhuatl—Confusion (Chap. 12). 31—Napa tecutli (Chap. 10). 32—Tepitoton (Chap. 11). 33—Pantitlan (Tepitoton) (Chap. 11). 34—Appendix, Chap. 12. 35—Appendix, Chap. 12.

2: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590)1950
NU7 Aztec NU7

776
532

[782]

—After Peso y Troncoso

36—Appendix [Refutation]. 37—Appendix [Refutation]. 38—Titheranas. Xiuhtecutli. 39—Opochtli.
41—Tlaxcatecutli. 42—Tecuetzumecatl; 43—Tepiome.

Twenty-second Chapter, in which are described the celebration and blood sacrifices which they made in the second month, known as and called Tlacaxipeualiztli.[1]

And this was when the rattle boards were sown[2] there at the Temple of Yopitli. And they, the old men belonging to the Temple of Yopitli,[3] sat singing and rattling their rattle boards until the day was done. Thus they came to spend the day, to celebrate the feast all day, coming to pass the day. Thus the whole day passed.

And [because] flowers were offered, [the feast] was called "The Offering of Flowers"; for all the various flowers which had newly blossomed were first [fruits]. It was the first flowers to appear which were thus given as offerings. None might breathe the scent without first providing an offering. They made or laid offerings of whatever little flowers they saw, which spread out bursting, popping, rustling into bloom—the flowers of spring. Small, little, tiny ones; little stone [flowers], however few, small, and tiny; little wooden ones, they carved and bound together.

And in order to gather the flowers, they all went together to the fields, since some who worked in the fields came there to sell them.

And when this was done, they ate tamales made of wild amaranth seed.[4]

Especially the Coateca, they who belonged to the district of Coatlan, esteemed [these tamales]. They offered them to their god[dess], called Coatl icue or Coatlan tonan.

[For] they placed trust in her; she was their confidante; they depended upon her; she was their support. To her they lifted their voices.

And also at that time were hidden away the human skins[6]—placed aside, abandoned. There at the Temple of Yopitli they were all buried.

Jnjc cempoali omume capitulo, yncã moteneoa yn ilhuitl, yoan in nextlaoaliztli in quichioaia in ipan ic vme metztli: in mitoaia, in moteneoaia, Tlacaxipeualiztli. 796X

Auh in iquac y, aiacachpixolo vmpa iopico: auh ça ichoanti, in calpulueuetque, vmpa pouhque iopico. cujcatoque, aiacachotoque, yc ouetzi cemilhuitl, in tlacemilhuitiltitoque, ic tlalhujquixtitoque, ic tlalhujnextitoque, tlalhuiçultitoque, ihujçulotoque, ic ueuetzi cemilhujtl: [534] yoã xochimanalo ynic mjtoa xochimanalo, ca in ixquich nepapan xochitl, in iancujcan cueponj, yiacatiuitz: yn iiacac vitz xochitl ic tlamanalo, aiac achto quinecuj, intlacamo achto ic tlamanaz, qujuenchioaz, qujuẽmanaz, in çaço tlein xochitotõti quittaia, cuecuepontoc, cuecuepocatoc, tlatlatzcatoc, in tonalxuchitl, hacquj, aquitoton, hacquipipil, hacquitetoton, çan quecizquj, çan quezquitoton, çan quecizquipipil, çan quezquiquauhtoton quicujcujtlalpia, quijlpia. 796X 824 [784] [532]

Auh ynjc xuchitetemoaia, qujcenpanocujtivj in milli, tel cequj quioalnamacaia, in millaca: 796X [432]

auh yn iquac y, quiquaia tzatzapaltamalli: [262]

oc cenca ichoanti quimauiztiliaia in coateca, in coatlan calpulli itech pouja: quitlamanjlia yn inteouh, itoca coatl ycue, coatlan tona:

yn itech tlaquauhtlamati, yn innetemachil, yn itech moquauhiotia, yn inquauhio, yn itech motzatzilia.

Auh çan no iquac coatlatilo, onmotlatia, onmocacoa, yn imenaio tlaca, vmpa iopico onaactiuj:

1. The corresponding Spanish text specifies: ". . . que hacian en el primero dia del segundo mes, que se decia tlacaxipeualizli."
In Chapter 3, this month is correctly named Tlaxipeualiztli.
2. Here sembrarian—"Y en dicen 'se sembraban tamales'" (Garibay: "Relación breve," p. 294). Seler (op. cit., p. 77) has, hier aussäten, "finden statt das Aussäen von der Rassel."
3. "Los ancianos de aquel barrio," according to Sahagún's Spanish text.
4. Cf. Sahagún: Histoire des choses de la Nouvelle-Espagne, p. 82, n. 3: tamapalmamalli—"Pain-bien pour tamapamalli, de tamapali, épine ou herbe piquante, et mamalli, sorte de tamal."
5. Tonalxuchitl: Seler (op. cit., p. 78) uses the term corpulent; Garibay (op. cit., p. 295) has, los yoan mitoaya tonalxuchitl, "y se llamaba, 'se sembraban los yoan'"; the corresponding Spanish of Sahagún reads: "sembraban en algunos tamales."

X 796 702 us men, they were vain, they were only weak words. For in truth thus the women could torment [young men] into war; thus they moved and provoked them; thus the women prodded them into battle.

For we men said:

"Bloody, painful are the words of the women; bloody, heart-rending are the words of the women. Let us be on our way; let us offer ourselves as warriors. Friends, perchance we may attain reward."

X 796 [346] And when [the young girls] went carrying upon their backs the maize god[desses], as they took them to Chicome coatl's temple, [the ears of maize] were made hearts. They became the granary's heart; in the maize-bin they laid them.

And when seed was sown, when it was the time for planting, this they sowed, [which] they had made into seed. They made seed maize of it.

And they made and instituted this feast for Chicome coatl.

● [532] They formed her image like a woman. They said: "Yea, verily, this one is our sustenance"; that is to say, she is truly our flesh, our livelihood; through her we live and are strong. If she [were] not, we should die of hunger.

For he who eateth no tortillas, he then fainteth; he falleth down; he droppeth quickly; there is a twittering as of birds in his ears: darkness descendeth upon him.

X 796 824 243 And it is said, it is this Chicome coatl who maketh all our food—white maize; yellow maize; green maize shoots;[12] black maize;[13] black and brown mixed, and variously hued;[14] large and wide; round and ball-like; slender maize; thin, long maize; speckled red and white maize,[15] which hath blood-red lines and is [as if] painted with blood, then, the coarse, brown maize,[16] which is as if tawny in appearance; popcorn;[17] the after-fruit;[18] double ears; rough ears; and maturing green maize;

toquijchti, ca çanenpanca, ca ça in toneuhcatlatol: ca uel ic qujmontzintopeoaia in cioa iaoc, ic tiolitoneoa, ic tiolcoa, ic tiollo tlacujnia in cioa, in iaoc.

Ca qujttoa, in toquijchti eço tecoco, yn jntlatol cioa, eço teittic acic in cioatlatolli, ca otiiaque, ça otiquijtoque, yn ahtinemizque: aço itla tomaceual tocnjuhtze.

Auh in qujmanatiuj in cicinteteuh, yn oquitquja iteupan chicome coatl, tlaiollotl muchioa: incuezcomaiollo muchioa, cuezcomac contema.

Auh yn iquac totoco, in ie toquizpã, iehoatl qujtocaia qujxinachioaia, qujxinachioa.

Auh injn qujlhujtlaltia, qujlhujchiujlia in chicome coatl:

iuhqujn cioatl qujtlaliaia iziptla. Qujtoaia, ca uel iehoatl in tonacaiutl: iuhq'nma qujtoznequj, ca nel tonacaio, tonenca, ic tiioltinemj, tooapaoaca: intlacamo iehoatl, ca tapizmiquizque.

Ca yn aquin, atle qujqua tlaxcalli, ca njman çotlaoa, vetzi, meciuhtiuetzi, ynacaz, yicaoaca, tlaioalli ipã momana:

yoan mjtoa, ca in iehoatl chicome coatl, ca qujchioa yn isquich tonacaiutl:

in iztac tlaolli, in coztic tlaolli, in xiuhtoctli, yiaujtl, yiauhnenel, iauhcacalqui, tlaolpatlachtli, in totoiontic, in tlaolpicilli, tlaolpitzaoac: in xochicintli, ynjn iuhqujn ezoaoanquj, ezcujcujltic:

njman ice in quappachcintli: iuhqujn quappachtli, itlachieliz, momochicintli, in molquitl, cinmaitl, cintzatzapalli: yoan in xilotl, in cacamotl, in elotl:

---

12. A gloss in the Aztec text of Lib. XI, cap. xiii, of the Florentine Codex defines xinkonetli as "Pan de maye verdes, pequeños y medianos."

13. "Espicas de maye negro" (loc. cit.). Molina (op. cit.) says "maye morado o negro."

14. Sahagún (loc. cit.) defines mimichcalqui as "Espicas de maye por diversos colores."

15. No gloss appears in loc. cit. The Nahuatl text reads, "xochicuetli ixtac tlaolli tlapahuanqui, tlapalnojujqui huecuetzilihqui, huecuetzilihqui, tetecuetzilihqui, mamayauhqui, mamayauhqui, mamalqui ha ixcuitlaxca, mamalquiztlaca."

16. Loc. cit. has "Espicas de maye leonado." In the Robredo edition, Vol. III, p. 182, there is reference to "ciertas mazorcas de maiz que nacen anchas y pequeñas, o leonadas, que en la lengua de llamaban tzatzapalli xilochintli, quappachcintli." A gloss in the Florentine Codex (loc. cit.) says, however, that tzatzapalli are "Espicas de maye que nacen de dos en dos." In Simeón (op. cit.) quappachtli is given as tawny or violet. Molina (op. cit.) has "color leonado, o medio morado." For quappachcintli, Simeón has "maiz gran si brota, que nacen 3 juntos los pequeñuelos provenientes de la lozanía de su (Sah.)."

17. Durán (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 90) defines momochitli as "maiz tostado y reventado," and on fo. 37r of the Florentine Codex, Lib. II, Sahagún writes that it is "maiz tostado . . . que cada grano se revuelve una flor blanquisima."

18. Redrojo de maiz (Molina, op. cit.).

the small ears of maize beside the main ear;[19] the ripened green maize.[20]

Then the beans—white beans, yellow beans, red beans, quail-colored beans;[21] black beans; flesh-colored beans;[22] fat, red beans; wild beans;[23] amaranth; the variety of amaranth call cocoil;[24] fine, red amaranth seed:[25] [common] red amaranth;[26] black amaranth; bright red or chili-red amaranth;[27] fish-amaranth [michinantli or chicalotl];[28] brilliant black amaranth seed;[29] the bird-seed called petzicatl;[30] also chia—white chia, black chia, and wrinkled chia.

All these things, thus mentioned, all these they offered to [the goddess]. When her feast day was celebrated, they formed her image, and laid all before her; the old men of the tribal temple sang for her; they beheaded quail for her.

And her adornment [was thus]: she was anointed all in red—completely red on her arms, her legs, her face. All her paper crown was covered completely with red ochre; her embroidered shirt also was red; her skirt was the color of ripe fruit. She had a chief's shield, painted with designs and embellished in red. She carried in either hand her double ear of maize.

Thus ended the festival of Uei toçoztli, and thus ended and passed the vigil songs. And then the winding dance, the dance with song, began. This ended at the time of [the feast of] Toxcatl.

njman ichoatl in etl, yn iztac etl, ecoztli, echichilli, çoletl, tliletl, aquijletl, aiecotli, quavecoc, ozuhtli, cocotl, tlapalhoazuhtli, xochioazuhtli, tliloazuhtli, teuoazuhtli, anoço chichiloazuhtli, mjchioazuhtli, chicalotl, tẹtzcaoazuhtli, petzicatl:

no yoan in chien, iztac chien, tliltic chien, chiantzotzol.

Jn izquich y, iuh qujtoa, ca moch ichoatl, qujtemaca: in iquac ilhujuh, qujtlacatilia, muchi ixpan qujmanaia, qujcujcatia in veuetque, calpuleque: qujtlacotonjlia.

Auh yn jnechichioal motlaoçaia, muchi tlauhio, centlauhio, yn jmac, yn icxic, yn jaco: muchi tlacemaquilli, tlaujtl yn jamacal yn ivipil tlamachio, no tlauhio, yn icue cacamoliuhquj, tlatolchimali cujlolli, tlauhpoiaoac, ycinma nenecoccampa qujtqujtica.

ic ontlamj, in vey toçoztli: yoan ic vntlamj ic qujça, in toçozcujcatl. Auh iquac vmpeoa in necololo, cujcoanolo: vmpa vntlami, yn ipan tozcatl.

796X
824
243
796X
241
826

796X

796X
532

796X

19. Given in the Florentine Codex (loc. cit.): "Mazorquillas de maiz que son hijas de las mazorcas." Sandoval (op. cit.) has "pasó lo de maíz que parece á el de l'épi principal."

20. Orozco y Berra, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 314, has as follows: "[Male] De maíces hasta que está en pero crecido, se llama . . . Xilotl, jilote, la mazorca de maíz tierna y por cocer. Elotl, elote, la mazorca tierna cocepar con los granos cocidos. . . . Cuatli, cuatli, el maíz seco en mazorca: ya desgranado tlaxilli, tlaxilli, tlaxilli. . . . Olotl, olote, el corazón de la mazorca. Elotlhuaxi, elotepanochtli—las hojas que la cubrieron."

21. In loc. cit., Sahagún has "Frisoles pintados de color de codorniz." See also Rubrecht ed. of the Historia, Vol. III, p. 343.

22. Given in Florentine Codex, loc. cit.: "Frisoles de color encarnado."

23. Cf. Rubrecht ed. of the Historia, Vol. III, p. 232: "Hay una cosa que se llama ciuxtl; la hierba de esta cosa llámase quauxuxu; y también ciuxtl. Esta hierba hace unas hojas que son como frisoles grandes, y que frisoles silvestres."

24. "Varias hierbas que son como arroyos o cenizos de España"—gloss, Florentine Codex, loc. cit.

25. "Una mazorca diestra blanca colorada fina" (loc. cit.) Clark (op.cit., Vol. I, p. 61) has Pardoxa (sandbl) Pardoxa ahuacuo L. Par.

26. "Una mazorca diestra blanca colorada" (Florentine Codex, loc. cit.).

27. Same as see sandbl—"Una mazorca de blanca muy colorada y muy buena" (loc. cit.).

28. "Blanca o semilla delles como huauzo de pescado"; same as chicalotl—Mitchinantli: como huauzo chicalotl (loc. cit.).

29. "Una blanca muy semilla es muy negra" (loc. cit.). 30. "Una pavesa muy semilla quanto las gallinas [sic]" (loc. cit.) opochtli, here at the Temple of Uitznauac, in the tribal district. They placed it on the serpent bench.

This serpent bench was hewn of wood, to represent serpents; four sides carried the tails; four sides carried their heads.

They covered [Uitzilopochtli's] mesquite wood framework with fish amaranth dough; for his figure was always hewn of mesquite wood, which they covered.

Then they placed upon him his raiment; they put on him his sleeveless jacket, on which human bones were painted.

And over it they laid a mantle, his cape of maguey fiber, like a network cape.

And they fitted on his paper crown, adorned with feathers, called anecuiotl. On his feather headdress stood a flint knife, also made of feathers, half of it being blood-colored.

Then they arrayed him in a godly, costly cape, made, embellished, and designed all in precious colored feathers, with the red eye border, all thus edged with [the feathers of] the red spoonbill. And in the center lay a great golden disc.

And his bones were made of fish amaranth dough, shaped like cylinders. They called them teomimilli. They piled them before [Uitzilopochtli's figure], until they were hip high.

And the cape which covered them, and spread before them, was designed with skulls, with the palms of hands, with hip bones, ribs, legs, the lower arm bones, and with the outlines of feet. Thus was it painted.

And this cape was named tlaquaquallo.

And yet one more thing they caused to be spread before him: they cast down what was named the sacred roll. In this form it was named his breech clout.

And this was a paper, white paper and not yellow paper,[13] a finger thick, a fathom wide, and twenty fathoms long.

With ceremonial arrows, arrows hardened in fire, they supported it; they were made only that they might carry [the paper]; that his breech clout might be carried.

In three places were they plumed, with white turkey feathers: first on the point, second on the shaft, and third on the end.

motlacatlalia, in Vitzilopochtli: vncan in vitznaoac, teucalco, ycalpulco: coatlapechco contlalia:

ynjn coatlapechtli, quauitl in tlaxixintli, iuhqujn cocoa, naujntin in motzinnamjctoque: nauhcampa caca yn jntzontecon:

mjchioauhtzoalli, ynjc qujpepechoaia, yn jmizqujo, ca mizqujquauitl, in tlaxintli, yn ixiptla muchipa catca, yn oqujpepechoque:

njman ie ic qujmaimaca yn jtlatq': conaquja yn jxicol, tlacoaquallo, ynic tlacujlolli:

yoan panj cononoloa, panj conquentia, ytzitzicaztilma: iuhqujn cuechintli:

yoan conaquja yamacal, yujtica tlachioalli, motocaiotia anecuiotl: hivitzoncal, icpac icac tecpatl, çan no hiujtl ic tlachioalli eztlapanqui:

njman conquetia teuquemjtl tlaçotlanquj: muchi tlaçoiujtl ynic tlachiuhtli, ynic tlaiecchioalli, ynjc tlacujlolli, ynic tlatenchilnaoaiotilli, yn jten, çan moch tlauhquechol: auh yn jnepantla manj, cuztic teucujtlacomalli.

Auh yn jomjio muchioaia, mjchioauhtzoalli, mjmiltic, motocaiotiaia teumjmjlli: qujtetema ixpan veca acitoc, injc vecapan cenquappantli.

Auh yn tilmatli ic tlapachiuhtoc, yn jixco çouhtoca, tlacujlolli, tzontecomatl, macpalli, quezzepolli, omjcicujlli, tlanitztli, matzotzopaztli, xocpalli, ynic tlacujlolli catca.

Auh ynjn tilmatli, motocaiotiaia tlacoaqualo:

yoan oc no centlamantli, ixpan contequjlia, ipan conteca in teumjmjlli itoca, iuh mjtoa ymaxtli:

Auh ynjn amatl catca quaoamatl, amo texamatl: ynic tilaoac cenmapilli: auh ynjc patlaoac cenmatl: auh ynjc vijac cempoálmatl:

teumjtl, tlatzontectli, tlacochtli ynjc qujnapaloa: çan ic muchioaia injc qujnapaloaque, ynjc monapaloa ymaxtli:

excan in tlapotonjlli catca, iztac totoliujtica, injc cecnj, vel yiacac, ynjc vccan ytlaxichchocan, ynjc excan, vncan yn jmamaçocan:

796 778 [352 532] [824] [292] [293 237] [237] [532] [289 292] [411] [411 237]

13. Cf. V. W. Von Hagen: The Aztec and Maya Paper Makers (New York: J. J. Augustin, 1944), pp. 68, 72 esp. In the Rahmelo edition of Sahagún, Vol. V, p. 231, a note by Seler defines quauhtamatl as "la materia manufacturada por la capa de liber de algunos árboles de género ficus. Sirvió de papel para las pinturas o los libros, y de tela para hacer las adornos, vestidos y otros objetos que el culto de los dioses requería."

delos cantares delos dioses. fo. 143. 532 415 534 292

Cochina, cochina, [illegible] olonjcanj, iccuicatl, mochinay ico, oaico ylio, yia, ya.

¶ Xippe icuic, itoc ioualla uania.

Ioalli tlauana, iztlacan, cimone necquia xiaqui mylatia temaj tlaquenili, xicmoquenti quetlaxia.

Notzuhca chalchimmana tlaca pana itzmoia, oiquetzallaueuet, ay quichalxiuiocatl nechtlaiquim catlhquetl ortia.

Manjiaxia, mjia, mjia pelitiz mjoatzin, achalmiuhtla xoiollo, atecuujtlatl necoiantlas xeiolce uizquitlacatl achtequeti tlaqua vaia otlacatquj iautlatoa quetl ortia.

Notzuhca centlaco xaicailiuiz co noa vioatzin nictepeiocpa mjs valitia motzuhca, uizquintla catl achtequetl tlaquauia cha catquj iautlatoaquetl ortia.

¶ Chicomecoatl icuic.

Chicomolotzin, xaia mechaa,

Page from Florentine Codex (Appendix: Song of Xipe)

[p. 102 c]

X796
532
714
411
292

[415]

—After Paso y Troncoso

1-7. Tlacaxipeualiztli (Chapter 21)

[p. 102 D]

796x
532
[346]

[415]

—After Paso y Troncoso

8-12. Tlacaxipeualiztli (Chapter 22)
13-14. Uei tōçoztli (Chapter 23)

[p. 102 E]

*796
● 532
292

[534]

—After Paso y Troncoso

15.21. Teocatl (Chapter 24)

[p. 102 F]

796x
532
292
[501]

—After Paso y Troncoso

22-23. Etzalqualiztli (Chapter 25)
24-25. Tecuilhuitontli (Chapter 26)
26-28. Uei tecuilhuitl (Chapter 27)
29. Tlaxochimaco (Chapter 28)

[p. 102 G]

X796
532
291

[415]

[415]

—After Paso y Troncoso

30. Ochpaniztli (Chapter 30)
31-32. Panquetzaliztli (Chapter 34)
33. Tititi (Chpter 36)
34. Izcalli (Chapter 37)
35-36. Ixcoçauhqui (Chapter 38)

[p. 102 H]

3: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1951 NU7 Aztec NU7

786 A
532
291
292

[515]

—After Paso y Troncoso

37-44. Ixcoçauhqui (Chapter 38)

[p. 102 I]

796
532
291

[415]

[854]

[411]

48.49. Iacoçauhqui (Chapter 38)
50. Macuilcalli (Appendix)
51. Calpulli (Appendix)

[p. 102 J]

796x
532
[41]

Alex Pérez Fernández

52. Tlamictiliztli (Appendix)
53. Tlachpanaliztli (Appendix)
54. Tlauauanaliztli (Appendix)
55. Çacapan nemanaliztli (Appendix)
56. Neçacapechtemaliztli (Appendix)
57. Tlatica tlauiliztli (Appendix)
58. Mexicátl teuhoatzin (Appendix)

[p. 102 K]

K 796
●532

—Alper Pulu & Troncoso

59. Tepan teuhoatzin (Appendix)
60. Tlenamacalizuli (Appendix)
61. Iouallapializtli (Appendix)
62-63. Song of Xipe (Appendix)
64. Song of Chicome coatl (Appendix)
65. Song of the Totochtin (Appendix)
66. Song of Atlaua (Appendix)

[p. 102 L]

The Iztac Ciuatl Ciuaquacuilli.

793 The Iztac ciuatl ciuaquacuilli also kept watch there and took care of the [Temple of] Atenchicalcan; and she was in charge of the sweeping and the laying of fires [there]. And any who made supplications [to the goddess] spoke to the Iztac ciuatl ciuaquacuilli. This one determined all that was done here at [the Temple of] Atenchicalcan.

Cihoaquacujlli iztac cihoatl.

In cihoaquacujlli iztac cihoatl çã no vmpa tlapiaia, vmpa tlamocujtlavjaia in atenchicalcan yoan ipan tlatovaia in tlachpanaliztlj in tletlaliliztli, yoan in aqujn vmpa monetoltiaia, iehoatl conilhujaia in cihoaquacujlli iztac cihoatl, muchi iehoatl quitzontequja in tlein vncan muchivaia atenchicalcã.

The Keeper of the God Ixcoçauhqui, at Tzonmolco.

The duties of the Keeper of the God Ixcoçauhqui, at Tzonmolco, [concerned] the wood of the god Xiuhtecutli. He caused it to be cried abroad that it be gathered in the forests. And those who gathered it were only those youths whose right it was [to gather it]. And when they had gathered the wood of the god Xiuhtecutli, they piled it up in the priests' dwelling at Tzonmolco.

Iscoçauhquj tzõmvlco teuhoa.

In jscoçauhquj tzõmulco teuhoa itequjuh catca, in xjuhtecuquavitl, qujtzatziliaia injc mocujtiuh quauhtla, auh in concuja çan iehoantin in telpupuchtin intequjuh catca, auh in oqujcujto xiuhtequavitl, vmpa conquetzaia in tzõmulco calmecac.

Tlaçolquacuilli.

The Tlaçolquacuilli was charged that he should guard and take care of [the Temple of] Mecatlan. And he put on his sleeveless jacket, and he had his gourd for tobacco. Much did he venerate the Temple here at Mecatlan. None might urinate here; and if anyone did urinate here, then they seized him and brought him within. There they punished him and drew blood from him.

[514 688]

Tlaçolquacujlli.

In tlaçolquacujlli, itequjuh catca, vncan tlapiaia, vncan tlamocujtlavjaia in mecatlan, auh in qujmaqujaia, iziçol yietecõton ictinemj, cenca tlamavizotiaia in teupan, in vncan mecatlã, aiac vncan maxixaia, auh in aqujn vncan omaxix, njman qujtzitzqujaia, qujcalaqujaia calitic, vmpa quitlatzacujltiaia qujçoçnia.

The Keeper of the God at Tecpantzinco.

The Keeper of the God at Tecpantzinco guarded and cared for [the Temple of] Tecpantzinco. And his task was to have charge of the offerings. He caused it to be cried abroad that offerings be made here at [the Temple of] Tecpantzinco.

Tecpantzinco teuhoa.

In tecpantzinco teuhoa, vncã tlapiaia, tlamocujtlavjaia in tecpãtzinco, yoan itequjuh catca ipan tlatovaia in ventli qujtzatzilitiia injc tlamanaloz vncan tecpãtzinco.

Epcoaquacuilli Tepictoton.

793 The Epcoaquacuilli tepictoton was concerned with the songs. When anyone molded figures [of the mountain gods], he consulted with him that he

532

Epcoaquacujlli tepictotõ.

In Epcoaquacujlli tepictoton ipã tlatovaia in cujcatl, iquac in aqujn tepiquiz iehoatl iehoatl conjlhujaia in qujmisquetzaz, qujnnavatiz in cujcanjme, might provide the singers and make them sound well, when they went to sing in the home of him who molded figures [of the mountain gods]. Verily, this one, the Epcoaquacuilli tepictoton, passed judgment upon [the songs].

injc qujcativi in jchan in aqujn tepiquiz, vel ichoatl qujtzontequja in Epcoaquacujlli tepictoton. 793 [532]

The Keeper of the God at the Temple of Ixtlilton.

The Keeper of the God at the Temple of Ixtlilton was upon [the pyramid], and his charge was that he caused it to be cried abroad that offerings [should be made]. When the little children, whether men[-children] or women[-children, first] began to talk, they went carrying their offerings of copal [incense], or flowers, or whatever sorts of gifts were made. Each of [these] things they bore with them.

Ixtlilco teuhoa.

In jxtlilco teuhoa ipan jcaca, ipan tlatovaia, qujtzatziliaia in ventli injc motenmamalia pipiltzitzinti in [203] in aço oqujchţin, in anoço cihoa qujitquitivi in jnven in copalli, in anoço suchitl in ie isqujch ventli muchivaia cecentlamantli in qujtquja.

The Keeper of the God Xochipilli at Aticpac.

The Keeper of the God Xochipilli, at [the Temple of] Aticpac, had encharged to him [her who was arrayed in the likeness of the Goddess] Aticpac calqui ciuatl, [and that] they should collect the paper, the copal [incense], the [liquid] rubber which Aticpac calqui ciuatl needed when she died. And they flayed her, and the fire-priest put on her skin and went forth holding a [live] quail in his teeth, which went dangling from his mouth.

Aticpac teuhoatzin xochipilli.

In aticpac teuhoatzin xochipilli ipã tlatovaia, in aticpac calquj cihoatl qujnechicovaia in amatl, in copalli, in vlli, in jtech monequja aticpac calquj cihoatl in iquac mjquja, auh qujxipehoaia in jiehoaio cõmaqujaia tlenamacac, yoan qujtlanquativja çolin icamac pilcatiuh.

The Keeper of the God Opochtli, at Atlixeliuhqui.

The Keeper of the God Opochtli at Atlixeliuhqui was charged with collecting the adornment, the paper, the copal [incense], the [liquid] rubber, and the foam sandals, the sleeveless jacket, the bells, the sweet-smelling herbs, the chalk, the black stain, and the heron feather headdress and the tousled hair which [he who was arrayed like] Opochtli would need when he died upon the feast of Tepeilhuitl.

Atlixeliuhquj teuhoa obuchtli.

In atlixeliuhquj teuhoa obuchtli, ipan tlatovaia, qujnechicovaia in jnechichival, in amatl, in copalli, in vlli, yoan in poçolcactli, in xicolli, in tzitzilli, in jiauhtli, in tiçatl, in jaiapalli, yoan aztatzõdli, papatli, in jtech monequja obuchtli in jquac miquja ipan tepeilhujtl.

The Keeper of the God Xipe, at Iopico.

The Keeper of the God Xipe, at Iopico, took care, when that one [arrayed in the likeness of the god Tequixtzin] died, of the paper, the copal [incense], Xippe iopico teuhoa.

In xippe iopico teuhoa qujmocujtlavjaia, in ipan mjquja in ichoatl tequjxtzin, in amatl, in copalli, yoan in poçolcactli, in tlahujtl, auh injc mopotonjaia ie-

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

773
539
796 532

—After Paso y Troncoso

1. Birth of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
2. Defeat of the Centzonuitznaua (Chapter I)
3. Uitzilopochtli worshiped (Chapter I)
4. Ceremonial sprinkling of impersonator of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
5. Washing after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)
6. Feasting after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)

[p. 36(C)]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

539
796
●532
782

—After Paso y Troncoso

7. Praying to Tezcatlipoca (Chapter II)
8. Fir branches on a roadside shrine (Chapter II)
9. Quetzalcoatl performing a penance (Chapter III)
10. Quetzalcoatl bathing at midnight (Chapter III)
11. The old man offering the potion to Quetzalcoatl (Chapter IV)
12. Dragging the body of the sorcerer (Chapter IX)

[p. 36 (D)]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

539
532
764

—After Paso y Troncoso

13. Roasting maize attracting the Toltecs (Chapter XI)
14. Quetzalcoatl in a drunken sleep (Chapter XIII)
15. Preparation of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
16. Burning of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
17. Conference with masters of the youths, upon birth of a child (Appendix, Chapter IV)
18. Taking children to the young men's house (Appendix, Chapter V)
19. Tending fires in the song house (Appendix, Chapter V)

[P. 36(E)]

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
532

—After Paso y Troncoso

1. Sun
2. Moon
3. The rabbit in the moon
4. Eclipse of the moon
5. Comet
6. Comet's tail
7. Stars
8. The Winds
9-10. Lightning
11. Clouds
12. Rainbow

[p. 38 (b)]

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821
532
372
796
782

—After Paso y Troncoso

13. Ice, snow, and hail
14. Storing food against famine
15. Delivering children into bondage
16. Boring new fire on the breast of a sacrificial victim
17. New fire in the temples
18. New fire taken to homes
19. Breaking and throwing away household goods at the end of the fifty-two-year cycle

[p. 38 (E)]

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Astec NU7

821
532

—After Paso y Troncoso

21. Sun, moon, and stars, and other natural phenomena, from Primeros Memoriales, Cap. 2.

1. Sun
2. Moon
3. Eclipse of sun
4. Eclipse of moon
5. Fire drill
6. Fire drill
7. Venus
8-9. Comet
10. Comet's tail
11. S-shaped stars
12. Scorpion

[p. 38 (H)]

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Astec NU7

805
821
532

—After Paso y Troncoso

22. Natural Phenomena and year signs, from Primeros Memoriales, cap. 2

13. Wind
14. Lightning bolt
15. Rain
16. Rainbow
17. Frost
18. Cloud
19. Snow
20. Hail

Year signs, beginning at top
One Rabbit
Two Reed
Three Flint Knife
Four House

[p. 38(I)]

643 Ninth Chapter, in which is told that with which the rulers were arrayed when they danced.

Injc chicunnuj capítulo vncan moteneoa injn nechchioaia in tlatoque in jcoac maceoaia.

301 The [head] band with [two] quetzal feather[1] tassels set off with gold, with which they bound their [237] hair;

Quetzallalpilonj, coztic teocujtlaio injc qujlpiaia, intzon

A quetzal feather crest device set off with gold, which he bore upon his back;

quetzalpatzactli, coztic teocujtlaio in qujmama

[237] A finely wrought headdress of red spoonbill[2] feathers, with flaring quetzal feathers, and with it a drum [covered] with gold—a device which he bore upon his back as he danced;

tlauhquetzoltzontlj tlaçotlanquj, quetzalli icuecuetlacacaio, iujcal ueuetl coztic teocujtlaio, in tlaujztli in qujmama mjtotia

A golden arm band;[3]

teucujtlamatemecatl, coztic

Golden ear plugs, which he inserted [in the lobes of his ears];

teocujtlanacochtli coztic in caquja

[281] A wrist band of cured leather, on which was a large, round, green stone or a fine turquoise which [314] he placed on his wrist; [it was] treated with Peru balsam, so that it gleamed; matzopetztli in cuetlaxtli, vej chalchiujtl ololiuhquj, anoço vej teuxiujtl ipan ca in jmaquechtlan qujlalia ujtzilonitica injc tlachiuhtli injc tlapetzolli

A green stone lip plug set in gold;

chalchiuhtentetl coztic teucujtlatica callo,

[237] A long, white labret of clear crystal, shot through with blue cotinga[4] feathers, in a gold setting, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; iztac teçacatl, xiuhtototica tlamjntli, iztac teujlotl in jntenco caquja, coztic teucujtlatl in jcallo.

[317] A long, yellow labret of amber in a gold setting;

Coztic teçacatl, in apoçonalli teucujtlatica tlacallotilli,

643 A long, curved, green stone labret, fitted at the base in a gold setting; chalchiuhteçacanecujlli, coztic teucujtlatl ic tlatzincallotilli, 301 A gold lip pendant;

teucujtlatempilolli coztic

●532 A gold lip pendant in the form of a pelican;[5]

atototempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A gold lip pendant in the form of an eagle;[6]

quauhtempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A gold lip pendant in the form of a fire serpent;

xiuhcoatempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A gold lip pendant in the form of a boating pole;

aujctempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A disc-shaped lip plug of fine turquoise in a gold setting;[7] temalacatentetl teuxiujtl coztic teucujtlatl icallo,

A curved, green stone lip plug in a gold setting;

chalchiuhtencololli, coztic teucujtlatl icallo,

A green stone lip plug in the form of an eagle, fitted at the base in a gold setting;

chalchiuhquauhtentetl, coztic teucujtlatl itzincallo,

1. Clark, op. cit., II, p. 112, identifies quetzalbird as Pharomacrus mocinno mocinno.
2. Platalea ajaja L. (Seler, op. cit., p. 124).
3. One ends is described more fully in Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 67.
4. Clark, op. cit., p. 134, identifies blue cotinga as Cotinga amabilis.
5. Cf. Seler, op. cit., p. 182.
6. Quauhtzontli: quauh could mean warrior; elsewhere we always give preference to the meaning eagle.
7. After this phrase, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has chalchiuhtencolonecuetl coztic teucujtlatl yeallo—a large, circular lip plug of green stone in a gold setting.

643 301 [532]

A lip pendant of gold, in the form of a broad-leafed water plant; — apatlactempilolli, coztic teucujtlatl,

A crescent-shaped lip pendant of gold; — metztempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A green stone nose rod; — chalchiuhiacamjtl,

A fine turquoise nose rod; — teuxiuhiacamjtl,

A necklace of round, green stones, joined and strung together; — chalchiuhconcatl ololiuhquj, tlacenquixtilli, tlacecotl,

A necklace of radiating golden pendants with a thin, green stone [disc] set in their midst;[8] — coztic teucujtlachaiaoac cozcatl, chalchiuhtlacanaoalli iitic manj,

A finely wrought feather arm band with various [other] costly feathers and with gold; — quetzalmachoncotl tlaçotlanquj nepapan tlaçoiujtica, ioan coztic teucujtlaio,

[237]

A golden band for the calf of the leg; — coztic teucujtlacotzeoatl,

A quetzal feather banner held in the hand; — quetzalmacpanjtl,

A quetzal bird as headdress; — quetzaltotoicpacxuchitl,

Quetzal feather horns; — quetzalquaquaujtl,

A quetzal feather fan [set] with gold; — quetzalecaceoaztli coztic teucujtlaio

A turquoise [mosaic] wrist band with a conical extension; — xiuhmacopilli,

A necklace of gold [beads] and small sea shells; — coztic teucujtlachipulcozcatl,

A necklace of gold [beads] and snail shells; — teucujtlacoztic acuechcozcatl,

643 [276 416]

Flowers and tobacco, [which were] exclusively the ruler's; a mirror in which the ruler looked at himself when he adorned himself. All these were the charge of the artisans[9] when the ruler danced. — xuchitl, ietl, ineiscaujl tlatoanj, tezcatl injc motta tlatoanj, injc muchichioa amanteca impial, in isqujch imaçeoaia tlatoanj,

[298 281]

Sandals of ocelot skin; cured leather sandals with embroidery—embroidered sandals. — oçeloeoacactli, cuetlaxcactli tlamachio, tlamachcactli,

[534]

[There were] two-toned drums and supports for two-toned drums, ground drums, golden turtle shells, and golden bells; — teponaztli, teponaztzatzaztli, veuetl aiacachtli coztic teucujtlatl, tetzilacatl coztic teucujtlatl,

533

Singers, a dancer, a player of two-toned drums and one of ground drums, a drum beater, a singer who intoned the chant. — cujcanjme, mjtotianj, teponaçoanj, ueuetzonanj, tlatzotzonquj, cujcaitoanj,

415

[There were] chests for the devices, in which were kept all which have been described: a large basket-case in which were kept the green stone lip plugs, the gold ear plugs, the golden necklaces, the wigs, the masks, the golden reed serpent. — tlaujzpetlacalli, in vncan mopiaia, in ixqujch omjto. Veuej toptanatli, in vncan mopia, in chalchiuhtentetl, in teucujtlanacochtli, in teucujtlacozcatl, tzoncalli, xaiacatl, teucujtlaxcaçoatl coztic teucujtlatl,

351

There were flowering trees, which were to be seen in the palace courtyard; for it was the ruler who was to dance. — xuchiquaujtl momanaia, in tecpan itoalco, inezca catca: ca maçeoaz in tlatoanj,

415 314 534

[There were] a basket for the mirror, a basket for the comb; and a rubber hammer with which the two-toned drum was sounded. — tezcatanatli, tziquaoaztanatli, olmaitl injc moztzona teponaztli.

---

8. Cf. Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, II, p. 542; also corresponding Spanish text.
9. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., II, pp. 399ff., on etymology of amanteca.

175
532
643
292

[787]

[787]

—After Paso y Troncoso

Rulers of Tenochtitlan. 1. Acamapichtli. 2. Uitzilinitl. 3. Chimalpopoca. 4. Itzcoatl. 5. Moctezuma the Elder. 6. Axayacatl. 7. Tiçoc. 8. Auitzotl. 9. Moctezuma the Younger. 12. Quauhtemoc. 13. Don Andrés Motelchiuh. 14. Don Pablo Xochiquen. 15. Don Diego Uanitl. 16. Don Diego Teuctzquitl. 17. Don Cristóbal Cecepatic. (Chapter 1.)

10, 11. Omens observed in Tenochtitlan (Chapter 1).

Rulers of Tlatelulco. 18. Quauapitzauac. 19. Tlacatecatl. 20. Quauhtlatoa. 21. Moquihuixth. 22. Don Pablo Temilo. 23. Don Martin Ecatl. 24. Don Juan Auelitoc. 25. Don Martín Tlacatecatl. 26. Don Diego Uitzauauhilotlac. 27. Don Alonso Quauhnochtli. (Chapter 2.)

[p. 36(c)]

643
175
532
292
[787]

[787]

—After Paso y Troncoso

Rulers of Tezcoco. 28. Thalecatzin. 29. Techotlalatzin. 30. Ixtlilxochitl. 31. Neçauhcoyotzin. 32. Neçaualpilli. 33. Cacamatzin. 35. Coanacochtzin. 36. Tecuichtzin. 37. Ixtlilxochitl. 38. Yoyontzin. 39. Tetlauaçtzquin. 40. Don Antonio Tlaxcoltzin. 41. Don Hernando Pimentel. (Chapter 3.)

33. Omens observed in Tezcoco (Chapter 3).

Rulers of Uexotla. 42. Maçatzin tecuhtli. 43. Tochin tecuhtli. 44. Ayotzin tecuhtli. 45. Quatlauice tecuhtli. 46. Teteçpochtzin. 47. Yoyotzin tecuhtli. 48. Xihuitzin tecuhtli. 49. Itlacauhtzin. 50. Tlaçolyauhtzin. 51. Tzontemoctzin. 52. Cuitlauatzin. 53. Tzapiocatzin. 54. Cuitlauatzin. (Chapter 4.)

55. Tollan (Chapter 5).

Omens observed in Tenochtitlan. 56. Burning temple. 57. Comet. 58. Inundation. 59. Cuacuauhtl weeping. 60. Bird with mirror on its head. (Chapter 6.)

[p. 36(E)]
[p. 36(D) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[75
782
732]

[524]

[231]

[533
524
732]

[695
696]

[696]

[533
534]

[534-535]

[231]

—After Paso y Troncoso

Omens (continued). 61. Two-headed men (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards landing on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of patolli (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatlan (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(G)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

[291
302]

[643
714]

[283
286]

[701
714
793
411]

[723]

—After Paso y Troncoso

72-74. Women's array—ueipilli, cuaitl (Chapter 15). 75. Weaving and spinning equipment (Chapter 16). 76. Laying plans for war (Chapter 17). 77. The ruler's war array (Chapter 17). 78. Priests and warriors in battle array (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(I)]

[p. 36(H) is blank]

●532

[714
724
411]

[727
702]

[693]

[726
714
411]

[693]

[695]

—Obry Pano y Tronsuo

79. Warriors in battle array (Chapter 17). 80. Conquest of a city (Chapter 17). 81. Sacrifice of a war captive (Chapter 17). 82-84. Judges (Chapter 17). 85. A trial (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(K)]

[p. 36(J) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954
NU7 Astec NU7

532
[687]
[625]

[689]
[526]

[533
534]
[735]

[482]

—After Pozo y Tequeruco

a86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a complete musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies (Chapter 17). 91. The game tlachtli (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

[This caption is in error, - Rundpst]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[796
643]

[366
262]
415

[643 701]
431

—After Paso y Troncoso

93, 94. Ceremonies on election of a new ruler (Chapter 19). 95, 96. Goods displayed in the market place (Chapter 19). 97-100. Gifts of the ruler to successful warriors (Chapters 20 and 21).

[p. 36(O)]

[p. 36(N) is blank]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532

532 787

—After Paso y Troncoso

1. Landing of the Spaniards (preceding text). 2. Spaniards marching (preceding text). 3. Spaniards assaulting a temple in Mexico (Chapter 1). 4. First omen: the ranger of fire (Chapter 1). 5. Second omen: burning of Temple of Huitzilopochtli (Chapter 1). 6. Third omen: burning of Temple of Xiuhtecutli (Chapter 1). 7. Fourth omen: comet in three parts (Chapter 1).

[p. 44(C)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
[187]

—After Paso y Troncoso

8. Sixth omen: the weeping woman (Chapter 1). 9. Seventh omen: the ashen bird with a mirror (Chapter 1). 10. Eighth omen: two-headed men (Chapter 1). 11. Towards present Spaniards' gift to Moctezuma (Chapter 2). 12. Moctezuma's messengers present gifts to Cortés (Chapter 5). 13. Spaniards bind Moctezuma's messengers (Chapter 5). 14. Spaniards fire guns and terrify the messengers (Chapter 5). 15. Spaniards give food to Moctezuma's messengers (Chapter 5). 16. Moctezuma's messengers return to the mainland (Chapter 6). 17. Captives are slain before Moctezuma's messengers (Chapter 6). 18. Spaniards in war array (Chapter 7). 19. Moctezuma hears description of the Spaniards (Chapter 7).

[p. 44(D)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

●532
648
291
[431]

—After Paso y Troncoso

20. Moctezuma's messengers offer food to the Spaniards (Chapter 8). 21. Moctezuma and the Mexicans weep on hearing of the power of the Spaniards (Chapter 9). 22. Marina interprets for Cortés (Chapter 9). 23. Moctezuma debates whether to flee (Chapter 9). 24. Spaniards are welcomed in Tlaxcalla (Chapter 11). 25. Moctezuma's emissaries meet the Spaniards between Iztaccipuztl and Popocatepetl (Chapter 12). 26. Moctezuma's emissaries return to tell of the meeting with the Spaniards (Chapter 12). 27. Moctezuma's soothsayers meet the drunkard (Chapter 13). 28. Burning Mexican temples shown by the drunkard (Chapter 13).

[p. 44(E)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

●532
[726]
[728]

—After Paso y Troncoso

29. The road to Tenochtitlan is sown with magney plants (Chapter 14). 30. Spaniards receive the submission of two of the Four Lords (Chapter 14). 31-36. Spaniards on the march from Ixtapalapan to Tenochtitlan (Chapter 15).

[p.44(F)]

● 532

— Ajtar Pano y Troncoso

37-41. Spaniards on the march from Itztapalapan to Tenochtitlan (Chapter 15).

[p.44(G)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

● 532

[415
482
262]

[302]

[302]

—Ajuar Paso y Treurcos

44. Marina interprets for the Spaniards when Moctezuma meets Cortés (Chapter 16). 45, 46. Spaniards take Moctezuma with them as they enter the great palace (Chapter 17). 47. Supplies demanded by the Spaniards (Chapter 17). 48. Moctezuma leads Cortés to the treasure (Chapter 17). 49, 50. Spaniards and allies loot the treasure house (Chapter 17). 51. Marina addresses Mexican noblemen (Chapter 19). 52. Mexicans brave supplies for the Spaniards (Chapter 18).

[p. 44(H)]

●532

[651
301
292]

[778 346]

—After Paso y Troncoso

53. Tribute left for the Spaniards (Chapter 18). 54. Alvarado asks to see the Feast of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19). 55, 56. Spaniards see preparations for the Feast of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19). 57, 58. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 19).

[p. 44(I)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
778

—After Paso y Troncoso

59-64. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochli (Chapter 19).

[p. 44(J)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
[778]

[341]

—After Paso y Troncoso

65. Preparation of the image of Uitzilopochli (Chapter 19). 66-70. Massacre of participants in the Feast of Uitzilopochli (Chapter 20). 71. The massacre is announced to the Mexicans (Chapter 20). 72. War breaks out between the Spaniards and the Mexicans (Chapter 21).

[p.44(K)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648

[714]

[441
482]

—After Paso y Troncoso

73, 75. War breaks out between the Spaniards and the Mexicans (Chapter 21). 74. Moctezuma is put in irons (Chapter 21). 76. Itzquauhtzin addresses the Mexicans (Chapter 21). 77. Mexicans are seen carrying furs into the palace (Chapter 21). 78. Ornamental design from Book XII. 79. Cortés arrives in Tenochtitlan with more Spaniards and allies (Chapter 22).

[p. 44 (L)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648

—After Paso y Troncoso

80-82. Cortés arrives in Tenochtitlan with more Spaniards and allies (Chapter 22). 83. Spaniards rout chieftains from the pyramid temple (Chapter 22). 84. Bodies of Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin are cast out of the palace by the Spaniards (Chapter 23). 85. Moctezuma's body is carried away (Chapter 23).

[p.44 (M)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726
[764]

[502]

[764]

— After Paso y Troncoso

86. Burning of Moctezuma's body (Chapter 23). 87. Itzquauhtzin's body is carried away (Chapter 23). 88. Burning of Itzquauhtzin's body (Chapter 23). 89. Spaniards set forth from their quarters in Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 90. Spaniards are detained leaving (Chapter 24). 91-93. Flight from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 24). 94. People of Tetzcallaxyacan comfort the Spaniards (Chapter 25).

[p. 44 (N)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
[501] [415]

—Ajhar Pano y Transcuo

97, 97. Mexicans recover bodies and loot from the Tolteca canal (Chapter 25). 98. Massacre at Calocuyo-n (Chapter 25). 99. Spaniards climb up to Tencalhuyacan (Chapter 25). 100, 101. People of Tencalhuyacan welcome the Spaniards (Chapter 26). 102. Spaniards prepare to depart from Tencalhuyacan (Chapter 26).

[p. 44(0)]

●532

[726
714]

—After Paso y Troncoso

103. Spaniards reach Tepeacuilan (Chapter 26). 104. Mexican warriors pursue the Spaniards (Chapter 26). 105. Spaniards reach Cidaltepec (Chapter 26). 106. Spaniards reach Xoloc (Chapter 26). 107. Spaniards reach Axtaquemecan (Chapter 26). 108. Mexicans on mountain-top watch for the departure of the Spaniards (Chapter 27). 109, 110. Battle at Mt. Tonan (Chapter 27).

[p. 44 (P)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
[346]
[766]
[731]

—After Paso y Troncoso

111. Burning of bodies of Mexicans slain in battle at Mt. Tonan (Chapter 27). 112, 113. Refurbishing of a temple in Tenuchtitlan on the departure of the Spaniards (Chapter 28). 114. Smallpox plague (Chapter 29). 115-117. Return of the Spaniards to attack Tenuchtitlan (Chapter 29). 118. Spanish brigantines (Chapter 30).

[p. 44(Q)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726

[502]

[701
502]

— After Paso y Troncoso

119. Spaniards attack Çoquiapan (Chapter 30). 120. Spaniards crumble the wall at Xolloco (Chapter 30). 121. Fighting at Xolloco (Chapter 30). 122. Spaniards pierce the wall at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 123. Allies of the Spaniards fill the canals (Chapter 31). 124. Spanish horsemen ride in at Uitzillan (Chapter 31). 125. Spanish horseman spears a Tlatilulcan (Chapter 31). 126. Mexican warriors unhorse and kill the Spaniard (Chapter 31). 127. Shown ones land from warboats (Chapter 31).

[p. 44(R)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726

—After Paso y Troncoso

128. Spaniards are attacked on both sides (Chapter 31). 129. Mexican warriors toss the captured cannon into the water at Tetamapolco (Chapter 31). 130. Mexicans flee from Tenochtitlan (Chapter 32). 131. Explosion of Tzilacatzin (Chapter 32). 132-134. Battle about Ayauhcalitlan and Nonoalco (Chapter 32). 135-137. The warrior Tzilacatzin in three disguises (Chapter 32).

[p. 44 (5)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
648
714
[502]
[72]

—After Pino y Troncoso

138, 139. Spaniards are fought off and withdraw (Chapter 32). 140. Waitress of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Coyoacan arrive to work treachery upon the Mexicans (Chapter 33). 141. Quauhtemoc and a nobleman (Chapter 33). 142-145. The treachery of those of Xochimilco, Itzapalapan, and Coyoacan is prevented (Chapter 33).

[p. 44(T)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726
[687]

—After Paso y Troncoso

146. Quauhtemoc and Motecuzoma punish the traitors (Chapter 33). 147, 148. Spaniards arrive at Yucatecatan (Chapter 33, 34). 149-151. Mexicans disperse the Spaniards and capture some (Chapter 34). 152-155. Mexicans capture and sacrifice fifty-three Spaniards, some horses, and many allies (Chapter 35).

[p. 44 (4)]

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955
NU7 Aztec NU7

532
726

[417]

—After Paso y Troncoso

156, 157. Mexicans capture and sacrifice fifty-three Spaniards, some horses, and many allies (Chapter 35). 158. Spaniards enter the market place at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36). 159. Spaniards fire the temple at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36). 160, 161. Battle in the market place at Tlatilulco (Chapter 36).

[p. 44(V)]

796 778 And when he had already taken shape, then they pasted his head with feather down and made his diagonally-striped face painting, and [gave him] his serpent ear plug of glued turquoise [mosaic]. And from the serpent ear plugs hung the circlet of thorns, [made of] gold, with toes — cut in the form of toes. And his nose rod [was] arrow[-shaped]; of beaten gold [was it] wrought and set with stones. It was shaped of metal plate painted as if with stones. Likewise from it hung what was called the thorn circlet, painted with diagonal stripes. Thus was it diagonally striped: on it were [alternating] blue and yellow [bands]. And upon his head stood his humming bird disguise. Then there was, besides, what was named anecuyaol, [his headdress] of featherwork, round, a little narrow and pointed at its base. After that they placed upon the back of his head the ball of yellow parrot feathers, from which hung his child's lock of hair. And [he had] his cape of stinging nettles,[6] colored black, in five places ornamented with feathers — with eagle down. It was wrapped about him. And below, he was wrapped in his cape with severed heads and bones; and above, he was wrapped, also, in his jerkin painted with the limbs and members [of men] — all painted there with severed heads, ears, hearts, entrails, livers, lungs, and prints of the hand and the foot. And [he was given] a breech clout. Only the breech clout was very finely wrought. And its design was also the limbs and members [of men: it was] so woven. But his large [breech clout was] [7] only of paper; it was of white paper,[8] one fathom wide and twenty long, with a design painted on it in blue. And as for the blood banner with the flint knife as the point: his blood banner was only of paper, painted red, as if [striped] with blood. And the flint knife at the point was likewise only of paperwork, and also similarly painted — colored as if with blood. And his shield, which he carried, was of reedwork; [it was] a shield of coarse reeds decorated in four places with feathers —

[237]

[532]

[289]

Auh in je utlacat, njmã quijquapotonja, yoan quijchioa, ixtlã tlatlaan, yoan ioxnacochxiviti in tlapolli: auh in jcoxnacoch itech pipilcac in vitznaoxiotl, teucujtlatl xoxopiltic, tlaxoxopiltectli, yoã yiacapiloa, mjtl: Teucujtlatl in tlachiuhtli, tlatzotzontli, yoan tlatzantli, tlacanaoalli, tlatcicujlolli: no itech pilcain motenoa vitznaoxiotl, ixtlan tlatlaan: injc ixtlan tlatlaan, vncan icac texutli, yoan tlcuxtli yoã icpac conquetza ivitzitzilnaoal: njmã contoquijlia, inca anecuiutl, hiviti in tlachichioalli, mjvnjltic, achitzin vitztic, achi tzimpitzaoac: njmã je ic in tozpololli icuexocchtlan in contlalilia itech pilcac tziuhcuexpalli, yoã itzitzicazzilma, tlatlilpalli: macujlcan in tlapotonjlli, quauhtlachcaiotica, qujmolotica, yoan in jtilma in tlanj qujmoquentia, tzotzontecomaio, oomjcallo: auh in panj qujmolpilia, yoan ixicul: injc tlacujlolli tlaquaquallo, ca much vncã icujliuhtoc in tzontecomatl, nacaztli, iollotli, cujtlaxculli eltapachtli, tochichi, macpalli, xocpalli, yoan imaxtli: çan in maxtlatl, vellaçotlanquj: auh in jtlamachio injc no tlaquaquallo injc tlaqujttli: auh in jvei[maxtli] çan amatl ichoatl in quaoamatl, injc patlaoac cemmatl: auh injc viac cempoalli, injc tlacujlolli texoacxilqui, auh injquezpan quimamanticatca iacatecpaio: in jezpan çan amatl catca, tlapalli injc tlacujlolli, injc tlaezicujlolli: iacatecpaio, çan no amatl in tlachioalli, çan no iuhquj injc tlacujlolli, tlaezicujlolli, yoan ichimal ictica otlatl in tlachioalli, otlachimalli, nauhcan tlapotonjlli, quauhtlachcaiotica, hivichachapanquj, motenoa: Tevevelli, auh chimalpaio, çan no iuhquj in ezpanjtl injc tlacujlolli: yoan navi imjuh ic quicentzitzquja in jchimal yoan iopochmacuex imacpilcac, coiotomjtl in tlavipantli, yoan itech pilcatica amatl tlaxoxotlalli.

6. Hernández, op. cit., pp. 390-391, translates as ortiga (Urtica sp.?); on pp. 388-390 he mentions seven kinds: four are Urtica sp.; others are Urtica dioica, var. angustifolia; Barrugadora mejicanda Kunth; Chiay ("quemadora," "ortiga"); and W. urentissima— H. B. K. ("ortiga de clavos calientes"). Santamaría, op. cit., I, p. 498, writes of chichicaxtle: "la ortiga urentísima. . . . La especie principal es la [illegible] verde L. . . . En México, planta herbácea, semiarpadora, rasposa en las aceas ollitas y terminada" (Mirasoma dioicaceae, Engelmannia dioicaceae). Also, "Planta urticácea, llamada también ortiga, mal herbáceo, mala mosca, quemador, chichicaxtlla, chichicaxtle, en México." See also Maximino Martínez: Las plantas medicinales de México (México: Ediciones Botas, 1933), pp. 414-415 — chichicaxtli (Urtica urentissima [Jacq.] Gilmb.).

7. In the MS, a blank follows pues. Seler, op. cit., p. 502, has supplied mesh. Reference to the description of this ceremony in Book II, however, suggests that the evidence is amatl.

8. In Victor Wolfgang Von Hagen: The Aztec and Maya Paper Makers (New York: J. J. Augustin, 1944), p. 68, amatl-amatl is given as "coarse, thickly fibered paper, more difficult to fashion than the fig tree variety"; from bark's bast inside (Artocarpus cornigera). On the other hand, a note in Sahagún (Robredo ed.), V, p. 231, reads: "la materia convertida por la capa de libro de algunos árboles del género ficus. Sirvió de papel para los pintores o los libros, y de tela para hacer las adornos, cortinas y otros objetos que el culto de los dioses requería."

7: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1955 NU7 Astec NU7

[redacted]

000

Twenty-third Chapter, in which is told how Moctezuma and a great nobleman of Tlatilulco had died, and how [the Spaniards] had cast their bodies out before the gate — before the gate of the dwelling in which the Spaniards were.

And when four days had passed since all [the chieftains] had been buried from the [pyramid] temple, [the Spaniards] came out and cast forth [the bodies of] Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin, who had died,[1] at the water's edge at a place called Teoyoc. For here was a carved stone image of a tortoise;[2] like a tortoise was the representation in stone.

[E32] 764 643

And when they were seen and recognized as being Moctezuma and Itzquauhtzin, they then took up Moctezuma in their arms and carried him there to a place called Copulco.[3] Thereupon they laid him on a pyre and then kindled and set fire to it. After this, the flames blazed up; it was as if they reared, as the fire formed tongues which rose like tassels of fire. And Moctezuma's body seemed to lie sizzling, and it smelled foul as it burned.

Inic ceuppoalli vnei Capitulo vncan mjtoa in quenjn Motecuçoma, yoan ce vei pilli tlatilulco mjcque: auh in innacaio qujvallaxque iquijaoaioc in calli in vncan catca Españoles.

Auh ie iuh navilhujtl neteucalhujloc in qujmoztlaçaco in Motecuçoma, yoan Itzquauhtzin, omjcque, intéo itocaiocan, Teoaioc: ca vncan catca in jxiptla aiotl, tetl in tlaxixintli, iuhqujn aiotl ipan mjzeuhtica in tetl.

Auh in oittoque, in oiximachoque in ca ie Motecuçomatzin, yoan Itzquauhtzin: in Motecuçomatzin njman qujoalnapaloticujaque, qujoalhujcaque in vncan itocaiocan Copulco: njman ie ic qujquaquauhtlapachoa, njman ie ic contlemjna, contlequechia: njman ie ic cuecuetlaca in tletl, iuhqujn tztecujca, iuhqujn nenenepiloa tlecueçalutl, iuhqujn tlemjmjiavatl moquequetza, in tlenenepilli: auh in jnacaio Motecuçoma, iuhqujn tzontzoiocatoc, yoan tzoiaia injc tlatla.

---

1. Rafael Garda Granados points out, in a personal communication, that "concerning the death of Moctezuma various versions exist, but all of them may be included in two large groups: those originating from the natives and those originating from the Spaniards. The former maintain that Moctezuma was killed by the Spaniards, and the latter that his death was due to being struck by a rock as he tried to calm his subjects. Among reports of indigenous origin we consider the opinions of Durán, Hist. de las Indias de Nueva España, II, 50 — '. . . le hallaron muerto con sus vestidos a los pies y con cinco pedradas en el pecho'; Alva Ixtlilxochitl, Décimo Tercio Relación de la venida de los Españoles, p. 12 — '. . . en donde dicen que uno de ellos le dió una pedrada de la cual murió, aunque dicen sus vasallos que los mismos españoles le mataron, y por las partes hagan lo mataron los españoles'; Acosta, Hist. de las Indias, p. 598 — 'El rey Moctezuma hallaron los españoles muerto, y pensó, según dicen, de pedradas; y es su opinión que aquello mande la mataron los españoles con otras principales'; Códice Ramírez, p. 199 — '. . . dicen que le dieron unas pedradas, unos aunque se le dieron en la frente; hacen aquello mal porque había ya sido de cinco horas que estaba muerto, y no sabe quien dijo que porque no le dieron la herida le hallaron muerto unos españoles por la parte baja'; Orozco y Berra, Hist. Ant. y de la Conquista, IV, 436 — 'Los cual fueron el tiro con que hicieron descuerdo, la cierta fué que Cortés mandó dar garrote a los reyes y señores que en su poder estaban'; Sahagún, op. cit., III, 51 — 'hallaron los españoles muerto a Moctezuma y al Gobernador de Tlatilulco — echados fuera de las casas reales. . . .' Reports of Spanish origin are given by Díaz del Castillo, Hist. Verdadera, II, 83 — '. . . y le dieron tres pedradas, una en la cabeza, otra en un brazo y otra en una pierna, y pensó que le regalaban se curase y comiese y le decían cabo ello palabras, no quiso, antes cuando no nos catamos miramos a donde que era muerto'; López de Gómara, Hist. de la Nueva España, I, 301 — 'que de una (pedrada) que le acertó en las sienes le derribaron y murieron con pesquer cuadro'; Cortés, Cartas de Rel., I, 233 — '. . . le dieron unas pedradas las cuyas en la cabeza, una grande, que de allí a tres días murió'; Vázquez de Tapia, p. 30 — '. . . tenía que no le dieron con una piedra, diciendo que hacía, cuando de la frente, que luego se desmayó muerto'; Aguilar, op. cit., p. 77 — '. . . entre otras piedras que venían descendiendo, una redondo como una pelota, la cual dió a Moctezuma cuando estaba los dos montes, entre las sienes y cayó'; ibid., p. 73 — 'Moctezuma hacía en la cabeza, dió al dicho a cuya era . . . y en el aposento donde él estaba había otras muy grandes piedras derribadas con él, a los cuales el dicho Cortés con parecer de los capitanes mandó matar, sin dejar ninguno.' Besides these, we have the opinions of Clavijero, which we consider the most reasonable (Hist. Ant. de México, II, 211) — 'Los historiadores mexicanos atribuyen su muerte a los españoles y los españoles a los mexicanos. — Yo no puedo creer que los españoles se decidieran a quitar la vida a un rey a quien debían tanto honor y de cuya muerte ellos podían esperar grandes males.' Muñoz Camargo, Hist. de Tlaxcala, p. 234, says that he died baptized and that his godfathers were Cortés and Alvarado. — Chimalpahin (op. cit., p. 191 — quimolnique Españoles y Motecuçomatzin quijoxcuitlaxtlauque, the Spaniards killed Moctezuma, strangling him), agrees with the reason used by Orozco y Berra.

2. The corresponding Spanish text has, for equal, galápago — fresh water tortoise. According to Ignacio Alcazar, Apuntes sobre la antigua México-Tenochtitlan (Tlaxcalaya, D.F.: Instituto Panamericano de Geografía e Historia, 1955), p. 56, it was where now is "la esquina de Rondadillas con Tacuba."

3. Corresponding Spanish text: en secreto. — The version of this report, in Sahagún, loc. cit., differs considerably from that of the Florentine Codex.

Cuen, op. cit., identifies Copulco (Copulco) with a barrio adjacent to Tlatilulco, bounded now N. by Calle de Mosquera, E., Gabriel Leyva, S., Montezuma, and W., Lerdo (formerly a canal).

Thirty-first Chapter, in which is related how the Spaniards came with the brigantines and took after those who were in boats in order to join battle with them, and then emerged and came to arrive near all the houses.

And when they had readied [the guns], thereupon they fired upon the wall. And the wall then gave way and parted from behind. And the second time [the shot] struck, the wall then fell to the ground destroyed; it burst open, pierced through. Then likewise the road appeared clear [of men]. And the chieftains who were by the wall then dispersed. All fled from there, escaping in terror. And all the various men [allied to the Spaniards] then quickly advanced filling each canal. Then they speedily leveled them with stones, adobes, and some logs so that they were filled.

And after the canals had been filled, then came the horse[men], perhaps ten of them. They rode in a circle; they came wheeling about, twisting and circling. [And] once again horse[men] came, following after the others. And a number of Tlatilulcans who had quickly entered the palace which had been the house of Moctezuma then emerged in terror, and came up against the horse[men]. One [of them] lanced a Tlatilulcan. And though he had speared him, yet he took hold firmly of the iron lance. Then his companions went up to tear it from [the rider's] hands, threw him down upon his back, and upset him. And when he had fallen tumbled to the earth, they hit him repeatedly, they struck him on the back of the head. He died there.

Thereupon the Spaniards assembled and set out together. Then they reached Quauhquiyauac (the Eagle Gate). And they took with them the lombard gun and the equipment which went with it. They placed it at the Eagle Gate. (And for this reason is it called the Eagle Gate, that there stood an eagle carved in stone, a good man's height tall — so high — and flanking it stood, on one side, an ocelot, and on [the other] a wolf, likewise hewn of stone [)].

Injc ompoalli ommatlacotli oce capitulo: vncan mjtoa in quenjn Españoles ic valictiaque in vergantines, quijnvaltocaque in acaltica nenca in quijnnamijquijo: njmã ic valquijzque itech acico in jtquijch calli. 726

Auh in ocnechichiuhque: njmã ic ic quivalmotla in tenamjtl: auh in [illegible]jtl, njmã tzatzaian, cujtlazeliuh. Auh inic oppa vetz: njmã tlaltitech ia in tenamjtl, vevelocac, vmpet, oncoion: njman no iuhquin chipacpul moquetz vtli. Auh in tlacavã in tenantitlan onoca, njmã ic valxitinque, valnetlaloio, nemauhcaquijxtilo. Auh in jtquijch nepapan tlacatl: njman iciuhca contetentivi in acalotli, njman iciuhca conjxmana tetica, xantica yoan cequj quavitl injc tlaatzopque.

Auh in ic iuhquj, in ommatzop acalotli: njman ic ic valeoa in cavallome, aço matlacteme, ontlaiavaloco, ontlamalacachoco, ommocovitzoco, ommotevilacachoco: ic no ceppa centlamantli valevaque in cavallome, quijnvalcujtlapãvitiaque. Auh cequjntin tlatiluica talactivetzque in tecpan catca in jchan motecuçoma: njman ic valmauhcaquiçaia, quimonmonamjctico in cavallostin: oc quijxilico in tlatilulca. Auh in oquixilico, oc vel can in jtepuztopil: njman quimacujlito in jcnjvan, icujtlapan quijoalmaiauhque, quivaltzineuhque: auh in otlalpan vetzico mec quivivizequj, concuercochvivitecque, oncan ommjc.

Niman ic ic quivalcentlaça, oakemolinj in Españoles: njmã ic onacico in quauhquijiavac. Auh in tomacac tlequjquijtli quivicativi, intlaquj ietiuh, contecaque in quauhquijiavac. (Auh injc motenoa quauhquijiacac, ca vncan icaca in quauhtli, tetl in tlaxixintli, vel onnequetzalli injc quauhtic, inic vecapan: auh quijtzatzacutimanj, in centlapal icaca ocsuel: auh in centlapal icaia cujtlachtli, çanno tetl in tlaxintli. Auh in ic iuhquj in vevei tiacavan, oc nõ [351] [532]

8: Barlow E-4 (no date)1949 NU7 Aztec NU7

635 131 Provincial borders in 1519.—North of Yoaltepec Province lay the Empire province of Tepeacac, and to the east that of Tlachquiauco, but to the south were other Mixtec peoples never subjugated by the Triple Alliance: Tototepec of Oaxaca and her allies. Ayoxochiquilazala was an outpost against these. To the west Tlapan and Quiauhteopan were Empire territory again.

TRIBUTE

651 Tribute of the whole province.—The tribute rendered by Yoaltepec was small but choice; it included gold and turquoises. It is listed as follows:

CLOTHING

[291 714] 400 large mantles
1 warrior's costume with shield*

FOOD

[263] 40 jars of honey

OTHER TRIBUTE

[316 533] 40 little gold disks, "the size of a Host" and as thick as one's finger*[a]
10 middle-sized turquoise masks (mosaic)*[b]

632 651 Tribute of the component towns.—Acatlan gave military supplies and food to the Imperial armies which passed through it and from time to time sent gifts of mantles and rabbitskins to its overlord in Mexico, as well as providing personal services. Certain gifts were received in return.[c]

[712] Ayoxochiquilazala, though a garrison town giving military service, also paid tribute of gold dust.[d]

---

[a] Cooper Clark, in his edition of the Códice Mendocino (1: 75), remarks that "it is reasonable to suppose that these gold disks . . . measured about three inches in diameter."

[b] The Mendocino commentary considers the turquoise symbol appearing with the masks to represent a separate tribute of turquoises, but this conclusion does not seem justified.

[c] As in Ocelotepec, in the province of Coyolapan, q.v., PNE, 5: 59, says that Acatlan "solamente ... daua ... a la jente de guerra que por el pasaba" food and arms from an arsenal there, and " ... enbiauan de quando en quando vn presente al Rey de Mexico, de mantas y pellejos de liebres y de conejos." In the same source are mentioned the services rendered by various lords and their wives in the Imperial court, in eighty-day shifts.

[d] RMEH, T. 2, Appendix, pp. 147–148: "acudian con el tributo á monteçuma y le davan oro en polvo y no le acudian con otra cosa porque en este dicho pueblo tenia monteçuma jente de guarniçion aperçebida para las guerras y esta gente mexicana comian y gastavan las gallinas venados conejos y maiz que eran obligados á dar á monteçuma."

10:Deevey N-4 (no date)1957 NU7 Aztec NU7

seeds were supplied as required by the different birds. I assure Your Highness that all those birds which ate only fish received each day two hundred and fifty pounds, caught in the salt lakes." (ibid., pp. 265–266). 127 231 312

Such a people could surely have dammed a stream to make an artificial lake, and if they cannot be proved to have done so at Tula, the point is probably not very important. 312

ICONOGRAPHY AND CARTOGRAPHY. The suggestion that the elaborately "historical" description of Tula was a pure invention, prompted by the cattails of the glyph, shows how wary we must be of inferring Aztec ideas from the pictorial manuscripts. Water and aquatic elements are widely scattered through the existing texts, but there is no necessary limnologic significance in the fact, for the symbol for water, atl, came to stand for the vowel-sound a, and a glyph that seems to the naive eye to show a lacustrine scene is usually nothing but a condensed rebus for a word in which a occurs (Peñafiel, 1885). However, the fact remains that Aztec hieroglyphics were caught at a stage in the evolution of syllabic writing in which the rebus is unusually representational, and the iconography itself is not without limnologic interest. 127 212

Rands (1955) has discussed Mesoamerican water symbolism in comprehensive fashion, though without particular emphasis on Aztec culture, and has discerned an extraordinary uniformity in diversity. The widespread distribution of sympathetic or imitative magic produces a high degree of constancy, in the art of all peoples, of certain aquatic connotations: rain, growing things, aquatic animals, clouds, liquids produced from various parts of the human body, etc. What Rands has shown is more surprising, a high degree of iconographic constancy, such that the same pictorial symbols (e. g. the columnar-wavy depiction of falling water) recur, in widely different styles and contexts in painting and sculpture from Maya, Mixtec, and Toltec cultures. Of particular importance for our area is the demonstration that Aztec water symbolism descends directly and with little change from Classic times, as represented by the murals of Teotihuacán. 171 532

The most satisfactory Aztec representations of water are the glyphs for place-names, because these can be read. Some of the more interesting are illustrated in Figure 3, redrawn by Martha Dimock from Clark's (1938) edition of the Codex Mendoza. The fact that this is a post-Conquest document raises legitimate doubts about the authenticity of some of its Spanish glosses, but the glyphs themselves are surely faithful versions of prototypes in lost Aztec manuscripts. The basis of this confidence is the fundamental similarity between these pictures and those in the Mixtec codices from southern Mexico, which are certainly 103 212

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

000 things, and not counting in this the ingots and slabs of [326] gold, and the gold in grains from the mines. We began to melt it down with the help of the Indian goldsmiths, who were, as I have said, natives of Azcapotzalco and they made broad bars of it, each bar measuring three fingers of the hand across. When it was already melted and made into bars, they brought another present separately which the Grand Montezuma had said that he would give, and it was a wonderful thing to behold the wealth of gold and the richness of the other jewels that were brought, for some of the Chalchihuites were so fine that among these Caciques they were worth a vast quantity of gold. The three blow guns with their pellet moulds, and their cover-[532] ings of jewels and pearls, and pictures in feathers of little birds covered with pearlshell and other birds, all were of great value. I will not speak of the plumes and feathers and other rich things for I shall never finish calling them to mind.

Let me say that all the gold I have spoken about was marked with an iron stamp, which had been made by order of Cortés and the King's Officers, who had been appointed by Cortés with the consent of all of us and in the name of His Majesty until he should give other instructions. At that time these were Gonzalo Mejía, who was treasurer, and Alonzo Dávila who was accountant, and the stamp was the royal arms like those on a real[1] and the size of a testoon.[2] The mark was not put on the rich jewels which it did not seem to us should be taken to pieces.

For weighing all these bars of gold and silver, and the jewels which were not taken to pieces, we had neither marked weights nor scales, and it seemed to Cortés and to

---

[1] Real, a small silver coin.

[2] "Toston de a quatro," a half peso = four reals.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

646 the critical period of Cortés' first stay at Tenuchtitlan, the twenty "speakers" held daily meetings at the official house.[185]

In a society based upon kin we cannot expect a clear division of the powers of government, particularly as there were no written laws,[186] and custom alone ruled. The functions of the ancient Mexican council were not properly legislative, but they were rather directive and judicial combined. One of its first duties was, however, to maintain harmony among the kins.

The twenty independent social units composing the Mexican tribe, while bound together by the necessity of mutual aid to secure territorial independence, could not be expected always to live in peace with one another. Difficulties would necessarily arise between kin and kin, and to prevent such disputes from leading to actual warfare,[187] the council as a body of official arbitrators was needed.

618 According to the rules of kinship, the calpulli was not only 646 bound to avenge any wrongs suffered by one of its members, but 695 it was also responsible for the offences committed by the kinfolk towards any outsider.[188] Hence theft committed outside of the Durán (cap. X, p. 85. XI. pp. 107, 108, 109, XIV, pp. 117, 123, XVI, p. 132, XVIII, p. 156), etc., etc. We forbear further quotations, since they would be too numerous. All go to prove that the council was frequently called together between the times of regular meeting. Quotations from Tezozomoc ("Crónica Mexicana") are useless, since they are very numerous and agree with those of Durán in the main. The fact of irregular meetings of the council having been called during the conquest, is further proven by Sahagun (Lib. XII. cap. III. p. 7). and Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XIV, p. 383).

[185] Bernal Diaz de Castillo ("Historia verdadera," Vedia, Vol. II, cap. XCV, p. 95): "y siempre á la continua estaban en su compañia veinte grande señores y consejeros y capitanes." (Cap. XCVII, p. 99): "Ya he dicho otra vez en el capitulo que de ello habla, de la manera que entraban á negociar y el acato que el tenian, y como siempre estaban en su compañia en aquel tiempo para despachar negocios veinte hombres ancianos, que eran jueces."

[186] A number of paintings are mentioned as representing the customs and manners of the natives. Specimens of these are found in Codex Mendoza, Lam., 58 to 72 inclusive. But none of these contained, or could contain or express, anything like a law. Compare, on Mexican paintings in general and their value, "On the Sources for aboriginal history of Spanish America," in Vol. 27 of "Proceedings of the American Association for the Advancement of Science." Señor Orozco y Berra ("Códice Mendoziano,– Ensayo de descifracion geroglífica," beginning in No. 3, of Vol. I, "Anales del Museo Nacional de México") has commenced a publication which can be expected to shed much light on such picture-leaves, and the true position which they held among the ancient Mexicans.

[187] Conflicts between the inhabitants of different "barrios" during festive turnouts and religious gatherings could not always be prevented.

[188] Morgan ("Ancient Society," pp. 76 and 77). Davila-Padilla ("Historia de la Fundacion y Discurso de la Provincia de Santiago de México," Lib. I, cap. XXVI, p. 85). The custom is general among other tribes and Mr. Morgan has adverted to it among the Maya of Yucatan and the Peruvians. It would be unnecessary display to produce further evidence: the remarkably clear statements of Mr. Morgan fully "cover the case."

532
x787
[791]

— from Paso y Troncoso

1. Ocuilinco and Cipactonal (Chapter 1). 2-5. One Cuahtl and following signs (Chapter 2). 6. One Deer (Chapter 3). 7. Mother with child (Chapter 3). 8, 9. Two Rabbits: dromedarium and dromicaria (Chapters 4, 9).

[p. 126 d]

532
787

[273]

— After Paso y Troncoso

10-13. Two Rabbit: drunkenness and drunkards (Chapters 4, 5). 14, 15. One Flower: musicians, entertainers, entertainers (Chapter 7).

[p. 126 e]

532
787
[534]

[534]

[851]

— After Pane y Tresguerras

16-20. One Flower: musicians, entertainers, embroiderers (Chapter 7). 21. Seven Rain (Chapter 8). 22, 23. Eight Flower and bathing of child (Chapter 8).

[p. 126 f]

532
X787

— After Paso y Troncoso

24. Eight Flower: bathing of child (Chapter 9). 25-31. One Death and associated good and ill fortune (Chapter 9).

[p. 126 g]

17: Sahagun M-5 (1529-1590)4957 NU7 Astec NU7

532
x 787

— After Paso y Troncoso

32. Eight Water (Chapter 10; the text correctly refers to Eight Rain). 33, 34. Nine Ocelot and bathing of child (Chapter 10). 35, 36. Ten Eagle and bathing of child (Chapter 10). 37. One Rain (Chapter 11). 38. Descent of the "Goddesses" (Chapter 11). 39. Imprisoned evildoers (Chapter 11). 40. Bathing of child (Three Crocodile, Chapter 11).

[p. 126 b]

532
A787

— After Paso y Troncoso

41. Bathing of child (Three Crocodile; Chapter 11). 42-46. Four Wind and associated scenes (Chapter 12). 47. Macuilvuchitl (Chapter 13). 48. Seven Serpent (Chapter 13).

[p. 126 i]

532
x787

—After Paso y Troncoso

49-51. Eight Death and Nine Dear, and birthing of child (Chapter 13). 52. Ten Rabbit (Chapter 14). 53-55. One Grass and its miseries (Chapter 15).

[p.126 j]

532
x787

[76]

[482]

[776]

— After Paso y Troncoso

56. Twelve Houses, Thirteen Lizard, and Ten Crocodile (Chapter 15). 57. Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 17). 58, 59. Merchants (Chapter 18). 60, 61. Three Deer and bathing of child (Chapter 19). 62. Uitzilopochtli (Chapter 20).

[p. 126 k]

532
x787

—After Pano y Troncoso

63. Women and child (Chapter 20). 64. Eleven Eagle and Twelve Vulture (Chapter 20). 65. One Dog (Chapter 25). 66. One House (Chapter 27). 67, 68. Women and child; man brewing (Chapter 28). 69, 70. One House and following day signs (Chapter 28).

[p. 126 l]

532
X787

[776]

—After Paso y Troncoso

71, 72. One water and bathing of child (Chapter 30). 73. [Eleven] Rain (Chapter 30). 74. One Wind and Quetzalcoatl (Chapter 31). 75, 76. Thieves (Chapter 32). 77. One Eagle (Chapter 33).

[p.126 m]

532
A787
[776]

— Ajor Pare y Tezozomoc

78-82. Dances of the "Goddesses" and secondary ceremonies (Chapter 33). 83-85. Visit to the recently delivered mother (Chapter 35).

[p. 126 m]

532
K787

— After Pano y Troncoso

86-91. Feast in honor of a new-born child (Chapter 37). 92. Two Eagle and following day signs (Chapter 37). 93. One Rabbit's good fortunes (Chapter 38).

[p. 126 0]

17: Sahagun M-5 (1529-1590) 1957 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
x787

[241]

[415]

94-101. One Rabbit's good fortune (Chapter 38).

— Ajaw Pizo y Tecuxcuz

[p. 126 p]

532
M787

—After Pino y Tovar

1. The howling beast (Chapter 1). 2. The night owl (Chapter 3). 3. The owl (Chapter 4). 4. The frog (Chapter 10). 5. The screaming mouse (Chapter 11). 6. Contemplation (Chapter 13). 7. The corpse in wrappings for the dead (Chapter 13). 8. Placing maize in the cooking pot (Appendix, Chapter 4). 9. The elder brother Acolnhua before the younger (Appendix, Chapter 6).

[p. 126 v]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

sion of the irrelevant, implicit in drawing, largely contribute. 532 In our present day, with all the superb methods of photographic recordings and reproductions, the comic strip has a vogue unparalleled in our history.[17] (See Plates 62–63.)

Aboriginal music has largely disappeared. The friars 533 534 quickly adapted the chants and dances of Europe to Indian needs and substituted Christian for Indian ritual practices, using song and dance as formulas easily understood by primitives. To judge from the instruments, Aztec music was strong in rhythm but lacking in tone. The two-tone and one-tone drums could emit sonorous rhythms, but the bone and clay flutes pipe pitifully and are not gauged to a fixed scale. The conch shell could be blown with varying notes, according to the intensity of the blast, although it was more suitable for summoning people than for making music. Whistles, rattles of clay and gourds, bells and shell tinklers enhanced the effect of carefully regulated rhythms. Notched bones, often human, were rasped with a stick and produced quite pleasant sounds. A strange type of drum, which seems to have been indigenous, had an amazing resonance attained by beating an inverted gourd floating in a large container of water.[18] (See Plates 39, bottom left; 61, middle right.)

The dance was highly important, but native steps seldom 535 persist except in the most primitive outlying districts, for [177 they were transformed by the friars into Christian patterns. 797] The chroniclers describe dances of many types in which masses of people participated. It is impossible that the Aztecs, with their profound sense of design and form, should not have had elaborate rituals in which great bodies of people moved in complex patterns to complicated rhythms. Song was used to reinforce the ceremony, and the words of some

776 Quetzaltepetl, Chalchiuitl yeme, Tlaloc, Popocatepetl, Iztac
782 tepetl, Poiauhtecatl,[117] and any other mountains of which they had vowed to make representations.

And they represented the mountains, they made their 532 images, only in a dough of amaranth seed and maize,[118]
782 made in human form, made to look like men.

They gave them teeth of squash seeds; they provided them
755 eyes of fat black beans. With whatever adornment [the mountains] were represented, thus when they made them, they thereupon arrayed them.

[314 And they made papers, and they spattered them with 289] liquid rubber.[119] And they laid these over them as mantles.

And some of these papers, which were spattered with drops of liquid rubber, they hung on a cord, tied and fastened together, so that they were held in a row before the small molded ones [Tepictoni].

They rattled, quivered, and flew in the breeze. Canes of fat, round reeds [held the cord] at both ends; [the canes] were stuck into and supported by the ground. On this were held the rubber-spatted papers.

[415] And a green spatted gourd was split in two and cored. Before [the Tepictoni] they set this, which they called the tecpanxiu cup, for the wine, in which the wine was. Thus they offered [them] wine.

793 And it was the office of the priests alone, who were experi-
532 enced, to make [the Tepictoni] and set them in place. None of the householders dared make or adorn them.

And on the fifth [day], when they feasted the priests, it was said, they caused them to forget.

782 When the Tepictoni were fashioned, thereupon they held 755 a vigil and made music for them.

During the night, they made offerings four times; they set before the priests, before them who sang the songs for the Tepictoni, round tamales which they gave them.

And four times they offered them food during the night, and they made music for [the Tepictoni].

[198 They whistled with their fingers, they made music for
● 533] them with shells, with flutes, and with fifes.

Young women, in their cups, who cut capers, and amused
[273 people, blew the flutes. They also were offered food.

463] And on the next day they slew the Tepictoni [images]; they slew them, like sacrificial quail, twisting their necks. Then they gathered up and carried away the Tepictoni figures made of a dough of amaranth-seed and maize to the priests' house, where dwelt the priests.

And he who [caused or he] fashioned the Tepictoni thereupon gathered to his guests, where they were entertained.

273 And in the evening, toward nightfall, then all the old 782 people not drinking wine—those already advanced in age, the 755

papaxaxapetl, iztac tepetl, poiauhtecatl: yeme in ipan quetzaltepetl tepetl in quizcuacuac in quijiquin.

Auh in quijiquiqui, in quimixiquilotiuia in tepqe, qen tenelli, quijolocatlaliuia, quijolocatlachichiuia, tlacatlachichiuia:

quijolocatiuia xiuitzolli, auh in quijoxiuhlotiuia xiuctli: in quemanj yuelanqui in quimixiquilotiuia, in quijiquiqui qen no iuhqui yeje quijochichiuia.

Auh yeuac quijchiuia, amatecuitl, colchachapetzcia, colchipiuia, quijoquequetzcia:

auh in ocqui amatecuitl, tlaolchipiqui, tlaolchachapetzcalli, mecatitech quijqipilouia, mecatitech quijoquechilpiuia, quijoquechqalouia, yeujqua acoc, ic tlacuacuac in tepictoc:

hiquacacoc papaqualacoc, papatlacoc, amapilquauitl, necoc, nemoc, necocampa tlatlalactiuac, tetzontectiuac, ya iuch acoc tecuitl.

Auh milacaiouli, tlaiztlapanolli, tlaiztlacatli: yuiquac tamanca, chalchihuiacalli ipan peujia, vctli vuca ca, vctli ic tamanca.

Auh qen iehoan in tlamacazque, ya iztequioh, in machiceque cuica, ya quijochichiuia, in quintlalaiaia: aiac qen moiocuiaia, in calla in quijochichiuia.

Auh macujtica in quintlallujaia, nijtoa: quiamolcaoltiaia in tlamacazque:

ya o ic cualque tepictoc, ajmoo ic ic quiamoyoia, quiacuicaia:

in ceioual xapa in quintlamanjlia, tamalolalli in quimanaia, quimanaia yeujqui, in tlamacazque, in tepicuica:

no xapa in quintlamacaia ceioual, yeuac quintlapichiliuia, quimaquiquixiliuia tecuitl in quijopichiliuia, yeuac vilacapiztli, cocouiztli, vilacapitzuia, qen telpopochti, papaquiqui, hacuiaij, tlahiuiaiaij, tecomaltiaiaij, cocolaqui, no tlamacaia.

Auh ya ontlavic ajmoo quimonicia ya tepictoc, quiquauhcotoma, quiquauhcuij, quiquauhchiucatoua, qenqua quiacomolohua, cuauhcuij, in tepictonalli, quiququi ya calaouac ya vuqua ocuqua, tlamacazque.

Auh in tepiquiqui, ajmoo ic ic calaquiqui ya ichacamanalhoua, ya jiuacoua, vecua ocupia, ocupiaque:

auh in ic iuamiuh, in ic teoiuac ajmoo ic ic tlacuaia, mochimamaculiliu in vecuiaca, ya ic chicuacque, ya ochichi-

117. Gods of the air, of water, and of rain (cf. corresponding Spanish text). Popocatepetl and Iztac tepetl (Snow cloud) are mountain-gods in the Valley of Mexico; Poiauhtecatl is Mt. Orizaba.

118. Made of dough (iztac tamalli), in the Spanish edition; Seler renders it ungesäuertes Brot der Totelichnahme (Einige Kapitel, p. 27).

119. ". . . unos papeles llenos de goma de ule, o de otra materia pegajosa llamadas amatecuitl" (Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. 1, p. 188).

The fifth month they called Toxcatl. On the first day of this month they celebrated a great feast in honor of the god named Titlacauan, and for another name, Texcatlipoca. This one they held to be god of the gods. In his honor, they slew, in this feast, a chosen youth who might have no blemishes upon his body, [who was] reared in all luxuries for the space of a year, [and] trained in the playing [of musical instruments], and in singing, and in speaking.

Al quinto mes llamauan Toxcatl: el primero dia deste mes: hazian gran fiesta a honrra del dios llamado Titlacaoa, y por otro nombre Texcatlipoca: a este tenjan por dios de los dioses: a su honrra matauan en esta fiesta vn mancebo escogido, q̃ ninguna tacha tuujesse en su cuerpo: criado en todos deleytes, por espacio de vn año, instruto en tañer, y en cantar, y en hablar.

796 X [305] 776 [533]

Chapter 5
Toxcatl

This feast was the most important of all the feasts. It was like Easter, and fell near Easter Sunday—a few days after. This youth, reared as hath been said, was very comely, and chosen from many. He had long hair—down to the waist.

When, on this feast, they slew the young man who had been reared for [the rôle], they at once produced another, who was to die after one year. He walked everywhere in the town finely arrayed with flowers in his hand, and with people who accompanied him. He greeted with good grace those whom he met. All knew that this one was the likeness of Texcatlipoca, and they bowed before him and worshiped him whenever they met him.

Twenty days before this feast came, they gave this young man four comely young women reared for [the part], with whom for all the twenty days, he had carnal relations. And they changed his array when they gave him these young women: [they] clipped his hair like a war captain and gave him more finery [even] braver [than what he had had].

Five days before he was to die, they celebrated feasts for him and banquets, in cool and pleasant places. Many of the leading men accompanied him. On the arrival of the day he was to die, they took him to a pyramid or sanctuary which they called

Cap. 5.
Toxcatl

1	A	KL	Toxcatl	A	23
2	b		Esta fiesta, era la principal de todas	b	24
3	c		las fiestas, era como pascua, y cayа	c	25
4	d		cerca de la pascua de resurrection	d	26
5	e		pocos dias despues: este mancebo	e	27
6	f		criado, como esta dicho era muy bien	f	28
7	g		dispuesto, y escogido entre muchos:	g	29
8	A		tenja los cabellos largos hasta la cinta.	A	30
9	b		Quando en esta fiesta matauã al	b	1[1]
10	c		mãcebo que estaua criado para esto:	c	2
11	d		luego sacauan otro: el qual auja de	d	3
12	e		morir dẽde a vn año, andaua por todo	e	4
13	f		el pueblo muy atauiado con flores en	f	5
14	g		la mano, y con personas que le acõpa-	g	6
15	A		ñauan saludaua a los que topaua graci-	A	7
16	b		osamẽte: todos sabian que era aquel	b	8
17	c		la ymagẽ de Texcatlipuca: y se pros-	c	9
18	d		trauã delante del, y le adorauan donde	d	10
19	e		qujera que le topauan.	e	11
20	f		Viente dias antes que llegasse esta	f	12[2]

fiesta: dauã a este mancebo quatro moças, biẽ dispuestas y criadas para esto: con las quales todos los veinte dias tenja cõuersaciõ carnal: y mudauanle el traje, quando le dauã estas moças, cortauale los cabellos como capitã y dauãle otros atauijos mas galanes.

Cinco dias antes que muriesse: hazianle fiestas y vanquetes en lugares frescos y amenos: acompañauanle muchos principales: llegado el dia donde auja de morir: lleuauanle a un cu, o oratorio que llamauã tlacuchcalco. y ante que llegasse alli en vn lugar que

[833] [302] [346]

1. Marginal variation: Mixtec he dice mucj.

2. Marginal variation: Mixtl, dichiñi auja Pan.

x 796
[346]
533

After many ceremonies, at last they slew captives on the Pyramid of Uitzilopochtli, and also many slaves. And, having slain one, they sounded musical instruments. And on finishing [with one], they seized another, to slay him. And, on killing him, they again sounded [musical instruments]. Thus they did to each one until finishing them [all]. On ceasing to slay these unhappy ones, they started to dance and to sing, to eat and to drink, and thus the feast ended.

Despues de muchas cerimonjas: finalmente mataua capciuos, en el cu, de Vitzilobuchtli, y tambien muchos esclauos y en matando a vno tocauan los instrumētos musicales, y en cessando tomauan otro para matarle, y en matandole tocaua otravez; ansi hazian a cada vno, hasta acabarlos: acabando de matar estos tristes, començauan a baylar, y a cantar, a comer y a beuer, y ansi se acabaua la fiesta.

796 Yet again an eagle[-costumed warrior] came out, doing just as had been done. All four [acted as if] fighting. They raised their shields and war clubs [as offerings] to the sun.

Now no longer did they delay, by turning back. When they came out, they came out dancing, they went in order. As if lying down on the ground, as if crawling along, flat on the ground, they went looking from side to side; they went up leaping and fighting.

And thereafter the Youallauan came forth, garbed like Totec; only he came last, after the others, behind the four great eagle and ocelot [warriors]; they lifted up their shields and war clubs, offering them and dedicating them to the sun.

Then all the imperanators, the proxies, of all the gods[15] emerged in order, ahead of all. They were called the lieutenants, the delegates, the images.

Similarly, they proceeded; they came in order; they came together. All came down. They came hence, from Iopico, from the very top of the [pyramid] Temple of Iopitli.

And when they had come down below, on the ground, on the earth, they gathered around the circular, flat, sacrificial stone; they seated themselves according to rank on large chairs called quecholicpalli.

And when they were seated, when they were arranged according to their importance, again the first in order was the chief priest, the Youallauan;[16] because it was his right, his office, that he should slay, offer as sacrifice, [that] with his hands he should destroy—with his hands hack open each of the captives destined for sacrifice.

[533 534 198] When this was done, then trumpets were sounded; conch shells, large sea shells, were blown; men put their fingers in their mouths and whistled, and there was singing. With singing of songs and blowing of trumpets, they arrived. The Cozcateca placed themselves in order, their shoulders decked with feather banners, and they encircled the offering-stone.

One [of the captors] quickly seized a captive. The captor, he who owned the captive, seized him by the head to bring him to the offering-stone.

[415 275] When he had brought him there, he offered him wine;[17] and the captive raised the wine four times

Oc no cepa centeĺ oalquiça, in quauhtli, çan le muchiuj in quichioaia, oallachecoaia in nauijtzi: conjauijlaia yn inchimal, yn jmaacquauh itl tonatiuh:

aocmo oalocacoaia, ynic oaltzinilotia, çan njman ic oalquiztimanca, mitotiuijtze, momamantiuj: iuhquin tlalli ixco motetecatiuj, iuhquin tlaltitech ôujujh, mocacanauhtiuj, nanacaztlachixtiuj, haacocholotiuj, tlatlaiecotiuj.

Auh in ie iuhquj njman oalquiça, yioallaoan, totec ipan quiztiujtz, ça oallatoquijlia, ça oallatzacujtiuh, ça oallacujtlapiloca, ça quinoalcentzacujtiuh in nauijtin, vencinti in quaquauhti, yn ococlo, ça oalmaçoa, oalmaana, conjauijlia yn inchimal yn jmaquauh in tonatiuh:

njman ie ic oalquiça oalmoiacatia, oalmotecpana, yn ixquichtin teixiptlaoan, yn jnpatiloean in ixquichtin teteu: motocaiotiaia tepatiuhti, tepatilloean, teixiptlati:

çan ie no yuj in ujh motecpantiuj, cemonotiuj, ynic oaltemo: vmpa oalpena in iopico, vel icpac in teucalli iopitli.

Auh yn oacico tlatzintla, in tlalchi, in tlaltitech: njman quijiaoaloa in temalacatl, yn oconiaoaloque, motlatlalia tecpantoque, ypan veuey icpalli, itoca quecholicpalli.

Auh ynjc onoque, ynjc tecpantoque, eneteiacantica, ie no cuele teiacantica, tlaiacatitica, in iooallaoa: ichica ca itequjuh, yneixcauj̃l catca, in tlamictiz, in tetlatlatiz, ymac polioaz, ymac xamanizq̃ yn ixquich quauhtecatl:

in ie iuhquj njman tlapitzalo, tecciztli mopitza, quijquijztli, mapipitzoa, yoan cujco: cujcapan tlapitzalpan, in oalmoiacatia: motecpana in cozcateca, quijquequechpanotiuj, zztapanjtl, quijiaoaloa in temalacatl.

Ce cantiquiça in malli, icpac cantiuh in tlamanj, in male, ynic qujujca temalacac:

yn ocxitique, quimaca vetli: auh yn vetli nappa coniavilia in malli: auh çaepan conj piztica:

15. Durán, op. cit., pp. 178 ff., names Uitzilopochtli, Quetzalcoatl, Tezcatlipoca, Tlaloc, and Xiuhtecuhtli.
16. Corresponding Spanish speaker "el principal sacerdote, de aquella forma que se llamaba indiano."
17. Seler (op. cit., p. 68) says the captor raised the wine; Sahagún says the prisoner.

a bulbous forehead; not of swollen eyelids, nor enlarged ones; not with swollen cheeks; not of disfigured eyes or cheeks, nor with swollen face; not with cleft chin; not with a gross face, nor a downcast one; not flat-nosed nor with wide nostrils, nor with an arched, Roman nose nor a bulbous nose, nor bent nor twisted nor crooked—but his nose should be well-placed, straight; not thick-lipped nor gross- nor big-lipped, nor with bowl-like ones, nor enlarged; neither one who stammered, nor [one who talked] as if his tongue were pierced for a ring; nor one with welts on his tongue; nor one who spoke a barbarous language, or spoke thickly, or lisped, or was dumb; nor buck-toothed, nor large-toothed or fang-toothed, nor of yellowed teeth, nor darkened, nor decayed—but his teeth were like seashells, well arrayed in order; his teeth were not shaped like bowls. Neither had he scarred eyes, nor poor vision,[4] nor squinting eyes, nor scarified; not blinded, nor of small, seedlike eyes, nor angry-eyed, nor sunken, nor hollow, nor cuplike, nor stupid-looking, nor gouged, pierced, or wounded; nor had he a scarred neck, [like one which hath been] choked, nor one with lacerations, nor with double chin, nor with pocks on the neck. Not with protruding or long ears, nor with torpid neck, nor hunch-backed,[5] nor stiff-necked, nor with neck elongated, much elongated, nor twisted, nor kinked; neither with unduly long hands, nor lacking one hand, nor wanting both hands, nor fat-fingered; not emaciated, nor fat, nor big-bellied, nor of prominent, hatchet-shaped navel, nor of wrinkled stomach, nor shrunken stomach; not cringing; not of hatchet-shaped buttocks; nor of flabby buttocks or thighs.

He who was thus, without flaw, who had no [bodily] defects, who had no blemishes, no moles, who had no lacerations or wrinkles on his body, they then looked well that he be taught to blow the flute; that he might pipe and play his flute well; and that with it he hold his flowers and his smoking tube and blow and suck upon it, and smell [the flowers].

Thus he went bearing [his flute], his flowers, and his smoking tube[6] together as he walked through the streets.

And while yet he lived and was cared for in the house of the guardian, before he appeared [before the people], care was taken that he might be prudent campoponaxtic, amo ixujujlaxtic, amo canujujlaxtic, amo ixpopotztic, amo no camachaloacaltic, amo ixmetlapiltic, amo ixpechtic, amo iacapatztic, amo iacacocoiactic, amo iacaxxxacaltic, amo iacacaxtic, amo iacachittoltic, amo iacaujttoltic, amo iacanecujltic, çan vel icac yn ijac, iacapiaxtic, amo tenxipaltotomaonac, amo texipaltotomac, texipaltotomactic, amo iacachittoltic, amo iacaujttoltic, amo iacanecujltic, çan vel icac yn ijac, iacapiaxtic, amo tenxipalcaiultic, amo popoloc, amo tentzitzipi, amo tentzitzipitlatoa, amo tenmjmjcquj, amo tlanpantic, amo tlancujcujtztic, amo coatlane, amo tlancocoztic, amo tlanxoiauhquj, amo tlanpalanquj: iuhqujn tecciztli itlan, vel onoc vipantoc, amo tlancaxtic, amo no ixtitiquijltic, amo ixnacatic, amo ixujtzaltic, amo itztzitziquijltic, amo ixpopoiontic, amo ixpipiltic, ixpipicilltic, ixcocoçaltic, amo ixcocomoltic, amo ixatlacomoltic, amo ixcacaxtic, amo ixtotolontic, amo ixtotomatic, amo itztzatzapitztic, amo itztzatzamoltic, amo ixtacaltic, amo quechtitiquijltic, quechmotzoltic, quetztzitziquijltic, quechnacatic quechxixiqujpiltic, amo no nacazpatlactic, amo no nacazvilaxtic, amo quechtiltic, amo quechtepotzotic, amo quechacquj, amo quechujiac, amo quechujtlatztic, amo quechnecujltic, amo quechnenetic: amo maviujtlatztic, amo matzicoltic, amo macuecuetzin, amo mapiltotomactic, amo itiujlaxtic, amo cujtlatoltic, amo cujtlapetztic, amo xicquizquj, amo xictopoltic, amo xiccuetio, amo ittitzotzoltic, amo cujtlapechtic, amo tzintopoltic, amo tzincuecuexactic, tzintamalcuecuexac.

Jn aquin iuhquj y, atle itlacauhca, atle yiaioca, atle ytlaciuhcã, atle ytlaciuizço, atle ytech ca etzotzocatl, xitomaciuiztli: njnã cenca necujtlaujlo, inic vel momachtiz, yn tlapitzaz: ynic vel qujpitzaz, yujlacapitz: yoan inic vel muchi ipan qujtzitzquiz, yzochiuh, yoan yicuh, ipan tlapitztiaz, tlachichintiaz, tlanecutiaz:

iuhqujn cenilalli mantiuh yn jzochiuh, yn jyicuh, yn iquac vtli qujtocaia.

Auh in çan oc nemj, in çan oc ospaoalo, yn ichan calpixquj, yn aiamo ixneci, cenca vel necujtlaujloia,

4. See Sandoval (op. cit.); a number of possible variants are suggested.
5. Tepetzintlan is represented in pictorial writings as a humpbacked. Cf. also Molina (op. cit.), Spanish-Nahuatl section, corcobado.
6. "Cebo o cañuto de gobernarse, cuanto" (Ibid.); "cañuto de humo" in Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text.

X 796 535 cords, called flower cords, and thus went stretched out in line. They went with wormwood flowers[10] placed upon their heads.

[533] And they went singing, crying out loudly, singing in a very high treble. As the cenzontli bird takes [its song, so was] their song. Like a bell their voices [rang out].

The old men led [the singing women]; they loosed the song and went directing them—the men and elders of the tribal temple. And they were named keepers of the god[dess].

And [the likeness of] Uixtociuatl went in the midst of them. Before her went a brilliant feather ornament which an old man carried in his arms. And this [ornament] was called Uixtociuatl's brilliant plumage.[11]

And for [the likeness of] Uixtociuatl was sung the women's song every day until all ten days had been reached. And when the tenth day had come to pass, that night she began her vigil. They sang [and danced] all night. At no time did they rest; they passed the night sleepless. Thus they passed the night in vigil.

And as [the impersonator of] Uixtociuatl danced, the old women seized her and held her as they made her dance.

Likewise the captives danced all the night—those who would come first, who would die [first], as her fundament; those whom they would make her fundament.

X 796 792 And when dawn broke, when verily the feast day [came], then were arrayed the priests who would slay the victims. These were called Uixtoti. They were adorned and painted like Uixtotin; they were painted with the face painting of Uixtotin. They carried their paper neck rosettes and their paper shoulder rosettes. And their [head] insignia were made [like] the claws of eagles, [made] of quetzal head feathers and eagle down.

X 796 293 And the legs of the eagle were also made of eagle down. These insignia [were supported] upon wooden head rests with holes [in the head rests, in which the insignia were inserted]. Here lay the insignia, tied [across the back], bound around the stomach with cotton bands, tied firmly and tightly. And their cords were bands, narrow woven bands.

And all the common folk who looked on, all carmotitilinjtiuj: ym jhiztauhiazochiuh, ym icpac contecatiuj:

yoan cujcatiuj, cenca tzatzi, cenca tlapiztzaoa: iuhquin tzontli cana incujc: iuhquj in coiolli intoxquj:

qujniacana in ueuetque, cuicatlaça qujncujcatlaxilitiuj, in calpuleque, in calpulueuetque: yoan motocaiotia teuoaque.

Auh in Vixtocioatl, tlanepantla icatiuh, ce petlacotl qujiacana, ce tlacatl veue in qujnapalou: auh ynjn mitoaia vixtopetlacotl.

Auh in iehoatl vixtocioatl, momuztlae in qujcioapancujcatiaia, yn ixqujchica matlaqujlhujtl onaci: auh yn oacito matlaqujlhujtl, teutlacpa im peoa qujtoçauja, qujcujcatia iuh ceioual, aquenman cochi, acochiztli qujmochioaltia, iuh vetzi in ioalli.

Auh in Vixtocioatl, mitotia caana, caantinenuj yn ylamatque in qujtotia:

no iuh ceioual in mjtotia mamalti, in iacatiazque mjquizque, in iuhquj ypepechoan iezque, in qujnmopepechtizque.

Auh yn otlathujc, yn iquac ie vel ilhujtl, mu muchichioa in tlamacazque, in tlamictizque: in iehoan y, motocaiotiaia Vixtoti, movixtochichioa, moujxtoychioa, intlatlaquechpaiouh, yoan ymaamacuexpal: auh yn jntlauiz, quaviztitl muchioa, quetzaltzontecomaio quãmolocio.

Auh in quauhtli imetz muchioa, no quãmolocio, ynjn tlaviztli cãcacazo, cõcocoio, yn vncã onmana tlauiztli, ic maapana, ic moxixillancujtlalpia, ic motetevilpia, ic mocacatzilpia: auh yn jmecaio, yn jmemecaio, tlazochtli, tlazochpitzactli.

Auh in jaqujch tlacatl macoualli, in tlatlatta, mu-

[137] 13. Cf. p. 63, n. 27. Simeon (op. cit.) defines it as ornamento lacinioso; see, further, note 15, below. Molina (op. cit.) has "Tzontepaxtl. ornamento o sombrero pereado"; Sahagún (loc. cit.) has the same. See also Rubrecht ed., Vol. III, p. 252.

14. "Un plumage muy hermoso, hecho a manera de manojo de cruz" (Sahagún, corresponding Spanish).

*796 805 wind. And the fourth place which she entered was over there at Xolloco. [And] there she stopped.

[For] these were a part of, and carried together, the four year-bearers—Reed, Flint, House, and Rabbit. Thus do the year-bearers go describing circles, whirling around [as a measure of time].

*796 When, at early dawn, Xilonen was to die, all during the night songs were sang after the manner of the women. Vigil was kept. Everyone passed the night watching; they slept not; the women remained [533] sleepless. They sang the songs [of Xilonen].

And when day broke, then began the dancing. Verily, everyone—the leaders of the youths, the lead- [552] ing warriors, and the valiant warriors bore maize stalks. These were named "bird banners."

*796 Likewise the women danced—those who were with Xilonen. They were pasted with red feathers. 536 And their faces were painted with yellow ochre. Also 793 they colored their faces in two colors: about their lips they were yellow with ochre, and their fore- [302] heads were stained with the red of anatta seeds.[8] [They bore] their wreaths of flowers upon their [301] heads, and the leaders had garlands of the yellow flowers of the Carophyllus mexicanus [about their necks].[9]

These women were known as priestesses. They mingled not with the men, but remained at one side. They were describing circles, and enclosing Xilonen. They sang for her after the manner of women. These women were called "the hanging gourd."

And the warriors danced before [Xilonen], following a serpentine course.

*796 And for this reason were [the women] known as "the hanging gourd": the two-toned wooden drum, 793 which they beat as they went, had tied to it a gourd, [534] which was under the drum, which looked as if it were hanging beneath. They who struck the two-toned drum went carrying a little drum under their arms, which they beat, as they went, with rubber-tipped drum sticks.[10]

[534] And the priests, [who] attended them, went blowing horns; they blew shell trumpets as they went. And they went strewing, scattering, and casting incense as they went to meet Xilonen.

And the fire priest, who was to slay [Xilonen] as ecatl: ynic nauhcan aquja, vmpa xolloco, vmpa ontzonquiçaia, çã qujtoctiaia, çan qujujcaltiaia, yn nauhtetl xiuhtonalli: yn acatl, in tecpatl, in calli, in tochtli, ynic tlaiaoalotiuh, ynic momalacachotiuh, in xiuhtonalli.

In ie iuh ioatzinco miquiz in Xilonen: ceiocal in cioapan cujcoia, toçoosia, muchi tlacatl iztoçoosia, amo cochia, mocochiçoloaia in cioa, queoaia quevilliaia yn icujc.

Auh yn ie otlatujc, njman ic peoa in netotilo, vel izqujch tlacatl in tiachcaoan, in telpopuchti, yn iiaque, yoan in tequjoaque, incicintopil: ynjn motocaiotia totopanjtl.

No mjtotia in cioa, yn itechpouja in xilonen, mopopotonjaia tlapaliujtica: yoan motzaoaia tecoçauhtica: no ic qujcotona, yn inxaiac, yn jntenco, tecoçauhtica: auh yn imixquac tlapalachiotica, ymjicpactochiuh, inxonochicozquj cempoalxuchitl yiacatiuh.

Yn ichol yn, cioa, moteneoa cioatlamacazque, amo qujmonnelooa yn oqujchti, çan nonqua mantiuj, cololujtiuj, qujtepeujtiuj in Xilonen: qujcioapãcujcatitiuj: in ichoantin y, cioa moteneoa tecomapilooa.

Auh in tiachcaoan ixpan mjtotitiuj, mococolotiuj:

auh ynic moteneoa tecomapilooa, ea in teponaztli in qujujtectiuj, itech çaliuhtiuh in atecomatl, yhicampa iteputzco ietiuh in teponaztli, iuhqujn pilcatiuh ic neci: in teponaçoa çan qujciacaujtiuh in teponaztontli in qujujtectiuh olmatica.

Auh in tlamacazque, tenanamjquj tlapitztiuj, tecciztli in qujpitztiuj: yoan yn iauhtextli in qujpipixotiuj, qujcecenmatiuj, qujtetepeuhtiuj, conjxnamjctiuj in Xilonen.

Auh in tlenamacac, in tlamjctiz, vel mocencaoa,

---

8. Bixa orellana L., the annatto shrub (Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 6). Cf. also Seler, op. cit., p. 151.

9. "Estas flores que se llaman coronadelchiol, son semejantes y de buen olor" (Rodondo ed., Vol. III, p. 273). Tagetes, in Seler, loc. cit. See also p. 99, n. 15.

10. Clark (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 95, n. 2), writing of the tlamamaquac ocuicuicac (drumming priests), says "The player is called the teponaqui, and the drum, teponazcli. Made from the hollowed-out trunk of the Lonaxcua ovalbeus Bonpl. this drum has two tones; the rubber-headed drum-sticks are of chicle." Cf. also Sahagún's description of the tempo on the teponaz (corresponding Spanish text).

X 796 and hung rows of all the varied flowers, the most beautiful flowers, the threaded ones.

778 Then flowers were offered to all the rest of the gods, to the images of the gods, [or] devils. They were adorned with flowers; they were girt with [garlands of] them; flowers were placed upon their heads, there in the temples.

Thereupon all together, in all the houses, the homes of the majordomos, the homes of the great noblemen, and the houses of the youths, they laid flowers out [before the idols]. And they spread them out in the homes of each and all.

X 796 And afterwards, when each had been ornamented, then there were feasting and drinking. Everywhere, 535 everyone ate; all were in a festive mood.

And when midday came, then all sang and danced —verily, they drew up all the youths; the masters and the leaders of the young men, the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí.[9] Here in the god's courtyard there was dancing—in the courtyard of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli.

[701] And those who led [the dance] were the fearless warriors, the great warriors, each of whom was considered [equal to] a battle squadron, who were not laggards in war; who turned [the enemy] back, [whose exploits] wheeled them hence.

[548] Also the women danced—not the daughters [of onlookers, but] courtesans, harlots—who went between [pairs of the men], they were [all] stretched in a row, taken by the hand or grasped about the waist. They moved all in line they went winding to and fro, nowhere breaking the line, at no time losing hands. They went in orderly procession.

●[533] And the singers, who sang for them, who beat drums for them, who beat the ground drums, were quite apart [from the dancers]—to one side; they were upon a [counterfeit] house, upon the round
[778] altar [or pyramid].[4] And the altar was completely round, round like a shield, like a millstone. And here, upon this, stood [the musicians].

And thus they danced: they did not leap, nor make great movements; they did not make dance gestures; they did not move throwing themselves about, nor dance making arm-movements, nor go bending their nepapan uchitl, in tlaçouchitl, in manquj, in tlamuetli:

njman ie ic tetuchimaco, cenvetzi in ixqujchtin teten, yn iniixiptlaoan teten, tlatlacateculo, tetuchitilo, tetuchiapano, teicpacuchitilo, in vncan in tetenpan:

njman ie ic cenvetzi in noujan calpan, in calpixque inchan, in venei pipilti inchan: yoan in tetelpuchcali, quicentzacutimanj, quicentzacutimomana in teckachan.

Auh in ie iuhquj yn otecencaoaloc mec tlatlaquale, haztlios: noujan tlatlaqualo, yilhujtlamacho.

Auh yn eacic nepantla tonatiuh mec cujcoianolo, vel iuqujch quicencaoa, in telpuchtli, in teachcaoan, in telpuchiaque, in tequjoaque, in quaquachictin, in otomj: vncan in netotilo in teuitoalco, yn itoalco Vitzilopochtli.

Auh in teiacana, ichoantin in quaquachicti, in venei tiacaui yn iuhquj cecentecuti momatia, yn amo mitzacujlia iaoc, in tecuepanj, in temalacachoanj.

No ichoantin in cioa mjtotiaia, amo ichoan in teichpuchoan, ichoantin in mahaujltianj, yn avianjme intzatzalan mantiuj, inmatitech maantiuj, mocujtlanaoa, çan cenpanti, çan cenpantitiuj, mococolotiuj, acan cotonj, acan momacaoa vipantiuj.

Auh in cujcanjme, in quincujcatia, in quintlatzotzonjlia, quinmenetzotzonjlia, çan nonqua, çan chico, caltech in manj, emomoztitech: auh in momoztli, çan iaoltic, teujlacachtic, malacachtic, yn jtech, yn itlan manj.

Auh ynic mjustia, amo chocholoa, amono ontlayiaoa, amo ontlayiauhtiuj, amo motlatlaztiuj, amo [701] 3. Here and elsewhere, the following equivalents are offered: quaquachictli—fearless warrior; telpuchtli—youth; teachcauh—master of the youths; telpuchtlato—ruler of the youths; telpuchiaque—leader of the youths; tequioc or yaomiquiqui—seasoned warrior. To a degree, such definitions are, perhaps, arbitrary. The suggested equivalents, however, are based upon the following passages from Sahagún (Robredo ed.): Vol. I, p. 292, and Vol. II, pp. 137, 267 (quaquachictin, tequioque); Vol. I, pp. 131, 168, 182, 199, 215, 289, 291, and Vol. II, p. 182 (telpuchtli); Vol. I, pp. 168, 291, and Vol. II, pp. 188, 319 (teachcauh); Vol. I, p. 291 (telpuchtlato); Vol. II, p. 121 (yaomiquiqui). See also Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 94, on otomi and quaquachictli; pp. 89, 116, on teachcauh, telpuchtlato; Vol. II, pp. 32, 98, 98, 136 on tequioc or yaomiquiqui; Carrasco (Libro del cielo), p. 243) on telpuchtli; Soler, op. cit., p. 198 (telpuchtlato), p. 144 (tequioc), pp. 144, 159 (telpuchiaque).

4. Cf. Soler, op. cit., p. 198.

Each one stood saluting him, before whom lay all manner of arms and devices—the shields, and the clubs set with obsidian blades, and the capes, and the breech clouts.

They stood saluting him, and then each one stood receiving his gifts. They then went out where all adorned themselves, putting on the devices and insignia. To the great chieftains was given this costly array. And to all the common folk were given the Huaxtec devices.[14]

And after that, when this was concluded, when all were arrayed, then once more all placed themselves in a line before Moctezuma. Each one stood saluting him. Thereupon [each] came forward; [each] came up there.

And when the dancing took place, the hand-weaving dance was danced. Those to whom insignia had been given came there to display their devices. And the insignia which were given were like their reward, which served to bind them [to their duty]. And in this manner was the hand-waving dance: all were in columns, as hath been said; like flowers they moved. They went in glory [as] they circled the temple.

And all the onlookers, the old women—all the beloved women—burned with tears; their hearts were full of grief.

They said: "These are our beloved sons whom we see here; if, in five or ten days, word comes: '[We are] in flood and fire—that is, at war'—is it possible that they will return again? Will they find their way back? Verily, they will be gone forever!"

And [the wearer of the skin of the likeness of] Toci, and her Huaxtecs, and the medicine [women] went apart [from the others] and went dispersed behind [the dancers]. They alone proceeded singing, apart, singing in a high falsetto; like [that of the cen]tzontli [bird] they raised their [voices in] song. The hand-waving dance began at midday; and when it ceased, the sun had already set.

And when dawn broke, and it was already day, again all gathered, once more all dancing the hand-waving dance, and none ceased, even once. For arms and insignia were offered to the noblemen—not now many, but a few. And they were bestowed devices ceceiaca contlapalotimanj, ixpan onoc, in jxqujch nepapan tlaviztli, in chimalli, yoan in macquavitl yoã tilmatli, yoan maxtlatl: 796 [714 411]

contlapalotimanj, njman ic concujtimanj, ceceiaca in innetlauhtil: vmpa oniatimanj in vmpa nechichioalo, onneaqujlo tlaviztli: in vevei tiacaoan, in qujmomaca ichoatl in tlaçotlanquj: auh in ie ixqujch, ça tlacujtlapiloa, ichoatl in qujmomaca cuexteca tl tlaviztli.

Auh in ie iuhquj in ontlamoac, in õnechichioaloc: njmã ic oc ceppa õnevipanolo, in jxpan Motecuçoma: ceceiaca contlapalotlmanj, njmã ic oalqujztimanj, njman ic vmpa oniatimanj.

Auh in jquac in ie netotilo, nematlaxo: vmpa oniatimanj in omotlavizmacaque, vncan tlaviznextia. [535] Auh in tlaviztli, ic qujmomaca, iuhqujn impatiuh muchioa, in qujmjliuhca muchioa: auh injc momtlaça tetecpãtivi in juh omjto iuhqujn xuchitl mantiuh, vel maviçotivi, qujjaiaoalo in teucalli.

Auh in jxqujchtin tlatlatta, in jlamatzitzin, yie ixqujch tlacatl cioatzitzinti, tlachoqujztleoa, icnoioa in iniollo:

qujtoaia. Inin topilhoantzitzin nican tiqujmitta, intla macujl, matlac oalmjto, tehoatl tlachinolli, id est, iaeiutl, cujx oc mocuepaqujuj, cuix oc ymiloch qujchioaqujuj, ca ic cenizzque.

Auh in toci, yoan ycuexoan, yoan titici, çan nonqua mantiuj, itepuzco tepeuhtiuj: çanjioque in cujcatiuj, ynic cujca cenca tlapiezaoa, iuhqujn tzõtli cana incujc: in peoa nematlaxo nepantla tonatiuh, auh in necaoalo, ic oncalaquj in tonatiuh. [533]

Auh yn otlatujc, in ie ynuztlaioc, oc cepa cenqujxoa, oc no nematlaxo, aiac mocaoa ca ça yiopa: qujnjquac motlauizmacaia in pipilti, aocmo mjequjnti, ca quenqujntin: auh in qujmomacaia, cenca tlaço- [714]

14. See Sahagún, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, pp. 1388. Sahagún mentions (pp. 131, 132) a painted, cone-shaped hat; a disc or crown fastened to the hair; a crescent-shaped nose plate; a golden ear pendant; and spindles. Sahagún then relates to the wars of Axayacatl among the Huaxtecs, or also "the Mexicanos were [then to purchase] themselves to be the servants, followers, labourers, of the old mother of the gods, Tetec Innan, the Huaxtec earth goddess, . . . leader and inventor of war, . . . who was supposed to be at home among the Huaxtecs, and perhaps was actually received by the Mexicanos from them." [776 177]

X 796 would carry the banners, and the women who would wash their faces. [The dance] ceased when conch shells were blown [at midnight].

X 796 536 And hence was it named the serpent dance: they took one another's hands, while ranged in a line; with their hands they grasped circlets of grass, or reeds, or cord made into jar rests. The victims went trotting among [the others]; there was much running; they leapt, hurrying as if in haste, as if breathless. There was circling about, with no song, without singing.

And the old men of the tribal temple beat drums for them; and only they sang. Some looked on, marveling at [the dance]. And much was their fasting admired and respected. All abstained, even more so [834] the owners of the victims. No [man] might lie with a woman, nor a woman with a man.

And when they had danced the serpent dance, then they dispersed.

X 796 And when it dawned, on the twentieth day, when [it was] verily the feast day, thereupon the bathed slaves went to [their owners'] houses, taking their [386] leave. They carried with them black stain, [or] perchance blue mineral earth, or red ochre. And as [533] leave was thus taken in [the owners'] houses, they went singing, as if their voices would crack, as if they were hoarse. When they reached the houses of those who had bathed [them], then they dipped [386] their hands into the blue stain, or the black stain, or the red ochre. Thereupon they laid their hands upon the posts and upon the door lintels, wherever they came out of the homes of those who had ceremonially bathed [them].

And when they had proceeded to the several places where their relatives were, then they again went to [their owners'] homes; these in vain offered them food. Some yet would eat; and some could not now eat.

And when this was done, gifts awaited them, spread out. Cloaks were ready [for them], breech clouts, shifts, skirts. And when the gifts were laid out, thereupon the victims took their banners upon their backs, arraying themselves of their own free will. And the women likewise, in the same way, put upon their backs their baskets with all their womanly adornment. Thereupon they arose to carry in their arms the gifts made them; before the door, in the street, they arranged themselves in procession. And the bathed ones thereupon entered the interior of the 'que, ynan in teixamjque cioa: in mocaoa iquac in tlatlapitzalo.

Auh injc moteneoa coanecujlolo, maana, motecpana: injc maana iaoalli, aço toli, anoço mecatl in qujiaoallalia: in tlaaltilti intlan aactivi, cenca motlatlaloa, chichitonj, vivicinj, iuhqujn tlaixtotochca, iuhqujn tlaciéa: moiaiaoaloa, amo cujca, amo ma cujca.

Auh in calpolvevetque, qujotlatzotzonjlia: auh çanjoque in cujca: cequjntin tlatlatta, tlatlamaviçoa: auh cenca tlamaviztililoia, cenca qujmaviztiliaia in neçaoalizti: vel ixquich tlacatl, motzitzqujaia: oc cenca iehoantin, in tealtique: aiac cioacochia, auh in cioa, ano ac oqujchcochia.

Auh in onnecococololoc, njmã ie ic tlazitinj.

Auh in otlatvic, in vncan tlacempoalti, in ie vel iquac ilhujtl: njman ie ic vi in tlaaltilti, mocacalnaoatizque: qujnpatilia tlilli, açi tezotli, anoço tlavitl: auh in jquac ie vi mocacalnaoatizque, cujcativi, iuhqujn no in tezqujtzatzaianj, omach içaoacaque: in onacique inchan tealtique, njmã conaquja in imma tezotitlan, anoço tlilitlan, anoço tlauhtitlan: njman ie ic commamaña tlaquetzaltitech, yoã tlaixquatl itech, izquicã qujça in inchachan tealtique.

Auh in jzqujcan onqujzque, in inoaniolcaoecan: njmã ie ic no ceppa vi in inchachã, in nen qujntlamaca; in cequjntin oc ontlaqua; auh in cequjntin aocmo tlaqua.

Auh in jquac in, ie ic onoc in tetlauhtilli, ic qujchixtoc in tilmatli, in maxtlatl, in vipilli, in cueitl: auh in omotetecac, tetlauhtilli; njmã ie ic mochichioa in tlaaltilti commomamaltia in impã, çan monomavia in muchichioa: auh in cioa çan no innoma in cõmomamaltia, intana, in jxqujch incioatlatquj: njmã ie ic moquetza in tlanapaloa, in qujnpaloa tetlauhtilli, qujiaoac, vtlica oalmotecpana: auh in tlaaltilti, njman ie ic calaqaj in cioapan, qujoaliaoaloa in tlecujlli: mec oalquiça, mec ommoiacatia

And upon the next day, all drank wine; all began the drinking. The wine which was drunk was named blue wine. All the old men, the old women, the warriors of noble lineage, they who had wives, the men of marriageable age, and the nobility, and the leaders of nobility—they drank the wine.

And the young chiefs, who were already mature, drank wine, but they drank only in secret, not disclosing themselves; they hid themselves well in the dark; they retired behind bushes, lest they be seen

And if anyone discovered them, if it were known that verily they drank wine, that indeed all had gathered and congregated together—they beat them with pine staves; they bruised their bodies sorely, and shaved their heads like servants. They dragged them, kicking them; they hurled them to the ground; they cast stones at them. Verily, they afflicted them exceedingly. Sometimes, from this, death came.

And after they had taken their pleasure [with them], they cast them hence, they threw them out of the house. Thus fear came over [the people].

And in the home of him who had ceremonially bathed [the victims], there was song; there was beating of ground drums, rattling of gourd rattles, beating of turtle shells. Only as they were [seated] on the ground was there song; only upon the floor was the ground drum beaten. Gifts and favors were given all who worked and served the guests—those who cared for the tobacco, who saw to the tobacco; and those who cared for the chocolate, who saw to the chocolate; or who saw to the water; and those who offered food—the hosts. And the honored women, who were among the [cooking] vessels—who cared for the tamales, or the meat; those who set forth the meat, who stood over the meat; and those who stood by the wine—the wine makers. And all the neighbors—all of them—were offered gifts.

And the third day [of Atemoztli] was called "The Mock-fight of the Chonchayotl." One [man was arrayed to] resemble, and was the likeness of, the Chonchayotl. His hair was wild and disordered, bloody and frightful.[19] And when they arrayed the Chonchayotl, then they separated [into bands]. Apart were the priests, who went, and stood, with the Chonchayotl. And [also] apart lay the young warriors.

Then, at midday, they began skirmishing, in mock battle. They struck one another with fir branches, and canes, and tough, thin reeds bound firmly, tightly, tlatlaoano, haapeoalo: in vctli mja itoca matlalvctli, ixquijch tlacatl in vevetque, in jlamatque: yoã in tlapaltequjoaque, in ic cioaoaque, in otlapaliuhcatque, yoã in tetecutin, yoan in tlapaliuhcaiaca, in quja vctli. 796 X 273

Auh in telpuchtlatoque, in ic chicaoaque, quja in vctli: iece çan qujchtacayia, amo mjxmanaia, vellaiovalli qujmotocriaia, vel moxiuhtlapachoaia, injc amo ittozque.

Auh intla aca qujnnexxotlaz, intla machililocque, in ca otlaoanque: in ca necentlaliloia, in ca nenonotzaloia: qujnvivitequi, ocoquauhtica vel qujnnacatepoçaoa, yoã qujnquatexoloxima, qujnquatetequj, qujnvivilana, qujntilicçatinemj tlaltitech qujntzotzona, qujntetentimaiavi, vel qujmellelaxitia: nemamaco injc mjctiloia. 637

Auh in oimellel onquiz, njmã in ca oalmaiavi, qujnoalchiccanaoa qujiaoac, ic maviztli verzia.

Auh in inchan tealtique, cujco, vevetzozonalo, aiacacholo, aiochioalo: çan tlalpan cujco, çan tlalpan vevetl in motzozona: tetlauhtilo, qujntlauhtia yn ixquijchtin otlatequjpanoque in techixquj, in qujmocujtlauja yietl, yn iiepã ca, yoan in qujmocujtlauja cacaoatl, in cacaoapan ca, aneço apan ca, yoan in techia, in techixquj: yoan in cioatzitzinti, in contitlan nemj, in tamalpan ca, in nacapan ca, in nacatlatlali, in nacatl ipã icac: yoan in vctli ipan icac, yn vetlali: yoan in ixquijch tlaxilacaleque, ixquijch tlacatl motlauhtia. 796 X 533 [431] [272 276] [252]

Auh injc eilhujtl moteneoa chonchaiocacaliua, ce moquetzaia, ce qujxiptlaiotiaia in chonchaiotl: quatatapatic, quapaçoltic, ieço temamauhti: auh yn oqujcencauiaque chõchaiotl, mec mozeloa, nonqua manj, in tlamacaztique inoan eoa inoan icac in chonchaiotl: auh nonqua momana in telpupuchti: 796 X mec: peoa nepantla tonatiuh, in moiniaotla, micali, yajc mouijujcequj, acxoimaiti, ichoatl yn oiametl, yoan acapitzactli, yoan otlapitzactli, qujxujcujtlal-

19. See H. 31.

And they fastened the new

with a rope about the waist, and [guards] held them tightly [with it] when they [went forth to] urinate. And when it was midnight, then hair was cut from the [crowns of] the heads of all of them; they cut their hair as hath been told and published. And when their hair had been cut, then feathers were pasted [to their heads], and also they pasted feathers [to the heads of] the women. And, as during the night, none of the guards might sleep by day.[10]

And when day began to break and it grew bright, thereupon (as hath been told) were burned the [bathed ones' raiment]; when these were burned, then once more they entered indoors. And some did not burn their belongings, but offered and gave them to others.

And when it dawned [again], then all were once more adorned. Thereupon they went to the place where they were to die; they went ordered in rows. When they reached where they were to die, then they danced and sang spiritedly. It was said that [they sang until] their voices cracked; that they were hoarse.

And when the sun had passed the zenith, then descended [he who was adorned in the likeness of] Paynal. He led and was first among the captives, who would become the fundament [of the ceremonially bathed victims]. When the captives died, then [they slew] the ceremonially bathed ones, who [were adorned in the likeness of] Ixcoçauhqui.

And when they had completely ended the slaying, when it was so, [then] all the chiefs and lords, who were men due great reverence, were ready, and stood waiting in complete array. Moctezuma led them. He had put on the turquoise diadem, the royal diadem.

And all put on their turquoise nose plugs and [their] turquoise ear pendants, [made of] fine turquoise. And some [had] only [ear pendants] made of wood and painted like turquoise. And they put on their sleeveless jackets and turquoise [blue] waist bands well ornamented, and the Xolotl jewel which had the form of a dog. [It was] made of paper and painted turquoise [blue]. And [they put on] breech clouts of paper painted with black stripes. And these were painted only with black.

And in their hands were staves, which were small and shaped like weaving sticks and painted in two colors—red above and chalky white below. In either ic tetzoncujoa, qujntzoncuj: in juh omjto, in juh omoteneuh: auh in ontetzoncujoac: njmã ie ic tepotonjlo, no qujnpotonja in cioa: auh in juh ceiooal, aocac mã ontlacacochi in tlapixque. 796 [514]

Auh in otlavizcalli moquetz, in ie tlatlalchipaoa: njmã ie ic motlatlatlatilia (in juh omjto) in ommotlatlatlatilique: njmã ie ic no ceppa calaquj in inirian: auh in aca ãmo qujmotlatlatilia in jazca, çan qujtetlauhtia, çan qujtemamaca.

Auh in otlatvic, njmã ic no ceppa techichioalo: njmã ie ic vi in vmpa mjqujzque, motecpana: in onacique vmpa mjqujzque: njmã ie ic mjtotia, mocujca ellaquaoa: omach intozqujtzatzaian, omach ihiçaoacaque: [533]

Auh in ie ommotzcaloa tonatiuh; njmã ie ic oaltemo in Paynal, qujnoaliacana, iacattivi in mamalti, in impepechoan muchioa: in ommjcque mamalti: njmã ichoã in tlaaltilti in ixcoçauhq̃.

Auh in ocentlanque mjquj in ie iuhquj: auh in jxqujchtin tlatoque, in tetecutin in cenca mavizti-lonj, ie ic manj, ça qujchixtimanj omocencauhq̃, qujniacana in Motecuçoma: ocontlali xiuhvitzolli, in tlatocaiotl: 796 301 [643] yoan contlalia iacazivitl in muchinti, yoã conaquja xiuhnacochtli, vel xivitl. Auh in cequintin çan quavitl in tlachioalli, tlaxiuhicujlolli yoan cõnaquja xicolli, xiuhtlalpilli, vel tlaiecchioalli, yoã in xolocozquj iuhqujn chichiton ic ietiuh; amatl in tlachioalli, tlaxiuhicujlolli, yoan iamamaxtli, acazilquj injc tlacujlolli: auh çan tlilli injc tlacujlolli.

Auh in immac omocioh quavitl, çan tepinoton tlazonopantectli, chictlapãquj; in aco chichiltic, auh 796 293 [386]

10. "Es aquello mucho mallo durazqui" seems to be the corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex. See, however, Angel Maria Garibay K: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, Vol. II (1946), p. 171, for a discussion of these in comparison.

until the rosy dawn, when dawn would break and the morning would redden—when the swallow would sing.

And when dawn broke, thereupon all bestirred themselves, and ate and drank. Thereupon the old men of the tribal temple and the singers sat in the courtyard to sing for them. And they walked carrying the small children upon their backs. And [a child who was] a little larger his uncle and aunt came grasping by the hand. There they made him dance; they went through dance movements. And when the sun hung low, after noon, then all gathered at the Tezcacoac. Here the dance and song proceeded—the songs, in all, spreading a sound as of the crashing of waves.

And then began the giving of wine. Everyone carried his wine, and brought it there. Among themselves, all took it and offered it, in earthen jars—all continually giving [it to others], giving and taking in return. Here they gave the wine to all the small children—those who were grown and those yet lying in the cradle, moistening food [in the wine] for them. Verily, everyone already mature was drunk; in truth, all showed that they had drunk wine.

None showed awe [of the wine] as it foamed; none [thought it] precious as it gleamed. It fell to the ground; the wine ran like water.[9]

And they carried their drinking vessels, called tzicuiltecomatl, [which had] three legs and, on four sides, had handles.

With ruddy faces, crying out, short of breath, with glazed eyes, all mingled with one another; there were disputes; all circled and milled about. Becoming more intense, all crowded and pressed together, elbowing each other. All took one another by the hands; they were bemused. Embracing one another firmly, [thus] all entered their homes.

Thus one said: "The wine feast hath verily been observed; for the children have drunk wine."

And thus ended and concluded Izcalli. Then came to reign the Nemontemi—five days which had no day-names, which were no longer counted, which were not reckoned in the [day] count. Greatly were they feared and held in awe.

For they were ill-omened and of no use. Nothing was done [during those days]. They were ill-fated, of ill-fortune. For in them was no reward or merit—quenman tlatvix, in quenman tlatlavilotleoaz, in quenmã tlatoz cujcujtzcatl. 796'

Auh in otlatvic, njmã ie ic tlatlacivi, tlatlaqualo, aztlioa: njmã ie ic motlalia in vevetque calpoleque, cujcanjme, in jtoalco in qujncujcatiaia, vncã qujnmamatinemj in pipiltotonti: auh in ie achi qualton imatitech cantinemj in jtla, yoàn iavi, vncan qujtoia, tlaiiauhtinemj: auh in ie achi tlaca in vmmopilo tonatiuh, vncan oakenqujxoa in tezcacoac: vncã mocenmana in netotiliztli, in cujqujztli, cepã caoantimomana, xaxamacatimanj in cujcatl: 852 [535] [533]

Auh vncã peoa in nemaco, in temaco vetli, muchi tlacatl yioc vmpa qujtquj, vmpa qujvica, tetlan tlaano, apiloltica, vncan netech nemaco nepanotl nemamaco, necuecuepililo, necuecuepcaiotililo, vncan qujntlaoãtia in jxqujchtin pipiltotonti in ie achi qualtoton, yoan in oc coçolco onoque, çan qujntlapaloltiaia, vel muchi tlacatl ivinti in ie veveitlaca, vel neixmanalo in tlaoano: 273 796' 852 amo nemauhtilo, iuhqujn tlapopoçoca, amo tlaçotli iuhqujn tlapepetlaca, tlalpã aci, iuhqujn atl nemja vetli, yoan intlaoancax qujtquja, itoca tzicujltecomatl: ei icxi, nauhcampa nacace, [415] iuhqujn tlaichichiliui, iuhqujn tlaçomoca, iuhqujn tlacica, iuhqujn tlaixmetxivi, tlaixnelivi, neixnanamjco, tlaixmalacachivi, tlaixmoiaoa, iuhqujn nexoxocolo, nepopotzolo nequequeçalo, netotopeoalo nematitech nexano, nexanalo, nececenquetzalo, nececenmacho, nequechnaoalotiuh in cacalaca techachan:

ic mjtoa ca nel ilhujo in vetli, ca pillaoano.

Auh injc entzonequjça, injc ontlamj Izcalli: njmã oalmotlalia, oalmotema in Nemontemj: macujlilhujtl in aoctle itoca tonãlli, in aocmo vmpovi, in aocmo vmpouhqujcenca imacxxoia, cenca mauhcaitoia: 777 796' 805 ichica ca çan nõqujzquj, vncã nenenequjztilo, atle vnqujxoa, nenencuilo, nenenencolo: ichica ca atle vncan ca ilhujlli, mahcoalli, can vncan icnoiztl, neno-

1. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 24.

X 796 782 Here Are Told, in Very Truth, the Offerings Which They Made, in Order to Pay Honor to the Devil.

Nican mitoa, in vel nelli tlamanalistli, in qujchioaia, inic qujmavizilizia tlacateculotl.

The Swallowing of Serpents.

Thus was done by those who swallowed serpents, when they observed [the feast of] Atamalqualiztli. They who were named maçateca swallowed [the serpents] while they were quite alive, holding them only in their mouths, cutting them to pieces [with their teeth] that they might swallow them. And when they had swallowed them, thereupon they were offered gifts, as hath been told in its place, and water tamales were eaten. [This happened] every eight years.

Coostololiztli.

Inic muchioaia, in coatl qujtolooaia, iquac yn atamalqualoia qujchioaia: moteneoaia maçateca, çan ioltiuja in qujntoloaia, çan incamatica in qujmonanaia, qujnxaxamatztiuja, ynic qujntoloaia. Auh yn jquac oq'ntoloque, çatepan motlauhtiaia, yn iuhquj ipan omito, atamalqualoia chicuexiuhtica.

The Swallowing of Frogs.

And thus they swallowed frogs, likewise alive. When this was similarly done, these very same maçateca performed [the swallowing].

Cocistololiztli.

Auh injc cuecueia qujntoloaia çan no ioltivia, çan no iquac muchivaia, çan no ichoantin in maçateca qujchivaia.

Making Birds Fly.

[231] Thus was it done [when] birds were made to fly at the time of the feast of Etzalqualiztli: The youths tied birds to wooden rods; thus they danced as all [the birds, fastened by strings], circled [the wooden rods].

Totopatlanaltiliztli.

Jnjc muchivaia, totopatlanaltiloia iquac in etzalqualiztli, in telpupuchtin quauhtitech quim]lpiaia in totome ic mjtotiaia in iquac tlaiaoaloloia.

Processions.

Processions were thus undertaken. For whatever feast was established, when this was done, all the people went in procession, perchance at dawn, or at sundown. Then they all dispersed.

Tlaiavaloliztli.

Jn tlaiavaloliztli, ic muchivaia in tlein ilhujtl motlalitivia iquac muchivaia, muchi tlacatl tlaiavalovaia, aço iohoatzinco, anoço ie teutlac, ic tlaxitinjaia.

Singing in the Manner of Women.

X 796 782 533 And the singing in the manner of women was thus done, when, mayhap, they formed [the image of] whatever devil. Then everywhere all the women Cihoapiculquinili.

Auh in jcihoapan cuiquiztli ic muchivaia iquac in aço tlacatia Diablo, in tlein, iquac muchintin and men danced [together, as] during the feast of Tlaloc.

mjtotiaia in cihoa novian yoan oquichtin iquac inilhuiuh tlaloc.

78X
282
[533]

The Moistening of Chalk.

Thus was done the moistening of chalk: when they quickly snatched the chalk, then he who moistened the chalk ran. Thus he appeared running fast, and a number followed him. They went stoning him, and any who did not hasten fell quickly under the stones.

Tiçapalolistli.

Jnjc muchivaia tiçapalolistli: in iquac concuitiquiça in tiçatl njman ic motlalos in tiçapalos injc necia in cenca tlaçça yoan cequjntin qujtocaia, qujtepachotivia auh in aquin amo tlaçaia iciuhca tetica vetzia.

The Lifting [of Children], that They Might Grow.

Thus was done the lifting of children that they might grow: Also upon a certain day they lifted up all the small children [by the head] that they might grow. Along the roads and on all the ground lay the nopal [cacti], or magney plants; thus, it was said, these thus would swiftly grow.

Teiscalanalistli.

Jnjc muchivaia teiscalaanalistli no ipan in tlein tonalli muchintin in pipiltotonti qujmizcalaanaia vtlica yoã in izquich tlaticpac onoc in nopalli, anoço metl, ic mjtoaia inic hiciuhca mozcaluz. [827] war, they made, as it were, a supplication when anyone went where there was war, lest something might go amiss [with them]. They said:

X 796 782 788

"Not here shall I die; [it is] in war that I go to die."

And when battle was already joined, they first plucked grass, shook it out toward the sun, and said:

"He will destroy and slay [our foe]," or, "He will capture [him]."

In this wise was a prayer raised to the sun.

iuhqujnma ic nenetolniloia, jn jquac aca iauh iavc intla itla ic motulinjtinemj qujtoaia amo njcan in njmiquiz, iavc in njmiquitiuh auh in iöjc ie muchivaz iauiotl achto quipia in çacatl quitzetzeloaia in jvicpa in tonatiuh quitoaia, vnpopolihuiz y in tlamiquiz, anoço tlamaz iuhqujn ic monetoltiaia ivjc tonatiuh.

X 796 [533] 782

The Blowing of Trumpets.

Thus was done the blowing of trumpets: when it was late at night, when it was already approaching midnight, [then it was] when trumpets were sounded, that all [the priests] might offer blood in the house of the devil. Therefore were [the priests] awakened.

Tlatlapitzaliztli.

Injc muchivaia in tlatlapitzaliztli iquac in ie tlaquauhiovac, in ie onacitiuh iovalnepantla iquac tlapitzaloia ic neçohoaia in jchan Diablo, ic teixtiloia.

The Illumination with Fire.

Thus was done the illumination with fire: when we people had passed [the night until] midnight and also trumpets had been sounded, thus were men awakened. Thus those known as the beaters began the keeping of the watch. And if any did not awake, they poured water upon him, or else they shook [coals of] fire upon him, or else they cast him into the water at Thilapan or at Coapan.

Tlatica tlaviliztli.

Injc muchivaia tlatica tlaviliztli, in iquac ie titlaca in iohoalnepantla oacic, no tlapitzalo, ic teixitilo, ic pevaia in tlapializtli motenehoaia tlavitequjni, auh in aquin amo veliça atl ipan quinoquitia, anoço tletl ipã quitzetzelovaia, anoço atlan contlaçaia vmpa tilapan, anoço coapan.

The Piercing of Ears.

X 796 782 785

The piercing of ears was also undertaken [because of] the devil. Hence were ears bored.

Nenacazapotaliztli.

In nenacazapotaliztli no ic tlaiciecalhujloia in Diablo injc nenacazcciniloia.

The Piercing of the [Lower] Lip.

In like manner the piercing of the [lower] lip: similarly, for the devil, was the boring of the [lower] lip endured.

Netezapotaliztli.

I Çan no iuhquj in nenacazapotaliztli çan no ic tlaiciecalvilqia in Diablo in netezapotaliztli.

the sweet-smelling herbs should be gathered together which [the goddess] Xilonen needed when her feast was observed. And he arranged for all [things] and the incense-ladles which the temple needed when [the impersonator of] Xilonen died.

nen in jquac ilhujuh quiçaia, yoan muchi ipan tlatovaia, in tlemaitl in jtech monequja o calli in jquac mjquja xilonen. 793

The Keeper of the Gods of Atempan.

The Keeper of the Gods of Atempan—behold what were his duties. This one required, and hence commanded, that there should be gathered together the feathers, the eagle-down and the pointed eagle plumes, with which [she who was ornamented in the likeness of] Toci was adorned, when she died.

And this one cried out [summoning] the Huaxtec youths to do penances here at Atempan.

Atempan teuhoatzin.

In atempan teuhoatzin, izca in jtequjuh catca, iehoatl ipan tlatovaia, ic tlanavatiaia, injc monechicovaia ihujtl, in quauhtlachcaiutl, yoan in quauhtevitztli injc mopotonjaia toci in iquac miquja yoan iehoatl qujtzatziliaia in cuecuexteca in telpupuchtin, injc moçavazque vncã atempan. [203]

The Caretaker.

The Caretaker took charge of the songs of the devils, of indeed all the sacred songs, that none might do ill [with them]. Greatly was he concerned that they teach the sacred songs, and he cried [the summons] that the singers be gathered, or the chiefs, that they might be taught the songs.

Tlapiscatzin.

In tlapiscatzin qujmocujtlavjaia in jncujc Diablome in ie muchi teucujcatl injc xiac tlatlacoz, vel qujmocujtlavjaia, injc qujtemachtiaia in teucujcatl, yoan qujtzatziliaia injc monechicozque in cujcanjme anoço tetecutin injc qujmomachtizque in teucujcatl. [533] [203]

The Keeper of the Goddess of Zapotlan.

The duties of the Keeper of the Goddess of Zapotlan were similar to what were the duties of the Keeper of the God of Atempan; for he was concerned with, and commanded that there should be gathered together all the paper, the incense, the [liquid] rubber, and the sweet-smelling herbs which [she who was arrayed in the likeness of] Tzapotla tenan needed when she died.

Tzaputla teuhoatzin.

In tzaputla teuhoatzin, çã no iuhquj in jtequjuh catca, in juhquj itequjuh catca: Atempa teuhoatzin, iehica ça no muchi ipan tlatovaia, ic tlanavatiaia, inic monechicovaia amatl in copalli, in vlli, yoan in jiauhtli, in jtech monequja in tzaputla tenan in iquac mjquja

The Keeper of the God of Tecuman.

The Keeper of the God of Tecuman was concerned that there should be torches, or bundles of resinous wood used as torches. And the charge of this one was that he should collect the red ochre, the black stain, and the foam sandals, the sleeveless jacket, and the bells which [the impersonator] of Xiuhtecutli, the old god, needed when he died.

Tecuman teuhoa.

In tecuman teuhoa iehoatl ipan tlatovaia in ocutl in tlepilli ien yoan iehoatl itequjuh catca, in qujnochicovaia in tlaviel, in tilli yoan in poçolcactli, in xiouhli, in tzitzilli in jtech monequja xiuhtecutli, vetecutl in iquac mjquja [373]

874
793

[533]

[589]

ne. well, then they drew blood from him [with maguey spines].

Fourteenth: Carefully were they taught the songs which they called the gods' songs. They were inscribed in the books. And well were all taught the reckoning of the days, the book of dreams, and the book of years.

Fifteenth: A strict vow of the priests was [that of] chastity, of a pure life. In no wise were they to look upon a woman.[3] A strict vow of theirs was [a life of] moderation. None then told lies. The priests were very devout. They were very god-fearing.

Now enough of this. Here is told the way of life of the priests. Much else, which is left [unsaid] must [yet] be related. [This] will be told in another place.

in aquijn ximo vellaxoc, in ximo vel tetlapalox ojmaxi quiçoçoia.

Jnjc. 14. vel nemachtilloia in cujcatl in quilhuja tecuicatl, amoxxoxoca. Yoan vel nemachtilloia in tonalpoalli in temjcamatl, yoan in xiuhamatl.

Jnjc. 15. in tlamacazque vel innetol catca in nepiilizzli, in chipaoaca nemilizzli, in acan quittazque cihoatl, vel innetol catca in tlaixiciecoliztli, ojmac-xiac ixtlacatia, vel tlatcumatinj, catca in tlamacazque, vel teuimacaçini catca, çan cuel izq'ch, y, nican onmixo, in jnuemilix catca tlamacazque, oc mjec in mocaxa in jmixoaia monequj vccã mixoc.

3. Probably a life of celibacy is not to be understood. Cf. Charles E. Dibble, Códice Rafael (Biblioteca Universitaria de Utah y de México, 1951) p. 75, 76, 77, and elsewhere for examples of married priests.

[p. 66 is blank]

643 301 A lip pendant of gold, in the form of a broad-leaded water plant; — xpilocuxpilolli, cuitic tecuijlotl, [532] A crescent-shaped lip pendant of gold; — metecuxpilolli cuitic tecuijlotl,

A green stone nose rod; — chalchihuicuxpitl,

A fine turquoise nose rod; — teuxihuicuxpitl,

A necklace of round, green stones, joined and strung together; — chalchihuiconcal chalchuapi, tlacuapitzilli, tlaccal,

A necklace of radiating golden pendants with a thin, green stone [disc] set in their midst;[9] — cuitic tecuijlochaiaoac concatl, chalchihuiconcalli itic mopi,

A finely wrought feather arm band with various [other] costly feathers and with gold; — quetzalmacuhuacatl tlapitzhuapi tepapaxo tlapitzica, iuan cuitic tecuijlaio, [237] A golden band for the calf of the leg; — cuitic tecuijlacuetzcatl,

A quetzal feather banner held in the hand; — quetzalmacuapitzil,

A quetzal bird as headdress; — quetzalmacuquecchiel,

Quetzal feather horns; — quetzalquapapitzil,

A quetzal feather fan [set] with gold; — quetzalmacuamatli cuitic tecuijlaio

A turquoise [mosaic] wrist band with a conical extension; — xiuhmacapilli,

A necklace of gold [beads] and small sea shells; — cuitic tecuijlachiquilmacatl,

A necklace of gold [beads] and small shells; — tecuijlacuitic acuechcomacatl,

643 [276] 416] Flowers and tobacco, [which were] exclusively the ruler's; a mirror in which the ruler looked at himself when he adorned himself. All these were the charge of the artisans[9] when the ruler danced. — xochitl, itel, iniecoanij tlatoani, tecuitl inic motta tlatoani, inic mochichiua mocuecca inapitl, in inpijch inaquanin tlatoani,

Sandals of ocelot skin; cured leather sandals with embroidery—embroidered sandals. — ocelomecatli, cuetlaxcatli tlamachio, tlamachocatli,

[282] 281] [There were] two-toned drums and supports for two-toned drums, ground drums, golden turtle shells, and golden bells; — tepomatli, tepomatzontzatzatli, vouetl xiocachili cuitic tecuijlotl, tetzilacatl cuitic tecuijlotl,

[534] 533 Singers, a dancer, a player of two-toned drums and one of ground drums, a drum beater, a singer who intoned the chant. — cuicanjme, mitotiani, tepomapani, tecuetzoani, tlatocatzoapi, cuicanani,

415 [There were] chests for the devices, in which were kept all which have been described: a large basket-case in which were kept the green stone lip plugs, the gold ear plugs, the golden necklaces, the wigs, the masks, the golden reed serpent. — tlaxipetlacalli, in vncan mopiaia, in inpijch onajn. Vemij tepetatli, in vncan mopia, in chalchihuicuxpitl, in teuxihuicuxpitl, in tecuijlacocotl, tzontecomatl, xaiacatl, tecuijlacacpatl cuitic tecuijlotl,

351 There were flowering trees, which were to be seen in the palace courtyard; for it was the ruler who was to dance. — xochiquauhtl momoaia, in tecpan ieuaka, iniecoa catca: on mocuecca in tlatoani, 415 314 534 [There were] a basket for the mirror, a basket for the comb; and a rubber hammer with which the two-toned drum was sounded. — tezcatamatli, tzinpamatzatzatli, ohuitl inic motecoua tepomatli.

---

8. Cf. Sahagún, Grammaire Aztèque-Espagnole, II, p. 240; also corresponding Spanish text.
9. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., II, pp. 1006, on etymology of artisans.

532
[75
782
732]

[524]

[231]

[533
524
732]

[695
694]

[696]

[533
534]

[534
535]

[231]

—Sfor Pano y Tremeno

(course concluded). 61. Two-headed snake (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards looking on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of parcelli (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatecolo (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(G)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

532
[687]
[625]

[689]
[526]

• [533
534]
[735]

[482]

—After Peñ y Troncoso

• 86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a complaint musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies (Chapter 17). 91. The game ducklet (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

1/A [This caption is in error. - Ruud/KT]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

SEVENTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the singers bedizened themselves when the ruler would dance; and of that in which they would dance.

Micoscalli: there were established all the kinds of singer-dancers of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco. There they awaited the word of the ruler, that he would dance, or try some song, or learn some new song. All this the singers prepared, all that was necessary—two-toned drums, rubber drum hammers, ground drums, rattles shaped like dried poppy heads, copper bells, flutes; players of two-toned drums and ground drums, intoners of chants, leaders of the dance; and all the properties used in the dance.

If the song were to be intoned after the manner of Uexotzinco, they were adorned like men of Uexotzinco, and spoke even as they did; they were imitated with the song and in their adornment and their equipment. Likewise if a song were to be intoned after the manner of Anauac, the speech of the men of Anauac was imitated, and their adornment as well as their equipment. Likewise, if a song were to be intoned after the manner of the Huaxteca, their speech was imitated, and their headdresses were taken, with which to imitate them in coloring their hair yellow; and the marks [had] arrow marks [painted] on the face, noses pierced like jug handles, teeth filed [to a point], and conical heads. And they [were clad] only in their capes. Likewise [they did] other songs.

INIC CHICOME PARRAPHO, vncã mjtoa, inic 533
mocencaiuia quicanjme, in tlamacoaz tlatoanj: 292
ioan in tlein ipan mjtoziquc.

Micoscalli, vncan tecpanoaia in jaquitlamantli, mitchoalcuicanjme in tenochca, ioan tlatilulcatl, vncan quitlatolchiaia in tlatoanj, in aço mitçeoaz, aço itla cuicatl quijtchecoa, aço itla iancuic cuicatl quimomachtia, mochi ic moçencauhticateca, in cuicanjme: in jaquich monequj teponaztli, olmaitl, veuetl, [534] aiacachtli, tetzilacatl, çoçolactli, teponaçoanj, veuetçoanj, cuicaitoanj teiacanque: ioan iti ixquich tlamantli mitchoallaquiti, itla uexotzincaiotl meoaz cuicatl, in iuh muchichiua uexotzinca, ioan in iuh tlatoa: motlaichecalhuja in ica cuicatl: ioan ica inechichioal intlaquj. Çan no iuhquj itla anaoacaiotl meoaz, motlaichecalhuja, in itlatol anaoaca: ioan innechichioal in iuhquj intlaquj. Çan no iuhquj, itla cuextecaiotl meoaz cuicatl, motlaichecalhuja in itlatol: ioan mocuj tzoncalli in quintlaichecalhuja, intzon, inic quacoztique, ioan xaiacatl ixtlamjoa iacauicole, tlantziquatic, quapotlachtic, içan itilma. Can no iuhquj in oc cequj cuicatl.

[302
304]

EIGHTH PARAGRAPH, which telleth of the houses in which were the slaves.

Malcalli: the majordomos guarded[14a] the captives. They took great care of them as to food and drink. That which they needed, they gave all to the captives.

Totocalli: there majordomos kept all the various birds—eagles, red spoonbills, trupiala, yellow parrots, parakeets, large parrots, pheasants. And there all the various artisans did their work: the gold and silversmiths, the copper-smiths, the feather workers,[14] painters, cutters of stones, workers in green stone mosaic, carvers of wood. Caretakers of wild animals,[15] majordomos, there guarded all the wild animals: ocelots, wolves, mountain lions, and mountain cats.

INIC CHICUEJ PARRAPHO, ipan tlatoa, in 567
inchan catca tlatlacoti 344

Malcalli: calpixque pinpiaia, in mamalti, cenca quinmocuitlauiaia, in tlaqualtica, in atica: in tlein quinequja, mochi quinmacaia in mamalti.

Totocalli, calpixque vncan quinpiaia, in jaquich 463 nepapan tototl: quaquauhti, tlauhquechol, çaquan, 344 tozneneme, cochome, alome, cozoliti: ioan oncan tlachichioaia, in jaquich nepapan toltecatl, in teucujtlapizquj, in tepoapitzquj, in amanteca, tlacujloque, 231 tlatecque, chalchiuhtlacujloque, quauhtlacujloque 136
Tequanpizque, calpizque, vncan quinpiaia, in jaquich tequanj: oçelotl, cuetlachtli, mjztli, ocotochtli.

14a. Pinpiaia: probably quinpiaia is meant.

14. "Feather-workers were called amantecas after the district of Amantlan, in Tenochtitlan, where they lived" (Clark, op. cit., I, p. 56, n. 2). Cf. also Seler, Europ. Kopied, p. 174.

15. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has mopanpiaque for mopanpiaque, and begins with this word a new paragraph. A marginal gloss by Sahagún heads the section, "Cuia de las fieras."

[p.46 is blank]

were to remain, to make judgments, and to hear all manner of testimony.

The name of one Teccalli was Tlacxitlan. There they tried princes and great lords. At once, swiftly, they passed judgment on their complaints or wrong doing.

And the second place where justice was done was named Teccalli. There were the Mexican judges. Surely they heard the complaints of the common folk. They defined and verified the complaint, they recorded it in paintings so that they might take it there to Tlacxitlan, where they informed the judges who were princes, so that their judgment might be pronounced.

And if something was difficult, they took it to the ruler so that he might judge it [with] those judges[5] whose names were Ciuacoatl, Tlacochcalcatl, Uitznaoatlailotlac, Ticociauacatl, Pochtecatlailotlac, Ezuauacatl,[6] Mexicatl teacacoacatl, Acatliacapanecatl, Milnauatl, Atlauhcatl, Ticociauacatl, Ciuatecpanecatl, and Tequixquinaoacatl. These same judges meditated and pondered upon, and examined, the testimony. They sought out the witnesses, those who bore testimony. Perchance [the charge] was true; or else that which the ruler had heard was false, so that, perhaps, by error[8] someone had been held in jail.

And if the ruler condemned someone to die, then his executioners slew him—the Achcacauhti,[9] the Quauhnochtli, and the Atempanecatl. Thus did these slay him: with a cord they strangled the evildoer, or they stoned him before the people, or they cut him to pieces.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which is described how all were to dance.

The ruler was greatly concerned with the dance, the rejoicing, in order to hearten and console all the peers, the lords, the noblemen, the brave warriors, and all the common folk and vassals.

First the ruler announced what song should be intoned. He commanded the singers to rehearse and practise the song and [to prepare] the two-toned calli, in vncan iesque, in vncã tetlatzontequjliaque, 643 in vncan qujcaqujsque in jaqujch tlamãtli tlacatlatolli, 693 in centetl teccalli, itoca tlacxitlan, in vncã tetlatzontequjliaia tlaçopipilti, tlatocapipilti, çan njman içiuhca qujtzontequja intenetelhujl, anoço tetlatlacul. 565 [344]

Auh injc vccan tecutlatoloia, itoca teccalli, vncan catca in tecutlatoque mexica: iujian iocuxca qujcaquja, in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in oqujchipauhque, in oqujiectilique neteilhujlli, tlapallacujlolpan qujtlalia, injc vmpa qujtequj tlacxitlan in jpã qujntlapoujlia in tecutlatoque in tlaçopipilti, injc vmpa motzontequj. 693 [344] 565 695 [212]

Auh intla itla oujlitica iujc qujtquj in tlatoanj injc iehoanti qujtzontequj in jntoca catca tecutlatoque. Çioacoatl tlacochcalcatl, vitznaoatlailotlac, ticociaoacatl, pochteca tlailotlac, ezoaoacatl, mexicatl teacacoacatl, acatliacapanecatl, mjlnaoatl, atlauhcatl, ticociaoacatl, çioatecpanecatl, tequjxqujnaoacatl, iehoantin, y, in tecutlatoque qujnemjliaia, qujchiquja, qujpetlaoaia in tlacatlatolli, qujntemoaia in machiceque, in tlanehtilianj, in aço ie nelli, anoço tlatolchichiouilli in caquitile tlatoanj, in aço can tlapic aca quauhcalco otlalilac. 695 643

Auh intla aca qujtlatzontequjlia tlatoanj mjquja, njnan qujmjctia, in jtemjcticaoan achcacauhti, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl: injc iehoantin qujmjctia; qujmecanja in tlatlacoanj, anoço trixpan qujtetepachoa, anoço qujtetequj. 693 696

INJC EI PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa in quenja netotilos.

In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia, in maçoatlatli, in papaqujlizti, injc qujmellaquaoa, injc qujniollalia, in jaqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, ioan tetecuti, ioan tiacahoan: ioan in jaqujch in cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in maçoalli: 535 643 achtopa qujtoaia in tlatoanj, in tlein cujcatl meoaz qujnnaoatiaia in cujcanjme: injc qujichecoaque injc qujchicaoaque in cujcatl, ioan teponaztli, olmaitl, 643 533 534

6. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Y los casos, cosas difficultosas, y graves, Remetiendo el orden para que los negocios fuesen con otros principales, como calificados, que eran el audiencia, y residian."

7. After the word pochtecatlailotlac, the Real Academia de la Historia MS includes ezoauacatl; ezoauacatl appears as ezoauacatl.

The title Tlacochcalcatl is repeated in the Aztec text of the Florentine Codex.

8. Can chapir: per is probably meant (cf. ibid.).

9. Achcacauhti: cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, pp. 146, 201, 288; II, pp. 310, 321; also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 100, and III, p. 33.

643 drums, the rubber drum hammers, and the ground
533 drums, and all the properties used in the dance. And 534 [he appointed the kind of] dance, him who would give the pitch, those who would lead, him who would beat the two-toned drum, him who would play the ground drum. All was first arranged, so that nothing would be left out.

veuetl: ioan in izquich maçeoallatquitl, ioan netotilizti, aquin cujcaitoz, aquiçque in teiacanazque, aquin teponaçoz, aquin veuetzonaz, mochi achto mocencaoaia injc atle itlacauiz.

643 And when there was a dance, the ruler [decided]
535 the day. At this time, he adorned and arrayed him-
292 self, [in his] head band with sprays of quetzal
301 feathers and gold, with which he bound his hair; a yellow labret, or a green stone lip plug, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; golden ear plugs, which he inserted in [the lobes of] his ears; and he laid on a neck band, either a neck band of green stone or a collar with turquoise inserted; he placed on his wrist a bracelet with a large green stone upon it, or a large turquoise; or a golden arm band; and a quetzal feather fan. With [these] costly goods he went in procession and danced. With a priceless cape he covered and wrapped himself, and in a costly breech cloat he girt himself.

Auh in ie icoac maçeoa tlatoanj, in tlein ilhuitl ipan mocencaoa, mochichioa quetzallalpilonj coztic teucuitlaio, injc quilpia itzon, coztic teçacatl, anoço chalchiuhtentetl in conaquja itenco, coztic teucuitlanacochtli, in caquja inacazco: auh in cozcatl conteca, aço chalchiuhcozcatl, anoço cozcapetlatl, teuxiuitl itlaactoc, macuextli imac quitlalia vei chalchiuitl ipan ca anoço vej teuxiuitl, anoço coztic teucuitlamatemecatl, quetzalecaceoaztli, tlaçotlanquj injc mitotia injc maceoa, tlaçotilmatli in quimololoa, in quimoquentia, tlaçomaztlatl in quimomaztlatia,

565 Then also they arrayed and accorded favors to all
535 the lords, and noblemen, the men [at arms], brave warriors, and the high judges, and the [lesser] judges, and brave warriors, men [at arms], and masters of the youths, and singers. And the ruler gave them drink and food, all the things which have been mentioned.

njman ic no quicencaoa quintlauhtia: in izquichtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, in oquichti, tiiacaoan, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tiiaçoan oquichtin, ioan tiachcaoan, ioan cuicanime, ioan quinmaca in jiauh, in jtlaqual tlatoanj in jzquitlamantin omoteneuhque.

687 And if the singers did something amiss—perchance a two-toned drum was out of tune, or a ground drum; or he who intoned, marred the song; or the leader marred the dance—then the ruler commanded that they place in jail whoever had done the wrong; they imprisoned him, and he died.

Auh intla itla quitlacoa cujcanime: aço teponaztli quichalanja, anoço veuetl, anoço cujcaitoa, quipoloa cujcatl: anoço teiacana, in quipoloa netotiliztli: njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcaloo contlalia in aquin tlatlacoa, quitzacutiuh mjquja.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how 726 he who was the ruler kept vigil; how he kept guard at night and all day, because of war.

The ruler was especially concerned with the keeping of watch against enemies and the guarding of the city, all day and all night. Hence he gave stern commands that guard should be kept faithfully. For at times, suddenly, the City of Mexico was circled by foes; perchance somewhere for this they were gathered together, and were laying a snare. Therefore the ruler kept careful vigil. He did not become besotted. He himself sometimes set forth by night, circled the city, and beheld what was doing: perhaps the priest

INIC NAUJ PARRAPHO: vncã mjtoa injc iztoçoaia in aquin tlatoanj, injc tlapiaia in ioaltica: ioan in cemjlhujtl in jpãpa iauiotl.

In tlatoanj oc cenca quimocuitlaujaia in iautlapializtli, ioan altepepializtli, cemjlhujtl ccioal, ic tlatlaquauhnaoatiaia, injc cenca tlapialoa ma quenmanjan atenemachpan iauiaoalolo in altepetl mexico, aço cana ica necentlalilo, tlachichiujlilo, ipampa cenca iztoçoaia in tlatoanj, amo tlaoanaia, iioma in iohoaltica quenmanjan quiçaia quiiacaloa in altepetl quitta tlein mochioa, acaçomo tlapia in tlamacazquj in tiachcauh aço ic necuitlaujlo in mjxitl in tlapatl in octli ioan oc cenca quintlaquauhnaoatiaia in tlatoanj or the master of the youths were not keeping watch, having already become addlepated.[10] And the ruler most sternly commanded that all the seasoned warriors and lords keep watch all day and all night in warlike lands and be concerned to be a rampart of men dexterous at arms in enemy paths. And they were to apprehend and seize informers who had entered here in secret, who walked about the city. And they perceived when war was to be proclaimed. And when war already was declared, then they hastened to enter [their city] to warn their lords so that then they would ready themselves for guarding against the foe.

in jxquichtin izuteoaque in tlatoque icemjlhujtl 643 içeioual tlapiaque, in teuatenpan in tlachinoltempã, 726 in qujmocuitlauizque oçelotenamjtl, quauhtenamjtl, in izuotli: ioan qujmanaque qujtzteizquizque in tetlan nenque in ichtaca oalcalaquj in qujoalnemilia altepetl, ioan oallapia in jquin izutlatoloz, auh in oquijcacque ca ie izutlatolo: njman calactiuetzi in connonotza intlatocauh inic njman no moçencaoa izutlapializtica.

And if informers[11] were seized, they were slain; they were beaten, because of what they made known. And if it were noted that some knew the Mexicans and were living with them in their homes, they also imprisoned the informers of the ruler's foes, with the householders who had been plotting with them, and their children, and plundered their goods, so that nothing[12] was to be seen in their homes.

Auh intla ano tetlanenque, mjctilo, tetzotzonalo 687 inca nenonotzalo. Auh intla macho, ca acame qujmati in mexica in inchan oalmocalloteia, in tetlanenque in jiaohoan no qujtzacutiuja, inca nenonotzaloia in chaneque, ioã in jnpilhoan, ioan namoiclotia in intlatquj ztl neneçia in inchan.

And likewise the ruler urged strongly that watch be kept within the city, all day and all night, lest someone betray the city, lest it might be surrounded by enemies. And therefore sometimes the ruler and the city would march forth. And the ruler commanded that rulers of the youths, the brave warriors, and all the youths, each day, at night, should sing and dance, so that all the cities which lay around Mexico should hear. For the ruler slept not, nor any of the Mexicans.

Auh çan no iuhquj cenca ipan tlatoaia in tlatoanj 643 injc cenca tlapialoz in jitic altepetl, icemjlhujtl, 726 çeioual, in ma oca qujtlachichiujli altepetl, in ma 722 iauiaoalolo quenmanjan, auh injc icatiuz tlatoanj, ioan altepetl qujnnaoztiaia in tlatoanj in telpuchtlatoque, in tiacahoan: ioan in ixquich telpuchtli, injc [533]
momoztlae ioaltica cujcoanozque, injc qujoalcaqujz ixquich altepetl, in qujiaoaloeoc mexico: ca amo cochi in tlatoanj, ioan ixquich mexicatl.

And when it was deep night, then the priests of Tenochtitlan and of Tlatilulco, and [men from] all the hamlets [nearby], blew shell trumpets and beat two-toned drums. Then all the priests went forth. Everywhere they performed penances all about the mountain tops. And thus they kept watch lest they come upon something. [When] already it grew light, they went into [the city]. Thus they kept guard each night; thus did they do.

Auh in jquac tlaquauhtlapoiaca: njman tlapitza, 722
ioan teponaçohoa, in tlamacazque tenochca, ioan tlatilulca: ioan ixquich altepemaitl, icoac qujça in jxquichtin tlamacazque, noujian in ontlamaçeoa noujian tepeticpac, ioan ic ontlapia in aço itla qujnamjqujtiuj ic tlatujnaoac ⸗ oalcalaquja injc ontlapiaia çeçioual iuh qujchioaia.

10. Sandoval, op. cit., identifies ocuitl as an intoxicating plant, and chapul as Mexicanus conquanati, a medicinal plant. Olmos, op. cit., p. 223, has, for Hacer a otro cobarde, o dar mal consejo: Mitoti, chapul, conquanati, tamacuil ximitoiaoani. . . . cf. for Embarrachar, o salir de seso: Yauh aquato in octli, in tamacuil, in ocitoti, in conquanatiqui inic oquiaiti, inic oococoani. In Lib. VI, fol. 28bv, of the Florentine Codex, this passage appears: "*In tlatlatlaoani, in tlamahamacuilani; in pahqui mjqui, in pahqui chapul ontepuc. Inchipa mjquiz: in oquiqui ximoan quipopoqui quiaxcuaxcuaxcu

726 balls. Thereupon they shot iron balls; but only one was pierced, in the forehead, wherefore he then died. Castañeda was the one who shot the arrow. And the chieftains moved in against him and they drove [the Spaniards] into the water, stoning them. And Castañeda there would have perished, but he clung to the boat and thus they carried him to Xocotitlan.

[349] And one boat lay at Tetenanteputzco, where the walls curve.[7] And another boat lay there at Totecco,[8] where the road goes direct to Tepetzinco.[9] It only lay on guard in the water, and at nightfall they took it [away].

[491]

And some days thereafter the Spaniards once again resolved [to war upon] us.[10] Then they came, and chose the Quauecatitlan[11] road which led direct to the salt market. But there on the Quauecatitlan road, they could not spread out. So all those of Tlaxcalla, Acolhuacan, and Chalco thereupon filled in the canals.[12] And on the road where they could not spread out, they cast adobes and roof beams; door lintels, pillars, and round logs were set in; they threw bundles of reeds into the water. And when it was filled in, then the Spaniards, disposed [in battle order], very slowly proceeded: a cotton banner led them; they went blowing trumpets and beating drums. And behind them went in position all the Tlaxcallans, and indeed all those of [other allied] cities. Those of Tlaxcalla became very brave; they shook their heads, beat their chests, and sang. The Mexicans also sang. There was chanting on both sides. They intoned whatsoever they remembered. Thus they were able to animate themselves.

[443] 317

[533]

And as they reached Tlalhuacan,[13] all the chieftains were crouched; they stretched themselves out very flat, and were well hidden. They hid their ça cc inmjnoc iaquac, njmac ic momjquili: ichoatl in valtemj in castañeda. Auh in tiacaoã itech ietiquiaque, atlan quinoemjoique, quinetepachoque: auh vncã mjquiaquia in castañeda: auh ça acalitech pilcatia injc quivicaque xocotitlan.

Auh centetl acalli onoca tetenanteputzco, vncã in colivi tetenamjtl: auh in oc centetl acalli vmpa onoca in totecco: in jpan vtli tlamelaoa Tepetzinco, ça tlatlapiztoca in atlan. Auh in ic ioa quivica.

Auh iquezquilhuioc ic no ceppa techcentlatallaj in Españoles: nec vitze, ic quioalmotilique in quauecatitlan vtli, in oallamelauhtocac iztaxamacoian. Auh in vacan in quauecatitlan in vtli ca moiauhque. Auh in jaquich tlaxcaltecatl, in acolhoacatl, in chalcatl: njman ic ic catzupa in acalutli: yoan in oca moiauhque vtli: contlaça in xamjtl, yoan in calquavitl, in tecoc in tlaixquatl in tlaquetzalli, in quimjmjlli, in acatl quicuijtlalpia in contepeoa atlan. Auh in jquac in omotzop nec valmotema in Españoles, cencã ivian in iativitze, quiniacana in quachpanjtl, tlapitzivitze, tlatzotzontivitze. Auh imjcampa onotivitze in ic ixquich tlaxcaltecatl, yoan in ic ixquich altepeoa, cenca muchicava moquauacuecuechoa, meltzotzona in tlaxcalteca, cujca, no cujca in mexica necoccampa cujco, queoa in çaço tlein quijnamjquj, ic mellaquaoa muchioa.

Auh in oacico tlalhoacan in tiacaoã vel nepachololo, vel mopachoa vel netlatilo, qujtetzontlaliaia, quj-chjxtoque in quemman tecvitilos, in quemman quj-

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "cerca de aquella yglesia que se llama cheve lauia." Cano (op. cit.) places it in la Garita de Peralvillo, barrio of Tlaxpahuchilco.

8. "Cerca de la Cruz, pidio demanxtilla." — Cano, op. cit.

9. El Peñón de los Baños — one of the islets of Tenochtitlan, in the lake. However, Rapoje and Barlow, op. cit., p. 46 and map, locate it as a hill in the southeastern part of Tlatelolco.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "determinaron entre si los españoles de darnos guerra por alli."

11. Quauecatitlan acuipatli — "calle que va derecha de Necatitlan al Mercado de la Sal, . . . prolongada hasta encontrar el Albarradon y probablemente correspondia con la Calzada de Nezahualcoyotl, Mixcoac, Almaxuca, Coyoacan y Huexo." — Cano, op. cit. Rapoje and Barlow, op. cit., show it in their map as in the northeast part of the city.

12. In Bernardino, loc. cit., the version is somewhat different from what appears in either the Spanish or Nahuatl text of the Florentine Codex: "por causa de los españoles que los indios habian ganado en su provincia, tornaron á proponer guerra de nuevo, haciendo juramento entre ellos que la guerra no habia de cesar hasta que ganaran la muerte de sus hermanos los españoles, y no quedase hombre dellos que no matasen en sus manos: de alli adelante continuaron á cegar todas las acequias y corrales de canas por donde pudiesen entrar los caballos, hasta que no pudiesen entrar, y asi continuaron á derribar casas, y cegaron todas las acequias."

13. Corresponding Spanish text: "en barrio que se llama Tlilmanca que es agora cerca mejic" (San Martin).

dashed, and went hurling himself along. He had no shame; no one now abashed or embarrassed him.

And yet they reviled him. No one gave him the name of a man of consequence; nowhere had he the name of a man. Everywhere he was simply detested and hated. Nowhere could he approach people; everywhere he made confusion. If somewhere there was a reunion, he dispersed them — he scattered and disbanded them. They let him alone; he was avoided. There was silence [when he came]; a bristling antagonism and withdrawing of friends.

Hence was it said: "Verily, thus was his day sign. What is to be done?" And seldom was there courage or hope in his behalf. It was said that he would go to fall down somewhere; to meet destruction, to die, to collapse somewhere. Perhaps he would fall from some cliff; or down into a chasm, or into the water; he would cast himself into the river and drown. Or somewhere he would fall into the hands of evil men and die at their hands.[6] They would rob, plunder, and despoil him, leaving him quite bare.

And more: not only could all this happen, but he embraced vice and evil. Sometimes he committed adultery; he stole; he scaled walls to tempt and seduce [women]. His drunkenness caused him to do it. Wine showed and was apparent on his face. And when it dawned, his eyes were inflamed, his eyelids drooped, ached, and watered: a decrepit drunkard's face. Nowhere was he regarded as a man. Continually his lips moved from side to side.

And if one was not a great drinker, when it dawned it made him very sick, sickened and affected by the wine. Also, his eyelids burned and his eyes ached; it made him sick in the head and made it sore. He wished not to arise from bed; rather, he lay wrapped in blankets, and slept all day. Neither could he eat; he was nauseated and wished to vomit. With difficulty could he dispel and overcome it.

iauhtiuh, auc tle ipinavis, aocac quimamati, aocac quipinaoa.

Auh tel aocac no tle ipan quijta, aocac quitlacatoca, aoccan itlacatocaia, çan noviian tlaelitto, tlaqualanja, aoccan vel tetlan motlalia: novian tlapaçoloa: Intlacana ceniclovac: tececenmana, tezixitinja, tezomoiaoa: ipan macavi, tlalcavilo, ipan cactisetzi, yenjppaçalli, icnjmmoiactli.

Ic ytolo: ca nel yuhquj ytonal, quennel chioalos: auh ça ica neellaquaoalo, yca netlapalolo, ytolo: ça can vetzitiuh, ça can popoliviz, ça can mjquja, ça can quauhtenvetziz: aço cana motepexiviz, motlaxapuchhujz, matlanviz, matoiaviz, atlan mjquja, anoço cana inmac vetziz in tlaveliloque, inmac mjquja, quitlacujujlizque, quitlacencujlizque, quitlanamoializque, quipetztoccaoazque:

yuan amo çan quezquich in jpan iauh, in quimonamjctia yavilquijaca, yn jtoloca: in quenman tetlan aquj, ichtequj, tepan tepantemo, tecamanalhuja, tetzitzquja: ytlaoancaio maitia, vetli quimozaiacatia, yvcxaiac ictisemj: in oallathuj yxpupuçaoa, ixtenmjmjlivi, iaquastoleeoa, ichchichitintiocmj, yxovcpul, aoccan metlacaitta: achcan cochcamachalo.

Auh in amo cenca tlaoanjoj in oallathuj cenca quicocoa, mucoócha, mucvia: no iaquastoleeoa, iseeoa, itzontecon quicocoa, quicxonteconeoa, aiel meuhtoc: çan quimjliuhtoc, cemjlhujocchi, amo yellaquaz: çan motomaoa, motlachtia: aiaxcan in quicaoa in quimopopololtia.

6. Mixquiahuala in the Hidalgo MS.

[p. 14 is blank]

For, so was it said, he had fallen into great sin.[5] There rags and tatters lay strung out; there misery and orphanhood were the reward. And there was the great flood, the great crag, the pit, where there was a falling into the flood, or from the crag, or into the pit.[6] And there lay the mire, where one was mired.

So was it said of him to whom it so befell that his fate and merits had been good; only of his own will and by his own act he had harmed, destroyed, and ruined it, etc.

And if a woman were born upon the day One Flower, it was said that she would be an able embroiderer. But nevertheless, in order to gain her deserts, and to achieve skill in embroidering, she should do great penances, and fast, and draw blood when the day sign One Flower set in. But if she did not do penances, if she took not good heed, if her upbringing and training were not good, the herself harmed her day sign.

Likewise it befell her (as was told here) that her labors were in vain; she merited complete poverty and misery. Thus her deserts only came to an end, to naught; they became corruption. She became a harlot, a courtesan. She sold herself; she became a paramour. For it was said that just so was her day sign, One Flower; for it fell two ways. They said it was good and evil.

Also it was said that when One Flower set in, then began, continued, and was always held, a dance, a procession. But only Moctezuma in his own heart knew — [for] no one [else] determined — for how many days he established his dance. Perchance for forty days there would be dancing.

And that it might be known that a dance had been arranged, two poles with flowers were set up; they remained at the palace of the ruler. Thus was made known the day of the flowers: there would be enjoyment of and rejoicing over the day of flowers.

At that time the ruler determined and requested the kinds of song to be intoned — perhaps after the manner of those of Cuexilan,[7] the drunkards of Cuexilan;[8] or of Huexotzinco or Atzahujc; or the merchants; or those of Nonoalco, or Cuexilan; or of

ca iuh mjtoa, tlaalavi, tlapetzcavi, ítlacacemellecan vncan vilantoc in tzotzomatli, in tatapatli, vncá mácoalo in jcnoiotl, in jcnotlacaiotl: auh vncan icac, in vei atoiatl, in vei tepexitl, in tlaxapuchtli, vncá neatoiavilo, netepexivilo, netlaxapuchvilo: ioan vncan manj in tzonoaztli, vncan netzonoaztvilo: 787X ic mjtoa, in aquja iuhquj ipan muchioaia, y, qualli ocatca: in jtonal, in jmácoal, ça inêvüan, ça onmonevianvi, in oconmjctacalhuj, in oconmopôpolhuj, yn oconmotlaçolmjctili. Etc.

Auh intla aca cioatl, ipan tlacatia ce suchitl: mjtoaia, vuellamachchiuhquj iez: auh iece injc vel quicnopilhujz imácoal, injc vel qujtzac tlâmachtli, cécatlamaceoaia, moçaoaia, mjçoia in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl tonalli: auh intlacamo tlamaceoa, intlacamo vel monozca, intlacamo vellaoapaoalli, vellazcaltilli mochioa, çan no qujtlaueliaia yn jtonal: [785] no iuhquj ipan muchioaia (in iuh omjto njcan) atle onquçaia, çan moch icnoiotl, netoliniliztli in quimomacevviac auh injc ça ontlatzontia, ontlatzonquixtia, ça aujlquja caiotl, in jnemac mochioa, aviénjti, masujltia, monanamaca, motzitzinnamaca: ic mjtoa, ca nel iuhquj itonal in ce suchitl, ca vme vitz qujtoa, qualli, inê lequalli.

No yuan mjtoa, in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl: vncan oncempeoa, vncan vnmocemana, in muchipa macoaule, netotilo, çan iee qujmati in Motecuçuma yiollocâma aioc qujiocoia, in quenquilhujtl, qujtlalia ymaceoaliz in aço vmpoalilhujtl manjz mácoaliztli: 527 535 auh injc necia, ynjc temacoaliztlalhujloia, vme suchiquavitl oalmoquetzaia, oalmomanaia tecpan, tlatocan: yc monextia in suchilhujtl, suchipacoa, nosuchitlamachtilo:

vncá tlatlâtlamj, tlancnequj in tlatoanj, in catle cujcatl conemaa, in anoço cuexteca iotl, tlamancaceuteca iotl, venotzinca iotl, anoaca iotl, ostomeca iotl, nonoalca iotl, concateca iotl, tenjca iotl, tepetlaca iotl, chichimeca iotl, metztlancalca iotl, otomcujca iotl, quata- 527 533●

5. Florentine Codex, Book VI, fol. 191r: chaotic, disjointed, in disorder. See also fol. 210r.

6. Cf. also loc. cit. The passage is metaphorical.

7. Probably Huexotzinco. See, however, Seler (Gesammelte Abhandlungen, IV, 28, 79-82 (cf. Vol. I, p. 9, for reference system, to be used hereafter except in special cases).

8. Cf. ibid., IV, 7, 5.

527 the Tuxinec;[9] or those of Tepetlan; or the Chichimeca; or those of Metztitlan; or the Otomí warriors 533 or of the Quaquata, or the rabbit songs; or songs with two-toned drums, etc.; or women's songs; or those of the girls with the lock of hair at the side of the head. Or perchance only songs of debauchery, or of bragging; or of the sick, or of the cripples; or of the shorn ones; or of vice, etc.

cujcatl, tochcujcatl, teponazcujcatl. Etc. çiocacujcatl, xocomocolcujcatl, auh in anoço çan aujlcujcatl, ixcuecuechcujcatl, cococujcatl, quappitzcujcatl, quatepoquicujcatl, aujlcujcatl. Etc.

So it was said that verily the [day sign of the] 535 flower was in place.

ye mjtoaia ca nel onjcac in xuchitl.

And then the majordomos gathered together all 282 the ruler's dancing array which he requested, and 527 which he might exhibit; whatever he might desire
643 to dance in, in which he would show himself to the people.

Joan vncā qujcenqujxtiaia, in cacalpixque in jxquich imâcoallatequj tlatoanj, qujtlanenectia, qujtlâtlatitia, in caule conelcujx, ipan onmjtotiz, ipan onnelatitia:

And then he gave devices to the chieftains, the 527 insignia-bearers, the Otomí, the shorn ones, the com-
643 manding generals, the generals, those who struck,
431 encircled, overtook, hemmed in, and spied on the people.

ioan vncan qujnthuizmacaia, in tiacacan, in tetlaujccaoa, in otomj, in quaquachicti, in tlatlacatecca, in tlatlacochcalca, in teviltequjnj, in temalacachoanj, in teviltequjnj, in tetracujianj, in tetlallanvianj:

And at that time, in truth, favors were accorded 643 and distributed. He singled out, by means of gifts,
527 all the singers, the singers from the common folk,
533 the song-writers, the composers, the beaters of drums
— the ground drums, the two-toned drums; two-535 toned drum players, those who started the singing, those who led, those who gave the pitch, and those 431 who whistled with their fingers; and the leaders and conductors of the dance, the dancers, those who urged the dancers on, those who distributed them, those with trembling voices, those who made noises like a weasel;[10] the circle dancers, and all who belonged and worked with those mentioned.

yoan vel oncan mocnavizia, mopizqujaia, tlatemachiaia, netlauhtiltica, in jxquich cujcani, mâcoalcujcanj, in cujcatlalianj, in cujcapiqujnj: auh in tlatzotzonquj, in vevetzonquj, teponaço, teponaçoanj cujcaito, cujcaanquj, cujcatlazquj, yoan in mapipitzoanj: auh in teiacanquj, in teiacananj, mjtotianj, motlaquitotianj, tlamoiauhquj, tozcacuecuechoanj, tocujlechoanj, tlacocoloanj: moch ichoan intech povia, intech açia, in mjtoa:

Before them came their food, the prepared foods:
262 — tamales with beans forming a sea-shell on top;
527 fruit tamales; tamales of a dough of maize treated with lime; hard tamales with maize grains thrown in; tamal-stones; large tortillas; coarse, white tortillas; rolled tortillas; doubled tortillas, tortilla pies; tortillas shredded, or wrapped about turkey; tamales formed in rolls; tamales of maize; ground-up tamales; crumbled tortillas; folded tortillas; meat with grains of maize.

ixpampa vitz, itlaqualtzin, in tlaqualtectli, in quatecujcujlli, xocotamalli, tenextamalli, tetamalli, tlatzincujtl, tamaltetl, vei tlaqualli, quauhtlaqualli, tlaxcalmjmjlli, tlacuelpacholli, tlaçiocuepalli, tlaxcalcotzetli, totolqujmjlli, tamalmjmjlli, tamalatl, tamalcuecuechtli, papaxxtlaxcalli, papaiantlaxcalpacholli, nacatlaxio.

And when they had tired and were wearied of 527 dancing, then they took and burned the two flowered poles. And then they fashioned and adorned still

Auh in jquac otlatziuh, in ocontlatzilhuj mâcepoliztli, njman qujcalaqujaia, qujtlatiaia, in vme xuchiquavitl: auh iquac oc centlamâtli, ic qujxiptlaiotizia, 9. Cf. ibid., X, 29, 94-95; gente Adriana was a term generally employed and by natives.

10. In describing the sound made by the wound Sahagún, Book V, chap. vi, reads and copy diente pipilaua, mokayoia mopipilauaua: tlamoiauhtiuia . . . See also, Olmos, op. cit., p. 127 (facsimile).

And the wine server, if he saw that those whom he gave wine did not become intoxicated and in a stupor, but only sat staring and grimacing, once again turned to the left, made a beginning from the left — that is, beginning where he had left off, with those of last place, the lesser in rank. So at that place he made a beginning in order to make them drunk. Thus he went reversing and rearranging the process of making them drunk.

So there was singing: there were songs of sadness and tears; or only broken singing, each one as he liked, each outdoing the others. There was the giving of pleasure, of much contentment. There was the encouragement of one another, and tearful greetings. And some only hummed, singing secretly, or did nothing. And some did nothing else but sit content and rejoicing, laughing and making witty remarks, making others burst into laughter as if their sides were sore. They sat exhausted with mirth[11] if they heard something which moved them to or diverted them with laughter. It was as if dogs were barking.[12]

Just so was it done at banquets and feasting, and assemblages and gatherings of people, and their recreation and the giving of dances, etc., when someone had a feast for the child to place it in the cradle, and the place where he was put in the cradle was watched.

auh in tetlaoanti intla quimjtta quintlaoantia, yn amo ivinti, in amo jamanja, in çan itztoque, ixpepeiontoque, ic no cuel iẽ copuchilochtia, tlaopuchcopa quipeoaltia. q. n. in vncã oquicauh, in tlatzaccan, in tlacuitlapilco, ic nẽ vncan quipeoaltia, ynjc tetlamamaca, ynjc tetlaoantia, ic quicueptiuh, quipapatlatiuh in itetlaoãniliz: 574 273 851

ic necuicatilo, netlaoculcujcatilo, nechoquizcuicatilc, anoço çan cuicaçacamolo, no çac tle queoa, necujçapanauilo, nececmeltilo, nececemeltilo, neellaquacalo, nechoquiztlapalolo, auh in aca çan tẽtencuicatica, yhichtacacujcatica, aiac ica quichiuhtica: auh cequjn çan qujxcavia in pactoque, im papactoque, vevetzcatoque, camanalotoque, vetzquiztequitoque, iuhqujn itzillã quaquauhti, ommimjctoque in vetitzca, yn oncitla quicacque, in tevetzquiti, tevetzquiceuh, iuhqujn tlananalco. 851 574 [533] [522]

Oyvin in muchioaia coaiotl in tecoanoczalitzli, in tecẽtlalilitzli, tenechicoliztli, tecevilitzli, teitzotilitzli. et.[a] Yn iquac aca quitlaqualiaia in piltzintli, ynjc tlacoçolaquja, tlacoçolaquiloian nepiclo.

11. Fourteen in the Real Palacio MS.

12. Thirteen verses in ibid.

[p. 120 is blank]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

396 Indians today, were flat-bottomed punts, constructed of planks which were probably tied together in Aztec times rather than pegged, as they are today. The portable bridges 335 used to cross the canals were also simple combinations of planks, or planks resting on beams. (See Plate 35, bottom left.)

352 Furniture, which in European culture has done much honor to the woodworker, was little used in Mexico. Mats sufficed for beds and seats. High dignitaries sat on a sort of wooden throne which had legs and often a back and was called icpalli, from which the Mexican word equipale for a modern wickerwork and leather chair is derived. Mention [353] is made of screens and chests and ornamental sheathing for room interiors, but no examples are left for us to judge their craftsmanship. (See Plate 37, top.)

534 The wooden drums, on which musicians beat out ceremonial rhythms, were handsomely carved, as befitted their religious use. There were two types, a vertically cylindrical drum (*huehuetl), which had a skin head, and a horizontally cylindrical drum (teponaztli†), the top of which was slotted to form two tongues. While the notes differed, there was usually the same interval between the resonant sounds emitted when the tongues were struck. The task of reaching the pitch must have been excessively difficult, for the wood had to be hollowed by fire and then chiseled to a nicety. At times the artist fashioned these drums to represent a crouching 320 man or animal. Masks were often used in temple ceremonies when a god was impersonated, and ceremonial staffs were part of their equipment. So, also, were the throwing boards, or atl-atls, with which a warrior flung a javelin, the lengthen*way-wa'yil. †te-po-na'a-tli.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

532
776
324
778

534
322
532

PLATE 54

AZTEC ART

TOP: Coatlicue, the Mother of the Gods, a highly important member of the pantheon. This representation, over eight feet high, displays her power in terms of such fearsome attributes as two snakeheads, a necklace of a skull, hands and hearts, a skirt of writhing snakes and claws on her feet. The bottom of the statue's feet is carved to represent the earth monster. BOTTOM: Wooden drum with two tongues (teponaztli) in the form of an ocelot. The smooth, simple outlines contrast with the macabre congestion of the presentation above.

[p. 160(F)]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

sion of the irrelevant, implicit in drawing, largely contribute. 532
In our present day, with all the superb methods of photographic recordings and reproductions, the comic strip has a vogue unparalleled in our history.[17] (See Plates 62–63.)

Aboriginal music has largely disappeared. The friars 533 quickly adapted the chants and dances of Europe to Indian 534 needs and substituted Christian for Indian ritual practices, using song and dance as formulas easily understood by primitives. To judge from the instruments, Aztec music was strong in rhythm but lacking in tone. The two-tone and one-tone drums could emit sonorous rhythms, but the bone and clay flutes pipe pitifully and are not gauged to a fixed scale. The conch shell could be blown with varying notes, according to the intensity of the blast, although it was more suitable for summoning people than for making music. Whistles, rattles of clay and gourds, bells and shell tinklers enhanced the effect of carefully regulated rhythms. Notched bones, often human, were rasped with a stick and produced quite pleasant sounds. A strange type of drum, which seems to have been indigenous, had an amazing resonance attained by beating an inverted gourd floating in a large container of water.[18] (See Plates 39, bottom left; 61, middle right.)

The dance was highly important, but native steps seldom 535
persist except in the most primitive outlying districts, for [177
they were transformed by the friars into Christian patterns. 197]
The chroniclers describe dances of many types in which masses of people participated. It is impossible that the Aztecs, with their profound sense of design and form, should not have had elaborate rituals in which great bodies of people moved in complex patterns to complicated rhythms. Song was used to reinforce the ceremony, and the words of some 776 cooked, and roasted in a pot; one roasted [on the fire]; sweat-houses were heated, unguents were melted, things were cleansed.

776 And when his feast day was celebrated, once a year, at 796 the end of the month of Izcalli, they made an image of Moctezuma; before it quail were sacrificed and incense was set forth.

[262] Tamales [stuffed] with greens[66] were prepared in each dwelling. First they were placed before the fire. Then they were eaten.

● [534] And all day his old men sang, blew trumpet-shaped shells, beat drums, and sounded rattles for him.

And no one might reach his arm to the bowl, which was forbidden; nothing might be cooked. Because first were eaten the tamales [stuffed] with greens which had been brought as offerings.

And, in live coals, the children[67] roasted some snakes, frogs, small white fish, water lizards, [and] birds—whatever kind of small animal they hunted, they dropped in the hearth. Thus, they said: "Our father roasteth [something] for himself."

And when night fell, the old men, the old women, drinking wine, made libations in all [four] directions. [And] they said thus: "They give a taste of it to the fire; they refresh themselves."[68]

[535] And every four years a festival most greatly honored him—when Moctezuma danced a princely dance before the temple of Xiuhtecutli, which was called Tzonmulco.[69]

[273] And at this time everyone [including] all the children, every one of them, tasted the wine. Thus it was called [the time when] the children drink wine.

[608 And then they gave the children uncles and aunts, a man
431] [and] a woman, whom those with children sought out and gave gifts. These took [the children] upon their backs, and carried them then to the temple of Izcoçauhqui. There [the [304 parents] pierced their ears; thus they placed a sign upon 852] them, while their uncles and aunts[70] looked on. Afterwards all feasted.

776 [Izcoçauhqui's] ornament was [thus]: black was smeared about the lower part of his face. About his head he bore a circlet set with green stones; he wore a paper crown with blue cotinga feathers and a spray of quetzal feathers; he had a crown of arrowshafts; a crown of spear-shafts;[71] he had

Auh yn iquac ilhujquptilloia, cexilhtica: ipan itlamjan yxcalli: qujxiptlatiaia in motecuçuma, ixpan tlacotonaloia, cupaltemjlilo, ouhqujltamalli nechivilloia, in ocomolpan: achto ixpan qujmanjlisia in tletl, çanpan qualoia.

Auh yn jvevieoan, ioh cemjlhujtl, in qujcujcatia, qujtecuipichilia, qujtepenacilhuja, caiacachilhuja:

auh aiac vel cinaçoaia in comalco, vetlacaoaltiloia, yajc amo aca motlatiz, mochichinoz: ipampa in iancujcan oqualac ouhqujltamalli, yajc otlamanalac.

Auh in pipiltocanti, muchintin qujtlaxqujxia: yn aca cuatl: cujiatl, xocjli, axolotl, tozcl: in çaço tlein ocacic iniolt, ycamac centlaçaia in tlecujlli: ic mjtoaia, motlaxquja yn inca.

Auh yn ciocac, noujan tlatlaoanaia in vevetque, ylamatque: ioh qujtoaia, qujtlamiauhjlisia yn tletl, tezcalcauja.

Auh nauhxiuhtica, yn oc cenca, mauirtilloia, ilhuiuh: iquac motecujtotiaia yn motecuçuma, ixpan yn jxucal, xiuhtecutli, ytocaiocan tzonmulco.

Auh in jquac hy, vel muchitlacatl, vel no inquich tlacatl, qujpaloaia, qujltequja, in vetli, in pipiltocanti: ic motocaiotiaia, pillaoano:

yeon vncã qujntlatiaia, qujnmahujtiaia in pipiltocanti. Çe cioatl, ce oquichtli, in qujntemoaia pilhoaque, qujntlauhtiaia; ichoantin qujnmamatihuja, vnpa qujmocacoaia, yn ixcuçauhquj: vnpa qujmacaxapotlaia, qujnnacaxoiocajaia: inhquja ic qujmachoitiaia, yajc qujmitta, yntlacoan, ynnaujoan: çanpan qualoaia.

Jn jnechichioal caxca: tilitica motenujltec, chalchiuhtezcla, xiuhxocnamacale, quetzalmjiaoaia, mjtzoua, tlacozzouaz, xiuhcoznacoche, amacozmeapanala, no tzitzile, cocujole, tiuhcoacatlatlapanquj yn jchimal, tlachieltopile.

---

66. "Una de las hierbas que se comen cocidas se llama huauhquilitl, que son blandas, es muy verde, tiene las vainas delgadillas y chiquitas, tiene las hojas anchuelas. Los tallos de esta hierba se llaman huauhtli y la semilla se llama de la misma manera; esta hierba se cuece para comer, sabe a espinacs, exprimese del agua que se cuece para comerla; hacense tamales de esta hierba los cuales se llaman quilaxcalli." Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 233. On p. 338, huauhquilitl is defined as Amaranthus hypochondriacus Amaranthaceae.

67. In the corresponding Spanish text, the children's parents roasted and roasted these animals. In the Historia general, Vol. I, p. 287, Sahagún writes that the old men received the animals from the children as offerings and threw the offerings in the fire.

68. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 288; see temalacuja in Simeon: op. cit.

69. Described as the 64th temple in Tenochtitlan. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 227.

70. Corresponding Spanish text uses the word padrino (god-father; parent or preserver). Molina (op. cit.) combines the words tiaxi and cuaci as uncle and aunt.

71. Chalchiuhtezcla—a strap for the head, set with jeweled disks, the front side bearing the figure of a cotinga (chalchiuhtezcatl); quetzalmiaoaia or xiuhtzoncuacalli quetzalmiaoaia—a form of headbar ornament made in the form of a crescent moon, bordered upward; mitzquitl tlacochtzquitl or

X 796 [346] [534] [417]

Tlacochcalco; and, before he arrived there, at a place which they called Tlapitzauayan, the women withdrew and left him. Arrived at the place where they were to kill him, he ascended the steps himself; on each of them he shattered one of the flutes which he had played as he walked, all during the year. When he had reached the summit [of the pyramid], they threw him upon the sacrificial stone; they tore out his heart; they brought down the body, carrying it in their hands; below, they cut the head off and ran through it [the crosspiece of the skull rack] which is called tzompantli. Many other ceremonies were enacted in this feast, which are set forth at length in their account, fol. 53.

llamauã tlapitzauiaiã, apartauãse las mugeres y dexauãle: llegãdo al lugar, donde le auã de matar: el mismo se subia por las gradas, en cada vna dellas, hazia pedaços vna flauta de las cõ que andaua tañendo todo el año: llegado arriba, echauãle sobre el tazõ sacauanle el corçaçõ, tornauã a descendir el cuerpo abaxo en palmas, abaxo le cortauã la cabeça y la espetauã en vn palmo que se llama Tzompãtli: Otras muchas cerimonjas, se hazãã en esta fiesta: las quales estan escriptas a la large en su historia. fo. 53.

X 796 [805 776] The ninth month they called Tlaxochimaco. On the first day of this month they held a feast in honor of the god of war, named Uitzilopochtli. In this they offered him the first flowers [grown] in that year.

Al nono mes llamauan Tlaxochimaco: El primero dia deste mes hazian fiesta a honrra del dios de la guerra llamado Vitzilobuchtli: offreciaule en ella las primeras flores de aquel año.

Chapter 9
Tlaxochimaco

[23] 262 On the night before this feast, all buried themselves in killing fowls and dogs, in order to eat them, and in making tamales and other things concerned with food. Then, very early in the morning of this [778] feast, the priests of the idols decked Uitzilopochtli with many flowers; and after the statue of this god was adorned, they decorated the statues of the other gods with garlands and strings and wreaths of flowers. And then they decked all the other statues in the tribal temples and young men's houses. And in the houses of the majordomos and leading men and commoners, all decorated with flowers the statues which they had in their houses.

X 796 536 Having decorated the statues of all the gods, they then began to eat that fare which they had prepared the night before; and, a little after eating, they started a kind of dance in which the noblemen, with women, together danced grasping each other's hands, and the ones embracing the others, arms thrown about each other's necks. They did not dance solemnly in the manner of a ceremonial dance, nor did they go through the movements of a ceremonial dance; but [534] they went step by step, to the rhythm of those who 778 beat [the drums] and sang, all of whom were standing, a little to one side of those who danced, near a circular altar which they called mamoxtli.

This chanting lasted until nightfall. Not only in the pyramid courtyards but in all the houses of the leading men and the commoners they beat [the drums] and sang with a great din until night. And [273] the old men and the old women drank wine; but no young man nor young woman drank it. And if [any] of them did drink it, they punished them sorely. Many other ceremonies were performed in this, which are [described] at length. Etc.

Cap. 9
Tlaxochimaco

1 d KL La noche antes desta fiesta ocupa- d 12
2 e uanse todos en matar gallinas y perros e 13
3 f para comer, en hazer tamales y otras f 14
4 g cosas concernientes a la comida: luego g 15
5 A de mañanjta el dia desta fiesta: los A 16
6 b sacrapas de los ydolos, componjã cõ b 17
7 c muchas flores a Vitzilobuchtli, y des- c 18
8 d pues de compuesta la estatua deste d 19
9 e dios: componjan las estatuas de los e 20
10 f otros dioses con gujrnaldas y sartales f 21
11 g y collares de flores: y luego cõponjan g 22
12 A todas las otras estatuas de los calpules, A 23
13 b y telpuchcales: y en las casas de los cal- b 24
14 c piques y principales y macegguales, c 25
15 d todos componjan las estatuas que ten- d 26
16 e jan en sus casas con flores. e 27
17 f Compuestas las estatuas todos los f 28
18 g dioses: luego començauan a comer g 29
19 A aquellas viandas que tenjan aparejadas A 30
20 b de la noche passada, y desde a vn poco despues de b 31
comer: començauan vna manera de bayle o dança: en la qual los hombres nobles con mugeres juntamente baylauan asidos de las manos y abraçados los vnos con los otros: echados los braços sobre el cuello el vno del otro: no dançauan a manera de areyto, nj hazian los meneos como en el areyto, sino yvan paso a paso: al son de los que tanjan y cantauan los quales estauan todos en pie, apartados vn poco de los que baylauan, cerca de vn altar redondo que llamauan mamoxtli—

Durauo este cantar hasta la noche: no solo en los patios de los cues: pero en todas las casas de principales y macegguales, tañjã y cantauan con gran bozeria hasta la noche: y los viejos y viejas beujan el vctli: pero ninguno mancebo nj moça lo beuja: y si alguno lo beuja castigauanlos rezisimente. Otras muchas ceremonjas se hazian en esta: que esta a la larga. Etc.

The eleventh month they named Ochpaniztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the mother of the gods, named Teteo innan, or Toçi, which meaneth "Our Grandmother." They danced in silence for the honor of this goddess, and in great silence slew a woman dressed with the ornaments with which they represented this goddess.

Chapter 11
Ochpaniztli

Five days before this month began, all the feasts and merry making of the previous month ceased. Entering this month, they danced eight days without singing and without beating the two-toned drum. These past, there came forth the woman who was the likeness of the goddess whom they name Teteo innan, arrayed with the ornaments with which they pictured the same goddess; and a great number of women came forth with her, especially the medicine women and midwives. And they split into two bands and fought, pelting each other with balls made of tree parasites and from the leaves of the tuna cactus and with balls made from the leaves of reeds, and with flowers which they call cempoalsochitl. This merry making lasted four days.

These ceremonies and others of like kind ended, they brought it about that that woman should not know she was to die, so that she should neither weep nor be saddened; for they held that to be an omen of evil. The night when she was to die having fallen, they decked her very richly, and persuaded her that they were taking her so that some great lord might sleep with her; and they bore her in great silence to the pyramid where she was to die. Having taken her up, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder, and swiftly they struck off her head, and then they flayed her. And a near youth put on her skin.

This one who wore the skin of the woman whom they had slain they then bore off with great solem-

1. Ochpaniztli meaneth September "to sweep."

Al vndecimo mes llamauan Ochpanjztli: El primero dia, deste mes, haziã fiesta a la madre de los dioses llamada Teteu inna o Toci, que quiere dezir nuestra abuela: baylauan a honra desta diosa en silencio y matauan vna muger en gran silencio vestida con los ornamentos que pintauan a esta diosa.

796K [805 776]

Cap. 11.
Ochpanjnili.

Cinco dias antes que començasse este mes: cesauan todas las fiestas y regozijos del mes passado entrando este mes, bailauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin teponaztli: los quales passados, salia la muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃ llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de mugeres con ella: especialmente las medicas y parteras: y partianse en dos vandos y peleauan apedreandose con pellas de pochtli y con hojas de tunas y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espadias, y con flores que llamã cempoalsochitl. Este regozijo durauã quatro dias.

Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras deste calidad: procurauan que aquella muger no entendiesse que auia de morir porque no llorasse nj se entristeciesse porque lo tenjan por mal agouero: venjda la noche en que auia de morir, atauiauanla muy ricamente, y hazialla entender que la lleuauan para que durmjesse con ella algun gran señor: y lleuauanla con grã silencio al cu, donde auia de morir: subida arriba, tomauala vno a cuestas espaldas con espaldas, y de presto le cortauan la cabeça, y luego la desollauan: y con mancebo robusto vestiase el pellejo.

Este que vestia el pellejo desta que matauan: lleuauanle luego con mucha solenjdad y acõpañan-

1	b	KL	Ochpanjnili.	b	21
2	c	Cinco dias antes que començasse este		c	22
3	d	mes: cesauan todas las fiestas y regozi-		d	23
4	e	jos del mes passado entrando este mes,		e	24
5	f	baylauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin		f	25
6	g	teponaztli: los quales passados, salia la		g	26
7	A	muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃		A	27
8	b	llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los		b	28
9	c	ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la		c	29
10	d	mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de		d	30
11	e	mugeres con ella: especialmente las		e	31
12	f	medicas y parteras: y partianse en dos		f	1
13	g	vandos y peleauan apedreandose con		g	2
14	A	pellas de pochtli y con hojas de tunas		A	3
15	b	y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espa-		b	4
16	c	dañas, y con flores que llamã cempoal-		c	5
17	d	sochitl. Este regozijo durauã quatro		d	6
18	e	dias.		e	7
19	f	Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras		f	8
20	g	desta calidad: procurauan que aquella		g	9

[534 535] [754] [524 137] [787]

The twelfth month they named Teotl eco, which signifies "The Arrival of the Gods." They celebrated this feast in honor of all the gods; for they said that they had gone to a number of places. They observed a great feast on the last day of this month because their gods had arrived.

Al doceno mes llamauan Teotl eco, que quiere decir la llegada de los dioses celebrauan esta fiesta, a honrra de todos los dioses, porque decian que auian ydo a algunas partes, hazian gran fiesta el postrero dia deste mes, porque sus dioses auian llegado.

796[X]
[805
776]

Chapter 12
Teotl eco

On the fifteenth day of this month the young men and boys strewed boughs on all the altars and shrines of the gods, both those which were in the houses and those which were along the roads and crossroads. And for this activity which they performed they gave them maize; [to some they] gave a large basket full of maize, and to others two or three ears.

On the eighteenth day arrived the god (who is always a young man whom they called Tlamazincal; that is, Titlacauan). They said that, because he was young and strong, he traveled better and arrived first. They then set forth food on his pyramid, and that night they ate and drank, and all made merry, especially the old men and the old women, who drank wine because of the arrival of the god. And they said that with this rejoicing they washed his feet for him.

On the last day of this month was the great feast; for they said that all the gods then arrived. On the eve of this day, at night, they made, on a mat, a very closely packed small cake of cornmeal, in the shape of a cheese. Upon this small cake the gods impressed the print of a foot as a sign that they had come. All night long the principal priest watched, and came and went many times to see when he would descry the print.

Seeing the mark of a footprint, the priest then cried out, saying "Our lord hath come!" Then the priests of the pyramid began to sound horns, and conch shells, and trumpets, and other instruments of those

Cap. 12
Teotl eco

1 A KL.
2 b A los quinze dias deste mes: los
3 c moços y muchachos, enramauan
4 d todos los altares y oratorios de los 5 e dioses: assi los que estauan dentro de
6 f las casas como por los camynos y en-
7 g cruzijadas, y por esta diligencia que
8 A hazian dauallos mahiz, algunos daban
9 b vn chiquyvitl lleno de mahiz, y a otros
10 c dos o tres maçorcas.
11 d A los deziocho dias: llegaua el dios
12 e (que siempre es mancebo que le 13 f llamauã tlamazincal: este es titla-
14 g cauã) deziã que por ser mancebo y
15 A reaio, caminaua mejor, y llegaua pri-
16 b mero: luego ofreciã comida en su co,
17 c y aquella noche comyan y beuyan y
18 d regozijauãse todos: especialmente los 19 e viejos, y viejas que beuyan vino, por la 20 f llegada del dios: y deziã que lo
21 lauauã los pies con este regozijo.

A 10
b 11
c 12
d 13
e 14
f 15
g 16
A 17
b 18
c 19
d 20
e 21
f 22
g 23
A 24
b 25 c 26
d 27
e 28
f 29[1]

El postrero dia deste mes era la gran fiesta: porque dizen que todos los dioses llegauan entonce: la vigilia deste dia, a la noche hazian encima de vn petate de harina de mahiz vn mõtecuzillo muy rapido de la forma de vn queso: en este montecuzillo imprimyan los dioses la pisada de vn pie en señal que eran llegado: toda la noche el principal sacrapa velaua y yua y venia muchas veces a mejor quando veria la pisada.

En viendo el sacrapa la señal de la pisada luego daua bozes diziendo, llegado a nuestro señor: luego començauan los mejjaceros del co, a tañer cornetas, y caracoles, y trompetas y otros instrumentos de los

[465]
[776]
[273]
[252]
[534]

1. Marginal correction. Definitely sound MS-Kid.

which they then used.

And four times they appeared before the people. They were looked at; they were made to be seen by the people; they were made known. They gave them and provided them their paper vestments.

The first time they were given, and ornamented with, red; they were [dressed] in red; their paper garments were red.

The second time their paper ornamentation was white.

The third time they again bore their red vestments.

The fourth time, white.

This last time, they ornamented them and gave them presents; for this last time, they wore [this array]—so that in it their fate would come, they would be slain, they would breathe their last, they would be the [sacrificial] striped ones. For this last time, they took their red array.

No more did they change [their garments]. And they ornamented them as the striped ones with liquid rubber.

And those who had captured prisoners, who had captives whom they had taken, also anointed themselves with red; they covered themselves with feather down; their hands and feet were covered with white turkey feathers.

And also they were given costly insignia; [but] not given [to keep] always—only that they should smoke with them; that they should dance the captives' dance with them.

Only thus they appeared and were seen; only thus men marveled at them; only thus [garbed] they celebrated the feast; only thus did one make known to men that his captive was to be offered as a sacrifice.

And he bore his shield, which went resting on his arm, and he carried his rattle stick, which he went rattling, and he proceeded planting his rattle stick on the ground, and it rattled and jingled.

And all those who had captives, those who had taken prisoners, were thus garbed—they whose captives would be offered as sacrifices when the Feast-day Tlacaxipehualiztli came.

Auh nappa teixpan neci, teixpan quintilo, teintilo, teiximachilo, quintlamamaca, quinmamaca yn jmamanechichioal:

ynic cappa maco, ynic chichiualo, tlauhio, tlauhiotiuj, tlatlactic, tlauhio yn jmamatlatquj.

Jnic vppa iztac, yn jmamanechichioal.

Jnic expa, oc cepa ichoatl yn intlatquj ietiuh, tlauhio.

Jnic nappa, iztac, icoen quinchichioaia, icoen quinmacaia, icoen quintquj, ynic ipan intequiuh veztiz, ynic quintlatlatixque, ynic ihjiotl quiçaz, ynic oacanauque ça icoen quicuj, yn intlatquj, tlauhio:

aocmo quipatla, aocmo quipapatla: yoan vltica quinonhoanchichioa.

Auh in tlamanj, in temanj, in male, in tescinj, no motlauhoça, mopotonja, motzomaia yn jma, yn icxi iztac tozoliujtica.

Auh no macoia, tlaçotlanquj tlauiztli, amo icoen macoia, çan ipã tlatecanjaia, çan ipan momalitotiaia:

çan ic neci, çan ic ito, çan ic tetlãmauiçoltia, çan ic ipan ilhuijtla, çan ic tetlattitia, ynic oncano ymal:

yoan ychimal ietiuh, ymac mantiuh, ic momamatiuh: yoan ichicaoac ietiuh, chicaoçotiuh, quintlquetzitiuh in chicaoztli, chachalaca, cacalaca.

Auh muchinti, ish muchichioaia, yn inquichtin, maloque, in tlamanjme: yn jamalhoan cahoanque, yn iquac oncic ilhuijtl tlacaxipehualiztli.

796 X
289
292

[314]
796 X
292
[237]

[714
534]

[illegible] and University of Utah, 1950; Monographs of the School of American Research [illegible] 14, Pt. II), p. 13. On use of [illegible] paper, and its relation to Aztec [illegible], see op. cit., p. 17 and n. 60.

Yet again an eagle[-crowned warrior] came out, doing just as had been done. All four [acted as if] fighting. They raised their shields and war clubs [as offerings] to the sun.

Now no longer did they delay, by turning back. When they came out, they came out dancing, they went in order. As if lying down on the ground, as if crawling along, flat on the ground, they went looking from side to side; they went up leaping and fighting.

And thereafter the Youallauan came forth, garbed like Totec; only he came last, after the others, behind the four great eagle and ocelot [warriors]; they lifted up their shields and war clubs, offering them and dedicating them to the sun.

Then all the impersonators, the proxies, of all the gods[16] emerged in order, ahead of all. They were called the lieutenants, the delegates, the images.

Similarly, they preceded; they came in order; they came together. All came down. They came hence, from Iopico, from the very top of the [pyramid] Temple of Iopitli.

And when they had come down below, on the ground, on the earth, they gathered around the circular, flat, sacrificial stone; they seated themselves according to rank on large chairs called quechalicpalli.

And when they were seated, when they were arranged according to their importance, again the first in order was the chief priest, the Youallauan;[16] because it was his right, his office, that he should slay, offer as sacrifice, [that] with his hands he should destroy—with his hands hack open each of the captives destined for sacrifice.

[533 534 198] When this was done, then trumpets were sounded; conch shells, large sea shells, were blown; men put their fingers in their mouths and whistled, and there was singing. With singing of songs and blowing of trumpets, they arrived. The Cuacuateca placed themselves in order, their shoulders dejked with feather banners, and they encircled the offering-stone.

One [of the captors] quickly seized a captive. The captor, he who owned the captive, seized him by the head to bring him to the offering-stone.

[415 273] When he had brought him there, he offered him wine:[17] and the captive raised the wine four times

Oc no cepa ceuaztl oalquiça, in quauhtli, çan ic mochiuj in qujchiouia, oallachecoouia in nauijnti: conjauijlinia yn jochimal, yn jamacquauh in tonatiuh:

aocmo oalocacoaia, ynic oaltzinilotia, çan nijman ic oalquiatimanca, mitotiuijxac, momamauiuj: inhquin tlalli ixco motecteccatiuj, inhquin tlaltitech ouiquih, mocacamahtiuj, nanacatlachiztiuj, hacochokotiuj, tlatlaiecoatiuj.

Auh in ic inhquj nijman oalquiça, yioouallaoan, totec: ipan quiztiujxc, ça oallatoquilia, ça oallacacujtiuh, ça oallacujtlapiloca, ça quinoalocatzacujtiuh in nauijtin, vencisti in quaquauhti, yn ocelo, ça oalmaçoa, oalmoana, conjauijlia yn ixchimal yn jamaquauh in tonatiuh:

nijman ic ic oalquiça oalmoiaohtia, oalmotecpana, yn ixquijchiin teixiptlacoan, yn japatilocoan in ixquijchtin teteu: motocaioiaia tepatiuhti, tepatilloaan, teixiptlati:

çan ic no yuj in ujh.motecpantiuj, cemonotiuj, ynic oalcemo: vmpa oalpeoa in iopico, vel icpac in teucalli iopitli.

Auh yn oacico tlatzintla, in tlalchi, in tlaltitech: nijman quijacoalos in temalacatl, yn ocmiaoaloque, motlatlalia tecpantoque, ypan veuey icpalli, iuca quechoficpalli.

Auh ynic onoque, ynic tecpantoque, cuetziacantica, ic no cucic teiscantica, tlaiacatitica, in iocallaoa: ichica ca iequjuh, yneiaciujl catca, in tlamictiz, in tetlatlaxiz, ymac poliozz, ymac xamaniuj yn ixquijch qnaulteccatl:

in ic inhquj nijman tlapizzalo, teccintli mopizza, quixquijtli, mapipizoa, yoan cujco: cujcapan tlapitzalpan, in oalmoiacatia: motecpana in cuacateca, quixquequechpanocoiuj, aztapanjel, quijacoalos in temalacatl.

Ce cantiquiça in malli, icpac cantiuh in tlamanj, in male, ynic quijaica temalacac:

yn ocanixique, quijmaca vetli: auh yn vetli nappa coniavilia in malli: auh çatepan conj piantica:

15. Durán, in op. cit., pp. 176 ff., names Uitzilopochtli, Quetzalcoatl, Tezcatlipoca, Tlaloc, Tezcatlipoca, and Huitzilopochtli.
16. Quetzalcoatl; Durán specifies "el principal sacerdote, de aquellos dioses que se llamaban Quetzalcoatl."
17. Sahagún (op. cit., p. 68) says the captor raised the wine; Sahagún says the prisoner.

Twenty-second Chapter, in which are described the celebration and blood sacrifices which they made in the second month, known as and called Tlacaxipehualiztli.[1]

And this was when the rattle boards were sown[2] there at the Temple of Yopitli. And they, the old men belonging to the Temple of Yopitli,[3] sat singing and rattling their rattle boards until the day was done. Thus they came to spend the day, to celebrate the feast all day, coming to pass the day. Thus the whole day passed.

And [because] flowers were offered, [the feast] was called "The Offering of Flowers"; for all the various flowers which had newly blossomed were first [fruits]. It was the first flowers to appear which were thus given as offerings. None might breathe the scent without first providing an offering. They made or laid offerings of whatever little flowers they saw, which spread out bursting, popping, rustling into bloom—the flowers of spring. Small, little, tiny ones; little stone [flowers], however few, small, and tiny; little wooden ones, they carved and bound together.

And in order to gather the flowers, they all went together to the fields, since some who worked in the fields came there to sell them.

And when this was done, they ate tamales made of wild amaranth seed.[4]

Especially the Costeca, they who belonged to the district of Costlan, esteemed [these tamales]. They offered them to their god[dess], called Coatl icue or Costlan tonan.

[For] they placed trust in her; she was their confidante; they depended upon her; she was their support. To her they lifted their voices.

And also at that time were hidden away the human skins[5]—placed aside, abandoned. There at the Temple of Yopitli they were all buried.

Jnjc cemposali onnome capitulo, vncã motecneoa yn ilhuitl, yoan in nextlaoalizth in quichiouia in ipan ic vme metztli: in mitouia, in motecneouia, Tlacaxipehualiztli. 796^x

Auh in iquac y, aiacachpizolo vmpa iopico: auh ça ichoanti, in calpulotecqueque, vmpa pouhque iopico, cujcatoque, aiacachotoque, yc ouetzi cemilhuitl, in tlacemilhuitilitoque, ic tlalhujquixtitoque, ic tlalhujnextitoque, tlalhuiçultitoque, ihuiçulotoque, ic ueuetzi cemilhujtl: [534] yoã xochimanalo ynic mjtoa xochimanalo, ca in ixquich nepapan xochitl, in iancuican cueponj, yiacatiuitz: yn iiacac vitz xochitl ic tlamanalo, aiac achto quinecuj, intlacamo achto ic tlamanaz, quiuenchioaz, quiuẽmanaz, in çaço tlein xochitoltzi quittaia, cuecueponioc, cuecuepocaioc, tlatlatzcaioc, in tonalxuchitl, hacquj, aquitoton, hacquipipil, hacquitetoton, çan quecizquj, çan quezquitoton, çan quecizquipipil, çan quezquiquauhtoton quicujcujtlalpia, quitlpia. 796^x 824 [784] [532]

Auh ynic xuchiteremoaia, quicenpanocujtivj in milli, tel cequj quiualnamacaia, in millaca: 796^x [432]

auh yn iquac y, quiquaia tzatzapaltamalli: [261]

oc cenca ichoanti quimauiztliaia in coatzca, in coatlan calpulli itech pouja: quitlamanjlia yn intecuh, inoca coatl ycue, coatlan tona:

yn jtech tlaquauhtlamati, yn innetemachil, yn itech moquauhtiotia, yn inquauhio, yn itech motzacuilia.

Auh çan no iquac tlatlatilo, onmotlania, onmocacoa, yn imomio tlaca, vmpa iopico omacctiuj:

1. The corresponding Spanish text specifies: "... que hacían en el principio del segundo mes, que se decía Tlacaxipehualiztli."
In Chapter 3, this month is correctly named Tepeilhuitl.
2. Same corresponding Spanish—"Y se decía 'se sembraban semajas'" (Garibay, "Bolsicón breve," p. 204). Seler (op. cit., p. 77) has, for sembraban, "fueron puestas las almohadillas (?) del Tecuil."
3. "Los ancianos de aquel templo," according to Sahagún's Spanish text.
4. Cf. Sahagún, Histoire des choses de la Nouvelle-Espagne, p. 92, n. 3: tamapalitzalli—"Pan-dos pour tamapanecatl, de tamapali, dépôt ou bordo-pagnonnet, et tamanalli, pâtes de tamal."
5. Bandelier, Seler (op. cit., p. 78) omit the term corresponding. Garibay (op. cit., p. 205) has, for yoan tetlaqua tlacatlalli, "y se llamaba, 'se sembraban los pedos'"; the corresponding Spanish of Sahagún reads: "sembraban los algunos ahorcados."

1796 [535] 1796 302 293 [297]

leapt about. And the priests also danced. It was called "the leap in the mouth of Tonacal."[17]

There were paper rosettes fastened upon [the priests'] foreheads; they decked their heads with white feathers. And they smeared honey on their lips; their lips were gleaming. They had paper breech clouts. And their black feathered staves had jackdaw feathers in the form of a cup, and a round ball at the base, also of black feathers. The black feathered staves also were called black rain-bird [staves].[18]

And where they went grasping [the staves] were papers painted with black scroll designs. And these [priests], as they danced, made circles with, and struck, their black feathered staves on the ground.

1796 [534] 1796 535

And only in the tribal temples were those who beat the drums for them, seated upon the ground. They beat the upright drums; they sat beating gourd rattles; they sat rasping gourd rattles and beating turtle shells.

And all the masters of the youths, the young seasoned warriors, and the youths were spread out, dancing elsewhere [a dance] called the serpent dance.

And hence [they named what] was danced a serpent dance, because they moved back and forth, and from side to side, and met each other face to face. They went holding each other's hands as they danced.

[301] 302

And also a number of young women danced, having so vowed, a popcorn dance. As thick as tassels of maize were their popcorn garlands. And these they placed upon [the girls'] heads. And they were painted; down to the thighs were they bedecked with feathers. And [these] reached up to their upper arms. And they went mingling with and among those who danced.

1796 684 685

Of these, it was said that they embraced, they embraced one; they embraced Uitzilopochtli.

And these girls were very well guarded, that none might covet them, nor ravish them.

And all who danced the serpent dance were well watched, that none might fall into covetousness.

And if anyone were seen seducing one [of the girls], then the masters of the youths threw him to the ground. They dragged him; they stepped upon him as he lay stretched out; they trampled upon him.

chochoteimanj: auh in tlamacazque no mjhtoia, mimiti tzacachocholoa:

amaizquatechimaletimanj, amaizquatechimalequa, moquequapotonja iztac tzolivitica: yoan motecmecovia tzontzatlantiuj, ymamomaxtli, yoan iztzatzanapil, tzanaivitl, in ishquj ytecomaio, auh yn itzintzelolo, çan no tzanaivitl: no motocaiotia ycujtlacuchcho, in tzanatopilli.

Auh ynjc quiztizquijtiuj, amatl acazilquj, ynjc tlacujlolli: auh in ichoantin, hin, ynjc mjhtoia, tlaiacolea, ic tlazixhtiuj yn jztzanatopil:

auh çan calpulco, in qujntlacotzonjlhoia, çan cacatz chocoticate: çan tlalpan vcuetl in qujzcotzona, aiacachotoque, aiacachquetzotoque, aiotl qujzcotzona, aiaujectoque, aiochiuhtoque.

Auh yn ixquich teachcaoan, in telpuchtequjoaque, yoan in telpopuchti, cecnj manj in mjtoia, motenoa mococolea.

Auh ynjc mjhtoia mococolea, ichica aujc viujh, ixtlapal viuj, mjxnanamiquj, in matitech maantiujh ynjc mjtoia.

Auh no cequjntin cioa ichpopuchti, mjtoia innetol, momomochitoia: centzontecomatl ynjc tomaoac catca, ynmomochicoaquj, yoan ymicpac contecatiuj, motzoa, yoan in metztomacaian aci, ynjc mopotonja, yoã ymacolpan onacia: intlan mamantiuj, intzatzalan mantiuj, in mjtoia.

Jn ichoantin hin, motenoa tlanaoa, tenaoa, qujnaoa in vitzilopuchtli:

auh in ichoantin ichpopuchti, cenca vel pinlolia, ynjc aiac qujmjxcleuiz, ynjc aiac qujncamanalhuiz.

Auh yn ixquichtin yn mococolea, vel mopinia ynjc aiac vncan molcuiz:

auh intla acz itta, tecamanalhuja: njmã tlalli ic qujujtequj, in teachcaoan, qujzujujlaza, qujzitilicça, qujzuicça:

17. Corresponding Spanish text: "saltar o bailar de la frente de tonacal"; Garibay (op. cit., p. 298) translates tonacachocholoqui as "se salta el salto de Tonacal."

18. Sahagún's Spanish text specifies only black feathers; cf., however, Relación anónima, Vol. III, pp. 142-3 and 187. The last-mentioned reference to tonacal is: "Hay una ave que se llama tonacal; es negra y tiene el pico corto." Seler (op. cit., p. 108, n. 7) calls tonacal jackdaw or dawe; ib. (Ibid., p. 233) used chinchi. Of this and of tzanaivitl he says it is "ein Vogel, der gegen Regen dort Regenwetter sind hören läßt und dessen Federn, auch diese Gleichen der Mexikaner, Leuchtgase verursachen sollen. Ich habe den Mexiko dieses Vogels deshalb mit 'Regenpfeifer' übersetzt. Er soll auch ein Vogel sein, dessen Federn verursachen Gefahr gewissen sich von der der tonacal oder Dohlen." Sahagún (loc. cit.) usually explains: "es que entre Españoles cuervinchi, que tienen de la frente, que llamamos chinos, era el tonacal." See also supra, p. 96.

All went to be bathed. They went sounding trumpets; they went blowing shell trumpets; they beat clipper discs[10] with pine [hammers].

And all the priests carried on their backs their tobacco bags,[11] and their strings of maguey fiber about the neck, from which went hanging the little bags, which were filled with dyed, powdered tobacco. And the fire priest went ahead of them, taking his incense burner and his maguey thorn. And, with it, he carried his incense bag.

And leading them went a man, an old priest. He went bearing on his shoulders the mist rattle board, called also the sorcerers' staff, which was thick, broad, very wide, and long—very long. And it rattled; he went along rattling it.

No one else remained at the priests' dwelling; the house was all empty, deserted, tenantless.

And only four stayed there—singers, who sat singing, beating the drum, rattling the turtle shell rattle and the gourd rattle, and blowing the shell trumpet. They sat plying the shell trumpet.

And when they had reached the water's edge, the priests' bathing place, where, at the cardinal points, were the mist houses, thereafter all threw themselves down and seated themselves, trembling, shivering, quaking with cold, their teeth chattering.

Hereupon spoke the old man called the old precious stone priest; he said:

"[Behold] the place where the serpents are wrathful, where the water-gnats buzz, the place where the ducks alight, where the white reeds rustle."

When he had thus spoken, thereupon all plunged into the water; they churned it up—beating the water with their hands and with their feet, crying out. Speaking hoarsely, they mimicked all the birds.

Some spoke like ducks, babbling; some mimicked wading birds, speaking like them; some imitated water ravens, talking like them; some talked like [large] herons, some like kingfishers, some like cranes.[12]

Where they bathed, there in their midst were Viloa, onnevtemalo, tlapiztzalotiuh, quipiztiuj, in tecciztli, cobconiloc chihiltli.

Auh in muchintin tlamacazque, qujmamama yn imiyiequach, ynmecacozquj, inmemecacozquj, itech pipilcatiuh yn imiiequach, ontetentiuh yiaqualli: yoan qujniacantiuh in tlenamacac, ytlemaub ietiuh, yoan yuitz ietiuh: yoan itlan cana icopalxiqujpil.

Auh ce tlacatl quacujlli tziacantiuh, qujquechpanotiuh, niochicaoaztli, no itoca naoalquaujtl, petlaoac, patlactic, patlacpol: yoan viiac, vitlatztic, yoan cacalaca, qujcacalatztiuh nocac ce onmocaoã calmecac, cemjchictiuh, cactimoquetza, cactiuetzi in calmecac.

Auh çan naujntin in vmpa onmocaoa cujcanjme, cujcatoque, teponaçotoque, niochiuhtoque, niacachotoque; qujpiztoque in qujqujztli, qujqujçotoque.

Auh yn oacito atenco, yn jnnealtiaia tlamacazque? nauhcampa in manca yn nizuhcalli, njman ic ic neteteco, netlalilo, tlatziztilca, tlaviujioca, tlacuecuechca, netlantzizilitzalo:

in ic iuhquj njman ic tlatoa, in vene itoca chalchiuhquaqujlli: qujtoa.

Coatl yçomocaiã, amoiotl ycaoacaian, atapalcatl ynechiccaiaoan, aztapilcuecuetlacaian:

yn oconjto y, njman ic ic onnetepeoalon atla, tlachachaquaztzinemj, yn atlan, tlamaujtectinemj, tlacxiujtectinemj, ntlacxiuitectinemj, tzatzitinemj, ycaoztzinemj, qujntlaichecalhuja yn izqujchtin totome:

cequj canauhtlatoa, tlacacauja, ceq'ntin qujntlaichecalhuja, in pihpiztzi, pipiztzlatoa: cequjntin qujntlaichecalhuja, yn acacalome, acacalotlatoa: cequjntin aztatlatoa, cequjntin azoquenelatoa, cequjn tecujlcoiocatlatoa:

yn vncan maltiaia yn, tlanepantla manca in cuen-

---

10. CÁMARA: cf. Gabriel Saldívar: Historia de la música en México (Mexico: Editorial "Cultura," 1934), p. 21; ocelocuilar; ocuillin (conch)(?).

11. "Todos llevaban a questas, unos talegillos atados con unas cordelejas de ixtli, otros unos lienzos al cuello; y de estos colgaban, unos unos de papel pintados, otros con los mismos talegos, que llevaban pintados; y en aquellos talegos llevaban unos manojos de hierbas, hechos a la manera de incienso de estos llevaban pintados, que eso significaban aquellos, y con polvos de unas yerbas que eso llevaban pintado, que se creen hechos de ceniza" (corresponding Spanish text).

Clavi (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 57n.) writes: "Acacalotl (acal canoe, yotl tobacco. The Mexicans had three kinds in use: the yotl or Nicotiana macrophylla Dun.; the quauhyotl, quauhtlatoa tobacco, yotl tobacco, or Nicotiana rustica L.; and pinitzi, pinitzi tobacco, yotl tobacco, or Nicotiana tabacum L., which latter is usual or charred in pulque called pulque); yotl tobacco, quauhtl, yotl, or smoked or cigars or pipitzi, pinitzi smoke, yotl tobacco. When smoked, tobacco was mixed with xochicuauhtl, ocimatlatl, tlalchi, and chiltecpin." Cf. also ibid., Vol. II, p. 134.

12. These birds are described in Lib. XI, cap. 6, § 9 of Sahagún. Cf. Bulmarda ed., Vol. III, pp. 168-81. Saldívar defines these respectively as (probably) green-winged teal; blue American egret or heron; kingfisher (amaquemo or amaquemecatl); and sandhill crane (Mexico Ilustrado, p. 118, items 3-7).

And when this was done, then he scattered incense. And when he had scattered it, then they gave him his mist rattle board, and he rattled it, he shook it, he raised it as an offering [to the god].

And when they finished, then all departed, [the crowd] broke up, all dispersed and scattered, each one going to his priests' dwelling. [But] the novice priests, them they only took to their houses.

And when they had entered the priests' dwellings, then all put off [their adornments], and sat in order.

And at night, thereupon began and took place a feast, on the top of the Temple of Tlaloc.

The horizontal drum was beaten, flutes were played, conch shells and reed pipes were blown. There was song. The horizontal drums croaked, growled, and droned, and rattles were rattled.

They caused those who were to be slain, the likenesses of the rain gods, to spend the night in vigil.

And when midnight came, when night divided in half, then began the slaying. First to be slain were the captives. They became as the fundament [of those who followed]. And when [these] died, thereupon died [the impersonators of] the rain gods.

Then also [was the time] when they burned all the paper offerings, and the quetzal feathers, and various [other] precious feathers; and some of the green stones—well-formed, those which were in no way blemished, which had no defects, as well as some of the green stones which were rough and brown, or dark.

And when they slashed open the breasts [of the victims], when they opened the breast of one of them, they seized his heart; they placed it in a vessel, painted blue, named the cloud vessel, which was painted with liquid rubber on four sides. And it was decked with paper dotted with drops of liquid rubber, with much rubber,—full of rubber.

Thus they did to all the impersonators, and they cast all their hearts there [into the cloud vessel].

And when this was done, at midnight, when they were slain, all the bystanders, who were watching, all had in their hands their wormwood flowers.[27] They walked thrusting [these], lunging with them to and fro, and fanning their children [with them]. It was said that thus they frightened away the worms, that their [children's] eyes might not become wormy. Some put [the flowers] in their ears. Some just walked carrying them gathered in their hands.

Auh in ic iuhquj, njman contepeoa yn jiaulitli: 796x auh yn ocontepeuh, njman conmaca yn aiochicaoaztli, concacalatza, conujujxoa, coniyiaoa.

Auh ỹ ontzonquiz, njman ic viujlooa, cecenmanoa, momoiaooa, xitinooa, viuj yn jncacalmecac: auh yn tlamaztoton, çan qujnujujca yn inchachan.

Auh yn onnetecoto calmecac, mec nexixitinjlo, netlatlalilo:
auh yn onioooac njman ic ic peoa, in tlalhujmanj, in teucalticpac tlalocan:
teponaçolo, tlapitzalo, içhoatl in mopitza teccizzlij [534] yoan acatecoiztli: cujco, yn teponaztli, mjmjlcatoc, nanalcatoc, iuhqujn qujqujnacatoc, yoan aiacacholo:

qujntoçauja in miquizque yn imixiptlaoan tlaloque.

Auh yn oacic ioalnepantla yn iquac xeliuj ioalli:
mec peoa in micoa, iacattiuj in mamaltin miquj: iuhqujn inpepechoan muchioa: auh yn onmjcoque, njman ic ic miq' in tlaloque:

njman no yquac tlatla, yn ixqujch nextlaoalli amatl, yoan in quetzalli, yoan in nepapan tlaçoihujtl:
yoan cequj chalchiujtl yn jcucic, yn atle itlaciuiz, yn amo tlaciujce: yóan cequj olchalchiujtl, iaiauhquj, iaiactic, anoço yiauhtic.

Auh yn iquac qujmeltetequi, in oc onpeti yiechiqujuh, conanjlia yn iiollo, contlalitiuj comjc, tlatezoujlli motocaiotia, mixcomjtl, nauhtampa in tlavlxaoalli: auh yn itlaquen amatl tlavlchipinilli, cenca [415] vllo moca vlli:

much iuh qujnchiça yn isquintin teixiptlaoan, much vmpa contlaztimanj yn jniollo.

Auh yn iquac muchioa ioalnepantla, ynjc mjcoa:
yn ixqujchtin tlatlattaque, in tlatlachia, muchi imiztauhixxochiuh, inmac tetentinemj, qujtlatlaujtzotinemj, aujc qujtlaztinemj, ic mécapeujtinemj, yn [755 inpilhoã, qujlmach ic qujnpeujaia in ocujlti, ynic 278] amo yxocujlloazque: cequjntin in nacaztitlan caaquja, cequjn çan qujmamapictinemj.

27. Artemisia ludoviciana, known in Nahuatl as ixiptla, meaning "in place of," according to Seler, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, p. 70.

X 796 space], once more they circled back and returned [535] [whence they had started].

And when it all ceased, already it was late at night, [512] already time for all to sleep, as when one noddeth; today [that would be] at about the ninth hour.

[534] And when all had stopped, when the ground drum was undone, then all dispersed, all went, all betook themselves to their homes. The great noblemen, [373] when it was done, were accompanied by torches; they went lighted by torches, carried for them, to their homes.

And the women who had danced then were assembled, after there had been the song and dance, and they led them off. Even so was done with the leaders of the youths. They gathered [the women] together, grouped them, rounded them up, placed them together, assembled them, hunted them out,—lest they might go off somewhere, lest someone might accompany them, lest some debauched youth might go with [one of them].

[565] None the less, the noblemen addressed the matrons, that they might go and release some [of the women] or go and leave [one]. Not of their free will did [the women] go elsewhere; it was done on persuasion.

[431] And when they released them, [the girls] were given presents. Gifts were given, and food was given. And likewise, favors were offered the leaders of the women, the matrons. They kept for themselves and carried that which they saved to their homes.

X 796 And the young warriors, the young warriors who 836 had distinguished themselves, who were worthy of 684 honors, made their plea for the women only in secret, not before others; perchance in his home [such an one] awaited her, perchance elsewhere he called her. Just so, they ate privily.

[548] And the woman came forth only at night and spent only the night [with him]; she departed when it was well into the night.

And if one was noted living in concubinage, thus he aroused anger; thus he gave offense. For this all assembled and held council there in the song-house.

Here, before everyone, they punished him. Because of [his crime] they cut off his warrior's hair dress; they took from him all his belongings—his [831] adornment, his lip plug. Thereafter, they beat him sorely with a pine stick, verily causing him to swoon; they singed his head with fire; smoke rose, and blisters formed on his body.

And when they had indeed caused him to swoon, then they cast him forth.

vmpa tlantoc, oc cepa momalacachoa, in cujtlauic, oalmocuiepa.

Auh in necaoaloa, ic tlaquauhioua, ic netetequizpan: yn iuh mixtlaxilia axcan aço ic chicunauj ora.

Auh in ic ixqujch, yn onecacaoaloc, yn ompet vetetl, mec cecenmanoa, viujloa, yn ixqujchtin viuj yn inchachan: in veuei pipilti, onca caoalo, tlavilpan, tlaujlilotiuj, qujotlatlaujlitiuj yn inchan.

Auh yn cioa yn otmacaque, njman mocentlalia, in ic oncujcoianoloc, in qujiacana, yn iuhq' yn tiachcaoan muchioa, qujnnechicoa, qujntecpichoa, qujmololoa, qujncenqujxtia, quĵcentecpichoa, vel qujmixpepena, yn ma aca canapa ia, yn ma aca moteujcalti, in ma aca telpuchtlauehiloc qujujca:

tel in pipilti, qujmonilhujaia in cioa tlaiacanque, ynic cequjntin qujncaoatiuj, tecaoatiuj: amo çan mosocoiaia yn canapa via, tetencopa muchioaia.

Auh yn ontecaoaia, vmpa motlauhtiaia, vmpa tlauhtiloia, yoã vmpa tlamacoia: auh no tlatlauhtiloia, in cioatachcaoan, in cioateiacanque, motlacauja, motlatlacauja, quitquj yn inchachan innetlacaujl.

Auh in teachcaoan, inteachcauh, tlaiacatia, in mauiztililonj, çan ichtaca in qujnnaoatia cioa, amo teixpan, aço ichan in qujchietiuh, anoço canapa in qujnaoatia: çan iuhquj, yn ichtacaquaia.

Auh in cioatl, çan oalioualquiça, çan moioualpoloa, oc ueca ioan in qujça:

auh intla aca ittoa, in momecatitinemj, ic tlaqualanjaia, ic tlaiolitlacoaia, ica necentlalilo, yca nenonotzalo, in vncan cujcacali:

vncan teixpan qujtlatzacujltia, ic qujtzotzocoltequj, muchi qujcujlia in ixqujch ytlatquj, yn inechichioal, yn itempilol: çatepan qujujujtequj, ocoquauhtica, vel qujhiiocaoaltia, qujquatlechichinoa, tlêtlecaleoa, haaquaqualaca, yn inacaio.

Auh yn ouelqujhijocaoaltique, yca oalmaiauj:

wind. And the fourth place which she entered was over there at Xolloco. [And] there she stopped.

[For] these were a part of, and carried together, the four year-bearers—Reed, Flint, House, and Rabbit. Thus do the year-bearers go describing circles, whirling around [as a measure of time].

When, at early dawn, Xilonen was to die, all during the night songs were sung after the manner of the women. Vigil was kept. Everyone passed the night watching; they slept not; the women remained sleepless. They sang the songs [of Xilonen].

And when day broke, then began the dancing. Verily, everyone—the leaders of the youths, the leading warriors, and the valiant warriors bore maize stalks. These were named "bird banners."

Likewise the women danced—those who were with Xilonen. They were passed with red feathers. And their faces were painted with yellow ochre. Also they colored their faces in two colors: about their lips they were yellow with ochre, and their foreheads were stained with the red of anatta seeds.[8] [They bore] their wreaths of flowers upon their heads, and the leaders had garlands of the yellow flowers of the Caryophyllus mexicanus [about their necks].[9]

These women were known as priestesses. They mingled not with the men, but remained at one side. They were describing circles, and enclosing Xilonen. They sang for her after the manner of women. These women were called "the hanging gourd."

And the warriors danced before [Xilonen], following a serpentine course.

And for this reason were [the women] known as "the hanging gourd": the two-toned wooden drum, which they beat as they went, had tied to it a gourd, which was under the drum, which looked as if it were hanging beneath. They who struck the two-toned drum went carrying a little drum under their arms, which they beat, as they went, with rubber-tipped drum sticks.[10]

And the priests, [who] attended them, went blowing horns; they blew shell trumpets as they went. And they went strewing, scattering, and casting incense as they went to meet Xilonen.

And the fire priest, who was to slay [Xilonen] as

ecatl: ynic nauhcan aquja, vmpa xolloco, vmpa ontzonquiçaia, çã qujnoctiaia, çan qujujcaltiaia, yn nauhteil xiuhtonalli: yn acatl, in tecpatl, in calli, in tochtli, ynic tlaiacalotiuh, ynic momalacachotiuh, in xiuhtonalli.

In ie iuh iontzinco miquiz in Xilonen: ceiocal in ciouapan cujcoia, toçoonia, muchi tlacatl intzoçoonia, amo cochia, mocochiçoloaia in cioa, queoaia quevilaia yn icujc.

Auh yn ie otlatujc, njman ic peoa in netotilo, vel ixquich tlacatl in tiachcaoan, in telpopuchti, yn iiaque, yoan in tequjoaque, incicintopil: ynjn motocaiotia totopanjtl.

No mjtotia in cioa, yn itechpouja in xilonen, mopopotonjaia tlapalivjtica: yoan moxaoaia tecoçauhtica: no ic qujcotona, yn inxaiac, yn intenco, tecoçauhtica: auh yn imixquac tlapalachiotica, ymjicpacxochiuh, inxoxochicoaqui cempoalxuchitl yiacatiuh.

Yn ichoã yn, cioa, motenena cioatlamacazque, amo qujmonneloa yn oqujchti, çan nonqua mantiuj, cololujtiuj, qujtepeujtiuj in Xilonen: qujcioapãcujcatitiuj: in ichoantin y, cioa motenena tecomapiloca.

Auh in tiachcaoan ixpan mjtotitiuj, mococolotiuj:

auh ynic motenena tecomapiloca, ca in teponaztli in qujujtectiuj, itech çaliuhtiuh in atecomatl, yhicampa itepuzoco ictiuh in teponaztli, iuhqujn pilcatiuh ic neci: in teponaçoa çan qujciacaujtiuh in teponaztontli in qujujtectiuh olmatica.

Auh in tlamacazque, tenanamjquj tlapitzziuj, teccizzli in qujpiezziuj: yoan yn iauhtextli in qujpipizotiuj, qujcecenmatiuj, qujtetepeuhtiuj, conjxnamjctiuj in Xilonen.

Auh in tlenamacac, in tlamjctiz, vel mocencaoa,

8. Bixa orellana L., the annatto shrub (Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 6). Cf. also Seler, op. cit., p. 151.

9. "Estas flores que se llaman caryophylichiti, son amarillas y de buen olor" (Rodondo ed., Vol. III, p. 273). Tagetes, in Seler, loc. cit. See also p. 69, n. 15.

10. Clark (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 93, n. 2), writing of the tlamamaque cuicacalco (chanting priests), says "The player is called the teponaqui, and the drum, teponaztli, hewn from the hollowed-out trunk of the Lonchocarpus cruciatus Benth. this drum has two notes; the rubber-headed drum-sticks are of ulli." Cf. also Sahagún's description of the tempo on the bottom (corresponding Spanish text).

an offering, was richly arrayed and adorned. He bore an eagle claw device upon his back, which was surrounded by quetzal feathers. His holder was of eagle down in which were quetzal feathers. His flint knife was of gold. He carried a rosette on his back, which was made of paper, etc.

A man [priest] carried the mist rattle board upon his shoulder; he rattled it in three places. And when they had come to the place where Xilonen was to die, then the fire priest came to receive her. Before her he set up the rattle board, and rattled it, and with incense went forth to receive her, and cast it toward her.

And then they took her up to the Temple of Cintéotl. First they laid her upon the back [of a priest] —not upon the offering stone, but rather she died upon [a priest's] back. And those who died upon [a priest's] back, they called "those who have backs."

Thereupon she met her fate and [the sacrificing priest] severed her head. When she had [thus] suffered, when he had slain her, then he grasped her heart and planted it in the blue vessel. They who were well experienced knew where they cast it, where they required it.

And then all ate, for the first time, tortillas of green maize. For the first time the cape of green corn was offered and for the first time chewed, and likewise amaranth greens were newly cooked and once more the sweetness of flowers—the Caryophyllus mexicanus and tobacco flowers [—was smelled].

And at the Feast of the Great Lords, there was a dance which was the particular function of the women—old women, young women, mature women, little girls. The maidens, who had looked upon no man, were adorned with feathers and their faces were stained with paint.

Everyone made plain tamales and fruit tamales for themselves; they offered them as gifts to their gods.

And of the old men and the old women it was the exclusive privilege that they should drink wine. Never did a youth, a maiden, or a priest drink wine.

And if anyone was noted, great pains were taken that he be seized and put in jail, in the granary.[11] They all held council what might be done about it, and whether, perchance, they would punish him. [Evidence] was weighed; all discussed [his crime]. They determined whether [they would] show mercy; and if [they would] not show mercy, he was

11. See Plate 27.

muchichioa, quauhxxitl in quimama, quetzalli ynic moiaoatiuh, quãmoloctli, yn itecomaio ietiuh quetzalli cuztic teucujtlatl yn itecpaio ietiuh, ytlaquechpaniouh ietiuh, amatl in tlachiuhtli, etc. 716 793 [301] [267]

Ce tlacatl quiquechpanoa, in aiochicaoaztli, ezcan in cacalaca: auh yn oacito yn vncan miquiz xilonẽ, njman quioalnamjquj in tlenamacac, ixpan quioaltilquetza in chicaoaztli, quicacalatza: yoan yiauhtli ic quioalnamiquj, yuicpa quioalchaiaoa. [534]

Auh ie ic contlecauja in cinteupan, çatepan conteca in tecujtlapan, amo techcac, çan tecujtlapan in miquja: auh yn icujtlapan mjcoaia, metocaiotia tepozoa: 796 njman ie ic tlacoti, quiquechtequj, yn otlacotic, yn ocontlatlatique, njman ie ic conanjlia yn iollo, zoxouhquj xicalco quioallalia: ieholl quimati in machiceque catca in campa quitlalia, in campa quinequja.

Yoan iquac iancujcan qualoia, in xilotlaxcalli: iancujcan tlamanalo, iancujcan moquaquaia in ooztl: yoan iancujcan mopaoaci in oauhquilitl, yoan iancujcan ynecu in xochitl, in cempoalxuchitl, in jeuchitl. [262 264]

Auh yn iquac in vei tecujlhujtl nezcaloia, çan inneixcaujl in cioa, yn jlamatque, yn ichpocpochti, yn iniolloco cioa cioapipiltotonti: in ichpopochti yn aiacan quijta oquijchtli, mopotonjaia, momaoaia. [302]

Izquich tlacatl mocamaluja momocozamalujaia: quiotlatlamanjliaia, in intevoan. [868 273]

Auh in ucuctque, yoan in jlamatque, çan inneixcaujl catca in tlaoanaia: çan njmã aiac tlaoanaia in telpuchtli, in tlamacazquj, yn ichpuchtli.

Auh intla aca, oittoc, vel iujuj ic oanoc, quauhcalco tlalilo, petlacalco: ipan nenonotzalo in tlein ipan muchioaz, yn aço quijxacutiaz nezcitilo, neixpãtitilo: quijpantia intla ie ynemac: auh intlacamo ie ynemac, 796 273 689

delos cantares delos dioses. fo. 144. 532 415 534 292

Cochara, cochiua, cochi ixpiqui oblomiqui, iecitlaui, mochiuay tec, cacoylia, yiaqia.

¶ Xippe icuic, tlatlaquilia Vaina.

Iualli tlauana, iztlacan, tlaxoa tlequia xipiqui, mylatia tlauaq tlaquemiti, xipmoquetl quichiqia.

Notzuhca chalchiuhtzuna tlaua pana itzmoia, oiquechaillauiqui, ay quichol xiuiaztli nechtlaiquiz cauhquetl oncia.

Mamiaztia, mia, mila polinis mixaxin, achalchiuhtia xiollo, atecuxilatl necoiaxtlas xiolo xisquitlacatl achtequipa tlaqua xaia, ahuacatqui iauhtlatlauquetl oncia.

Notzuhca cuitlaxo xoiaxilinis ce noa xioatzin nuchepeiocpa mixi xalitz motzuhca, xisquitlaca catl achtequetl tlequauaia cha catqui iauhtlatlauquetl oncia.

¶ Chicomecoatl icuic.

Chicomolxin, xoia mechaa,

Page from Florentine Codex (Appendix: Song of Xipe)

[p. 102 c]

796
532
212

[534]

—After Paso y Troncoso

15.21. Teocatl (Chapter 24)

[p. 102 F]

Then they climbed up the ropes. On one rope mayhap twenty climbed, like a cluster hanging upon it. Not all reached the point; only some reached the top. The one who led grasped the zocoal image, which was made only of a dough of amaranth seeds. He took all—its shield, arrow, dart, and dart-thrower.

And the amaranth seed dough [amaxtli] he scattered down so that they fell to the ground upon those [who watched]. All who stood below looked up. When the amaranth seed dough fell, all stretched forth their hands and shouted as if there were a fight. Some took its head ornaments of amaranth seed dough, which he also scattered upon them. They were carried off by those below.

And when this was done, then he who had captured the zocoal [image] came down. When he descended and reached the ground, then they seized him; the old men [of the temple] took him up to the place of sacrifice and offered him gifts. And all thereupon pulled upon the ropes, exerting themselves greatly, verily destroying the work. And the zocoal then fell to the ground, raising a cloud of dust, breaking into pieces. Into three or four sections it quickly broke apart.

Upon this, all then went; all was quiet and left clear. And then they accompanied the captor of the zocoal to his house, and arrayed him in a brown striped cloak edged with a feathered border.

And if one were a captor [of the zocoal], he might well thus array himself, wrapping about him [such a cloak]; none might therefore dispute him [the right]. But if one were not [such a] captor, he might only keep one in his care. And mayhap he might sell it when he was poor or sick.

And thus they accompanied him to his home; two old priests went carrying him, taking him by the arms. Behind came the priests, blowing horns for him as they went, sounding shell trumpets for him. And he bore upon his back his shield. And when they left him, then they returned [to the temple].

Thus in truth ended here, [thus] concluded, the feast day.

njman ie ic tlecoa in mecatitech: in cc mecatl, aço cen tecpantli in jtech tleco, iuhqujn tlapipilcac: amo mochintin in vmpanvetzi, çan quexquintin in vmpanvetzi, in aquin iacatiuh, vel ichoatl caci in xocotl ixiptla, çan tzoalli: muchi qujcujlia in jchimal, in jmjuh tlaoaçomalli, yoan yiatlauh. 796 [48]

Auh in tzoalli, vmpa qujoaltetepeoa, tepan qujoalcecẽmana, muchi tlacatl, onacopatlachia in tlatzintlan manj, in jquac oalhuetzi tzoalli muchi tlacatl maçoa, iuhqujn ipan nemjmjctilo, iuhqujn tlatlacaoaca: no cequjnnin conaci, in jxxõcoiol in tzoalli, no tepã qujoalcecẽmana, namoielo in tlatzintlan.

Auh in ie iuhquj njmã: njman ie ic oaltemo, in xõcomanj: in ooaltemoc, in otlaltitochacico: njmã ie ic conana: in tlacacouhcan, vmpa qujtlecavia in vevetque, vmpa qujtlauhtia: auh in jxqujch, tlacatl, nimã ie ic qujtilinja in mecatl, vel netilinjlo, vel ontlamj in tlapaliviztli: auh in xocotl, njmã ic vetzi tlalpã, tlalipototzivetzi, popoztectivetzi, aço ezcan, anoço nauhcan qujztivetzi. [431]

In ie iuhquj, njmã ie ic vivilloa, cactivetzi, cactimomana: auh çatepã, concaoa in jchan in xocomanj, ic cuapana camopalli in tilmatli, tenjvivavanquj. [292]

Auh intla tlamanj, vel qujmoquentiz, vel qujmolpiltinemjz, aiac ic qujtlacioviliz: auh intlacamo tlamanj, çan qujmotlaciliz, çan ipiel icz: auh anoço qujmonamaqujliz, in jquac ic motolinja in jcocoian.

Auh injcõcaoa ichan: caantivi, qujzititzqujtivi yiacolpã; in quiquacujlti: vmentin, icãpa mantivi tlamacazque, qujdapichilitivi: ichoatl in teccizlli qujpichilitivi: yoã qujmamatiuh in jchimal. Auh in ocõcaoato, mec oalmecuepa: [534] ic vel oncan oatzonequiça, õtlamj in jlhujtl.

given the name Itztlacoliuhqui, "Curved Obsidian Knife."[9] This [Itztlacoliuhqui is god of] frost. [Cintéotl] accompanied [the other]; they came together—not at a run, but at their leisure, approaching and slowly moving toward the temple, where died [she who was Teci's likeness]. Again they took their places there.

And upon the morrow, when dawn had reddened and it was light, then [the wearer of the skin of Teci's likeness] climbed up to place herself upon the edge [of the pyramid]. And the noblemen, [who] already stood awaiting her, then all converged upon her. Then they ministered unto her. One of them applied feathers to her head and her feet—soft eagle down; another painted her face; another offered her her shirt with the eagle design, and her skirt, which was only painted; another decapitated a quail for her; [still] another set incense before her. [All this was done] very swiftly. Then it was quiet; then all departed.

And when they had left, then came forth her rich vestments, called her paper crown and her market place banner. And her paper crown was wide; in the middle was the market place banner. There were five [banners in all]. In the midst was the one market place banner, and four [of them] were on the sides—two on each side. [This headdress] was called mamali.[10]

And when they had arrived, then they brought the first four of the captives before [the other captives]. Then they stretched one [of the four] out upon the offering stone; she herself then slew [the victim] as an offering. She cut open the breasts of [all] four in the same way.

When she had slain these four, then she left [the others] in the hands of the fire priests, that they might slay the rest of the captives. Then she went where [earlier] she had gone to get her son; she went to bring her son, Cintéotl or Itztlacoliuhqui. At a little distance, her Huastecs went ahead. They were girt with twisted [paper] breech cloths, and had their mirrors on the mantles of their backs, and she bore her cotton blossom and precious feather spindle [with] unspun cotton].

And the medicine [women] and those who sold lime went ranged on both sides, singing. The old priests proceeded, intoning the song, striking a small, lic yiztivitze, vmpa itztivi, vmpa tlamattivi in jteupan, in vmpa omjc: oc ceppa vmpa ommoclalia.

796 [292]

Auh in otlatvic, in odatlavilotlecoac, tlatlavilotl eoa, mec oalmoquetza tlatempan: auh in jzquijch tlõcatl pipilti, ic quijchixtoque ipan õnetepeoalo: njman ic quijtlaclamaca: in aca quijpotonja icpac, yoan icaic, quauhtlachcaiotica: in aca quijzaoa: in aca cõmaca iquavipil, yoan icue, çan tlacujlolli: in aca çolin in quijcotonjlia: in aca copalli in coztemjlia cenca çan icuahca: njmã ic cactivetzi, njmãn ic vivilos.

[302] [292]

A[illegible] qvivilooc: njmã ic oalquijça in jveitlatquj mo[illegible]: yiamacal, yoan itianquizpan: auh in jamacal, çan patlachtic, inepantla icatiuh in tianquizpanjtl, macujlli manj: in tlanepantla icatiuh, ichoatl in tianquizpanjtl: auh navi hecoocampa oome quj tzatzacutiuh: motenecoa meotli.

[292]

Auh in ocõcencauhque, njmã ic ommoiacatia, in mamalti injxpan, navintin: mec oo conteca, in techcac: inomia yioma in quijmjctia, quijmchtetequj: navixtin, iuh quinchioa:

in oquijmõmjcti in navixtin, mec immac quijnoalcaoa in tletlemamacaque, injc quijamjctiaque, in oc cequjxtin mamalti: mec iauh in vmpa ocanato iconeuh: quijvicaltiuh in jconeuh, in cintéotl ano itztlacoliuhqui: quijacana in jouacoan vecapa quijtztivi, ommoncauhque, inamamecamatli, yoan incujlatecauh, im jchcauochtli, mamalacquetzalle.

[293] [283]

Auh in tiici, yoan in tenezamacaque, necoc quetivi, cujcativi: quijcacjcatzaxilitivi in quaquacujlli.

[463] 796 534

9. This knife is illustrated in the Vindobonensis and of the Codex Borbonicus and of the Aubin Collection.
10. Cf. [illegible] Spanish text. Sahagún (Bridge Explnd, p. 177) relates the term to mali; possibly it could as well be related to mad.

X 796 horizontal drum, from which was hung a small water
● [537] gourd. Hence it was said, "A water gourd hangeth."

When they relished the place of the skull frame, then [the wearer of the skin of the likeness of Toci] trampled upon her drum.[11] And the seasoned warriors already awaited [Cinteotl]. Now he departed, in order to bear his mask, made of the skin flayed from the leg [of the woman who had represented Toci], off to the enemy's land. Then the chiefs went surrounding him—strong, swift men who ran fast.

And when they who there placed [the mask] had gone to attain the land of the foe, up on the mountain top, one of the side-peaks of Iztac tepetl, a place called Popotl temi; not without struggle did they put it in its place; for [the foe] set upon them; or else they pursued [the enemy]. On both sides [men] were slain.

[417 778] And when they had gone about setting the mask fashioned from the skin of the thigh [of Toci's likeness] upon a wooden frame,[12] then all went hence. And the foe likewise departed.

And when this was done, when [the wearer of the skin of the impersonator of] Toci had accompanied [home] her son [Cinteotl], thereupon she went to [701] her home, there at Atempan. Then there assembled the chieftains, all the fearless warriors, the leading warriors, the generals, the commanding generals,[13] and all the seasoned warriors; the chosen ones, the respected, the chiefs—who of their own free will were valiant, who set no value upon their heads and their breasts, who feared not death, who in truth hurled themselves upon our foes.

And after this, when they all had assembled in a body, then all were arranged in order, in well-ranked columns, before Moctezuma, who was seated upon his cagle mat. This was verily the skin [with feathers] [352] of an eagle upon which he was seated, and he reclined upon a seat with an ocelot [skin] backrest. It was in truth ocelot hide with which the seat was covered.

quijnemanivi in tepeuantenti, itech tlaçalelli, ancontenti: ic injc motenoua, tecomaqtlan.

In oncito tzompantitlan: njmã ic conjoça in jeveuh: auh in tequjoaque, ic quichixtoque: vncan onoua in jnecxuiac injc quicanaque iuac: vncã onoua colollujtivi in tiacoan, in chicanaque, in tlaçanj: cepca motlalea.

Auh in oncito, in vmpa centlhianj in iaupan, in vmpa tepeticpac: inacatzlan in iztac tepetl: iuaciocan, popotl temj: aivian in centlalia, qujoaltoca: anoce qujntoca, necoc mjcoa.

Auh in ocõtlalito quihuicpac, in jnecxuiac: mec vilouia, mec no vi in teiauan.

Auh in ic iuhqui, in ichoatl Toci: in ocõcaouia, iconeuh: njman ic ic iauh in jchan, in vmpa atempã, njmã ic cenquijnoa in tiacaoã, in jxquichtin quaquachictin, in quaquauhiaca, in tlatlacochcalca, in tlatlacatecca: yoan in ic izquichtin tequjoaque, in tlatzonanti, in ovelintoque in tiacaoan, in jiolloco chicaoaque, in amo quijlaçoda in intzonteccon, in jmelchiqujuh, in amo mjqujmauhã, in vel in ca momotla in teiauan.

Auh in ic iuhqui, in ocenquijnac: njmã ic ixpan onnevipanalo, onnecompãtililo, in jxpã Motecçiçoma, ichoatica quauhpetlapan, vel ichoatl in quauhtli, tlaxipeoalli in ipan eoatica, yoan ocelotepotzoicpalli in ipan motlaztica, vel ic in ocelotl yieouio, injc tlaquijnjlolli icpalli:

11. Gurbisz (op. cit., p. 306) translates it "[illegible]." The corresponding Spanish text implies use of the foot (pisar).

12. See note 22.

13. The importance of chief officers shown in [illegible], which can be suggested by the following passages from the Informantes (Bulmarde ed.), Vol. II:

"... capitanes que han de tener cargo de regir la republica, o [illegible] de ser [illegible], o [illegible], dellos habilidad para que [illegible] y ordenar de la gente de guerra que andan por las conquistas y por las [illegible], y cuidan los [illegible], y dominadores a los barrancos, y no se [illegible] de [illegible] el [illegible] a muerte o los [illegible] y [illegible]. . . ." (p. 53).

". . . los padres y madres del sol, que se llaman [illegible] (y) [illegible], que tienen cargo de dar de beber y comer al sol y a la tierra, con las [illegible] de la cabeza y [illegible] de los [illegible]. . . ." (p. 180).

". . . sobre los soldados y capitanes habia dos principales que los regian, el uno era [illegible] y el otro de los dichos era pila y el otro generalmente en las cosas de la guerra, y [illegible] [illegible] con soldados para estas cosas. Y también para [illegible] generales de las cosas de la guerra principales dos, uno [illegible], y generalmente y del [illegible], y otro [illegible], y otro especialmente de la guerra, el uno de estos se llamaba [illegible] y el otro [illegible], estos entendian las cosas de la guerra, y en ordenar todas las cosas que concernian a la [illegible]" (p. 187).

[with them], and then went off carrying it. When they came to his presence, then they put it down; they laid it down for him.

And when it was already night, then the beloved old men and old women drank wine. In this manner they spoke: it was said, "They bathe [the god's] feet."

And when the fourth day had come, then ended the scattering of the branches. Then they threw away the branches. And when the fifth day came, then in truth was when [it was the feast] Teotl eco, with which ended the twenty days.

At midnight [the priests] prepared a flour of maize, which they parted and pressed together, making it round [and flat] like a shield, and placing it upon a mat.

When [it was time that] all the gods should reach here, and arrive, they made preparations. All set themselves in motion, that the gods might arrive.

And the old priest, [the god-judged one, named "He who keepeth the god," kept going back to look upon [the maize flour on the mat]. Often he looked upon it. Never did he rest. His office was only to look. Never did he leave his post; [for] that which he watched, the maize flour, was called his "foot."

And when [the god] arrived, then he saw a small foot[print], which was there upon the maize flour, or at its edge; when he stood upon the [cake of] maize flour, it split.[2] Then it was plain that the gods had arrived.

Then he who kept the god said to them: "Verily, the lord hath deigned to come."

When this was heard, then [the priests] went in procession, blowing shell trumpets, to proclaim [the news] everywhere. Then by this was it known that in truth the gods had come.

And all the common folk thereupon went away and departed to lay offerings in their temples, the temples of the devils. All offered them balls of dough.

And when they had made the offerings, all was still.

And when night fell, in the same manner as they did [before], the old men and the beloved old women drank wine. It was said: "They bathe the feet of the gods who have come."

And the next day, then came Yacapitzauac, this Yacatecutli, who was the god of the merchants; and nauhtetl in coeloloa, quauhcaxic in tetemoiuh, mec quipaquiuh: in oncic izpá mec contema, contemjlia. [796x] [252]

Auh in jquac ic ioa, mec tlatlaoano, tlatlaoanalo, in vevenxitzin, in jlamatzitzin: in juh quitoaia, quijmach quicxipoca. [888] [273]

Auh in oncic ic navilhujtl, vncan ontlamj, in ao-xiatemalixtli: iquac quijtepeua in açaxiatl. Auh in oncic ic macujlilhujtl, in ie vel iquac Teotl eco, in ie ic ontlamj cempoalilhujtl:

ioalnepantla, in qujchiouia, ioexitli, quitepiztlaliaia, quipachoaia, ioaltic injc quitlaliaia, petlapá in contlaliaia:

in jquac muchintin oalacia, hecoia in teteu, quicencaoaia, cemolinja, injc ieoia teteu:

auh in quacujlli, in jveveio, itoca: Teuoa, mocujtlacueptinemj, in conjita, achca in conjita, aquēmá motlalia, çan jc nemj in conjita, aquīman conjcxicaua, in conjita ioexitli, metenesa: icxi. [793]

Auh in obecoc, vncan conjita, icxitontli, in vncan icac, ioexpan: anoço itenco, in moquetza ioexitli, texxioinj: njmá ic neci, ca obecoque in teteu:

njman ic quioalitoa, in teuoa. Ca omecavi in ilacxi:

in ocacoc: njmá ic moantimoquetza in tlapitzalo, quitzacutimomana: njmá ic macho, ca obecoque in teteu. [787] [534]

Auh in jaquich macoualli, njman ic vivi, vivilca, in tlatlamanaxque iocupá, in iteteupan diablome: çá moche in tlapololli, in quitumanjlia:

auh in ontlatlamanaloc, njman ic cactivezzi.

Auh in ie ioua: çan ie no iei in quichiua, tlatlaoana in vevetque, in jlamatzitzin, quijmach, quinjcxipaca in obecoque teteu. [888] [273]

Auh in jmantlaioc, iquac hero in Jacapitzauac, inj Jacatecutli: pochteca intouah caxca, you in Izoçauh- [776]

2. The word [illegible] is explained by Guzman (op. cit., p. 207): "[illegible]"—"y [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] de [illegible]."

X 796 [796] Iaçoçauhqui, he who [was named] Xiuhtecutli, who likewise was god of the merchants. Only these came last, behind [the others], last of all; because they were already old.

And after this, then began the casting [of victims] into the fire, there on the large altar.[8] Indeed many wretched captives they cast into the flames.

X 796 292 535 And when they were being cast into the fire, there then went dancing [one arrayed as a] squirrel. He was bedecked with a small feather crest; he had a crest. The painting on his face was in two colors. He bore a small box upon his back as he went, in which was a small dried rabbit. When they cast one into the flames, [the dancer] whistled with his fingers.

[198] And one [in the likeness of a] bat was there, [also] doing a dance; indeed [in an array] like a bat was he adorned. He had two gourd rattles which, one in each hand, he went rattling.

[534] And when they had cast [the captives] into the fire, then the priests formed themselves in rows, that they might descend. [They were bedight with] their paper stoles, which were painted with designs.

X 796 535 They took one another's hands, grasping them firmly. When the line [of the procession] was broken, where a gap was formed [in the line], one was, as it were, thrown off. Some fell, striking the ground, biting the earth. This was called "They fall upon their hapida."

[237] And next day all assembled at the same time to dance the serpent dance. All were decked in colored feathers—yellow, bright red, orange, and green. Thus were people adorned with feathers—[even] all the small children, although they [still] lay in their cradles—all the people, [but] only the men.[9]

Thereupon was begun the serpent dance, at midday. Hands were clasped; there was song. It was no matter what [song] they intoned—mere pleasure songs. And when they ceased, it was night. And any who were taking much pleasure, verily, spent the night there.

And these two festive days they had already taken from the [next month], Tepeilhuitl.

Enough. Here endeth and concludeth the feast [of the month] Teotl eco.

qui, ichoatl in Xiuhtecutli, çan no pochteca intecuh canca, ça oallatzacujtivia, ça oallatoquijtivia, ça qujualentzacujtivia: ichica ca ie vevetque.

Auh in jquac in, njman ic pesa in tetlepanlaxo, vncan in teccalco: vel mjequjntin, in qujntlepantlaçaia, mamaltzitzinti:

auh in vncan tetlepãtlaxo, vncan mjtotitinemj techalotl, çan mochichiouia quachichiquijlxoc, quachichiqujle, mjxtecujcujlo: ioacalton qujnnamatinemj, vncan onotinemj, techtlaoatzalouatli: in jquac ce contlaça tlero, mapipitzoa:

yoan ce tzinacan vncan nenca, mjtotitinemj, vel iuhqujn tzinacan: ic no mochichiouia vntetl in jxiacach, vecampa in xiacachotinemj.

Auh in ontetlepantlaxoc, mec oalmotecpana in tlamacazqui: injc oaltemo, imaamanecapanal, tlacujlolli:

maana, in matitech maana, cenca motetzauhtzitzquja: inon omocotonque, in omotlacavilique, iuhqujn mochichiccanauhtivi, in aca tlalli ic movitequj, tlalli qujquativetzi. Inin motenemi mamatlavitzoa.

Auh in jmuztlaioc, onnenechicolo, cenvetzi, in necocololo, hivitica necujcujlolo, in cortic, in chichiltic, in vitztecolli, in xoxoctic, injc mjvicujcujloa, muchintin in pipiltotõti, in manel coçolco onoc, cenca izquich tlacatl, çan ichoantin in oqujchtin:

njman ie ic pecalo in nococololo, nepãtla tonatiuh, nexano, cujco, çaço ac tle quena, çan avilcujcatl: auh in necacaoalo, ie iooa: auh in aca cenca compaqui, vel vncan iovilia.

auh in jioanjlhujiati y, ie cuel cõcujlia in tepeilhujtl.

Je izquich njcan tlamj, njcan tzonquiça in ilhujtl Teotl eco.

---

8. ". . . son en donde cada año celebran ciertos en un gran sacrificio de fuego muchos cautivos, de la forma que se llamaba teuhcalco y hacían los sacrificios, especialmente, que se llamaban xocotlamacoa, como se dice en la cuenta [illegible]" (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 221).
9. ". . . porque no los hacían casi el dicho Xocotlamacoa" (Ibid., p. 226). Cf. Chimalpain, op. cit., p. 166.

Thirty-second Chapter, in which are related the feasts and sacrifices which they made, in the days of the thirteenth month, which was known as, and named, Tepeilhuitl.

The thirteenth feast was known as the "Mountain Feast."

All the digging sticks which were kept in men's houses, and the heavier sticks,[1] made as [representations of] mountains, they covered with a coating of dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And their bones were likewise fashioned of a dough of [ground] amaranth seeds, long and cylindrical in shape. Either fish amaranth[2] or chía [was used].[3]

And also they fashioned [images in the form of] mountains for, perchance, one who had died in the water—having drowned—or had been struck by lightning.

And for whosoever had been [thus] slain and not burned but only buried,[4] [to honor him] they also made images of the mountains; they made them all of the dough of [ground] amaranth seeds.

And upon the eve of the feast, toward sundown, they were bathed, their faces were washed.[5] When they [went to] wash them, they went blowing and sounding little clay whistles and little sea shell whistles for [the images].[6]

And they bathed them there at the Mist House; [with] fresh cane shoots they washed their faces. And some [men] washed them only at nearby shores.[7]

And when they had been washed, then the return was made whence they had come; in the same manner they came blowing whistles, with a great din as of shouting. Thereupon were given human form

Inic cempoalli on matlactli omome capitulo: vncan moteneoa in jlhujtl, yoan in nextlaoalli, in muchioaia in jpã ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl omei metztli in moteneoaia, in mjtoaia Tepilhujtl. 796X

Injc matlactetl omei ilhujtl ichoatl in moteneoa tepeilhujtl:

in jxqujchtin cocoa im pipialo techachan, yoan in ecatotonti, qujtetepetlaliaia, tzoalli injc qujnpepechoaia: [241] 796X 778 auh in jmoemjo muchioaia, çan no tzoalli, mjmjmjltic, aço mjchioauhtli, anoço cócotl:

auh no qujtepetlaliaia, in açaca atlan mjc, in jlaqujlo, ã anoçe viteco: [765 778]

yoã in aqujn omomjqujli, in amo tlatilo, in çan qujtnca, no tepetl ipan qujqujxtiaia, çan moch tzoalli in qujnchichioaia: 796X

Auh in oqujuh muxtla ilhujtl teutlacpa in teaaltilo, anoço teixamjlo: injc qujmonaltia qujntlapichilitivi, in qujnpichilitivi, cocovilotl, yoan tecciztotonti. [534]

Auh in qujmonaltiaia, vmpan aiauhcalco, acatzontli ichoatl in celtic ic qujmjxamja: auh in cequjntin çan imatenco in qujmonaltia.

Auh in ontealtiloc, mec oaltecuepalo, çã no ivi, [534] 796X 778

1. See corresponding Spanish text. Cap. XIII here: "Amili ciñían unos trapos de palo grueso como la mudanza larga Emmanuelas Romanas." Of these and of course, Torquemada (op. cit., Lib. II, p. 279) writes: "Para esta solemnidad, la primera vez, hacen unos cubrenos de palo, ó de varas de Arboles, labrandolos las cabezas lo mas pulidamente que saben, fingiendo semejanza de trapajos pequeños como figurillas, á manera de las Medianas, que acostumbran las Mulas, en nuestra Nacion Española, las quales llamaban Romanas. . . . " Clavigero, op. cit., pp. 166-7, version similar.

2. Mishtar Alamaxa in Molina, op. cit., Spanish-Nahuatl vocabulary. In this chapter, however, Sahagún refers to muchhuauhtli as yellow amaranth. See also p. 63, n. 28.

3. In the Bulmarde ed. of Sahagún, Vol. III, p. 264, Nicolás León has defined cocovilotl as "Tórtola (Chía dulce)"; in his study he used the numbered illustrations in Pozo y Tiburcio's reproduction. Cocovil is No. 975.

4. Torquemada (loc. cit.) further explains: ". . . en memoria de algunos difuntos, en especial de los que se avian ahogado en Aguas, ó avian muerto de muerte, que no pudieran ser quemados sus cuerpos, ó fuesen enterrados por algunos años."

5. Both Sahagún (corresponding Spanish text) and Seler (op. cit., pp. 190-91) differ from this version. In Sahagún, the people wash the seats upon which the images rested; in Seler, the people are washed.

6. Through the entering canoe to refer to the images, in the Spanish text Sahagún writes: "Los ídolos de esos fueron llevados a lavar entre voces al río o a la fuente. . . ."

7. Sahagún (loc. cit.) here: "al agua que pasaba junto a su casa."

*796 Thirty-fourth Chapter, in which they tell of the feasts and sacrifices which were performed on the days of the fifteenth month, which was called Panquetzaliztli.[1]

The fifteenth feast day: this one was called Panquetzaliztli.

[785] When the feast of Panquetzaliztli had not yet arrived, the priests fasted for eighty days, and laid down green boughs. When they began [the fast], it was upon the day following [the month of] Ochpaniztli. At midnight they spread the green boughs, on all the mountain tops and upon the circular altars, [even those] which were distant.

And this they did until [the month of] Panquetzaliztli arrived. When they laid the green boughs, they [292] went quite naked, wearing nothing. They went carrying green boughs; these [were] green reeds and [534] thorns. And they went blowing their shell trumpets and pottery whistles.[2] They proceeded blowing [them] alternately.

And when the feast of Quecholli ended, then began the singing and dancing, when was intoned the song named the Tlaxotecaiotl—the song of Uitzilopochtli. This was begun at nightfall; and it was ended at the [534] time when the trumpets sounded, when the conch shells were blown.

Also, among them, the women sang and danced—harlots, who went between [pairs of men] (as hath been told). Daily they did this, until twenty days [had passed].

*796 And when the ninth day before [the feast] arrived, then were bathed in sacred water [the victims 778 known as] the ceremonially bathed ones, or those to die the captives' death.[3] The old men of the tribal temple secured the water; they got the water there

Inic 34 capitulo: itechpa tlatoa in ilhujtl, yoan in nextlaoaliztli, in muchioaia in jpan ic cemjlhujtl, ic caxtolteti metztli, in mjtoaia: Panquetzaliztli.

Injc caxtolteti ilhujtl: ichoatl in motencoa, Panquetzaliztli:

in aiamo aci ilhujtl Panquetzaliztli: in tlamacazque, nappoalilhujtl in moçaoaia, yoan acxoistlaliaia: iquac quipeoaltiaia, in iuh onquiz imuztlaioc, Ochpanjztli: in ioalnepantla onacxoiatema, in novian tetepeticpac, yeã in momomonco, in veca.

Auh inin quichioaia, iaquichica onaci in Panquetzaliztli, in onacxoiatlaliaia, çan pepetlauhtivi, atle intech vetztiuh, quitquitivi in acxoatl, ichoatl in acatl xoxouhqui, yoan vitztli, yoan intecciz, yoan in cucovilutl quipiztivi, quipapatlativi in quipitza.

Auh in ẽquja Quecholli ilhujtl: njmã ic peoa in cujcoianolo, in cujcatl in eoa itoca tlaxotecaiotl, icujc in Vitzilobuchtli: im peoaloia, iquac in tlatlapoiaoa: auh in necacaoaloia, iquac in tlatlapitzalizpã, in ie tlatlapitzalo:

no teoan cujcoianoa in cioa in avienjme, tetzatzalan mantivi (in iuh omjto) mumuztlac in muchioa, iaquichica cempoalilhujtl.

Auh in oacic tlachicunaviti, vncan motecualtiaia in tlatlaltiki, anoço tuchimjoqõe:, in calpulvevetque, conanaia atl: vmpa in vitzilobuchco conanaia atl,

1. "Elevación de banderas," in Garibay, op. cit., p. 312; "el acto de enarbolar el pendón" (Clavigero, op. cit., p. 170)—possibly a reference to the raising of the standard and the statue of Peyotl up to the altar in the Temple of Uitzilopochtli. Torquemada (op. cit., p. 299) writes: "Enarbolaban de Pendones, ó Vanderas, porque si por este Tiempo se hacian hacha las cuechas de sus Pueblos, las quales pusiaban, enarbolaban ó tocaban sus Guerras; y en este tiempo renovaban sus Mayorazgos, Alcaldes, y Linderos; y defendian sus Terrenos, y Montes, y otras cosas de tierras que tenian. De manera, que en todo este Mes estaban las Provincias, en Armas, y constantes ellas, y hacian entre ellas muy crudes Guerras, y Batallas; porque muchas veces tenian á rompimiento, y muvia muchas Guerras, y hacia grandes pajaduras, y despojos, y presos de Cautivos, y Esclavos, y se tomaban Pueblos, y grandes Provincias, en orden de ampliar, cada qual, sus Reinos, y Señorios. Y antes de las cuechas sus acostumbraban nada de esto, porque las Pueblos, y Senoraiados, no se tomaban, ni destruyeron; y para esto hacian grandes Oferendas á su Dios Huitzilopochtli, ó Centeotl, ofreciendole Aromas, y otras cosas, pidiendole favor, y ayuda contra sus enemigos."

According to Tayer (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 32) it was the spring festival of the war captives, which set up a banner in the middle of the temple courtyard.

2. "Trompiste in Gemdo menor Tambor," according to Seler, op. cit., p. 295.

3. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 1, n. 5; p. 19. Sahagún (Kubler ed., II, p. 370) says: "Los sacerdotes hacian un hoyo en que echaban á ahogar cierto hombre, este hacian en la fiesta que se llama panquetzaliztli. Para este fecho compraban cualquier que se llamaba tlacatecolo,

And of them who aided the Uitznaua, if one were taken, he met his end. In truth, the bathed ones slew [their opponents]; using a two-toned drum [as an offering stone], upon it they cut open their breasts.

And the onlooker, he who oversaw [the battle], when he noted that [he who bore the likeness of] Paynal already approached, then cried out, saying: "Mexicans! Now he cometh! Now already is brought the lord! Enough!"

And when they heard this, then the bathed ones took after [the others]. Then dispersed, melted away, and departed those who had aided [the Uitznaua], who had rolled up the paper.

Thereupon came [he who bore] Paynal. First arrived the standards, two devices for seeing, made of [sprays of] feathers, with a hole in their midst. Two mere boys bore them hence, hastening greatly. Then [from the boys] two warriors took [the standards] quickly—[warriors] who could hasten and run fast.

And when they had run a certain distance, two other [warriors] took it briskly from them. So they carried it in relays.

And when they reached the eagle portal[14] [of the courtyard of the Temple of Uitzilopochtli], none took these from them; they took the devices up [to the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. These who came ahead, when they had brought up the devices for seeing, cast them upon the image of Uitzilopochtli, which [was made of a dough of] amaranth seed. [There] they fell to the ground, faint, and lay panting.

And the fire priest thereupon came forth and cut their ears with a flint knife, whereupon they came to themselves; thus they revived.

And when they had revived, then they climbed down, taking the amaranth seed dough [image] which they had captured.[15] They took it to their homes, [for] it was in truth their captive, and ate it. They offered it to their kin and to their neighbors, who all ate of it.[15]

Auh in tlapalevia in qujmpalevia vitznaoa, intla çe axioacã, no mjqujx: vel iioma qujmjctia in tlaaltilti, çan teponaztli in jpan coneltequi. [796] [534]

Auh in tlachixquj, in oqujttac, in oconjttac in ie vitz Paynal: mec tzatzi, qujtva, Mexicae, ca ie vitz, ca ie movicatz in tlacatl, ma ixqujch.

Auh in oqujcacque: mec tetoca in tlaaltilti: vncan xixitinj, tlaxitinj, vivi, in otepaleviaia, in otlamaviaia.

Niman ie ic vitz in Paynal: achtopa oaleoa in machiotl, auh in tlachielonj vr·tl hivitl in tlachicalli, yiticoionquj, çã oc pipiltotonti in qujoalitquj, cenca qujoalmotlalochtia, njman qujncujlitiqujça in tiacaoan, in vel paina, in vel totoca:

auh in oquexqujch oqujoaltoctique, oc ceppa no vmẽtin, qujncujlitiqujça, çan juhqujn qujmomamacativi.

Auh in oacico quauhqujiaoac, aocac vel qujncujlia, ie eoan qujpantlaçazque, in jicpac Vitzilobuchtli: in vel iacattiuh, in opanvetzito in tlachielonj, ipan contlaça in jxiptla Vitzilobuchtli, in tzoalli ça onchachapantivetzi, vel çoçotlaoa, ça cicintoque.

Auh in tlenamacac, njman ie ic iauh, qujnnacaztecpavia, ic oallachia, injc mozcalia. [785]

Auh in omozcalique mec oaltemo, qujtqujtze in ocacique tzoalli, qujmotqujlia in inchan, ca nel immal, qujqua, qujnmamaca in inoaniolque, yoan in tlaxillacaleque, qujcenqua. [262]

---

13. Cf. Sahagún (Robredo ed., Vol. IV, p. 88): "y luego se juntaron los capitanes y entraron dentro del un patio que se llamaba quauhquiaoac. . . . En este lugar estaba una águila de piedra grande y alta como un estado de hombre, y por esto llamaban a aquel patio quauhquiaoac; de la una parte del águila estaba un tigre de piedra, y de la otra un oso también de piedra."

14. Clavigero (op. cit., p. 168) says such images had been made of both Uitzilopochtli and Paynal: ". . . fabricaban . . . dos estatuas de superbo disfraz, de la parte de varias semillas con sangre de niños carnificados, y le ponían por buenos algunos leños de aceite."

15. In op. cit., pp. 168-70, Clavigero writes: "aquella noche que era la décima del mes, celebran también los sacerdotes y a la mañana siguiente llevaban a la estatua de masa de Huitzilopochtli a una sala que había en el recinto del templo, y en presencia solemnísima del rey, de cuatro dignidades del templo y de cuatro superiores de los seminarios, el sacerdote Quetzalcoatl, que era jefe de los Tlamacazques o primeros arcipobos, un dardo a la estatua con que la atravesaba de parte a parte. Con este dardo, que ya había muerto su dios; uno de los sacerdotes le sacaba el corazón y lo presentaba al rey para que lo comiese; el cuerpo se dividía por medio y la una mitad se daba a los Tlamacazques y la otra quedaba para los sacrificantes; de esta se hacían cuatro partes para los cuatro cuarteles de la ciudad, y cada parte se dividía en porciones particulares que se distribuían entre todos los individuos del otro vecindario. Esta ceremonia explicaban con la palabra teocualo, comer a Dios. Los empleos tan gloriosos de esta sagrada mesa por mando, como se puede creer de su pertenecer a un arco al empleo de la guerra."

X 796 And when this was done, then they took in procession around [the pyramid] those who were to die, only once circling them about. Thereupon they were arranged and placed in order—the captives standing ahead. Then a man [priest] brought down [from the top of the pyramid] the sacrificial papers[16]—a man brought it down. When he reached the ground, he raised them as an offering to the four directions. Then he laid them in the so-called eagle vessel.

Auh in ie iuhquj mec tetlaiaoalochtilo, in mjqujzque, çan ceppa in qujnoallaiaoalochtia: in ie iuhquj mec temanalo, tetecpanalo, iacattimanj in mamalti: njman ie ic qujoaltemovia in teteuhpoalli: ce tlacatl in qujoaltemovia, in ocaxitico tlalchl, nauhcampa conjaoa; mec cõmana, in vncan moteneoa quauhxicalco:

Thereupon likewise descended the fire serpent,[17] looking like a blazing pine firebrand. Its tongue was made of red arara feathers, looking like a flaming torch. And its tail was of paper, two or three fathoms long. As it descended, it came moving its tongue, like that of a real serpent, darting in and out.

njman ie ic no oaltemo in Xiuhcoatl, çan juhqujn in ocopilli; cueçalin in jnenepil muchioa, tlatlatiuh in ocopilli: auh in jcuitlapil, amatl, aço vmmatl, anoço ematl injc viac: injc oaltemo, iuhqujnma nelli coatl, nenepilotivitz, iuhqujn mocuecuelotivitz.

And when [the priest] had come [with it], bringing it down to the base [of the pyramid], he proceeded carefully to the eagle vessel. Then he went up [to the eagle vessel] and raised [the fire serpent] also to the four directions. When he had [so] raised it up, then he cast it upon the sacrificial paper, and then they burned.

Auh in ocaxitico tlatzintlan, vmpa tlamattiuh in quauhxicalco: mec tleco, no nauhcampa in conjaoa: in oçonjauh mec cõmaiavi in jpan teteppoalli, mec tlatla:

And when he had come, leaving it, then he ascended; and when he reached the summit, then shell trumpets were blown. Thereupon was brought down Paynal, the representative of Uitzilopochtli; in great haste [the priest] brought him down.

[534]

auh in oconcaoaco mec tleco, in opanvetzito tlacpac, mec tlapitzalo: njmã ie ic oaltemo in Paynal, in jxiptla Vitzilobuchtli, cenca qujoalmotlalochtia.

And when [Paynal] had come, reaching the ground, he passed before the eagle vessel and quickly came in front of the captives and the bathed ones, as if guiding them. Then they ascended [the pyramid steps].

Auh in otlaltitech caxitico, ixpan qujqujxtia in quauhxicalli, imjxpan qujztiqujça in mamalti, yoan in tlaaltilti, iuhqujn, qujnoaliacana, mec tlece:

As they came gaining the summit, first the captives died, as if [with them] was formed the fundament for the bathed ones.[18] And when, first, the captives had died, the bathed ones were next.

in oacito tlacpac, achto mjquj in mamalti: iuhqujn impepechoan muchioa, tlaaltilti: auh in oachto ommjoque, mamalti; ça qujmõtoqujlia in tlaaltilti.

[534]

And when one had died, then shell trumpets were sounded; then they proceeded to bring them down, rolling them quickly down [the steps]. So did they with all the bathed ones.

Auh in jquac çe õmjquj; njman tlapitzalo: njman ic qujnoaltemovitimanj, qujnmjmjlotivitze; much iuh qujnchioa in tlaaltilti.

And likewise men were slain at Uitznauac. They who died were only the Uitznaua; only they [died] —none [were slain to form] their fundaments.

Auh no mjcoa in vitznaoac: çanjoque in mjquj vitznaoaca, çan mjxcavia, xiaque inpepechoã.

And when they had been slain, then all departed.

Auh in õmjcoac, mec vivilo: auh in jmuztlaio,

16. Corresponding Spanish text: "Va volumen grande, de papeles blancos, que llaman teteppoalli, o por otro nombre teteuxil." The Huitzil text here has teteuhpoalli; subsequently it is spelt teteppoalli.

17. "Un hachon de tea muy largo, que llamd xiuhcoatl," brought down by a priest (loc. cit.). In the Rabotzo ed., Vol. II, p. 383: "y luego se ordia o quemaba aquella cuadera de papel que se llamaba xiuhcoatl." Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. I, n. 4. Torquemada (op. cit., p. 282) describes the xiuhcoatl as "una hondonada, y rencrecida, de grande cuerpo, y cenizosa"—emblem of the fleets in Uitzilopochtli. He names it cepacoatl, as does Clavigero (op. cit., p. 168), describing it as "una serpiente de madera."

18. The corresponding Spanish text explains that the prisoners who formed the fundament were not sacrificed ("ningún cautivo moria con ellos").

X 796 night was spent and used in cutting lengths of paper, that they might complete and finish the spotted paper banners. And when they were finished and completed, they were joined to poles; [the papers] reached from the bottoms to the tops of the poles. They set them up in the middle of each courtyard. There they remained for the entire feast day.

amanxtlalo: in tlamj, in iecavi tetevitl: auh in otlan, in oiecauh, matlaquauhtitech movivipana, tlaltitech peuhticac, onaciticac in jtzonco; itoalnepantla in quj-quequetza, vei oncã cemjlhujtia:

X 796 And the producers of figures of the mountain [gods] beforehand feasted the priests, so that these 778 would make for them the paper adornment of the small mountain gods. And only there in the priests' dwelling did they array them.

auh in tepicque achtopa qujnmolcaoaltiaia in tla-macazque, injc qujnchivilizque imamatlatquj, tepic-totõ: auh çan vmpa in calmecac in qujchichioaia.

And when all [the adornment] had been finished, they then took them to the homes of those who had vowed to make the figures; and their instru-[534] ments, [which] went forth [with them, were] their two-toned wooden drums, and their gourd rattles, and their turtle shell drums. And they adorned the figures of the mountains, offered them food, and dressed them in capes.

Auh in omuchi iecauh, mec qujtqujtze in inchã tepiqujnj, yoan intlatquj oalietiuh in inteponaz, yoã imaiacach yoan in jmaiouh, mec qujnchichioa in tepicme qujntlamamaca, qujntlaquẽtia:

And one who produced the figures [made] perhaps five, another [made] perchance ten, another perhaps fifteen. And the [figures] which they adorned were all [made] purely of a dough of amaranth seed.

auh in aca qujpiquja, aço m cujltetl, in aca aço matlactetl, in aca aço cxxtoltetl: auh in qujchichioaia çan muche in tzoalli.

And they fashioned them as figures of these mountains—Popocatepetl, Iztac tepetl or Iztac ciuatl, Tlaloc, Yoaltecatl, Quauhtepetl, Cocotl, Yiauhqueme, Tepetzintli, Tepepolli, [and] Uixachtecatl; and also [mountains of the god of] fire, Chicome coatl, Chalchiuhtli icue, and Ecatl.[4]

Auh in qujnpiquja iehoantin in tetepe: in popo-catepetl, in jztactepetl, anoço iztac cioatl, in tlaloc, in iooaltecatl, in quauhtepetl, in cocotl, yiauhqueme, in tepetzintli, in tepepolli, in vixachtecatl, no ie in tletl, in chicome coatl, chalchiuhtli icue, ecatl.

And when they had completely adorned them, then they set food before them—each one separately. And their tamales were exceedingly small, exceed-[415] ingly tiny, very long and very thin. And they heaped them in small wooden vessels and sauce bowls; and their small earthen vessels contained a very small [quantity of] chocolate.

Auh in oqujncencauhque, mec qujntlamaca, ce-cecnj mjxcavia: auh in intamal cenca çan tepitoton, cenca çã achitoton, papatlachtotonti papatlachpipil: quauhcxxtotonco in qujntetemjlia, yoã inmolcxxto-ton, yoan inçoqujtecõtoton, çan no tepitoton cẽcã achi in onaquj cacaoatl:

And four times that night they made offerings of food. And before them lay two green jars; wine was [415 273 824] [in them]. And the green jars were made of these green gourds.[5] They split them, and took out their seeds; they removed the seeds, And they took out the pith, which was like a cord. Here they placed the gourd wine.[6] Thus all night they sang for [the auh nappa in qujntlamaca cecoal, yoan imjxpan manj vntetl chalchiuhtecomatl vctli oncaca: auh in chalchiuhtecomatl muchioa, iehoatl in tzilacaiotli, xoxoctic, qujxtlapanaia, qujoalqujxtilia in jaiovachio, qujoalaiooachqujxtia: yoan qujoalqujxtilia in jcuj-tlaxcol, in juhquj mecatl, vncan conteca in aioctli,

4. These are located in the chapter on A6 cuauh. See p. 43. Tepetzintli and Tepepolli probably are the Tepetzinco and Tepepulco named in that chapter.
5. Cucurbita ficifolia Bouché (Seler: op. cit., p. 221).
6. Cf. Seler (loc. cit.)—Kürbiswein (octli). Octli, however, is defined (Rémi Simeon op. cit.) as a mixture of honey and water.

X 796 A True [Relation] of how They Served the Sun; and of how many Times Trumpets Were Blown During the Day and During the Night; and of how many Times Incense Was Offered.

Imelaoaca, in quenjn tlaiecuhtiloia tonatiuh: yoan qoezqujpa in tlapitzaloia in cemjlhujtl, yoan in criooal: yoan quezqujpa in tlenamacaia.

Each day, when the sun arose, quail were slain and incense was offered. And thus were quail slain: they wrung the necks of the quail and raised them dedicating them to the sun.

And they invoked [the sun], saying:

"The sun hath come forth—the shafts of heat, the turquoise child, the soaring eagle. And how he will go on, or how he may tarry [we know not]. Perchance something [ill] will be done his servants and vassals."

They said unto him:

"Work; perform thy office [for us], O our lord."

And this each day was thus done when the sun rose, [as hath] been said.

And thus was incense offered four times during the day, and five times during the night: The first time [was] when the sun burst forth. The second time [was] when [it was] time to eat [the first meal]. And the third time [was] at midday; and the fourth time [was] when already the sun had set.

And at night, thus was incense offered: the first time, when it was dark; the second time, when it was time to sleep; the third time, when the shell trumpets were sounded; the fourth time, at midnight; and the fifth time, near dawn. And when it was dark, incense was offered and a supplication was made to the night.

[534]

It was said:

"The Lord of the Night, he of the sharp nose, hath unfolded, and we know not how his office will end."

X 796 And [his] feast day came upon the day of the day-count [called] naui ollin, every two hundred 785 and three days. And when the day had come, all did penances; all fasted for four days. And when they reached the day of the day-count, at noon, shell trumpets were blown, and straws were passed through the flesh to draw blood. And they cut the ears of little children lying in their cradles. And all the people bloodied themselves, and no supplications

In mumuztlae in jquac valqujçaia tonatiuh, tlacotonaloia, yoan tlenamacoia. Auh injc tlacotonaloia qujquechcotonaia in çolin, conjaviliaia in tonatiuh, yoan qujtlapalovaia qujtoaia

Oqujçaco in tonatiuh, in tonametl, xiuhpiltontli, in quauhtlevanjtl: auh quen onotlatocaz quẽ cemilhujtiz, cujx itla ipan mochivaz in jcujtlapil, in jiatlapal conilvjaia.

Ma ximotequjtili, ma xjmotlacotili, totecujoe.

auh injn mumuztlae iuh muchivaia in iquac valqujçaia tonatiuh mjtoaia.

Auh injc tlenamacoia, nappa in cemjlhujtl, auh macujlpa in iovaltica. Injc ceppa iquac in valmomana tonatiuh. Injc vppa iquac in tlaqualizpan, auh injc Expa iquac in nepãtla tonatiuh, auh injc nappa iquac in ie oncalaquj tonatiuh.

Auh in iovaltica, injc tlenamacoia. Injc ceppa tlapoiaoa. Injc vppa netequilizpan. Injc Expa tlatlapitzalizpan, auh injc Nappa ticatla, auh injc macujlpa tlatvinavac, auh in iquac tlapoiava tlenamacoia tlapaloloia, in iovalli mjtoaia.

Ovalçouh in iovaltecutli in iacaviztli, auh quen onvetziz in jtequjuh.

Auh in ilhujuh qujçaia ipan cemjlhujtonalli navi ollin, matlacpoalli, vmei ica, auh in iõc ie onaci ilhujuh, neçavaloia, navilhujtl tlacatlaqualoia, Auh in ipã cemilhujtonalli in oacic ilhujuh, in nepantla tonatiuh, tlapitzaloia, tlacoqujstiloia: auh in pipiltzitzinti coçolco onoque qujnnacaztequja: auh muchi tlacatl mjçoia, auh atle ic tlapaloloia, çan jxqujch in

The Cutting of Thorns.

The cutting of thorns: they cut them who were priests not yet much experienced. These [were the ones] who took them.

Vitztequjliztli.

In vitztequjliztli, ichoantin cõtequja in tlamacazque in aiamo cenca ixtlamati, in qujnõtlacuixque. 793

The Gathering of Fir Branches.

The gathering of fir branches: likewise they who were priests secured them, and these were already experienced.

Acxoiaçaqujliztli.

In acxoiaçaquiliztli, çan no ichoantin concuja in tlamacazq̃ auh ichoantin in ie ixtlamati.

The Blowing of Shell Trumpets.

The blowing of shell trumpets: this was the charge of those who were young trumpet-blowing priests; and [they were] experienced and of various sorts.

Tlatlapitzaliztli.

In tlatlapitzaliztli, ichoantin intequjuh catca, in tlamacazcatepitzitzin. yoan in ie ixtlamati neneliuhtivjia. [534]

The Dissolving of Black Coloring.

The dissolving of black coloring was the task of those [who were] the young blowers of shell trumpets. These dissolved the black stain, and everyone anointed himself with it. Verily all together put it on when they stained themselves; none failed [to do so]. And they dissolved it in the black stain canoe. And the black coloring was dissolved only at night, and all stained themselves at the moment of dawn.

Tlilpatlaliztli.

In tlilpatlaliztli, ichoantin intequjuh catca: in tlamacazcatepitzitzin, in qujpatlaia tlilli, muchi tlacatl ic moçaia, vel mocemaqujaia injc moçaia, acan mocavaia: auh in qujpatlaia vncã in tlillacalco, auh in tlilpatlaloia, çan iovaltica, auh in neoçaloia iquac in tlavizcalli ichoa. 793 386

643 301 A lip pendant of gold, in the form of a broad-leafed water plant; — apitlactempilolli, coztic teucujtlatl,

[532] A crescent-shaped lip pendant of gold; — metztempilolli coztic teucujtlatl,

A green stone nose rod; — chalchiuhiacamjtl,

A fine turquoise nose rod; — teuxiuhiacamjtl,

A necklace of round, green stones, joined and strung together; — chalchiuhcozcatl ololiuhquj, tlacenqujxtilli, tlacecotl,

A necklace of radiating golden pendants with a thin, green stone [disc] set in their midst;[8] — coztic teucujtlachaiaoac cozcatl, chalchiuhtlacanaoalli iitic manj,

A finely wrought feather arm band with various [other] costly feathers and with gold; — quetzalmachoncotl tlaçotlanquj nepapan tlaçoiujtica, ioan coztic teucujtlaio,

[237] A golden band for the calf of the leg; — coztic teucujtlacotzeoatl,

A quetzal feather banner held in the hand; — quetzalmacpanjtl,

A quetzal bird as headdress; — quetzaltotoicpacxuchitl,

Quetzal feather horns; — quetzalquaquaujtl,

A quetzal feather fan [set] with gold; — quetzalecaccoaztli coztic teucujtlaio

A turquoise [mosaic] wrist band with a conical extension; — xiuhmacopilli,

A necklace of gold [beads] and small sea shells; — coztic teucujtlachipulcozcatl,

A necklace of gold [beads] and snail shells; — teucujtlacoztic acuechcozcatl,

643 Flowers and tobacco, [which were] exclusively the ruler's; a mirror in which the ruler looked at himself when he adorned himself. All these were the charge of the artisans[9] when the ruler danced. — xuchitl, ietl, ineiscaujl tlatoanj, teacatl injc motta tlatoanj, injc muchichioa amanteca impial, in isqujch imaçeoaia tlatoanj,

[276 416]

Sandals of ocelot skin; cured leather sandals with embroidery—embroidered sandals. — oçelocoacactli, cuetlaxcactli tlamachio, tlamachcactli,

[292 281] [There were] two-toned drums and supports for two-toned drums, ground drums, golden turtle shells, and golden bells; — teponaztli, teponaztzatzaztli, veuetl aiacachtli coztic teucujtlatl, tetzilacatl coztic teucujtlatl,

[534] 533 Singers, a dancer, a player of two-toned drums and one of ground drums, a drum beater, a singer who intoned the chant. — cujcanjme, mjtotianj, teponaçoanj, ueuetzonanj, tlatzotzonquj, cujcaitoanj,

415 [There were] chests for the devices, in which were kept all which have been described: a large basket-case in which were kept the green stone lip plugs, the gold ear plugs, the golden necklaces, the wigs, the masks, the golden reed serpent. — tlaujzpetlacalli, in vncan mopiaia, in ixqujch omjto. Veuej toptanatli, in vncan mopia, in chalchiuhtenteti, in teucujtlanacochtli, in teucujtlacozcatl, tzoncalli, xaiacatl, teucujtlaacaçoatl coztic teucujtlatl,

351 There were flowering trees, which were to be seen in the palace courtyard; for it was the ruler who was to dance. — xuchiquaujtl momanaia, in tecpan itoalco, inezca catca: ca maçeoaz in tlatoanj,

415 314 534 [There were] a basket for the mirror, a basket for the comb; and a rubber hammer with which the two-toned drum was sounded. — tezcatanatli, tziquaoaztanatli, olmaitl injc motzotzona teponaztli.

8. Cf. Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, II, p. 542; also corresponding Spanish text.
9. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., II, pp. 1398f., on etymology of amanteca.

The white demon of the air was of gold, and had quetzal feather balls.

The yellow, Huaxtec, pointed, conical cap had a golden [disc] in front and was girt with quetzal feathers. And the shirt was of yellow parrot feathers [decorated with] hawk scratches. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; gold were his ear pendants, with quetzal feather spindles.

The white, Huaxtec, pointed, conical, paper cap had quetzal feathers bound at the base and a [disc] of gold at the front; its spindles were of quetzal feathers and gold. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate, and gold were his ear pendants.

[For] the bi-colored Huaxtec, the shirt was half blue and half yellow. His conical, pointed cap was also bi-colored—half blue and half yellow, and it had quetzal feathers girt at the base and a golden [disc] at the front. Gold was his crescent-shaped nose plate; his ear pendants were gold; and his spindles were of quetzal feathers.

The golden conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups. The silver conical cap had quetzal feather tufts held in cups.

[There were] shell trumpets and clay pipes which were blown in battle so that the warriors might set forth together to fight. The standard, [which was] of gold, and the quetzal feather banner dispatched the men to battle. When it was seen that already all the standards were raised, then the warriors set forth together to do battle.

The quetzal feather sun [consisted of] a golden sun, and in the middle of it was a circle of quetzal feathers. The young maize flower crest had, as its leaves, quetzal feathers, and [was ornamented] with flint knives [fashioned of] gold. On his temples went plate-like pieces of gold. The wooden sword [was provided] with obsidian blades [set in] a groove at its edge. The headdress of quetzal and heron feathers [ornamented] with gold, [had] single quetzal feathers, and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it. There was] the ocelot wine jar, whose foam had single quetzal feathers [set in it], and many quetzal feathers rustled [from it].

Iztac tzitzimjtl, coztic teucujtlaio, iquetzaltemal. 643

Coztic cuextecatl icopil ujtzauhquj, izquateucujtlaio, quetzaltica cujtlalpic: auh in coatl, toçeoatl motlotloujtec, coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol, coztic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal. 714 531

Iztac cuextecatl iamacal ujtzauhquj, quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquateucujtlaio, imamalacaquetzal teucujtlaio: coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coztic teucujtlatl.

Chictlapanquj cuextecatl, çectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coztic in coatl, icopil ujtzauhquj, no chictlapanquj, cectlapal xoxouhquj, cectlapal coztic quetzaltica cujtlalpic, izquateucujtlaio, coztic teucujtlatl in jiacametz, ipipilol coztic teucujtlatl, imamalacaquetzal.

Coztic teucujtlacopilli quetzaltecomaio. Iztac teucujtlacopilli, quetzaltecomaio, tlapitzalli tecuçiztli, ioan qujqujztli in mopitza isuc injc çemeoa isuqujzque, injc mjcali: in quachpanjtl, coztic teucujtlapanjtl: ioan quetzalpanjtl in teujtia in isuc, in omottac ie meoatiquetza in jzquj quachpanjtl. Niman çemeoa in iauqujzque, injc mjcali, 534 727 quetzaltonatiuh, coztic teucujtlatl in tonatiuh ijtic mantiuh in quetzalli iscaltic. Xiloxochipatzactli, quetzalli in jizoaio, coztic teucujtlatl in jtecpaio, in jcanaoacãn mamantiuh: coztic teucujtlatl in tlacomaltectli. Maquaujtl itztzo in jtenco tlatectli, quetzalaztatzontli, teucujtlaio, quetzalxixilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiec quetzalli, oçelotlachicomjtl, in jpoçonca quetzalxixilquj: auh in jcuecuetlacacaio mjiec in quetzalli. 643 714 [411]

[p. 36 has no textual material]

532
[175
782
732]

[524]

[231]

[533
524
732]

[695
694]

[696]

[533
534]

[534
535]

[231]

—After Paso y Troncoso

Omens (concluded). 61. Two-headed men (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards landing on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of patolli (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatlan (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(G)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

532
[687]
[625]

[689]
[526]

[533
534]
[735]

[482]

—After Paso y Troncoso

• 86. Punishment of an erring official (Chapter 17). 87. Punishment of a careless musician (Chapter 17). 88-90. Keeping watch in the city against enemies (Chapter 17). 91. The game tlachtli (Chapter 17). 92. Gifts of the ruler to the poor (Chapter 17).

[p. 36(M)]

1/2 [This caption is in error, - Analyst]

[p. 36(L) is blank]

SEVENTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the singers bedizened themselves when the ruler would dance; and of that in which they would dance.

Mixcoacalli: there were established all the kinds of singer-dancers of Tenochtitlan and Tlatilulco. There they awaited the word of the ruler, that he would dance, or try some song, or learn some new song. All this the singers prepared, all that was necessary—two-toned drums, rubber drum hammers, ground drums, rattles shaped like dried poppy heads, copper bells, flutes; players of two-toned drums and ground drums, intoners of chants, leaders of the dance; and all the properties used in the dance.

If the song were to be intoned after the manner of Uexotzinco, they were adorned like men of Uexotzinco, and spoke even as they did; they were imitated with the song and in their adornment and their equipment. Likewise if a song were to be intoned after the manner of Anauac, the speech of the men of Anauac was imitated, and their adornment as well as their equipment. Likewise, if a song were to be intoned after the manner of the Huaxteca, their speech was imitated, and their headdresses were taken, with which to imitate them in coloring their hair yellow; and the masks [had] arrow marks [painted] on the face, noses pierced like jug handles, teeth filed [to a point], and conical heads. And they [were clad] only in their capes. Likewise [they did] other songs.

INJC CHICOME PARRAPHO, vncã mjtoa, injc mocencaoaia qujcanjme, in tlamaceoaz tlatoanj: ioan in tlein ipan mjtotizque. 533 292

Mixcoacalli, vncan tecpanoaia in jxqujtlamantli, mãcehoalcujcanjme in tenochca, ioan tlatilulcatl, vncan qujtlatolchiaia in tlatoanj, in aço mãçeoaz, aço itla cujcatl qujiehecoz, aço itla iancujc cujcatl qujmomachtiz, mochi ic moçencauhticatca, in cujcanjme: in jxqujch monequj teponazztli, olmaitl, veuetl, [534] ● aiacachtli, tetzilacatl, çoçoloctli, teponaçoanj, veuetzonanj, cujcaitoanj teiacanque: ioan in ixqujch tlamantli mãcehoallatqujtl, intla uexotzincaiotl meoaz cujcatl, in iuh muchichioa vexotzinca, ioan in iuh tlatoa: motlaiehecalhuja in jca cujcatl: ioan ica inechichioal intlaquj. Çan no iuhquj intla anaoacaiotl meoaz, motlaiehecalhuja, in jntlatol anaoaca: ioan jnnechichioal in iuhquj intlatquj. Çan no iuhquj, intla cuextecaiotl meoaz cujcatl, motlaiehecalhuja in jntlatol: ioan mocuj tzoncalli in qujntlaiehecalhuja, intzon, injc quacozzique, ioan xaiacatl ixtlamjoa iacaujcole, tlantziquatic, quapatlachtic, içan jtilma. Can no iuhquj in oc cequj cujcatl.

[302 304]

EIGHTH PARAGRAPH, which telleth of the houses in which were the slaves.

Malcalli: the majordomos guarded[13a] the captives. They took great care of them as to food and drink. That which they needed, they gave all to the captives.

Totocalli: there majordomos kept all the various birds—eagles, red spoonbills, trupials, yellow parrots, parakeets, large parrots, pheasants. And there all the various artisans did their work: the gold and silversmiths, the copper-smiths, the feather workers,[14] painters, cutters of stones, workers in green stone mosaic, carvers of wood. Caretakers of wild animals,[15] majordomos, there guarded all the wild animals: ocelots, wolves, mountain lions, and mountain cats.

INJC CHICUEJ PARRAPHO, ipan tlatoa, in jnchan catca tlatlacoti 567 344

Malcalli: calpixque pinpiaia, in mamalti, cenca qujnmocujtlaujaia, in tlaqualtica, in atica: in tlein qujnequja, mochi qujnmacaia in mamalti.

Totocalli, calpixque vncan qujnpiaia, in jxqujch nepapan tototl: quaquauhti, tlauhquechol, çaquan, tozneneme, cochome, alome, coxoliti: ioan oncan tlachichioaia, in jxqujch nepapan toltecatl, in teucujtlapitzquj, in tepozpitzquj, in amanteca, tlacujloque, tlatecque, chalchiuhtlacujloque, quauhtlacujloque Tequanpixque, calpixque, vncan qujnpiaia, in jxqujch tequanj: oçelotl, cuetlachtli, mjztli, ocotochtli. 463 344 231 136

13a. Pinpiaiā probably quinpiaia is meant.

14. "Feather-workers were called amaxtecas after the district of Amaxtlan, in Tuxtlan, where they lived" (Clark, op. cit., I, p. 56, n. 2). Cf. also Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 378.

15. The Real Academia de la Historia MS has tequanpixque for tequanpixque, and begins with the term a new paragraph. A marginal gloss by Sahagún heads the section, "Cosas de las fieras."

[p.46 is blank]

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

Sixteenth Chapter, in which it is told how the women were trained.

[Theirs were] the device with which [the loom] was held; the divided cord; the skein; the shuttle; the cane stalks; the wide batten, which swished [as it was used]; the thin batten, one made of bone; the small batten with which they worked designs; the heddle; the flail; the spindle whorl; the spinning bowl; chalk; the shallow spindle whorl when they spun with feathers; the basket for unspun cotton, one for rabbit hair, one for cotton thread, the basket for feathers, and the earthen bowl for feathers; the rack for yarn; the colored wood[1] with which they dyed cotton when they wove; the bowl for colors in which they dissolved pigments; the paper patterns from which they took the shape of whatsoever they made; maguey spines, with which they picked the cotton threads.

They took personal charge of preparing food and chocolate. There were their older women, who had reared them; and their hand-maidens were hunchbacks and dwarfs, who sang and played the [small ground] drum to amuse them.

Injc caxtolli oce capitulo, vncan mjtoa, injc mochiccoaia çioa. 286 462

Neanonj, mecamaxalli, quatzontli, xiiotl, otlatl, tzotzopaztli cacalaca, patlaoac: tzotzopaztli pitzaoac, omjtzotzopaztli, tzotzopaztepiton, ic tlamachioa: teçacatl, tlaujteconj, malacatl, tzaoalcaxitl, tiçatl, xaxalmalacatl ic iujtzaoa: ichcatanatli, tochomjtanatli, icpatanatli, iujtanatlj, iujtecomatl: tzatzaztli, tlacujlolquaujtl injc qujcujloa icpatl in qujqujti: tlapalcaxitl, in vncan qujpatla intlapal: amamachiotl, in vncan cana tlein tlamachtli qujchioa; vitztli injc quj-uitzcuj icpatl: [386] tlaqualchioa, achioa, qujnomauja: vncate in jnnahoan in quimjzcaltia, ioan in cocoa tepotzome çihoa, tzapame, cujca, tlatzotzona: injc melelqujxtia. 462 [702 534 522]

1. Tlamiqueuiqui: Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 222) describes the trees as "huexuyos, y tienen las rotas negras que parecen pintadas sobre el huexuyo; es árbol muy preciado, porque de él se hacen tapaceadas, cambrillas y cilindros. . . ." One is pictured in Emmart, op. cit., Pl. 69.

[p. 50 is blank]

were to remain, to make judgments, and to hear all manner of testimony.

The name of one Teccalli was Tlacxitlan. There they tried princes and great lords. At once, swiftly, they passed judgment on their complaints or wrong doing.

And the second place where justice was done was named Teccalli. There were the Mexican judges. Sagely they heard the complaints of the common folk. They defined and verified the complaint, they recorded it in paintings so that they might take it there to Tlacxitlan, where they informed the judges who were princes, so that there judgment might be pronounced.

And if something was difficult, they took it to the ruler so that he might judge it [with] those judges[6] whose names were Ciuacoatl, Tlacochcalcatl, Uitznauatlailotlac, Ticociauacatl, Pochtecatlailotlac, Ezuauacatl,[7] Mexicatl tezcacoacatl, Acatliacapanecatl, Milnauatl, Atlauhcatl, Ticociauacatl, Ciuatecpanecatl, and Tequixquinaoacatl. These same judges meditated and pondered upon, and examined, the testimony. They sought out the witnesses, those who bore testimony. Perchance [the charge] was true; or else that which the ruler had heard was false, so that, perhaps, by error[8] someone had been held in jail.

And if the ruler condemned someone to die, then his executioners slew him—the Achcacauhti,[9] the Quauhnochtli, and the Atempanecatl. Thus did these slay him: with a cord they strangled the evildoer, or they stoned him before the people, or they cut him to pieces.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which is described how all were to dance.

The ruler was greatly concerned with the dance, the rejoicing, in order to hearten and console all the peers, the lords, the noblemen, the brave warriors, and all the common folk and vassals.

First the ruler announced what song should be intoned. He commanded the singers to rehearse and practise the song and [to prepare] the two-toned calli, in vncan iezque, in vncã tetlatzontequjlizque, 643 in vncan qujcaqujzque in jxqujch tlamãtli tlacatla- 693

tolli, 565
in centetl teccalli, itoca tlacxitlan, in vncã tetlatzon-tequjliaia tlaçopipilti, tlatocapipilti, çan njman içiuh- [344] ca qujtzontequja inteneteilhujl, anoço tetlatlacul.

Auh injc vccan tecutlatoloia, itoca teccalli, vncan 693
catca in tecutlatoque mexica: iujian iocuxca qujca- [344]
quja, in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in oqujchi- 565
pauhque, in oqujiectilique neteilhujlli, tlapallacujlol- 695
pan qujtlalia, injc vmpa qujtquj tlacxitlan in jpã [212] qujntlapoujlia in tecutlatoque in tlaçopipilti, injc vmpa motzontequj.

Auh intla itla oujlitica iujc qujtquj in tlatoanj injc 695
iehoanti qujtzontequj in jntoca catca tecutlatoque. 643
Çioacoatl tlacochcalcatl, vitznaoatlailotlac, ticociaoacatl, pochteca tlailotlac, ezoaoacatl, mexicatl tezca-coacatl, acatliacapanecatl, mjlnaoatl, atlauhcatl, ticociaoacatl, çioatecpanecatl, tequjxqujnaoacatl, iehoantin, y, in tecutlatoque qujnemjliaia, qujchiquja, qujpetlaoaia in tlacatlatolli, qujntemoaia in machiceque, in tlaneltilianj, in aço ie nelli, anoço tlatolchi-chioalli in caqujtilo tlatoanj, in aço can tlapic aca quauhcalco otlaliloc.

Auh intla aca qujtlatzontequjlia tlatoanj mjqujz, 693
njman qujmjctia, in jtemjcticaoan achcacauhti, 696
quauhnochtli, atempanecatl: injc iehoantin qujmjc-tia, qujmecanja in tlatlacoanj, anoço teixpan qujtetepachoa, anoço qujtetequj.

INJC EI PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa in quenjn 535
netotiloz. 643
In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia, in maçeoaliztli, in papaqujliztli, injc qujmellaquaoa, injc qujn-iollalia, in jxqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, ioan tetecuti, ioan tiacahoan: ioan in jxqujch in cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in maçeoalli:
achtopa qujtoaia in tlatoanj, in tlein cujcatl meoaz 643 qujnnaoitiaia in cujcanjme: injc qujiehecozque injc 533 qujchicaoazque in cujcatl, ioan teponaztli, olmaitl, 534

6. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Y los oyan, muy diligentemente, y graues, llamandos al señor: para que los oyan juntamente con sus principales, muy calificados, que son el audiencia, y residen."

7. After the word pochtecatlailotlac, the Real Academia de la Historia MS includes mixcoatlailotlac; ezoaoacatl appears as ezuauacatl.

The title Tlacochcalcatl is repeated in the Azteca text of the Florentine Codex.

8. Can tlapic: can is probably mozzet (cf. ibid.).

9. Achcacauhti: cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, pp. 166, 281, 293; II, pp. 310, 321; also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 100, and III, p. 53.

643 drums, the rubber drum hammers, and the ground
533 drums, and all the properties used in the dance. And veuetl: ioan in ixquich maçeoallatqujtl, ioan netotiliztli, aqujn cujcaitoz, aqujque in teiacanazque, aqujn tepenaçoz, aqujn veuetzonaz, mochi achto mocencaoaia injc atle itlacaujz.
534 [he appointed the kind of] dance, him who would give the pitch, those who would lead, him who would beat the two-toned drum, him who would play the ground drum. All was first arranged, so that nothing would be left out.

643 And when there was a dance, the ruler [decided] 535 the day. At this time, he adorned and arrayed himself, [in his] head band with sprays of quetzal
292 feathers and gold, with which he bound his hair; a 301 yellow labret, or a green stone lip plug, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; golden ear plugs, which he inserted in [the lobes of] his ears; and he laid on a neck band, either a neck band of green stone or a collar with turquoise inserted; he placed on his wrist a bracelet with a large green stone upon it, or a large turquoise; or a golden arm band; and a quetzal feather fan. With [these] costly goods he went in procession and danced. With a priceless cape he covered and wrapped himself, and in a costly breech clout he girt himself.

Auh in ie ioeac maçeoa tlatoanj, in tlein ilhujtl ipan mocencaoa, mochichioa quetzallalpilonj coztic teucujtlaio, injc qujlpia itzon, coztic teçacatl, anoço chalchiuhtentetl in conaquja itenco, coztic teucujtlanacochtli, in caquja inacazco: auh in cozcatl conteca, aço chalchiuhcozcatl, anoço cozcapetlatl, teuxiujtl itlaactoc, macuextli imac qujtlalia vei chalchiujtl ipan ea anoço vej teuxiujtl, anoço coztic teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalecaccoaztli, tlaçotlanquj injc mjtotia injc maceoa, tlaçotilmatli in qujmololoa, in qujmoquentia, tlaçomaxtlatl in qujmomaxtlatia,

565 Then also they arrayed and accorded favors to all
535 the lords, and noblemen, the men [at arms], brave warriors, and the high judges, and the [lesser] judges, and brave warriors, men [at arms], and masters of the youths, and singers. And the ruler gave them drink and food, all the things which have been mentioned.

njman ic no qujcencaoá qujntlauhtia: in ixquichtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, in oqujchti, tiiacaoan, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tiiacaoan oqujchtin, ioan tiachcaoan, ioan cujcanjme, ioan qujnmaca in jiauh, in jtlaqual tlatoanj in jzqujtlamantin omoteneuhque.

687 And if the singers did something amiss—perchance a two-toned drum was out of tune, or a ground drum; or he who intoned, marred the song; or the leader marred the dance—then the ruler commanded that they place in jail whoever had done the wrong; they imprisoned him, and he died.

Auh intla itla qujtlacoa cujcanjme: aço teponaztli qujchalanja, anoço veuetl, anoço cujcaitoa, qujpoloa cujcatl: anoço teiacana, in qujpoloa netotiliztli: njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco contlalia in aqujn tlatlacoa, qujtzacutiuh mjquja.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how
726 he who was the ruler kept vigil; how he kept guard at night and all day, because of war.

The ruler was especially concerned with the keeping of watch against enemies and the guarding of the city, all day and all night. Hence he gave stern commands that guard should be kept faithfully. For at times, suddenly, the City of Mexico was circled by foes; perchance somewhere for this they were gathered together, and were laying a snare. Therefore the ruler kept careful vigil. He did not become besotted. He himself sometimes set forth by night, circled the city, and beheld what was done: perhaps the priest

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO: vncã mjtoa injc ixtoçoaia in aqujn tlatoanj, injc tlapiaia in ioaltica: ioan in cemjlhujtl in jpãpa iauiotl.

In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia in iautlapializtli, ioan altepepializtli, cemjlhujtl ceioal, ic tlatlaquauhnaoatiaia, injc cenca tlapialoz ma quenmanjan atenemachpan iauiaoalolo in altepetl mexico, aço cana ica necentlalilo, tlachichiujlilo, ipampa cenca ixtoçoaia in tlatoanj, amo tlaoanaia, iioma in iohoaltica quenmanjan qujçaia qujiaoaloa in altepetl qujtta tlein muchioa, acaçomo tlapia in tlamacazquj in tiachcauh aço ie necujtlaujlo in mjxitl in tlapatl in octh ioan oc cenca qujntlaquauhnaoatiaia in tlatoanj

Appendix A

Continuation of the Fourth Paragraph, Chapter Fourteen[1]

In the priests' house of Mexico, there were established and congregated all the keepers of the gods, the fire priests, and [other] priests, the city's devout ones. There they waited [lest] perchance the ruler might require something—perhaps inquire about something, mayhap of something they had seen in all the places where debts [of sacrifice] had been paid upon the mountains and upon the water; there where, afar, were the small pyramids where each night they performed penances.

Calmecac, mexico, vncan tecpanoaya, vncan mocenquixtiaya in ixquichtin teupixque yn tlenamacaque, yn tlamacazque yn itlamaceuhcauan catca altepetl, conchiaya yn aço itla ic quintemoz tlatoani, aço itla ic tlatlaniz, aço itla quitta yn ompa yzquican omoxtlauha yn tepeticpac, yoã atlan, yoan yn ompa veca caca momoztli, yeceeyoual yc tlamaceua. 346 793

For these who were fire priests and other priests, when they came forth well into the night, and when, as was said, the shell trumpets were newly blown, first drew their blood before the devil, with thorns, the spines of the maguey; then each one separately set forth, going quite naked. They went [out] having put about them only their pouches with cords,[2] which went filled with dyed, powdered tobacco—this tobacco mixed with a black [dye]—which they chewed as they went. And one proceeded taking with him an incense ladle in which fire went enclosed; and a small cotton bag in which was incense; and pine wood; and he carried his fir branches in his arms, as well as his spines covered with blood, and a shell as his trumpet. And even though it rained hard or was freezing, just so he went.

Ca y-iehoanti tlenamacaque, tlamacazque catca yquac quiçaya yn tlaquauh tlapoyaua, ỹ mitooya yancujcan tlatlapitzalo, achto miçoya in ixpan tlacatecolotl yca vitztli, ỹ metl yuitzo, niman ceceyaca quiçaya, çan petlauhtiuja, çan ixquich onactiuia yn intoxi yntlamecayouh vncan tentiuh yaqualli yehoatl im piçietl tlanelolli tlilli yn quiquatiuja, yoan quitquitiuia tlemaitl tzacuhtiuh vnca yetiuh tletl, yoã xiquipiltontli yc icatiuh copalli, yoã ocotl, yoã quiçiacauia yn iacxoyauh, yoan in iuitz yeheço, yoan tecuiztli yn itlapitzal ỹ manel cenca quiauiz, anoço ceuetziz yuhca viya. 793 [705] [291] [276] 415

[534]

When he reached whatsoever mountain he was to perform his due upon, then and there he paid his debt [of sacrifice]. He offered incense; he spread out his fir boughs, his bloodied maguey spines. He listened for the time when trumpets were to be sounded in Mexico, at midnight. And when the trumpets had been sounded in Mexico at midnight, then the priests, they who did penance, blew trumpets everywhere there upon the mountains where they paid their debts. Then they turned back, sounding trumpets as they went, in the dawn, when they again entered the priests' house.

yn iquac yn oacic campa tepetitech tlamatiuh nimã yc vncã moxtlaua, tlenamaca, contema yn iacxoyauh, yn iuitz yeheço, quiualcaqui in queman tlapitzaloz mexico y youalnẽpantla, auh yn otlapitzaloc mexico youalnepantla, niman yc nouian tlapitza yn tlamacazque yn tlamaceuhque yn ompa tepetitech in campa omoxtlaua, niman valmocuepa tlatlapitzziujtze ye tlatuinauac, y ualcalaqui calmecac. 796 783 [534]

1. See note 11, Chapter 14.

2. Leonhard Schultze Jena, in Gliederung der Alt-Azteksischen Volks in Familie, Stand und Beruf (Stuttgart: W. Kohlhammer Verlag, 1952), p. 330, says of the form xonoui: "Da er im Tori diejenigen bezeichnet, die den Copalbeutel trugen, wird es sich um Priester handeln." The term tlamecayotia he translates (ibid., p. 161), "schlieret die mit einer Schnur."

648 hath laid all manner of tribute upon us. But this [Moctezuma] is our lord and our ruler. And if [the gods] hasten to quit us — for the Mexicans are inhuman and very unrighteous — if [the gods] quickly leave us, if they stay away long, [the Mexicans] will return; they will come back here. The Mexicans have not made an end of and destroyed us. But great is their evil; they are full of sin."

And when Marina had informed the Captain of these words, he then answered them: "Let them not be grieved. I shall not tarry; shortly shall I return and speedily shall I find them. Here will be the ruling: here will be the place of governing. The Mexicans will be destroyed, so that they shall not harm you."

And when the people of Teocalhueyacan heard this, they rejoiced greatly. They became proud and haughty because of it. Behold, they therefore rose up and held themselves as better than others, as if they knew all. The more they listened foolishly, the more they were vainly presumptuous; as if then they had lost fear. They took this to be true; they thought that this was already so.

[534 201] And when this was over, and they had slept, when it was still deep night, flutes were blown, they sounded the muted flutes and the wooden whistles,[2] and drums were beaten. War drums were sounded. Then the Spaniards all arose and got up, and arrayed themselves. And after this, then they departed and filled the road. They went crowding the road.

Then they went on to and reached Tepotzotlan. Before long, in good time, they quartered themselves [there]. Only a short distance had they marched. And the people of Tepotzotlan then scattered and departed, fleeing from them and entering the forest. Some climbed the mountain; some [went into] the gorge. [The town] was quite abandoned to the Spaniards.[3] None dealt with them, because very great were they in destruction of men. Therefore they took flight and ran off. Only their bodies did they save. And all their goods they scattered in haste; they dropped them in their hurry. [The Spaniards] entered the palace; they went into the palace to quarter themselves. There they slept, being all together, all crowded and heaped together. For they were quite frightened; they went in fear.

qujli: auh inin ca totecujo ca totlatocatzin. Auh intla techmocavilitiqujça ca tlacatl in mexicatl, vellaveliloc, intla techmocavilitiqujçaz, intla movecavitiz, in oalmovicaz in valmocueptzinoz, aotechtlamjque, aotechpopoloque in Mexicatl: ca vel huei tlaveliloc, ca vel qujmaxilti injc tlaueliloc.

Auh in ocõcaqujti in Malintzin in tlatolli in capitan: njmã qujnoalhuj. Macamo motequjpacho.ã camo njvecaoaz, iciuhca njoallaz, iciuhca njqujnmatiqujuh, njcan tlatoloz, njcan tlatoloian iez, popoliviz in Mexicatl, macamo amechiolitlacocan.

Auh in ꝯuh qujcaque in teucalhujaque cenca papacque, ic aatlamatque, ic cuecuenotque, iz ic moquetzque, ic moichoatocaque, qujmolhujltocaque, ilhujz iuhqujn mocacaq̃ ilhujz iuhqujn aatlamati, iuhqujn vncã motlatlalia iniollo monelchiuhque, ic om ma nelli iuh momatque.

Auh inic iuhquj in ocuchque oc veca iovan in ie tlapitzalo, in qujpitza quauhtlapitzalli, quavilacapitztli, yoan tlatzotzonalo, iautlatzotzonalo: ie ic neeoalo, meeva in Españoles, nechichivalo: Auh in ie iuhquj, ie ic oneoalo neutemalo, pepexocatiuh in vtli:

njmã ic onacito in teputzutla, aia vel quẽman oc qualcan in ommotlalito, çan achi qujtocatiaque: auh in teputzoteca njman ic tzomonque olinque, ic choloque, quauhtlacalacque: cequjntin tepetl qujtlecavique: cequjntin atlauhtli, çan inpan macauh in Espanoles, aiac inca muchiuh: iehica ca cenca vei in intepololiz, ipampa mochololtique, mocholtique: çan ixqujch in innacaio qujmaquixtique: auh in ixqujch in intlatquj qujtepeuhtiqujzque, çan iuh tlaçuhtiqujzque: tecpan in oncalacque, ommotepancaltemato, vncã cochque, çan cenietivi, çan cemololiuhtivi, çan centepeuhtivi: iehica ca çan mauhcavi, çan momauhtitivi.

2. Quauhtlapitzalli, quavilacapitzli: cf. Eduard Seler: Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge: The Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), II, Pt. 3-4, p. 143; Alvaro Tezozomoc: Histoire du Mexique (H. Ternaux-Compans, tr.; Paris: P. Jannet, 1853), I, p. 121.

3. Espanoles: the title is omitted in the Nahuatl text.

726 And, when this had come to pass, the great chieftains in vain took refuge behind the stone columns; and [34] the stone columns [were] in two rows, altogether eight [of them]. And also the chieftains crowded on the roof terrace of the Coacalli.[1] They filled the roof terrace. None of the chieftains [could] go beyond.

And the Spaniards at first remained quiet. And when they fired the gun, it became very dark; smoke spread out. And those who were hiding behind the stone columns all fled; and all those who were on the roof terrace hurled themselves down, and all ran far away. Then [the Spaniards] took up the gun and went to place it upon the large, round stone.
● [534] And on top of the [pyramid Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, holding vigil to no purpose, [priests] struck two-toned drums; as if with all force they struck the two-toned drums. And then two Spaniards climbed up, going to club them there. And when they had gone there to strike them, they cast them down; they threw them down from there.

And the shorn ones, all the chieftains, who had been fighting in boats, all came forth and issued on to the dry land. And those who plied the boating poles for them [were] the young boys; only these guided the boats. And upon this the chieftains then took note of the spaces among the houses. They ran fast; all in truth shouted and said: "O chieftains, make haste!"

And when it came to pass that the Spaniards saw that they were about to come to grips with and pursue them,[2] then they cowered and sped away; they turned tail; they indeed fled and ran. From both sides they were shot at with darts and barbed arrows; and from both sides they were pelted with stones. Shortly, then, they went to find respite at Xolloco, to catch their breath. There [the battle] quieted, and thereupon [the Mexicans] all turned back. And the Spaniards then also returned and went to establish themselves at Acachinanco. But the gun, in their haste, they abandoned there on the large, round stone. Then the chieftains seized it, ran it forward, and went to toss it into the water. They pulled it to Tetamaçolco.[3] qujmototocticaca in tetlaquetzalli: auh in tetlaquetzalli ompantli, nepan chicuej. Auh in coacalli itlapãioc, no teucatoque in tiacavan, motlatlapantenque aocac ixtlapal iauh in tiiacavan.

Auh in Españoles çã njman amo mamana: auh in oqujtlazque tlequjqujztli cenca tlaiovac, poctli motecac. Auh in qujmotoctitimanca in tetlaquetzalli, netlaloloc yoan in jxqujchtin tlapanco onoca valmotepeuhque veca netlaloloc, nec qujvallecavia in tlequjqujztli contecaco temalacatitlan: auh in jcpac vitzilobuchtli, oc nẽ tlapiaia, qujvitequja in teponaztli, iuhqujn ontetemj qujvitequj teponaztli: auh njmã ic ontlecoque vmentin Españoles, vmpa qujmonvivitequjto: auh in oqujmonvivitequjto in ca valmaiauhque, qujnvalchicanauhque:

auh in quaquachictin in jxqujchtin in tiacavan in acaltica tlaiccoaia, muchintin valqujzque, vallalvacaqujzque: auh in tetlanelhuja in telpopotzitzinti, çan ichoãtin in qujvalhujvicaque in acalli. Auh in ie iuhquj in tiaiacavan, nec qujmottilia in caltzalantli vellatotocz, vel netzatzililo: qujtoa. Tiacavane, ma vallatotoca:

auh in ie iuhquj, in oqujttaque in Españoles in ie impan monamjquj in ie qujntotona, njmã ic mocototztlalique, moteputztique, vel totoca, motlaloa necoccampa in valmjnalqia in tlatzontectica, yoan necoccampa in valtepacholo, qujn vmpan xolloco patito, imjhio qujcujto, vmpa valmomanato: njman ie ic valneeuepalo. Auh in ichoantin Españoles, njman ic no mocuepa motlalito in acachinanco: auh in tlequjqujztli vncan qujcauhtiqujzque in temalacatitlan: njman conanque in tiacavan, qujtototza qujmaiavito atlan, tetamaçolco qujtztlitiriaque.

---

1. Spanish text: "muchos otros grandes estaban encima de la casa que estaba armada sobre las columnas." The Coacalli is described in Book VIII — Kings and Lords, p. 44.

2. Qujmotoca: probably qujmotocaca in manuscript.

3. Spanish text: "en una agua profunda que llamaba Tetamaçolco, que era cabo al mesmo que se llama Tepetenchan, donde estaba las bombas."

11:Diaz T,H-5 (1519-1520) 1910
NU7 Aztec NU7

of the oratory were so splashed and encrusted with blood 346 that they were black, the floor was the same and the whole 778 place stank vilely. Then we saw on the other side on the left hand there stood the other great image the same height as Huichilobos, and it had a face like a bear and [416] eyes that shone, made of their mirrors which they call Tezcat, and the body plastered with precious stones like that of Huichilobos, for they say that the two are brothers; and this Tezcatepuca was the god of Hell and had charge [776] of the souls of the Mexicans, and his body was girt with figures like little devils with snakes' tails. The walls were so clotted with blood and the soil so bathed with it that in the slaughter houses in Spain there is not such another stench.

They had offered to this Idol five hearts from that day's sacrifices. In the highest part of the Cue there was a recess of which the woodwork was very richly worked, and in it was another image half man and half lizard, with precious stones all over it, and half the body was covered with a mantle. They say that the body of this figure [776] is full of all the seeds that there are in the world, and they say that it is the god of seed time and harvest, but I do not remember its name, and everything was covered with blood, both walls and altar, and the stench was such that we could hardly wait the moment to get out of it.

They had an exceedingly large drum there, and when 346 they beat it the sound of it was so dismal and like, so to [534] say, an instrument of the infernal regions, that one could hear it a distance of two leagues, and they said that the skins it was covered with were those of great snakes. In that small place there were many diabolical things to be [534] seen, bugles and trumpets and knives, and many hearts of Indians that they had burned in fumigating their idols, and everything was so clotted with blood, and there was

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

72 | country, had permitted their coming unmolested,[137] their return, once outside of the council-house, was not placed under any similar safe-guard. Oftentimes that return to Mexico was attended with the most imminent personal danger to the delegates.[138]

The cases, if any, are certainly few in number, where a tribe thus provoked or defied, voluntarily submitted to tribute. The Mexicans could be sure, almost, of war, whenever their supreme council had agreed upon it. Therefore, as soon as the meeting at the official house had concluded, war was proclaimed in the four quarters of the pueblo, and in case of great urgency, a monstrous [202] drum, with a specially dismal sound, called the whole tribe to arms from the top of the chief temple.[139]

72 Owing to the peculiar organization just discussed, a rapid mobilization of the forces of the whole tribe was very feasible. The minor subdivisions gathered under their "captains," and all together proceeded almost simultaneously to the store-houses of the four great quarters of the tribe, where the stewards dealt out the

[137] Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. I, p. 535): "que aunque estas Gentes eran de su "natural condition mas vengativas, que todas las del Mundo, respetaban a' los Embax-"adores de sus mortales enemigos, como a' Dioses, teniendo por mejor violar qualquier "rito de su Religion, que pecar contra la fé dada á los Embaxadores."

[138] For comparison with Loskiel on the northern Indians (Cap. XI, p. 187) see Tezozomoc (Cap. VIII, p. 15). When the "Atempanecatl Tlacaeleltzin" returned for the second time to Azcaputzalco, this time to challenge the Tecpanecas and defy them to open war, and after he had properly decorated their war-chief Tezozomoctli, the latter gave to him a sword, a shield, and a helmet, saying: "Take here, also, something to "protect your body, and this shield and sword, "maccuahuitl," and see if you may "return home safely." Atempanecatl was attacked by Tecpanecan scouts, pursued as far as upon Mexican soil, and escaped only through his swiftness and personal bravery. This episode is confirmed by Durán (Cap. IX, p. 74), and by Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XII, pp. 482 and 483), although they both say that the Mexican delegate escaped by avoiding the warriors of the Tecpanecas by circuitous paths. Still, it shows that his return was attended with great personal danger. Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVII) attributes this action to the first Montezuma. ("Huehue-Montezuma," or "Montezuma Ylhuicamina.") [534] [139] Bernal-Diez (Cap. XCII, Vedia, II, pp. 90 and 91). On the top of the great temple: "y alli tenian un tambor muy grande endemasia, que cuando le tanian el sonido "del era tan triste y de tal manera, como dicen instrumento de los infiernos, y mas de "dos leguas de alli se oia; y decian que los cueros de aquel tambor eran de sierpes muy "grandes." Besides this drum they used conch-shells in great numbers, thus creating a horrid noise. The Spaniards grew intimately acquainted with these awful signals on the night of the 1st of July, 1520, when the various instruments called out the Mexican warriors to that pursuit which caused the slaughter on the dyke leading to Tlacopan. Every one reading the splendid descriptions of Mr. Prescott, of this bloody retreat ("History of the Conq. of Mexico," Book V, chap. III), will remember: "the "huge drum in the desolate temple of the war-god sent forth those solemn tones which, "heard only in seasons of calamity, vibrated through every corner of the capital" (p. 302, of Vol. II).

532
x787
[534]

[534]

[851]

—After Paso y Troncoso

16-20. One Flower: musicians, entertainers, embroiderers (Chapter 7). 21. Seven Rain (Chapter 8). 22, 23. Eight Flower and bathing of child (Chapter 8).

[p. 126 f]

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

sion of the irrelevant, implicit in drawing, largely contribute. 532
In our present day, with all the superb methods of photographic recordings and reproductions, the comic strip has a vogue unparalleled in our history.[17] (See Plates 62–63.)

Aboriginal music has largely disappeared. The friars 533 534 quickly adapted the chants and dances of Europe to Indian needs and substituted Christian for Indian ritual practices, using song and dance as formulas easily understood by primitives. To judge from the instruments, Aztec music was strong in rhythm but lacking in tone. The two-tone and one-tone drums could emit sonorous rhythms, but the bone and clay flutes pipe pitifully and are not gauged to a fixed scale. The conch shell could be blown with varying notes, according to the intensity of the blast, although it was more suitable for summoning people than for making music. Whistles, rattles of clay and gourds, bells and shell tinklers enhanced the effect of carefully regulated rhythms. Notched bones, often human, were rasped with a stick and produced quite pleasant sounds. A strange type of drum, which seems to have been indigenous, had an amazing resonance attained by beating an inverted gourd floating in a large container of water.[18] (See Plates 39, bottom left; 61, middle right.)

The dance was highly important, but native steps seldom 535 ●
persist except in the most primitive outlying districts, for [77 79]
they were transformed by the friars into Christian patterns. The chroniclers describe dances of many types in which masses of people participated. It is impossible that the Aztecs, with their profound sense of design and form, should not have had elaborate rituals in which great bodies of people moved in complex patterns to complicated rhythms. Song was used to reinforce the ceremony, and the words of some

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

535 chants survive without, alas, the musical notation. These dancers, acting out mythical events pertaining to the lives of the gods, must usually have been highly theatrical. Thus as with other peoples of the past, religious service fulfilled the function of the drama.[19] (See Plate 62, bottom left.)

[212] The pictographic writing of the Aztecs was too simple to 537 record a literature. However, the many references to oratory
538 and the wealth of allusions and synonyms referring to the gods and goddesses give a picture of rich fantasy and poetic imagination. The emphasis on the spoken word, the complex background of the religion, the closeness of the supernatural world, would not have produced lean, accurate prose. Rather a semipoetic, highly symbolic verbiage came from the practice of oratory and the chanting of prayers. Thus a rhythmic and rich verbosity existed as a form of polite address that, given a system of writing, might have been transmuted into literature.[20]

517 These activities, which we sanction in our own culture under the terms of arts and letters and to the practitioners of which we assign honor as creative artists, were existent in Aztec society. The status of these practices, however, was very different from their position in our own culture. Much of that area of our own life divided up into the infinite gradation of commercial, legal and governmental pursuits fell within the span of the individual Aztec's normal social life. That energy and activity which we exhaust in religion, art, belles-lettres and science was combined by the Aztecs in the observance of their religious requirements. The nature of their religion and its position in Aztec life and social practice are fundamental to a realization of the nature of their culture.

776 cooked, and roasted in a pot; one roasted [on the fire]; sweat-houses were heated, inquamen were melted, things were cleansed.

776 And when his feast day was celebrated, once a year, at 796 the end of the month of Ixcalli, they made an image of Moctezuma; before it quail were sacrificed and incense was set forth.

[262] Tamales [stuffed] with greens[66] were prepared in each dwelling. First they were placed before the fire. Then they were eaten.

[534] And all day his old men sang, blew trumpet-shaped shells, beat drums, and sounded rattles for him.

And no one might reach his arm to the bowl, which was forbidden; nothing might be cooked. Because first were eaten the tamales [stuffed] with greens which had been brought as offerings.

And, in live coals, the children[67] roasted some snakes, frogs, small white fish, water lizards, [and] birds—whatever kind of small animal they hunted, they dropped in the hearth. Thus, they said: "Our father roasteth [something] for himself."

And when night fell, the old men, the old women, drinking wine, made libations in all [four] directions. [And] they said thus: "They give a taste of it to the fire; they refresh themselves."[68]

● [535] And every four years a festival most greatly honored him—when Moctezuma danced a princely dance before the temple of Xiuhtecutli, which was called Tozzumulco.[69]

[273] And at this time everyone [including] all the children, every one of them, tasted the wine. Thus it was called [the time when] the children drink wine.

[608 431] And then they gave the children uncles and aunts, a man [and] a woman, whom those with children sought out and gave gifts. These took [the children] upon their backs, and carried them then to the temple of Ixcoçauhqui. There [the parents] pierced their ears; thus they placed a sign upon [304 852] them, while their uncles and aunts[70] looked on. Afterwards all feasted.

776 [Ixcoçauhqui's] ornament was [thus]: black was smeared about the lower part of his face. About his head he bore a circlet set with green stones; he wore a paper crown with blue cotinga feathers and a spray of quetzal feathers; he had a crown of arrowshafts; a crown of spear-shafts;[71] he had

Auh yn iquac ilhujquitilloia, cexiuhtica: ipan ilamjan yxcalli: quixipolaiaia in motecuçuma, ixpan tlaxcemaloia, copalomjlilo, cuuhquitamalli nechivilloia, in cecmcalpan: achto ixpan quimanjlaia in tlel, çatepan qualoia.

Auh yn jxeviocoan, ixh cemjlhujtl, in quicuicatia, quitecciquichilia, quiteponacilhuja, caiacachilhuja:

auh aiac vel cimaçoaia in cuauhtli, ytlacuaulilloia, yajc amo aca motlatia, mochichinan: iquampa in iancuican oqualoc cuuhquitamalli, yajc ochamaialoc.

Auh in pipiltontli, mochintin quintlaxquiaia: yn aca coatl: cuijatl, xoxujli, axolotl, totod: in çaço tlein ocacic ixiuli, ycamac contlaçoia in tlecuijli: ic mjtoaia, motlaxquia yn tota.

Auh yn oiooac, noujan tlatlaxoaia in vevetque, ylamatque: ixh quitoaia, quitlatoiaujliaia yn tlel, tecalcuuja.

Auh nauhxiuhtica, yn oc cenca, mauiztilloia, ilhuixh: iquac motecujtoiaia yn motecuçuma, ixpan yn jteucal, xiuhtecutli, ytocaiocan tozzumulco.

Auh in jquac hy, vel mochitlacatl, vel no inquich tlacatl, quijpaloaia, quiltequja, in vetli, in pipiltontli: ic motecoiotiaia, pillaoano:

yeaa vocã quintlatiaia, quimahujtiaia in pipiltontli. Ce cioatl, ce oquichtli, in quintemoaia pilhoaque, quintlauhtiaia; inhoantin quimamachiuja, vuapa quimoncaoaia, yn ixupan ixcoçauhqui: vuapa quimacazxapotlaia, quimacxocoionjaia: inhquja ic quimachiotiaia, yajc quimitta, yntlaoaa, ymaujoan: çatepan tlaqualo.

Jn jxochichinal catca: tillica momujlnec, chalchiuhtetele, xiuhtotomacale, quetzalmjlaoaia, mjtoaac, tlacoxitzaoac, xiuhcoamacoche, amacumaapanale, no tizitle, cocujole, xiuhtecuelaxiquipaquj yn jchimal, tlachieltepile.

66. "Una de las hierbas que se comen cocidas es llama huauhquilitl, que son blandas, es muy verde, tiene las manos delgadillas y delicadas, tiene las hojas anchuelas. Las tallas de esta hierba se llaman huauhtli y la semilla se llama de la misma manera; esta hierba se cuece para comer, sale a cenizas, empremete del agua que se cuece para comerse; hacense tamales de esta hierba los cuales se llaman quilhuac." Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 233. On p. 198, huauhquilitl is defined as Amaranthus hypochondriacus Amaranthaceae.

67. In the corresponding Spanish text, the children's parents hunted and roasted these animals. In the Historia general, Vol. I, p. 207, Sahagún writes that the old men received the animals from the children as offerings and threw the offerings in the fire.

68. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 209; see tecuilonqui in Simeon: op. cit.

69. Described as the 64th temple in Tenochtitlan. Ibid., Vol. I, p. 227.

70. Corresponding Spanish text uses the word padrino (godfather; patron or protector). Molina (op. cit.) translates the words tiotl and mitl as uncle and aunt.

71. Chalchiuhtetelli—a strap for the head, set with jewelled disks, the front side bearing the figure of a cotinga (chalchiuitl); quetzalmitl or xiuhtotomacalli ipaxiquipaquiyn—a item of feather mosaic work in the form of a crescent cone, broadening upwards; mitqualli tlacochtzqualli or the eagle-warrior's crown, the eagle-warrior's dress bordered in red eyes, and a cape of netting with snail-shells.[77] His breast ornament had snail-shells. A mirror-stone in two parts [was painted] upon his face. He was [also] arrayed with a chalky ear-plug; his shield was chalk-covered and had paper ornaments. The device for seeing was in his hand. [He sat upon] his stool of reeds and rushes.

yquanhquauhtecuhtli, nauaxio, ycuechin, ixipanocuqui cyli 776 tzacutlatlapanqui yn jxaiac: yn jxachichioal, ytiçacuech, ytiçachimal, amapaio, ytlachinia ymac caxca, ytolicpal, acacpalli.

Sixteenth Chapter, which tells of the god named Little Black Face (Ixtlilton), the earth-scraper (Tlalteccuini).[78]

He was a god, whose temple was made entirely of wood, at a place named Tlamilocan. Here in his temple were many earthen bowls, covered over. These were called "his black water."

And whenever a child sickened, they brought him to the temple of Ixtlilton. They uncovered one of the jars and had him drink "his black water." Thereupon the child became whole.

When one wished [to arrange] a dance, amid incense, he went and brought [Ixtlilton's] impersonator to his house. It was only a man, who was arrayed [like the god].

When they had arrived at his house, where there was to be a dance, food was eaten and thirst was quenched. After eating, Ixtlilton danced. After he had danced, he entered into the house; he uncovered the wine [which] for four days had been covered. This was called the first opening or tapping of the new wine.[79]

Then they began to drink. Again they went out into the court, [and] uncovered "his black water," which also had been covered for four days. On the fifth day they uncovered it.

If dirt, cobweb, straw, charcoal [were found] upon it, then it was said purchaser he was either an adulterer or a thief; or he lived dissolutely, or he lived in vice; or he was a sorcerer, he who had the dance. Thus they confronted and reproached him openly. Thus they said [the god] scored discord because he revealed and reproached people to others for their sins.

And when he departed for his house, they gave him a large mantle called ixquex (face-covering).[80]

Thus was [Ixtlilton] bedight: he was spread over with unguent; his face was covered with soot; about his lips was Jnic castolli vce capitulo ynchpa tlatoa, in teuil yn jtoca, caxca, ixtlilton, tlalteccuija.

Teuil caxca, çan quauiil yn jteupan caxca, ytocaiocan [346] tlacujlocan: in vecan ytenpan, mjac yn apaxtli, tuxtacuitlauaca, mocochiotia itlilauh.

Auh yn aquja mococuaia, piltontli, vmpa qujujcaia yn 776 jteupan ixtlilton: centeel, qujtlapoui yn apaxtli, conjtiaia 757 yn jtlilauh; ic petia in piltontli.

Auh yn aquja qujtoxix, cupaltica in cenauaia, ynic 776 qujvicaia ychan yn jaiptla: çan tlacatl in muchichioaia. 535 ●

Ja cuecic ychan, tlatoxix, uytoxix: njman tlatlaquaiio, 776 atlixo: yn oxlaquaioc, njman mjtoxia, yn jxtlilton: yn conjtoti, yn onmacxuh, calixic oncalaquj: ichoxtl qujtlapoa [273] in vetli, navilhujtica tuxcutimilca: ic mjtoxia, tlaiacxaxpotla, vixmana.

Niman ye vmpeua, yn ic tlaoano: oc cepa oalquiça inualco, qujtlapoa yn jtlilauh, no tuxcutimanca navilhujtica: ic macujlilhujtl in qujtlapoa:

ic mjtoxia, ic momomaia, ixtla tlaçolli, yxtla tocatzaoalli, [187] yxtla tzontli, ixtla tecolli, vecan vetztoc: ic mjtoxia, aço tetlaxima, aço ichtec, amoço ahavilnamj, mahavilnia: oc aço tlacacomolli, ic tlatoria, ic qujxmotlaia, qujxcomacaia, qujxpantia: ic mjtoxia tetzalan, tuxpantla motecx: ichica, ca qujxincomaca, qujxiçpantia, ic teixmotla, yn tetlatlacul.

Auh yxjc oalquiça techá, quachtli yn qujxacaia motocaiotia, ixquex. [292]

Jnic muchichioaia, moçac, mocamjxtlilpopoxa, mjxi- 776 çatlauhti, yn jcamapa: tecpaquachichiquijle, quetzalle,

77. For description, see illustration and text in Seler: Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II, pp. 315 and 323; and also illustration (Ometeuil) —Plate 13.

The term cuachichil means the curved cups or mounds, with sea-snail shells lowered where the circle crossed. The chalcuayoal and the tecuipaqui were presumably the same as similar. Seler: Collected Works, Vol. II, pp. 3, pp. 79, 82, citing, in the first instance, Sahagún's Historia general, Lib. III, Apendice, cap. 2. In Lib. II (Florentine Codex, fo. 37v), Sahagún refers to "un ornamento de un palmo en quadro, hecho en tela rala, al qual llamaban yxquachtli, atado con unas cuadas de algodon a las puntas. . . ."

78. God of medicine. Tlalteccuini (or tlalteccuinti) is probably formed from tlalli and teccuinia. Cf. Seler: Eniga Kapitel, Vol. I, p. 16.

79. Sahagún, Historia general, Vol. I, p. 314: ". . . los que acostumbraban beuerdelos los mayores y hacian vino nuevo, que se llamaba ixiptli." The Spanish text of the Florentine Codex explains that "a este abrimiento, llamaban tlaiacxaxpotla, quiere decir, este abrimiento primero, o vino nuevo." On the meaning of onmacxuh, see Sahagún, op. cit., p. 37, for a definition of macujlilpopoxa.

80. ". . . llamaba ixquex: los quales llamaban ixquex: que quiere decir, cubertura de la cara: porque quedaua, amorçagada, aquel que assi hacha, . . . le fuesse. . . ." Loc. cit.

The seventh month they named Tecuilhuitontli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the goddess of salt, whom they called Uixtociuatl. They said that she was elder sister of the Tlaloc gods. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman decked in the ornaments with which they represented the same goddess.

Al septimo mes llamauan Tecuilhujtontli: En el primero dia deste mes: hazian fiesta a la diosa de la sal que llamauan Vixtociuatl: deziã que era hermana mayor, de los dioses tlaloques: matauan a honrra desta diosa vna muger compuesta con los ornamẽtos que pintauã a la mjsma diosa. [796 X] [805 776]

Chapter 7
Tecuilhuitontli

On the eve of this feast, all the old women sang and danced, as well as the young women and girls. They went held by some short cords which they carried in their hands, one [taking] one end, another the other [end]. These cords they named xochimecatl. They all wore garlands of wormwood [flowers] of this land, which are called iztauhiatl. A number of old men led them and ordered the singing. Among them went the woman who was the likeness of this goddess and who was to die arrayed in rich ornaments.

On the night before the feast, the women, with the same one who was to die, kept vigil; and they sang and danced all night long. At break of day, all the priests arrayed themselves and performed a very solemn dance. And all who were present at the dance held in their hands those flowers which are called cempoalxochitl. Thus dancing, they took many captives to the Pyramid of Tlaloc, and, with them, the woman who was to die, who was the likeness of the goddess Uixtociuatl. There they slew first the captives and then her.

Many other ceremonies were performed during this feast; and also [there was] great drunkenness, all of which is set forth at length in the account of this feast, fol. 76.

Cap. 7
Tecujlhujtontli.

1 f KL La vigilia desta fiesta cantauan y f 2[1]
2 g dançauan todas las mugeres, viejas, y g 3 [535]
3 A moças y muchachas yvan asidas de A 4
4 b vnas cuerdas cortas que lleuauan en las b 5
5 c manos, la vna por el vn cabo, y la otra c 6
6 d por el otro: a estas cuerdas llamauan d 7 [301]
7 e sochimecatl: lleuauan todas gujrnaldas e 8 137]
8 f de axenxos desta tierra que se llama f 9
9 g iztauhiatl: gujaualas vnos viejos, y g 10
10 A regian al canto en medio dellas yva la A 11
11 b muger que era la ymagen desta diosa, b 12
12 c y que avia de morir adereçada con c 13
13 d ricos ornamentos. d 14
14 e e 15
15 f La noche antes de la fiesta: velauan f 16 [535]
16 g las mugeres con la mjsma que auja de g 17
17 A morir, y cantauan, y dançauan toda la A 18
18 b noche: venjda la mañana: adereça- b 19
19 c uanse todos los satrapas, y hazian vn c 20 [137]
20 d areyto muy solemne: y todos los que d 21
estauan presẽtes al areyto, tenjan en la mano aquellas flores que se llaman cempoalsochitl: assi baylando lleuauan muchos catiuos al cu, de Tlaloc: y con ellos a la muger que auja de morir que era imagen de la diosa Vixtociuatl: alli matauan primero a los captiuos, y despues a ella.

Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian en esta fiesta, y tambien gran borracheria: todo lo qual esta a la larga puesto en la historia desta fiesta. fo. 76. [273]

1. Marginal notation: Maravilla, parte, cape Ibon.

X 796 The eighth month they called Uei tecuilhuitl. On the first day of this month they observed a feast to [805 the goddess named Xilonen (goddess of the tender 776 maize). On this feast they gave food to all the poor men and women—old men, old women, boys, girls—[735] in honor of the goddess. They slew a woman, on the tenth day of this month, arrayed in the ornaments with which they represented the same goddess.

Al octauo mes llamauã Vei tecujlhujtl: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta a la diosa llamada Xilonen (diosa de los xilotes) en esta fiesta dauã de comer a todos los pobres hombres y mugeres, viejos y viejas, njños y njñas, a honrra desta diosa: matauã a vna muger a diez dias deste mes, compuesta cõ lós ornamẽtos con que pintauã a la mjsma diosa.

Chapter 8
Uei tecuilhuitl

X 796 For eight uninterrupted days before the feast, they fed men and women, young and old. Then, very 735 early in the morning they gave them to drink a kind 262 of gruel which they call chienpinolli. Each one drank as much as he wished. And at noon they placed all in order, seated in their rows, and they gave them tamales. He who gave them [out], gave each one as many as he could hold in one hand. And if one of them exceeded the bounds of custom so much as to take [tamales] twice, they mishandled him and took from him those which he had, and he went with nothing. This [feasting] the lords brought about in order to give comfort to the poor; for at this time, ordinarily, there is a want of the necessities of life.

X 796 All these eight days they danced and moved in rhythm, men and women together performing the ● 536 ceremonious movement, all heavily adorned with rich vestments and jewels. The women wore their [302] hair unbound; they went with hair down, dancing and singing with the men. This dance began at sundown, and they continued in it until nine o'clock.
[373] They carried many lights (like great torches) of resinous wood, and there were many braziers or bonfires which burned in the same courtyard in which they danced. In this dance or solemn movement they went with hands joined [to those of other dancers], or embraced—the arm of one grasping the body of another as in an embrace, and the other likewise [holding still] another, men and women [alike].

Cap. 8.

1	e	KL	Vei tecujlhujtl	e	22[1]
2	f		Dauan de comer a hombres y mu-	f	23
3	g		geres chicos y grãdes ocho dias con-	g	24
4	A		tinos, antes de la fiesta luego muy de	A	25
5	b		mañana dauãles a beuer vna manera	b	26
6	c		de maçamorra que llamã chienpinolli:	c	27
7	d		cada vno bueja quãto queria: y al	d	28
8	e		medio dia ponjãlos todos por orden	e	29
9	f		en sus rencleras sentados, y dauanlos	f	30
10	g		tamales: el que los daua, daua a cada	g	1[2]
11	A		vno quãtos podia abarcar con vna	A	2
12	b		mano: y si alguno se desmãdaua a	b	3
13	c		tomar dos vezes maltrataualle, y to-	c	4
14	d		mauanle los que tenja, y yvase sin	d	5
15	e		nada. Esto hazian los señores por con-	e	6
16	f		solar a los pobres: porque en este	f	7
17	g		tiempo ordinariamente ay falta de	g	8
18	A		mãtenjmjentos.	A	9
19	b		Todos estos ocho dias baylauan, y	b	10
20	c		dançauã: haziendo areyto hombres y	c	11[3]

mugeres todos juntos todos muy ataujados con ricas vestiduras y joyas: las mugeres trayan los cabellos sueltos, andauan en cabello baylando y cantando cõ los hombres començaua este areyto en ponjendose el sol, y perseuerauan en el, hasta ora de las nueue: trayã muchas lumbreras (como grãdes hachas) de tea, y aujan muchos braseros o hogueras, que ardian en el mjsmo patio dõde baylauan. En este bayle o areyto andauã trauados de las manos, o abraçados, el braço del vno asido del cuerpo como abraçado, y el otro asimjsmo del otro hombres y mugeres.

1. Marginal notation: Iunio quadrij Ejh et xxij.
2. Marginal notation: Ej pajpar et Mart.
3. Marginal notation: Iulio xiij.

One day before they slew the woman who was to die in honor of the goddess Xilonen, the women who served on the pyramid (who were called cioatlamacazque) performed a dance in the courtyard of this same pyramid, and sang the [hymns of] praise and the canticles of this goddess. They all went surrounding her who was to die [and] who went bedight in the ornaments of this goddess. In this way, singing and dancing, they kept watch all night before the day when she was to die.

And at dawn all the nobles and warriors performed a dance in this same courtyard, and with them also danced the woman who was to die, with many other women arrayed like her. The men went dancing in front, by themselves, and the women went behind them.

As soon as all, thus dancing, arrived at the pyramid where that woman was to die, they made her go above, up the steps. When she reached the top, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder; and in this position, they struck off her head and then tore out her heart and offered it to the sun. Many other ceremonies were enacted in this feast. Etc.

Vn dia antes que matassen a la muger que auja de morir: a honrra de la diosa xilonẽ: las mugeres que serujã en el cu (que se llamauã cioatlamacazque) haziã areyto en el patio del mismo cu, y cantauan los loores y cantares desta diosa, yvan todas rodeadas de la que avia de morir, que yva compuesta con los ornamẽtos desta diosa. Desta manera cantando y baylando: velauan toda la noche precediẽte el dia en que avia de morir.

Y en amaneciendo todos los nobles y hõbres de guerra: hazian areyto en el mismo patio, y con ellos baylaua tambiẽ la muger que auja de morir, con otras muchas mugeres adereçadas como ella: los hombres yvan por si baylãdo delante y las mugeres yvan tras ellos.

Desque todos assi baylando: llegauã al cu donde auja de morir aquella muger, subiãla por las gradas arriba: llegada arriba tomauãla vno a cuestas espaldas cõ espaldas: y estãdo assi, la cortauan la cabeça y luego la sacauã el coraçon y le ofreciã al sol: Otras muchas cerimonjas se haziã en esta fiesta. Etc.

796 535 [793]

X 796 The ninth month they called Tlaxochimaco. On the first day of this month they held a feast in honor of [805 776] the god of war, named Uitzilopochtli. In this they offered him the first flowers [grown] in that year.

Al nono mes llamauan Tlaxochimaco: El primero dia deste mes hazian fiesta a honrra del dios de la guerra llamado Vitzilobuchtli: offrecianle en ella las primeras flores de aquel año.

Chapter 9
Tlaxochimaco

[231 262] On the night before this feast, all busied themselves in killing fowls and dogs, in order to eat them, and in making tamales and other things concerned with food. Then, very early in the morning of this [778] feast, the priests of the idols decked Uitzilopochtli with many flowers; and after the statue of this god was adorned, they decorated the statues of the other gods with garlands and strings and wreaths of flowers. And then they decked all the other statues in the tribal temples and young men's houses. And in the houses of the majordomos and leading men and common folk, all decorated with flowers the statues which they had in their houses.

X 796 Having decorated the statues of all the gods, they then began to eat that fare which they had prepared ● 535 the night before: and, a little after eating, they started a kind of dance in which the noblemen, with women, together danced grasping each other's hands, and the ones embracing the others, arms thrown about each other's necks. They did not dance solemnly in the manner of a ceremonial dance, nor did they go through the movements of a ceremonial dance; but [534 778] they went step by step, to the rhythm of those who beat [the drums] and sang, all of whom were standing, a little to one side of those who danced, near a circular altar which they called momoztli.

This chanting lasted until nightfall. Not only in the pyramid courtyards but in all the houses of the leading men and the common folk they beat [the drums] and sang with a great din until night. And [273] the old men and the old women drank wine; but no young man nor young woman drank it. And if [any] of them did drink it, they punished them sorely. Many other ceremonies were performed in this, which are [described] at length. Etc.

Cap. 9
Tlaxochimaco

1	d	KL	Tlaxochimaco	d	12
2	e		La noche antes desta fiesta ocupa-	e	13
3	f		uanse todos en matar gallinas y perros	f	14
4	g		para comer, en hazer tamales y otras	g	15
5	A		cosas concernientes a la comida: luego	A	16
6	b		de mañanita el dia desta fiesta: los	b	17
7	c		satrapas de los ydolos, componiã cõ	c	18
8	d		muchas flores a Vitzilobuchtli, y des-	d	19
9	e		pues de compuesta la estatua deste	e	20
10	f		dios: componjan las estatuas de los	f	21
11	g		otros dioses con gujrnaldas y sartales	g	22
12	A		y collares de flores: y luego cõponjan	A	23
13	b		todas las otras estatuas de los calpules,	b	24
14	c		y telpuchcales: y en las casas de los cai-	c	25
15	d		pisques y principales y maceguales,	d	26
16	e		todos componjan las estatuas que ten-	e	27
17	f		jan en sus casas coin flores	f	28
18	g		Compuestas las estatuas todos los	g	29
19	A		dioses: luego començauan a comer	A	30
20	b		aquellas viandas que tenjan aparejadas	b	31

de la noche pasada, y dende a vn poco despues de comer: començauan vna manera de bayle o dança: en la qual los hombres nobles con mugeres juntamente baylauan asidos de las manos y abraçados los vnos con los otros: echados los braços sobre el cuello el vno del otro: no dançauan a manera de areyte, nj hazian los meneos como en el areyte, sino yvan paso a paso: al son de los que tanjan y cantauan los quales estauan todos en pie, apartados vn poco de los que baylauan, cerca de vn altar redondo que llaman momuztli—

Durauа este cantar hasta la noche: no solo en los patios de los cues: pero en todas las casas de principales y maceguales, tañjã y cantauan con gran boteria hasta la noche: y los viejos y viejas beujan el vctli: pero njngun mancebo nj moça lo beuja: y si alguno lo beuja castigauanlos rezianmente. Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian en esta: que esta a la larga. Etc.

The tenth month they named Xocotl uetzi. On the first day of this month, they observed a feast to the god of fire, named Xiuhtecutli or Ixcoçauhqui. On this feast they cast into the fire, alive, many slaves, bound hand and foot, and before they had quite died, they took them forth, dragging [them] out of the fire, in order to tear out their hearts before the image of this god.

Al decimo mes llamauan Xocotl vetzi: En el primero dia deste mes, haziã fiesta al dios del fuego llamado xiuhtecutli o Jzcoçauhquj: en esta fiesta echauã en el fuego viuos muchos esclauos, atados de pies y manos, y antes que acabasen de morir, los sacauã arrastrando del fuego para sacar el coraçon delante la ymagen deste dios.

796X
805
776

Chapter 10
Xocotl uetzi

During the feast of Tlaxochimaco, they went forth into the forest [and] cut a tree of twenty-five fathoms' height and brought it, dragging it, to the courtyard of this god. There they pruned off all its branches and raised it upright, and it remained thus standing until the eve of the feast. Then they again laid it upon the earth with much caution and [using] many devices that it might not bump [the ground]. On the day before this feast, early in the morning, many carpenters came with their tools, and they trimmed it and made it very smooth. After having trimmed it and decorated it with many kinds of papers, they tied ropes and other cords to it and raised it up with much shouting and din, and they made it firm.

As soon as the beam or tree was raised and adorned with all of its finery, then those who had slaves to cast alive into the flames adorned themselves with their plumage and rich ornaments, and they stained their bodies yellow, which was the livery of fire; and, taking their captives with them, they performed a dance all that day, until nightfall.

After the captives had kept vigil all that night on the pyramid, and after having performed many ceremonies with them, they cast into their faces some powder which they call yiauhtli, that they might lose their sense of feeling and not suffer so greatly [the

Cap. 10.
Xocotl vetzi

1 c KL. Xocotl vetzi c 1[1]
2 d Durante la fiesta de tlasochimaco: d 2[2]
3 e yuã al monte cortauan vn arbol de al- e 3
4 f tura de veinte y cinco braças y trayanle f 4
5 g arrastrando hasta el patio deste dios: g 5
6 A alli le escamondauan todo, y le leuan- A 6
7 b tauan enhiesto y estaua asi enhiesto b 7
8 c hasta la vigilia vigilie de la fiesta en- c 8
9 d tonce le tornauã a echar en tierra cõ d 9
10 e mucho tiẽto y cõ muchos pertrechos e 10
11 f para que no diesse golpe: la vigilia f 11
12 g desta fiesta, bien de mañana venjan g 12
13 A muchos carpinteros con sus herrami- A 13
14 b ẽtas y mondauãle y hazianle muy liso. b 14
15 c Despues de mondado y de auerle com- c 15
16 d puesto cõ muchas maneras de papeles: d 16
17 e atauanle sogas y otros mecates y leuan- e 17
18 f tauanle con muchas bozes y muchos f 18
19 g estruendos y afixauanle muy bien. g 19
20 A Desque la viga o arbol estaua leuã- A 20[3]
tada y adornada cõ todos sus aparejos: luego los que tenjã esclauos para echar en el fuego viuos adereçauãse con sus plumajes y ataujos ricos: y tiñjanse el cuerpo de amarillo que era la librea del fuego y lleuando sus captiuos consigo: hazian areyto todo aquel dia hasta la noche.

Despues de auer velado toda aquella noche los captiuos en el cu, y despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas con ellos, enpoluorizauanlos las caras con vnos poluos que llamã yiauhtli: para que perdiessen el sentido, y no sintiessẽ tanto la muerte, atauanlos

796X
313
[483]
[463]
796X
[302]
[535]
[278]

1. Marginal notation: Despues de dios xeuj.
2. Marginal notation: Barrendi dibujo.
3. Marginal notation: Pari al viernes.

pains of] their death.

The eleventh month they named Ochpaniztli. On the first day of this month they celebrated a feast to the mother of the gods, named Teteo innan, or Toçi, which meaneth "Our Grandmother." They danced in silence for the honor of this goddess, and in great silence slew a woman dressed with the ornaments with which they represented this goddess.

Al vndecimo mes llamauan Ochpanjztli: El primero dia, deste mes, haziã fiesta a la madre de los dioses llamada Teteu inna o Toci, que quiere dezir nuestra abuela: baylauan a honrra desta diosa en silencio y matauan vna muger en gran silencio vestida con los ornamentos que pintauan a esta diosa. 796x [805 776]

Chapter 11
Ochpaniztli

Five days before this month began, all the feasts and merry making of the previous month ceased. Entering this month, they danced eight days without singing and without beating the two-toned drum. These past, there came forth the woman who was the likeness of the goddess whom they name Teteo innan, arrayed with the ornaments with which they pictured the same goddess; and a great number of women came forth with her, especially the medicine women and midwives. And they split into two bands and fought, pelting each other with balls made of tree parasites and from the leaves of the tuna cactus and with balls made from the leaves of reeds, and with flowers which they call cempoalxochitl. This merry making lasted four days.

These ceremonies and others of like kind ended, they brought it about that that woman should not know she was to die, so that she should neither weep nor be saddened; for they held that to be an omen of evil. The night when she was to die having fallen, they decked her very richly, and persuaded her that they were taking her so that some great lord might sleep with her; and they bore her in great silence to the pyramid where she was to die. Having taken her up, one [of the priests] took her upon his back, shoulder against shoulder, and swiftly they struck off her head, and then they flayed her. And a stout youth put on her skin.

This one who wore the skin of the woman whom they had slain they then bore off with great solem-

Cap. 11.
Ochpanjztli.

KL

Cinco dias antes que començasse este mes: cesauan todas las fiestas y regozijos del mes pasado entrando este mes, baylauã ocho dias sin cantar, y sin teponaztli: los quales pasados, salia la muger que era ymagen de la diosa q̃ llaman teteu inna, compuesta con los ornamẽtos con que pintauan a la mjsma diosa, y salian grã numero de mugeres con ella: especialmente las medicas y parteras: y partianse en dos vandos y peleauan apedreandose con pellas de pachtli y con hojas de tunas y cõ pellas hechas de hojas de espadañas, y con flores que llamã cempoalsochitl. Este regozijo duraua quatro dias.

Acabado estas cerimonjas y otras desta calidad: procurauan que aquella muger no entendiesse que auja de morir porque no llorasse nj se entristeciesse porque lo tenjan por mal aguero: venjda la noche en que auja de morir, atavjauanla muy ricamente, y haziãla entender que la lleuauan para que dormjesse con ella algun gran señor: y lleuauanla con grã silencio al cu, donde auja de morir: subida arriba, tomauala vno a cuestas espaldas con espaldas, y de presto la cortauan la cabeça, y luego la desollauan: y con mancebo robusto vestiase el pelejo.

Este que vestia el pelejo desta que matauan: lleuauanle luego con mucha solenjdad y acõpañan- [534 535] [754] [524 137] [787]

1. Marginal notation: September ha diez ans.

The fifteenth month they named Panquetzaliztli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of war, Uitzilopochtli. Before this feast, the priests of the idols fasted for forty days and performed other severe penances, like going naked at midnight to carry branches to the mountains. Etc.

Al quinzeno mes llamauan Panquetzaliztli: En este mes hazia fiesta al dios de la guerra Vitzilobuchtli: antes desta fiesta los satrapas de los ydolos ayunauan quarenta dias y hazian otras penjtencias asperas como era yr a la media noche desnudos a lleuar ramos a los montes. Etc.

796[x] [805] [776] [785]

Chapter 15
Panquetzaliztli

On the second day of this month all began to perform a dance and to sing the canticles of Uitzilopochtli in the the courtyard of his pyramid. Men and women danced, all together. They began these canticles in the afternoon, and they ended at nearly ten o'clock. These dances and songs lasted twenty days.

On the ninth day of this month, they adorned, with great ceremonies, those whom they were to slay. They painted them in various colors; they decked them in many papers. Finally they performed a dance with them, in which went a woman paired with a man, singing and dancing.

On the sixteenth day of this month, the owners of the slaves began a fast; and on the ninetreenth day, they began to perform a number of dances in which all, men and women, went grasping hands, and they danced winding back and forth in the courtyard of the aforementioned pyramid. A number of old men sang, and played [instruments] while the others danced.

After those who were to die had performed many ceremonies, there came down from the pyramid of Uitzilopochtli one attired in the ornaments of the god Paynal, and he slew four of those slaves in the ball court which was found in the courtyard which they called Teotlachtli. From there he departed and circled all the city, running; and in certain places he slew, in each one, a slave. And from that point [onward], two factions began a mock battle. Some died in the skirmishing.

Cap. 15.
KL. Panquetzaliztli.

1 e El segundo dia deste mes començauã
2 f todos a hazer areyto, y a cantar los can-
3 g tares de Vitzilobuchtli, en el patio de 4 A su cu, baylauan hombres y mugeres to-
5 b dos juntos: começauan estos cantares
6 c a la tarde, y acabauan cerca de las diez:
7 d durauan estos bayles y cantos veinte
8 e dias.
9 f
10 g A los nueue dias deste mes: apare-
11 A jauã cõ grandes cerimonjas a los que
12 b aujan de matar pintauanlos de diuersas
13 c colores, componjãlos con muchos pa-
14 d peles: al fin hazian vn areyte con ellos,
15 e en el qual vyan vna muger y vn hom-
16 f bre pareados cantando y baylãdo.
17 g A los dezisey dias deste mes: co-18 A mençauã a ayunar los dueños de los 19 b esclauos y a los dezinueue dias, comen-20 c çauan a hazer vnas danças en que yvan todos asidos de las manos hombres y mugeres, y dançauan culebreãdo en el patio del dicho cu, cantauã y tañjan vnos viejos entre tanto que los otros dancauan.

Despues de auer hecho muchas cerimonjas los que avian de morir decendian del cu de Vitzilobuchtli, vno vestido con los ornamẽtos del dios Paynal, y mataua quatro de aquellos esclauos en el juego de pelota que estaua en el patio que llamauã teutlachtli: de alli yva y cercaua toda la ciudad corriendo, y en ciertas partes mataua en cada vno vn esclauo: y de alli començauan a escaramuçar dos partialidades, murian algunos en la escaramuça.

796[x] 535 [302] 796[x] [535] [346] [726]

1. Marginal notation: Dedicatio Templi [illegible].

The seventeenth month they called Tititl. In this month they celebrated a feast to a goddess whom they named Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, and by [still] another name, Cozcamiauh. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman, and as soon as they had torn out her heart they struck off her head and performed a dance with it. He who went before carried the head by the hair, in his right hand, making [with it] the gestures of the dance.

Al mes decimo septimo llamauan Tititl. En este mes haziã fiesta a vna diosa que llamauã Jlamatecutli, y por otro nombre Tona, y por otro nombre cozcamjauh, a honrra desta diosa: matauan vna muger, y desque le aviã sacado el coraçon cortauanle la cabeça y hazian areyto con ella, el que yva adelante lleuaua la cabeça por los cabellos en la mano derecha, haziendo sus ademanes de bayle.

796X [805 776] [535]

Chapter 17
Tititl

This woman whom they slew in this feast they arrayed in the adornments of that goddess whose likeness [she was], called Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, which meaneth "Our Mother." This woman, thus bedight with the adornments [which are] set forth in the description, danced alone. A number of old men made music for her; and, dancing, she sighed and wept, mindful that soon she was to die. After midday, the priests arrayed themselves in the ornaments of all the gods, and went before her, and took her up to the pyramid where she was to die. Having stretched her out upon the sacrificial stone, they tore out her heart, and they struck off her head. Then one of those who went adorned as a god took [it], and, [with him] foremost, carrying it by the hair, they performed a dance with it. He who bore it in his right hand guided [them], and he made the dance gestures with it.

Cap. 17.
Tititl.

1	c	KL		c	19
2	d	A esta muger que matauan en esta		d	20
3	e	fiesta: componjanla con los ataujos de		e	21
4	f	aquella diosa cuya ymagen tenja que		f	22
5	g	se llama Jlamatecutli y por otro nom-		g	23
6	A	bre Tona quijere dezir nuestra madre		A	24
7	b	esta muger ansi compuesta con los		b	25
8	c	ataujos estan puestos en la historia,		c	26
9	d	baylaua sola: hazianla el son vnos vie-		d	27
10	e	jos, y baylando suspiraua y lloraua,		e	28
11	f	acordandose que luego auja de morir:		f	29
12	g	pasando el medio dia, componjanse los		g	30
13	A	satrapas con los ornamentos de todos		A	31
14	b	los dioses, y yvan delante della, y su-		b	1[1]
15	c	bianla al cu, donde auja de morir:		c	2
16	d	echada sobre el taxon de piedra, sa-		d	3
17	e	cauanla el coraçon, y cortauanla la ca-		e	4
18	f	beça, tomaua luego vno de aquellos		f	5[2]
19	g	que yva adornado como dios, y delan-		g	6
20	A	tero de todos y lleuandola por los ca-		A	7

796X 535

On the same day that the servants of the idols slew this woman, they performed certain mock-battles, and made merry, running—some behind the others—up and down the pyramid, enacting certain ceremonies.

El mesmo dia que matauã esta muger los minjstros de los ydolos, haziã ciertas escaramuças y regozijos: corriendo vnos tras otros el cu, arriba y el cu abaxo haziendo ciertas cerimonjas.

796X

On the next day, all the common folk made a number of sacks, like pockets, with some cords attached, as much as a fathom long. They filled those

El dia sigujente todos los populares hazian vnas talegas como bolsas, con vnos cordeles atadas tan largos como vn braço: hinchian aquellas talegas de

796X 565 524 [415]

1. Marginal notation: Jamaxtlon he dies away.

2. Marginal notation: Epiphanje domjnj.

The eighteenth month they named Izcalli. In this month they celebrated a feast to the god of fire, whom they called Xiuhtecutli, or Ixcoçauhqui. They made an image in his honor, with great artifice, which appeared to throw off flames of its own accord. And every four years, in this same feast, they slew slaves and captives in honor of this god. And they pierced the ears of all the children who had been born in those years, and they gave them godfathers and godmothers.

Al mes decimo octauo llamauan Izcalli: en este mes hazian fiesta al dios del fuego que llamauan Xiuhtecutli, o Jxcoçauhquj: hazian vna ymagen a su hõrra de grã artificio que parecia que echaua llamas de fuego de si: y de quatro en quatro años en esta mesma fiesta esclauos y captiuos matauan a honrra deste dios: y agujerauan las orejas a todos los njños que aujan nacido en aquellos años y dauanlos padrinos, y madrinas.

796X
[805
778]
776
[852
304
608]

Chapter 18
Izcalli

On the tenth day of this month they made a new fire at midnight, before the image of Xiuhtecutli, [which was] very curiously adorned. And, the fire having been lit, then, in the morning, the young men and boys came, and they brought various animals which they had hunted in the ten preceding days—some water [animals] and some land [animals]. And they offered them to the old men who were charged with safeguarding this god. And these cast into the fire all of those animals, so that they would cook. And they gave each one of these young men and boys a tamal made with amaranth, which they called vauhquiltamalli, which everyone in the city offered upon that day. All ate of these in honor of the feast day. They ate them very hot, and they drank and made merry.

On this feast, in ordinary years, they slew no one. But in the bissextile year, which was every four years, they slew, during this feast, captives and slaves and the impersonator of Xiuhtecutli, decorated in the manner which hath been told above, with many precious and curious adornments; they performed many great ceremonies upon the death of these [victims]—many more than on the other feasts already described. This is set forth at length in the account of this feast.

After they had slain these slaves and captives and the impersonator of Izcoçauhqui, who is the god of fire, all the leading men and lords, the illustrious, and

Cap. 18.
Izcalli

1 b KL
2 c A los diez dias deste mes: sacauã
3 d fuego nueuo a la media noche delante
4 e la ymagẽ de Xiuhtecutli muy curiosa-
5 f mente ataujada: y encendidos fuegos,
6 g luego en amaneciendo venjan los man-
7 A çebos y muchachos, y trayã diuersos
8 b anjmales que aujan caçado en los diez
9 c dias pasados vnos de agua, y otros de
10 d tierra: y offrecianlos a los viejos que
11 e tenjan cargo de guardar a este dios: y
12 f ellos echauã en el fuego a todos aque-
13 g llos anjmales para que se asassen: y
14 A dauan a cada vno destos moços y mu-
15 b chachos vn tamal hecho de bledos que 16 c ellos llamauã Vauhqujltamalli: los 17 d quales todo el pueblo ofrecia aquel dia,
18 e y todos comjan dellos por honrra de 19 f la fiesta, comjanlos muy calientes y 20 g beujan y regozijauanse.

b 8
c 9
d 16
e 11
f 12
g 13
A 14
b 15
c 16
d 17
e 18
f 19
g 20
A 21
b 22
c 23
d 24
e 25
f 26
g 27

[262]

En esta fiesta los años comunes no matauã a nadie: pero el año del bisexto que era de quatro en quatro años: matauan en esta fiesta captiuos y esclauos, y la ymagen de Xiuhtecutli, compuesta de la manera que arriba se dixo cõ muchos y preciosos y curiosos ataujos: hazian grandes y muchas cerimonjas en la muerte destos, muchas mas que en las otras fiestas ya dichas. Esto esta puesto a la larga en la historia desta fiesta.

Despues que aujan muerto a estos esclauos y captiuos, y a la ymagen de Jxcoçauhquj que es el dios del fuego: estauan aparejados y adereçados muy rica-×796 [535] the emperor himself were decked and arrayed very richly in costly adornments, and they began a dance of great solemnity and gravity which they called netecuitotiliztli, which meaneth "Dance of the Lords." This was performed only every four years, during this feast. On this same day, very early in the morning, before dawn, they began to pierce the ears of the boys and girls, and they applied to their heads a wig of parrot feathers, pasted on with ocotzotl, which is pine resin. Etc.

[535]

[304 291 825 314]

mente con ricos adereços todos los principales y señores y personas yllustres, y el mesmo Emperador: y començauan vn areyto de gran solemnidad y grauedad: al qual llamauan Netecujtotiliztli, quiere dezir: areyto de los señores: Este solamente se hazia de quatro en quatro años en esta fiesta. Este mesmo dia muy de mañana ante que amaneciesse començauã a agujerar las orejas a los njños y njñas: y echauãlos vn casquete en la cabeça de pluma de papagayos, pegado con ocutzotl que es resina de pino. Etc.

Then the mother of the young man placed a very fine shift upon her daughter-in-law, and put for her, by her feet, a richly embroidered skirt. And the mother of the young woman covered her son-in-law with a very fine cape, and tied it over his shoulder, and laid a very richly embroidered breech clout at his feet. This done, a number of old women, who are called ninci, tied the corner of the young man's cape to the lower part of the young woman's shift. In this way was concluded the marriage, with many other ceremonies, and dinings, and drinking, and dances, which were given thereafter, as is contained in the account of the marriages.

matrimonjo, con otras muchas cerimonjas, y comeres, y beueres, y bayles, que despues se hazian, como se contiene, en la historia del matrimonjo. 585 302 292

They observed two other feasts which in part were fixed and in part were movable. They were movable because they were celebrated in interpolated years. One was observed every four years, and the other every eight years. They were fixed because they had year, month, and day assigned. In the one which was celebrated every four years, they pierced the ears of the boys and the girls, and they performed for them ceremonies for good growth, and they purified them over the fire. In the one which they celebrated every eight years, they fasted before it for eight days on bread and water, and enacted a dance in which they assumed the forms or characters of various birds and animals. And they said that they sought good fortune, as is set forth in the appendix of the Second Book.

Otras dos fiestas tenjan, que en parte eran fixas, y en parte eran moujbles: eran moujbles, porque se hazian por años interpolados. La vna se hazia, de quatro en quatro años, y la otra de ocho en ocho años: eran fixas porque tenjan año, mes, y dia señalados. En la que se hazia, de quatro en quatro años, horadauan las orejas a los njños o njñas: y hazianlos, las cerimonjas, de crezca para bien, y lustrauanlos por el fuego. En la que hazian, de ocho en ocho años: ayunauan antes della, ocho dias a pan y agua, y hazian vn areyto, en que tomauan figuras, o personajes, de diuersas aues y animales: y dezian que buscauan ventura, como esta escrito, en el apendiz del segundo libro. 796 [304 854] [535 785]

These movable feasts, in some years, displace the feasts of the calendar, as also happeneth in our calendar.

Estas fiestas mouibles en algunos años echan de su lugar a las fiestas del kalendario: como tambien acontece, en nuestro kalendario.

"He is as my beloved father." And yet he might eat of someone else's captive.

And the captor kept the [captive's] skin for himself; he lent it to others. For twenty days the skin was carried by one person and another, worn for the entire feast. He who wore it gave everything given him, all that he had collected, to the captor. Afterwards [the captor] divided up [the gifts] among [all of] them. Thus he made use of his skin.

And when this was done, when they had finished with the gladiatorial sacrifice victims, then there was a dance and a procession about the round sacrificial stone, by all the impersonators [of the gods] and those who had fought the victims, all going ceremonially arrayed. In this way did they who did the slaying end [the ceremony]. All severally took with them the head of a captive, a sacrificial victim, and therewith danced. This was called "the dance with severed heads."

And the old wolf man grasped the rope [which had fastened the captives to the offering-stone] and raised it [as an offering] to the four directions. He went weeping and howling, like one bereaved; he wept for those who had suffered and died.

And also from the warring cities, from beyond [the mountains], those with whom there was war, were summoned, in secret, and came within, in secret, as Moctezuma's guests, the Nonoalca, the Cozcateca, the Cempoalteca, the Mecateca. [These ceremonies] were shown to them, and they were confounded. For thus they were undone and disunited.[24]

And when this feast was celebrated, it was when tortillas of uncooked maize were eaten.[25] Those who witnessed the ceremony carried tortillas of uncooked maize with them, when they went to look on, and they were eaten there.

And upon the next day, the third day of the feast, then began the bringing out [of the skins]. It was very late at night that it began at the great palace. The Tlatelulca began it, and ended it at the time of eating. These the priests replaced, adorned and dancing in a variety of different arrays, with butterfly nets and fish banners; with clusters of ears of qujtoa, ca iuhquj nopiltzin: Auh in malli, qujtoa ca notatzin: auh tel tepal qujquaia intemal.

796X [266]

Auh yn ieoaio qujmopialtiaia in tlamanj, qujtetlaneuhtitinemj, cempoalilhujtl ipan tlatlacoalo, nepapatlalo, yn onneaqujlo cemjlhujtl: yn aqujn onmaquja in quexqujch maco, in quexqujch qujnechicoa conmacatimanj in tlamanj, çatepan qujtexexelhuja, tetlatlamachia: ic qujtlaiecultia yn ieoauh.

[431]

Auh in ie iuhquj, yn ontlanque oaoanti, njman ic mjtotia, qujiaoaloa in temalacatl, yn izqujchtin teixiptlati, yn otlaoaoanque, mocencauhtiuj, çan iuh tlantiuj yn oiuh tetlatlatoque: muchintin cecentetl intlan ca ana, yn jntzontecon mamalti, in oaoanti, ic mjtotiuj: mjtoa, motzontecomaitotia.

796X 535

Auh in cujtlachuetue, contilinja in tonacamecatl, nauhcampa conjiaoa, chocatinemj, tehcoiouhtinemj, iuhqujn mjccaoati, qujnchoqujlia yn otlacotique, yn onmicque.

796X

Auh no ieboanti, yn iiaooan altepetl, tlateputzca, ynjn ca manca teuatl, tlachinolli, qujmonnotzaia ichtaca, oalichtacacalaquja, yn jcooaoan motecuçuma: yn nonooalca, cozcateca, cempoalteca, mecateca, tlattitiloia, tlamaujçoltiloia: njman ic xitinooa, necacaoalo.

796X 648

Auh yn jquac tlaoaoano, çan no iquac qualó, vilocpalli: in tlatlattaque vmpa conjtquj yn jnvilocpal, ymjttac ietiuh, vmpa qujquaquatoque.

[262]

Auh yn imuztlaioc, in ie ic eilhujtl: njman pepeoa in teq'qujxtilo, cenca oc hueca iooan in peoalo, in peoa, in vmpa vey tecpa: qujpeoaltiaia in tlatelulca, tlaqualizpan qujoalcaoaia: njman qujmonpatla tlamacazque, ynic muchichioaia, ynjc mjhtotiaia, çan tlanenel, çan nepapâ tlatqujtl, papalomatlatl, michpanjtl, ocholli, tnôcoiotl, tzoalli, tlachichioalli, xone-

796X 301

24. Durán (op. cit., pp. 175-80) says that Moctezuma I invited "los señores de todo la redonda"—Texcoco, Tlacopan, Cholula, Xochimilco, Coyoacan, Huitzilopochco, the Huaxtecapan, and as many more as possible. "Los señores de las provincias y ciudades," he continues, "admirados y asombrados de semejante sacrificio, partieronse para sus provincias y pueblos llenos de temor y espanto . . . dieron capitanes á las fronteras. . . . Donde estaban todos los de las provincias y ciudades comenzaron desavenencias de temor rendidosse ni conformdos con los mexicanos, viendo quebrantado estonces y abiertos muchos á sus corazones."

25. Ixtlilxochitl: "tortillas, como empanadillas, que hacian de maiz sin cocer," according to Sahagún's Spanish text. In Seler (op. cit., p. 74, n. 1) this is defined as the equivalent of maccamalacatlli—"das 'Boot in Gestalt einer Armbrustes'. . . . Es ese con Gebäck in Bootform, das ein eingeflochtenes, Zusammenhaltendes Maisfäbrmen, also ein Maiswebl, nicht ein Maiskuchen, hergestellt wurde."

X 796 301 maize;[26] with coyote heads made of a paste of amaranth seeds; with S-shaped tortillas and thick rolls[27] covered with a paste of amaranth seeds and with toasted maize on top; and red amaranth, which was really red feathers, and maize stalks with ears of green or tender maize.

X 796 ● 535 After midday, the priests rested. Thereupon the Tenochca and the Tlatelulca came together, two rows of Tenochca and two rows of Tlatelulca facing each other. All danced very slowly; the dance proceeded in harmony. Then all emerged, coming out of the palace gate, and all arranged themselves. Moctezuma came forth with them; he came dat dancing. At his right and left came two great princes, Neçauatlpilli of Texcoco and Totoquiuaztli, ruler of the Tepaneca. Great solemnity reigned as all danced.

And when it was already dark, when it was already night, all dispersed. Then began the singing and dancing [with interlocked hands];[28] there danced [701] the novice warriors, the chief warriors—those who had captured four captives or more, as well as those who had taken one or two. And these were named also young leaders. And also the princes danced. And likewise women danced with them—those known as [548] mothers, but only if they wished; they were not forced. And also immodest women, harlots.

And then all departed, when midnight was nigh, when trumpets had been blown. For twenty days it continued in this manner, until the Feast of Toçoztontli arrived.

cuijllaxcalli, teumjmjlli, çan no tzoalli ic qujpepechotoaia, qujmomochiotiaia panj: yoan oauhchichilli, çan tlapaliujtl catca, yoan cintopilli, eloio, anoço xiloio.

Yn omotzcalo tonatiuh, moceuja in tlamacazque, njman ie ic monepanuja, montlamanuja, in tenuchca in tlatilulca, vmpanti in tenuchca, no vmpanti in tlatilulca, mixnamjctiuj, cenca çan yujian, yn netotilo, cenca vel cocamantiuh in netotiliztli: njman oalqujxoa intecpa qujiaoac, oalneimanalo, oalteujca in motecuçoma, oalmjtotitiuh, qujtzatzacutiuitze, qujoalitzcatitiuj, vmentin veueintin tlatoque Neçaoalpilli tetzcuco, totoqujoaztli, tepanecapan tlatoanj: vel mauiztli oonoc in nehtotiloia.

Auh ie tlapoiaoa, ie tlaixcuecuetziuj in necacaoalo, njman ic peoa, in cujcoanolo, mjtotiaia in telpuchtequjoaque, teachcaoa, in nauj cacitinemj, yn anoce oc quezquijnti ymalhoan: yol in ce, vme, cacitinemj. Auh no motocaiotiaia hy, telpuchiiaque: no youn in tlatoque mitotia. Auh no tehoan in cioa mjtotia: mjtoa tenaoan, çan illo tlama, amo tequjuhtiloia: auh çan no ichoãtin yn aujianjme, in maaujltia.

Auh iquac necaoaloia, in ie hiciuhtiuh, ioalnepantla tlatlapitzalizpa: cempoalilhujtl, yn iuh tlamanca, yn juh tlamanja: vmpa onaci yn ipan toçoztontli.

26. Cf. Paso y Troncoso, op. cit., p. 189: ". . . es decir, las mazorcas de maíces que se guardaban para esa fiesta celebrada por mucho tiempo del año de las cañas."
27. See Anderson and Dibble (op. cit., p. 14). Possibly these resembled the wrapped tamale in Pl. 12.
28. Cf. Angel María Garibay K.: Llave del náhuatl (Otumba, Mexico: n. p., 1940), pp. 86, 219. Sahagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, says: "juntos trabados de las manos, juntos demonstrando como celebrando."

And when they were beheaded, they cast and threw them toward [the figure of] Uitzilopochtli.

And the quail, when their necks were wrung, went fluttering away, thrashing and striking the earth.

And the masters of the youths took them and gathered them up, stripped off the feathers, and roasted and salted them, seasoning them with salt.

Some they laid aside for Moctezuma, and the rest they assigned to his chiefs, only to the princes. And also to the masters of the youths, who marched in front, and also those [who were] priests.

And all took their large braziers—not their polished braziers. In them were coals and shavings of wood. They heaped it up, raised it, and made a hearth, and fired it with pine branches. And it burned exceedingly.

And they took white incense and coarse incense.[16] And when it was the proper time to offer incense, they laid coals in the incense burner and on it cast the white incense, and raised it as an offering to Uitzilopochtli.

Thus they offered him fire, they incensed him, not only here in the great temple but in their houses, and the tribal temples. Incense was offered all the gods whom they acknowledged.

And after they had dedicated the fire [and incense to the gods], then they cast the coals into the hearth [in the courtyard].

And the young women had painted their faces and were arrayed in red feathers.

And they fastened their sacrificial paper banners to canes. [The banners] were painted in black in what was called a scroll design.

And the rich [women and girls had] narrow cotton blankets thus fastened [to canes], likewise similarly painted with a scroll design.

And two masters of youths, with black paint spread on their faces, stood above and before the round fire vessel. Occupying the leading position, they carried on their backs pine wood cages with small paper banners; they carried them with tump lines which passed only across the chest.

They caused the women to begin the dance; they danced leaping, dancing in the fashion of women. And the women were in the middle, holding their sacrificial banners in both hands. They danced and

Auh yn iquac tlacotonalo, yujc contlaça yujc conmaiauj, in Vitzilopuchtli. 796X

Auh in çoçolti in oquechcotonaloque, tlapapatlatztinemj papatlacatinemj, tlalli ic moujujtequj, tlalli ic momomotla:

auh in teachcaoan qujnpepena, qujnnechicoa, qujnvihtlatla, qujntleoatza, qujmiztaioujia, qujmiztaioquauhoatza: [251 263] cequj qujtonaltia yn Motecuçoma, auh yn oc cequj qujntonaltiaia yn jtechiuhcaoan, çaniioque in pipilti. Auh no ichoantin in teachcaoan, tlaiacatique: no ichoan in tlamacazque, yoan muchi tlacatl qujtquja yapãtlecax, amo iehoatl in petztlecaxitl, vncan ietiuh tlexochtli, yoan tlaxipeoalli, contepeuhtitlalia, contlecauja, contlecujtia, ocotica contlemjna, vncan tlãtlãtla. [374]

Yoan qujtquja iztac copalli: yoã quauhiocopalli: auh yn iquac yn ieinman, in ie tlenamaco, in tlexochtli qujoaltema, tlemãco, ipan contepeoa yn iztac copalli, ic conjiaujlia yn Vitzilopuchtli:

ic qujtotonjlia, ic qujpopochuja, amo çanyio vncan in vey teupã, çan no yoan intechachan, intecacalpulco, popochujlo in ixqujchtin in teteuoan inpan qujnmatia.

Auh yn oconiauhque tletl njmã ie ic contema tlexicco:

auh in cioa ichpopuchti, moxaoaia, mopotonjaia tlapaliujtica: [302 237] yoan iztẽteuh acatica qujquappachoa, tlitica tlacujlolli, motocaiotia acaxilquj: [302 289] auh in motlacamati, canaoac ynjc qujquappachoa: çan no acaxilquj ynjc tlacujlolli:

Auh vmentin in tiachcaoã mixtlilpopotzque, haco manj, tlexictli ixpan, qujiacatitimanj ococalli in qujmama, amapapaiocatotonti, çan quelpanmama. [302] [417]

qujnpeoaltilia yn cioa in netotiliztli, ynic mjtotia chocholoa, çan mociosaitotia: auh in cioa çan tlattic in manj, yn jnteteuh coomemauja, qujtotitimanj, 796X 535

16. Thus identified in Seler, op. cit., p. 185.

796 leapt about. And the priests also danced. It was called "the leap in the month of Toxcatl."[17]

[535] There were paper rosettes fastened upon [the priests'] foreheads; they decked their heads with 796 white feathers. And they smeared honey on their 302 lips; their lips were gleaming. They had paper breech 293 clouts. And their black feathered staves had jackdaw [237] feathers in the form of a cup, and a round ball at the base, also of black feathers. The black feathered staves also were called black rain-bird [staves].[18]

And where they went grasping [the staves] were papers painted with black scroll designs. And these [priests], as they danced, made circles with, and struck, their black feathered staves on the ground.

796 And only in the tribal temples were those who beat the drums for them, seated upon the ground. [534] They beat the upright drums; they sat beating gourd rattles; they sat rattling gourd rattles and beating turtle shells.

796 And all the masters of the youths, the young 535 seasoned warriors, and the youths were spread out, dancing elsewhere [a dance] called the serpent dance.

And hence [they named what] was danced a serpent dance, because they moved back and forth, and from side to side, and met each other face to face. They went holding each other's hands as they danced.

[301] And also a number of young women danced, hav- 302 ing so vowed, a popcorn dance. As thick as tassels of maize were their popcorn garlands. And these they placed upon [the girls'] heads. And they were painted; down to the thighs were they bedecked with feathers. And [these] reached up to their upper arms. And they went mingling with and among those who danced.

796 Of these, it was said that they embraced, they em- 634 braced one; they embraced Uitzilopochtli. 635

And these girls were very well guarded, that none might covet them, nor ravish them.

And all who danced the serpent dance were well watched, that none might fall into covetousness.

And if anyone were seen seducing one [of the girls], then the masters of the youths threw him to the ground. They dragged him; they stepped upon him as he lay stretched out; they trampled upon him.

chocholotimanj: auh in tlamacazque no mjhtotia, mitos tozcachocholoa:

amaixquatechimaletimanj, amaixquatechimaleque, moquaquapotonja iztac totolivitica: yoan motetennecuvia tetentzotlantiuj, ymamamaxtli, yoan intzatzanatopil, tzanaivitl, in iuhquj ytecomaio, auh yn itzintelolosio, çan no tzanaivitl: no motocaiotia ycujtlacuchcho, in tzanatopilli.

Auh ynjc quitzitzqujtiuj, amatl acaxilquj, ynjc tlacujlolli: auh in ichoantin, hin, ynjc mjtotia, tlaiacoloa, ic tlaxixiltiuj yn jntzanatopil:

auh çan calpulco, in qujntlatzotzonjliaia, çan cacate ehematicate: çan tlalpan veuetl in qujtzotzona, aiacachotoque, aiacachquetztoque, aiotl qujtzotzona, aioujtectoque, aiochiuhtoque.

Auh yn ixqujch teachcaoan, in telpuchtequjoaque, yoan in telpopuchti, cecnj manj in mjtotia, moteneoa mococoloa.

Auh ynjc mjhtotia mococoloa, ichica aujc viujh, irrlapal viuj, mjxnanamiquj, in matitech maantiujh ynjc mjtotia.

Auh no cequjntin cioa ichpopuchti, mjtotia innetol, momomochiitotia: centzontecomatl ynjc tomaoac catca, ynmomochicozquj, yoan ymicpac contecatiuj, moxaoa, yoan in metztomaoaian aci, ynjc mopotonja, yoã ymacolpan onacia: intlan mamantiuj, intzatzalan mantiuj, in mjtotia.

Jn ichoantin hin, moteneoa tlanaoa, tenaoa, qujnaoa in vitzilopuchtli:

auh in ichoantin ichpopuchti, cenca vel pialoia, ynjc aiac qujmjxeleuiz, ynjc aiac qujncamanalhuiz.

Auh yn izqujchtin yn mococoloa, vel mopiaia ynjc aiac vncan moleuiz:

auh intla aca itto, tecamanalhuja: njmã tlalli ic qujujtequj, in teachcaoan, qujnujujlana, qujnitzilicça, qujmiicça:

---

17. Corresponding Spanish text: "salió e bailó de la forma de toxcatl"; Garibay (op. cit., p. 298) translates toxcachocholoaque as "se subió el sabio de Toxcatl."

18. Sahagún's Spanish text specifies only black feathers; cf., however, Robredo edition, Vol. III, pp. 162-3 and 187. The last-mentioned reference to tzanatl is: "Hay una ave que se llama tzanatl: es negra y tiene el pico corvo." Seler (op cit., p. 196, n. 2) calls tzanatl jackdaw or daw; or (ibid., p. 233) rook thrush. Of this and of cuitlacochin he says it is "ein Vogel, der gegen Ende der Regenzeit sich hören läßt und dessen Schrei, nach dem Glauben der Mexikaner, Landregen verkündete zuller. Ich habe den Namen dieses Vogels deshalb mit 'Regenpfeifer' übersetzt. Es sind auch die Vogel mit schwarzen schwarzen Gefieder gemeint sein wie das der tzanatl oder Dohlen." Sahagún (loc. cit.) merely explains: "y que eran llamados cuitlacochin, por razon de la burla, que llamaban dicen, en el tiempo." See also supra, p. 44.

And if anyone should stumble, if anyone went not there, if he loitered, for this he was detained.

And if there were any who tarried, if they made not haste, if any ceased walking, [if they] did not lay down their reeds with the others, for this they seized [such an one]; for this all [such] were then made captive.

And this was done for four days.

And in these four days, whosoever had been seized might well be freed, might well ransom himself; he might yet escape [in return for] perhaps a turkey, perchance a breech clout, mayhap a cape, or a magney fiber cape, or a small cotton manta.

And the poor, these ransomed themselves with a wooden plate with balls of dough.[15]

And all which was paid, all this, the captor, he who detained them, the accuser, took.

And upon the fifth day, on the day of the feast, one might no longer ransom himself; even though it were something very great [as a gift] that [one offered] to excuse oneself, no longer might he try.

And when the feast day [came], then all the common folk made cooked maize and beans for themselves—etzalli was made; everyone did so; [for] none did not prepare maize and beans for himself.

And when they were cooked, then they were eaten; they presented it to one another. Some thus feasted others.

And some who took their pleasure and some of the warriors danced; and they did thus only to divert themselves.

Thus were they adorned—they had circles about their eyes and carried their sheaves of dried maize. They kept going from house to house, singing and dancing the etzalli song. They went about bearing a handled jar, the etzalli jar, in their hands.

And thus they danced, sang, and chanted: "I do it; I do it. [Give me] a little of thy etzalli. If thou givest me none, I shall break a hole into thy house."

And the householders then offered them a measure of etzalli, and went to place it in the etzalli jar.

In fives, in sixes, in sevens gathered those who danced.

This etzalli dance began at midnight, and only at daybreak all dispersed, and it became quiet.

And when the sun arose, then was adorned the fire priest. He put on his sleeveless jacket; over it he placed his [thin, transparent, netted] cape, called the

Auh intla aca motlaujtequiz: yoan intla aca amo vmpa itztiaz, intla miscuepaz, ic axioa. 796X

Auh intla aca, amo qujcxiaci, intlacamo teicxiaci: intla aca icxicaoalo, yn amo tehoan contemaz acatl, ic caci, ic nemaltilo.

Auh ynjn naujlhujtl in muchioaia:

auh in naujlhujtl y, yn aqujque axioa, oc vel momaqujxtia, oc vel moqujxtia, oc vel maqujça: aço totolin yca, aço maxtlatl ica, aço tilmatli, aço ichtilmatli, aço tequachtli ica. [291]

Auh yn jcnotlacatl ichoatl in uentelolotli, ic moqujxtiaia, cen quauhxicalli:

auh yn jxquich nequjxtilonj, moch qujmocujlia in tlamanj, in teaci, in teacinj.

Auh in ie ic macujlilhujtl, in ie yquac ilhujtl, aocac vel moqujxtiaia, inmanel itla cenca vey ic moqujxtiaia, aocmo qujceliaia.

Auh in ie [illegible] ilhujtl, yn ixquich tlacatl macoalli, qujmochiujliaia etzalli, metzalhujaia, vel cenvetzi, aiac yn macamo metzalhujaia: [262] auh yn iquac oicucic, njman quaqualo, netech qujmomamaca, nepanotl ic mococoachioa.

Auh in cequjntin papaqujnj, yn ahaujcni: yoan in cequjntin tiacaoan, mamaceoa çan ic mellelqujxtia:

injc muchichioa mixteiniacaltia, incintopil, cacalactinemj in techachan, etzalnaacroa: intlan caantinemj zocujcolli etzalcomjtl.

Auh ynjc mamaceoaia queoaia. Yn naie yn naie tla achi in metzal, intlacamo xinechmaca, njmjtzcalxazpotlaz.

Auh in chaneque, njman qujcalmaca, cen tlaololli etzalli, contlaliciuj yn etzalcomjc:

cequj macujlli, cequj chiquacen, cequj chicome, mantinemj in mamaceoa.

Jnjn etzalmaceoaliztli, ioalnepantla in peoaia, çan ic tlatlalchipaoa, in necacaoalo, cactinemi, [535]

auh yn ocalquix tonatiuh, njman ic ic muchichioa in tlenamacac, conmaquja yn ixicol, pani conmololoa xistl, iaoca xiuhqueomjtl, anoço xochqueomjtl, [793 292]

15. "Delibar de masa" in Sahagún's Spanish text.

she walked, much did she rattle, clink, jingle, and tinkle.

And her sandals, her foam sandals,[6] [had] side pieces. The side pieces were of loose cotton yarn with flecks of raw cotton woven in, put in by hand. And the tassels on the sandals were similarly of loose cotton yarn. And the sandal thongs also were of the same loose cotton yarn.

And her shield had water lilies [and flowers];[7] i.e. was as if painted with a water lily leaf [and flower] design, [or] as if it had [that design], and was hung [also] with yellow parrot feather pendants.[8]

And the yellow parrot feather pendants were made [into tassels] like locust heads[9] [made of] eagle feathers and eagle down, and cut [pieces of] quetzal feathers and trupial[10] [feathers], and the red [and yellow wing feathers of the parrot] named tewzollotl;[11] and the shield [was] rimmed with a circle of yellow parrot feathers.

When she danced, she swung the shield around; it was swung in a circle.

And her reed staff was hung with paper spattered with rubber; it had rubber. In three places it had vase-like flowers, and there in the vase-like flowers was incense. On each of the three were [crossed] feathers; they were provided with [crossed] feathers.

When a dance was held, she walked leaning on it and thrusting it into the ground; she went marking the dance rhythm with it.[12]

And for ten days they sang [and danced] in the manner of women. All gathered together and took their places, the salt people and the salt-makers—the old women, the mature women, the maidens, and maidens recently matured.

While yet there was sun, while it yet shone, then they began to dance. They went arranged in order, each in his place, in rows; they held one another with onoc coiolli: yn iquac nenemj cenca yxaoaca, yxamaca, xaxamaca, tzitzilica, tzitzitzilica, 796x [301]

yoan ycacac ipoçulcas, yn icacnacaz, in cacnacaztli, icpatl potonquj inic tlaqujtli, ynjc tlamaiqujtli: auh yn icacuochio, çan no ie in potonquj: auh yn jcacmecaio, çan ie no ic yn potonquj: 796x 292

yoan ichimal atlacueçonaio, tlaatlacueçonaoicuilolli, atlacueçonanjcujliuhquj, toztlapilollo: 796x 293

Auh in toztlapilolli, yn jiacachapullo muchioa, quauhyujtl, quanmoloctli, yoan quetzalpoztectli, yoan çaquan, yoan xollotl, matlatlauhquj, motocaiotia teuxollotl, toztenoloio in chimalli. [237]

In iquac mjtotiaia, qujmamalacachoa yc jchimal, ic momamana: [535]

yoan yoztopil tlaamaiotilli, haamaio, yoan tlaulhujlli, vllo: ezcan in tecomaio, tetecomaio: auh yn vncan tetecomaio, vncan mamanj yiauhtli, tziuhtli yn ipan mamantiuh, tzitziuhio: [314]

in iquac mjtotia, ic motlaquechitinemj, qujtitilquetztinemj, ic ontlayiauhtiuh. 796x 535

Auh matlaqujlhujtl, in qujcioapancujcatiaia, ixqujchtin cenqujça, qujcecencaoa yn iztatlaca, yn iztachiuhque: yn jlamatlaca, yoan yn jniolloco cioa, yoan ichpupuchti, yoan in ie ichpupuchchicacti: [463]

oc vnca in tonatiuh, oc tona in peoa mjtotia, tecpantiuj, tetecpantiuj, motecpana, motetecpana mecatica, motocaiotia xochimecatl ynic maana, ynic

6. Cf. ibid., p. 4, n. 32.

7. "Waterrose," in Seler, op. cit., p. 132. The shield design in the same as her Nuppe sandal (cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 21). Sahagún's Spanish column reads: "Traya una rodela pintada, con una agua anchas, de la yerba que se llama ahuaxpan." In Vol. III of the Rebolledo ed., p. 156, in Dr. Mariño León's essay, "Ensayo de nomenclatura e identificación de las láminas 98 a 138 (Núm. 368 a 905) del libro XI, de la 'Historia de las Cosas de Nueva España' escrita por Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún," ahuaxpan is defined as "cabeza de negro. Nymphaea elegans, Bland, Nimphéacées."

8. "Otra manera de papagayos llamaos xoxoli y con unos cuernos cuando ya son grandes y redondos y crecos; estaban tirados los plumas muy amarillas y resplandecientes; estaban redondos como circulando en ellos, unos papagayos como rodeados amarillos, y por esto le llamaos xoxoli, que quiere decir cosa muy amarilla" (Sahagún, Rebolledo ed., Vol. III, p. 166).

9. "Con flores en los cabos, hechas de plumas de aguila" (Sahagún, corresponding Spanish text). Chapulín, however, may be an element in flaxchapulín.

10. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 18, n. 103.

11. "Otra manera de papagayos hay que llamaos xoxoli (y) es muy amarillos al que llamaos tozzoxoc; tiene el pico amarillo y corvo, la cabeza colorada, y todos los plumas del cuerpo redondos, los redondos y todo lo exterior de los alas, tiene colorado oscuro, mezclado con amarillo; las plumas pequeñitas que están sobre la cerca del ala que llamaos xoloxoli, son amarillas mezcladas de colorado; el sello, como pelo redondo, que tiene cerca de la cola y cerca de las alas, es colorado mezclado de amarillo" (Sahagún, Rebolledo ed.; Vol. III, p. 166).

12. Cf. Anonimo (Sandoval, op. cit.: "Iaiere corriendo quatro en derrenar"). In Sahagún's corresponding Spanish: "Cuando bailaba era al arrojar, pasaba arrimando al hombro, y almendado [sic] a arrojar del hombro."

87

1 A [i.e., the god(dess) of the salt-makers, Uixtociuatl. – Analyst]

X 796 cords, called flower cords, and thus went stretched out in line. They went with wormwood flowers[13] placed upon their heads.
● 535

motitilinjtiuj: ym jhiztauhiaxochiuh, ym icpac contecatiuj:

[533] And they went singing, crying out loudly, singing in a very high treble. As the cenzontli bird takes [its song, so was] their song. Like a bell their voices [rang out].

yoan cujcatiuj, cenca tzatzi, cenca tlapitzaoa: iuhqujn tzontli cana incujc: iuhquj in coiolli intozquj:

The old men led [the singing women]; they loosed the song and went directing them—the men and elders of the tribal temple. And they were named keepers of the god[dess].

qujniacana in ueuetque, cuicatlaça qujncujcatlaxilitiuj, in calpuleque, in calpulueuetque: yoan motocaiotia teuoaque.

And [the likeness of] Uixtociuatl went in the midst of them. Before her went a brilliant feather ornament which an old man carried in his arms. And this [ornament] was called Uixtociuatl's brilliant plumage.[14]

Auh in Vixtocioatl, tlanepantla icatiuh, ce petlacotl qujiacana, ce tlacatl veue in qujnapalca: auh ynjn mitoaia vixtopetlacotl.

And for [the likeness of] Uixtociuatl was sung the women's song every day until all ten days had been reached. And when the tenth day had come to pass, that night she began her vigil. They sang [and danced] all night. At no time did they rest; they passed the night sleepless. Thus they passed the night in vigil.

Auh in ichoatl vixtocioatl, momuztlae in qujcioapancujcatiaia, yn ixqujchica matlaqujlhujtl onaci: auh yn oacito matlaqujlhujtl, teuitlacpa im peoa qujtoçauja, qujcujcatia iuh ceiooal, aquenman cochi, acochiztli qujmochioaltia, iuh vetzi in ioalli.

And as [the impersonator of] Uixtociuatl danced, the old women seized her and held her as they made her dance.

Auh in Vixtocioatl, mitotia caana, caantinemj yn ylamatque in qujtotia:

Likewise the captives danced all the night—those who would come first, who would die [first], as her fundament; those whom they would make her fundament.

no iuh ceiooal in mjtotia mamalti, in iacatiazque mjquizque, in iuhquj ypepechoan ieaque, in qujnmopepechtizque.

X 796 And when dawn broke, when verily the feast day [came], then were arrayed the priests who would slay the victims. These were called Uixtoti. They were adorned and painted like Uixtotin; they were painted with the face painting of Uixtotin. They carried their paper neck rosettes and their paper shoulder rosettes. And their [head] insignia were made [like] the claws of eagles, [made] of quetzal head feathers and eagle down.
782

Auh yn oilathujc, yn iquac ie vel ilhujtl, mec muchichioa in tlamacazque, in tlamictizque: in iehoan y, motocaiotiaia Vixtoti, movixtochichioa, moujxtoychioa, intlatlaquechpaiouh, yoan ymaamacuexpal: auh yn jntlauiz, quaviztitl muchioa, quetzaltzontecomaio quãmolocio.

And the legs of the eagle were also made of eagle down. These insignia [were supported] upon wooden head rests with holes [in the head rests, in which the insignia were inserted]. Here lay the insignia, tied [across the back], bound around the stomach with cotton bands, tied firmly and tightly. And their cords were bands, narrow woven bands.
X 796
293

Auh in quauhtli imetz muchioa, no quãmolocio, ynjn tlaviztli cácacazo, côçocoio, yn vncã onmana tlauiztli, ic maapana, ic motixillancujtlalpia, ic motetevilpia, ic mocacatzilpia: auh yn jmecaio, yn jmemecaio, tlaxochtli, tlaxochpitzactli.

And all the common folk who looked on, all car-

Auh in jxqujch tlacatl macoalli, in tlatlatta, mu-

[137]

13. Cf. p. 83, n. 27. Simeon (op. cit.) defines it as ornamento lacinioso; see, further, note 15, below. Molina (op. cit.) has "Tzontlapal. ornamento o ramaiete pequeño"; Sahagún (loc. cit.) has the same. See also Rehnquist ed., Vol. III, p. 252.

14. "Un plumajo muy hermoso, hecho a manera de manga de cruz" (Sahagún, corresponding Spanish).

a band] from ear to ear, which was called "black sweat," and they also applied pyrites [to it]. And some extended a black [stripe], called "a plaster of rubber," to their faces, and also it was sprinkled with pyrites.

And thus was their hair shorn: All were shorn like young warriors; together, all were shorn alike in the manner of young warriors. And those who had their temples closely cropped, were well shaven down, well scraped clean with a sharp piece of turtle shell. And they applied yellow ochre to their [remaining] hair; they colored it the color of maize flowers.

And thereupon, when they danced, they carried before them torches, pine fire brands, which flamed with much crackling and hissing. And as they carried them, the leaders of the youths [went] squatting because of the burden, as if running with thighs bent. And the resin, as it were, fell in large drops, and the live coals scattered and fell one by one. And the [charred] pine wood fell bit by bit to the ground.

And along the sides the lighting was only from fire ladles held in the hand. They who gave light were youths who had fasted twenty days. They were spread out in a circle, ranged on the sides. On one side were those of Tenochtitlan, and on the other side were those of Tlatilulco.

And they did not dance; they did only one thing —they only provided light. And they were on guard and kept close watch on people; their office was to be attentive that none might dishonor a woman; that none might look upon a woman, lest one might jest [with a woman].

If anyone was seen even only intending it, or trying it, maybe later—next day or two days hence—they punished him. They beat him with flaming pine boughs.[6] Verily, they left him for dead.

And when all were dancing, sometimes Moctezuma emerged and came forth to dance, and sometimes he came not forth. Only if he wished he did so.

And that they might go in line when they danced, they held one another by the hand or about the waist.

And some they grasped by the hand; all grasped hands. And thus they kept on with their feet, that they might take the dance steps all together with their feet. And they whirled about repeatedly; and they passed by the braziers, proceeding among [them]. They went back and forth among the rows of braziers. When they had reached the end [of the no ca petzujaia, auh in cequjntin imixtlan caana tilli: itoca sujtolli no ca petzuja. 796x 302

Auh ynic motimaia, muchintin motiachcauhximaia, cenuetzia in motiachcauhximaia: yoan yn incanaoacan qujconaloaia, vel qujcoconaloaia, vel caiochiquja: yoã qujtecoçãnujaia, qujtomjiolhujaia. [714]

Auh in ie iuhquj yn iquac ie mjtotia, tlepilli, ocopilli, qujniacana tlatlatiuh, cuecuetlacatiuh, cocomocatiuh: auh in qujnapalos telpuchtequjoaque cenca eticiuj, iuhqujn tzitziqtlacça: auh yn ocotzotl, iuhqujn chachapaca, yoan in tlezochtli tetepeuhtiuh, cecenmantiuh: yoan in ocotl calichachaiaca. [373] [516]

Auh in tlatenco, çan matlematica in tlaujlo: iehoantin in tlaviaia telpopuchti, in mocempoalçauhque, tlaiaoalotimãca, ixtlapantimanj: cectlapal manj in tenochca, no cectlapal manj, in tlatilulca. [785]

Auh amo mjtotia, çan qujxcaujaia, çan ixqujch tetlaujliaia: yoan tlapicia, vel teixpiela, vel ymix intequjuh catca, ynic aiac ytla vncan qujmotequjtiz, ynic aiac vncan teixtlaxiliz, yn açaca vncan vetzcatiuh: [834]

intla aca oittoc, çan oc conjxxotia, coniximati, açoqujn jmoztlaioc, anoço qujn iviptlaioc, in qujtlatzacuiltia, qujujujtequj ocoquauhica, tlàtlatlatiuh, ca micquj in qujcaoa. [684]

Auh yn iquac netotilo, in Motecuçoma, in quenmanjan, oalqujçaia, oalmjtotiaia: auh in quenmanjan amo oalqujçaia, çan yiollo tlamatia: 796x 535 auh ynic tecpantiuj, in mitotia, monaoa, mocujtlanaoa.

Auh in cequjntin, inmatitech maana, nematitech neaano: auh ynic qujiauhtiuj, yn imicxi, ynic tlayiaoa, çan cenizuh yn imicxi: yoan ontzitzinqujça, itlan qujqujztiuj in tlaujltetl, itzalan quiquiztiuj, itic cacalactiuj, yn ixqujpantli tlaujltetl: yn oacito yn

6. See Plate 22.

X 796 space], once more they circled back and returned [whence they had started].

● [535] And when it all ceased, already it was late at night,
[512] already time for all to sleep, as when one noddeth; today [that would be] at about the ninth hour.

[534] And when all had stopped, when the ground drum was undone, then all dispersed, all went, all betook themselves to their homes. The great noblemen, [373] when it was done, were accompanied by torches; they went lighted by torches, carried for them, to their homes.

And the women who had danced then were assembled, after there had been the song and dance, and they led them off. Even so was done with the leaders of the youths. They gathered [the women] together, grouped them, rounded them up, placed them together, assembled them, hunted them out,—lest they might go off somewhere, lest someone might accompany them, lest some debauched youth might go with [one of them].

[565] None the less, the noblemen addressed the matrons, that they might go and release some [of the women] or go and leave [one]. Not of their free will did [the women] go elsewhere; it was done on persuasion.

[431] And when they released them, [the girls] were given presents. Gifts were given, and food was given. And likewise, favors were offered the leaders of the women, the matrons. They kept for themselves and carried that which they saved to their homes.

X 796 And the young warriors, the young warriors who 836 had distinguished themselves, who were worthy of honors, made their plea for the women only in 684 secret, not before others; perchance in his home [such an one] awaited her, perchance elsewhere he called her. Just so, they ate privily.

[548] And the woman came forth only at night and spent only the night [with him]; she departed when it was well into the night.

And if one was noted living in concubinage, thus he aroused anger; thus he gave offense. For this all assembled and held council there in the song-house.

Here, before everyone, they punished him. Because of [his crime] they cut off his warrior's hair dress; they took from him all his belongings—his [831] adornment, his lip plug. Thereafter, they beat him sorely with a pine stick, verily causing him to swoon; they singed his head with fire; smoke rose, and blisters formed on his body.

And when they had indeed caused him to swoon, then they cast him forth.

vmpa tlantoc, oc cepa momalacachoa, in cujtlaujc, oalmocuepa.

Auh in necaoaloa, ie tlaquauhioua, ie netetequizpan: yn iuh mixtlaztlia azcan aço ie chicunauj ora.

Auh in ie ixqujch, yn onecacaoaloc, yn ompet veuetl, mec cecenmanoa, viujloa, yn ixqujchtin viuj yn inchachan: in veuei pipilti, onca caoalo, tlavilpan, tlaujlilotiuj, qujntlatlaujlitiuj yn inchan.

Auh yn cioa yn otenaoaque, njman mocentlalia, in ie oncujcoianoloc, in qujiacana, yn iuhq' yn tiachcaoan muchioa, qujnnechicoa, qujntecpichoa, qujmololoa, qujncenquixtia, qujcentecpichoa, vel qujmixpepena, yn ma aca canapa ia, yn ma aca motsujcalti, in ma aca telpuchtlauelilloc qujujca:

tel in pipilti, qujmonilhujaia in cioa tlaiacanque, ynic cequjntin qujncaoatiuj, tecaoatiuj: amo çan moiocoiaia yn canapa via, tetencopa muchioaia.

Auh yn ontecaoaia, vmpa motlauhtiaia, vmpa tlauhtiloia, yoã vmpa tlamacoia: auh no tlatlauhtiloia, in cioatachcaoan, in cioatelacanque, motlacauja, motlatlacauja, quitquj yn inchachan innetlacaujl.

Auh in teachcaoan, inteachcauh, tlaiacatia, in mauiztililonj, çan ichtaca in qujnnaoatia cioa, amo teixpan, aço ichan in qujchietiuh, anoço canapa in qujnaoatia: çan iuhquj, yn ichtacaquaia.

Auh in cioatl, çan oalioualqujça, çan moiooalpoloa, oc ueca ioan in qujça:

auh intla aca ittoz, in momecatitinemj, ic tlaqualanjaia, ic tlaiolitlacoaia, ica necentlalilo, yca nenonotzalo, in vncan cujcacali:

vncan teixpan qujtlatzacujltia, ic qujtzotzocoltequj, muchi qujcujlia in ixqujch ytlatquj, yn inechicltiloal, yn itempilol: çatepan qujujujtequj, ocoquauhtica, vel qujhiiocaoaltia, qujquatlechichinoa, tlẽtlecaleoa, haaquaqualaca, yn inacaio.

Auh yn ouelqujhijocaoaltique, yca oalmaiauj:

1796 wind. And the fourth place which she entered was over there at Xolloco. [And] there she stopped.

805 [For] these were a part of, and carried together, the four year-bearers—Reed, Flint, House, and Rabbit. Thus do the year-bearers go describing circles, whirling around [as a measure of time].

1796 When, at early dawn, Xilonen was to die, all during the night songs were sung after the manner of the women. Vigil was kept. Everyone passed the night watching; they slept not; the women remained [533] sleepless. They sang the songs [of Xilonen].

And when day broke, then began the dancing. Verily, everyone—the leaders of the youths, the lead- [552] ing warriors, and the valiant warriors bore maize stalks. These were named "bird banners."

1796 Likewise the women danced—those who were with Xilonen. They were pasted with red feathers. ● 535 And their faces were painted with yellow ochre. Also 793 they colored their faces in two colors: about their lips they were yellow with ochre, and their fore- [302] heads were stained with the red of anatta seeds.[8] [They bore] their wreaths of flowers upon their [301] heads, and the leaders had garlands of the yellow flowers of the Caryophyllus mexicanus [about their necks].[9]

These women were known as priestesses. They mingled not with the men, but remained at one side. They went describing circles, and enclosing Xilonen. They sang for her after the manner of women. These women were called "the hanging gourd."

And the warriors danced before [Xilonen], following a serpentine course.

1796 And for this reason were [the women] known as "the hanging gourd": the two-toned wooden drum, 793 which they beat as they went, had tied to it a gourd, [534] which was under the drum, which looked as if it were hanging beneath. They who struck the two-toned drum went carrying a little drum under their arms, which they beat, as they went, with rubber-tipped drum sticks.[10]

And the priests, [who] attended them, went blow- [534] ing horns; they blew shell trumpets as they went. And they went strewing, scattering, and casting incense as they went to meet Xilonen.

And the fire priest, who was to slay [Xilonen] as ecatl: ynic nauhcan aquja, vmpa xolloco, vmpa ontzonqujçaia, çã qujtocticiaia, çan qujujcaltiaia, yn nauhtetl xiuhtonalli: yn acatl, in tecpatl, in calli, in tochtli, ynic tlaiaoalotiuh, ynic momalacachotiuh, in xiuhtonalli.

In ie iuh ioatzinco miquiz in Xilonen: ceiooal in cioapan cujcoia, toçooaia, muchi tlacatl ixtoçooaia, amo cochia, mocochiçoloaia in cioa, queoaia queviliaia yn icujc.

Auh yn ie otlatujc, njman ic peoa in netotilo, vel ixqujch tlacatl in tiachcaoan, in telpopuchti, yn iiaque, yoan in tequjoaque, incicintopil: ynjn motocaiotia totopanjtl.

No mjtotia in cioa, yn itechpouja in xilonen, mopopotonjaia tlapaliujtica: yoan moxaoaia tecoçauhtica: no ic qujcotona, yn inxaiac, yn jntenco, tecoçauhtica: auh yn imixquac tlapalachiotica, ymjicpacxochiuh, inxoxochicozqui cempoalxuchitl yiacatiuh.

Yn iehoã yn, cioa, moteneoa cioatlamacazque, amo qujmonneloa yn oqujchti, çan nonqua mantiuj, cololujtiuj, qujtepeujtiuj in Xilonen: qujcioapãcujcatitiuj: in iehoantin y, cioa moteneoa tecomapilooa.

Auh in tiachcaoan ixpan mjtotitiuj, mococolotiuj:

auã ynic moteneoa tecomapilooa, ca in teponaztli in qujujtectiuj, itech çaliuhtiuh in atecomatl, yhicampa itepuxtzco ietiuh in teponaztli, iuhqujn pilcatiuh ic neci: in teponaçoa çan qujciacaujtiuh in teponaztontli in qujujtectiuh olmatica.

Auh in tlamacazque, tenanamjquj tlapitztiuj, tecciztli in qujpitztiuj: yoan yn iauhtextli in qujpipixotiuj, qujcecenmatiuj, qujtetepeuhtiuj, conjxnamjctiuj in Xilonen.

Auh in tlenamacac, in tiamjctiz, vel mocencaoa,

---

8. Bixa orellana L., the annatto shrub (Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 6). Cf. also Seler, op. cit., p. 151.

9. "Estas flores que se llaman cempoalxóchitl, son amarillas y de buen olor" (Rodrigo ed., Vol. III, p. 273). Tagetes, in Seler, loc. cit. See also p. 99, n. 15.

10. Clark (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 93, n. 2), writing of the tlamacazque cuicacinimi (chanting priests), says "The player is called the teponazqui, and the drum, teponazcoli. Made from the hollowed-out trunk of the Lonacrus ovalvata Bentb. this drum has two notes; the rubber-headed drum-sticks are of elder." Cf. also Sahagún's description of the tongue on the bottom (corresponding Spanish text).

X 796 and hung rows of all the varied flowers, the most beautiful flowers, the threaded ones.

778 Then flowers were offered to all the rest of the gods, to the images of the gods, [or] devils. They were adorned with flowers; they were girt with [garlands of] them; flowers were placed upon their heads, there in the temples.

Thereupon all together, in all the houses, the homes of the majordomos, the homes of the great noblemen, and the houses of the youths, they laid flowers out [before the idols]. And they spread them out in the homes of each and all.

X 796 And afterwards, when each had been orn amented, then there were feasting and drinking. Everywhere, ● 535 everyone ate; all were in a festive mood.

And when midday came, then all sang and danced —verily, they drew up all the youths; the masters and the leaders of the young men, the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí.[3] Here in the god's courtyard there was dancing—in the courtyard of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli.

[701] And those who led [the dance] were the fearless warriors, the great warriors, each of whom was considered [equal to] a battle squadron, who were not laggards in war; who turned [the enemy] back, [whose exploits] wheeled them hence.

[548] Also the women danced—not the daughters [of onlookers, but] courtesans, harlots—who went between [pairs of the men], they were [all] stretched in a row, taken by the hand or grasped about the waist. They moved all in line they went winding to and fro, nowhere breaking the line, at no time losing hands. They went in orderly procession.

[533] And the singers, who sang for them, who beat drums for them, who beat the ground drums, were quite apart [from the dancers]—to one side; they were upon a [counterfeit] house, upon the round

[778] altar [or pyramid].[4] And the altar was completely round, round like a shield, like a millstone. And here, upon this, stood [the musicians].

And thus they danced: they did not leap, nor make great movements; they did not make dance gestures; they did not move throwing themselves about, nor dance making arm-movements, nor go bending their nepapan xuchitl, in tlaçoxuchitl, in manquj, in tlamantli:

njman ie ic tenuchimaco, centetzi in inqujchtin tetetu, yn imixiptlaoan tetzu, tlatlacatecuilo, tenuchitilo, tenuchiapano, tricpacxuchitilo, in vncan in tetcupan:

njman ie ic centetzi in noujan calpan, in calpixque inchan, in veuei pipilti inchan: yoan in tetelpuchcali, quicentzacutimanj, quicentzacutimomana in techachan.

Auh in ie iuhquj yn otecencaoaloc mec tlatlaquaio, haatlioa: noujan tlatlaquaio, yillnjtlamacho.

Auh yn oacic nepantla tonatiuh mec cujcoiansolo, vel inqujch quicencaoa, in telpuchtli, in teachcaoan, in telpuchiaque, in tequjoaque, in quaquachictin, in otomj: vncan in netotilo in teuitoalco, yn itoalco Vitzilopuchtli.

Auh in teiacana, ichoantin in quaquachicti, in veuei tiacaoã yn iuhquj cecentecuti momatia, yn amo mitzacujlia iaoc, in tecuepanj, in temalacachoanj.

No ichoantin in cioa mjtotiaia, amo ichoan in teichpuchoan, ichoantin in mahaujltianj, yn aviaxnjme intzatzalan mantiuj, inmatitech maantiuj, mocujtlanaoa, çan cenpanti, çan cenpantitiuj, mococolotiuj, acan cotonj, acan momacaoa vipantiuj.

Auh in cujcanjme, in quincujcatia, in quintlatzotzonjlia, quinuetzotzonjlia, çan nonqua, çan chico, caltech in manj, emomoztitech: auh in momoztli, çan iaoaltic, teujlacachtic, malacachtic, yn jtech, yn itlan manj.

Auh ynic mjtotia, amo chocholoa, amono ontlayiaoa, amo ontlayiauhtiuj, amo motlatlaztiuj, amo

[701]

3. Here and elsewhere, the following equivalents are offered: quaquachictli—fearless warrior; tulpochtli—youth; tlacochcalcatl—master of the youths; tulpochtlato—ruler of the youths; tulpochtlapipiltzin—leader of the youths; tequixiui or yaotequixiui—seasoned warrior. To a degree, such definitions are, perhaps, arbitrary. The suggested equivalents, however, are based upon the following passages from Sahagún (Robredo ed.): Vol. I, p. 292, and Vol. II, pp. 137, 207 (quaquachictin, tequixiuiqui); Vol. I, pp. 131, 148, 182, 199, 215, 289, 291, and Vol. II, p. 182 (tulpochtli); Vol. I, pp. 148, 291, and Vol. II, pp. 318, 319 (tlacochcalcatl); Vol. I, p. 291 (tulpochtlato); Vol. II, p. 321 (yaotequixiui). See also Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 94, on otomi and quaquachictli; pp. 89, 116, on tlacochcalcatl, tulpochtlato; Vol. II, pp. 92, 95, 96, 136 on tequixiui or yaotequixiui; Garibay (Llanto del anáhuac, p. 243) on tulpochtli; Soler, op. cit., p. 158 (tulpochtlato), p. 144 (tequixiui), pp. 144, 158 (tulpochtlapipil).

4. Cf. Soler, op. cit., p. 158.

X 1796
535 bodies nor whirling, nor wander from side to side, nor fall back.

Quite quietly, calmly, evenly, they kept going as they danced. Like a moving serpent was the dance. None disturbed, none intruded, none went out of place nor broke in.

And the women danced with arms about only the great,[5] brave warriors. And those who were only masters of the youths, not with [the women] did they dance, embracing them [about the waist].

And when all ceased dancing, only a little sun remained. When the sun was about to set, all dispersed and departed, each to his place.

And in all the houses there was singing. They sang to their gods—either Omacatl, or Chicome coatl, or Ehecatl, or Coatl Xoxoubqui. Everywhere there was song; song was widespread; war cries resounded; there were battle cries as song was sung; a great din of singing re-echoed.

[273] And only the revered old men and old women drank wine. And those who became drunk cried out at people or boasted of their manly deeds.[6] momaitotitiuj, amo mopapachoa, amo momamalacachotiuj, amo aujc onviuj, amo tzitzinquiça:

çan yujian çan matca, çan tlamach yn istiuj, yn mjtotitiuj: cẽca çan coamantiuh, coanotiuh in netutiliztli, aiac tlaolinja, aiac tlaamana, aiac tlepcionja, aiac tlaixnelos.

Auh in-cioa in q'nnaos, çan ichoantin in veuey tiacaoan: auh in çan tiachcaoan, amono ichoãtin, amo qujnnaoaia.

Auh in necaoalo in netotilo, ça achi tonatiuh, ie oncalaquiz tonatiuh, cecenmanoa viujloa.

Auh in noujan calpan, cujcujco, qujncujcujcatia yn intetecuoan: yn aço omacatl, anoço chicome coatl, anoço hecatl, anoço coatl xoxoubquj, nanachca in cujco, quitzacutimanj, in cujco, tlacaoacatitimanj, tlacaoacatinemj in cujco, xxxamacatimanj in cujcatl.

Auh çanyioque, in ueuentzitzin, yoã yn ilamatzitzin, in tlaoana: auh yn aqujn vel oiujntic, tetzatzilia, anoçe moqujchitoa.

5. Or old (veuey).
6. Of this phase of Tlazcalmoan, Chrigoyen (op. cit., p. 163) says: "Este danza que duraba hasta la noche, terminaba con el sacrificio de varios cautivos. Hacian también en este mes con muchos sacrificios la fiesta de Inaxtecatli dios del comercio."

X 796 And after that it was quickly lifted upright. Much 778 did the earth stir, move, and swirl. Upon this, they cast stones in [the hole]—all these round rocks—throwing in large stones, pouring them in. And when [the space] was filled with stones, then it was covered with earth. Thereupon each went to his house; all was quiet and calm.

suh in ie iuhquj ommoquetztivetzi, vel tecujnj in tlalli, vel olinj, yoß comonj: in ie ihuquj, njmã ic ic quitetema: muchi ichoatl in teololli, in vevei tetl conmaia, contepeoa: suh in omoteten, njman ie ic motlalpachoa in panj, njman ie ic viviloa, cacalacoa, cactivetzi, cactimomana.

X 796 And thereafter came out the captors [with] their captives, who were to be cast into the fire. [The captors] were well arrayed and adorned. They were [302] painted with yellow ochre; their faces were stained [237] red. They bore upon their backs butterfly devices made of red arara feathers. And their shields [were decorated with] lower legs[7]—those of either eagles
[293] or ocelots. These were designed on this shield in feathers. Hence were these named "shields with legs."

Auh njman ie ic valquiça in tlamanjme: in immalhoan, in motlepantlazque, vel mocencaoa, mochichioa, motecocauhaltia, mjxtlapalhuja, in qujmama tlaviztli, papalotl: çan cuecalin in tlachiuhtli: yoß in jchimal tetepontli, aço quauhicxitl, anoço ocelomatetepontli, in vncã chimalpan icujliuhtica, hivitica: ic moteneoa in chimalli, tetepontli:

● [535] And so they went dancing with the captives; they went winding back and forth. Thus they proceeded by twos. The captives, they who were to be cast into the fire, also danced. They covered their bodies with [30] white clay; they had paper breech clouts and paper
[302] shoulder sashes; then they had their paper wigs, and they decked their heads with feathers. They had 292 feather lip plugs; they were stained bright red about the mouth; they were stained black in the hollows of the eyes.

ic mjtotitivi, momalitotitivi, momamãtivi: ic vmpatitivi in mamalti in motlepantlaçazque, no mjtotitivi, qujntiçavia, imaamamaxtli, imamaneapanal, njmã ie imamatzon, qujnquapotonja; imjvitençac, motenchichiloa, mjxtentlilcomoloa.

And when the sun set, then it all ceased, and they shut the captives in. And the captors departed. There in the same place reposed those who owned the captives. They guarded their captives.[8]

Auh in oncalac tonatiuh: njmã ie ic mocacaoa, qujncalcaquja in mamalti: auh in tlamanjme vivi: çan no vncan ommotlalia in maleque, qujnpia in immalhoan.

And then they started holding a vigil for them. It was already far into the night when the old men, those of the tribal temple, to which they belonged, departed. And when they ended the vigil, it was midnight, in the deep of night, when night divided in half.

Auh in peoa in qujntoçavia, ie tlaquauhiova in qujça: ichoantin in calpolvevetque, in calpoleque, in vncan povi: auh in mocacaoa in tetoçavia, iovalnepãntla, iovalli itic, ioalli xelivi:

[302] After that the captors then took [some of the captives'] hair; they took hair from the crowns of the captives' heads—a little of the captives' hair, [which] they cut from the crowns of their heads. They bound the ends [of the locks of hair] with bright red thread, to which were attached two heron feathers, forked.
[413] And the obsidian knife with which they cut the hair they named the "falcon nail."

in ie iuhquj, njman ie ic tetzoncujva, in tlamanjme: qujntzoncuj in mamalti, inquanepantla, aquijtzõ intzõ in mamalti, qujntequjlia in inquanepantla, chichilicpatica qujcujtlalpia, aztatl itech ca, vme, maxaltic: auh in jtztli injc qujtequja intzon: qujtocaiotiaia, itztlotli:

After they had taken [the hair], then they put it [415] into a small, woven reed basket, called the "hair basket." This hair basket the captor carried to his in ie juhquj in oconcujque, njmã ic cõtema petlacaltonco, itoca: tzonpetlacalli: inin tzonpetlacalli, qujvica in jchan tlamanj, aco qujpiloa, ic monextia in

7. Literally, knee. Rémi Simeon, however, renders antepasadi as this.
8. The context suggests a distinction between demonios and malogros.

796 Thereupon they took him upon their backs and thus carried him up. And when they had gone to carry him up,[13] then they cast him into the fire. All at once the cinders shot up, billowing greatly.

And the body of the brave warrior then writhed; blisters quickly formed, and billows of smoke at once rose [from his body].

Then the old priests forthwith seized and drew him forth; they stretched him out upon the offering stone, and cut open his breast, splitting him open. Then they cut and tore out his heart, and cast it before Xiuhtecutli, the representation of fire. And in this same manner died all the captives whom Painal came to deliver up.

And afterwards, when they had slain the brave warriors, then all dispersed; all departed and went to their homes and feasted, and it was a day of rejoicing.

And [as for] Painal, his old [priests] then carried him, encircling and crowding around him as they went. They escorted him and placed him in his place, where he was guarded. And having come to leave him, then they descended, in order. And when they had arrived at the base, then they dispersed; they departed to their dwellings and there all ate.

And afterwards, when food had been eaten, then all came forth and assembled—all the men, the youths, and the boys, the small boys—those with a tuft of hair at the back of the head. All took their places.

[535] Then was begun the song and dance, at midday. In this manner was it danced: the serpent dance was performed. Between [the men] went the women, as hath been related. The courtyard was well filled, packed full, crowded; none could come out from the crowd; there was a great jostling of people.

And when they tired [of this], then all abandoned [the courtyard] and there was shouting. Then they hied forth to where stood the xocotl; there was much trampling; all hurried; there was a great press of people.

[411] And the masters of the youths kept people away [from the xocotl]; their pine staves lay in their hands. They held not back as they struck; they held not back their staves as they laid about. And those who little by little, one by one, broke through violently as [the others] held them back, thereupon all [these] pulled upon the ropes, the heavy ropes.

13. Probably oquijpantlaqueto is meant.

njman ie ic iquechpan conteca, injc quijtlecavia: auh in oquipantlacato, njmã ic contlaça in tleco, cõcalli moquetztivetzi in nextli, vel molonj.

Auh in tiacauh njmã ie ic cuecuepoca in jnacaio, aquaqualacativetzi, yoan tletlecaleoativetzi:

njman ic conantivetzi, convilantivetzi, in quaquacujlti, quijoalteca techcac, coneltequi quijoaliztlapana in jielchiqujuh: njmã ic concotona, contlatzcotona in jiollo; ixpan cõmaiavi, in xiuhtecutli: in jxiptla tletl: auh çan ie mochivi in momjquijlia in mamalti, quinoalçaçaca in Painal.

Auh in ie iuhquj, in otlanque tiacaoan njmã ie ic tlaxitinj, vivilca vilca in techachan, tlatlaquaio, ilhujtlamacho.

Auh in Painal, njmã quivica, cololhujtivi, quitepevitivi, in jrevcioan, concaoa, contlalia in jician, in jpielcioian: auh in ocõcaoato, njmã ie ic oaltemo, oalcenpantitivi. Auh in oacico tlalchi: njmã ic momoiaoa, vivi in ipchachan ontlatlaqua.

Auh in ie iuhquj motlatlaqualoc, njmã ic oalhujloa, oalnenechicolo, ixquich tlacatl in telpochtli, yoan in telpopochtoconti, in telpopochpipil, in cuexpaltotoneque, in cuexpaltzitzineque: ixquich quicencaoa:

in jquac peoalo cujcoanolo nepantla tonatiuh, inic netotilo, necocololo, intzatzalan mamantivi in cioa in juh omjto, in jtvalli vel temj, vel cacatzca, vel tzitzica, aoc vel tetlan quijtoa, ceneca nepapatzolo.

Auh in otlatziuhque nimã ie ic necacaoalo, njman ic tlacaoaca: njman vmpa onxoquivi, in vmpa icac xocotl: vel nequequeçalo, vel netotocholo, vel nepitzmamalioa.

Auh in teachcaoan, tetzaqua, imoocoquauh in immac oonoc, amo motlamachvia injc tevitequi, amo ilui in inquauh injc teviteqij: auh in oquezztl, in oquezteltzin in oquipetlatiquijque tetzaqua: njmã ie ic machi motilinja in mecatl, in vepãmecatl:

X 796 Thirtieth Chapter: here are related the feasts and the ceremonies which were performed on the days of the eleventh month, which was named and known as Ochpaniztli.

The eleventh feast was known as "The Sweeping of the Way."[1] At this time the actual feast had not yet arrived. For another five days nothing was done; there was then no activity. And when five days had X 796 passed, then began the hand-waving dance—when there were fifteen days before Ochpaniztli. It was ● 535 carried on for eight days.

And thus they danced the hand-waving dance: All were arranged in order; four rows were formed; all formed four lines. Thus they danced: They went marching only in circles; their hands were filled with Tagetes flowers and branches, which they went grasping in either hand.

They did not sing; none called out; they went in complete silence.

[273] But if some mischievous youths became drunk, they imitated the ground drums. As the ground drums roared, just so they went about doing. [The dancers] went moving their hands here and there; they moved in equal rows. None broke ranks; none turned [another] from his course; none went astray.

And when the hand-waving dance began, it was already near sundown. And when all ceased, the sun had already set. And when eight days had passed, then began the mock-battle [of the medicine women], which they carried on for four days before the house of song and dance.

X 796 In this manner and in this way proceeded all the [754] medicine women—old women, maidens, and some of the harlots:

They were divided [into two bands. The likeness of] Teteo innan went with a certain number [of them, and] as many more went opposing her, skirmishing against her, [that] thus they might banish her sad thoughts, her sorrow; [that] they might amuse her and cause her to laugh; that she might not be sad. For if she should weep, it was said, it would be an omen of evil. It was said that many men who were dexterous as warriors would die in Injc cempoalli on matlactli capitulo: vncã moteneoa in ilhujtl, yoã in tlamaviztililiztli: in muchioaia in jpã ic cemjlhujtl, ic matlactetl oce metztli: in mjtoaia, in moteneoaia: Ochpanjztli.

Injc matlactetl oce ilhujtl: ichoatl in moteneoa, Ochpanjztli: in aiamo onaci, in vel iquac vel ilhujtl: oc macujlilhujtl, in aiatle muchioaia, in çan oc cactimanj: auh in õqujz macujlilhujtl njmã ic vmpeoa in nematlazo, iquac in tlacaxtolti ochpanjztli: chicueilhujtl in muchioaia.

Auh injc nematlazo, netetecpanaloia, nappantioa, nenappantiliło: injc mitotiaia, çan nenentivi, tlatlaiaoaloa, cempoalsuchitla mapoztectli in immac tetẽtiuh, nenecoc in immac qujtzitzitzqujtivi:

amo cujcaia, aiac naoatia; çan nõt .ivi:

tel intla cequjntin in telpuchtlaveliloque, in mjiviniia contlaccecalhuja in vevetl: in juh caqujzti vevetl, çan no iuh qujchiuhtivi, necoccampa in conjauhtivi imma, çan tecpantivi, çan cemonotivi, aiac chicopetonj, aiac tepatilia, aiac onchicoquiça.

Auh in peoaia in nematlazo, ie teutlac: auh in necacaoaloia ic õcalaquj tonatiuh. Auh in otzonqujz chicueilhujtl: njmã ic vmpeoa in çonecali, navilhujtl in muchioaia: vncan in cujcacalli ixpan.

Ivin in muchioaia, iuhquj in, in muchioaia: in jzqujchtin ciostitici, in jlamatque, yoan in jchpupuchti, yuan cequjntin avienjme:

mocelouia, monepãtlaxeloaia, izquj intlan mãtivi, in teteu innan, no izquj in qujnamjctivi, in qujtiiaivtla, ic qujpopolohtiaia in jtlaocul, qujtlatlacaavilouia, qujvevetzqujtiaia, injc amo tlaocuiaz; auh in tlachocaz, qujlmach tlatetzaviz: qujl mjec iaumj-

1. Barrimiento de caminos, in Garibay's rendering (op. cit., p. 306); der "Wegkehren," according to Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 171): fresa barredera, in Durán, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 198.

Each one stood saluting him, before whom lay all manner of arms and devices—the shields, and the clubs set with obsidian blades, and the capes, and the breech clouts.

They stood saluting him, and then each one stood receiving his gifts. They then went out where all adorned themselves, putting on the devices and insignia. To the great chieftains was given this costly array. And to all the common folk were given the Huaxtec devices.[14]

And after that, when this was concluded, when all were arrayed, then once more all placed themselves in a line before Moctezuma. Each one stood saluting him. Thereupon [each] came forward; [each] came up there.

And when the dancing took place, the hand-weaving dance was danced. Those to whom insignia had been given came there to display their devices. And the insignia which were given were like their reward, which served to bind them [to their duty]. And in this manner was the hand-waving dance: all were in columns, as hath been said; like flowers they moved. They went in glory [as] they circled the temple.

And all the onlookers, the old women—all the beloved women—burned with tears; their hearts were full of grief.

They said: "These are our beloved sons whom we see here; if, in five or ten days, word comes: '[We are] in flood and fire—that is, at war'—is it possible that they will return again? Will they find their way back? Verily, they will be gone forever!"

And [the wearer of the skin of the likeness of] Toci, and her Huaxtecs, and the medicine [women] went apart [from the others] and went dispersed behind [the dancers]. They alone proceeded singing, apart, singing in a high falsetto; like [that of the cen]tzontli [bird] they raised their [voices in] song. The hand-waving dance began at midday; and when it ceased, the sun had already set.

And when dawn broke, and it was already day, again all gathered, once more all dancing the hand-waving dance, and none ceased, even once. For arms and insignia were offered to the noblemen—not now many, but a few. And they were bestowed devices

ceceiaca contlapalotimanj, ixpan onoc, in jxqujch nepapan tlaviztli, in chimalli, yoan in macquavitl yoã tilmatli, yoan maxtlatl: 796

contlapalotimanj, njman ic concujtimanj, ceceiaca in innetlauhtil: vmpa oniatimanj in vmpa nechichioalo, onneaqujlo tlaviztli: in vevei tiacaoan, in qujmomaca iehoatl in tlaçotlanquj: auh in ie ixqujch, ça tlacujtlapiloa, iehoatl in qujmomaca cuextecatl tlaviztli. [714 411]

Auh in ie iuhquj in ontlamoac, in õnechichioaloc: njmã ic oc ceppa õnevipanolo, in jxpan ,Motecuçoma: ceceiaca ‹contlapalotimanj, njmã ic oalqujztimanj, njman ic vmpa oniatimanj.

Auh in jquac in ie netotilo, nematlaxo: vmpa oniatimanj in omotlavizmacaque, vncan tlaviznextia. Auh in tlaviztli, ic qujmomaca, iuhqujn impatiuh muchioa, in qujmjliuhca muchioa: auh injc momatlaça tetecpãtivi in juh omjto iuhqujn suchitl mantiuh, vel maviçotivi, qujiaiaoalo in teucalli. [535]

Auh in jxqujchtin tlatlatta, in jlamatzitzin, yie ixqujch tlacatl cioatzitzinti, tlachoqujztleoa, icnoioa in iniollo:

qujtoaia. Inin topilhoantzitzin nican tiqujmitta, intõ macujl, matlac oalmjto, tehoatl tlachinolli, id est, iaoiutl, cujx oc mocuepaqujuj, cuix oc ymiloch qujchioaqujuj, ca ic ceniazque.

Auh in toci, yoan ycuexoan, yoan titici, çan nonqua mantiuj, iteputzco tepeuhtiuj: çanjioque in cujcatiuj, ynic cujca cenca tlapitzaoa, iuhqujn tzõtli cana incujc: in peoa nematlaxo nepantla tonatiuh, auh in necaoalo, ic oncalaquj in tonatiuh. [533]

Auh yn otlatujc, in ie ymuztlaioc, oc cepa cenqujxoa, oc no nematlaxo, aiac mocaoa ca ça yiopa: qujnjquac motlauizmacaia in pipilti, aocmo mjequjnti, ca quezqujntin: auh in qujmomacaia, cenca tlaço- [714]

14. See Seler, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 3, pp. 1308. Seler mentions (pp. 131, 132) a pointed, cone-shaped hat; a disc or rosette fastened to the hat; a crescent-shaped nose plate; a golden ear pendant; and spindles. Either these relate to the wars of Axayacatl among the Huaxteca, or also "the Huaxteca were [them to proclaim] themselves to be the servants, followers, likenesses, of the old mother of the gods, Tetea innan, the Huaxtec earth goddess, . . . mother and inventor of war, . . . who was supposed to be at home among the Huaxteca, and perhaps was actually received by the Mexicans from there." [776 177]

X 796 Itzoçauhqui, he who [was named] Xiuhtecutli, who likewise was god of the merchants. Only these came [796] last, behind [the others], last of all; because they were already old.

And after this, then began the casting [of victims] into the fire, there on the large altar.[8] Indeed many wretched captives they cast into the flames.

X 796 And when they were being cast into the fire, there then went dancing [one arrayed as a] squirrel. He 292 was bedecked with a small feather crest; he had a
● 535 crest. The painting on his face was in two colors. He bore a small box upon his back as he went, in which [198] was a small dried rabbit. When they cast one into the flames, [the dancer] whistled with his fingers.

And one [in the likeness of a] bat was there, [also] doing a dance; indeed [in an array] like a bat was [534] he adorned. He had two gourd rattles which, one in each hand, he went rattling.

And when they had cast [the captives] into the fire, then the priests formed themselves in rows, that they might descend. [They were bedight with] their paper stoles, which were painted with designs.

X 796 They took one another's hands, grasping them firmly. When the line [of the procession] was broken, 535 where a gap was formed [in the line], one was, as it were, thrown off. Some fell, striking the ground, biting the earth. This was called "They fall upon their hands."

And next day all assembled at the same time to [237] dance the serpent dance. All were decked in colored feathers—yellow, bright red, orange, and green. Thus were people adorned with feathers—[even] all the small children, although they [still] lay in their cradles—all the people, [but] only the men.[9]

Thereupon was begun the serpent dance, at midday. Hands were clasped; there was song. It was no matter what [song] they intoned—mere pleasury songs. And when they ceased, it was night. And any who were taking much pleasure, verily, spent the night there.

And these two festive days they had already taken from the [next month], Tepeilhuitl.

Enough. Here endeth and concludeth the feast [of the month] Teotl eco.

quj, ichoatl in Xiuhtecutli, çan no pochteca intecuh catca, ça oallatzacujtivia, ça oallatoqujlitivia, ça qujoalcentzacujtivia: ichica ca ie vevetque.

Auh in jquac in, njman ic peoa in tetlepantlaxo, vncan in teccalco: vel mjequjntin, in qujntlepantlaçaiz, mamaltzitzinti:

auh in vncan tetlepãtlaxo, vncan mjtotitinemj techalotl, çan mochichioaia quachichiqujltone, quachichiqujle, mjxtecujcujlo: ioacalton qujmamatinemj, vncan onotinemj, tochtlaoztzaltontli: in jquac ce contlaça tleco, mapipitzoa:

yoan ce tzinacan vncan nenca, mjtotitinemj, vel iuhqujn tzinacan: ic no mochichioaia vntetl in jaiacach, vccampa in aiacachotinemj.

Auh in ontetlepantlaxoc, mec oalmotecpana in tlamacazque: injc oaltemo, imaamaneapanal, tlacujlolli:

maana, in matitech maana, cenca motetcuhtzitzquja: inon omocotonque, in omotlacavilique, iuhqujn mochichiccanauhtivi, in aca tlalli ic movitequj, tlalli qujquativetzi. Inin moteneoa mamatlavitzoa.

Auh in jmuztlaioc, onnenechicolo, cenvetzi, in necocololo, hivitica necujcujlolo, in coztic, in chichiltic, in vitztecolli, in xoxoctic, injc mjvicujcujloa, muchintin in pipiltotõti, in manel coçolco onoc, cenca ixqujch tlacatl, çan ichoantin in oqujchtin:

njman ie ic peoalo in necocololo, nepãtla tonatiuh, neaano, cujco, çaço ac tle queoa, çan avilcujcatl: auh in necacaoalo, ie ioa: auh in aca cenca compaquj, vel vncan iovilia:

auh in jiomjlhujixti y, ic cuel cõcujlia in tepeilhujtl.

Je ixqujch njcan tlamj, njcan tzonqujça in ilhujtl Teutl eco.

---

8. ". . . se es donde cada año echaban vivos en un gran braçero de fuego muchos cautivos, en la fiesta que se llamaba tecaxipe; y hacían los dichos aquella ceremonia que se llamaba tamalcualiztlis, como se dijo en la misma fiesta de tecaxipe" (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 221).
9. ". . . porque no los hacían más el dicho Acolmiztli" (ibid., p. 224). Cf. Clavigero, op. cit., p. 146.

at [the village of] Uitzilopochco. It was there at the [spring called] Uitzilatl, in a cave. With cypress[4] branches they stopped [the mouths of the jars] as they went. They proceeded bearing [the water] with them.

vmpan ca vitzilatl, oztoc, avevetica in qujoaltzatzacutivi, intlan qujoalaantivi: 796^x 778

When they had taken [the water] hence, they thereupon sprinkled it upon [the victims], there at the foot [of the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli. And there they gave [the victims] their paper vestments, their paper adornment, in which they were to die. And they painted them with stripes, in blue, from their feet up to their knees; and from their hands up to their elbows. And their faces they stained in horizontal stripes of alternate colors, light blue and yellow.[5] And they inserted nose plugs made of an arrow and a half disc.

in oqujoalhujcaque: njman ie ic qujmatzelhuja, vncan in jcxitlan Vitzilobuchtli, yoan vncan qujnmamaca in jmamatlatquj, in jmamanechichioal in jpan mjqujzque, yoan qujntezo vavana in imjcxic, inmetzpan tlatlamj, yoan in inma, imacolpã tlatlamj: yoã imjxtlan tlatlaana, ic tlatlapantiuh in tetlotli, in coztic, yoan qujmontlalilia iacapilolli, mjtl muchioa, yoan anecuiotl. 796^x 302 [301]

And when it was so done, when they had adorned them, when they had prepared them, then [the bathers, they who owned the slaves,] took them to the tribal temple, but they came hence quickly. Thereupon each [owner of a victim] went to his house [with his slaves]. There they took apart and set down [the victims'] array, placing [their ornaments] in palm leaf baskets for them. And there, together, [the owners] began the singing and dancing, going in company with their women.

Auh in ie iuhquj in oqujmõchichiuhque, in oqujmõcencauhque, njman ic qujnvivica in incacalpulco, çan oalqujqujztiqujça, njmã ie ic vivi in inchachan tealtique, vmpa qujnxixitinja, qujntlatlalilia in intlatquj, qujmõtanatemjlia. Auh vncan in teoan compeoaltia in cujcoianoa, qujnvivicativi in incioaoan. 796^x 567

And when they had come to the fifth day [before the feast], then they who owned the slaves[6] and the old men of the tribal temple began a fast. They ate only at midday,[7] and bathed themselves at midnight. Having bathed there at the cloud house, they then departed from the tribal temple.

Auh in oacic, vncã tlamacujlti: njmã vncã compeoaltia in moçaoaia tealtique, yoan in calpulvevetque: tlacatlaquaia, yoan maltiaia in ioalnepantla: vmpã aiauhcalco in ommaltiaia, vncan oncoa in calpulco. [515]

And the woman who was to bathe [the slaves] bathed herself at the water's edge. She set up one thorn, stained with blood, on the bank. And when the four days of fasting ended, then at nightfall the serpent dance was danced. The bathed victims danced the serpent dance, as well as their owners, who had bathed them, and those who were to seize them, and those who were to bring them down [from the temple, when they were slain], and those who

Auh in cioatl tealtiz, çan vncã in jatenco ommaltia: ce vitztli cõquetza atenco ezço: auh in otzõqujznavilhujtl, injc moçaoa: njmã ic oaliova in coanecujlolo, coanecujloa in tlaaltitlti, yoã in tealtique, yoan in teanque yoan in tetemovique, yoã im panoa- [535] que quiere decir, lavadas, porque los lavaban y regaladan para que engordaran, para que su carne fuese sabrosa cuando los hubieran de matar y comer; compradas estas esclavas en Atlixpetenalco, porque allí había feria de ellas y allí las vendían los que traían en esclavas."

---

The Real Palacio MS (Garibay, op. cit., p. 317) reads: "Auh inic mitoa tudiani yehica in ilacatli machiya calnoya atecmilhica in izquich cuali ompualihuiz"—"y se dice el que bien grande porque a su esclava siempre la bañaba con aguas calientes, cada uno de los veinte días."

4. Sahagún (Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 59) calls ahuehuetl swamp cypress (an emblem of kingly power). In Sahagún (Rubredo ed., Vol. III, p. 332) it is defined as Tamalhuan mas vocamos Tea.; the corresponding Spanish text has "hojas de cedro." See J. Ignacio Dávila Garibi, Epítomes de voces nahuas (México: Editorial Cultura, T. G., S. A., 1949), Vol I, pp. 1546, for some notes on the etymology of ahuehuetl.

5. Seler, in Codex Vaticanus Nr. 3773 (Codex Vaticanus B) (Berlin: Druck von Gebr. Unger, 1902), p. 8, describes this face painting (intlaxchiuhca) as Gesicht in Querstreifen. The stripes, alternate of different color, are characteristic of Tezcatlipoca.

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "dueños de las esclavas."

7. "Comían al medio día" (loc. cit.); "Sie assen (nur einmal) am Tage (am Mittag)"—Seler, Einige Kapitel, p. 206; "comía a mediar" (Garibay, op. cit., p. 312).

X 796 would carry the banners, and the women who would wash their faces. [The dance] ceased when conch shells were blown [at midnight].

X 796 And hence was it named the serpent dance: they took one another's hands, while ranged in a line; 535 with their hands they grasped circlets of grass, or reeds, or cord made into jar rests. The victims went trotting among [the others]; there was much running; they leapt, hurrying as if in haste, as if breathless. There was circling about, with no song, without singing.

And the old men of the tribal temple beat drums for them; and only they sang. Some looked on, marveling at [the dance]. And much was their fasting admired and respected. All abstained, even more so [834] the owners of the victims. No [man] might lie with a woman, nor a woman with a man.

And when they had danced the serpent dance, then they dispersed.

X 796 And when it dawned, on the twentieth day, when [it was] verily the feast day, thereupon the bathed slaves went to [their owners'] houses, taking their [386] leave. They carried with them black stain, [or] perchance blue mineral earth, or red ochre. And as [533] leave was thus taken in [the owners'] houses, they went singing, as if their voices would crack, as if they were hoarse. When they reached the houses of those who had bathed [them], then they dipped [386] their hands into the blue stain, or the black stain, or the red ochre. Thereupon they laid their hands upon the posts and upon the door lintels, wherever they came out of the homes of those who had ceremonially bathed [them].

And when they had proceeded to the several places where their relatives were, then they again went to [their owners'] homes; these in vain offered them food. Some yet would eat; and some could not now eat.

And when this was done, gifts awaited them, spread out. Cloaks were ready [for them], breech clouts, shifts, skirts. And when the gifts were laid out, thereupon the victims took their banners upon their backs, arraying themselves of their own free will. And the women likewise, in the same way, put upon their backs their baskets with all their womanly adornment. Thereupon they arose to carry in their arms the gifts made them; before the door, in the street, they arranged themselves in procession. And the bathed ones thereupon entered the interior of the que, yoan in teixamjque cioa: in mocaoa iquac m tlatlapitzalo.

Auh injc moteneoa cóanecujlolo, maana, motecpana: injc maana iaoalli, aço toli, anoço mecatl in qujiaoallalia: in tlaaltilti intlan aactivi, cenca motlatlaloa, chichitonj, vivicinj, iuhqujn tlaixtotochca, iuhqujn tlacica: moiaiaoaloa, amo cujca, amo ma cujca.

Auh in calpulveveteque, qujntlatzotzonjlia: auh çanjoque in cujca: cequjntin tlatlatta, tlatlamaviçoa: auh cenca tlamaviztililoia, cenca qujmaviztiliaia in neçaoalizzli: vel ixqujch tlacatl, motzitzqujaia: oc cenca ichoantin, in tealtique: aiac cioacochia, auh in cioa, ano ac oqujchcochia.

Auh in onnecocololoc, njmã ie ic tlaxitinj.

Auh in otlatvic, in vncan tlacempoalti, in ie vel iquac ilhujtl: njman ie ic vi in tlaaltilti, mocacalnaoatizque: qujnpatilia tlilli, açi texotli, anoço tlavitl: auh in jquac ie vi mocacalnaoatizque, cujcativi, iuhqujn no in tozqujtzatzaianj, omach içaoacaque: in onacique inchan tealtique, njmã conaquja in imma texotitlan, anoço tlitlitlan, anoço tlauhtitlan: njman ie ic commamaña tlaquetzaltitech, yoã tlaixquatl itech, izquicã qujça in inchachan tealtique.

Auh in jzqujcan onqujzque, in inoaniolcaoacan: njmã ie ic no ceppa vi in inchachã, in nen qujntlamaca; in cequjntin oc ontlaqua; auh in cequjntin aocmo tlaqua.

Auh in jquac in, ie ic onoc in tetlauhtilli, ic qujchixtoc in tilmatli, in maxtlatl, in vipilli, in cueitl: auh in omotetecac, tetlauhtilli; njmã ie ic mochichioa in tlaaltilti commomamaltia in impã, çan monomavia in muchichioa: auh in cioa çan no inoma in cõmomamaltia, intana, in jzqujch inciotlatquj: njmã ie ic moquetza in tlanapaloa, in qujnpaloa tetlauhtilli, qujiaoac, vtlica oalmotecpana: auh in tlaaltilti, njman ie ic calaquj in cioapan, qujoaliaoaloa in tlecujlli: mec oalqujça, mec ommoiacatia

X 796 And before she died, she danced. The old men beat the drums for her; the singers sang for her—they intoned her song. And when she danced, she wept much, and she sighed; she felt anguish.[4] For time was but short; the span was but brief before she would suffer, when she would reach her end on earth.

536 [781]

Auh in aiamo mjquj mjtotiaia, qujtlatzotzonjliaia in vevetque, in cujcanjme, qujcujcatia, quevilia in jcujc. Auh in jquac mjtotiaia, vel mochoqujliaia, yoan elcicivia, mociappoa: ichica ca ça achitonca, ça ixqujch cavitl y, ça ixqujch cavitontli y, inic ontlacotiz, in ie compoloz tlaticpactli.

X 796 And when the sun was past its zenith, they then took her up to the top of the temple. All the impersonators of the demons went, laying hold of and accompanying her, proceeding in rows. Yet another, the impersonator [of Ilama tecutli], went leading the people—one whom verily they thought a god[dess] on earth, who was only a man whom they [so] adorned.

Auh in jquac ōmotzcalo tonatiuh: njmā ie ic qujtlecavia in teucalticpac, qujtzitzqujtivi, qujtocativi in jxqujchtin im jxiptlaoā diablome cempantitivi, teiacātiuh in oc ceppa ixiptla, in vel-qujmoteutia tlaticpac, çan tlacatl in qujchichioaia.

And when they reached [the summit], they cut open her breast. And when she was slain, then they severed her head. And her head they gave to him who led. He took it in his right hand, going off with it, going dancing, marking the dance rhythm with the head. He went before them, leading all the likenesses and vicars of the devils. They circled the temple; then they descended, in the same way [as they had come up], ranged in rows, and going in lines. And when they reached the ground, thereupon they dispersed and went to their houses, to their tribal temples, where [the gods' raiment] was guarded.

Auh in oconaxitique, njmā ic coneltequjj: auh in ōmomjqujli, njmā ic qujoalquechcotona: auh in jtzontecō, qujoalmaca in teiacantiuh, itlan conana imaiauhcampa in qujtzitzqujtiuh, mjtotitiuh ic ontlaiiauhtiuh in tzōtecomatl, imjxpan icatiuh, qujniacantiuh in jxqujchtin imjxiptlaoan, in impatillooan Diablome, qujoaliaoaloa in teucalli, njman ic oaltemo, çā no ivi, motecpantivitze, cenpantitivitze: auh in otemoco tlalchi, njmā ie ic vivi, momoiaoa, vmpa vivi in inchachan, in incacalpulco, in vmpa pipielo.

And the vicar, the likgness, of Ilama tecutli, he thus danced: he stepped back, kicking his heels up behind him. And then he went off supporting himself upon his staff, a cane.

auh in teixiptla, in jxjptla Ilama tecutli: injc mjtotiaia tzitzintlaçça, itzintlampa in conjaçū icxi: yoan ic motlatlaquechitiuh itopil, ōtlatl:

Its head, its upper end, was divided off into three [points], like a three-pronged harpoon. It was called his thorny staff. And when he thus danced, one said: "Ilama tecutli backeth away." And they put upon him a mask looking in two directions. It had huge lips and large eyes. And upon his head stood an array of little banners, arranged in rows. They seemed like a wreath of flowers upon his head.

[293]

in jiacac, in jquac, ezcan in maxaltic, iuhqujn mjnacachalli: motocaiotia, yiotlavitzil, auh in juh mjtotiaia y, mjtoa, motzineoa in Jlama tecutli: yoā xaiacatl cōmaquja, occampa tlachia, texxaxacaltic, tenxaxacalpul, yoan ixtotolonpol, auh in jcpac pantotonti tecpantoc, vipantoc: iuhqujn icpacsuchiuh muchioa:

And when this [took place], it was said: "His grain bin burneth." His granary was fashioned[5] of pine branches joined together, like a framework.[6] Then they wrapped paper about it; they caulked it with paper. They placed it upon the eagle vessel.

[417]

yoan in jquac y, no moteneoa icuezcō tlatla: in jcuezcon qujchichioaia ocnquavitl in qujnenepanoaia, iuhqujn colotli, ic qujtlaliaia camaqujmjloaia, camapepechoa, vncan qujquetza in quauhxicalco:

---

tomado por cuachas, porque lo parecen; pero que no son sino plumas), é ingeridas en unas primeras, y de ellas prodiciones, otras plumas grandes de águila."

4. Torquemada (op. cit., p. 294) writes, however, that "a esta Muger le era permitido llorar, y entristecerse mucho (como negado en otras, que morian como Dios) y así se entristecia, suspiraba, y lloraba, con la memoria de la muerte, que de presente, y cerca esperaba."

5. Chichinas may be rendered in two ways. We have been guided largely by the context.

6. In the next chapter (Ixtulli) Sahagún notes that "hacian la estatua del dios de fuego de arquitas, y palos atados, unos con otros, que ellos llamaban colotli, que quiere decir ximbria o mudela." x 796 hand they grasped a paper-incense bag. Thereupon [293] they came down [from the temple], dancing rapidly.

And when they had descended, then they circled [the courtyard], they went around [the courtyard] only four times. And when they had danced, then they dispersed and went away, and thereupon all entered the palace in proper order. And this was known [535 as the Lordly Dance; [for] all the lords danced the 622] Lordly Dance, [and] it was the privilege exclusively of the chiefs that they should dance the Lordly Dance. This was done every four years.

Thus [was it done].

[304] Early in the morning was begun the boring of ears, when they pierced the ears of the small children. And they pasted them with yellow parrot feathers and with soft, white feathers, which went mixed with the yellow ones.

x 796 And for a gift they made pinolli.[11] And the mothers 608 sought out some master of the youths, seasoned warrior, or leader of young men who might wish to be as a parent, thus to become their [children's] uncle.
[431] Also some sought out a woman who might be an aunt, and they offered her gifts.

To the man they offered perchance a tawny cape or a coyote fur cape. And gifts were also offered—they also offered gifts to—the women.

[304] And when they pierced the ears [of the children], thereupon they took the little ones to singe them; they laid and made a fire, and scattered much incense over the flames.

And hence it was said: "They are singed." The old men of the tribal temple seized all of them. They took the small children and dedicated them over the fire. Then they gave them uncles and aunts. And the small children cried out and whimpered. Then they went to their homes.

x 796 And when they had gone to their homes, there-273 upon all ate and drank.
535 And then, in the temple, began singing and dancing at midday. Then once more all went to the temple. The uncles and the aunts carried the small children; carriers took the wine, poured into small gourds which they carried, and [poured] into small earthen jars. And when they arrived there, all sang. Thereupon was quieted the dance; they carried the small children upon their backs. Then they went giving them wine. All gave it to each other.

in tlanj tiçaio: cecectlapal qujtzitzquja amaxiqujpilli; njmã ie ic oalcemo mjtotitivitze.

Auh in otemoco: njmã ie ic tlaiacaloa, çã nappa in tlaiacaloa: auh in ommjtotique mec nexixitinjlo, texixitinjlo, njmã ie ic calacoa in tecpan tlatecpanoloz. Auh in ichoatl y, moteneoa: netecujtotilo, motecujtotia in tetecutin, çan inneixcavil catca in tlatoque, in motecujtotiaia: nauhxiuhtica in muchioaia; ie iuhquj.

Oc vecaiooan in peoaloia in tenacazxapotlaloia in qujnnacazxapotla pipiltotonti: yoan qujnpotonja, tocivitica, yoan itlachcaioio neneliuhtiuh in toztli.

Auh in ventli in qujchioaia pinolli: auh in tenanoan cequj temooaia, ichoatl in tiacauh aço tequjoa, anoço telpochiaquj iuhqujn tlanenequja impilhoaque injc Tetlatizque: no cequj temoa cioatl in teavitiz, qujtlauhtiaia:

in oqujchtli in qujmaca, aço quappachtilmatli, anoço coioichcatilmatli: auh no motlauhtiaia, no qujtlauhtiaia in Cioatl.

Auh in ontenacazxapotlaloc; njmã ie ic qujnvivica, in qujnchichinozque pipiltotõti: qujtlalia tletl, tletlaliaia, vel mjec in copalli contepeoa tleco.

Auh injc moteneoa techichinolo in calpulhuevetque, qujnoalantimanj in pipiltotonti tleco qujmonjauhtimanj: njman ic qujnoalmacatimanj in tetlati, in teaviti: auh in pipiltotonti iuhqujn tlatzatzatzi, iuhqujn tlacaoacatimanj: njman ic iatimanj in inchachan:

auh in oniaque inchan, njmã ie ic tlatlaqualo, haatlioa.

Auh in opeoaloc teupan in ie cujco in ie netotilo, nepantla tonatiuh: njmã ic no ceppa viloa in teupan: in Tetlaoan, in teavioan qujnvivica in pipiltotonti, in tlatlatquj ietiuh in vetli, in tlatoiaoalli xicalhujcoltica in qujitquj, cequj apiloltica: auh in oacito vncã cujco: njmã ie ic ommomana in mitotia, qujnmamama in pipiltotonti: vncã qujmomacatimanj, qujmomacatinemj in vetli: netech qujmomamaca.

11. The Real Palacio MS here contains the line yeouil ye chimampinolli, which probably identifies the pinolli as ground dried maize and chia seeds.

until the rosy dawn, when dawn would break and the morning would redden—when the swallow would sing.

And when dawn broke, thereupon all bestirred themselves, and ate and drank. Thereupon the old men of the tribal temple and the singers sat in the courtyard to sing for them. And they walked carrying the small children upon their backs. And [a child who was] a little larger his uncle and aunt came grasping by the hand. There they made him dance; they went through dance movements. And when the sun hung low, after noon, then all gathered at the Tezcacoac. Here the dance and song proceeded—the songs, in all, spreading a sound as of the crashing of waves.

And then began the giving of wine. Everyone carried his wine, and brought it there. Among themselves, all took it and offered it, in earthen jars—all continually giving [it to others], giving and taking in return. Here they gave the wine to all the small children—those who were grown and those yet lying in the cradle, moistening food [in the wine] for them. Verily, everyone already mature was drunk; in truth, all showed that they had drunk wine.

None showed awe [of the wine] as it foamed; none [thought it] precious as it gleamed. It fell to the ground; the wine ran like water.[3]

And they carried their drinking vessels, called tzicuiltecomatl, [which had] three legs and, on four sides, had handles.

With ruddy faces, crying out, short of breath, with glazed eyes, all mingled with one another; there were disputes; all circled and milled about. Becoming more intense, all crowded and pressed together, elbowing each other. All took one another by the hands; they were bemused. Embracing one another firmly, [thus] all entered their homes.

Thus one said: "The wine feast hath verily been observed; for the children have drunk wine."

And thus ended and concluded Izcalli. Then came to reign the Nemontemi—five days which had no day-names, which were no longer counted, which were not reckoned in the [day] count. Greatly were they feared and held in awe.

For they were ill-omened and of no use. Nothing was done [during those days]. They were ill-fated, of ill-fortune. For in them was no reward or merit—

quenman tlatvix, in quenman tlatlavilotleoaz, in quenmã tlatoz cujcujtzcatl. 796x

Auh in otlatvic, njmã ie ic tlatlacivi, tlatlaqualo, aatlioa: njmã ie ic motlalia in vevetque calpoleque, cujcanjme, in jtoalco in qujncujcatiaia, vncã qujnmamatinemj in pipiltotonti: auh in ie achi qualton imatitech cantinemj in jtla, yoàn iavi, vncan qujtotia, tlaiiauhtinemj: auh in ie achi tlaca in vmmopilo tonatiuh, vncan oalcenqujxoa in tezcacoac: vncã mocenmana in netotilizztli, in cujqujztli, cepã caoantimomana, xaxamacatimanj in cujcatl: 852 [535] [533]

Auh vncã peoa in nemaco, in temaco vctli, muchi tlacatl yioc vmpa qujtquj, vmpa qujvica, tetlan tlaano, apiloltica, vncan netech nemaco nepanotl nemamaco, necuecuepililo, necuecuepcaiotililo, vncan qujntlaoãtia in jxqujchtin pipiltotonti in ie achi qualtoton, yoan in oc coçolco onoque, çan qujntlapaloltiaia, vel muchi tlacatl ivinti in ie veveitlaca, vel neixmanalo in tlaoano: 273 796x 852

amo nemauhtilo, iuhqujn tlapopoçoca, amo tlaçotli iuhqujn tlapepetlaca, tlalpã aci, iuhqujn atl nemja vctli,

yoan intlaoancax qujtquja, itoca tzicujltecomatl: ei icxi, nauhcampa nacace, [415]

iuhqujn tlaichichiliui, iuhqujn tlaçomoca, iuhqujn tlacica, iuhqujn tlaixmetzivi, tlaixnelivi, neixnanamjco, tlaixmalacachivi, tlaixmoiaoa, iuhqujn nexoxocolo, nepopotzolo nequequeçalo, netotopeoalo nematitech neaano, neaanalo, nececenquetzalo, nececenmacho, nequechnaoalotiuh in cacalacoa techachan:

ic mjtoa ca nel ilhujo in vctli, ca pillaoano.

Auh injc ontzonquiça, injc ontlamj Izcalli: njmã oalmotlalia, oalmotema in Nemontemj: macujlilhujtl in aoctle itoca tonalli, in aocmo vmpovi, in aocmo vmpouhquj cenca imacazoia, cenca mauhcaittoia: 777 796x 805 ichica ca çan nẽqujxquj, vncã nenenqujztilo, atle vnquixoa, nenencolo, nenenencolo: ichica ca atle vncan ca ilhujlli, mãceoalli, can vncan icnoiotl, neto-

3. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 24.

Here is described a feast which was observed every eight years.

For Atamalqualiztli (the eating of water tamales) came to be observed every eight years. At times it was observed [in the month of] Quecholli; or at times it was observed [in the month of] Tepeilhuitl.

For seven days all fasted. Only water tamales, soaked in water, were eaten, without chili, without salt, with neither saltpeter nor lime. And they were eaten [only] at midday.

And he who fasted not at this time, if he were noted, was then punished. And much was this, the eating of water tamales, hallowed. And he who did not this, if he were not seen nor noted, it was said,—he was visited with the itch.

And when the feast arrived, it was said: "Ashes are put on faces," and "They are [bedight with] sea shells."[6] And it was when indeed all the gods danced. Thus, it was named the dance of the gods.

And all came forth [as] humming birds, butterflies, honeybees, flies, birds, giant horned beetles, black beetles—those forms men took; in these guises they came dancing.

And still others were in the guise of sleep. [Some had] garlands of fruit tamales; birds' flesh [tamales formed yet others'] garlands. And before them was the maize bin, filled with fruit tamales.

And also all [these] appeared—those who played the rôles of the poor, those who sold vegetables, those who sold wood. Also appeared one in the guise of a leper. And still more took the forms of birds, large owls, screech owls.[7] And even other [birds] they counterfeited.

And [an image of] Tlaloc was set in place. Before him was [a vessel of] water. It was full of serpents and frogs. And they who were called Maçatecs swallowed the serpents [while still] full alive. Each one severally held them only in their mouths, not with their hands. They took them only in their teeth, when they seized them in the water, there before

Nican mitoa, yn ilhujtl: in chichicuexiuhtica muchioaia. 796X

Auh yn atamalqualiztli, chicuexiuhtica in muchiuhtiuja: in quenmanjan ipan in muchioaia quecholli: auh anoço quenmanjan ipan in tepeilhujtl muchioaia.

Chicomjlhujtl, in neçaoaloia: çan tlapactli atamalli, in moquaia, amo chillo, amo iztaio, amono tequjxqujo, amono tenexio: a[illegible]h tlacatlaqualoia. [785] [262]

Auh yn aqujn amo moçaoaia yn ipan jn, intla machoia, njman tzacujltiloia: auh cenca ymacaxoia y, in atamalqualiztli: auh yn aqujn amo qujchioaia, intlacamo ittoa, anoço machoia, qujlmach xixiiotia. [688]

Auh yn jquac ilhujtl qujçaia, moteneoa ixnextioa, yoan atecuculetioaia: yoan yn jquac cenca muchintin mjttotiaia in teteu: ic mjtoaia, teuittotiloia:

yoan ixq'ch vncan oalnecia in vitzitzilin papalotl, in xicotli, in çaiolin in tototl, in temoli, tecujtlaololo: yn jpan moqujxtiaia tlaca, yn ipan oalmjtotiaia. [535]

Auh yn oc cequjntin ipan moqujxtiaia in cochiztli, in xocotamalcozquj, yoan totolnacatl yn jncozquj: yoan ymjxpan ycaca, in tonacacuezcomatl, tenticac in xocotamalli. [262]

Auh no muchi vncan oalnecia, yn ipan moq'xtiaia in motolinja, yn motequjqujlnamaqujlia, yn motequaquauhnamaqujlilia: no yoan vncan oalnecia, in teuçocozquj ypan moqujxtiaia: yoan yn oc cequjntin totome, in teculutl, in chichtli ipan qujçaia: yoan oc cequj ipan moqujxtiaia. [463]

Auh motlaliaia in tlaloc, ixpan mãca yn atl, vncan temja in cocoa, yoan in cueiame, yoan in ichoantin moteneoa, maçateca, vncan qujntoloaia in cocoa, çan ioioltiuja, ceceiaca, incamatica in qujmonanaia, ãmo inmatica: çan qujmontlanquechiaia, ynjc qujmon- 796X

6. Garibay ("Teteoiño boxo," p. 318) translates iztacuitlapilli as "se cubrieron la cara." Atecuculinqui appears in the same text, translated as "se hizo como ahora del agua." Cf., however, atecuculli in Molina, op. cit.

7. Tecolotl: bubo; chichtli: lechuza (loc. cit.). Cf. also Clark, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 117, and Angel María Garibay K, in Tlalocan, Vol. I, p. 329.

Behold [here] a true [relation] of all [the temples] which were the temples of the Mexicans.

[In] the [great] square of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli, all was thus, [as followeth]:

It appeared to be perhaps two hundred fathoms [square]. And here, in the center [of the square], were very large temples, which were the temples of demons. The one which was tallest, of greatest height, was the house of Uitzilopochtli, or Tlacauepan Cuexcochtzin. This one was very large, very tall.

And this one was in the middle [of the square]. And with it was the house of Tlaloc. Both were together, side by side. And at the very top, [one] stood a little high[er]—perhaps by [as much as] a fathom.

[Of] both of these, [one] was taller, rising higher; only they were quite similar. And at the top of each was a temple; at the top was a house.

Here was the image of Uitzilopochtli, also named Ilhuicatl Xoxouhqui. And in another [house], there was the image of Tlaloc.

And also at the top [of the pyramids] were circular stones, very large, named techcatl [offering-stones], upon which they slew victims. Thus they paid honor to their gods. And the blood—the blood of those who died—reached the base, flowing thence. All were thus in all the temples which were of the devils.

And this temple of Uitzilopochtli and of Tlaloc faced the setting of the sun. And its stairway was very wide. It reached up to the top, whereby all ascended. And for all the temples there were stairways; all were alike. Very straight was its stairway.

Iscatquj in jmelaoaca, in ixqujch catca inteucal mexica. 796 X 346

In jtoal catca vitzilopuchtli, in jxqujch ic catca:

in juh motta, aço matlacpovalmatl: auh in vncan yitic, cenca vevei in teucalli mamanca, in jnteucal catca diablome: in oc cenca tlapanaviticatca, in veixticatca, ichioatl in jcal catca Vitzilopuchtli, anoço tlacavepan cuexcochtzin: ichoatl in cenca vei catca, cenca vecapan.

Auh injn, nepantla in jcaca: auh nevan manca in jcal catca tlaloc, vel nehoan manca, vel netech çaliuhtimanca: auh in ic vel icpac, achi veca motzticatca: aço cemmatica.

Inj vnteixti y, oc cenca tlapanaviticatca, oc cenca veveixticatca, çan vel nenevixticatca: auh in jcpac cecentetl teucalli, in jcpac manca calli:

vncan catca in jxiptla vitzilopuchtli, no yoan itoca ilhujcatl xoxouhquj: auh in oc cecnj, vmpa catca in jxiptla tlaloc:

auh no ioan in jcpac, vncan mamanca tetl iacaltic, cenca vevey, qujtocaiotiaia techcatl, in jpan tlamjctiaya: injc qujnmaviztiliaia inteuhoan: auh in ezzli, in jmezço in mjquja, vel valacia in tlatzintlan, injc valtotocaia: muchi iuhquj catca, in jxqujch inteucal catca diablome.

Auh in ichoatl in jteucal vitzilopuchtli, ioan tlaloc: vmpa itztimanca in jcalaqujian tonatiuh: auh in jtlamamatlaio, cenca patlavac: vmpa aciticatca in jcpac, in vncan tlecovaia: ioan in ic ixqujch in teucalli catca, muchiuhquj catca: cenca vel melavatica ca in jtlamamatlaio

Tlalocan, the Temple of Epcoatl.

At Tlalocan all fasted in honor of the Tlalocs when they observed [their] feast. And when all fasted, then evil things were done and vicious. All danced [bearing] dried maize stalks. And there was dancing in all the houses. It was said, the dance of maize and beans was danced. And when the feast of the Tlalocs ended, thereupon died those who were set apart, and Tlalocan, iteupan epcoatl.

In tlalocan: vncan netlalocaçaualoia, in jquac ilhujuhqujçaia: auh in onneçaualoc, njman ic ic aiectilo, ioan neaviltilo, netotilo, yca cintopilli: auh novian in calpan mjtotiaia: mjtoaia, etzalmaceoaloia. Auh in jquac oonqujz imjlhujuh, in tlatlaloque, njman ic ic miquj in vncan pouhque in mjtoaia [535]

Tzonmolco.

Tzonmolco: here died four named [and arrayed as] Xiuhtecutli. The first was named Blue Xiuhtecutli; the second, Yellow; the third, White Xiuhtecutli; the fourth, Red Xiuhtecutli. And others named Iuipapaneca temilolca [were also slain]. And she who was named Ciuatontli, and also [she who was] named Nancotlaceuhqui, [likewise] died, [having] their breasts [slashed open].

And when they were slain, thereupon came Moctezuma forth then to the Coacalco. Thereupon was danced a princely dance, and all chiefs danced. Moctezuma led them; he led [priests arrayed as] all the various gods. And when all had danced, when all had danced the serpent dance, thereupon Moctezuma offered incense [to the gods].

And this was done upon the feast of Izcalli, once yearly.

Tzonmolco.

In tzonmolco. vncan miq'a yn jtoca catca xiuhtecutli naujntin. Jnjc ce ytoca, xoxouhquj xiuhtecutli. Jnjc vme coçauhquj. Jnjc ey iztac xiuhtecutli. Jnjc nauj tlatlauhquj xiuhtecutli: yoã oc cequjntin intoca, ihujpapaneca, temjlolca: auh tlaelpanmjquja, yn jtoca catca ciuatontli, no iehoatl ytoca nancotlaceuhquj.

Auh yn onmjcoac, njman ie ic oalqujça, in Motecuçoma, in vmpa coacalco: njman ie ic motecujtotia, yoan ixqujch tlacatl mjtotia, teiacanaia in motecuçoma, qujniacanaia, in nepapã teteu. Auh yn onnetotiloc yn onnecocololoc, njmã ie ic tlenamaca yn motecuçoma:

auh in muchioa yn, ipan izcalli cexiuhtica.

Coatlan.

Coatlan: here died those who were named the Centzonuitznaua, perchance at the time of the fire drilling [of new fire] or, yearly, at the end of the feast of Quecholli.

Coatlan.

In coatlan, vncan mjquja in jntoca catca centzonvitznaoa: aço yquac in tlamamalioaia, anoço yquac in quecholli tlamj cexiuhtica.

Xochicalco.

Xochicalco: here died [they who were arrayed in the likeness of] the White Cinteotl and of the Red Cinteotl; and also that one [impersonating the goddess] Atla tonan.

And when Atla tonan died, thereupon they flayed her. And when they had flayed her, then the fire-priest put on her skin.

And when day broke, thereupon the fire priest danced—he stood wearing the skin of Atla tonan. And this was done yearly, at the feast of Ochpaniztli.

Suchicalco.

In suchicalco, vncan mjquja in jztac cinteoutl, yoan tlatlauhquj cinteoutl, yoan no iehoatl in atla tonan.

Auh in jquac oommjc atla tonan: njman ye ic qujxipeoa: auh in jquac oconxipeuhque, njman in tlenamacac conmaqujaia yn jieoaio.

Auh in jquac otlathujc: njman ye ic mitotia in tlenamacac, conmaqujticac in jieoaio atla tonan: auh in muchioaia y, cexiuhtica, ipan in ochpanjztli.

Yopicalco and Euacalco.

Yopicalco and Euacalco: here stayed the leading men from Anahuac, who came from distant cities.

And greatly did Moctezuma honor them. Here he gave them gifts; he gave them rich mantles, or precious necklaces, or costly arm bands. Whatever was of value, he gave to all of them.

Iopicalco, yoan coacalco.

In iopicalco, yoan coacalco, vncan onoca in anaoac tlatoque, in veca altepetl ipan oalvia:

auh cenca qujnmaviztiliaia in Motecuçoma, vncan qujntlauhtiaia: qujnmacaia in tlaçotilmatli, anoço tlaçocozcatl, anoço tlaçomacuextli: in ie ixqujch tlaçotli, muchi qujnmacaia.

874 [701] bearetb a staff. For also [in times past] they had staves; and formerly these [officers] seized one and thrust one in jail.

pil catca, yoan in ça ie iehoantin in onteilpiaia, in quauhcalco ontetlaliaia,

These were all the honors and preferments which the youths [could obtain].

yxquich y, in jnpauetziliz, in inpauechiliz in telpupuchti.

874 And in this way of life, few showed understanding and were persevering. Without number were those who were known as young [warriors]. Because in truth the life of the youth was not harsh. For when yet small boys they all slept together in that place which they called the young men's house, where they lived all together.

auh injn nemilizzli amo çan quexquichtin in ipan nenca, in ipan mooapaoaia, amo çã tlapoalti in motocaiotiaia telpupuchti, ipampa ca çan njmã amo tecoco in jnnemiliz in telpupuchti, ca in oc pipiltotonti, vncan cencochi in quilhuja telpuchcali vncan cemonoque.

And he who was absent, who slept not in the young men's house, him they punished. And they ate in their homes. And they went about together where they had anything to do—perchance [preparing] mud[7] [for adobes, making] walls, cultivating the soil, [digging] canals; they did these going all together, or they divided up. And they went into the forest, and gathered and carried on their backs what they named torches for the song house.

auh in aquin poliuja, in amo telpuchcalco cochi, quitlatzacujltiaia, yoan inchan ontlaqua. auh cemololiuhtiui in canpa tlein quichioa, in aço pololli, tepantli, cuemitl, apantli, quichioa, motquiiiui, anoço moxexeloa. auh quauhtla uj, concuj, conmama in quilhuia cuitatlauilli:

And when only a little sun [was left in the afternoon], they quit whatever they did. Then they prepared and adorned themselves. First they bathed themselves; then they rubbed [black on] themselves, but not—they say—their faces. Then they put on their neck bands.

auh ĩ ça achi tonatiuh quicaoa in tlein quichioa, njman mocencaoa, muchichioa, achtopa mahaltia, njman môça, amo no quilhuja in inxaiac nima mocozcatia.

874 301 The [valiant] men and chiefs put on neck bands of large sea shells, or of gold; they put on netted capes and leather corselets.[8] Then they painted their faces [with black stripes]. It was said, they applied black sweat to themselves. And they pasted on iron pyrites. As one's adornment, ear plugs were set in; turquoise ear plugs were worn. Heron feathers were applied; netted capes were worn. This netted cape [was made of] twisted magney fiber, knotted like a net with small shells [attached]. The chiefs had golden shells in their netted capes. Of the net capes of the shorn ones, it was said, "They are provided with fruit." For this reason it was said, "They are provided with fruit"—[that] very large fiber balls hung from them by strings.

Yn oquichtin in tiacaoan, vevej chipoli in qujmocozcatia, anoço teucujtlacozcatl, motlacuechmanilia, motlacoatimanilia, njman mjchio, mjtoaia motiltzotia hapetzzli ic conpotonja, in jnechioal, monacochtia, moxixjuhnacochtia, moztatia, mochalcacatia, ynjn chalcaiatl tlamalintli in jcpatl, tlatlalpitl, iuhquin matlatl cillo, in tlatoque teucujtlacillo in jnchalcaiauh, in quaquachicti inchalcaiauh mjtoa xoxocoio, ynjc mjtoa xoxocoio, veveypupul in itech quipipiloa icpatetl,

When the sun had already set, then they laid a fire [at the place] called the song house. On the hearth the youths laid the fire. When it was already dark, then was begun the singing. Everyone danced

874 535 yn iõc ie onaqui tonatiuh njman tleteca in quilhuja cujcacalco, tlehquazco in tletletlalia telpupuchti, in ie tlaizmiqui, niman penalo in cujco, muchi tlacatl

7. The word pololli, as used elsewhere in Sahagún, appears to mean to make adobes.

8. In Lenga Kapital (p. 344, n. 1), Seler offers a variant for motlacuechmanilia and motlacoatimanilia. Cuechli and coatl, however, may be warriors' garments, as here translated.

874 until the half division of the night passed, until after midnight.

And in these times they covered themselves with nothing else. All thus danced, wrapped only in netted capes. They went about nearly naked.

When the singing ended, then all dispersed. Next day [was] the same, and the next day the same. They went together to their city quarters; they all went to sleep in their sleeping quarters, in this young men's house.

And the more valiant men, who already were wise in the ways of the flesh, always slept with their paramours.

mjxotia, izquĵchica yn oquiz iooalli xeliui, yn oonquiz iooalnepantla. [535] suh njman siac tle quĵmololooaia, in izquĵch ic netoxilo, çaqyio in neololoio chalcaiatl, haçan nel iuhqui petlaiuhtinenca, [292] yn oquiz cuicatl, njman cecenmanoa, muztla yui, muztla yui, in centlaxilacalti, motquitivi vmpa ōcochi in jncochia, injn telpuchcali.

suh in ic vel oquichtin in ic quiximati tlalticpaiotl, vmpa oncocochi in jnmecaoa. [836]

[p. 56 is blank]

821
793
785
[535]

water, in order that they should let him go, he offered the priests something of value—either a turkey or food. In return for it they let [his son] be.

And when this came to pass, everywhere, in the houses of all, in each house, etzalli[9] was eaten. Each one made etzalli for himself; and there was a dance in which etzalli was begged. With green maize stalks they danced. Those who danced the etzalli dance entered house after house, each one begging and asking. [The householders] offered them all this same etzalli, [placing it] in the small jars, the etzalli jars, which they bore in their hands.

These [gods] were called Tlaloca. To them were attributed clouds, rain, hail, snow, mist, sheet lightning, thunder, and lightning bolts which struck men.

Auh in icoac, y, in nouiian techachan, in cecencalpan etzalqualoia: ceceiaca metzalhuiaia, yoan etzalmaceoaloia: cintopiltica mitotia, tepan cacalaqui, motlatlaeuia, motlatlaitlanja, in etzalmaceuhque: çan muche in etzalli quinmaca, inxoxochuicol, imeztzalcon intlan caana.

In ichoantin, y, moteneoa tlaloque: intech tlamiloia in mistli, in quiauitl, in teciuitl, in cêpaiauitl, in aiauitl, in tlapetlaniliztli, in tlatlatziniliztli, in teuitequiliztli.

The Rainbow

821

As if arched—bent and rounded—it thus appeared. Varicolored, many-hued was its appearance. The single colors which showed in it [were] green, dark green, blue green, and black; and yellow and orange or tawny; then vermillion and ruby red; and [various shades of] blue, and dark green.[10]

Aiauhcoçamalocl.

Iuhquin uitoliuhqui: tlauitoltic, coltic, inic oalmoquetza, tlatlatlapalpoalli, motlatlapalpouh in itlachieliz. In centlamantli tlapalli, itech neci: xoxoctic, quiltic, quilpaltic, iiapaltic, quilpalli, iiapalli: yoan cozzic, xopaltic, xochipalli: niman ic chichiltic, tlapaltic: yoã tlaztaleoaltic, tlaztaleoalli: yoan texôtic, texôtli, matlaltic, matlalli.

And they said that when it appeared it revealed, made evident to men, and denoted—whereby it was known, realized, and seen—that it would not rain; would not rain hard—would not pour. But it would break up the clouds. It would dissipate, impede, and quiet the rain—the downpour which wet, soaked, and drenched one. If clouds piled up, if heavy clouds blackened [the sky] so that everywhere it was dark, it only dissipated [them]. Although it rained, no longer was the rain heavy; no longer did it increase. It only sprinkled; it drizzled; a few drops fell; a haze, a fog, a thin mist drifted and fell. Or at most it sprinkled; the sprinkling and the spray continued.

And they said—it was averred—[that] if it appeared over maguey plants, because of it the green [leaves] yellowed, turned, dried, reddened, and withered. And also they said [that] when it appeared many times, thereby it was evident [that] the rains were to end forthwith. They said: "Soon the masters of the rain will go; already the Tlaloca are about to leave."

Auh quitoa, in icoac oalmoquetza: quinestia, quiteittina, quinezcaiotia, ic macho, ic machiztli, ic itto: in amo quiauiz, amo tlacipiauiz, amo tilaoz: çan quimomoiaouz in mistli, quipopoloa, quelleltia, quiiacatzacuilia in quiiauitl, in tlacipiauitl: in tepaltili, in techacoani, in teçoquitili. Intla cenca omotlatlali mistli, in cuel cuicuichcoac, in onouiian tlatlaiooac: çan quipopopoloa. Intlanel quiauí, aocmo cenca tilaoa, aocmo molhuia: ça aoachquiauí, aoachtli in onnenetzi, in onchichipini: aoachpitzactli, aoachpicilli, aoachpicilitoton, in ontzitzicuini in onuenetzi: anoçe çan aoachtilaoa, aoachtilaoatimani, aoachtzetzeliuhtimani.

Auh quitoa, quilmach intla metl, ipan moquetza: ic macaeçalicini, macoçauia, macoçqui, machichilini, matlatlauja, macuetlauja. No yoan quitoa, in icoac miecpa oalmoquetza: ic neci, çan cuel quiçaz, in quiiauitl: quitoaia, çan cuel iazque in aoaque, ic quiçazque in tlaloque.

9. Etzalli: cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 79.

10. Sahagún (Memoriales con apendice) has green for xoxoctic, coltic, quilpaltic, iiapaltic, quilpalli, and iiapalli. Alonso de Molina, in his Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880), gives blue-green for quilpaltic and brown or black for iiapaltic. The second occurrence of this latter and of quilpalli is omitted in this translation. Molina translates matlapaltic as ruddy or sun-colored. In Memoriales con apendice, Sahagún treats both chichiltic and tlapaltic as red. For chamolocatic, Molina has red or sun-colored. For matlaltic and matlalli, the Memoriales has blue.

—After Paso y Troncoso.

Omens (concluded). 61. Two-headed men (Chapter 6).

62. Spaniards landing on the coast (Chapter 7). 63. Game of parrots (Chapter 10). 64. Rolling a log on the soles of one's feet (Chapter 10). 65. Animals kept by the ruler (Chapter 10). 66. Judgment and punishment of malefactors—Tlacatecco (Chapter 14). 67. Same—Quauhcalco (Chapter 14). 68. Same—Tecpilcalli (Chapter 14). 69. Musicians (Chapter 14). 70. Array and equipment for the dance (Chapter 14). 71. The ruler's animals (Chapter 14).

[p. 36(G)]

[p. 36(F) is blank]

adultery. They accused him before Moctezuma, who then condemned him to be stoned before the people.

FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is discussed the council chamber of the brave warriors devoted to war.

Tequiuacacalli or Quauhcalli: there were the brave warriors, the generals, and the commanding generals,[9] whose personal charge was command in war.

Achcauhcalli: there were the constables, the brave warriors who were the ruler's executioners. These who brought to an end [the life of] any upon whom sentence had fallen [were] the Quauhnochtli, Atempanecatl, and Tezcacoacatl. And if they erred in something, they exacted the penalty of them and they died.

Cuicacalli: there were the masters of the youths and the rulers of the youths, there established in order to oversee what was by way of work. And every day, when the sun had already set, they turned their attention to dances. They went quite naked. So they went to the house of songs; so they danced with song, proceeding with, about their necks, only [a cape] made like a net. They set in place and proceeded with their forked heron feather ornaments and the red cord with which they bound their hair; and [they had] their turquoise ear plugs and sea shell lip pendants. All the youths, when they danced and sang, ceased when it was well into the night, when for the first time the fire priests and [other] priests blew the shell trumpets. None of [the youths] entered their homes; none slept at home. Rather, they went straight to the young men's houses, which were everywhere. There they slept, stretched out quite naked. Only little did they sleep. On the morrow, when it was still dark, they set forth, to lodge in the house of the ruler.

And when the ruler knew something ill of them—either drunkenness or concubinage;[10] or that they wrought something to their advantage behind the back of the ruler; [or] that without his command they levied tribute on the town, perchance of chocolate, or of food, which became a tribute, and it was done without leave, and [that] they exacted as tribute whatsoever they wished, then the ruler commanded that they be jailed in wooden cages. He condemned them to pay the penalty; perchance they strangled pan motecuçuma, njman qujoallatzontequjli, injc 672

trixpan tetepacholoc. 565
684

IC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa in jnneno-notzaia in tiacahoan in jpampa iaujotl. 672

Tequjoacacalli, quauhcalli, vncan catca in tiacaoan 701
tlacochcalcatl tlacatecatl, in jnneiztcaujl iautequj:

Achcauhcalli vncan catca in achcacauhti in tiaca- 696 hoan in jtemjcticaoan catca tlatoanj, iehoantin quj-tzonqujxtiaia in ꝫqujn tlein ipan omotzontec, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl, tezcacoacatl, auh in jtla qujtlacoaia, qujtzacutiuja mjquja.

Cujcacalli, vncan catca in tiachcahoan, in telpuch- 561 tlatoque vncan tlatecpanoaia injc qujchuaia tlein [524] tequjtl, auh in momuztlac, in jquac ic calaquj tona-tiuh: tlamaçeoaliztli ipan qujmatia, çan petlauhtiuja, 535 injc viia cujcacali, injc oncujcoanooaia çanijo inquech [291] in onactiuja, iuhqujn matlatl ic tlachiuhtli, imaztaxel conmantiuj, tochacatl injc quilpia intzonchichilic-patl: ioan tiiuhnacoch, ioan intempilol eptli, izqujch [301] in telpuchtli in oncujcõanoia icoac necaoaloia in tla-quauh tlapoiaoa, in jcoac iancujcan tlapitzaia tlena-macaque tlamacaxque, amo ꝫc ichan calaquja, amo ac ichan oncochia, ca njman vmpa tlamelaoaia, in noujian telpuchcalli mamanca: in oncan cochia, çan pepetlauhtoca, çan achi in concuchia, momoztlac in oc ioboan quiça in ontecpanoa, yn ichan tlatoanj. [342]

[213]

Auh in jcoac itla qujnmachilia in tlatoanj, aço 561 tlaoanaliztli, anoço nemecatiliztli, anoço itla icampa 681 quiquixtia, in tlatoanj: in amo itencopa, itla qujtetequixia in calla aço atl, tlaqualli tequjpan iecauj, moiocoia, qujtetequjtia injc intech monequj, njman tlanoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco qujntlalia, qujntla-tzonsequjlia, injc qujtzacutiui, aço qujnmecanja, anoço qujtetepachoa, anoço quauhtica qujnujujitequj trixpan, injc mjctilo, injc maujztli qujteca tlatoanj.

9. Tlacochcalcatl, documented: see Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 27; Jones, op. cit., p. 78; Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 102, n. 3; III, pp. 57-58.
10. After nemecatiliztli, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has anoço nehuacatiliztli—or adultery.

were to remain, to make judgments, and to hear all manner of testimony.

The name of one Teccalli was Tlacxitlan. There they tried princes and great lords. At once, swiftly, they passed judgment on their complaints or wrong doing.

And the second place where justice was done was named Teccalli. There were the Mexican judges. Sagely they heard the complaints of the common folk. They defined and verified the complaint, they recorded it in paintings so that they might take it there to Tlacxitlan, where they informed the judges who were princes, so that their judgment might be pronounced.

And if something was difficult, they took it to the ruler so that he might judge it [with] those judges[6] whose names were Ciuacoatl, Tlacochcalcatl, Uitznauatlailotlac, Ticociauacatl, Pochtecatlailotlac, Ezauauacatl,[7] Mexicatl tezcacoacatl, Acatliacapanecatl, Milnauatl, Atlauhcatl, Ticociauacatl, Ciuatecpanecatl, and Tequixquinaoacatl. These same judges meditated and pondered upon, and examined, the testimony. They sought out the witnesses, those who bore testimony. Perchance [the charge] was true; or else that which the ruler had heard was false, so that, perhaps, by error[8] someone had been held in jail.

And if the ruler condemned someone to die, then his executioners slew him—the Achcacauhti,[9] the Quauhnochtli, and the Atempanecatl. Thus did these slay him: with a cord they strangled the evildoer, or they stoned him before the people, or they cut him to pieces.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which is described how all were to dance.

The ruler was greatly concerned with the dance, the rejoicing, in order to hearten and console all the peers, the lords, the noblemen, the brave warriors, and all the common folk and vassals.

First the ruler announced what song should be intoned. He commanded the singers to rehearse and practise the song and [to prepare] the two-toned calli, in vncan ieuque, in vncã tetlatzontequjlizque, 643 in vncan qujcaqujzque in jxqujch tlamãtli tlacatla- 693

tolli,
in centetl teccalli, itoca tlacxitlan, in vncã tetlatzon- 565
tequjliaia tlaçopipilti, tlatocapipilti, çan njman içiuh- [344]
ca qujtzontequja intenetelihujl, anoço tetlatlacul.

Auh injc vcan tecutlatoloia, itoca teccalli, vncan 693
catca in tecutlatoque mexica: iujian iocuxca qujca- [344]
quja, in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in oqujchi- 565
pauhque, in oqujiectilique neteilhujlli, tlapallacujlol- 695
pan qujtlalia, injc vmpa qujtquj tlacxitlan in jpã [212]
qujntlapoujlia in tecutlatoque in tlaçopipilti, injc
vmpa motzontequj.

Auh intla itla oujlitica iujc qujtquj in tlatoanj injc 695
iehoanti qujtzontequj in jntoca catca tecutlatoque. 643
Çioacoatl tlacochcalcatl, vitznaoatlailotlac, ticociaoacatl, pochteca tlailotlac, ezoaoacatl, mexicatl tezca-coacatl, acatliacapanecatl, mjlnaoatl, atlauhcatl, ticiociaoacatl, çioatecpanecatl, tequjxqujnaoacatl, iehoantin, y, in tecutlatoque qujnemjliaia, qujchiquja, qujpetlaoaia in tlacatlatolli, qujntemoaia in machiceque, in tlaneltilianj, in aço ie nelli, anoço tlatolchi-chioalli in caqujtilo tlatoanj, in aço can tlapic aca quauhcalco otlahloc.

Auh intla aca qujtlatzontequjlia tlatoanj mjqujz, 693
njman qujmjctia, in jtemjcticaoan achcacauhti, 696
quauhnochtli, atempanecatl: injc iehoantin qujmjc-tia, qujmecanja in tlatlacoanj, anoço teixpan qujtetepuchoa, anoço qujtetequj.

INJC EI PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa in quenja 535
netotiloz.
In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia, in maçeoa- 643
liztli, in papaqujliztli, injc qujmellaquaoa, injc qujn-iollalia, in jxqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, ioan tetecuti, ioan tiacahoan: ioan in jxqujch in cujtlapilli,
atlapalli, in maçeoalli:
achtopa qujtoaia in tlatoanj, in tlein cujcatl meoaz 643 qujnnaoctiaia in cujcanjme: injc qujichecoaque injc 533 qujchicaoanque in cujcatl, ioan teponaztli, olmaitl, 534

6. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Y los oyan, oyan diligentemente, y graue, llamandolos al señor: para que los escuchasse juntamente con otros principales, oyan calificadas, que eran el cardenaos, y valientes."

7. After the word pochtecatlailotlac, the Real Academia de la Historia MS includes mixtecatlailotlac; ezauauacatl appears as ejiauacatl.

The title Tlacochcalcatl is repeated in the Aztec text of the Florentine Codex.

8. Can ilquiz: que is probably omitted (cf. ibid.).

9. Achcacauhti: cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, pp. 195, 281, 285; II, pp. 318, 321; also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 160, and III, p. 53.

643 drums, the rubber drum hammers, and the ground
533 drums, and all the properties used in the dance. And veuetl: ioan in izqujch maçeoallatqujtl, ioan netotilizti, aquja cujcaitoz, aqujque in teiacanazque, aquja teponaçoz, aquja veuetzonaz, mochi achto mocencaoaia injc atle itlacaujz.
534 [he appointed the kind of] dance, him who would give the pitch, those who would lead, him who would beat the two-toned drum, him who would play the ground drum. All was first arranged, so that nothing would be left out.

643 And when there was a dance, the ruler [decided]
535 the day. At this time, he adorned and arrayed him-
292 self, [in his] head band with sprays of quetzal
301 feathers and gold, with which he bound his hair; a yellow labret, or a green stone lip plug, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; golden ear plugs, which he inserted in [the lobes of] his ears; and he laid on a neck band, either a neck band of green stone or a collar with turquoise inserted; he placed on his wrist a bracelet with a large green stone upon it, or a large turquoise; or a golden arm band; and a quetzal feather fan. With [these] costly goods he went in procession and danced. With a priceless cape he covered and wrapped himself, and in a costly breech clout he girt himself.

Auh in ie icoac maçeoa tlatoanj, in tlein ilhujtl ipan mocencaoa, mochichioa quetzallalpilonj coztic teucujtlaio, injc quilpia itzon, coztic teçacatl, anoço chalchiuhtentetl in conaquja itenco, coztic teucujtlanacochtli, in caquja inacazco: auh in cozcatl conteca, aço chalchiuhcozcatl, anoço cozcapetlatl, teuxiujtl itlaactoc, macuextli imac quitlalia vei chalchiujtl ipan ca anoço vej teuxiujtl, anoço coztic teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalecaceoaztli, tlaçotlanquj injc mjtotia injc maceoa, tlaçotilmatli in quimololoa, in quimoquentia, tlaçomaxtlatl in quimomaxtlatia,

565 Then also they arrayed and accorded favors to all
535 the lords, and noblemen, the men [at arms], brave warriors, and the high judges, and the [lesser] judges, and brave warriors, men [at arms], and masters of the youths, and singers. And the ruler gave them drink and food, all the things which have been mentioned.

njman ic no quicencaoa quintlauhtia: in izquichtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, in oquichti, tiiacaoan, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tiiacaoan oquichtin, ioan tiachcaoan, ioan cujcanjme, ioan quinmaca in jiauh, in jtlaqual tlatoanj in jzqujtlamantin omoteneuhque.

687 Afid if the singers did something amiss—perchance a two-toned drum was out of tune, or a ground drum; or he who intoned, marred the song; or the leader marred the dance—then the ruler commanded that they place in jail whoever had done the wrong; they imprisoned him, and he died.

Auh intla itla quitlacoa cujcanjme: aço teponaztli quichalanja, anoço veuetl, anoço cujcaitoa, quipoloa cujcatl: anoço teiacana, in quipoloa netotilizti: njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcaloo contlalia in aquin tlatlacoa, quitzacutiuh mjquja.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how
726 he who was the ruler kept vigil; how he kept guard at night and all day, because of war.

The ruler was especially concerned with the keeping of watch against enemies and the guarding of the city, all day and all night. Hence he gave stern commands that guard should be kept faithfully. For at times, suddenly, the City of Mexico was circled by foes; perchance somewhere for this they were gathered together, and were laying a snare. Therefore the ruler kept careful vigil. He did not become besotted. He himself sometimes set forth by night, circled the city, and beheld what was done: perhaps the priest

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO: vncã mjtoa injc istoçaia in aquin tlatoanj, injc tlapiaia in ioaltica: ioan in cemjlhujtl in jpãpa iauiotl.

In tlatoanj oc cenca quimocujtlaujaia in iautlapializtli, ioan altepepializtli, cemjlhujtl ceioal, ic tlatlaquauhnaoatiaia, injc cenca tlapialoz ma quenmanjan atenemachpan iauiaoalolo in altepetl mexico, aço cana ica necentlalilo, tlachichiujlilo, ipampa cenca istoçoaia in tlatoanj, amo tlaoanaia, iioma in ioholtica quenmanjan quiçaia quijiaoaloa in altepetl quitta tlein muchioa, acaçomo tlapia in tlamacazquj in tiachcauh aço ic necujtlaujlo in mjxitl in tlapatl in octli ioan oc cenca quintlaquauhnaoatiaia in tlatoanj with eagle down — with tufts of feathers. It was called teuxwelli. And the shield banner was painted like the blood banner. And his four arrows he held together with his shield. And his left arm band was hanging from his arm; it was composed of [strips of] coyote fur, and from it hung paper cut in strips.

And when dawn broke, when it was now the feast day, early in the morning, then those who had made vows before him unwrapped him. Before him they stood in one row and offered him incense; before him they laid all manner of gifts — feast foods, rolls of amaranth seed dough. And this was when they had not yet taken him up and elevated him to Itepeyoc. And all the men, the young, seasoned warriors, were as if determined and eager to proceed with and observe the feast, and thus show, exhibit proudly, and demonstrate it to the Spaniards.

All hastened and ran, as they made their way toward the temple courtyard, in order there to dance the winding dance. And when all had assembled, then the start was made; then began the chanting and the winding dance. And those who had fasted twenty days, and[9] those who had fasted a year, stood aside facing the others. Those who hemmed in [the dancers had] their pine cudgels; whosoever tried to leave [the dance] they menaced with the pine cudgels. But one who would [leave to] urinate took off his net cape and his forked heron feather ornament. But one who did not at once obey, who would not be excluded, or who was mischievous, they soundly beat his back therefor, [or] his thighs, [or] his shoulders, and thrust him outside. They cast him out by force; they threw him on his face — he went falling on his face: he fell forth on his ear. No one in their hold took his leave.

The elder brothers of Uitzilopochtli — those who had fasted for a year — were much feared, looked upon with terror and awe, and dreaded. And those at the head, the great leaders, the participants, might leave. They did not detain them. Yet all the small boys, those with the lock of hair at the back of the head, with the back lock of hair, and those with the jar-shaped hair dress — they who had taken a captive with others' help, — the leaders, those called leaders of young men, who were unmarried, who had gone [to war] to take one or two [captives], they also held away. They said to them: "Go along there, knaves! You shall give a good example! Appear not before us!"

9. Fasts is repeated in the MS.

796
778
[2?3]

Auh in otlatvic in ie ilhujuh ipan, in ioatzinco ie ic quixtlapoa in jvic monetoltia, ixpan oncenpanti quitlenamaquilia, ixpan quimana in izquican ventli in tlacatlaqualli, in tzoalilacatzolli. Auh in jquac in, aocmo quitlecavique, aocmo cacoquixtique in itepeioc: auh in ixquich tlacatl in telpopochtequioaque iuhquin nececēquetzalo, iuhquin in ioiolipā in jlhujtlazque, in ilhujtlamatizque, injc quintlattitizque, quintlamaviçoltizq̄, quintlaixtlatizque, in Españoles:

tlatotoca, netlalolo, vmpa itztiova in teuitoalco, injc vmpa nococololoz. Auh in ococenquizoac: njmā ic ic peoalo, ie ic vmpeoa in cuico yoan nococololoz. Auh in mocenpoalçauhque, yoan yoan in mocexiuhçauhque nepan ixtinemj: in tetzaqua imoocoquauh, in aquin quiçaznequj ic quitlaieiecalhuja in ocoquavitl: auh in aquin maxixaz quitlalitiuh icuechi, yoan iaztaxel. Auh in aquin çan njman atlatlacamati, in amo tetlaçaltoca in aquen tlatta, vel ic quicuitlavitequj, quimetzvitequj, cacullhujtequj, caliticpa contopeoa, conchiccanaoa, conjxiquetza, mjhixiquetztiuh, nanacazitztiuh aiac temacnaosti:

796
778
555
[785]
[292
514]
[687]

cenca iehoā tlamamauhtiaia, tlamauhtiaia, cemjmacaxoa, cemjmacaxtincatca in jachvan vitzilobuchtli in mocexiuhçauhque. Auh in tlaiacatia in vevei tachcavan, in vevei chiva tel huel quiçaia, amo quintzacujliaia: auh in ie ixquich telputtzintli, in cuexpaltzine in cuexpaltzitzineque, yoan in tzotzocoleque, in tepallamanj, in yiaque: in moteneoa in telpuchiaque, in ce ic nemj, in ce cacitinemj, in anoço vme cacitinemj no quintzaquaia: quimjlhujaia, vmpa xiviā on nocne, anquiteittitia, amo techitto.

[785]
[302]

[p. 52 is blank]

-51-

For, so was it said, he had fallen into great sin.[5] There rags and tatters lay strung out; there misery and orphanhood were the reward. And there was the great flood, the great crag, the pit, where there was a falling into the flood, or from the crag, or into the pit.[6] And there lay the snare, where one was snared.

So was it said of him to whom it so befell that his fate and merits had been good; only of his own will and by his own act he had harmed, destroyed, and ruined it, etc.

And if a woman were born upon the day One Flower, it was said that she would be an able embroiderer. But nevertheless, in order to gain her deserts, and to achieve skill in embroidering, she should do great penances, and fast, and draw blood when the day sign One Flower set in. But if she did not do penances, if she took not good heed, if her upbringing and training were not good, she herself harmed her day sign.

Likewise it befell her (as was told here) that her labors were in vain; she merited complete poverty and misery. Thus her deserts only came to an end, to naught; they became corruption. She became a harlot, a courtesan. She sold herself; she became a paramour. For it was said that just so was her day sign, One Flower; for it fell two ways. They said it was good and evil.

Also it was said that when One Flower set in, then began, continued, and was always held, a dance, a procession. But only Moctezuma in his own heart knew — [for] no one [else] determined — for how many days he established his dance. Perchance for forty days there would be dancing.

And that it might be known that a dance had been arranged, two poles with flowers were set up; they remained at the palace of the ruler. Thus was made known the day of the flowers: there would be enjoyment of and rejoicing over the day of flowers.

At that time the ruler determined and requested the kinds of song to be intoned — perhaps after the manner of those of Cuextlan,[7] the drunkards of Cuextlan;[8] or of Huexotzinco or Anahuac; or the merchants; or those of Nonoalco, or Coacatlan; or of

ca iuh mjtoa, tlaalavi, tlapetzcavi, âtlacacemellecan vncan vilantoc in tzotzomatli, in tatapatli, vncâ mâceoalo in jcnoiotl, in jcnotlacaiotl: auh vncan icac, in vei atoiatl, in vei tepexitl, in tlaxapuchtli, vncâ neatoiavilo, netepexivilo, netlaxapuchvilo: ioan vncan manj in tzonoaztli, vncan netzonoazvilo: 787X ic mjtoa, in aquin iuhquj ipan muchioaia, y, qualli ocatca: in jtonal, in jmâceoal, ça inêviian, ça onmonevianvi, in oconmjtlacalhuj, in oconmopôpolhuj, yn oconmotlaçolmjctili. Etc.

Auh intla aca cioatl, ipan tlacatia ce suchitl: mjtoaia, vuellamachchiuhquj iez: auh iece injc vel quicnopilhujz imâceoal, injc vel qujttaz tlâmachtli, cêca tlamaceoaia, moçaoaia, mjçoia in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl tonalli: auh intlacamo tlamaceoa, intlacamo vel monotza, intlacamo vellaoapaoalli, vellazcaltilli mochioa, çan no qujtlaueliaia yn jtonal: [785] no iuhquj ipan muchioaia (in iuh omjto njcan) atle onqujçaia, çan moch icnoiotl, netolinilizrtli in qujmomaceviac auh injc ça ontlatzontia, ontlatzonquixtia, ça aujlqujzcaiotl, in jnemac mochioa, aavienjti, maauijltia, monanamaca, motzitzinnamaca: ic mjtoa, ca nel iuhquj itonal in ce suchitl, ca vme vitz qujtoa, qualli, ioâ âqualli.

No yoan mjtoa, in jquac moquetzaia ce suchitl: vncan oncempeoa, vncan vnmocemana, in muchipa maceoalo, netotilo, çan iee qujmati in Motecuçuma yiollotlâma aiac qujioooia, in quezquijlhujtl, qujtlaliz ymaceoaliz in aço vmpoalilhujtl manjz mâceoalizrtli: 527 535 auh injc necia, ynjc temaceoalizrtlalhujloia, vme suchiquavitl oalmoquetzaia, oalmomanaia tecpan, tlatocan: yc monextia in suchilhujtl, suchipacoa, nexuchitlamachtilo:

vncâ tlatlâtlamj, tlanenequj in tlatoanj, in catle cujcatl coneoaz, in anoço cuextecaiotl, tlaoancacuextecaiotl, vexotzincaiotl, anaoacaiotl, oxtomecaiotl, nonoalcaiotl, coacatecaiotl, tenjcaiotl, tepetlacaiotl, chichimecaiotl, metztitlancalcaiotl, otoncujcatl, quata- 527 533

5. Florentine Codex, Book VI, fol. 191v: daniny, dapetzcavi in tlahcipan. See also fol. 218v.

6. Cf. also loc. cit. The passage is metaphorical.

7. Probably Huexotzinco. See, however, Sahagún (Garibay ed.), X, 29, 78-82 (cf. Vol. I, p. 9, for reference system, to be used hereafter except in special cases).

8. Cf. ibid., IV, 7, 5.

527 the Tenime;[9] or those of Tepetlan; or the Chichimeca; or those of Metztitlan; or the Otomí warriors 533 or of the Quaquata; or the rabbit songs; or songs with two-toned drums, etc.; or women's songs; or those of the girls with the lock of hair at the side of the head. Or perchance only songs of debauchery, or of bragging; or of the sick, or of the cripples; or of the shorn ones; or of vice, etc.

cujcatl, tochcujcatl, teponazcujcatl. Etc. çioacujcatl, atzotzocolcujcatl, auh in anoço çan aujlcujcatl, ixcuecuechcujcatl, cuecuecujcatl, quappitzcujcatl, quatreçoqujcujcatl, aujlcujcatl. Etc.

So it was said that verily the [day sign of the] ●535 flower was in place.

yc mjtoaia ca nel onjcac in suchitl.

And then the majordomos gathered together all 292 the ruler's dancing array which he requested, and 527 which he might exhibit; whatever he might desire
643 to dance in, in which he would show himself to the people.

Ioan vncã qujcenqujxtiaia, in cacalpixque in jxqujch imãceollatquj tlatoanj, qujtlanenectia, quj-tlãtlattitia, in catle coneleujx, ipan onmjtoriz, ipan ontetlattitiz:

And then he gave devices to the chieftains, the 527 insignia-bearers, the Otomí, the shorn ones, the com-
643 manding generals, the generals, those who struck,
431 encircled, overtook, hemmed in, and spied on the people.

ioan vncan qujntlavizmacaia, in tiacaoan, in tetlaujcecaoa, in otomj, in quaquachicti, in tlatlacatecca, in tlatlacochcalca, in tevitequjnj, in temalacachoanj, in teviltequjnj, in tetzacujianj, in tetlallanvianj:

And at that time, in truth, favors were accorded 643 and distributed. He singled out, by means of gifts,
527 all the singers, the singers from the common folk,
533 the song-writers, the composers, the beaters of drums —the ground drums, the two-toned drums; two-
535 toned drum players, those who started the singing, those who led, those who gave the pitch, and those 431 who whistled with their fingers; and the leaders and conductors of the dance, the dancers, those who urged the dancers on, those who distributed them, those with trembling voices, those who made noises like a weasel;[10] the circle dancers, and all who belonged and worked with those mentioned.

yoan vel oncan mocnaviaia, mopixqujaia, tlatemachiaia, netlauhtiltica, in jxquich cujcani, mãceoalcujcanj, in cujcatlalianj, in cujcapiqujnj: auh in tlatzotzonquj, in vevetzonquj, teponaço, teponaçoanj cujcaito, cujcaanquj, cujcatlazquj, yoan in mapipitzoanj: auh in teiacanquj, in teiacananj, mjtotianj, motlaqujtotianj, tlamciauhquj, tozcacuecuechoanj, tocujlechoanj, tlacocoloanj: moch iehoan intech povia, intech açia, in mjtoa:

Before them came their food, the prepared foods:
262 —tamales with beans forming a sea-shell on top;
527 fruit tamales; tamales of a dough of maize treated with lime; hard tamales with maize grains thrown in; tamal-stones; large tortillas; coarse, white tortillas; rolled tortillas; doubled tortillas, tortilla pies; tortillas shredded, or wrapped about turkey; tamales formed in rolls; tamales of maize; ground-up tamales; crumbled tortillas; folded tortillas; meat with grains of maize.

ixpampa vitz, itlaqualtzin, in tlaqualtotli, in quatecujcujlli, xocotamalli, tenertamalli, tetamalli, tlatzincujtl, tamaltetl, vei tlaqualli, quauhtlaqualli, tlaxcalmjmjlli, tlacuelpacholli, tlaçiocuepalli, tlaxcalcotoztli, totolqujmjlli, tamalmjmjlli, tamalatl, tamalcuecuechtli, papaiaztlaxcalli, papaiantlaxcalpacholli, nacatlaoin.

And when they had tired and were wearied of 527 dancing, then they took and burned the two flowered poles. And then they fashioned and adorned still

Auh in jquac otlatziuh, in ocontlatzilhuj mãcenalistli, njman qujcalaqujaia, qujtlatiaia, in vme suchiquavid: auh iquac oc centlamãtli, ic qujxiptlaiotiaia, 9. Cf. ibid., II, 29, 94-95; genre bird-hawk was a term generally understood by natives.

10. In describing the sound made by the second Sahagún, Book V, chap. vi, reads and says ilamo pipiloua, tzakjuia mapipiloua, tocujlloua mapipiloua . . . See also, Olmos, op. cit., p. 232 (ocuilloua).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

535 chants survive without, alas, the musical notation. These dancers, acting out mythical events pertaining to the lives of the gods, must usually have been highly theatrical. Thus as with other peoples of the past, religious service fulfilled the function of the drama.[19] (See Plate 62, bottom left.)

[212] The pictographic writing of the Aztecs was too simple to 537 record a literature. However, the many references to oratory
538 and the wealth of allusions and synonyms referring to the gods and goddesses give a picture of rich fantasy and poetic imagination. The emphasis on the spoken word, the complex background of the religion, the closeness of the supernatural world, would not have produced lean, accurate prose. Rather a semipoetic, highly symbolic verbiage came from the practice of oratory and the chanting of prayers. Thus a rhythmic and rich verbosity existed as a form of polite address that, given a system of writing, might have been transmuted into literature.[20]

517 These activities, which we sanction in our own culture under the terms of arts and letters and to the practitioners of which we assign honor as creative artists, were existent in Aztec society. The status of these practices, however, was very different from their position in our own culture. Much of that area of our own life divided up into the infinite gradation of commercial, legal and governmental pursuits fell within the span of the individual Aztec's normal social life. That energy and activity which we exhaust in religion, art, belles-lettres and science was combined by the Aztecs in the observance of their religious requirements. The nature of their religion and its position in Aztec life and social practice are fundamental to a realization of the nature of their culture.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

535 chants survive without, alas, the musical notation. These dancers, acting out mythical events pertaining to the lives of the gods, must usually have been highly theatrical. Thus as with other peoples of the past, religious service fulfilled the function of the drama.[19] (See Plate 62, bottom left.)

[212] The pictographic writing of the Aztecs was too simple to 537 record a literature. However, the many references to oratory
538 and the wealth of allusions and synonyms referring to the gods and goddesses give a picture of rich fantasy and poetic imagination. The emphasis on the spoken word, the complex background of the religion, the closeness of the supernatural world, would not have produced lean, accurate prose. Rather a semipoetic, highly symbolic verbiage came from the practice of oratory and the chanting of prayers. Thus a rhythmic and rich verbosity existed as a form of polite address that, given a system of writing, might have been transmuted into literature.[20]

517 These activities, which we sanction in our own culture under the terms of arts and letters and to the practitioners of which we assign honor as creative artists, were existent in Aztec society. The status of these practices, however, was very different from their position in our own culture. Much of that area of our own life divided up into the infinite gradation of commercial, legal and governmental pursuits fell within the span of the individual Aztec's normal social life. That energy and activity which we exhaust in religion, art, belles-lettres and science was combined by the Aztecs in the observance of their religious requirements. The nature of their religion and its position in Aztec life and social practice are fundamental to a realization of the nature of their culture.

A 796 in five days the feast day of Toxcatl would come, then they began to sing [and dance].

Now, during this time, Moctezuma came not forth; those who had been [the impersonator's] companions provided the people with food and favors.

On the first day they sang [and danced] at a place called Tecanman. On the second day, in the place where they kept the image of Titlacauan, in the house of the keeper who guarded it. On the third day, at Tepetzinco, in the midst of the lagoon. On the fourth [day], at Tepepulco, which is also near Tepetzinco.

[501] After they had sung [and danced], then he embarked in a canoe. The women went traveling with him; they went consoling him and keeping him merry. Then the canoe arrived; then it touched the shore: then it was beached at a place called Acaquilpan or Caualtepec.

For here he was abandoned, a little [distance] from Tlapitzauhcan. The women then returned; and only they who had freely become his pages accompanied him while he yet lived.

[346] So, it was said, when he arrived where he was to die, [where] a small temple stood, called Tlacochcalco, he ascended by himself, of his free will, to the place where he was to die. When he climbed the first step, as he passed one [step], he there broke, shattered, his flute, his whistle, etc.

And when he had mounted all the steps, when he had reached the summit, then the priests fell upon him; they threw him on his back upon the sacrificial stone. Then [one] cut open his breast, seized his heart, and raised it as an offering to the sun.

For in this manner were all [these] captives offered up. But his body they did not roll down; rather, they lowered it. Four men carried it.

And his severed head they strung on the skull-rack. Thus he ended in the adornment in which he died. Thus he there ended his life, there he terminated his life, when he went to die there at Tlapitzauzian.

And this betokeneth our life on earth. For he who ● [538] rejoiceth, who possesseth riches, who seeketh and coveteth our lord's sweetness, his gentleness—riches and prosperity—thus endeth in great misery. For it is said: "None come to an end here upon earth with happiness, riches, and wealth."[12]

A 796 778 And here in Mexico, when [it was the month of] Toxcatl, was set up and formed a figure of Uitzilcuijlti, oqujuh mjacujlilhujtl quiçaz yn ilhujtl Toxcatl, in peoa cujcujca:

yn iqcac y, yn izquilhujtl y, aocmo onmachiztia yn motecuçoma, oc ie ycenujc eatca, tetlaqualkia tetlauhtia, ynic cemilhujtl cujcujca, itocaiocan tecanma: ynic omjlhujtl, vncan in pialoia, in teiziptla in titlacaoan, yn ichã aquin calpixquj, yn oquijpiaia: ynic eilhujtl tepetzinco, vmpa in anepantla, ynic nappa tepepulco, çan no itlan in tepetzinco.

Yn on cujcujcac njman ie ic onmacalaquja, itlan ietihuj in cioa, quiollaltitiuj, quellaquauhtiuj: vmpa vnquiça, vmpa onatenquiça, vmpa quimonacana in acalli, ytocaiocan acaquilpan, anoço caoaltepec:

ipampa ca vncan ontecaoaloia, achi ie ytlan in tlapitzauhcan: in cioa vncan oalmocuepa: auh ça iehoã in matian muchioa, yn jachoan ocatca, yn oquitocatinenca in iõc oc nemj.

Juh mjtoa yn oacic, in vncan mjquja teucaltontli icaia, itoca tlacochcalco: çan moma in tleco, çan monomatlecauja, in vmpa mjquiz: in ce tlamamatlatl contlecauja, in ce conpanauja, ce vncan quixamanja, quijpuztequj yn itlapitzal, yn jvilacapitz, etc.

Auh yn oquipantlaz, yn izquj tlamamatlatl, yn opanuetzito tlacpac: njman quicujtiuetzi in tlamacazque, conaquetztiteca in techcac: njman ie ic queltetequi, conanilia yn iiollo, no conjaujlia in tonatiuh:

ca çan muchi tlacatl iuh mictiloia, in mamalti. Auh yn jtlac amo quioalmjmjlooaia, çan quioaltemoujaia, quinzuhcaujaia:

auh yn jtzontencõ, tzompatitech conquauhço, iuh tlantica, yn iuh ipã omjc ynechichioal: ic vmpa ontlamj yn jnemjliz, vmpa contzonquistia yn jnemjliz, yn vmpa omjqujto Tlapitzaoaian.

Auh ynjn ca quinezcaiotia, in tlalticpac tonemjliz: ca in aquin paquj, motlamachtia, in quitta in quimaujçoa in itzopelica, yn jaujiaca in totecujo, in necujltonolli, in netlamachtilli: injc tzonquiça vey netolinjliztli: ca iuh mjtoa, aiac quitlamitiuh in tlalticpac, paquiliztli, necujltonolli, netlamachtilli.

Auh yn nican mexico, yn iquac Toxcatl: motlalia

12. This is a reference to the characteristics of Tezcatlipoca. See Anderson and Dibble; op. cit., p. 2.

Here is Told [what] the Songs of the Demons Were, with Which They Paid Honor to Them in Their Temples and Outside [of Their Temples].[14]

Nican mjtoa in jncujc catca, in tlatlacatecuio injc qujnmaviztiliaia in jnteupã, yoan in çan qujiauac.

538

Song of Uitzilopochtli.

Uitzilopochtli, young war chief—none have equaled me. Not for nothing have I taken the cloak of yellow feathers. Through me hath the sun risen.

For those of Mixtlan he was a portent of disaster. He took a foot from those of Pichauaztlan.

Within the walls of Tlaxotlan, feathers were offered, that, as war chief, he might be adorned. My god was called conqueror of men.

Dread [was] the god of Tlaxotlan. Dust was raised. The dust of the god of Tlaxotlan was raised.

Gather for me our foes of Amantlan. In their homes will they be conquered. Gather them for me.

Vitzilobuchtli icujc

Vitzilobuch, iaquetlaia, yiaconai, in ohujhujhujia anenjcujc tociquemjtla, yia, ayia, yia, yiovjia, queiaoca, oiatonaquj yiaia, yia, yio.

Tetzaviztli, ia mjxtecatl, ce imaxi pichaoaztecatla pomaia, ovayico, ayiayie.

Ai tlaxotla tenamjtl ihujtli inacoc mopopoxotiuh, iautlatoaia ayiayio, noteuh aia tepãquizquj mjtoaia.

Oiaieva vel mamavia in tlaxotecatl teuhtla tlamjlacatzoaia, itlaxotecatl teuhtla mjlacatzoaia.

Amanteca toiaohoan xinechoncentlalizqujvia, icalipan iautioa xenechon centlalizquj.

Song of Uitznauac Iaotl.

O my chief of Tlacochcalco, I know not the man who taunteth me. Know I not that I am ill omened? Know I not that I am a warrior? [When] it is said, "my chief of Tlacochcalco," they taunt my lineage.

The warrior, chief of Tocuillan, hath donned his eagle cape set here and there with points.

O young chief of Oholpan, my captive in feathers is dressed. I am dreaded, I am feared. My captive with feathers is covered.

O young chief of Uitznauac, my captive in feathers is covered. Now I am feared. In feathers my captive is dressed.

O young chief of Itzcoatlan, my captive in plumes is adorned. Now I am feared, now I am dreaded. In feathers my captive is dressed.

Vitznavac iautl icujc.

Ahuja tlacuchcalco notequjoa aia ivinocaquja tlacatl, ia nechiapinavia, aia ca nonmati njtetzavitli, avia, aia conomati njia, iauhtla, aqujtoloc tlacuchcalco, notequjoa, iuescatlatoaia ay nopilchon.

Ihjiaquetl tocujlechcatl quaviquemjtl nepapanoc vitzetla.

Huja oholopa telipuchtla, yvjioc in nomalli, ie njmavia, ie njmavia ivjioc in nomalli.

Huja vitznavac telipuchtla yvjioc in nomalli, ie njmavja yvjioc in nomalli.

Huja itzicotla telibuchtla, yvjioc in nomalli, ie njmavia, ie njmavia ivjioc in nomalli.

---

14. The translators had depended heavily upon Eduard Seler's translation of the songs for this section. With Seler's meticulous notes, they may be found in his Gesammelte Abhandlungen, Vol. II; Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4; or Sahagún (Robredo ed.), Vol. V.

The songs are introduced in the Florentine Codex, Sahagún comments concerning them: "Cuicuiztlaxo muy antiguas es, de los adoratorio el diablo: honrar acostumbrajo, para hacer sus negocios: conforme a lo del nuestro Evangelio, que dice. Quiere hacer mal, aborrece la luz: conforme a esto, este los cantaraje, en sus tierra plumas, en bosque, o arrabaxo, llenos de muy espesas brebas, para hacer sus negocios, desde el, y para adornadores en el, para no ser hallado: como hacen las bestias fieras, y las muy perpetuamente surpentes. Este bosque, o arrabaxo brebaxo, son los cantares, que en esta tierra el ordio, que se hizieron, y compuso, en su arropio: y como su ordio dixpas y padrinos de su casa, assi en los templos, como fuera dellos: los quales llamaxo tocuiz artifice, que dizen lo que quieren, y aprugnaxo lo que el manda: y conmoxiaxo adoraxo aquellos, a quien el los ordenaxo. Es cosa muy antiguada, que la cosa, bosque, y arrabaxo, donde el dia de oy, este maldito adoraxo, se abasaxo, son los cantares, y padrinos, que tiene compuestos: y se le cantan, sin poderse entender, lo que en ello se trata, mas de aquellos que son cantados, y acostumbrados, a este lenguaje. De manera, que aquantaxo se canta, todo lo que el quiere, sea guerra, o paz, hace mayo, o consaxo de año, sin que de los demas se pueda entender."

538 O keeper of the god at Uitznauac, the [sacrificial] symbol hath been born. Day hath dawned, day hath come. The symbol hath been born.

O keeper of the god at Tocuillan, the [sacrificial] symbol hath been born. Day hath dawned, day hath come. The symbol hath been born.

Vitznaoac teuhoaquj machiotla tetemoia, ahuja aiatonac iahuja oiatonac ia machiotla tetemoia.

Tocujlitla teuhoaquj machiotla tetemoia, ahuja, oiatonac, iavjia oiatonac via machiotla tetemoia.

Song of Tlaloc.

Mexico payeth her debt to the god. Paper streamers are raised at the four directions. Not now is it time to weep.

I [Tlaloc] have been formed. My god[ly image] hath been darkened with blood. The whole day hath been spent to bring rain in the court of the temple.

O my chief, my magic prince, truly thine is the maize: thou hast made the first fruits. Yet they pay thee not thy due.

Yet they pay me not my due, they please me not —my priests, my old priests, the ocelot serpents.

From Tlalocan, the turquoise house, came thy father Acatonal.

Go settle there at Poyauhtlan. With the mist rattle board is rain brought from Tlalocan.

O my elder brother, I shall go, for now is a time for tears.

Send me to the unknown land. His command came down; I spoke to him, to Tetzauhpilli. I shall go, [for] now is a time for tears.

Four years after hath it been brought to me. Then I knew not what thou saidst in the unknown land, the quetzal house, the land of plenty. Now he is as one who giveth bounty.

Go, settle there at Poyauhtlan. With the mist rattle board is rain brought from Tlalocan.

Tlalloc icujc.

Ahujia Mexico teutlaneviloc amopanjtla, annauhcampa ie moquetzquetl aoiequena ychocaia.

Ahuja annehoaia njiocoloc ĩnoteuhoa eztlamjiaval, ailhujcolla, njciavicaia, teutivalcoia.

Ahuja annotequjoa navalpilli aquitlanella motonacaiouh ticiachjuhquj tlacatl achtoquetl çan mitziapinavia.

Ahuja canacatella, nechiapinavjia anechiayiavelmatia, anotata inoquacujllo ocelocoatl aia.

Ahuja tlallocana xivacalco aia quizquj aquamotta, acatonal aia.

Ahuja xjianovia, nahuja xjiamotecaia ay pojauhtla, aiauhchicavaztica, aiavicalo, tlallocan aia.

Aoanacha tonecuecuexi njiaializquj, aia ychocaia.

Ahuja queiamjca xinechivaia temoquetl aitlatol anjqujia ilhujõtl, tetzauhpilla njiaializquj aia ychocaia.

Ahuja nauhxiuhticaia itopanecaviloc aioc itomatia, ay motlapoalli, aiaximovaia iequetzalcalla nepanavia ai yascana teizcaltiõtl.

Ahuja xjianovjia ahujia xjiamotecaia aipuohtla, aiauhchicavaztica, aia vicallo tlalloca.

Song of Teteo innan.

The yellow flower hath opened—she, our mother with the thigh skin of the goddess painted on her face, departed from Tamoanchan.

The yellow flower hath blossomed—she, our mother, with the thigh skin of the goddess painted on her face, departed from Tamoanchan.

The white flower hath opened—she, our mother with the thigh skin of the goddess painted on her face, departed from Tamoanchan.

The white flower hath blossomed—she, our Teteu innan icujc

Ahuja coçahujc xuchitla oiacueponca ichoa tonana teumechaue moqujcican tamovanchan, avaiie, avajia, yiao, yia, yieo, aie, aie, aij, aiiaa.

Coçaujc suchitla, oiamosocha ichoa tonana, teumechaue moqujcican tamovanchan, ohoayia, ahoayia, yiao, yia, yieo, aie, aie, ayia, ayiaa.

Ahuja iztac suchitla, oiacuepõca ichoa tonana teumechaue moqujcican tamoanchan, ohoayia, yiao, yia, yieo, aie, aie, ayia, ayiaa.

Ahuja iztac suchitla, oiamosucha ichoa tonana, mother, with the thigh skin of the goddess painted on her face, departed from Tamoanchan.

She hath become a goddess, upon the melon cacrus, our mother Itzpapalotl.

Thou hast seen, in the nine dry plains, the deer's heart on which was fed our mother Tlaltecutli.

Once again with chalk, with feathers is she pasted. In the four directions hath the arrow shattered.

They saw thee turn to deer in the land of the gods Xiuhnel and Mimich.

Song of Chimalpanecatl and Tlaltecuananotl.

With his shield was he born of the maid a great war chief. With his shield was he born of the maid a great war chief.

On Costepetl he became chief; among the mountains he put warrior's paint upon his face and on his shield. None, in truth, could best him. The earth did quake when he put warrior's paint upon his face and on his shield.

Song of Ixcoçauhqui.

In Tzonmolco, my fathers, shall I withhold thy due [captives]? in Tetemocan shall I keep back thy due [captives]?

In Mecatlan,[13] my lords, doth the yucca [drum] roll. In Chicueyocan, the sorcerers' house, the masked one hath come down.

At Tzonmolco they have started intoning the song; at Tzonmolco they have started intoning the song. But why come they not forth? Why come they not forth?

In Tzonmolco let men be given me. Day hath come, day hath dawned. Let men be given me.

In Tzonmolco the Xoxol song hath ceased. Without labor hath he been given wealth, hath he won the rank of chief. By his grace come [all] wonders.

Little woman, give the supplication. Cloud house woman, pray before the gates.

Song of Mimincon.[14]

From Chicomoztoc he set forth.

tetamechaue moqujcican tamohoanchan, ohoaya, ahoayia, yiao, yia, yieo, aie, aie, ayia, ayiaa. 538

Ahujia ohoia teutl ca teuconti pacatona, aia itzpapalotli, ahoayie, ahoayia, yiao, yia, yieo, ayiaa.

Ao, avatic iaittaca chicunaviztlavatla maçatl yiollo, ica mozcaltizquj tonan tlaltecutli, aiao, ayiao, ayiaa.

Ahoie iancujc tiçatlan, ie iancujc yhujtla, oiapotoniloc inavicacopa acatl xamantoca.

Aho, maçatl mochiuhca teutlalipan mitzjianoittaco iehoa xiuhnello iehoa mjmjcha.

Chimalpanecatl icujc yoan tlaltecuananotl.

Ichimalipa chipuchica veia mjxinujloc iautlatoaia ichimalipa chipuchica veia, mjxihujloc, iautlatoaia.

Cohoatepec tequjva tepetitla, moxaiavalteueuel, aiaquj nelli moqujchtivivi tlalli cuecuechivjia aquj-moxaiaval teueuella.

Iscoçauhquj icujc.

Hujia, tzonmolco notavane ie namechmaiapinauhtiz tetemoca ie namechmaiapinauhtiz.

Aoncan mecatlan notechoan icçotl mjmjlcatoc chicueiocan navalcalli, navalli temoquetlaia.

Hujia tzonjmolco cujcotipeuhque, aia tzonjlco cujcatipeuhque, aia, iztleicana val, moquinzavia iztleicana válmoquinza.

Hujia tzonjmolco macehoalli maia temacovia, oiatonaquj, oiatonaquj macevalli maia temocovjia.

Hujia tzonjmolco xoxolcujcatl cacavantocia aiavjia mocujltono aciton tecujtl moteicnelil maviztli.

Hujia cihoatontla xatenonotzaia ayiauhcalcatl qujiavatla xatenonotza.

Mimjcon icujc.

Chicomoztoc qujochoaquj canj surponj, çanj, canj, teiomj.

13. The manuscript reverses names, though the Aztec here is correct.
14. In the Real Palacio MS a gloss says that the two opening stanzas contain Chichimec words. In Ibid., the last stanza begins the next song (Xochipilli), where its contents logically belong.

From Tziuactitlan he set forth.

538 I came down, I descended, I came down with my thorny arrow. I came down with my thorny arrow.

I came down, I descended, I came down with my hunting net.

I have seized him with my hand, I have seized him with my hand, I have seized him with my hand, and he is seized with [my] hand.

On the ball court the quetzalcoxcoxtli sang, and Cinteotl answered.

Tzivactitlan qujnevaquj canja aueponj, çanj, çanj, teiomj.

Oia mjtemoc, oia mjtemoc, oiaica njtemoc notzivaqujmjuh, aiaica njtemoc notzivaqujmjuh.

Oia njtemoc, ioa njtemoc, oiaica njtemoc nomatlavacal.

Niqujmacuj, njqujmacuj, yoaia njqujmacuj, njqujmacuj yoan ja aiomacuj.

Tlachtli icpac aia, vel in cujcaia quetzalcoxcoxaia, qujnanqujlia cinteutla, oay.

Song of Xochipilli.

Now our friend singeth; now the quetzalcóxcoxtli singeth at night—the Red Cinteotl.

Let the god of twilight hear my song; let the god of the thigh skin face painting hear my song. Let Cipactonal hear my song.

My order I send to the priest of Tlalocan.

To the priest of Tlalocan I make my command.

I came to the cross roads, I, Cinteotl. Where shall I go? Which road shall I follow—Priests of Tlalocan, gods of rain?

Suchipilli icujc.

Ie cujcaia tocnjvaia, ohoaia, ieo, ie cujcaia, ie quetzalcoxcoxa ioaltica tlaocinteutla oay.

Çan qujcaquiz nocujc ocoialle teumechaue oqujcaquiz nocujca in cipactonalla atilili ohoayia.

Aiao, aiao, aiao, njtlanavati in tlallocan tlamacazquj, ayiao, aiao, aiao.

Aiao, aiao, aiao, tlallocan tlamacazquj nitlanavati ay, ayiao, aiao.

Ao çanj vallacic, vtli nepanjvia, çanj cinteutla campa, ie noiaz, campa vtli njciatocaza oay.

Aiao, aiao, aiao, tlallocan tlamacazquj, qujavi, teteu, ayiao, aia, aiao.

Song of Xochiquetzal.

From the land of mist and rain I came, I, Xochiquetzal, circling down from Tamoanchan's edge.

He wept, the priest Piltzintecutli; he sought Xochiquetzal. I must go to the land of corruption.

Suchiquetzal icujc.

Atl aiavica njsuchiquetzalli tlacia njvitzaia motencaliva tamoanchan oay.

Ie qujtichocaia tlamacazecatla piltzintecutlon quj iatemoaia ieo tochiquetzalla xoiavjia ay topanjaz, oay.

Song of Amimitl.[17]

He hovereth about the ducks, he hovereth about the ducks.

With his eye he followeth the small ducks. He hovereth about the small ducks.

Amjmjtl icujc

Cotivana, cotivana, calitotochmanca, huja, yialimanjco, oqujxanj, manjco, tlacochcalico, ohoayia ayia, matinjcaia, matonjcalico, ohoayiaia, çana, çana, aiovecanjvia, çana, çanaio, vecanjvia, yia, yia, yiohoaia, çana, çana, iovecanjvia.

Ie nocujlivaia, njvaia, njvaia, njvaia, aicanauh, njvahoaia, njhoaia, aicanauh

Tlaietotoca, ie canauhtzinj, tlaixtotoca, ie canauhtzinj, aio aia, yvaian, ie canauhtzinj.

17. A gloss in Ibid. says that this song is Chichimec.

The obsidian banner is my joy, the obsidian banner is my joy, the obsidian banner is my joy.

Aucia itzipana nomahujlia aveia itzipana nomavilia, aveia itzipana nomavilia.

538

Song of Otontecutli.[18]

In the shield-shaped tree he who fell was upheld. In Nonoalco the cactus fruit, the cacao pod, falling, was upheld.

I am a Tepanec, a jeweled bracelet. I am Quetzalcoatl, a jeweled bracelet.

Where does it blossom? Where does it open?

In nearby Otomí land, O Mexicans, was he offered as a victim; in nearby Otomí land, O Mexicans.

With his painted shield was he offered as a victim in a nearby land, O Mexicans.

Otontecutli icujc.

Onoalico, onoalico pomaia, yiaia, ayio, ayio, aia, aia, aia, ayio.

Chimalocutitlana motlaquevia avetzinj, nonovalco, quanochitla, cacavatla, motlaquevia, avetzinj.

Nitepanecatl aiacuecuexi niquetzalcoatly, aia cuecuexi.

Cane, caia itziueponj, cane, caia, itziveponj.

Otomjco, noioco, navaco, mexicameia iavilili noioco navaco, mexicameia.

Achimalicaiaxo, xavinoqujia, vilili, noioco, navaco mexicameia.

Song of Aiopechtli.

There in her home [the goddess] Aiopechcatl, with child, gave birth.

There in her home [the goddess] Aiopechcatl, with child, gave birth: there in her home the children were born.

Come hence, come hence, O newborn babe, come hence.

Come hence, come hence, O precious one, come hence.

Aiopechtli icujc.

Cane cana ichan, aiopechcatl cozcapantica mjxjuhtoc.

Cane cana ichan aiopechcatl cozcapantica mjxiuhtoc cane ichan chacaiolivaia.

Ai valmevaia via, xiva, xivalmevaia aviaia iancujpilla, xjvalmevaia.

Ahujia xivalmevaia, via, xiva, xihoalmeoaia cozcapilla, viualmeoaia.

Song of Cinacostl.

The eagle, the eagle, Quilaztli, with serpent blood painted, with eagle plumes crowned, is protectress of the Chalmeca and [goddess] of Colhuacan.

The maize is our hands and our feet in the field of the god, who resteth upon her rattle board.

Magney thorns, magney thorns rest in my hand; magney thorns rest in my hand. In the field of the god she resteth upon her rattle board.

The grass bunch resteth in my hand. In the field of the god she resteth upon her rattle board.

Aumei quauhtli,[19] our mother, goddess of the Chalmeca, deliver me with the dread dart of thorns. It is my son Mixcoatl.

Cihoacoatl icujc.

Quavi quavi, qujlaztla cohoaeztica xaiaoaloc vivia quavivitl vitzalochpan chalima, aveveti iecolhoa.

Huja tonaca acxoima centlateumilco chicavaztica, motlaquechizca.

Vitztla, vitztla nomac temj vitztla, nvmac temj, açanteumjlco chicavazti motlaquechizca.

Mallinalia, nomac temi, açâteumjlco chicavaztica motlaquechizca.

Aumej quauhtli ie tonan aia chalmeca tecutli, aitzioac imavitzla nechiatetemjli, ichoa nopiltzin aia mjscoatlan.

18. A gloss in ibid. says that the first stanza is Otomí.

19. A gloss in ibid. has mamalcatl omei quauhtli.

●538

Our mother, warrior [woman], our mother, warrior [woman], deer of Colhuacan—they have pasted feathers upon her.

Day hath dawned; war is heralded. Let [captives] be dragged down and the land wasted. Deer of Colhuacan, feathers have been pasted upon her.

Eagle feathers are thy array; thy array is of one who fighteth boldly in war.

Ia tonanj, iauchioatzin, aia tonan iauchiboatzin, aia imaça colivaca ihujtlaipotocaia.

Ahujia ie tonaquetli, iautlatocaia ma nevilano tlaca cēpoalihuiz aia inmaca colihoacā ihujtlaipotocaia.

Ahujia quavivitl amoxaiavallj onavjia ie coiametla moxaiaivalli.

Behold the Song Chanted Every Eight Years when Water Tamales Were Eaten.

The flower of my heart lieth burst open, the lord of the night.

She hath come, she hath come, our mother, the goddess Tlaçolteotl.

Cinteotl is born at Tamoanchan, the flowery place, on the day ce xochitl.

Cinteotl is born in the place of rain and mist, where the children of men are made, where the jeweled fish are sought.

Day is here, it hath dawned. The varied spoonbills taste [flowers] where the flowers grow.

Here on earth, in the market place, thou appearest. I, the prince, I [am] Quetzalcoatl.

Let the trees flower in joy among the various spoonbills. Let the spoonbills [fly in joy]. Hear the words of our god; hear the song of the spoonbills. Shoot not at thy brother, the dead; use not the blow gun on thy brother.

I shall bring my flower, the maize flower, the white flower, from where flowers grow.

He playeth ball; old Xolotl playeth ball in the ball court of the sorcerer. Xolotl playeth ball—lord of the precious stones. See if Piltzintecutli resteth in the house of darkness, the house of night.

O Piltzintli, Piltzintli, with yellow feathers art thou pasted over. On the ball court thou placest thyself, in the house of night.

The tradesman, the tradesman Xochiquetzal, he who ruleth and governeth in Cholula. I fear in my heart, I fear in my heart that Cinteotl will not come. Let us go to the house of the bishop, the merchant, him of Chacallan. Blue ear plugs are his wares. Blue bracelets are his wares.

Izcatquj, in cujcatl chicuexjuhtica mehoaia, in jquac atamalqualoia.

Suchitl noiollo euepontimanja; iehoa coioalle, vaia, oovaiaie.

Iecoc ie tonan, iecoc ie teutl tlaçulteutl oaia, oovaiaie.

Otlacatquj cententeutl tamjioanjchan njxochitli cacanj, ce ixuchitli iantala, iantatā, ayiao, ayiave tililiiao ayiaue, vayiave.

Otlacatquj centeutl, atl, iaiavicanj tlaca villachivaloia, chalchimjchvacan, yiao, iantala, iantanta, ayiao aiave tililiiao, aiyaue, oayiaue.

Oia tonazquj tavizcallevaia, matlachichinaia nepapā quechol, suchitlaca, yiantalan, yiantata, ayiao, ayiaue tililiiao, ayiaue, oayiaue.

Tlalpan timoquetzca tianquiznavaquj anjtlacatla njquetzalcoatla aiantala, iantanta, ayiao, ayiave, tililiiao ayiaue oayiaue.

Maia avjialo suchinquavitl itlanj nepapan quecholli maya in quecholli xjccaqujia tlatoaia in toteuh xiccaqujia, tlatoaia iquechol amach ieva tomjcauh tlapitza amach iehoan tlacaloaz ohoao.

Aieoho, yiayia çani qujiecavizca nosucha tonacasuchitli ie izqujsuchitla suchitlaca, yiaa.

Ollama, ollama viuexolotl navallachco ollamaia xolutl chalchiuecatl xiqujtta mach, oia moteca piltzintecutli yoanchan, yoanchan.

Piltzintle, piltzintle, tocivitica timopotonja tlacheo timotlalia, yoāchan, yoanchan.

Oztumecatla, yiaue, oztomecatla, suchiquetzal qujmama, ontlatoa cholollan, ayie, ayio, oie ma njnoiol, oie ma njnoiol, soiaiecoc, centeutl ma tivjia obispo, oztomecatl chacalhoa xjuhnacochtla, iteamjc ximaquiz tlaiteamjco, ayie, ayio.

The sleeper, the sleeping one, sleepeth. I have rolled him up with my hand. Here is the woman. I am the sleeper.

Cochina, cochina, cocochi, ie njcmacolonojcanj, ie cihoatl njcochina yien, oaieo yho, yia, yia. 538

Song of Xipe totec Ioualluan.

O Ioualluan, why dost thou mask thyself? Put on thy disguise. Don thy golden cape.

My god, thy precious water hath come down from Cospan. It hath made the cypress a quetzal. The fire serpent hath been made a quetzal serpent. Want hath gone from me.

Mayhap I shall die and perish—I, the tender maize. Like a precious green stone is my heart, [yet] I shall see gold in it. I shall be content if first I mature. The war chief is born.

My god, [give me] in part plenteous tender maize. Thy worshipper looketh toward thy mountain. I shall be content if first I ripen. The warrior chief is born.

Xippe icujc, totec iovallavana.

Ioalli tlavana, iztleican, timoonenequja xjiaquj mjtlatia teucujtlaquemjtl, xjcmoquenti quetlovjia.

Noteuhoa chalchimmama tlacoapanaitemtua, oiquetzallavevetl, ayquetzalxiujcoatl nechiaiquj nocauhquetl ovjia.

Ma njiavjia, njia, njiapoliviz ziyoatzin, achalchiuhtla noiollo, ateucujtlatl nocoiaittaz noiolcevizquj tlacatl achtoquetl tlaquavaia etlacatquj iautlatoa quetlovjia.

Noteuhoa centlaco xaiailiviçonoa yioatzin motepeiocpa mjtzvalitta moteuhoa, vizqujn tlacatl achtoquetl tlaquavaia etlacatquj iautlatoaquetl ovjia.

Song of Chicome coatl.

O seven ears, arise, awake. Our mother, thou leavest us now; thou goest to thy home in Tlalocan.

Arise, awake. Our mother, thou leavest us now; thou goest to thy home in Tlalocan.

Chicome coatl icujc.

Chicomolotzin, xaiamehoa, ximjcotia acatonan titechicnocaoazquj tiiavjia muchi tlallocan novjia.

Xaiamehoa ximjcotia acatonâ titechicnocavazquj tjiavjian mochan tlallocan, novjia.

Song of Totochtin Tezcatzoncatl.

At dread Colhuacan the chief hath his home.

In the palace the god Tezcatzoncatl was consumed. He wept; it might not be. The god was consumed. He wept.

In the palace the god Axalaco was consumed. He wept; it might not be. The god was consumed. He wept.

Totochtin incujc tezcatzôcatl.

Iiza, yia, yia, yia, ayia, ayio, ovjia, ayia, ayia, ayia, yia, yio, vjia, ayia, yia, ayia, vjia, yio vjia.

Colivacan, mavizpan atlacatli ehana, yio, ayio, yia, yio.

Tezcatzoncatl tepan teutl, macoc ie chocaia, avjia, macaivi teutl, macoc yie chocaia.

Huja axalaca tecpan teutl, macoc yie chocaia macaivi teutl, macoc yie chocaia.

Song of Atlhua.

I am he from Chalman. I am he from Chalman—the broken fan, the disc head device.

[I am] thy branch of fir, Quilaztool; [I am] the old goddess, thy branch of fir.

Atlahoa icujc.

Huja njchalmecatl, njchalmecatl neçavalcactla, oljia quatonalla, olia.

Veia, veia, macxoizuh quilaztentl illama njmacxoizuh.

538 I name thee lord of reeds. On the shield is blood drawn. I name thee lord of reeds.

That none are my arrows is my boast. The reed is my arrow; the hollow reed is my boast.

In Tetoman the priest Tetometl began life. Now he is a quetzal bird, that I may nourish him.

Opochtli is my god, Atlaua,[20] that I may nourish him.

Nimjtzacatecunotzaia chimalticpac moneçoia nj-mjtzacatecunotzaia.

Aiac nomjuh timalli aitollaca acatl nomjuh acazelivi timalli.

Tetomac amoiolcana tlamacazquin tetometl, açan axcan ie quetzaltototl njciaizcaltiquetl.

Iiobuchi notecuh, atlavaquetl njciaizcaltiquetla.

Song of Maculixochitl.

From where flowers stand, I have come, the priest, red lord of eve, and thou, my grandmother, goddess with the thigh skin painting, lord of dawn, priest, red lord of eve.

God of omens [Uitzilopochtli], my lord Tezcatlipoca, Cinteotl shall reply to them.

In Tezcatzonco hath the warrior, the rabbit [god], started life. My lord made him. I shall restore to him, I shall make [the fire] on the mountain of Mixcoatl, in Colhuacan.

Singing, I beat the small mirror, the small mirror which came from Tezcatzonco.

Macujlsuchitl icuje.

Ayia, iao suchitl icaca vmpa njvitza tlamacacecatla tlamocoioaleva, ayia, yiao, ajvinti nocicaia trumechave, oia, iao, tlavico, iacallea tlamacacecatlo tlamocoioalea.

Tetzauhteutla notecujo tezcatlipuca qujnanquili-can cinteutla ouy.

Tezcatzonco moiolcan ayiaquetl yiatochin qujiocus notecuh niqujatlacaz, njqujiamamalix, mjacotepetl colhoacan.

Tozquivaia, njctzotzonjiao, in tezcatzintli tezcatzintli tezcatzocoichoa, tzonitapalatiati, tlaocxoconoctliabo, a.

Song of Yiacatecutli.

Unknown to me was [war] heralded. Tzocotzontlan hath declared it—Tzocotzontlan, unknown to me, hath heralded it.

Pipitlan hath declared it; Pipitlan, unknown to me, hath declared it. Cholotlan hath declared it. Pipitlan, unknown to me, hath declared it.

I sought maize. With much labor my priests brought me the heart of water from the place where sand is scattered.

In the basket of precious stones I burn myself. With much labor my priests brought me the heart of water from the place where sand is scattered.

Iiacatecutli icujc.

Anomatia aitoloc, anomatia, aitoloc tzocotzontlan aitoloc tzocotzõtla anomatia aitoloc.

Pipitla aitoloc, pipitla anomatia aitoloc cholotla, aitoloc pipitla anomatio, aitoloc.

Tonacajutl, njcmacouh açan axcan noquacujllo atl jiollo, nechvalia vicatique xalli yiepeuhia.

Chalchiuh petlacalco njnaxca açã axcan noquacujllo, atl jiollo nechvaliavicatiaque xalli itepeuhia.

20. The line ayc ceuaxc quetzalcoatl, in ibid., is lacking in the Florentine Codex.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

Del Principio de los Dioses

HERE BEGINNETH THE THIRD BOOK

173
539

First Chapter, in which it is told how the gods had their beginning.

How the gods had their beginning and where they began is not well known. But this is plain, [that] there at Teotihuacan, as they say, in times past, when yet there was darkness, there all the gods gathered themselves together, and they debated who would bear the burden,[1] who would carry on his back—would become—the sun. (This hath already been told elsewhere.) And when the sun came to arise, then all [the gods] died that the sun might come into being.[2] None remained who had not perished (as hath been told). And thus the ancient ones thought it to be.

NICAN PEOA INJC EY AMOSTLI.

Injc ce capítulo, vncan mjtos in quenjn ozintique in teteuh.

In quenjn tzintique in teteuh in canpa tzintique, amo vel macho, ca ie ichoatl in panj ca in vncan teotiouacan, quitoa in canjn yn iquijn, in oc iouzian vncan moçentlalique, in izquijchtin teteu, yoan mononotzque, in aqujn tlatlquiz, in aqujn tlamamaz, in aqujn tonatiuh iez, (Ynjn ca ie omjto cececnj,) auh in iquac in omomanaco tonatiuh, niman muchintin vncan mjcque, inca muncalti in tonatiuh: aiac mocauh in macamo mjc (in oiuh mjto). auh in juh qujnamia veveteque.

TO VITZILOPOCHTLI the Mexicans paid great honor.

The following they believed of his beginning, his origin. At Coatepec, near Tollan, there always had dwelt and lived a woman named Coatl icue,[3] mother of the Centzonuitznaua. And their elder sister was named Coyolxauhqui.

And this Coatl icue performed penances there; she swept; she was charged with the sweeping. Thus YN VITZILOPOCHTLI, in oncca qujmaviztilizia in Mexica.

Yvin in qujmatia, in itzintiliz, in ipeoaliz, ca in coatepec, yvjcpa in tullan, cemilhujtl quiztica, vmpa nenca cihoatl, itoca Coatl icue: innan centzonuitznaoa. auh iuvelteuh, itoca, Coiolxauh.

auh in ichoatl coatl icue, vncan tlamaceoaia, tlachpanaia, quimocuitlaviaia, in tlachpanalli. Injc tlama-

1. Tlatlquiz (here probably a copyist's error) appears as tlaquiz in the corresponding passage in the Real Palacio MS. Cf. Aquel. mejor. in Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880).

2. The story appears later in Sahagún's Historia (Book VII). In simple terms, the more usual version is told in Alfonso Caso: La religión de los aztecas (Mexico: Imprenta Mundial, 1936), pp. 13ff. An interesting variant appears in Juan de Torquemada: Segunda parte de los veinte i un libros rituales i monarchia indiana (Madrid: Nicolas Rodrigo Franco, 1723), pp. 77-8; and another in "La leyenda de los soles" (in Códice Chimalpopoca; Mexico: Imprenta Universitaria, 1945), pp. 121ff.

3. Mother of the gods—that is, of the sun (Huitzilopochtli), moon (Coyolxauhqui), and stars (Centzonuitznaua)—according to Caso (op. cit., pp. 36-9. He states: "Yo hemos visto ciertos casos de ella embarazarse Huitzilopochtli en el momento en que los astrólogos, espiritualizan por la Luna, pretendían conocerlo porque se creía en el prodigio de la concepción divina, y como el Sol-Huitzilopochtli nace de su vientre arrancado del cuerpo de Ixtli y muere a la Luna y a las estrellas." did she do penance at Coatepetl. And once, as she swept, feathers, as it were, a ball of feathers, descended upon her. Then Coatl icue snatched it up and placed it in her bosom. And when she had swept, [when] she came to take the feather [ball] which she had placed in her bosom,[4] she found nothing. Thereupon Coatl icue conceived.[5]

-1-

773
539

And when the Centzonuitznaua saw that their mother was already with child, they were very wrathful. They said: "Who brought this about? Who hath made her heavy with child? She hath dishonored and shamed us!"

And their elder sister, Coyolxauhqui, said to them: "My elder brothers, she hath affronted us; we must slay our mother, the wicked one who is already with child. Who is the cause of what is in her womb?"

And when Coatl icue learned of this,[6] she was sorely afraid and deeply saddened. And her child, who was in her womb, comforted her. He spoke and said to her: "Have no fear; already I know [what I shall do]."

When Coatl icue heard the words of her son, she was much consoled by them and her heart was eased of what had so terrified her.

And upon this, when the Centzonuitznaua had assembled for their deliberations, when they had made up their minds that indeed they would slay their mother because verily she had brought dishonor, much did they harden themselves; they were exceeding wroth. As if bursting her heart, Coyolxauhqui greatly incited and aroused the anger of her elder brothers, that they might slay their mother. And the Centzonuitznaua thereupon arrayed and prepared themselves for war.

And these Centzonuitznaua were like seasoned warriors. They wound and twisted [their hair]; they bound their hair about their heads [in warrior array].

And [there was] one named Quauitl icac, who was a traitor; that which the Centzonuitznaua said, he then told and brought as news to Uitzilopochtli.

And Uitzilopochtli said to Quauitl icac: "Watch well what they do, my dear uncle, and pay careful heed; for already I know [what I shall do]."

And finally, when [the Centzonuitznaua] were determined and of one mind in their deliberations cenuia, in coatepec. auh ceppa in iquac tlachpanaia, in coatl icue ipan oaltemoc ihujtl, iuhquin ihujtelolotli, njman concujtiuetz in Coatl icue: ixillan contlali, auh in ontlachpan njman cõcuiaquja yn ivitl, in ixillan oquitlalica aoc tle quitac, njman ic oezzic in Coatl icue.

auh in oquittaque in centzonvitznaoa in jnnan ie oezzli, cenca qualanque quitoque ac oq'chivili y? aquin ocoezzi? techavilq'xtia, techpinauhtia.

auh in jnvehtiuh in Coiolxauh: quimjlvi noquichtioan techavilquixtia çan ticmjctia in tonan, in tlaueliloc in ie oezzli: ca oquichivili in itic ca.

auh in oquijma Coatl icue: cenca momauhti, cenca motequipacho. auh in jconeuh in jtic catca quijiollaliaia, quicalnotzaia quilhujaia, maca ximomauhti ie ne njcmati, in oquicac in Coatl icue, in itlatol in jconeuh, cenca ic moiollali, motlali yn jiollo, iuhquin juhcan tlama.

auh in ie iuhq', in centzonvitznaoa in oquiotlalique in jntlatol, in oquicemjtoq iça quimictizque in jnnan, ichica ca otlapinauhti, ça çenca muchicaoaia, cenca qualanja, iuhquj in quiçaia in jiollo, in Coiolxauhquj, cenca quinioleoaia, quiniollococoltiaia in joquichtioa, in macuele miquj in jnnan. auh in cõtzonvitznaoa, njman ie ic mocõcaoa, moiaochichioa.

auh in ichoantin centzonvitznaoa, iuhq'n tequioaque catca tlacujaia, tlaquauicujaia, quiquauicujaia in jntzon, in jnquatzon.

auh ce itoca Quavitl icac, necoc quitlalitinenca in itlatol, in tlein quitooaia centzonvitznaoa, njman conilhujaia, connonotzaia in Vitzilobuchtli.

auh in vitzilobuchtli: quioalilhujaia in Quavitl icac: cenca tleticmomachitia notlatzine, vel xonmotlacaquilti ic ne njcmati.

auh in ie iuhquj in iequene oquicemjtoque, in ocenietix in jntlatol, injc quimjctizque, injc quitlatla-

4. Sahagún's corresponding Spanish text has "en el seno suyo o la faldriga."
5. Quauitlicac is, in some stories, also said to have been miraculously born, like Coatl icue (op. cit., p. 27), which, however, refers to a virgin birth.
6. Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 43) says that one of Coatl icue's sons told her of the plot to kill her.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

773
539

that they would put to death and dispose of their mother, they thereupon set forth. Coyolxauhqui led them. Much did they exert and drive themselves. They were in war array, which was distributed [among them]; all put in place their paper array, the paper crowns,[7] their nettles,[8] painted paper streamers, and they bound bells to the calves of their legs. These bells were called oyoalli. And their darts [had] barbed points.

tinque in jnnan, njman ie ic vi teiacana in Coiolxauhqui, vel muchichicaoa, mocxcnquetza, moiaochichiuhque, motlamamacaque, intech quitlalique in jmamatlasquij, in anecuiotl, intzitzicaz, amatitech pipilcac, tlacujlolli, yoan in coiolli incoxxitech qujlipique, injn coiolli mjtoaia oiovalli, yoan in jnmiuh tlatzontectli, Thereupon they set forth; they went in order, in columns, in armed display, moving with deliberation. Coyolxauhqui led them.

niman ie ic vi, tetecpantivi, tlatlamantitivi, tlaiciecotivj, momamátivi, teiacana in Coiolxauhquj.

And Quauitl icac thereupon hastened to run up [the hill], that he might warn Uitzilopochtli. He said: "Already they are coming."

auh in Quavitl icac, njman ie ic motlalotitleco, in qujnonotzaz in Vitzilobuchtli quilhuj ca ie vitze,

Then Uitzilopochtli spoke: "Watch well where they come."

njman qujto in Vitzilobuchtli, vel xontlachie can ie vitze

Thereupon Quauitl icac said to him: "Already they are at Tzompantitlan."

njman ie ic conilhuja in Quavitl icac: ca ie tzonpantitlan,

Again Uitzilopochtli addressed him: "Where now do they come?"

ie no ceppa quioalilhuja in Vitzilobuchtli, cá ie vitze,

Then [Quauitl icac] said to him: "Already they are at Coaxalpan."

njman conilhui ca ie coaxalpan vitze,

Once more Uitzilopochtli called out to Quauitl icac: "See where they now come."

ie no ceppa quioalilhuj in Vitzilobuchtli in Quavitl icac: tla xontlachie can ie vitze,

Then [this one] said to him: "Already they are at Apetlac."

njman ic conilhui ca ie apetlac,

Once again [Uitzilopochtli] spoke forth to him: "Where now do they come?"

ie no ceppa quioalilhui, can ie vitze,

Then Quauitl icac answered him: "Already they have come half way[9] up the slope of the mountain."

njman conilhuj in Quavitl icac: ca ie tlatlacapan istivitze.

And Uitzilopochtli again spoke forth to Quauitl icac; he said: "Watch where they now come."

Auh in vitzilobuchtli: ie no ceppa quioalilhuj, in Quavitl icac. quilhuj tla xontlachia can ie vitze.

Then Quauitl icac said unto him: "At last they are coming up here; at last they reach here. Coyolxauhqui cometh ahead of them."

njman je conilhuj in Quavitl icac, ca iequene oalpanvetzi, iequene oalaci teiacantivitz in Coiolxauhquj.

And Uitzilopochtli then burst forth, born.[10]

Auh in Vitzilobuchtli: njman je oallacat,

Then his array he brought forth with him—his shield [named] teueuelli,[11] and his darts, and his dart thrower, all blue, named xiuatlatl. And in di-njman itlasquj oalieria in ichimal, tevevelli, yoan in jmiuh, yoan yiatlauh xoxoctic, mjtoa xioatlatl, yoan icxitlan tlatlaan, ic onmichiuh yn iconecujtl, mjtoaia

7. Cf. Arthur J. O. Anderson and Charles E. Dibble: Florentine Codex, Book II, The Ceremonies (Santa Fe: School of American Research, Monograph No. 14, Part III, and University of Utah, 1951), p. 69.

8. See Fr. Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (Mexico: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1938), Vol. III, p. 99, where medical properties of nettlewort are mentioned.

9. Tlalacapan as one of three in composition, see Angel María Garibay K.: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II (1946), p. 171.

All the place names given here (Tzompantitlan, etc.) are translated in Eduard Seler's Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagún nach dem Aztekischen übersetzt (ed. Camilla Seler-Sachs, Walter Lehmann, Walter Krickeberg; Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1927), p. 256. In the original myth, possibly they were place names, which, in circuit, later came to be names of places around the Temple of Huitzilopochtli, and perhaps to recall the original account. Cf. Sahagún (Rojendo ed., I, 181, and II, 382), where Apaxiuhcan and Cuauhtepec are referred to just as towns but as places about the temple.

10. See Pl. I.

11. Seler, op. cit., p. 256, n. 1: "Schild mit Bilder eine metaphorischen Zweig."

-3-

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

713
539

agonal stripes[12] was his face painted, with his child's offal, called his child's painting. He was pasted with feathers about his forehead and about his ears. And on his one thin foot, his left, he had the sole pasted with feathers, and he had stained both of his thighs with blue mineral earth, and both upper arms.

And one named Tochancalqui laid fire to the serpent xiuhcoatl[13] at the command of Uitzilopochtli.

Then with it he pierced Copolxauhqui, and then he quickly struck off her head. It came to rest there on the slope of Coatepetl.[14] And her body went falling below; it went crashing in pieces; in various places her arms, her legs, and her body kept falling.

And Uitzilopochtli then arose and pursued the Centzonuitznaua, and went among them, and pounced upon them, and scattered them from the top of Coatepetl.

And when he had pursued them to the base, the foot [of the mountain], he took after them and gave them chase around the skirts of Coatepetl. Four times he pursued and followed them around. In vain they went about doing what they might against him; in vain they stood against him, striking about with their shields.[14a] No more could they do, no more could they achieve; neither could they take refuge. Uitzilopochtli quite overpowered them; he made them turn tail; he destroyed them in battle. He completely bested and ill-used them.

And not even now did he let them alone. He kept on. Much did they [then] importune him. They said to him: "Let this be enough!"

But Uitzilopochtli would not content himself with this. With force he hurled himself against them and took after them. And only very few fled his presence and escaped his hands. They went toward a haven to the south.[15] For indeed to that place these Centzonuitznaua[16] journeyed—the few who escaped the hands of Uitzilopochtli.

And when he had slain them, when he had spent his wrath, he took from them their vestments, their adornment, their paper crowns ornamented with feathers. He arrayed himself with these and took ipilnechical, moquapotonj, izquac, yoan inanacatlan, auh ce pitzaoac in jcxi yiopochcopa, quipotonj in jxocpal, yoan quijtzoocoan in jmetz vmexti. yoan vmexti in jacol.

auh ce itoca Tochancalqui contlati in xjuhcoatl, quioalnaoati in Vitzilobuchtli:

njman jc quixil in Coiolxauhqui: auh njman quechcotontivetz, in itzontecon vmpa onmocauh in jtenpa coatepetl. auh in itlac tlatzintlan vetzico tetezititivetz, cecencan veuetz in jma, in jcxi, yoan itlac.

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: njman ic oaleoa, quinoaltoca intlan aquj, quinoaltemovia, q'noaltepeoa in centzonvitznaoa, in Coatepetl icpac.

auh in oquinmaxitico in tlalchi, in tlatzintlan, niman ic ic quintoca, quinniaiaoalochti in Coatepetl, nappa in q'ntlatlaiaoalochti, in qui niaiaoalochti, oc nen quioaloiuhtivia oc nē quioaloiuviaia, oalmochimalvitectiuia, aoc tle vel quichiuhque, aoc tle vel axque, aocmo vel quitzacuilique, çan quincemeviti in Vitzilobuchtli: quincentepotzti, vel quinpopolo, vel quimixtlati, vel quinpoctlantili.

auh in çe aocmo vel quincaouia, in ovel in centech mopilo, cenca quitlatlauhtiaia, quilhujaia ma izquich.

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: amo ic moiolcevi, ca cenca intech motlapalo in quintocac. ach çe quezquitotom in ixpanpa cosque, in imacpa quinque vmpa itztiaque in vitztlanpa, ichica ca vmpa itztiaque, inin centzonvicnaoa, in oquinquintin in imatitlanpa quinque in Vitzilobuchtli:

auh in ie iuhquj in oquinmjcti, in oyiellelquiz quinconili in intlatequj, in innechichical in anecuiol,

12. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 147.
13. Corresponding Spanish text: "Una culebra, hecha de tosca, que se llamaba xiuhcoatl."
14. See Pl. 2.
14a. Seler (op. cit., p. 237) translates this passage thus: "vergeblich versuchte sie ihr an mit ihren Rundes, vergeblich versuchten sie die Schilder an, schlugen sie (mit Abwehr gegen ihn) auf ihre Schilde, sie konnten nichts mehr machen, nichts mehr tun, konnten sich nicht mehr gegen ihn verteidigen."
15. Following cicuitlanpa, the Real Palacio MS has ya in mextecatlanpa. The passage would then read: "This place is known as Uitzilampa, because indeed there these Centzonhuitznaua journeyed. . . . ."
16. Centzonhuitznaua probably centzonhuitznaua is intended.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

[them] for himself; he assumed [them] as his due, as if taking the insignia to himself.

And Uitzilopochtli was also known as an omen of evil; because from only a feather which fell, his mother Coatl icue conceived. For no one came forth as his father.

This one the Mexicans cherished, by making offerings to him, and by honoring and serving him. And Uitzilopochtli rewarded him [who did so].[17] And this veneration was taken from there, at Coatepec, just as had been done in days of yore.[18]

Enough [of this].

qujmotlatquiti, qujmazcati, qujmotonalti, iuhq'n qujmotlavizzi. 773

auh in Vitzilobuchtli: no mjtoaia tetzavitl, ichica ca çan jvitl, in temoc injc otztic in jnan in coacue: caiac nez in ita. 539

Jehoatl in oqujpiaia in mexica injc otlamanitiaia, inic oqujmaviztiliaia, oquitlaecoltiaia, ioan in itech muchioaia in Vitzilobuchtli. auh in iehoatl in tlamaviztililiztli ocatca, ca vmpa tlaãtli in Coatepec, in juh muchivi ca ie uecauh ie izqujch.

SECOND PARAGRAPH, in which it is told how they did honor to Uitzilopochtli and thus worshipped him as a god.

And when the body of Uitzilopochtli was shapen, when they gave it form upon their feast day of Panquetzaliztli, they made it of a dough of amaranth, of fish amaranth seed, which is a spiny herb. They ground it; they pulverized it well; they crushed it into a powder and placed it in earthen vessels, as if it were an unguent—as if it were feather down. They rid it of chicalotl seeds—they cast them aside as useless; they threw away all the petzicatl [bird] seed,[19] the black-seeded amaranth, and the siftings and the corrupted material, and other small rubbish. And this they cast out and tossed away.

And when the amaranth seed dough was made, [it was] like pine [resin], like cooked magney, like an unguent.

And upon the next day the body of Uitzilopochtli died.

And he who slew him [was] the [priest known as] Quetzalcoatl.[20] And [that] with which he slew him was a dart, pointed with flint, which he shot into his heart.

INJC VMEI PARRAPHO vncan moteneoa in quenjn qujmaviztiliaia Vitzilobuchtli, injc qujmoteutiaia. 796

Auh in Vitzilobuchtli: in iquac tlacatia in jnacaio in qujtlacatiliaia injlhujuh ipan. in iquac panquetzaliztli, in quichioaia tzoalli, michioauhtzoalli, ie in chicalotl, qujtecia, vel quicuechoaia, quicuechtiliaia, caxtlaliaia, caxtiliaia, iuhqujn axjn, iuhquin ivitl, qujtlaçaia in chicalotl, vel quitlacujcuiliaia, muchi quiquistiaia in petzicatl, in tezcaoauhtli, yoan ipolocatl, yoan in palanquj, yoan in oc cequi tlaçoltotonti, muchi quiquistiaia, muchi quichichitotzaia, auh in muchioaia tzoalli, iuhqujn ocotl ie on mexcalli, iuhqujn axi.

auh in imuztlaioc in miquia in Vitzilobuchtli in jnacaio.

auh in quimjctiaia iehoatl in Quetzalcoatl: auh injc qujmjctiaia ie mitl, iacatecpaio conaqujliaia yiollopa,

17. For mocchiuaia, the Real Palacio MS has mocchiuaqui, which is perhaps more logical.
18. See P5, 2.
19. Chicalotl and petzicatl: cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 62, no. 24—which identifies chicalotl with michiauhtli or "fish amaranth"—and 30. Sahagún (op. cit., p. 258) translates the phrase mitl chicaoa tzoalli as den Samen der Fischpomelaue; for chicalotl he has Stachelmohn (Argemone mexicana)—probably poppy.
20. See below (Appendix, Ch. 9).

Third Chapter, which telleth—in which is related—[the story of] Quetzalcoatl, who was a great wizard;[1] and of the place where he ruled,[2] and of what he did when he went [away].

This Quetzalcoatl they considered a god. They all adored him as a god. He was prayed to in olden times there at Tula.[3]

And there was his temple, [which was] very tall and high; lofty and towering. Very many [were its] steps, extending in a multitude, and not wide; but each one, in truth, was very narrow. On each step, the sole of one's foot could not be extended.

There, it is said, he lay; he lay covered; and he lay with only his face covered. And, it is said, he was monstrous.

His face [was] like a huge, battered stone, a great fallen rock; it [was] not made like that of men. And his beard was very long—exceedingly long. He was heavily bearded.

And the Tolteca, his vassals, were highly skilled. Nothing that they did was difficult [for them]. They cut green stone, and they cast gold, and they made other works of the craftsman and the feather worker. Very skilled were they. These started and proceeded from Quetzalcoatl—all craft works and wisdom.

And there stood his green stone house, and his golden[4] house, and his coral house, and his shell house, and his house of beams, his turquoise house, and his house of precious feathers.

And [for] his vassals the Tolteca, nothing with which they dealt was [too] distant. Very quickly they could arrive whither they went. And because they were fleet, they were named tlanquacemilhuime.[5]

Injc Ey capítulo: itechpa tlatoa, in jtoloca in Quetzalcoatl in vej naoalli catca: in canjn tlatocac, yoan in tlein qujchiuh iquac ia.

539 [776]

In ichoatl, in quetzalcoatl: iuhqujma teutl ipan qujmatia, netentiloia, teumachoia, in iqujn ie vecauh, in vmpa tullan.

auh in vncã onoca in iteupan, cenca vecapã, cenca quauhtic, ixtachiquauhtic, ixtachivecapan, cenca miec in itlamamatlaio, vel tecpichauhtoc, amo papatlaoac, çan pitzatoton, amo vel cece xocpalli, vmpan onoca qujl çan tlapachiuhtoca, çan ixtlapachiuhtoca, yoan quil atlacacemelle catca:

[346]

in ixaiac iuhqujn tetecujnpol, tehtlanipol, hamo tlatlacaiocoia. auh in itentzon cenca viac, cenca vitlatztic, tentzonpachtic, auh in tolteca, in imaceoalhoan, cenca mjmatia, atle ovi in quichioaia, in quitequja chalchivitl, yoan teucujtlapitzaia, yoan quichioaia, in oc cequj toltecaiutl in amantecaiotl, cenca vel mimatia vel itech peuhtica, vel itech quiztica, in Quetzalcoatl in ixquich in toltecaiotl, in nemachtli, yoan onicaca ichalchiuhcal, yoan iteucujtlacal, yoan itapachcal, yoan itecciacal, yoan ioapalcal, ixiuhcal, yoan iquetzalcal.

auh in imaceoahoan, in tolteca hacan in veca quichioaia, vel iciuhca acitivetziia in campa via: auh injc cenca totocaia motocaiotiaia, tlanquacemilhujme,

1. Nauali. Garibay (op. cit., pp. 170, 171) translates the term as ahua, but suggests three possibilities for precise understanding of the word: (1) if naui is the root, a wizard-quadruped is implied; (2) if the root is nahuali, nahuala (an archaic verb surviving in composition), then the meaning is close to magician or prestidigitator, or—following Molina (cf. nahualtepui, nahualtolli, nahualliachia, etc.)—to lord; (3) if the root is the Maya na, nan, nana, then the meaning approximates wisdom, science, magic. Garibay favors the second possibility.

2. Sahagún (Biblioteca Mexicana, p. 268, n. 1) corrects in canjn to in quenin. This is perhaps more logical.

3. As a deity, Quetzalcoatl was wind god and priest god (Seler: Collected Works, Vol. I, p. 28), or morning star god, god of life, of the morning (Caso: op. cit., p. 18). See also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, pp. 2-3.

Possibly the most coherent account of Quetzalcoatl as the priest-chief of Tula is in the Anales de Cuauhtitlan, of which the best editions are Walter Lehmann's Geschichte der Königreiche von Culhuacan und Mexico (Stuttgart und Berlin: Verlag von W. Kohlhammer, 1938), and Primo Feliciano Velázquez's, in Códice Chimalpopoca. According to this source (pp. 42, 69ff., in Lehmann's Geschichte, and pp. 11ff. in Velázquez's Códice), he reigned at Tula for ten or twenty years following A. D. 873, having been born thirty years earlier of Chimalman, widow of Tezapanh, who died A. D. 834. (See supra, Chap. I, n. 4.) Chimalman is said to have swallowed a green stone, and from it to have conceived. See also Tezozomoc, op. cit., p. 98.

4. Teocuitlatl: gold or silver, according to Rémi Simeon, op. cit. Specifically, 'vessels teocuitlatl (or teul cuyamhqui) in gold, and tetzo teocuitlatl in silver. Cf. Molina (op. cit., Spanish-Mexican section).

5. Those who walked the whole day without doing, according to Sahagún (Rubendo ed.), III, p. 114.

539

And there was a hill named Tzatzitepetl. Just so is it named today. It is said that there the crier stationed himself; [for] that which was required he placed himself there in order to announce [it]. He was heard clearly in distant places;[6a] everywhere was heard that which he said, the laws that were made. Swiftly all would come forth to learn what Quetzalcoatl had commanded the people.

suh vncan centetl tepetl, monocaiotia tzatzitepetl, no çan njuh mjtoa in axcan, quil vncan moquetzaia in tecpoiotl, in tlejn monequia, vncan moquetzaia in tzatzia, vel oncaquiztia in anaoac, vel izqujchcapa oakcaoia, in tlein quitooaia, in tlel naoatilli muchioaia, iciuhca oalvilooaia, quioalmatia in tlel ic tenaoatia Quetzalcoatl.

And also they were very rich. Of no value were food and all sustenance. It is said that all the squashes were very large, and some were quite round. And the ears of maize were as large as hand grinding stones,[6] and long. They could hardly be embraced in one's arms. And the amaranth plants—verily, they climbed up them; they could be climbed. And also colored cotton prospered—bright red, yellow, rose colored, violet, green, azure, verdigris color, whitish, brown, shadowy, rose red, and coyote colored.[7] All different [colored cottons] were this way; so they grew; they did not dye them.

Auh yoan vel mocujltonooaia, hatlaçotli catca, in qualoni, in izq'ch in tonacaiutl, qujlmach in aiotetl, cenca vevejtepopol catca, cequi çan mamalacachtic: auh in cintli vel memetlapiltic, vivitlatztic, çan quimalcochovaia. auh in oauhçoiatl, vel quitlecaviaia, vel tlecaviloia. Auh yoã no vmpa muchioaia in tlapapal ichcatl, in chichiltic, in coztic, in tlaztaleoaltic in camopaltic, xoxoctic, matlaltic, quilpaltic, vitztecoltic, camiltic, movitic, xochipaltic, cosoichcatl yn hia. in izquitlamãtli, çan njman iuh qujçaia amo quipaia.

And there dwelt all [varieties of] birds of precious feather—the blue cotinga, the quetzal, the trupial, the red spoonbill, and all the different birds, which spoke very well; which sang right sweetly. And all the green stones and gold were not costly. Very much [of all this] was owned. And also chocolate—xochicacaoatl[8]—was made. In very many places there was chocolate.

Auh in izqujch nenca in tlaçotototl, y xiuhtototl, in quetzaltototl, i çaqua, in tlauhquechol, yoan in ie izqujch nepapan tototl in cenca vel tlatoa, in vel tepacic cujca: auh yoan in izquich in chalchivitl, in teucujtlatl, amo tlaçotli catca, cenca miec in mopiaia, auh yoan no muchioaia in cacaoatl, in xochicacaoatl, vel mieccan, icaca in cacaoatl catca.

And these Toltecs enjoyed great wealth; they were rich; never were they poor. Nothing did they lack in their homes. Never was there want. And the small ears of maize were of no use to them; they only [burned them to] heat the sweat baths.

Auh in ichoantin in tolteca, cẽca mocujltonovaia, motlacamatia, aic motolinjaia, atle monectoca in jtchan aic maianaia: auh in molquitl, amo intech monequja, çan jc temazcallatiaia,

And this Quetzalcoatl also did penances. He bled the calf of his leg to stain thorns with blood.[9] And he bathed at midnight. And he bathed there where his bathing place was, at a placed name Xippacoyan.[10] Him the fire priests imitated, and the [other] priests. And the priests took their manner of conduct from the life of Quetzalcoatl. By it they ordained the law of Tula. Thus were customs established here in Mexico.

auh yoã in ichoatl in Quetzalcoatl no tlamaceoaia qujçoaia, in itlanitz ynjc quezviaia in vitztli, yoan maltiaia iooalnepantla: auh in vmpa onmaltia, in inealtiaia catca, itocaiocan xippacoiã ichoatl quitlaieichcalviaia in tletlenamacaque, yoan in tlamacazque, inemiliz in quetzalcoatl in qujmonemilizitiaia in tlamacazque, tullan tlamanitilizztli, injc otlamanitiaia, inic otlamanca in nican mexico.

5a. Cfr. Anonyme, v. inf., chap. 12, n. 2.

6. Metlapilli: molinder one que muelen el maye (Molina, op. cit.).

7. Cf. Molina, op. cit., and Simeon, op. cit., on colors. Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 279) offers these variants: camopaltic—"braunfarbig (coyote-farbene)"; xoxoctic—"blaugrünlich"; quilpaltic—"grünlich"; vitztecoltic—"orangefarbene"; camiltic—"schmutzfarbig"; xochipaltic—"rosafarbig"; cosoichcatl—"der fahlgelbe (coyote-farbene) Baumwollstoff."

8. In loc. cit., Seler equates this with "Blumenkakao (xochicacaoatl, Xóchic Kakaoatl)."

9. See Pl. 9.

10. See Pl. 10.

Fourth Chapter, which telleth how the glory of Quetzalcoatl came to an end, and how three sorcerers came to him, and what they did.[1]

And at this time, Quetzalcoatl and all the Toltecs became slothful. And there approached and came, as evil sorcerers, three demons—Vitzilopochtli, Titlacauan, and Tlacauepan.[2] All three practised sorcery that they might bring ruin to Tula.

This Titlacauan began casting the spell. It is told that he turned himself into a little old man. He counterfeited and took the form of one who was much bent and whose hair was very white, very silvery. Thereupon he went to the home of Quetzalcoatl.

When he had gone there, he then said [to the retainers]: "I wish to see the chief, Quetzalcoatl."

Then [the others] replied to him: "Go hence, old man. The chief is sick. Thou wilt vex him."

Then the old man said: "Nay, verily I will see him; verily I must come to him."

They said to him: "So be it. Wait a little. We shall tell him."

And thereupon they informed Quetzalcoatl. They said to him: "My prince, an old man hath come to speak with thee, one who seemeth like a net, like a trap for thee.[2a] We would turn him away, but he witheth not to go. He saith only: 'I will see the chief for myself.'"

Then said Quetzalcoatl: "Let him come; let him enter. For I have awaited him for some little time."

Then they brought him in to Quetzalcoatl.

Thereupon the old man came and said to him: "My grandson, my chief, how is thy health? Here is a potion which I have brought for thee. Drink it."[3]

And then Quetzalcoatl said: "Come here, O old one. Thou art spent; thou hast tired thyself. For some time I have awaited thee."

Injc ·xvj· Capitulo itechpa tlatoa, in quenjn tzõquizqui ynnavizo, in Quetzalcoatl, yoan in quenjn oallaq̃ Eyntin nanacaltin in ivicpa, yoan in tlein quiqujuhque. 539

Auh in ie iuhquj in otlatlaziviti in Quetzalcoatl, yoan in izqujchtin tolteca. auh njmã ic oallaque in tlatetzavico. Eytin, in tlatlacatecuio, Vitzilobuchtli, Titlacaoan, Tlacavepã, i eixtin tlatetzãvique injc tlalpoliviz in tullan.

in iehoatl Titlacaoan, ie quipeoalti injc tlatetzavi, quilmach veuentõ ipan mocuep, ipan mixeuh, ipã moquixti, ovelcoliuh, ovelquaiztaz, ocomo, quaztapaton, njman ie ic iauh in ichã in Quetzalcoatl:

in oonia, njman ie ic quitcilhuja, nicnotilizinequi in tlacatl Quetzalcoatl:

njman quilhuique, nepa xiauh veventone, mococoialtia in tlacatl, ticamanaz, njman njman qujto in vevẽto, ca amo ça nicnotiliz, ça itech ninaxitiz, quilvique, ca ie qualli oc xicchia, tla oc tictolviliti, auh njman ie ic quinonotza in Quetzalcoatl quilhuia, nopiltzintzine, aquin ovalla vevento mjtzmotilico iuhqui mopevilma, iuhquin amo tlaçalma, in tictotoca ça njman amo iaznequi, quitoa ca ça nicnotiliz in tlacatl, njmã qujto in Quetzalcoatl: ma oallauh, ma oalcalaqui, ca ichoatl in njcchia in ie macuil in ie matlac, njman ic concalaquique ipan in Quetzalcoatl:

in vevento, njman ie ic quitlaloa quilhui noxviuhtzine, tlacatle, quen ticmomachitia in monacaiotzin, ca njcan catquj in patli, yn onimjtzalnotquilili ma xicmiti, auh njman quito in Quetzalcoatl: tla xioallauh veventze, otiquihjiovi, oticciauh, ca ie macuil ie matlac, in nimichia:

1. Quiquinhque: probably quichinque is meant.
2. Tezcatlipoca (Tolteccatl), Huitzilopochtli, and Tlahuizcalpantecuhtli, according to Lehmann (op. cit., p. 79). Torquemada (op. cit., p. 79) says that Tezcatlipoca descended from heaven by a rope of ixtle; changed himself into an owlet during a game of tlachtli with Quetzalcoatl; drove him from Tula; and pursued him from city to city, until finally in Cholula.
2a. Atanalqui we may be a copyist's error. We have follow Angel María Garibay, Llave del náhuatl (Otumba, Mexico: n.p., 1946), pp. 91, 135.
3. See Pl. 11.

539

And then the old man replied to him: "My grandson, how, in sooth, is thy health?"

Then Quetzalcoatl said to him: "Verily, much do I ail in all parts. Nowhere am I well—my hands, my feet. In truth, my body is tired, as if it were undone."

And then the old one said to him: "Here is the potion, good, soothing, and intoxicating. If thou shalt drink of it, it will relieve and heal thy body. And thou shalt weep; thy heart will become troubled. Thou shalt think upon thy death. And also thou shalt think upon where thou shalt go."

Then Quetzalcoatl said: "Where am I to go, old one?"

Then the old man said to him: "Yea, thou shalt go there to Tollan-Tlapallan. A man there standeth guard, one already aged. Ye shall consult with each other. And when thou shalt return here, thou shalt again have been made a child."

On this, Quetzalcoatl was [much] moved. And the old man once more said: "Be of good cheer. Drink the potion."

Then Quetzalcoatl said: "Old man, I will not drink of it."

Then the old man said to him: "Drink of it; thou shalt feel a need [for it]. Nay, only place [some of it] before thee [as] thy [small] portion [in case thou feelest] thy desire [for it].[4] Taste only a little of it."

And Quetzalcoatl then tasted a little, and afterwards drank heartily of it.

Then said Quetzalcoatl: "What is this? It is very good. The sickness is now abated. Where went the pain? No longer am I sick."

Then the old man said: "Drink of it once again; the potion is good. Thus will thy body gain strength."

And as soon as he had once more drunk of it—all,—then he became sotted. Thereupon he wept, and, greatly was he moved. Thus, at this time, was Quetzalcoatl aroused; his heart was quickened. No longer could he forget what had happened, but went on reflecting, realizing [that] indeed the devil had tricked him.

And the potion which [the old man] had offered him, it is told, was white wine. And it is said that this [wine] was made of the sap of the maguey called teometl.[5]

[273]

auh njmã quilhui in vevento, nexviuhtzine quen vel ticmomachitia, in monacaiotzin, njman quilhuj in Quetzalcoatl: ca cenca noviã ninococova acan veli in momac, in nocxic, vel çoçotlaoa in nonacaio, iuhquj ciciotomj:

auh njmã quilhui in vevento, ca nican canquj, in patli cenca qualli, iamanquj, yoan tetech quiz, intla ticmitiz, motech quiçaz, yoan qujiamaniliz in monacaio, yoã tichocaz, icnoiovaz in moiollo tiquilnamiquiz, in momiquiz. auh yoan vel ipan tiquilnamiquiz incampa tiaz.

njman qujto in Quetzalcoatl: campa niaz veventze:

njman quilhuj in vevento, ca ça tiaz in vmpa tullan tlapalan: ce tlacatl vmpa tlapia ie vevetlacatl, ãmononotzazque. auh in iquac tioalmocuepaz, oc ceppa tipiltontli timuchioaz, njman ic moioleuh in Quetzalcoatl: auh in vevento ie no ceppa qujlhuj, tlasque xocõmiti, in patli, njman qujto in Quetzalcoatl veventze ca amo niquiz, njman quilhuj in vevẽto, ma ça xoconmjti timotõliniz, ma çan nel noço mixquac xocontlali motonal motoliniz, ma çan achitõ xoconmopaloltí.

auh in Quetzalcoatl: njman conpalo achiton: auh çatepã vel conjc, njman qujto in Quetzalcoatl: tlen j? ca cenca, qualli, in cocoliztli ca oc onpolo, campan oia cocolli caocmo njnococoa, njman quilhuj in vevento, ca oc ce xoconj ca qualli in patli ic chicaoaz in monacaio, auh niman ic ie no ceppa ce conjc, njman ic ivintic, njman ie ic choca vel ielleloquiça, ic vncan moioleuh in Quetzalcoatl, vncã tlapan in jiollo, xocmo conilcacoaia, ça ie in quimattinenca in qujmattinemja vel qujoalmalacacho in tlacateculotl:

auh I patli qujmacac, quilmach ichoatl in iztac vetli, yoan quil ichoatl in teumetl ynecuio ic tlachiuhdi.

4. In Sahagún (Bloque Kapitel, p. 273) and in Angel María Garibay K. (op. cit., p. 136), tlamatiliztli and mamatiliztli are transcribed as tlamatiliztli and mamatiliztli. The present version follows, however, both the Real Palacio MS and the Florentine Codex.

5. The medicinal qualities of teometl are described in Sahagún (Bulmaro ed.), Vol. III, p. 239.

539

Fifth Chapter, which telleth of another fraud which the sorcerer Titlacauan wrought.

And behold another thing which Titlacauan did, thus casting a spell. He took the form and played the part of a stranger.[1] He walked about [with virile member] hanging [uncovered], and sold green chilis. He went to sit in the market place, before the palace entrance.

And the daughter of Uemac[2] [was] very fair. Many among the Tolteca desired her and sought her, that they might marry her. But to none would Uemac listen. He gave her to no one.

And this daughter of Uemac looked out into the market place and saw the stranger with [virile member] hanging [uncovered].

And when she had seen him, she went into the house. Thereupon she sickened; she became tense and inflamed [because of] her desire of the stranger's member.

And Uemac then learned that his daughter was sick. He said to the women who guarded her: "What hath happened? What hath she done? How began that which hath inflamed my daughter?"

Then the women who guarded her said to him: "It is he, the stranger who selleth green chilis. He hath inflamed and vexed her. Thus [it] began; thus sickness seized her."

And Uemac, the chief, thereupon commanded and said: "O Tolteca, let the green chili vending stranger be sought out; [let him] appear [before me]."

Thereupon was he sought everywhere. And when Injc, macuilli Capitulo, itechpa tlatoa, in oc centlamantli tetzavitl, in quichiuh naoalli titlacaoan.

Auh iztatqui oc centlamantli, in quichiuh Titlacaoa, injc tlatetzavi, ipan moquixti, ipã mixeuh Touenio, çan tlapilotinemj, chilchotl quinanamaca, onmotlalito tianquizco tecpã quijiaoac:

auh injchpoch Vemac, cenca qualli, cenca mjec tlacatl in tulteca in queleviaia, in quitlania, in qujmocioaoatizquja, çan aiac quitlavelcaquili in Vemac: aiac qujmacac:

auh in iehoatl injchpoch in Vemac oallachix in tianquizco, qujoalittac in tovenio tlapilotica.

auh in oqujttac niman calac in calitic, njman ie ic mococoa, teponacivi, popoçaoa, iuhqujn qujmotolinj in jtotouh in tovenio, auh in Vemac: njman qujma in ie mococoa ichpoch, quimilvi in cihoa in quipia tle oax tle ay, quen opeuh in ie popoçaoa in nochpotzin, njman quilvique in cihoa in quipiaia, ca ie in tovenio chilchonamacac, oquitlahtili, quitlatolinj, ic opeuh, ie ic ococolizcuje.

auh in Vemac in tlatoanj, njman ie ic tlanaoatia quito, tultecaie ma temolo in chilchonamacac tovenio, necix, njman ie ic tlatemolo cẽmanaoac: auh in iquac aiac

1. The corresponding Spanish text has: "se holgaje, y parecia, como un yndio forastero, que se llama mayya." In the Bakeuio edition (Vol. III, pp. 130, 132, 140) the terms mayya and cocoxtli are given as equivalent. See also Seler (op. cit., p. 274, n. 1), who refers to him throughout as a Huastec (cocoxtlan).

2. Reigned A. D. 994-1070, according to Lehmann (op. cit., p. 42). Torquemada (op. cit., p. 48) has him contemporary with Quetzalcoatl—"aunque en lo temporal era el que gouernaba en Tolan, llamado Huemac; en lo espiritual, y Eclesiastico era Quetzalcohuatl era supremo, y como Pontifice Mexicano." Fernando de Alva Tezozomoc, in Histoire des chichimèques ou des anciens rois de Tezcuco (H. Ternaux-Compans, ed.: Paris: Arthus Bertrand, 1840), Vol. I, p. 6, identifies one with the other. Désiré Charnay, in Ancient Cities of the New World (tr. J. Gonino and H. S. Conant; New York: Harper, 1887) says the same. So does Paul Kirchhoff ("Los pueblos de la historia toltecа-chichimeca," Revista mexicana de estudios antropológicos, IV [1940], pp. 97—Huemac), citing Ixtlilxochitl, Obras históricas, I, 19-20) although the Historia toltecа-chichimeca makes him a child adopted by the Chichimecs (p. 79). Of Quetzalcoatl, Tezozomoc says: "Un dia qu'on lui donna le nom Huemac, parce que pour prouver que tout ce qu'il avait annoncé s'accomplirait, il imprima sur maint sur un rocher comme sur de la cire molle." (See Chaps. xii, xiii.) Citing Ixtlilxochitl, p. 1, col. 3, Tezozomoc says Huemac was an astrologer and sage who led the Toltecs and wrote the Teoamoxtli, a work dealing with the history, genealogy, moral principles, religious beliefs and ceremonies, philosophy, astrology, agriculture, and prophecy of the times; he died aged more than 300 years (p. 6, n. 1).

Commenting on the Anales de Cuauhtitlan, Seler (Collected Works, Vol. III, Pt. 2, pp. 16-17) states that by the time of Huemac, the priestly office was occupied by a priest titled Quetzalcoatl, and separated from the civil office, held by Huemac. This passage summarizes the history of Huemac, which may also be found in Lehmann's Geschichte der Königreiche von Colhuacan und Mexico or in Velázquez's Códice Chimalpopoca. The text of this document, however, states that Huemac was a successor of Quetzalcoatl (see Códice Chimalpopoca, pp. 12 ff).

539

no one came forth, thereupon the herald cried out from Tzatzitepetl. He said: "O Toltecs, [if] perchance ye see the green chili vending stranger, bring him here. The chief seeketh him."

Thereupon they looked and went everywhere; they went scattered through Tula as they looked. And when they had tired themselves and seen him nowhere, then they came [back] to tell the chief that verily nowhere could they see him.

And afterwards [the stranger] appeared of his own will in the same place where he had [formerly] come to sit when first he was seen.

And when he had been seen, then they went in haste to tell [the chief]. They said: "The stranger hath appeared."

Then Uemac said: "Let him come at once."

Then the Toltecs quickly went to seize the stranger. They brought him before the chief.

And when they had brought him, thereupon the chief said to him: "Where is thy home?"

Then [the other] replied to him: "I am a stranger. I sell little chilis."

Then the chief said to him: "Where hast thou been, stranger? Don thy breech clout; cover thyself."

Then [the stranger] replied to him: "Nay, but to this manner are we accustomed."

And the chief then said to him: "But thou hast afflicted my daughter. Thou art the one who must heal her."

Then [the stranger] said to him: "My dear stranger, my dear lord, this may not be. [Rather] slay me, kill me, let me die. What sayest thou to me? I am not the only one who selleth green chilis."

And then the chief said: "Nay, thou shalt heal her. Have no fear."

And thereupon they arranged his hair and they bathed him. Then they anointed him, they gave him a breech clout and girt him with it.

And when they had arrayed him, thereupon the chief said to him: "Look upon my daughter there where she is guarded."

And when he went there, then he lay with her, and then the woman was well. Later [the stranger] became the chief's son-in-law.

neci, njman ie ic tzatzi in tecpoiotl in tzatzitepec, quito tultecaie at canah anquitta chilchonamacac tovenio, xiqualvicacan, qujmotemolia in tlacatl, njman ie ic tlatemoa, novian nemj, qujzaqualotinemi in tullan injc tlatemoa: auh in ocmoxiuhtlatique in acan quitta, njman jc qujnonotzaco in tlatoanj, in ca acan qujtta, auh çatepan monomanexti çan ie no vncan in motlalico in vncan achtopa monexti:

auh in oittoc, njman qujnonotztivetzito, quilhuique, ca onez in tovenio, njmã ic qujto in Vemac: ma oallauh iciuhca, njman ic caantivetzito in tulteca in tovenio, qujvicaque ixpan in tlatoanj:

auh in oconvicaque njman ie ic quilvia in tlatoanj, can mochan, njman ic quilhuj ca ni tovenio, chiltzintli njcnonamaquilia, niman quilhuj in tlatovanj, canjn mach tinemj tovẽioie, ma ximomaxtlati, ma ximotlapacho, njman quilhuj ca çan ie tiuhque:

auh in tlatovanj njman quilhui ca otictlatolinj in nochpotzin in jn te ticpatiz.

auh njman quilhuj noveniotzin, nopiltzi ca amo velitiz, xinechmjcti, xinechtlatlati, ma nimiquj, tlein tinechilvia amo çan njnochilchonamaquilia.

auh njmã qujto in tlatovanj ca amo ticpatiz, maca ximomauhti:

auh njman ie ic qujxima, caaltia in oconaaltique, njman ie ic coça qujmamaxtlatia, qujtlatlalpilia, auh in oc ocencauhque, niman ie ic quilhuja in tlatovanj xiqujtta in nochpotzi, in vmpa pialo.

auh in oonia njman ie ic itech aci, njman ic paric in cihoatl, çatepan imo muchiuh in tlatoanj.

539

Sixth Chapter, which telleth how the Toltecs were angered because of the marriage of the daughter of Uemac; and of another work of sorcery which Titlacauan wrought.

And upon this, the Toltecs jested about [Uemac]; they mocked him and spoke in malice of him. They said: "And so the chief hath taken a stranger as son-in-law!" Thereafter the chief summoned the Toltecs; he said to them: "I have heard that jests are made of me, that already I am laughed at, for I have made the stranger my son-in-law. And this [shall ye do]—by deceit abandon him [while fighting] at Çacatepec and Coatepec."

And thereupon the Toltecs announced war; they all set out. Thereupon they went, that they might leave the son-in-law [to his fate].

And when they had gone off to war, thereupon they planted [apart][1] the stranger and all the dwarfs and cripples.

When they had planted them [apart], thereupon the Toltecs departed, to capture men—to take men from their foes, the Coatepeca.

And the stranger said to all the dwarfs and cripples: "Have no fear. Here we shall destroy them; here, by our hands, they will meet their doom."

And after this, thereupon the enemy took after the Toltecs. They thought to themselves that [the foe] would there slay the stranger, from whom in this manner they went, leaving him tricked, leaving him to die.

And upon this they hurried to inform the chief, Uemac. They said to him: "Lo, we have gone, abandoning the stranger, who was thy beloved son-in-law."

And Uemac rejoiced exceedingly, for he thought that [his death] was fact. For he was ashamed of the stranger whom he had made [his] son-in-law.

And this stranger, when they had gone leaving him abandoned in battle, when their foes, the Coatepeca and the Çacatepeca had already come up, thereupon commanded the dwarfs and the hunchbacks, and said to them: "Pay good heed! Have no fear!

Injc chiquacẽ capitulo, itechpa tlatoa in quenjn qualanque tulteca, in ipampa in inenamictiliz in Vemac ichpuch. Yoan oc centlamãtli tetzavitl in quichjuh titlacaoan.

Auh niman ie ic ica camanaloa in tulteca, quiqueloa, ica motetenqueloa, qujtoaja mach tovenio oqujmomonti tlatoanj, çatepan quinnotz in tulteca in tlatoani quimjlhui, ca onjccac in ie noca camanalolo, in ie noca vetzco, in tovenio onjcnomonti: auh injn ma xoconnaoalcaoati in çacatepec, in coatepec.

auh njman ie ic iaotlatoa in tulteca, cemolini, njman ie ic vi in quicaoazque, in montli:

auh in oniaque in iaoc, njman ie ic quitlaltoca in tovenio, yoan in ixqujchtin tzapame, in vilame, yn oqujmontlaltocaque, njmã ie ic vi in tlatlacaanazque in tulteca in qujntlacaanazque in jniaovan in coatepeca, auh in tovenio quimilhuja in ixqujchtí tzapame, in vilame, macamo ximomauhtica, nican tiqujnpopolozque, njcan tomac tlamizque.

auh in ie iuhqui njman ie ic qujnoaltoca in tulteca in jniaoan, in momatque ca vncan quimjctizque in tovenio, in juhqui ocõnsoalcaoato, quimiquizcaoato.

auh njman ie ic vitze qujnonotzazque in tlatoanj in Vemac, quilhuique, ca otoconcaoato in tovẽio, in momontzin ocatca.

auh in Vemac: cenca papac in moma aço nelli, ace iuhquj, iehica ca ic pinaviztlamatia in tovenio, in oqujmomontica, auh in ichoatl in tovenio in vmpa qujcaoato iaopan, in iquac ie vitze in jniaoan, in coatepeca, in çacatepeca. njman ie ic q'nnaoatia in tzapame, in tepoxtoene, quimilhuj cenca tle anqujmati, macamo ximomauhtican, macamo ximauhca çoneq'can, ma-

1. Tlalnaui: literally, bury or plant in the ground. Possibly a figurative meaning may be assumed.

539

Be not cowards! Lose not heart! [For] already I know that ye will take them all captive, that in some manner we shall slay all of them!"

And when their foes came upon them and fell upon them, then they verily attacked and trampled over them. They slew them; they brought ruin on them; they destroyed them. Multitudes without number they slew of their foes.

And when the chief heard of it, he was greatly bemused and saddened. Upon this he summoned the Toltecs and said to them: "Let us go to meet our beloved son-in-law."

And the Toltecs then surged and burst forth. Thereupon they accompanied the chief; they went dispersed about him; they went circling him, to meet [the stranger]. The Toltecs took their panoply [with them]—the quetzal feather head device, and the turquoise mosaic shield. When they reached him, thereupon they gave and presented him the quetzal feather head device and the turquoise mosaic shield —all their array [which] they had [with them].

With [this] they proceeded dancing; they came dancing the captives' dance; they came bearing [the array] on their backs. They came singing in his honor; the song came forth resounding and reëchoing. They came blowing flutes in his honor; the shell trumpets roared and rang out. The shell trumpets approached, growing in sound.

And when they went to reach the palace, then they pasted the stranger's head with feathers, and they anointed him with yellow paint. And his face was spread with a red unguent. And all his friends were thus adorned.

And then Uemac said to his son-in-law: "Lo, now are the hearts of the Toltecs satisfied that thou art my son-in-law. Thou hast done well. Be received on this soil. Rest thy feet."

camo ximocuetlaxocan, ie ne nicmati, anmuchintin antlamazque, çacoquexixquichtî tiquinmictizque.

auh in oipaneoaco, in oinpancholoco, in jniaooan, njmã in ca ieoaque, qujnquequezteoaque, qujnmjctique, qujmixtlatique, qujmixpoloque, cenca vel mjequjntin, amo çan tlapoaltin in q'nmjctique, in jniaovan.

auh in oqujcac in tlatoanj, cenca motlapololti, yoã motequipacho, njman ie ic qujnnotza in tulteca quimjlhuj, ma ticnaniquiti, yn amomontzin:

auh in tulteca njman ie tzomonque, çoneoaque, njman ie ic quivica in tlatoanj, quitepevitivi, cololvitivj in tenamiquizque, in tulteca intlatqui ietiuh in quetzalapanecaiotl, yoan in xjuhchimalli, in oacique itech njman ie ic qujtlamamaca, cõmacaque, in quetzalapanecaiotl, yoã in xiuhchimalli, in ixqujch intlatquj ietia, ipã mitotitivitz, momalitotitivitz, motelimantivitz, motimalotivitz, momamantivitz, quicuicatitivitze, cujcatl xauhtivitz, cuicatl caoantivitz, quitlapichilitivitze, in quiquixtli milintivitz, î tecciztli, hoaoalacativitz, auh in oacito in tecpan, njman quipotonique, in itzõtecõ, yoan tecoçauhtiça coçaque. yoã mjxtlapalhoatzalvi, yoan muchintî iuh muchichiuhque, injcniuan:

auh çatepan quilhuj in Vemac in jmon, ca axcan pachivj in jniollo tulteca, injc tinomon otitlacnelli, ma tlaltitech xaci, ma xjcmocevilj in mocxitzin.

20

20 -

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

Seventh Chapter, where is related yet another act of magic which the sorcerer brought to pass so that the Toltecs died as they performed penances and danced.

A second work of sorcery this demon [wrought]: When he had been pasted with yellow feathers, when he had bested [his enemies], he then brought it about that they should dance and sing, that they should intone a song.

Thereupon the herald made his cry, from the summit of Tzatzitepetl; he cried out to and informed those in all the world over. Verily everywhere they heard the cry of the herald. And very swiftly all came [to Tula].

And when this was done, then [the sorcerer] went there to Texcalpan. And everyone, all the vassals, went [with him]. And when all the youths and maidens had gathered together, they could not be counted; they were very numerous.

Thereupon the demon began to sing. He sounded the drum; he beat his ground drum. Thereupon all danced; they went as if leaping; all grasped hands; [or] took hold of each other from behind. With much contentment was it sung; [the sound] of the song resounded, and rose and fell.

And the song which was chanted [was] only [one] which he then invented.

And when he intoned the song, right then they answered it. From his lips they took the song.

And the singing and dancing began at dusk. And when it ceased, [it was] midnight.

And as all danced, [as] the movement was vibrant and most intense, very many then fell on the crags in the canyon. All died there, and then were turned into rocks.

And [as for] the others at the craggy canyon, the demon then broke the bridge. And the bridge was of stone. Forthwith all fell there where they crossed the water. All turned into rocks.

And how this was done, not then did the Toltecs understand. It was as if they were besotted.

Inj chicome capitulo: vncã moteneoa in oc centlamantli tetzavitl in quichiuh naoalli, injc mjcque tulteca: injc maceoaia, mjtotiaia.

539

Injc ontlamantli tetzavitl, in ichoatl in tlacatecolutl, in iquac omopotoni tocivitica, in iquac oatepeuh, njman ie ic qujiocoia, in cujcemanoz, in cujcamanaz, njmã ie ic tzatzi in tecpoiotl, in tzatzitepetl icpac, ontetzatzilia, ontenotzaia, icematonaoac, vel noviã quioalcaquja, in itzatziliz in tecpoiotl, auh çan vel iciuhca oalaxioaia.

auh in ie iuhqui, njman ic ompa ia in texcalapa, yoan inq'ch tlacatl ia in maceoalli. auh in oc̃quiz in ixquijch in telpochtli in ichpochtli, amo çan tlapoaltin, vel ixachintin, njmã ie ic peoa in cujca in tlacateculoti, tlatzotzona, quitzotzona, in jvevcuh, njman ie ic netotilo, iuhqujh tlachocholivi, nehaano, necujtlanaoalo, cenca pacoa, in cujco, xxxamacatimanj in cujcatl, yoan caoantimanj:

auh in cujcatl, in meoaia çan vncan in quipicticaca.

auh in iquac cuicatlaçaia, çan njmã qujnanquiliaia itenpã canaia in cuicatl.

auh in peoaia in cujcoanolizti tlapoiaoa: auh in mocaoaia tlatlapitzalizpã.

auh in iquac netotiloia tlatlaxoqujvia, nexoxocoloia, cenca miequjntin õmotepeoaia in tepexic, in atlauhco, muchintin vmpa miquja, niman teme mocuepaia.

auh in oc cequjntin texcalatlauhco, in tlacatecolutl njmã conpoztec in panooanj. auh in panooanj tetl catca, çan njmã muchintin vncã õvetzque, in atl in vncan panooa, moch teme mocuepque.

auh in juh muchioaia y, socmo quen qujmatia in tulteca, iuhqujn oivintiq̃.

539 And many times was there singing and dancing there at Texcalpan. And as many times as there was song and dance, so many times was there slaughter. All were dashed upon the crags.

They fell; verily, the Toltecs destroyed themselves.

auh miecpa cujcoanoloia in ꝑcan texcalapan, auh in quezquipa, cujcoanoloia no izquipa micoaia, netepexiviloia tepexic.

in onnetepeoaloia vel mixtlatiaia in tulteca.

Eighth Chapter, which telleth of another act of magic which that same sorcerer wrought, whereby yet many more Toltecs died.

Behold yet another [act of sorcery] which the demon brought to pass.

It is said that once upon a time he took the form of a valiant warrior. He commanded the herald, the crier, that he should cry to the whole world that they come hence.

The crier said: "Let all men come! Let all the vassals come here! Ye shall go there to Xochitlan. The floating gardens will be harvested."

Thereupon came all the vassals. They came to the flower garden. (And as for naming it Xochitlan: they say it was the flower field of Quetzalcoatl.)

And when the Toltecs had come, gathered and massed together, thereupon the brave warrior slew them; he smote them; he beat the backs of their heads; in sooth, many [of them], without number, died at his hands. For he slew them.

And the rest of them, who indeed fled running, who were in headlong flight, went fleeing from his hands. As they went off, [seeking to] escape, as they ran, they injured one another and there they died. And still others trampled and crushed one another. All died there.

Injc chicuey capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in oc centlamantli tetzavitl, in quichiuh çan ic no ichoatl naoalli, injc oc cẽca miequjntin micque tulteca. 539

Izcatquj oc centlamantli, yoan in quichjuh in tlacateculotl, quil ceppa tequioa ipan moqujxti, qujnaoatiaia in tecpoiotl, in tzatzinj injc ontetzatziliz cematonaoac injc oalviloaz, quitoaia in tecpoiotl, ma ixqujch tlacatl oallauh, ma ixqujch tlacatl oaloïinj in maceoalli, vmpa antlamativitze in xochitla, chinantecoz, tlatecoz, njmã ie ic vitze in jxqujchtin maceoaltin oallamatiaque in xochitla (auh injc moteneoa xochitla quil xochimjlpa catca in Quetzalcoatl).

auh in ocenqujxoac, in ocenquizque, in otecpichauhq̃, in tulteca, njmã ie ic temjctia, tevivitequi, tecuexcochvivitequj in tequioa, vel miec amo çan tlatlapoalli, in jmac mjc, in qujntlatlati, auh in oc cequjntin in çan cholozquja, in mocholtizquja, in jmacpa ieoazquja in jmatitlanpa quiçazquja, in motlalovaia, in motlavitequja, njmã miquja, auh in oc cequjntin moquequeçaia, mopapatzoaia, moch vncan mjcque.

[p. 24 is blank]

539 Ninth Chapter, which telleth of yet another work of magic which this same sorcerer wrought, by which many more Toltecs perished.

Behold still another act of sorcery which the demon did. He came to seat himself in the middle of the market place. He called himself Tlacauepan or Cuexcoch[tzin]. There he caused to dance [a figure] like a child. (They say it was Uitzilopochtli.) In his hand he held him as he made him dance.

And when the Toltecs saw this, thereupon they crowded toward him; they stumbled toward him in order to see it. Very many men were there trampled and died in the press as [the others] crushed them to death.

And when thus many times it came to pass that large numbers died in this way, as they looked while he made [the figure] dance, this same demon[1] said, with shouts, "O Toltecs, what sort of sorcery is this? Is it not an omen of evil that one is made to dance? As for this one, let him die; let him be stoned!"

Then they stoned him. He fell under the stones. And when this was done, [his body] thereafter stank; it smelt quite frightful; in truth, it wounded the head. And wheresoever the wind carried the stench, there the common folk died.

And when already very many men had thus died of its fumes, thereupon to the Toltecs this same demon said: "Let this dead one be cast away; let him be thrown out. For already his odor destroyeth [men]. Let him be dragged away."

And the Toltecs thereupon put a rope about [the body] and then [sought to] drag it away.[2] And now when they tried to heave it, they could not move it. It was very heavy—this, to which at first they had paid little heed, of which they had thought as of little import.

Then a message went out, and the herald said: "Let all men come here! Bring here your heavy ropes that ye may go and cast away the dead one."

And when the Toltecs came to gather together, thereupon they fastened the dead one with ropes.

Injc chicunauj capítulo: itechpa tlatoa in oc no centlamantli tetzavitl, in çan ie no hoatl quichiuh naoalli, injc oc cenca vellapanavia ixpoliuhque tulteca.

Isca oc centlamantli in mochiuh in tlacateculotl tianquiznepãtla in oalmotlalia, qujmotocaioti: Tlacavepan, anoço cuexcoch, vncã qujtotiaia iuhquin piltontli (quilmach iehoatl in Vitzilobuchtli) imac quiquetzaia in quitotiaia, auh in oquittaque in tulteca, niman ie ic ivjc onoqujvi, ivjc onmotepeoa in quittazque, vel mjec tlacatl in vncan quequeçaloia, in patzmiquia, in qujnpatzmjctiaia, auh in ie mjecpa iuh muchioa in miequjntin ie miquj, in qujttaia in teitotia, ça ie no ie in cacateculotl in tzatzic qujto, tultecaie tlen oc ie tetzauitl? amo totetzauh in teitotia. auh injn ma miquj, ma tetepacholo, njman ic quitetepachoque tetica vetz: auh in ie iuhquj njman ie ic yiaia, vel temamauhti injc yias, vel tetzõvitec auh incampa quivica iehecatl in jiaca njman ic miquja in maceoalti.

auh in iquac ie mjec tlacatl ic miquj yn jiaca, njmã ie ic qujmilhuj in tulteca, çan ie no ie tlacateculotl qujto, injn mjcquj ma vetzi, ma motlaça ca ie tlaizpolos yn jiaializ, ma movilana.

auh in tulteca njmã ie ic qujmecaiotia, njman ie ic quivilana: auh in iquac ie quivilana haqueoa, cenca ietic, in achtopa atle ipan qujtta ca qujmoxictica, çatepan njmã ie ic tzatzios. auh qujto in tecpoiotl, ma izqujch tlacatl oallauh: anquinalcuizque amovepanmocauh, motlaçatiuh in mjcquj, auh in ocenquiçato in tulteca, njmã ie ic qujmeme-

1. Cuexcoch, in the Aztec text, is probably meant to be diacritical.
2. See Pl. 12.

539 Then the Toltecs murmured; they said to themselves: "O Toltecs, along with it! Let it be pulled!"

But they could not then raise it; they could not move it. And when one of the ropes broke, then died all. As many as extend.d along the rope tumbled; they fell all mingled together, and then died.

And when they could in no way drag it, when they could not approach it, thereupon the demon said to the Toltecs: "O Toltecs, he hath need of his song."

Thereupon he chanted the song for the Toltecs. He intoned: "Drag away our log, Tlacauepan the demon."

And as they chanted, forthwith they thus made the dead one move;[4] they came forward with it; they proceeded shouting. When a rope [again] snapped, then on all of them the log fell, so that it ran over them. And many were indeed crushed.[4] So were they crushed that thus they died.

And when all the rest who had gone to cast away the dead one, Tlacauepan, thereupon turned back, it was as if they paid no heed to all that had been done to them. No longer did they consider it an evil omen; [they were] as if besotted.

caiotia in micquj, njmã ie ic icaoaca in tultecq, qujmilhuja tultecaie macuele, ma tlatilinjlo.

auh çan njmã amo queoa, avel colinja: auh ī ce cotonj mecatl njmã ixqujchtin miquj in inqujntin itech onoque mecatl, vetzi monenepanotivetzi, njmã miquja.

auh in iquac in çan njmã avel colinja in avel itlan aquj, njmã ie ic qujmilhuja, in tulteca in tlacateculotl. Toltecaie icujc quinequi, njman ie ic quimevilia in tulteca in cujcatl, queuh, xitlavilanaca ie tovepan tlacavepan tlacateculotl.

auh in oquevi, qujn ie ic colinique in mjcquj, qujmotlalochtia, qujcaoatztivi, ice cotoni mecatl, njmã muchintin inpan isuh in vepãtli, in jnpan motlaloa, yoan miequjntin in can moquequenque. inin opapatzoque, ic mjcque.

auh in oquixqujchtin mocauhque quitlaçato in mjcqui, in tlacavepan, njman ie ic oalmocuepa, iuhquin aoc tle ipan qujtta in ixquich inpan muchioaia, aocmo qujtetzauhmatia, iuhquin oivjntiq.

3. Possibly the Aztec should have read ovdiniqui rather than ovdiniqui.
4. Can, in the Aztec text, should probably be pan.

Tenth Chapter, which telleth of still another work of magic which this same sorcerer brought to pass, by which he cast a spell on Tula.

Behold also how the devil brought evil to Tula.

It is said that a white kite, with wounded head pierced by an arrow, flew by, passing to and fro over the Tolteca, not far [above] them. It kept nearing the earth as it flew back and forth. They saw it clearly as they stood and lingered looking upward.

Behold too yet another act of sorcery which was taken as an evil omen for the Tolteca. It is said that a mountain, called Çacatepetl, burned. By night, it was evident from afar how it burned. The flames rose high. When the Tolteca saw it, they became very restless; they raised their hands to heaven; there was great anxiety. All cried out, all shouted together. No longer was there tranquillity; no longer was there peace. And when they saw this omen of evil, they said: "O Tolteca, now is all in truth going [from us]; already the power of the Tolteca goeth. Yea, we are forsaken. What shall we do? Whither shall we go? O unhappy we! Let us take heart!"

Behold yet another act of sorcery. It is said that stones rained on the Tolteca. And when the stones rained, then a large sacrificial stone fell from the heavens; there at Chapoltepecuitlapilco[1] it came falling down. And afterwards a little old woman lived there. She sold [paper] flags; she walked about saying: "[Here are] your little flags." And any destined to die said: "Buy me one," and thereupon went where the sacrificial stone was. None asked: "What now dost thou do?" They were as if lost.

Injc matlactli capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in oc cequj tetzavitl, in ça ie no iehoatl quichiuh naoalli, injc tlatetzanvi tullã. 539

Izca yoan injc tlatetzãvi in tlacatecuiotl, in tullan, quilmach iztac cuixi, tlatzontectica mjstinenca, patlantinenca, mocanauhtinenca, in jnpan tulteca amo veca in quitztinenca in tlalli injc mocanauhtinenca, vel quijttaia acopa cuitztinenca, conacopaitztinenca.

Jaca yoan oc cẽtlamantli in tetzavitl, in jntetzauh muchiuh in tulteca, quil centetl teperl itoca çacatepetl tlatlaia, in ioualtica, veca necia, injc tlatlaia in tlecuecaltotl veca itoaia, in iquac quijttaia tulteca, vel mocomoniaia, maccenanaia, maltimoquetzaia, in netenvitecoia, in netenpapaviloia, aoc tlatlaca mamanca, aoc yvian ieloaia, auh injc quittaia itla tetzavitl, quitoaia, Tultecaie ca ie izquich ca ietivi, ie iauh in tultecaiotl, ca otitlatlaztivitique quẽnel campanel tiiazque, o totlavelilti̇c, ximellaquaoacã. [187]

Izca oc centetl in tetzavitl: quil inpan tequijauh in tulteca, auh in otequjiauh, çatepan oaltemoc illujcacpa centetl vej techcatl vnpa in chapoltepecujtlapilco in vetzico, auh çatepan, onnenca illamato, papannamacaia, quitocinõca ma amopatzin, auh in aquique, momiquitlanja quitoaia ma xinechponcóvi, njman ie ic iauh in vmpa ca techcatl, aiac quitoaia in tlein ie tay iuhquin otlapoloj.

1. Chapoltepecuitlapilco: an etymology, see Godoy, Libro del adivinar, p. 199. Presumably the place was near Chapultepec, today a suburb of Mexico City. Sahagún (corresponding Spanish text) regards vetzico as a place name (Uetzinco), an alternative name of Chapultepecuitlapilco.

[p. 28 is blank]

539 Eleventh Chapter, in which is told yet another work of magic which this same sorcerer wrought, by which he mocked them, by which Tula was undone, and through which he slew not a few Toltecs.

Behold also the manner in which sorcery was practised against the Toltecs.

It is said that the food soured—very bitter did it become. It could not be placed in one's mouth; none of the Toltecs could eat the food. In truth, so were the Toltecs mocked.

And an old woman (they said and considered that it was the devil who appeared and took the form of an old woman) came to sit there at Xochitlan. There she toasted maize. And the maize which she toasted spread its fragrance over all the region. In truth it expanded and spread among all who dwelt [there]. All over the land was spread the odor of the toasted maize.

And when they smelled the toasted maize, the Toltecs found [the smell] good; they found it satisfying and pleasing. And when they smelled it, quickly they came here and swiftly, reaching here in only a very few moments.[1] ([For] it is said that the Toltecs thought no place distant; they thought nowhere [too] remote. Even though they might live far away, swiftly they arrived, and also [as] rapidly [returned] whence they had come.)

And then, as many as had gathered together she slew and destroyed—all. Not then might they make their return. A great mockery was made of the Toltecs, since the devil had slain very many of them. It is said that in sooth he made sport of the Toltecs.

Injc matlactli vei, capítulo: vncan motemoa in oc centlamantli tetzavitl in çan ie no ieh quichiuh naoalli injc teca mavilti, injc tlaixpolo tullan, in amo çan quexquich qujnmjcti in tulteca.

Inca yoan injc motetzanvique in tulteca, quijl in tonacaiotl chichix, chichipatic, chichopatzôtic, muchiuh; aoc tecamac tlaliloia, çan njmâ aoc vel quiquaia in tulteca, in tonacaiotl vel in ca mo:acaiauh in tulteca.

auh ce illamato (quitoa quil ieh in tlacatecuiotl ipan omixeuh, cõmixiptlati in jllamato) vmpa motlalito in xochitla, vmpa teycequjaia, auh in izquitl in quicequia vel onjiaia icematonaoac, vel mpan omolonja, onmotecaia icematonaoac tlaca, centlalli motecaia yn jiaialix in izquitl.

auh in iquac quihnecuja in izquitl in tulteca quivelicamatia cahujcamatia, quivelmatia. auh in iquac quinecuja, yciuhca oalacitivetzia cenca çan achiouca, in oalacia (quil i tulteca hacan in veca qujmatia hacan veca qujmatia, in manel veca nemja. iciuhca onacitivetzia, no iciuhca, in canjn oalenaia).

auh in iquac in quexq'chtin cenquijçaia muchintin vncan quinmjctiaia, quincenpopoloaia, aocmo imiloch innecuepal quichioaia, vel in ca mavilti in tulteca, injc cenca mjequjntin quinmjcti, in tlacatecuiotl, mjtoa vel motultecatlamachti.

1. See Pl. 18.

[p. 30 is blank]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

Twelfth Chapter, which telleth how Quetzalcoatl departed and left in flight when he went to Tlapallan,[1] and of the many things which he did on the way.

And still many more acts of sorcery were done to the Tolteca in order to destroy Tula.

And when these things happened, Quetzalcoatl was now troubled and saddened, and thereupon was minded that he should go—that he should abandon his city of Tula.

Thereupon he made ready. It is said that he had everything burned—his house of gold, his house of coral; and still other works of art, the marvelous and costly things, all [of these] he buried, he hid there in treacherous places: either within the mountains or in the canyons.

And, moreover, the cacao trees he changed into mesquites. And all the birds of precious [feather]—the quetzal, the blue cotinga, the red spoonbill—all [these] he sent away beforehand. Taking the road before him, they went toward Anauac.[2]

And when this was done, then he set forth; thereupon he followed the road.

Then he came to arrive at a place [called] Quauhtitlan. A very thick tree arose [there], and very tall. He stood by it. Then he called for his mirror. Thereupon he looked at himself; he saw himself in the glass and said: "Verily, now I am an old man." Then he named [the place] Uetequauhtitlan.[3] And then he cast and hurled stones at the tree. And as he stoned it, [the stones] remained firmly encrusted and affixed to the great tree. Always thus have they been visible. Thus are they seen; beginning at the foot, they rise there to its top.

And as Quetzalcoatl followed the road, they went blowing flutes for him.

Once more he came to rest at another place. Upon a stone [Quetzalcoatl] rested himself. He supported Inic matlactli vmome capítulo: itechpa tlatta, inic cholo inic cholo moielti Quetzalcoatl ynic vhpa iah tlapalla, yoã in quezquitlamantli quichiuh vtlica.

Auh oc mjec tlamantli, in tetzavitl inpan muchiuh in tulteca, ynic tlalpoliuh in tullan, auh in ie iuhquj, in Quetzalcoatl, in je mamana, in ie motequipachoa, njmã ie ic quilnamiquj in iaz, in quitlalcaviz yn ialtepeuh in tullan, njman ie ic mocencaoa, quilnach muchi qujtlatitia, in itecujtlacal, in itapachcal, yoan oc cequi tultecatlatquitl in maviztlanquj, in tlaçotlãqui, much qujtocac, much qujtlati, in vncan in ovican yn aço tepetl itic, in anoço atlauhco.

auh yoan in cacaoaquavitl ipã quicueptia mizquitl. auh in ixq'ch in tlaçotoxotl, in quetzaltotoxl, in xiuhtotoxl, in tlauhquechol muchintin achtopa qujmioa, ixpan onotiaque, anaoacpa itztiaque.

auh in ie iuhqui, njman ie ic vmpeoa njmã ie ic otlatoca, njman jc acico cecnj quauhtitlan, cenca tomaoac in quavitl hicaca: yoan cenca viac, itech onmoquetz, njman ie ic quioallitlan in itescauh, njman ie ic onmotac, ãmotezcavi, qujto, ca ie niveve, njmã ic vncan tlatocaioti vevequauhtitlan, njman ie ic qujmomotla quitetepachoa in quavitl: auh injc quitetepacho tetl vel itech cacalac, moçacalo itech in vevequavitl, oc no çan iuh onezticaca iuh itzaloia, tlatzintlan peuhtica, iuh vmpanvetzticac in iquac.

auh in iquac otlatocaia Quetzalcoatl quitlapichilitivia.

oc ceppa mocevico cecni tepan onmotlali, moma-

1. See Chapter IV, supra; also Gudeloj, op. cit., p. 286, or Cora, op. cit., p. 18.

2. Anauac. Eduard Seler, in Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher und Co., 1904), Vol. II, pp. 49 ff., argues that the name always referred to the "nördlichen Küstengebiete der Nord- und Südsee, die Länder der Cuitláhuac und an der pazifischen Küste, und zwar insbesondere für Gebiete westlich von der von Mixtec verbindenden Bahnen der Nordländer aus der grossen Handelsmetropolitanen centralamerikanischen ursprünglich . . ."

Of the phrase, tepan onmotlaqui, a note in Seler's Mexiko Kapitel (p. 337, n. 1) suggests it might better read tepan onmotlaqui: "'auf der Wandfläche ist,' d. h. der Anfang auf der Lente eine Niemandem, 'wo man stehen sieht,' d. h. die fremdsprachliche Niemandes in Amaxac Kindsmann."

3. Cf. Gudeloj, op. cit., p. 288.

539 himself [on it] with his hands. Thereupon he looked toward Tula, and then wept; as one sobbing he wept. Now he shed two hail stones as tears over his face; they rolled over his face. Thus fell [tear] drops [which] verily pierced holes in the stone.

matlaquechi, njmaa ic ic ontlachia in tullan, yoan njman ic ic choca, iuhqujn tritzicunoachoca, ic on tecivitl pixavi yxaio ixtlan motetteca yn ixaio: injc chichipica vel qujcnoqionj in tetl.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

539
103

Thirteenth Chapter. Here are told the signs which Quetzalcoatl left in place upon the stone with his hands, when he rested himself there, where he sat.

And as he supported himself by his hands on the rock, he left deep imprints, as if [it were] on mud [that] he had planted the palms of his hands. Likewise his buttocks remained well marked on the rock where he was. Verily they are [now] visible. Because of the hollows, [this place] was named Temacpalco.

And then when he arose he came to reach a place name Tepanoayan, [where] there was water. A river burst forth [which] was very wide and long. [Quetzalcoatl] laid stones and made there a bridge. Then he crossed over on it, and so it is named Tepanoayan.[1]

And once more he set forth and then came to reach another point, a place named Coaspan. And when he was there, devils sought to turn him back. They tried to send him back and stop him.

They said to him: "Where dost thou go? Where art thou bound? Why goest thou now leaving the city? To whom dost thou go leaving it? Who will perform the penances?"

Then Quetzalcoatl said to the demons: "Indeed, in no way can [anyone] force [me]; for I must go [on]."

Then the demons said to Quetzalcoatl: "Whither goest thou?"

Then Quetzalcoatl said to them: "I go there to Tlapallan, for I go to learn [my fate]."

And then they said to him: "What wilt thou do?"

Then Quetzalcoatl replied: "I am called hence. The sun hath called me."

Then they said to him: "It is well. Go, leaving all the works of craftsmanship."

Then he left all the arts—the casting of gold, the cutting of precious stones, the carving of wood, sculpturing in stone, the knowledge of the scribes, the art of feather working. All [these] they wrested from him by force; they made him abandon all; they seized all from him.

And when this was done, Quetzalcoatl thereupon cast his jewels into [a spring of] water, and then they Injc matlacuj vmey capitulo: vncan mjtoa in machiotl in qujlatlalitia, Quetzalcoatl in jmatica in jpan tetl, in vncan mocevi, in vncã motlalli.

Auh injc, momamatlaquechi tepan vel ihilac, juhquijnma çoq'pan oncacalac in imacpal, çã ic no ivi in itzintamal, injc catca tepan, no hiylac, ompopolac, vel nenextica, injc cocoionquj, ic vncan tlatocaioti temacpalco.

auh njmã ic oalcoac in acico itocaiocan tepanoaian, atl icac, atl quizticac, vel patlaoac, patlactic, in tetl contecac panoanj conchiuh, njmã ic ipan onpanoc, yoan njman ic tlatocaioti tepanoaia.

auh oc ceppa vmpeuh njman acito cecnj itocaiocan coahapan: auh in oncãp j vncan quioalcuepanquja in tlatlacateculo, quioalilochtizquja, qujiacatzacuilizquja, quilhuique can tiiauh, can tiiztiuh, tleica ie ticcauhtiuh in altepetl, aqu itech ticcauhtiuh, ac tlamaceoaz.

Niman quimjlhui in Quetzalcoatl in tlatlacateculo, ca çan njmã amo velitiz ca ça niaz:

njmã quilhujque in Quetzalcoatl in tlatlacateculo canjn tiaz njmã quimilhuj in Quetzalcoatl ca vmpa in tlapallan njiauh in njtlamatziuh, auh njmã quihuiq̃ tle taiz njman qujto in Quetzalcoatl, ca nicalnotzalo nechalnotza in tonatiuh, njman quilhuique ca ie qualli xicauhtiuh in izquich in tultecaiotl, njman jc vncan quicauh, in izquich in tultecaiotl, in teocuitlapitzcaiotl, in tlateccaiotl, in quauhxincaiotl, in tetzotzoncaiotl, in tlacujlocaiotl, in amantecaiotl, moch quiteposaltique, moch quitlacaltique, moch qujcujcuilique:

auh in ic inhquj in Quetzalcoatl njmã ie ic conte-

1. Tzanoayan, Tepanoayan cf. Gallegos, op. cit., pp. 283, 289. Tezozomoc (op. cit., p. 38) states that Tzanoayan was two leagues from Mexico City (Tlalmanalco).

539
103

were swallowed up. Therefore he named that place Coxcaapan which now is called Coaapan.[2]

And thereupon he moved on and came to reach another point, a place named Cochtocan. And there a demon then came forth to meet him.

He said to him: "Whither goest thou?"

Then [Quetzalcoatl] said: "It is there to Tlapallan that I go, to learn [my fate]."

Then the demon said to him: "It is well. Drink this, the wine which I have brought here."

Quetzalcoatl said: "Nay, it may not be that I drink, even though it might be but little that I taste."

Then once more the devil said to him: "Verily, it may not be that thou shalt not drink nor taste of it. For no one do I give leave, or permit, to depart whom I give no wine and [not] make drunk and besotted. So do [as I bid thee]; be of good cheer and drink it."

Quetzalcoatl then drank the wine with a drinking tube.

And when he had drunk, he quickly fell asleep in the road. He lay thundering as he slept, resounding a great distance as he snored.[3] And when he awoke, thereupon he looked to one side and the other. He looked at himself, and arranged his hair. Then he named the place Cochtocan.

peoa, in jcoaqui in atlan njman ie ic hatoco, ic vncan tlatocaioti, coxcaapan, in axcan mjtoa cooaapan:

auh njman ie ic ōmolinj onacito, cecnj itocaiocā cochtocan, auh in vncan njmam quicalnamjc, ce tlacateculotl quilhui can tjiauh, njmā qujto ca vmpa in tlapallan, in nitlamattiuh, njman conilhuj in tlacateculotl, ca ie qualli, tla xoconj, y, yn vnctli in oniqualcujc qujto in Quetzalcoatl ca njman amo velitiz in niquiz, in manell achito noconpaloz, njman oc ceppa quilhui in tlacateculotl, camono velitiz, in macamo tiquiz, in maca titlapaloz ca aiac njcnocavia aiac njcquixtia in macamo njcmaca yn vctli, in njctlaoantia, in niquivintia, auh injn tlaoque tlacuele, tla xoconi, in Quetzalcoatl njman ic conjc, in vctli piaztica.

auh in oconjc cochvetz in o'lica, quaqualacatoc in cochi, veca caquizti, injc hicoa...ca, auh in oaliçac, njman ie ic avic tlachia, mohotta, moquapepetla, niman jc vncan tlatocaioti cochtocan.

2. Tezozomoc (op. cit., pp. 498) reports a legend that after having Coxcaapan, Quetzalcoatl went to Cholula, where he remained twenty years.

3. See Pl. 14.

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

773
539
796
532

—After Pan. y Tronco

1. Birth of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
2. Defeat of the Centzonuitznaua (Chapter I)
3. Uitzilopochtli worshiped (Chapter I)
4. Ceremonial sprinkling of impersonator of Uitzilopochtli (Chapter I)
5. Washing after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)
6. Feasting after the year's service to the god (Chapter I)

[p. 36(C)]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

539
796
532
782

—After Paso y Troncoso

7. Praying to Tezcatlipoca (Chapter II)
8. Fir branches on a roadside shrine (Chapter II)
9. Quetzalcoatl performing a penance (Chapter III)
10. Quetzalcoatl bathing at midnight (Chapter III)
11. The old man offering the potion to Quetzalcoatl (Chapter IV)
12. Dragging the body of the sorcerer (Chapter IX) [p. 36 (D)]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952
NU7 Aztec NU7

539
532
764

—After Paso y Troncoso

13. Roasting maize attracting the Toltecs (Chapter XI)
14. Quetzalcoatl in a drunken sleep (Chapter XIII)
15. Preparation of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
16. Burning of corpse (Appendix, Chapter I)
17. Conference with masters of the youths, upon birth of a child (Appendix, Chapter IV)
18. Taking children to the young men's house (Appendix, Chapter V)
19. Tending fires in the song house (Appendix, Chapter V)

[P.36(E)]

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

821

Second Chapter, which telleth of the moon.

The moon (Tecuciztecatl).

When he[4] newly appeared, he was like a small bow, like a bent, straw lip ornament—a small one. He did not yet shine. Very slowly, he went growing larger, becoming round and disc-shaped. In fifteen days he was completely rounded and filled out, as he became entire and mature. And when he waxed full and round, then he appeared, then he arose there at the place where the sun appeared. When it was already dark, [he was] like a very large, earthen skillet—very round, circular. [He was] as if red, a bright, deep red.

And after this, when he had already followed his course a little, when he had risen high, he became white. It was said: "Already he shineth; already the moon is brilliant; already he giveth forth moonbeams." He was then seen to be pale, very white. Then appeared [what was] like a little rabbit stretched across his face. If there were no clouds, if it were not overcast and covered by clouds, like [the sun] he shone, and it was like daytime. It was said: "[It is] almost [like] day; everywhere it is bright. Light is spread everywhere."

And when he had completely reached and attained his brilliance, for as many days as he had thus waxed and been round, little by little he again grew small; he became smaller. Again he became as when he had newly appeared. Gradually he waned and proceeded to vanish. It was said: "Already the moon is dying; now he slumbereth soundly—he falleth into a deep sleep. It is already toward morning, near dawn, when he ariseth." And when he had completely disappeared, it was said: "The moon hath died."

Inic vme capítulo, itechpa tlatoa: in metztli.

Metztli: tecuciztecatl.

In iconc iancuican, oalmomana coltontli: iuhquin teçacanecuilli, teçacanecuiltontli, aiamo tlanestia: çan iuiian, ueistiuhi, malacachiuhtiuhi, teuilacachiuhtiuhi. Castoltica, in vel malacachiui: teuilacachiui, in vel maci, in chicaoa. Auh in iconc, vel oiaoaliuh, omalacachiuh, inic uel neci: inic oalmomana, in ompa iquiçaian tonatiuh: in jconc ie tlapoiaoa, iuhquin comalli, veipol: vel teuilacachtic, malacachtic: iuhquin tlapalli, chichiltic, chichilpatic.

Auh quinjconc, in ie achi quioaltoca, in ie, oalacoquiza, iztaia: mitoa ie tlachia, ie tlanestia, in metztli, ie metztona: iztalectic, vel iztac, inic motta: inic neci, iuhquin tochtõ, isco vetztoc: intlacamo tle mistli, intlacamo missoa, mistemi: iuhquin tona, ic tlaneci, mitoa ieh on cemilhuitl, uel tlanaltona: tlanaltonatimani.

Auh in jconc, ouelacic, ouelmacic, itlanestiliz: in izquilhuitl, ic veiia, malacachiui: çan iuh nenti, oc ceppa tepitonaui, tepitonauhtiuhi, oc ceppa iuhqui muchioa, inic iancuican oalmomana: çan iuiian poliui, poliuhtiuhi: mitoa ie onmiqui, in metztli: ie uei in quicochi: ie ue in ic cochi, ie tlathuitiuhi, ie tlathuinaoac, in oalquiza. Auh in iquac uel ompoliuh, mitoa: ommic in metztli.

BEHELD THE FABLE in which it is told how a little rabbit lay across the face of the moon. Of this, it is told that [the gods] were only at play with [the IECATQUI, ITLATLAYOLLO, inic mitoa: iuhquin tochton, isco uetztoc metztli. Jn hin, quilmach çã ic ica onnesuiltiloc: ic conjsiuitecque: ic conjtlaclaztoque, 539

4. In the Spanish version, the moon (luna) is feminine. Since both the sun (Nanauatzin) and moon (Tecuciztecatl) are male in the fable of the rabbit and the moon, we have made both of them consistently masculine.

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

moon]. They struck his face with [the rabbit]; they wounded his face with it—they maimed it. The gods thus dimmed his face. Thereafter [the moon] came to arise and come forth.

It is told that when yet [all] was in darkness, when yet no sun had shone and no dawn had broken—it is said—the gods gathered themselves together and took counsel among themselves there at Teotihuacan. They spoke; they said among themselves:

"Come hither, O gods! Who will carry the burden? Who will take it upon himself to be the sun, to bring the dawn?"

And upon this, one of them who was there spoke: Tecuciztecatl presented himself. He said: "O gods, I shall be the one."

And again the gods spoke: "[And] who else?"

Thereupon they looked around at one another. They pondered the matter. They said to one another: "How may this be? How may we decide?"

None dared; no one else came forward. Everyone was afraid; they [all] drew back.

And not present was one man, Nanauatzin; he stood there listening among the others to that which was discussed. Then the gods called to this one. They said to him: "Thou shalt be the one, O Nanauatzin."

He then eagerly accepted the decision; he took it gladly. He said: "It is well, O gods; you have been good to me."

Then they began now to do penance. They fasted four days—both Tecuciztecatl [and Nanauatzin]. And then, also, at this time, the fire was laid. Now it burned, there in the hearth. They named the hearth teuxecalli.

And this Tecuciztecatl: that with which he did penance was all costly. His fir branches [were] quetzal feathers, and his grass balls [were] of gold; his maguey spines [were] of green stone; the reddened, bloodied spines [were] of coral. And his incense was very good incense. And [as for] Nanauatzin, his fir branches were made[5] only of green water rushes—green reeds bound in threes, all [making], together, nine bundles. And his grass balls [were] only dried pine needles. And his maguey spines were these same maguey spines. And the blood with which they were covered [was] his own blood. And [for] his incense, he used only the scabs from his sores, [which] he lifted up. For these two, for each one singly, a hill was made. There they remained, performing pen-ic conjspopoloque: ic conjomictique in teteuh: in iconc çatepan oquiçaco, omomanaco.

Mitoa, in oc iooaian, in aiamo tona, in aiamo tlathui: quilmach, mocentlalique, mononotzque, in teteuh: in vmpa teutiuacan, quitoque: quimolhuique.

Tla xioalhuiiã, teteuie: aquin tlatquiz? aquin tlamamaz? in tonaz, in tlathuiz?

Auh niman, ie ic ichoatl vncan ontlatoa: onmisquetza in tecuciztecatl, quito. Teteuie, ca nehoatl niiez:

Oc ceppa quitoque in teteu: aquin oc ce?

Niman ie ic nepanotl, mohotta: quimottitia, quimolhuia, quen on yez, y? quen toniezque?

Ainc motlapaloaia, in oc ce onmisquetzaz: çan muchi tlacatl momauhtiaia, tzinquiçaia.

Auh amo onnezticatca: in ce tlacatl nanaoatzin, vncan tehoan tlacacticatca, in nenonotzalo: nimã ic ichoatl, connotzque in teteu: quilhuique. Tehoatl tiiez, nanaoatze.

Niman quicuitiuetz, in tlatolli: quipeccaceli. Quito, Ca ie qualli teteuie: oannechmocnelilique.

Niman ic conpeualtique, in ie tlamaceoaa, moçauhque nauilhuitl: omextin in tecuciztecatl. Auh niman no icoac, motlali in tletl: ic tlatla, in vncan tlecuilco: quitocaiotia in tlecuilli, teutescalli.

Auh in ichoatl, tecuciztecatl, in ipan tlamaceoaia: muchi tlaçotli, imacxoiauh quetzalli, auh in içacatapaiol teucuitlatl, in ivitz chalchiuitl: inic tlaexuilli, tlaezçotilli, tapachtli: auh in icopal vel ich in copalli. Auh in nanaoatzin, in jacxoiauh, muchi çan aacatl xoxouhqui, acazozouhqui, ey tlalpilli: tlacuitlalpilli, nepan chicunaui, in ie muchi: auh in içacatapaiol, çan iech in ocoçacatl: auh in iuitz, çan ic no ich in meuitzli: auh inic quezhuiaia, uel ich in ieaço: auh in icopal, çan ich in inanaoauh concocoleoaia. In imomestin y, cecentetl intepeuh muchinh: in vmpa, ontlamacenhtiocenca: nauhcoual, mitoa in ocan, ontepe tzocuilli, itzacual tonatiuh, yoan itzacual metztli.

5. The corresponding passage in the Matritense con cuidado has omitted where the Florentine Codex has meuitzli.

Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

ances for four nights. They are now called pyramids —the pyramid of the sun and the pyramid of the moon.

And when they ended their four nights of penitence, then they went to throw down and cast away, each one, their fir branches, and, indeed, all with which they had been performing penances. This was done at the time of the lifting [of the penance]; when, well into the night, they were to do their labor; they were to become gods.

And when midnight had come, thereupon [the gods] gave them their adornment; they arrayed them and readied them. To Tecuciztecatl they gave his sound, forked heron feather headdress and his sleeveless jacket. But [as for] Nanauatzin, they bound on his headdress of mere paper and tied on his hair, called his paper hair. And [they gave him] his paper stole and his paper breech clout.

And when this was done, when midnight had come, all the gods proceeded to encircle the hearth, which was called teoxecalli, where for four days had burned the fire. On both sides [the gods] arranged themselves in line, and in the middle they set up, standing, these two, named Tecuciztecatl and Nanauatzin. They stood facing and looking toward the hearth.

And thereupon the gods spoke: They said to Tecuciztecatl: "Take courage, O Tecuciztecatl; fall —cast thyself—into the fire!"

Upon this, he went [forward] to cast himself into the flames. And when the heat came to reach him, it was insufferable, intolerable, and unbearable; for the hearth had blazed up exceedingly, a great heap of coals burned, and the flames flared up high. Thus he came terrified, stopped in fear, turned about, and went back. Then once more he set out, in order to try to do it. He exerted himself to the full, that he might cast and give himself to the flames. And he could in no way dare to do it. When again the heat reached him, he could only turn and leap back. He could not bear it. Four times indeed—four times in all—he was thus to act and try; then he could cast himself no more. For then [he might try] only four times.

And when he had ended [trying] four times, thereupon they cried out to Nanauatzin. The gods said to him: "Onward, then, O Nanauatzin! Take heart!"

And Nanauatzin, during all at once, determined

Auh in ontzonquiz, nauhiocal intlamaccoaliz: niman quitlatlaçato, quimamaiauito, in imacxoiauh: yoan in ic muchi, ipan otlamacuhque. Inin muchiuh, ic innecoalon, in icoac in ic oalioca tlacotizque, teutizque.

Auh in icoac, ic onaci iocalnepantla: niman ic ic quintlamamaca, quinchichioa, quincencaoa: in tecuciztecatl, quimacaque, iaztacon miniltic, ioan ixicol. Auh in nanaoatzin, çan amatl, inic o:nquailpique: contzonilpique, itoca iamatzon: yoan iamancapanal, yoan iamamatli.

Auh in ic iuhqui, in ouelacic ioalnepantla, in muchintin teteu quiiaoalotimomanque in tlecuilli, in moteneoa teutescalli, in vncan nauilhuitl otlatlac tletl, nenecoc motecpanque: auh nepantla quimômanque quimonquetzque in omextin, y, moteneoa in tecuciztecatl yoan nanaoatzin, quinamictimomanque, quinamictimoquetzque in tlecuilli.

Auh niman ic ic tlatoa in teteu, quilhuique in tecuciztecatl. O tlacuelle tecuciztecatle, xonhuetzi, xonmomaiaui in tleco:

niman ic ic iauh momaiauiz in tleco. Auh in itech oacito totonilloti in amo ianamiquiztli, in amo iecoliztli, amo ihiouilizdi: inic cenca uel ozozotlac tlecuilli, ovel oahoalantimotlali, ouel motlatlali in tletl: ic çan ommiamauhôito, ommotilquetzato, oaltzinquiz, oaltzinilot: ic no ceppa iauh tlaichecoz, iaquich ca ana, ic momotla, quimomaca in tletl: auh ça auel motlapalo, in ic no itech onaci tetonqui, çan oaltzinquiça oaltzincholoa, amo ontlaiecoa: uel nappa, tlaelnappa in iuh quichiuh in moichern, çã niman auel ommomaiauh in tleco: ca çan ie vncan tlatenecoalli in nappa.

Auh in ontlaquisti nappa: niman ic ic ieh contzatilia in nanaoatzin, quilhuique in teteu. Oc tehuatl, oc cuel tehuatl nanaoatze, ma ic cuel.

Auh in nanaoatzin, çan cen in oalmotlapalo, qui-

-5-

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

—resolved—hardened his heart, and shut firmly his eyes. He had no fear; he did not stop short; he did not falter in fright; he did not turn back. All at once he quickly threw and cast himself into the fire; once and for all he went. Thereupon he burned; his body crackled and sizzled.

And when Tecuciztecatl saw that already he burned, then, afterwards, he cast himself upon [the fire]. Thereupon he also burned.

And thus do they say: It is told that then flew up an eagle, [which] followed them. It threw itself suddenly into the flames; it cast itself into them, [while] still it blazed up. Therefore its feathers are scorched looking and blackened. And afterwards followed an ocelot, when now the fire no longer burned high, and he came to fall in. Thus he was only blackened —smutted—in various places, and singed by the fire. [For] it was not now burning hot. Therefore he was only spotted, dotted with black spots, [as if] splashed with black.

From this [event], it is said, they took—from here was taken—the custom whereby was called and named one who was valiant, a warrior. He was given the name quauhtlocelotl. [The word] quauhtli came first, it is told, because, [as] was said, [the eagle] first entered the fire. And the ocelot followed thereafter. Thus is it said in one word—quauhtlocelotl; because [the latter] fell into the fire after [the eagle].

And after this, when both had cast themselves into the flames, when they had already burned, then the gods sat waiting [to see] where Nanauatzin would come to rise—he who first fell into the fire—in order that he might shine [as the sun]; in order that dawn might break.

When the gods had sat and been waiting for a long time, thereupon began the reddening [of the dawn]; in all directions, all around, the dawn and light extended. And so, they say, thereupon the gods fell upon their knees in order to await where he who had become the sun would come to rise. In all directions they looked; everywhere they peered and kept turning about. As to no place were they agreed in their opinions and thoughts. Uncertain were those whom they asked. Some thought that it would be from the north that [the sun] would come to rise, and placed themselves to look there; some [did so] to the west; some placed themselves to look south. They expected [that he might rise] in all directions, because the light was everywhere.

oalcentlami, quioallancoa in iiollo, oalistetenmotzolo: amo tle ic mismauhti, amo moquehquetz, amo motilquetz, amo tzinquiz: çan niman ommotlaztiuetz, ōmomaiauhtiuetz in tleco, çan ic cen ia: niman ie ic tlatla, cuecuepoca, tzotzoioca in inacaio.

Auh in icoac, oquittac tecuciztecatl, in ie tlatla: quinicoac, çatepan ipan onmomaiauh: niman ie no ic tlatla.

Auh in iuh conitoa, quilmach niman no ic onecoac, in quauhtli, quimontoquili: onmotlaztiuetz in tleco, ommotlecomaiauh, oc ichoatl no vellalac: ipampa in iuiio cuicheoac, cuichectic. Auh ça ontlatzacui in ocelotl, aocmo cenca uellala in tletl, uetzito: ic ça motlecuicuilo, motletlecuicuilo, motlechichino, aocmo cenca uellalac: ipampan çan cuicuiltic, motlilchachapani, motlilchachazpatz.

In hin, quilmach vncan man, vncan mocuic in tlatolli: inic itolo, teneoalo, in aquin tiacauh, oquichtli: quauhtlocelotl tocaiotilo: ieh iacattiuh in quauhtli, mitoa, quil ipampa in onteiacan tleco: auh ça ontlatzacuia in ocelotl, inic mocencamaitoa quauhtlocelotl: ipampa i çatepã ouetz tleco.

Auh in ie iuhqui, in omeatin ōmomamaiauhque tleco, in icoac ie otlatlaque: niman ic quichistimotecaque in teteu, in campa ic quiçaquiuh nanacotzin, in achto onuetz tleco: inic tonaz, inic tlathuiz.

In icoac ie uecauhtica onoque, mochiscaonoque teteu: nimã ie ic peoa, in tlachichiliui, nouiiampa tlaiaoalo in tlauizcalli, in tlatlauiltotl: in iuh conitoa, niman ie ic motlanquaquetzque in teteu, inic quichiezque, in campa ie quiçaquiuh tonatiuh. Omuchiuh, nouiiampa tlachisque, auicpa tlachie, momalacachotinemi: acan vel centetis in intlatol, in innemachiliz, atle iueli aca in quitoque. Cequintin momatque, ca mictlampa in quiçaquiuh, ic vmpa itztimomanque: cequintin cioatlampa: cequintin vitztlampa itztimomanque, nouiiampa motemachique: ipampa in çan tlaiaoalo tlatlauiltotl.

And some placed themselves so that they could watch there to the east. They said: "For there, in that place, the sun already will come to arise." True indeed were the words of those who looked there and pointed with their fingers in that direction. Thus they say, [that] those who looked there [to the east were] Quetzalcoatl; the name of the second was Ecatl; and Totec, or Ananatl itecu; and the red Tezcatlipoca.[6] Also [there were] those who were called the Mimixcoa, who were without number; and four women—Tiacapan, Teicu, Tlacoyehua, and Xocoyotl.

And when the sun came to rise, when he burst forth, he appeared to be red; he kept swaying from side to side. It was impossible to look into his face; he blinded one with his light. Intensely did he shine. He issued rays of light from himself; his rays reached in all directions; his brilliant rays penetrated everywhere.

And afterwards Tecuciztecatl came to rise, following behind him from the same place—the east,—near where the sun had come bursting forth. In the same manner that they had fallen into the fire, just so they came forth. They came following each other.

And so they tell it; [so] they relate the story and repeat the legend: Exactly equal had they become in their appearance, as they shone. When the gods saw them, [thus] exactly the same in their aspect, then once more there was deliberation. They said: "How may this be, O gods? Will they perchance both together follow the same path? Will they both shine together?"

And the gods all issued a judgment. They said: "Thus will this be; thus will this be done."

Then one of the gods came out running. With a rabbit he came to wound in the face this Tecuciztecatl; with it he darkened his face; he killed its brilliance. Thus doth it appear today.

And when this was done, when both appeared [over the earth] together, they could, on the other hand, not move nor follow their paths. They could only remain still and motionless. So once again the gods spoke: "How shall we live? The sun cannot move. Shall we perchance live among common folk? [Let] this be, that through us the sun may be revived. Let all of us die."

Auh in cequintin, vel vmpa iztimomãque in tlauhcopa: quitoque. Ca ie vmpa hin, ie vncan hin in quiçaquiuh tonatiuh: ichoantin uel neltic in intlatol, in vmpa tlachisque, in vmpa mapiloque. Iuh quitoa, ichoantin in vmpa tlachisque, quetzalcoatl: ic onteel itoca hecatl, yoan in totec, anoço anoço anaoatl itecu, yoan tlatlauic tezcatlipoca: no ichoantin in motenecoa mimixcoa, in amo çã tlapoaltin: yoan cioa nauin, tiacapan, teicu, tlacoiehoa, xocoiotl. 539

Auh in jcoac, oquiçaco, in omomanaco tonatiuh: iuhquin tlapalli monenecuilotimanj, amo vel ianamico, teixmimicti: cenca tlanestia, motonameiotia, in itonameio nouiiampa xacitimoquetz, auh in itonalmiio nouiiampa cacalac.

Auh çatepan, quiçaco in tecuciztecatl, quioaltocatia: çan ie no vmpa in tlauhcopa, itloc onmomanaco in tonatiuh: in iuh onuetzque tleco, çan no iuh oalquizque, oalmotocatiaque.

Auh in iuh conitoa, tlatlanonotza, teçaçanilhuia: çan neneuhqui in intlachieliz muchiuh, inic tlanestiaia. In icoac oquimittaque teteu, in çan neneuhqui intlachieliz: nimã ic no ceppa ic nenonotzalo: quitoque. Quen iezque, y, teteuie? cuis onteistin otlatocazque, onteistin iuh tlanestizque?

Auh in teteu, muchintin oallatzõtecque: quitoque. Iuh iez, y, iuh, muchioaz y.

Niman ic ce tlacatl, ommotlalotiquiz in teteu: ic conisuiuitequito in tochin, in ichoatl tecuciztecatl, ic conispopoloque, ic conisomictique: in iuhqui ascan ic tlachie.

Auh in ie iuhqui: in icoac ie omomanaco onteistin, ie no cuele suel olini, otlatoca, çan momanque, motetẽmanque. Ic ie no ceppa quitoque in teteu. Quen tinemjzque, amo olinj in tonatiuh: cuis tiquinnelotinemjzque in maçeoalti? Auh inin, ma toca mocalti, ma timuchintin timiquican.

---

6. This passage reproduces what the Aztec appears to mean. The data do not all conform with those set forth in standard sources. It might be noted, however, that with passage of time the attributes, personalities, and manifestations of the gods underwent considerable changes. Cf. John Eric Thompson: Mexico Before Cortez (New York: Scribner's Sons, 1933); Angel María Garibay K: Llave del náhuatl (Otumba: [Imprenta Mayll, S. A.], 1940), pp. 197-207; Alfonso Caso: La religión de los aztecas (México: Imprenta Mundial, 1936).

539 Then it became the office of Ecatl to slay the gods. But they say thus: that Xolotl wished not to die. He said to the gods: "Let me not die, O gods." Wherefore he wept much; his eyes and his eyelids swelled.

And when he who dealt death was to overtake him, he fled from his presence; he ran; he quickly entered a field of green maize, and took the form of, and quickly turned into, two young maize stalks [growing] from a single root, which the workers in the field have named xelotl. But there, in the field of green maize, he was seen. Then once again he fled from him; once more he quickly entered a maguey field. There also he quickly changed himself into a maguey plant [consisting of] two [parts] called mexelotl. Once more he was seen, and once more he quickly entered into the water and went to take the shape of [an amphibious animal called] axolotl. There they could go to seize him, that they might slay him.

[136]

And they say that though all the gods died, even then the sun god could not move and follow his path. Thus it became the charge of Ecatl, the wind, who arose and exerted himself fiercely and violently as he blew. At once he could move him, who thereupon went on his way. And when he had already followed his course, only the moon remained there. At the time when the sun came to enter the place where he set, then once more the moon moved. So, there, they passed each other and went each one his own way. Thus the sun cometh forth once, and spendeth the whole day [in his work]; and the moon undertaketh the night's task; he worketh all night; he doth his labor at night.

From this it appeareth, it is said, that the moon, Tecuciztecatl, would have been the sun if he had been first to cast himself into the fire; because he had presented himself first and all [his offerings] had been costly in the penances.

Here endeth this legend and fable, which was told in times past, and was in the keeping of the old people.

Nimã ic ich itequiuh õmochiuh, in hecatl, ie quinmjctia in teteu: auh in iuh conitoa, in xolotl, amo momiquitlania: quimilhui in teteu. Macamo nimiqui teteuie. Ic cẽca chocaia, vel ispopoçaoac, isquatolpopoçaoac.

Auh in ie itech onaci miquiztli, çan teispãpa eoac, cholo, toctitlan calactiuetz: ipan onmixuch, ic mocueptiuetz, in toctli ome manj, maxaltic: in quitocaiotia millaca, xolotl. Auh vncan itoc in toctitlan: ie no ceppa teispampa eoac, ie no cuele metitlan calactiuetz: no ic õmocueptiuetz in metl, ome manj, in itocã mexolotl. Ie no ceppa itoc, ie no cuele atlan calactiuetz, axolotl mocuepato: ie vel vmpa canato, inic conmictique.

Auh quitoa, in manel muchintin teteu omicque, ça nel amo ic olin, amo vel ic otlatocac in teutl tonatiuh: ic itequiuh ommuchiuh in hecatl, moquetz in ehecatl, cenca molhui, totocac, in ehecac: quin iehoatl vel colinj, nimah ie ic otlatoca. Auh in icoac, ie otlatoca, çan vmpa ommocauh in metztli: quinicoac in ocalaquito icalaquian tonatiuh, ie no cuele ic oalcoac in metztli: ic vncan mopatilique, motlallotique. Inic ceppa oalquiça tlacemilhuitiltia in tonatiuh: auh in metztli iooaltequitl quitlaça cẽiooal quitlaça, iooaltequiti.

Ic vncã hin neri, mitoa: ca iehoatl tonatiuh ieztquia in metztli tecuciztecatl, intla ic achto onuetzinj tleco: ipampa ca iehoatl achto misquetz, inic nuchi tlaçotli ipan tlamaceuh.

Nican tlami, in hin nenonotzalli, çaçanilli: in ie uecauh ic tlatlanonotzaia, veuetque, in impiel catca.

Eclipse of the Moon.

821 843 When the moon eclipsed, his face grew dark and sooty; blackness and darkness spread. When this came to pass, women with child feared evil; they thought it portentous; they were terrified [lest], perchance, their [unborn] children might be changed

Metztli qualo.

In icoac, qualo metztli: ixtilteoa, ixtuichoua, cuichecatimomana, tlaiocatimomana. In icoac, y, muchiou: uel motẽmatia in cocozin, tlaucimatia, momauhtiuia: ma nelli mequimichcuepti, ma quiquimichtimocuepti, in impilhoan.

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

This is the tale of the rabbit which is in the moon. They say that the gods played tricks on the moon and struck him in the face with a rabbit; and the rabbit remained marked upon his face. And with it they darkened his face as if with a weal. Thereafter he came forth to light the world. They said that, before there was day in the world, the gods came together in that place which is named Teotihuacan (which is the town of San Juan, between Chiconauhtlan and Otumba). They said to one another: "O gods, who will have the burden of lighting the world?" Then to these words answered a god named Tecuciztecatl, and he said: "I shall take the burden of lighting the world." Then once more the gods spoke, and they said: "Who will be another?" Then they looked at one another, and deliberated on who the other would be. And none of them dared offer himself for that office; all were afraid and declined. One of the gods, to whom no one was paying attention, and who was covered with pustules, did not speak but listened to what the other gods were saying. And the others spoke to him and said to him:

La fabula del concio que esta en la luna: es esta. Dizen, que los dioses se burlaron con la luna y dieronla con vn concio en la cara, y quedole el concio señalado en la cara: y con esto le escurecieron la cara como con vn cardenal. Despues desso salio pa alumbrar al mundo. Dezian, que antes que ouiese dia en el mundo que iuntaron los dioses en aquel lugar que se llama teutioacã, (que es el pueblo de San Juan entre chicunauhtlan y otumba) dixeron los vnos a los otros. Dioses, quien tendra cargo de alumbrar al mundo? luego a estas palabras respondio vn dios que se llamaua Tecuciztecatl y dixo. Yo tomo a cargo de alumbrar al mundo. Luego otra vez hablaron los dioses y dixeron quien sera otro? Luego se mirarõ los vnos a los otros, y conferian quien seria el otro. Y ninguno dellos osaua ofrecerse a aquel ofi.° todos temian y se escusavan. Vno dellos dioses de q̃ no se hazia cuẽta y era buboso, no hablaua sino oya lo que los otros dioses dezian. Y los otros hablaronle y dixerõle: Se tu el que alumbres bubosito. Y el de buena voluntad obedecio a lo que le mandaron y respondio, en mrd reçibo lo que me aveis mandado

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

"You be the one who is to give light, little pustule-covered one." And right willingly he obeyed what they commanded, and he answered: "Thankfully I accept what you have commanded me [to do]. Let it be [as you say]." And then both began to perform penances for four days.

se assi. Y luego los dos començaron a hazer penitencia quatro dias.

And then they lit a fire in the hearth which was made on a crag (which now they call teotexcalli). [As for] the god named Tecuciztecatl, all which he offered was costly. Instead of branches he offered precious feathers named quetzalli. And instead of balls of straw he offered balls of gold. And instead of maguey spines he offered spines made of precious stones. And instead of bloodied spines, he offered spines made of red coral. And the copal incense which he offered was very good. And the pustule-covered one, who was named Nanauatzin, in place of branches offered green rushes tied in threes—in all amounting to nine. And he offered balls of straw and maguey spines, and he bloodied them with his own blood. And instead of copal incense he offered the scabs from his pustules. For each of these was raised a tower like a mountain. On these same mountains they did penance four nights. (Today these moun-

Y luego encendieron fuego ẽ el hogar el qual era hecho ẽ vna peña (que agora llaman teutexcalli). El dios llamado Tecuciztecatl todo lo que ofrecia era precioso: en lugar de ramos ofrecia plumas ricas que se llamã quetzalli. Y en lugar de pelotas de heno, ofrecia pelotas de oro: y en lugar de espinas de maguei ofrecia espinas hechas de piedras preciosas: y en lugar de espinas ẽsangrentadas, ofrecia espinas hechas de coral colorado: y el copal que ofrecia era muy bueno. Y el buboso que se llamaua Nanauatzin en lugar de ramos ofrecia cañas verd's atadas de tres en tres, todas ellas llegauan a nueue: y ofrecia bolas de heno y espinas de maguei, y ensangrentaualas con su misma sangre: y ẽ lugar de copal ofrecia las postillas de las bobas. A cada vno destos se les edifico vna torre como mõte, en los mismos montes hizierõ penitencia quatro noches agora se llamã estos mõtes tzacualli. estan ambos cabe el pu.° de s. Ju.° que se llama testains are called tzacualli; they are both near the town of San Juan, which is called Teotihuacan.) After they ended their four nights of penance, then they threw away the branches and all else with which they had performed penances.

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

This was done at the end, or at the conclusion, of the penitence, when, the next night—at midnight—they were to begin to perform their offices. And a little before midnight [the other gods] gave them their adornment. To the one named Tecuciztecatl they gave a feather [headdress] called aztacomitl and a linen jacket. And [as for] the pustule-covered one named Nanauatzin, they covered his head with [a] paper [headdress] called amatzontli, and put upon him a stole of paper and a paper breech clout. And midnight having come, all the gods placed themselves about the hearth, called teotexcalli. In this place the fire blazed four days. The aforementioned gods arranged themselves in two rows, some at one side of the fire, some at the other side. And then the two [gods] above mentioned placed themselves before the fire, facing the fire, between the two rows of gods, all of whom were standing. And then the gods tiuacã. Desque se acabaron las quatro noches de su poja, luego echarõ por ay los ramos

y todo lo de mas con que hizieron la poja. Esto se hizo al fin, o al remate de su poja, quando la noche siguiẽte a la media noche avian de comẽçar a hazer sus oficios. Y ante vn poco de la media noche dieronles sus adereços. A aquel que se llamava tecuciztecatl dierõ vn plumaje llamado aztacomitl y vna xaqueta de lienço: y al buboso que se llama nanavatzin tocaronle la cabeça cõ papel q̃ se llama amatzontli, y pusierõle vna stola de papel y vn mastli de papel. Y llegada la media noche todos los dioses se pusieron en derredor del hogar que se llama teutezcalli en este lugar ardio el fuego quatro dias: ordenaronse los dhos dioses en dos rencles, vnos de la vna pte del fuego, otros de la otra pte. Y luego los dos sobredhos se pusieron delante del fuego, las caras hazia el fuego en medio de las dos rencles de los dioses: los quales todos estauã leuãtados. Y luego hablaron los dioses y dizeron a tecuciztecatl. Ea pues spoke, and said to Tecuciztecatl: "How now, Tecuciztecatl! Go into the fire!" And then he braced himself to cast himself into the fire.

539

And since the fire was large and blazed high, as he felt the great heat of the fire, he became frightened and dared not cast himself into the fire. He turned back. Once more he turned to throw himself into the fire, making an effort and drawing nearer, to cast himself into the flames. But, feeling the great heat, he held back and dared not cast himself [into it]. Four times he tried, but never let himself go. A rule [had been] made not to try more than four times. Since he had tried four times, the gods then spoke to Nanauatzin, and said to him: "How now, Nanauatzin! You try!" And when the gods had addressed him, he exerted himself, and with closed eyes undertook [the ordeal] and cast himself into the flames. And then he began to crackle and pop in the fire like one who is roasted.

tecuciztecatl entra tu en el fuego. Y el luego acometio pa echarse en el fuego.

Y como el fuego era grande y estaua muy encendido, como sintio el gran calor del fuego, ouo miedo no oso echarse en el fuego, boluiose atras: otra vez torno para echarse en el fuego haziendose fuerça, y llegandose mas acerca para echarse en el fuego: pero sintiendo el calor grande detuuose, no oso echarse. Quatro vezes prouo, pero nunca se dejo echar: estaua puesto mãdamj.° que no prouarse mas de quatro vezes. Desque ouo prouado quatro vezes los dioses luego hablaron a nanauatzin y dizeronle. Ea pues nanauatzin prueua tu. Y comon le quieron hablado los dioses, esforçose y cerrado los ojos arremetio y echose en el fuego. Y luego esmenço a rechinar y respendar en el fuego como quien se asa. Y como vio tecuciztecatl 539 And when Tecuiztecatl saw that [Nanauatzin] had cast himself into the flames, and was burning, he gathered himself [for the ordeal] and threw himself into the fire. And it is said that an eagle entered the blaze and also burned itself; and for that reason it has dark brown or blackened feathers. Finally a tiger [ocelot] entered; it did not burn itself, but [only] singed itself; and for that reason remained stained black and white. From here was taken the custom of calling men dexterous in war quauhtlocelotl. And they said quauhtli first, because the eagle first entered the flames. And last ocelotl is said, because the tiger [ocelot] entered the fire after the eagle. After both [the gods] had thrown themselves into the fire, and after they had burned, then the gods seated themselves to wait [to see] from what direction Nanaua[tzin] would come to rise.

que se avia echado en el fuego y ardia, arremetio y echose en el fuego. Y dizque luego vna aguila entro en el fuego y tambien se quemo: y por eso tiene las plumas hoscas o negrestinas. A la postre entro vn tigre no se quemo sino chamascose: y por eso q̃do manchado de negro y blanco. Deste lugar se tomo la costumbre de llamar a los hombres diestros en la guerra quauhtlocelotl. Y dizen primero quauhtli porque el aguila p'mero entro en el fuego. Y dizese a la postre ocelotl porque el tigre entro en el fuego a la postre del aguila. Despues que ambos se ouieron arrojado en el fuego, y despues que se ouierõ quemado: luego los dioses se sentaron a esperar a que pte vendria salir el nanaua. Despues que estuuiero grã rato esperando, 539 After they had waited a long time, the heavens began to redden, and in every quarter the dawn appeared. And they say that after this the gods knelt down to wait [to see] where Nanauz[tzin], become sun, would rise. In every direction they looked, turning about. They never succeeded in guessing or saying from what quarter he would rise. They agreed in nothing. Some thought that he would come up in the north, and stood up to look there. Others stood to look toward the west; others to the south. They conjectured that he was to come forth in all directions, because at all the cardinal points there was the brilliance of the dawn. Others placed themselves so as to look to the east. They said: "Here, from this direction, the sun must rise." The declaration of these was true. They say that those who looked to the east were Quetzalcoatl; a second named Ehecatl; and another named Totec, or, by another name Anauatl itecu, and by [still] another name, Tlatlauic Tezcatlipoca; and others called Mimixcoa, who are without number; and four women, one named Tiacapan, another Teicu, a third Tlacoyenu, and a fourth Xocoyotl.

Començose a parar colorado el cielo: y en toda pte aparecio la luz d'l alua. Y dizen que despues desto, los dioses se hincaron de rodillas pa esperar adonde saldria nanava hecho sol, a todas ptes mirauan boluiendose en rededor, nun acertaron a pensar ni a dezir a que pte saldria, en ninguna cosa se determinaron. Algunos pensaron que saldria de la pte del norte y paronse a mirar hazia alla: otros se pararon a mirar hazia el poniente: otros hazia el medio dia: a todas ptes suspecharon que avia de salir, porque a todas ptes avia resplandor del alua: otros se pusieron a mirar hazia el oriente dixeron aqui desta pte a de salir el sol: el dho destos fue verdadero. dizen que los que miraron hazia el oriente fueron Quetzalcoatl el 2.° que llama hecatl y otro que se llama totec y por otro nõbre anavatl ytecu y por otro nombre tlatlauic tezcatlipuca: y otros que se llamã mimixcoa que son inumerables: y quatro mugeres, la vna se llama tiacapã, la otra teycu, la tercera tlalcoyena, la quarta xocoyotl.

5: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

539

And when the sun came to rise, he looked very red. He appeared to waddle from one side to the other. None could look at him, because he snatched sight from the eyes. He shone and cast rays [of light] from himself in grand style. His light and his rays he poured forth in all directions. And thereafter the moon rose, in the same quarter, the east, like the sun. First the sun came forth, and after him came out the moon; in the order that they entered the fire, in [that] same [order] they came out made sun and moon. And those who tell stories or tales say that they had equal light with which they illuminated [the world]. And when the gods saw that they shed equal brilliance, they again spoke among themselves, and said: "O gods, how shall this be? Will it be well that both go alike? Will it be well that they illuminate equally?" And the gods gave a command, and said: "Let it be thus; let it be thus done." And then one of them went running and with a rabbit struck Tecaciztecatl in the face. He darkened his face and deadened [its] brilliance, and his face remained as it is today.

Y quando vino ꝑ salir el sol, parecio muy colorado, parecia que se cõtoneava de vna pte a otra, nadie lo podia mirar porque quitaua la vista de los ojos, resplandecia y echava rayos de si en grã manera su luz y sus rayos se derramo por todas ptes. Y despues salio la lũa en la misma pte del oriente a par del sol: Primero salio el sol y tras el salio la luna, por la orden que entraron en el fuego por la mesma salierõ hechos sol y luna. Y dizen los q̃ cuẽtan fabulas o hablillas que tenian ygual luz con que alumbrauan y desque vieron los dioses que ygualmente resplandecian, hablaronse otra vez y dixeron. O dioses como sera esto? sera bien que vayan ambos a la par? sera bien que ygualmente alumbren? Y los dioses dieron señia y dixeron. Sea desta manera, hagase desta manera. Y luego vno dellos fue corriendo y dio con vn conejo en la cara a tecuciztecatl escureciole la cara y amatole el resplandor y quedo como agora esta su cara. Despues que ouieron salido ambos sobre la tẽra,

After both had come forth over the earth, the sun and moon remained still, without moving from one estuuieron quedos sin mudarse de vn lugar sol y la luna. Y los dioses otra vez se hablaron y dixeron.

539

place. And the gods once more spoke, and said: "How may we live? The sun does not move himself! Are we to live among the peasants? Let us all die and make him revive through our death!" And then the Wind took charge of killing all the gods, and he slew them. And it is told that one, named Xolotl, refused to die, and said to the gods: "O gods, let me not die." And he wept exceedingly, so that his eyes swelled with weeping. And when the slayer came to him, he hid in the maize fields, and he changed and turned [824] himself into the foot of a maize plant which has two stalks, and the field workers call it xolotl. And he was seen and found among the feet of the maize stalks. Again he took flight and hid among the maguey plants, and changed himself into a maguey plant which has two bodies, which is called mexolotl. Once more he was seen, and he took flight and placed himself in the water and made himself into a fish which is called axolotl. From there they took him and slew him. And they say that although the gods were slain, not on that account did the sun move. And then the Wind began to blow and raise a strong gale. He made him move, so that he might go on his way. And after the sun began to travel, the moon was quiet in the place where he was.

Como podemos biuir no se menea el sol, emos d' biuir entre los villanos? muramos todos y hagamosle q̃ resucite por nr̃a muerte. Y luego ayre se encargo de matar a todos los dioses, y matolos. Y dizese que vno llamado Xolotl rehusava la muerte, y dixo a los dioses. O dioses no muera yo y llorava gran manera de manera que se le hincharon los ojos de llorar. Y quando llego a el el q̃ matava hecho a huyr, escondiose entre los mayzales, y boluiose y con(ver)tiose en pie de mayz q̃ tiene dos cañas y los labradores le llaman xolotl. Y fue visto y hallado entre los pies del mayz, otra vez hecho a huyr y se escondio entre los magueys y convertiose en maguey que tiene dos cuerpos, q̃ se llama mexolotl: otra vez fue visto y hecho a huyr y metiose en el agua y hizose pez q̃ se llama axolotl de alla le tomaron y le mataron. Y dizen que avnque fueron muertos los dioses no por esso se mouio el sol y luego el viento començo a soplar o ventear reziamente: el le hizo moverse pa que anduuiese su camino. Y despues q̃ el sol començo a caminar, la lũa se estuuo quieta en el lugar donde estaua.

539

After the sun had set, the moon began to move. Thus the one got away from the other. And thus they come forth at different times. The sun endureth one day, and the moon worketh at night (or illuminateth at night). From this cometh what is said: that Tecuciztecatl would have been the sun if he had cast himself first into the fire, because he was named first, and offered precious things in his penance.

Despues que el sol se puso començó la luna a andar: desta manera se deuisaron el vno del otro: y assi salen ê diuersos tiempos. El sol dura vn dia y la luna trabaia en la noche o alumbra en la noche. De aqui parece lo que se dize q̃ el tecuciztecatl avia de ser sol si p'mero se ouiera echado en el fuego porque el p'mero fue nõbrado y ofrecio cosas preciosas en su pña.

Eclipse of the Moon.

821

When the moon is eclipsed, he becometh almost dark; he becometh blackened; he turneth a dark brown. Then the earth darkeneth. When this cometh to pass, women with child feared miscarriage. A great dread seized them that that which they had in their bodies would become mice. And as a remedy for this they took a piece of obsidian in the mouth or they placed it in the girdle over the belly and [did so] in order that the children [whom they carried] in the womb would not be born lipless or noseless or wry-mouthed, or cross-eyed, or that [one] might not be born monstrous.

[843 751]

Quando la luna se eclipsa parese casi oscura, ennegrecese, parese bosca: luego se escurece la tierra. Quando esto acontesçe las preñadas temian de abortar, tomauales gran temor que lo q̃ tenian en el cuerpo se a de boluer raton. Y para remedio desto tomavan vn pedaço de yztli ê la boca o poniaule en la çintura sobre el vientre y para que los ninos que en el vientre no saliesen sin bepa o sin narizes, o boquituertos, o biagos: o porq̃ no naciesse monstro.

The people of Xalmoca held the moon as a god and made him special offerings and sacrifices.

Los de xalmoca tenian por dios a la luna y le hacia particulares ofrendas y sacrificios.

342 And in the great palace, the ruler's residence, like-
643 wise was watch kept all night. Never did the fire go [373] out. It was watched all night and made to burn with 644 pine torches there in the residence of the ruler—at 722 the Tlacxitlan, and the Teccalli, and the Tecpilcalli, the Quauhcalli, the Achcauhcalli, the Cuicacalli, the Cuecalli, and the residences of the lords throughout the city, and the priests' houses, and the majordomos' houses—where assembled the majordomos,—and the young men's houses which were placed in all the neighborhoods.[13] Then the youths filled the houses as they kept guard. None slept in his [own] home. The task of the youths was to go into the forest, in [373] order that watch be kept within the city; for nightly there was light and fires were burned; thus was guard maintained.

Auh in vei tecpan in tlatoca, çan no iuhquj cioal in tlapialoia, aquenman cruja in tletl: çioal in tlapialoia, ioan tlaujloia ocotica, in vncan iician tlatoanj, ioan tlacxitlan, ioan teccali, ioã tecpilcalli, quauhcali, achcauhcali, cuicacali, ioan cuecali, in jnteuetlaliaian tlatoque altepetl ipan, ioan calmecac, ioan tezticali in jnneçenqujxtiaia calpixque, ioan telpuchcali, in noujian tlãlãxilacalpan mamanj: vncã icacaltenj in telpupuchti in tlapia, aiac ichan oncochia, intequjuh casca in telpopuchti, in quauhtla ialixtli, injc tlapialoia iiiic altepetl injc çeçioai tlaujloia tlatlatiloia, injc tlapialoia.

643 FIFTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how the ●542 ruler was amused.

The ruler, when he beheld and knew that the common folk and vassals were very fretful, then commanded that the ball game be played, in order to animate the people and divert them. He commanded the majordomos to take out the rubber ball, and the girdles, and the leather lip guards, and the leather gloves with which the ruler's ball players were dressed and arrayed. And things were arranged on the ball court; there was sprinkling, there was sanding, there was sweeping.

643 And all which the ruler was to wager in the game
525 —the valued capes, the duck feather capes, the costly breech clouts, the green stone lip plugs, the golden ear plugs, the green stone necklaces, the golden necklaces, the wrist bands with large, precious,[14] green stones upon them, and all the precious capes and bedding—the majordomos brought out and placed in the ball court. And those who were to challenge and play ball against the ruler then matched all his costly goods. And all the poor folk placed [for] the ruler, each one, old capes like those which the vassals wore. And if they won from the ruler, then the majordomos brought out others and laid out all the costly goods which they had won of the ruler, and also they gave to the vassals all which they had won of the ruler.

INJC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: ipan mitoa, in quenjn mellelqujxtiaia, tlatoanj.

In tlatoanj in jcoac qujxtaia, tujmatia cã cenca nentlamati in cujtlapilli, atlapalli maceoalli: njman tlanaoatiaia, injc ollamalos, injc teellaquaoaia, injc tepaquiltiaia tlatoanj: qujnnaoatiaia in calpixque, injc qujoalcujxque in olli, ioan nelpilonj, ioan queçeoatl, ioan maieoatl: injc mocencaoa injc mochichioa, in jollancaoan tlatoanj, ioan tlacencaoalo in tlachco, tlazujlilo, tlazalujlo, tlachpano:

ioan in jxqujch qujtlanjtoz tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli in nomoiujtilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in chalchiuhtenetl, teucujtlanacochtli, chalchiuhconcatl, teucujtlaconcatl, matzopeuxtli chalchiujtl vei ipan ca, tlaçotl: ioan in ixqujch tlaçotilmatli, ioan pepechtli qujoalqujxtia in calpixque, qujoallalia in tlachco. Auh in ichoantin qujnamjqujxque, in collamjxque tlatoanj: njman jq'tiamjctia, in jxqujch itlatquj tlaçotli: auh in ic ix motolinja maceoalli, iceceiaca conthalia tlatoanj ica iiaiaçol in iuhquj qujquemj maçeoalli. Auh intla oqujtlanque tlatoanj, njman tepatla, in calpixque qujtema in ixqujch tlaçotli tlatquj, in oqujtlanjlique tlatoanj: auh in maceoalti no qujnaoca in jxqujch oqujtlanilique tlatoanj.

---

13. Tlachcalchcalpan: see Arturo Monzón: El calpulli en la organización social de los aztecas (México: Instituto de Historia, 1949), p. 51, where the term tlachcalchcalli is defined as a small barrio or street. According to Orozco y Berra, op. cit., I, p. 349, "los pueblos quedaban subdivididos en menor calpulli ó barrios, cuanto los parcialidades eran, cada calpulli dividido por calles ó tlachcalchcalli."

14. Tlaçotl: the corresponding Spanish text refers to doves, in which case the Aztec should read chaoti.

X 796 301

maize;[26] with coyote heads made of a paste of amaranth seeds; with S-shaped twaillas and thick rolls[27] covered with a paste of amaranth seeds and with toasted maize on top; and red amaranth, which was really red feathers, and maize stalks with ears of green or tender maize.

X 796 535

After midday, the priests rested. Thereupon the Tenochca and the Tlatelulca came together, two rows of Tenochca and two rows of Tlatelulca facing each other. All danced very slowly; the dance proceeded in harmony. Then all emerged, coming out of the palace gate, and all arranged themselves. Moctezuma came forth with them; he came dat dancing. At his right and left came two great princes, Neçaualpilli of Texcoco and Totoquihuaztli, ruler of the Tepaneca. Great solemnity reigned as all danced.

And when it was already dark, when it was already night, all dispersed. Then began the singing and dancing [with interlocked hands];[28] there danced

[701] the novice warriors, the chief warriors—those who had captured four captives or more, as well as those who had taken one or two. And these were named also young leaders. And also the princes danced. And likewise women danced with them—those known as

●[548] mothers, but only if they wished; they were not forced. And also immodest women, harlots.

And then all departed, when midnight was nigh, when trumpets had been blown. For twenty days it continued in this manner, until the Feast of Toçoztontli arrived.

cujllaxcalli, teumjmjlli, çan no tzoalli ic quipepechoaia, quijnocochiotiaia panj: yoan cauhchichilli, çan tlapaluijtl catca, yoan cintopilli, eloio, anoço xiloio.

Yn omotzcalo tonatiuh, moceuja in tlamacazque, njman ic ic monepanuja, montlamanuja, in tenuchca in tlatilulca, vmpanti in tenuchca, no vmpanti in tlatilulca, mixnamjctiuj, cenca çan yujian, yn netotilo, cenca vel cocamactiuh in netotiliztli: njman oalquizoa intecpa quijaoac, oalnemanalo, oalteujca in motecuçoma, oalmjtotitiuh, quitzatzacutiuitze, quijoalitzcatitiuj, vmentin veueintin tlatoque Neçaualpilli tetzcuco, - totoquihuaztli, tepanecapan tlatoanj: vel mamiztli oonoc in nehtotiloia.

Auh ic tlapoiaoa, ic tlaixcuecueztiuj in necacaoalo, njman ic pena, in cujcoanolo, mjtotiaia in telpuchtequjoaque, teachcaoa, in nauj cacitinemj, yn anoce oc quexquijnti ymalhoan: yoã in ce, vme, cacitinemj. Auh no motocaiotiaia hy, telpuchiiaque: no yoan in tlatoque mitotia. Auh no tehoan in cioa mjtotia: mjtoa tenaoan, çan illo tlama, amo tequjuhtiloia: auh çan no ichoãtin yn.aujianjme, in maaujltia.

Auh iquac necacaoloia, in ie hiciuhtiuh, ioalnequantla tlatlapiczalizpa: cempoalilhujtl, yn iuh tlamanca, yn juh tlamanja: vmpa onaci yn ipan toçoztontli.

26. Cf. Peter v. Tavenner, op. cit., p. 109: ". . . es decir, los mexicanos de nuestros días que se guardaban para esta fiesta celebrándose por muchos tiempo así verbo de los cuales."

27. Ian Andrews and Dibble (op. cit., p. 14). Possibly these resembled the wrapped tamales in Pl. 12.

28. Cf. Angel María Garibay K.: Llave del náhuatl (Otumba, México: n. p., 1940), pp. 86, 219. Sahagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, says: "unos traidores de los mexicanos, unos demandado mexicanos celebrandola." his vassals. Because verily there was much hunger; when dried maize was costly, then there was much want, [and] it was hard to gain a livelihood; [and] many then were our dead.

And until the time that the Feast Day of the Lords came, upon every day there was song. When singing and dancing began, [it was] toward evening, when only little sun shone. Thereupon fire was laid in the braziers; flame was put upon the braziers.

And the braziers were arranged and ordered in six rows, and in each row were ten [braziers] and [each] brazier was two fathoms thick; and each was as tall as one's hip.[3]

And thereupon all went forth from the house of song, coming singing and dancing. Between [pairs of men] came the women. Light women, harlots, chosen —picked out, set apart.

And they went together, they went taking by the hands the honored ones—the young chieftains, the leaders of the young men, and those with shorn hair, the Otomí, and the noblemen [not warriors. These last] were not arranged in order; of their own free will they placed themselves near the others.

And richly were the women arrayed and bedight; all good were the skirts and shirts which they had put on. Of their skirts, some had [designs of] hearts, some were [embroidered] with a mat design like birds' gizzards, some were ornamented like coverlets, some had spiral or leaf [designs], some were of plain, fine weave. All had borders and fringes; all [the women] wore skirts with borders.

And of their skirts, some had brown [streamers] hanging, some had smoke symbols, some had black [streamers] hanging, some had house designs, some had fish [patterns], some were of plain, fine weave. And the neck [openings] were all large, and their borders were also deep and wide.

And when they danced, they unbound their hair; their hair covered them like a cloak. But they brought braids of their hair across their foreheads.

And they were not decked with feathers; neither were their faces adorned with paint.

And thus were bedecked the chieftains: their array consisted of the cloak of netting. And the brave warriors, they who had straw lip plugs, they had white net cloaks with shells set in fish patterns. [These] were called their vermillion net cloaks.

cenca maianaloia, in jquac cenca tlaçotia in tlaolli, cenca oncã mjhiioviaia, mociavia: cenca vncã tomjquian catca. [796* 736]

Auh in jzqujchica oalaci tecujlhujtl, izqujlhujtl cujcoia: im peoaia cujcoanaliztli, cenca ça achiton tonatiuh, cenca ça pepetzcatica in tonatiuh: njman ie ic tleteco tlaviltec, ipan in tlaviltetl motlatlalia tletl.

Auh in tlaviltetl viuipantoca, tetecpantoca, chiquacenpantitoca: auh in cempantli, matlatlatetl, actimanca: auh ynjc totomaoac catca tlaujltetl, hoontlacujtlanaoatectli: auh ynjc quaquauhtic catca, cecen quapantli: [372]

auh in ie iuhquj, mec oalquixoa, in cujcacali, cujcatiujtze, mjtotitiujtze, intzatzalan actiujtze in cioa: iehoantin in maaujltia, yn aujenjme: iehoantin in tlatzonanti, in tlapepenti, in tlacenquixtilti: [545]

auh yn qujnnanamictia, yn inmatitech qujmantiuj, çan iehoantin in mauiztililoaj in teachcaoan, yoan in telpochtequjoaque, yoan in quaquachicti, yn otomj, yoan in pipilti: amo tehoan motecpana, çan jllotlama, incãpa onmoquetza tetlan. [302 565]

Auh in cioa uel mocencaoa, vel moiecchichioa, much qualli in conmaquja, yn jncue, yn jvipil: yn incue cequj iollo, cequj totolitipetlaio, cequj cacamoliuhquj, cequj ilacatziuhquj, anoço tlatzcalloti, cequj çan petztic, muchi tene, muchi tlatenio, muchi cuetenio. [796* 272]

Auh yn invipil, cequj quappachpipilcac, cequj pocuipilli, cequj pocujpilli, cequj iapalpipilcac, cequj cacallo, cequj mjmjchcho, cequj çan petztic. Auh yn jtozquj much uetuei: yoan yn iten cenca no papatlaoac, papatlactic.

Auh yn iquac mjtoia, qujtoma yn jntzon, çan intzon qujquequentinemj: auh yn jntzon ipiloaz, ymixquac qujoalteca. [302]

Auh amo mopotonja, amono moxaoa.

Auh ynic muchichiotia in teachcaoan, yn jnnechichioa catca, iehoatl in cuechintli: auh in tiacaoan, in teçacaoaque, ymiztaccuechin cilin ynic mjmjchcho, motocaiotia innochpalcuechin. [622] [304 304 701]

3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text. Literally, [illegible] may be rendered "two can take [it] in their embrace." For [illegible], Sahagún has "six cubits."

X 796 space], once more they circled back and returned [whence they had started].

[535] And when it all ceased, already it was late at night,
[512] already time for all to sleep, as when one noddeth; today [that would be] at about the ninth hour.

And when all had stopped, when the ground drum
[534] was undone, then all dispersed, all went, all betook themselves to their homes. The great noblemen, when it was done, were accompanied by torches;
[373] they went lighted by torches, carried for them, to their homes.

And the women who had danced then were assembled, after there had been the song and dance, and they led them off. Even so was done with the leaders of the youths. They gathered [the women] together, grouped them, rounded them up, placed them together, assembled them, hunted them out,—lest they might go off somewhere, lest someone might accompany them, lest some debauched youth might go with [one of them].

None the less, the noblemen addressed the matrons, [565] that they might go and release some [of the women] or go and leave [one]. Not of their free will did [the women] go elsewhere; it was done on persuasion.

And when they released them, [the girls] were [431] given presents. Gifts were given, and food was given. And likewise, favors were offered the leaders of the women, the matrons. They kept for themselves and carried that which they saved to their homes.

X 796 And the young warriors, the young warriors who 836 had distinguished themselves, who were worthy of honors, made their plea for the women only in
684 secret, not before others; perchance in his home [such an one] awaited her, perchance elsewhere he called her. Just so, they ate privily.

● [548] And the woman came forth only at night and spent only the night [with him]; she departed when it was well into the night.

And if one was noted living in concubinage, thus he aroused anger; thus he gave offense. For this all assembled and held council there in the song-house.

Here, before everyone, they punished him. Because of [his crime] they cut off his warrior's hair dress; they took from him all his belongings—his [831] adornment, his lip plug. Thereafter, they beat him sorely with a pine stick, verily causing him to swoon; they singed his head with fire; smoke rose, and blisters formed on his body.

And when they had indeed caused him to swoon, then they cast him forth.

vmpa tlantoc, oc cepa momalacachoa, in cujtlaujc, oalmocuepa.

Auh in necaoaloa, ie tlaquauhioua, ie netetequizpan: yn iuh mixtlaxilia axcan aço ie chicunauj ora.

Auh in ie ixquich, yn onecacaoaloc, yn ompet veuetl, mec cecenmanoa, viujloa, yn ixquichtin viuj yn inchachan: in veuei pipilti, onca caoalo, tlavilpan, tlaujhilotiuj, qujntlatlaujhitiuj yn inchan.

Auh yn cioa yn otenaoaque, njman mocentlalia, in ie oncujcoianoloc, in qujiacana, yn iuhq' yn tiachcaoan muchioa, qujnnechicoa, qujntecpichoa, qujmololoa, qujncenqujxtia, qujcentecpichoa, vel qujmixpepena, yn ma aca canapa ia, yn ma aca moteujcalti, in ma aca telpuchtlaueliloc qujujca:

tel in pipilti, qujmonilhujaia in cioa tlaiacanque, ynic cequjntin qujncaoatiuj, tecaoatiuj: amo çan moiocoinia yn canapa via, tetencopa muchioaia.

Auh yn ontecaoaia, vmpa motlauhtiaia, vmpa tlauhtiloia, yoã vmpa tlamacoia: auh no tlatlauhtiloia, in cioatachcaoan, in cioateiacanque, motlacauja, motlatlacauja, quitquj yn inchachan innetlacaujl.

Auh in teachcaoan, inteachcauh, tlaiacatia, in mauiztililonj, çan ichtaca in qujnnaoatia cioa, amo teixpan, aço ichan in qujchietiuh, anoço canapa in qujnaoatia: çan iuhquj, yn ichtacaquaia.

Auh in cioatl, çan oalioualquiça, çan moioualpoloa, oc ueca ioan in quiça:

auh intla aca itoz, in momecatitinemj, ic tlaqualatijaia, ic tlaiolitlacoaia, ica necentlalilo, yca nenonotzalo, in vncan cujcacali:

vncan teixpan qujtlatzacujltia, ic qujtzotzocoltequj, muchi qujcujlia in ixquich ytlatquj, yn inechichioal, yn itempalel: çatepan qujujujtequj, ocoquauhtica, vel qujhiiocaoaltia, qujquatlechichinoa, tlêtlecaleua, haaquaqualaca, yn inacaio.

Auh yn ouelqujhijocaoaltique, yca oalmaiauj:

X 796 and long rows of all the varied flowers, the most beautiful flowers, the threaded ones.

nepapan xochitl, in tlaquetzalxochitl, in manqui, in tlamantli:

778 Then flowers were offered to all the rest of the gods, to the images of the gods, [or] devils. They were adorned with flowers; they were girt with [garlands of] them; flowers were placed upon their heads, there in the temples.

nimman ic ic teuchimaco, ceuentzi in inquijchtin teteu, yn imixiptlauan teteu, tlatlacatecolo, teuchichtin, teuchiqueuo, tricpacxuchitilo, in vncan in tetempan:

Thereupon all together, in all the houses, the homes of the majordomos, the homes of the great noblemen, and the houses of the youths, they laid flowers out [before the idols]. And they spread them out in the homes of each and all.

nimman ic ic ceuentzi in noujan calpan, in calpinque inchan, in veuei pipiltzi inchan: yeuan in teuiquichcali, quicentzacutimanj, quicentzacutimomana in techchan.

X 796 And afterwards, when each had been ornamented, then there were feasting and drinking. Everywhere, everyone ate; all were in a festive mood.

Auh in ic inhquj yn oteccencaualtic mec tlatlaquaalo, haztlica: noujan tlatlaquaalo, yllujtlamacho.

And when midday came, then all sang and danced —verily, they drew up all the youths; the masters and the leaders of the young men, the seasoned warriors, the fearless warriors, the Otomí.[a] Here in the god's courtyard there was dancing—in the courtyard of [the Temple of] Uitzilopochtli.

Auh yn oncic nepantla tonatiuh mec cujcoimaolo, vel inquijch quicencaoa, in telpuchtli, in teachcauan, in telpuchiaque, in tequijuaque, in quaquachictin, in otomj: vncan in netotilo in teuiuacho, yn iouhco Vitzilopochtli.

[701] And those who led [the dance] were the fearless warriors, the great warriors, each of whom was considered [equal to] a battle squadron, who were not laggards in war; who turned [the enemy] back, [whose exploits] wheeled them hence.

Auh in teiacana, ichoantin in quaquachicti, in veuei tiacaoli yn inhquj cecentecuti momatia, yn amo mimacujlia iaoc, in tecuepanj, in temalacachoanj.

[548] Also the women danced—not the daughters [of onlookers, but] courtesans, harlots—who went between [pairs of the men], they were [all] stretched in a row, taken by the hand or grasped about the waist. They moved all in line they went winding to and fro, nowhere breaking the line, at no time loosing hands. They went in orderly procession.

No ichoantin in cioa mjntiaia, amo ichoan in teichpuchoan, ichoantin in mahuijltianj, yn zriaxjnac istacatzalan maantiuj, inmatitech maantiuj, mocujtlanaoa, çan cenpanti, çan cenpantitiuj, mocuculotiuj, acan cotonj, acan momacana vipantiuj.

[533] And the singers, who sang for them, who beat drums for them, who beat the ground drums, were quite apart [from the dancers]—to one side; they were upon a [counterfeit] house, upon the round altar [or pyramid].[a] And the altar was completely round, round like a shield, like a millstone. And here, upon this, stood [the musicians].

Auh in cujcanjme, in qujscujcatia, in qujotlatzontonjlia, qujmeuetzocozonjlia, çan nonqua, çan chico, caltech in manj, emomoztitech: auh in momoztli, çan iacaltic, tenjlacachtic, malacachtic, yn jtech, yn ielan manj.

[778]

And thus they danced: they did not leap, nor make great movements; they did not make dance gestures; they did not move throwing themselves about, nor dance making arm-movements, nor go bending their

Auh ynic mjntoia, amo chochaloa, amono ontlayioca, amo ontlayiauhtiuj, amo motlatlaztiuj, amo

[701]

3. Here and elsewhere, the following equivalents are offered: quaquachichi—[illegible] warrior; telpuchtli—youth; teachcauh—master of the youths; telpuchiaque—rulers of the youths; telpuchiaque—leaders of the youths; tequijuaque or quaquajque—seasoned warriors. To a degree, such definitions are, perhaps, arbitrary. The suggested equivalents, however, are based upon the following passages from Sahagún (Bustamante ed.): Vol. I, p. 292, and Vol. II, pp. 137, 207 (quaquachichi, tequijuaque); Vol. I, pp. 131, 168, 182, 199, 215, 289, 291, and Vol. II, p. 182 (telpuchtli); Vol. I, pp. 168, 294, and Vol. II, pp. 310, 319 (teachcauh); Vol. I, p. 291 (telpuchiaque); Vol. II, p. 321 (quaquajque). See also Clavigero, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 94, on otomi and quaquachichi; pp. 80, 114, on teachcauh, telpuchiaque; Vol. II, pp. 32, 95, 96, 136 on tequijuaque or quaquajque; Gomara (Libro del valiente, p. 242) on telpuchtli; Sahagún, op. cit., p. 159 (telpuchiaque), p. 144 (tequijuaque), pp. 144, 159 (telpuchiaque).

4. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 159.

they placed them to one side. They strewed them in the water, and none, verily, might taste the husks. Because of this, care was therefore taken that none should be scorched, burned, or dropped into the fire.

And only during one day were they eaten. By night they were done; all finished. They left nothing for the next day.

And when it grew dark, the old men and the old women drank, alone. It was said: "They refresh themselves."

And after this they set up the image of the fire [god], Izcoçauhqui, Xiuhtecutli, Tlalxictentica, Cueçaltzin, Nauhyoueue. They gave him figure and substance of a dough of amaranth seed. These things they whose office it was, did—the men of the tribal temple, known as the Tzonmulca[2]—who especially worshipped [fire] as a god.

And when the twentieth day came, it was said: "Iacalli hath ended." They who provided ceremonially bathed victims then published and made it known to others [that they had secured sacrificial victims, each] setting forth in public his ceremonially bathed one, a slave whom he had bought, made [to be] the likeness of Izcoçauhqui; the owner then adorned him, causing to be placed upon him all the array of Izcoçauhqui. Thus it was said: "The bather [of the victim] gathereth [his wealth]."

And for this reason did one say "the bather [of a victim]": he continually bathed his victim with hot water all the time until he went to his death; all the time he caused him to know that death would be his lot at an appointed time; that he would die in the count of Tlacaxipeualiztli.

And before he died, he favored him greatly. The bather was careful of [the victim]; he enriched him [with gifts]; he restored all to him. All the food which he offered him was good.

And a harlot was provided as his guardian. Constantly she amused him; she caressed him; she made him laugh and be merry. Taking him about the neck, she rejoiced, she embraced him. She caught his lice [for him]; she combed his hair and arranged his hairdress. She made him forget his sorrows. And when the time came for the bathed one to die, the harlot took everything; she rolled and bundled up all the belongings of the bathed one. That which he wore he placed upon her; that which he had used in iezotl: ipampa ic momalhujaia inic amo aca mochichinoa, motlatiz, tleco oivetzia. 796[x] [252]

Auh çan vel cemjlhujtl in qualoia: in ie ioon otlatlatlan, moch tlamja, aoctle qujmocavia in jmuztlaioc.

Auh in oioonc tlatlaoana in vevetque in jlamatque, çanjoque: mjtoaia, Texcalqvia. [273]

Auh in jquac y, qujtlaliaia in jxiptla tletl Izcoçauhqui, Xiuhtecuth, Tlalxictentica, Cueçaltzin, Nauhioveve, tzoualli in qujtlacatlaliaia, in qujnacaiotiaia: ichoan quajchioaia in jtech povia calpoleque, motenoa: Tzonmulca, oc cenca ichoan in qujmoteutiaia.

Auh injc onaci cempoalilhujtl: mjtoa, Iacalli tlastj: in tealtianj, iquac qujteittitia, qujtexiximachtia, teixpan qujquetza in jtlaaltil iez, in oquicouh tlacotli: in jxiptla muchioa Izcoçauhqui, iquac ic qujchichioa itech qujtlalilia in jxqujch in jnechichioal Izcoçauhqui ic mjtoaia, tlaixnextia in tealtianj: [567] auh injc mjtoa, tealtianj: in jtlaaltil muchipa caltia, atotonjltica in jxqujch cavitl mjqujtiuh, in jxqujch cavitl qujmatitiuh in vncā imjquja tequipā in jtlapoalpan: in mjquja ipan tlacaxipeoaliztli.

Auh in aiamo mjquj, cenca qujmavizmatia, qujçeçēmatia in tealtianj, qujtlanenectia qujtlacuecuepilia: muchi qualli tlaqualli in qujmacaia:

auh oc ayienj, in jxepixcauh muchioaia: muchipa cavilitia, cavilia, qujcamanalhuja, qujvetaqujtia, qujqouqueloa, iquechtlan ilaquj, qujquechnaoa, cantemja, qujxiztiçquauavia, qujpepepetla, qujtlaoculpoloa: auh in jquac ic imjquja tlaaltilli: in ayienj moch cuecuj, ontlacemololoa, concemololoa in jquich in jtlaquj tlaaltilli: in oquiquequemja, in jtech oquitlatlaliaia in oquitlanja, in jpā oiztlacatinenca, 796[x] 548 [515]

2. Tzonmulco: temple of the fire god; also one of the divisions of Tenochtitlan. It is mentioned in the Appendix, p. 177, as the sixty-fourth building. Cf. Sahagún (Bulmer ed., Vol. I, p. 227; Vol. V, p. 74).

x 796 when he had been living in the likeness of another, [548] had walked with head high, had lived as a captive, had been drunk, and had gone in high esteem.

oaquetztinêca otlamattinenca, omjvintitinêca omovelitztinenca.

And for this reason was [the month] named "Izcalli hath ended": all the small children, all of them they took up and lifted by the neck. For it was said, [827] they [thus] grasped them that they might grow; thus they would speedily grow tall; they would wax great and strong.

Auh injc mjtoa Jacalli, tlami yn ixquichtin pipiltotonti, muchintin quinquechaana, quinacopiloa: ic mjtoa quinizcalloana, quinizcalaana, ynic iciuhca quaquauhtiezque, manazque, mocapaoazque:

And they divided the heart of the magney plants;
[824] they broke, peeled, and opened it. And they cleaned the cactus and pruned its branches, because thus it would quickly be given new life and growth.

yoã in metl quijiollozcloa, quijiollotzaiana, quijiellotlapana, quijiollotoma: auh yn nopalli quijtlaiectilia, quinmatzpeoa, ipampa ynic iciuhca manza, mocaltiz, mocapaoaz.

x 796 And at this [feast of] Izcalli, there also came to 852 pass, every four years, the bringing out of the children and the drinking of wine by the children. And then the chiefs danced a lordly dance, along with their courtiers. And they put on their wigs of hair;
[301] in truth they were head pieces made of long hair and covered with green stone. [The hair] fell, verily, to the chiefs' waists.

Auh yn ipan y, Izcalli, no vncan muchioaia, ynic nauhxiuhtica nepilquixtiloia, pillaoanoia: yoan vncan motecujtotiaia in tlatoque, yoan yn inpilloaan: yoan cuntlaliaia yntzonpilinal, centlamantli, tzoncalli catca, viiac in tzontli ic tlachioalli, qujchachalchiuhiotiaia, vel incujtlacaxiuhiã vetzia in tlatoque.

And for this reason one said that the children were brought forth: the fathers and mothers of all the small children first sought out those who would bring them to the priests' dwelling, a place named Tencacoac—a woman and a man whom they invited.
[608] It was said that they were to be uncles and aunts [of the children]; they became uncles and aunts [for them].

Auh ynic mjtoa nepilquixtilo, yn jxquichtin pipiltotonti, yn jntahoan, yn jnnahoan, achtopa quintemoliaia, in quinvicazque calmecac, itocaiocan tezcacoac ce cioatl, ce oquichtli in quinotzaia, mjtoa: quintlatia quimavitia, tetlati, teaviti:

And not their kin did they take; they secured only their friends, whom they chose and to whom they [431] gave gifts. They laid out capes and breech clouts for us men. Likewise, for a woman they laid out her skirt and shirt.

auh amo inoaniolque in quimanaia, çan incoapan intlaanaia, in tlapepenaia, quintlauhtiaia: tilmatli, maxtlatl, cuetlaliliaia in toquichtin: no ivi in cioatl, icue, ivipil contlalilia

At midnight they took [the children] to the priests' [304] dwelling. There they pierced and drilled their ears. [And the children] cried out [as] the pointed bone pierced their ears. They drew through a thread of unspun cotton, and bound it to them, as the little ones cried out and squirmed, and shed tears. And [302 237] they pasted upon their heads yellow macaw feathers and soft down.

ioalnepantla in quinvicaia calmecac, vmpa quinnacazxapotla, quinnacazcoionja pipitzcatiuh in omjtl injc quicoionja innacaz, petonquj icpatl in vmpa conquixtia, vncã quimonjlpilia iuhquin tlatzatzitleoa, tlatzatzatzi, tlachoquiztleca in pipiltzitzinti, yoan tocivitica tlachcaiotica quinpotonjaia in jmjcpac:

And the women who became aunts were pasted [608 302] with red feathers, but only upon the legs and arms, and they covered themselves with their paper flowers, which were called their noble flowers.

auh in teaviti cioa, çanjo imjcxic, yoã inmaç in mopotonjaia tlapalivitica, yoan imamazochiuh contecativia: mjtoa, intecuxochiuh.

When they had pierced [the children's] ears, then they took them to their homes. Here they sat attending them; they sat in vigil, awake, [thus] remaining

In jquac oquimõnacazxapotlaque, njmã ic quinoalhujuica in inchachan, vncan quichichtitoque ixtoçotoque, tocotoque tlatlacvltitoque, quichixtoque in

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

tants of the valley of their annual crops. In order to escape 567 threatened famine, fathers bartered their services and those of their 731 children for food, to such tribes as possessed sufficient stores.[87]

If the consequence of expulsion from the bond of kinship or 562 of voluntary abandonment of the rights as members, were, for 565
the male, a degradation to work for others, it was altogether 837 different for the female. The position of women was, as we have already intimated, little better than that of a costly animal, and protection was awarded them only in so far as they represented a part of their husbands' property. This the kin itself was obligated to defend and protect. The wife, however, had no other right than that. She could not complain if her lord and master increased his "family-stock" by the addition of one or more concubines, nor if he strayed about to satisfy his desires with other females. Such acts were even subservient to the kins' interest, since they led to an increase of numbers. But the women themselves who gave their persons away for such [684] purposes could only belong to the class of outcasts; for illicit intercourse with wives and daughters of the kins was, as we shall hereafter see, severely punished. Through the formation of the class of outcasts, or at least along with it, prostitution became [548 tolerated among the ancient Mexicans, while polygamy in 595]
the shape of concubinage was introduced as a legitimate custom.[88]

[87] Besides the famines recorded since the conquest, the older authors and sources in general notice several (at least two) previous to 1520. It is not to our purpose to discuss their dates. They are given with the usual variation and discordance. Thus for instance, the "Codex Telleriano Remensis" (Kingsborough, Vol. I, plate VII, and Vol. VI, p. 136) mentions one in 1404 (1 Tochtli), which is evidently incorrect, since 1 Tochtli would be 1403. The Ce-Tochtli thus mentioned, is 1454. In that year, Durán (Cap. XXX, p. 245) places the beginning of the great drouth which, after three years duration, so completely exhausted the Mexican stores and supplies that "wrathy chief" the elder, ("Huehue Motecuzuma") told the people "que cada uno vaya á buscar su remedio" (p. 247). In consequence of it, it is reported that many people "sold their sons and daughters to the merchants and principals (señores) of the tribes that had wherewith to give them to eat, and they gave for a baby (or boy rather, "niño") a small basket of corn (maiz) to the father or mother, obligating themselves to sustain the child as long as the famine might last, for that if afterwards the father or mother might wish to redeem it, they should be obligated to pay these aliments." This is, as usual, also stated by Tezozomoc (Cap. XL, p. 64), though with less details. Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LXXIII, p. 203) reports the same, but placing it fifty years later, under the last "wrathy chief" (Cap. CX, p. 223) in 1505, A. D. Sahagun (Lib. VIII, cap I, p. 269), agrees with Durán and Tezozomoc, so does Clavigero (Lib. IV, cap. XII, p. 268): "Many sold themselves for food." This date is also 1451-1454. It is singular that Torquemada (Lib. II. cap. XLVII, p. 156) also relates the famine under the older "wrathy chief," and his words are almost textually copied by Clavigero.

[88] The possession of more than one woman, or rather the enjoyment of more than

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

procuresses were severely punished, though not with loss of 689 life.[126]

While clandestine relations between young men and girls were [836] known to exist and, if not sanctioned, still were not punished,[127] 684 it was different if a married man attempted to seduce a maiden who was not an outcast. The seducer was invariably punished.[128] Intercourse between unmarried people was tolerated, as a preliminary to marriage and the consequent increase of kinship, but if a husband, in contravention of the obligation "not to marry in the kin," endeavored to satisfy his lusts upon one of that kin's wards, as the daughters of members all were, then he committed

VII, cap. XVII, p. 466). all affirm, besides, that young people. while yet in care of the "houses of training," if intoxicated, were killed. This is also confirmed by Sahagun (Lib. III. appendix, cap. VI, pp. 270 and 271). Except by Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. II, pp. 22 and 23), it is generally conceded that drunkenness was well controlled in aboriginal Mexico.

[126] Although prostitution was tolerated, still, houses of ill-fame did not exist. Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. II, p. 376): "Esto parece, porque permitieron, que huviese Mugeres, que se daban à los que querian, y se andaba á esta vida suelta, y gananciosa, como las de nuestra España, y otros Reinos; puesto que no tenian casa señalada, ni publica para la execucion de su mal oficio, sino que cada qual moraba donde le parecia, y el acto deshonesto, en que se ocupaba, servia de lugar publico, y en el mismo vicio se hacia publica y se manifestaba." Velancurt (Vol. I, p. 480): "Permitian los mexicanos, mujeres que ganasen con sus cuerpos, aunque no tenian lugares señalados." It is, therefore, not quite clear what may be meant by the term "alcahueta." In the sense of the French word "entremetteuse," alone, they were amenable to punishment, since it was the duty of the man to hunt his "female," although he sometimes employed women called "cihuatlanqui" for that purpose I suppose that such women were punished, [548] not for the immorality of their conduct, but for their unauthorized forwardness in [562] addressing themselves to men, and thus trespassing upon the dignity of that superior being. In regard to authorities on the mode of punishment, I but refer to those quoted by Mr. H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II, p. 469, note 101).

[127] I have already shown that young people held intimate relations with each other before the formalities of marriage were arranged. Thus, while he was yet at the "Telpuchcalli," the youth had his female friend, "amiga" or "manceba," outside. This is positively stated by Sahagun (Lib. III, appendix, cap. VI, p. 271): "y estos mancebos tenian sus amigas cada uno dos ó tres, la una tenian en su casa, y las otras estaban en las de sus familias." and Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. III, p. 376). That these female "friends" were regarded with more than a feeling of platonic love, is dryly expressed by Sahagun (Id: cap. V, p. 270): "y los que eran amancebados ibanse á dormir con sus amigas." It is also asserted by Torquemada (see above): "que despues que aquel mancebo havia un Hijo, en la dicha manceba, luego le era forzoso, ó dejarla, ó recibirla por muger legitima." Velancurt (Vol. I, p. 480): "los mancebos antes de casarse tenian sus mancebas, y solian pedirlas á las madres." This almost establishes promiscuity among the ancient Mexicans, as a preliminary to formal marriage.

[128] Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 465) says that the punishment was not like that of the adulterer, "because the husband was not required to the same amount of conjugal fidelity as the wife." With "slaves" concubinage was permitted, and the result of childbirth was freedom to the child. Death was invariably the punishment of those who held, or attempted to hold, intercourse with girls in care of the house of worship. Durán (p. 106, etc.). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIX, p. 130): "El que hazia fuerza à virgen, era fuese en el campo, ora en casa del padre moria por ello."

787x

drew blood. It was said: "Thus was the sun nourished."

And Seven Flower was said [to be] good and bad. As a good [sign], in certain places the scribes paid it honor and were devoted to it. They set up its image and made offerings to it. Also those women who were embroiderers and cotton thread workers first fasted for eighty days; some fasted for forty or twenty days, when penance was done. Thus they requested of it that what they undertook might be well done; [that] their embroidery or design might be a work of art well fabricated and well painted. All therefore offered incense and slew quail; and all bathed and sprinkled themselves with water, when [the fasting] had been lifted. Then the feast of the day sign, Seven Flower, was celebrated.

And they said when it was not a good [day sign], that if some embroiderer broke her fasting — it was said — then she merited for herself infamy and an ill name. Thus she could only live in vice and become a harlot. For it was said the embroiderers lived in great vice and became terrible whores.

It was said the one who was their goddess, named Xochiquetzal, made sport of and mocked her. And she gave and thus scourged her with piles and infections.

But she who did well her penances, who took heed, and so then attained success, was esteemed, and gained honor for herself. In [all] places she was looked to; by the grace of the people, she lived well on earth.

Also it was said of this [day sign] that he who was born on it would perform all crafts well: he would be a good craftsman; he would plan well great works; he would constantly be prudent, if he took good heed. But if he did not take good heed, nothing resulted; he deserved nothing. He only merited the infamy with which he was defamed and the mockery with which he was mocked.

And Nine Wind was said to be wholly and entirely evil. As to him who was then born, nothing could be made of his life; so nothing would be retained; he could hold nothing; nothing would be kept; nothing would appear; he could do nothing; he was incapable on earth. He was as one driven by the winds, wandering here and there. He might wish to be something, to be someone: he became only nothing. For truly so was his day sign. He might wish for public esteem — to become a mer-

Auh in chicome xochitl: mjtoaia qualli, ioã ãqualli: ynic qualli ceccan vncã tlamaviztiliaia, motemachiaia, in tlacujloque, qujtlaliaia yxiptla, qujtlamanjliaia: no iehoan in cioa tlãmachchiuhque, icpachiuhque, achtopa qujneçaviliaia, nappoaltica, aca vmpoaltica, cempoaltica in moçaoaia: ic qujtlaitlanjliaia, injc itla vel aizque mjmatizque, toltecatizque, vellalalizque, vellacujlozque: in jpan intlamach, intlacuilol: ic mochintin tlenamacaia, tlacotonaia: auh mochintin mãaltiaia, maujujxoaia, yn jquac neoaloa, in vncan ilhujqujxtililoia, chicome xochitl:

787x 787x 782 286 785

auh injc amo qualli, mitoaia, iquac intla aca tlãmachchiuhquj, yneçaoaliz qujtlacoaia, mjtoa: vncã qujmomacevia avilquizcaiotl, aviltocaitl: injc çã ãavilnemjz, ãavienjtiz, ca mjtoa, tlaquauh avilnemja, mãaviltiaia in tlamachchiuhque,

787x 286 785 548

qujlmach iehoutl inca mocaiaoaia, qujquequeloaia in inteouh catca, itoca xochiquetzal, ioan qujtemacaia, ic temotlaia, xochicujxtli, palanjliztli:

787x 286 796

auh in aqujn vel ontlamacoa in vel monotza, ca oncã qujçaia, maviztia, momavizçotiaia, cana motztica, vel moietztica tepaltzinco in tjc:

787x 286

no iuhquj ipan mitoaia in aqujn ipan tlacati, moch vel qujchioaz in toltecaiotl, vel tõtoltecatiz, tlatlanemjliz, ãtiolizmatquj iez, intla uel monotlaz: auh intlacamo vel monotza, atle onqujçaia, atle icnopil, çan iaujlqujxca, iquequeloloca in qujmomacoviaia.

787x

Auh in chicunavi hecatl: mjtoaia, motqujtica, moch centlantica amo qualli: in aqujn ipan tlacati, atle vel muchioa yn jnemjliz, atle vel ic tlaçaloia, atle vel ic tlaana, atle vel ic tlatzicoa, atle ivelnenca, atle veli, atle veliti in tlaticpac, çan iuhqujn ecatocotinemj, avic iatinemj, conmonectia in ma itlati, in ma acati, çan atleti: ca nel iuhquj iteonal, conjstoca, ipan onmjxpoa, in ma pupuchtecati, in manoce cujcujcanjti, teaachti, tetlãtlavicalti, tecãcamanalhuj. Etc. atle veliti, çan tlaqualania, çan nẽia motlatlamoda, mone-

De los Dioses

FIRST BOOK. HERE ARE NAMED THE GODS WHO WERE WORSHIPPED BY THE NATIVES.

INIC CE AMUXTLI: VNCAN MOTENEOA. IN TETEUH: IN QUJNMOTEUTIAIA IN NICAN TLACA.

First Chapter, which telleth of the highest gods[1] who were worshipped and to whom sacrifices were offered in times past.

Humming-bird from the Left (Uitzilopochtli), [was] only a common man, just a man.[2] [He was] a sorcerer, an omen of evil; a soothsayer, a deceiver,[3] a creator of war, a war-god, an instigator of war.

For it was said of him that he brought hunger and plague—that is, war.[4] And when a feast was celebrated [for him], captives were slain; ceremonially hearted slaves were offered up. The soothsayers hearted them.[5]

And he was then arrayed: he had an ear-pendant of blue earings fashioned;[6] he had the fire serpent diagonal, the blue serpent cloth,[7] the arm band.[8] He wore sandals and shells.[9]

Inic ce capitulo, yenchqa tlatoa, yn oc ceuca dqonoanja uemeh: yn qujnmoteutiaia, yuan yn qujnlaxaxajtiaia, yn in uecauh.

776

Vitzilubuchtli: çan macuxtli, çan tlacatl ceuca: nauali, temajjtl, ediacuemelle, teimumpanj: qujjocuinj in iuiztl, iuiteuanj, iaotlatonj:

ca itechpa mjtoaia, uyan qujtlaqa yn xiuhcoatl, in mamalhuaztli, q. n. iuiztl, teuctl, tlachinolli. Auh yn jquac tlhujqujtilloia, malmjcoaia, tlaxilhujcoaia: tualtiaia, yn pochtecca.

[796]

Auh yujc mochichiuaia: xiuhtotomocuchi cuxca, xiuhcozcatl, xiuhtalpili, motecuxan, tzitzile, ciuatlli.

Second Chapter, which telleth of the god named He who Humeth (Paynal), who was worshipped, and to whom sacrifices were offered, in ancient times.

Paynal was "the delegate," "the substitute," "the deputy"; because he represented Uitzilopochtli when there was a procession. He was named Paynal, because he passed on and urged them ahead.[10]

Inic vnac capitulo, yenchqa tlatoa yn teuil yn jtoca paynal: yn qujnmoteutiaia, yuan in qujlaxaxajtiaia in uecauh.

776
796

Paynal: motepeilloiaxj, momiqiplaxiaxj: uyan mitoaxj: ichica ca qujmiqiplaxiaia, in vitzilubuchtli, yn iquac tlaxoxoloaia, motocaxiaia paynal: ipampa ca ceuca, qujtocatiaia, qujpoalaxhuiaia.

[551]

---

1. The corresponding Spanish text of the Florentine Codex reads: "Capítulo primero, que habla del principal dios. . . ."
2. Eduard Seler, in Gesammelte Abhandlungen zur Amerikanischen Sprach- und Altertumskunde (Berlin: A. Asher & Co., 1902-23), Vol. II, p. 423, refers to him as ein zauberkundiger.
3. Seler does phrase the passage: "Uitzilopochtli was only a man, a magician, an unlucky omen, a wicked augur, one who deluded the people with omens."—Collected Works (Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1959), Vol. II, pp. 4, p. 4.
4. Cf. Rémi Simeon: Dictionnaire de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1885); and Andrés de Olmos: Gramaticas de la langue nahuatl ou mexicaine (Paris: Imprimerie Nationale, 1875), p. 239. ". . . of him it is related that he drawes the nahuatl and the fire-beaux, i. e., war, water (spare-drawing) and fire at the people" (Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, pt. 3, p. 216). Cf. also Bernardino de Sahagún, Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (Edición: Pedro Robredo, 1938), Vol. IV, p. 102, ". . . nuestro dios Vitzilopochtli usaba de dos cosas para vencer sus enemigos para atemorizar y chasquearlos; la una se llama tlaxoxoloaia, y la otra mamalhuaztli . . . y lo otro por otro nombre . . . y lo otro mamalhuaztli. . . . y lo otro por otro nombre . . . y lo otro mamalhuaztli. . . . y lo otro mamalhuaztli. . . . y lo otro mamalhuaztli.

776 Twelfth Chapter, which tells of the Goddess of Vice (Tlaçolteotl).[33]

Tlaçolteotl was also called Ixcuina, and also Tlaelquani. As to the name Tlaçolteotl: it was said that it was because her realm was that of evil and perversenessness—that is to say, lustful and debauched living. It was said that she ruled and was mistress of luxury and debauchery.

776 551 And as to her name Ixcuina: it was said there were four women—the first named Tiacapan (the older sister), the second Teicu (the younger sister), the third named Tlaco (the middle sister), the fourth named Xocotzin (the youngest sister).[34] These four women, it was said, were god- [dessesses]. These, each separately, were called goddesses of luxury (Tlaçolteotes).

And as for her being called Tlaelquani:[35] it was said it was because one told, one placed before her, all vanities; [783] one told, one spread, before her all [one's] unclean works—however ugly, however grave; avoiding nothing because of shame. One expound all before her, [and] made one's confession in her presence.

776 It was said: evil and perversenessness, debauched living—these Tlaçolteotl offered, inflamed, inspired. And likewise she forgave. At her whim, she removed the corruption; she cleansed; she washed. In her hand lay the [cleansing] green and yellow waters.[36]

[783] And thus she pardoned; thus, at her whim, she removed the corruption. In her presence confession was made; before Tlaçolteotl the heart was opened; before her one recited, one told one's sins.

793 And her warden[37]—he who saw for her—was a seer,[38]
776
783

Jnic matlactli vnnome capitulo: ytechpa tlatoa yn tlaçolteotl.

In tlaçolteotl: ynnon iuxcuijna, ynnon iuxcuijna tlaelquanj. Jnic mononcaiotia tlaçolteotl, çujl ipampa, çujl ichtecal yiauca, ytlacoçujl, ytech ponj, in tecuhtli, in tlaçalli: in çujçujnequj, ovilmomjlinili, çujl ipan tocuni, ypan tlatocati, yn anjhemjlinçuni.

Auh ynjc iuxcuijna: çujl nauhcuj ecuh, in cioa: ynjc ce ynnon tiacapan, ynjc vnnon teicu, ynjc ey, iuxcuijna tlaco: ynjc nauj iuxcuijna xocotzin. Jujquin hin, nauhcuijn cioa: çujl ueuca. Jujquin hin, cecenca yuxcuijna: tlaçolteotes.

Auh ynjc mononcaiotia tlaelquanj: çujl ipampa, inimpá mjtoa, imjpapan mopoa, yn jaçujch nequalli: iixpan mjtoa, momelaoa, yn jaçujch tlahelilchiuhili: iuxuanol conca tenamacuhtli, iixuanol conca çujh: ayc mopinauiztoca, vel ouchli, iixpan necti, iixpan mjtoa. Neiolmelaoaliztli.

Qujlmach in tlaçalli, in tecuhtli, in anjhemjlitiotl: ichtecal çujçujnequa, ic tomotla, ic tehipinna in tlaçolteotl. Auh çan no ichtecal, çujçujpolhuja: ichtecal chico, iuxcuijna: çujujca, çujtoca: ichtecal, tepupoca, ixtlahia: ichtecal iuxcuijna nauj yn matlalatl, in tezpalatl.

Auh injc çujçujpolhuja ynjc chico, tlamaoac, çujujca, çujtoca: iixpan neinicujtilo, iixpan neiolmelaoalo, yn tlaçolteotl, iixpá mopoa, mjtoa, in nelachtiual.

Auh iin, ynnecat, ytlacatecuh mochiua, in tlapouhçujj, in

---

33. The chapter on Tlaçolteotl is not included in MS Academia de la Historia nor MS Biblioteca del Palacio. Hence it is not among translations in Seler's Ensayo Especial, nor, probably, elsewhere.

34. Cf. Eduard Seler, Translation of the Codex Collection, p. 93: "It is the goddess who is by the interpreters called Ixcuinan, 'she of the two faces' or 'of two-colored face,' and Tlaçolteotl, 'Goddess of Dirt,' and is explained as goddess of lust, of carnal love, and as patroness of adulterers. . . . She, this goddess, or these goddesses—for under the designation Ixcuina, she was thought of as in the plural number, and, indeed, as stated by Sahagún in his first book, as four sisters of different age—was the deity who according to this legend, introduced the peculiar kind of sacrifice which was offered to the earth—the throwing to death with arrows." The names of these four sisters were common girls' names. See p. 95.

35. Know of filth as of cochino (Seler: op. cit., pp. 92, 94). Sahagún's corresponding Spanish is "cornudera de cosas sucias."

36. Cf. Eduard Seler, op. cit., p. 37, discussing Chalchihuitlicue and Tlaçolteotl: ". . . the water . . . is not only emblematic of the mutability and evanescence of earthly being, in that it escapes every all things, but is also the symbol of purification and cleansing; it removes filth, which is sin. Thus speaks the midwife when four days after its birth she subjects the child to a ceremonious washing: 'My son, come unto thy Mother, the Goddess of Water, Chalchihuitlicue. May the cleanse of the lye which thou hast of thy father and thy mother'. . . . 'My son, come to thy Mother, thy Father, the Lady Chalchihuitlicue, the Lord Chalchihuitlatonac . . . enter the water, the blue (Matlalatl), the yellow, (Tezpalatl), that it wash thee, that it cleanse thee perfectly, that it take from thee the evil which thou hast from the beginning of the world, which clings to thee from thy father, from thy mother.'" Sahagún (Historia general, Vol. II, pp. 191-2), notes ". . . *creyeron con que la partera echa a la cieva del agua llamada Chalchihuitlicue y Chalchihuitlatonac, y dicen así: 'Entrate nuestra Chalchihuitlicue y Chalchihuitlatonac, recibe la nuestra presente este creatura: rodíguen que la recibas.' Dicho esto la partera echaba el agua echaba sobre ella en remolino, y luego la daba a parar a la criatura y también le mojaba el pecho con ella, y el colodro de la cabeza, a manera de cruzada se pone el dios y criatura a los niños, y dicíale de este manera: 'Hija mía muy amada,—y si era mozo dicíale, hijo mío muy amado—, llegaste a nuestra madre y padre la señora Chalchihuitlicue y Chalchihuitlatonac; tómense ella, porque ella se ha de lavar a cuestas y en los brazos en este mundo.' Y luego metía en el agua a la criatura, y decía: 'Entra hija mía—o hijo mío—en el agua, que es llama Matlalatl y Tezpalitl; lávase en ella, limpiarse ella que está en este lugar, y tenga por bien de apartar de ti este mal que traías con tu desde antes del principio del mundo.'" Seler (loc. cit.) establishes a connection between Chalchiuitl tree and Tlaçolteotl. In the fifth week of the Translation of the Codex Collection, which is ruled over by Chalchiuitl tree, the water goddess holds the hand of Tlaçolteotl in her hand. In the Codex Borbonicus for the corresponding fifth week, a stream of water issues from the throne of the water goddess and in the current is the bundle of Tlaçolteotl. These two illustrations mentioned Seler's remarks on the relationship between the two.

37. See Sahagún: Florentine Codex, Lib. VI, cap. xiii (ante, remarks); also Historia general, Vol. II, p. 249.

38. See Chap. VIII. Seler (Ensayo Especial, p. 9) uses the term Kalender-wahrsager.

3: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1951 NU7 Aztec NU7

The five remaining days of the year, which are the four last of January and the first of February, they named Nemontemi, which meaneth barren days. And they regarded them as unlucky and of evil fortune. There is conjecture that when they pierced the boys' and girls' ears, which was every four years, they set aside six days of Nemontemi, and it is the same as the bissextile which we observe every four years.

A los cinco dias restantes del año que son los quatro vltimos de Enero y el primero de hebrero llamauan Nemontemi, que quiere dezir dias valdios: y tenjanlos por aziagos y de mala fortuna: ay conjectura que quando agujerauan las orejas a los njños y njñas que era de quatro en quatro años, echauan seys dias de Nemontemj y es lo mjsmo del bisexto que nosotros hazemos de quatro en quatro años.

796x 777 [805] [304]

Chapter 19

These five days they held as of evil fortune and unlucky. They said that those who were born in them had evil outcomes in all their affairs, and were poor and wretched. They named them Nemo. If they were men, they named them Nemoquich; if it was a woman, they named her Nencioutl. They dared do nothing in these days, because they were unlucky. Especially did they abstain from quarreling, because they said that those who quarreled in these days always remained with that custom. They held as a bad omen stumbling in these days.

These aforementioned feasts were fixed, and were always observed within the month, or a day or two ahead. Other feasts they had [which were] movable, which were celebrated during the course of the twenty signs, which made a round in two hundred and sixty days. And hence these movable feasts, in a year, fell one in one month, and another in another, and always varied.

Capi. 19.

1 A Estos cinco dias tenjan por malafor- A 28
2 b tunados y aziagos: dezian que los que b 29
3 c en ellos nacian tenjan malos successos c 30
4 d en todas sus cosas, y eran pobres y mj- d 31
seros llamauanlos Nemo, si eran hombres llamauanlos Nemoquich, y si era muger llamauala Nencioutl, no osauan hazer nada en estos dias por ser malafortunados: especialmente se abstenjan de reñjr: porque dezian que los que reñjan en estos dias se quedauã siempre con aquella costumbre tenjan por mal agüero tropeçar en estos dias.

Estas fiestas dichas eran fixas que siempre se hazia dentro del mes o vn dia o dos adelante: Otras fiestas tenjan moujbles que se hazian por el curso de los veinte signos: los quales hazian vn circulo en dozientos y sesenta dias: y por tanto estas fiestas moujbles vn año cayan en vn mes y otro en otro y siempre variauan.

[551]

Of the Movable Feasts

The first movable feast was celebrated in honor of the sun, in the sign which is named ce ocelotl, in the fourth house, which is named nauí ollin. On this feast they offered, to the image of the sun, quiaí, and they offered incense. And at noon they slew captives before it in honor of the sun. On this same day, all drew blood from their ears—children and those who were grown—in honor of the sun, and they offered it that blood.

De las fiestas moujbles.

La primera fiesta moujble se celebraua a honrra del sol en el signo que se llama ce ocelotl, en la quarta casa que se llama naolin: en esta fiesta ofrecian a la ymagen del sol codorniges y incensauan: y en el medio mezauã capituos delante della a honrra del sol. En este mesmo dia se sangrauan todos de las orejas chicos y grãdes a hõrra del sol y le ofrecian aquella sangre.

796x [776] [785]

The Second Movable Feast

In this same sign, in the seventh house, all the painters and the scribes celebrated a feast. They

La segunda fiesta moujble.

En este mjsmo signo en la septima casa hazã fiesta todos los pintores, y las escriberas ayunauã quarẽta ders, as far down as his armpits. This was called "the flowery garment."

785 796x 463

And from both ears hung curved, gold, shell pendants.[8] And they fitted [his ears] with ear plugs made of a mosaic of turquoise. And [he wore] a shell necklace. Moreover, his breast ornament was of white sea shells.

And then his lip plug was a slender snail shell lip plug. And hanging from his shoulders was what was like a cord bag called icpatoxie.[9]

Then they placed golden bracelets on both upper arms, and on both wrists they put carved bracelets with precious stones, covering almost all the forearm. And he put on his net cape like a fish-net of wide mesh with a fringe of brown cotton thread.[10] And his costly breech clout reached to the calves of his legs.

And then they placed his bells on both legs, all golden bells, called oiouali. These, as he ran, went jingling and ringing. Thus they resounded. And he had princely sandals with ocelot skin ears. Thus was arrayed he who died after one year.

When [the feast] of Toxcatl was drawing near, when it was approaching him, when it was coming to him, first they married him to [four] women whom they sought out [for him]. He was married in [the month of] Uey tocoztli.

And he left off, scattered in various places, and abandoned the ornaments he had had, in which he had walked about fasting, painted black. His hair was shorn; he was given a tuft of hair tied upon his forehead, like that of a war captain. Thus they bound [his hair], knotting it [with brown cotton thread] called tochiacatl; and they tied to his long hair[11] his forked heron feather ornament with single quetzal feathers attached.

Only twenty days he lived, lying with and married to the women. Four women he lived with, who also were cared for, for one year, in the guardian's house.

The first one was named Xochiquetzal; the second, Xilonen; the third, Atlatonan; the fourth, Uixociuatl.

And still on the eve of [the feast of] Toxcatl, still five days from it, on the fifth day [before it], when campa ic mapanaia, yciiacacpa quijquixtiaia: in moteneoa xuchiocapitli.

Auh yn jnacaxitech nenecoc pipilcatiuijia teucujtlaepcololli: yoan conaquijaia icoiolnacoch, teuxiujtl in tlachioalli, tlaxiuhçalolli: yoan chipolcuxcatl, yn jcuxquj, oc cepa yielpancuiquj istac cilin.

Auh nijman ie yteçacauh, iteçacapiaz tecxiztli: auh ycujtlapan pilcatiuh itoca Jcpatoxi, iuhqujn icpaxiquijpilli:

njman ie nenecoc teucujtlamatemecatl contlatlalitiuh in jacolpã, yoan in nenecoc imaquetlitlan, xinmaquixtli in contetecatiuh, achi vel qujtlatlamja yn jmatzotzopaz: auh çan ycoechin in quijquentiuh, iuhqujn xoujlmatlatl ie cnoniaoac, tochiacatl ynjc tentlaiaoalo: yoan ytlaçomaxtli quijmetztopeoa:

auh njman ie ycoiol nenécoc, icxic in contlalitiuh, muchi teucujtlatl in coiolli, mjtoa oioouali: ichoatl inic xaxamacatiuh, ynic tzitzilicatiuh, ynic caquixti: yoan itzcac ocelunacace: yujn in muchichioaia, in ichoatl miquja ce xiujtl:

yn iguac ie oalacitiuh tuxcatl, in ie itech ompachiuhtiuh, yn ie itech onacitiuh, achtopa tlapaliuhcatia, cihoatl qujttaia, mocioaoatiaia ipan vey toçoztli.

Auh qujtepeoaia, qujtlatlaliaia, quicaoa, yn jnechichioal ocatca, yn ipan omotlilçauhtinenca, moxima, mjxquatzontia, iuhqujnma iautequjoa, ontlalpia, ontlacuja: ynic ontlalpia, itoca tochiacatl, xittomonjlpitica: yoan yaxtaxel, quetzalmjaoaio, itoxocol itech qujlpia:

çan cempoalilhujtl in oncioacuchtinemi, yn oncioaoatinemj: nauintin in cioa q'nujcatinenca, no ce xiuhtica in pialoia calpixcan:

y ce itoca xochiquetzal, ynjc vme xilone, ynjc ey Atlatona, ynjc nauj, vixtocioatl.

Auh in ie itentla Toxcatl, oc macujltica, tlama-

796x 301 [306] [292] 796x [584 595] [302 701] [283 301] [833] [551]

8. "Como arcillas de oro" (Sahagún: loc. cit.).
9. "Llevaban a las espaldas, un ornamento como bolsa, de un palmo en quadro de lienzo blanco, con sus borlas y flocadura" (loc. cit.).
10. Cf. Sahagún (Robredo edition), Vol. II, p. 210.
11. Cf. ibid., Vol. I, p. 143. The corresponding Spanish text, however, reads: "con una pluma corviua, ajuntada aquella ambiua de los cabellos, dos bordes con su borrasca, hechas de plumas, y una, y turbiencal, muy corriuas, que eller llamauan xiuitzolli." Clark (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 50) describes "The first head of macuiltic [which] has a design called, by Sahagún, xiuitzolli, because of the combs worn in turbiencal or red rabbit's fur; the general of whirlpools outlined in a square of dark red, has squares of white feathers. The fringe is also of red turbiencal." From this, it would appear that turbiencal is red string, and turbiencal is red thong of rabbit hair.

X 796 each [of the old men] a bowl of wine, or a gourd 274 for each, or a small earthenware jar for each; quite freely and purely of their own accord they brought with them the wine, pouring it into a large earthenware vessel. And the old men sat drinking wine and refreshing themselves, not, [however,] becoming drunk.

çan in iolloconpa, çan in iollotlamati, in omocaua vetli, qujoaltecatimanj apaxco: auh tlanõtoque in vevetque, texcalcevizoque, amo ivinti:

Enough of this.

ic izquich.

X 796 For when were ended these twenty days of Izcalli, thereupon set in the five days of nemontemi, or nenontemi, which are not counted.[9] And the nemontemi were feared and held in awe. None commanded others, none quarreled [with others]. And if any, at this time, disputed with others, it was said they would always do thus. And he who was born at this time they named Nemo. They said: "It hath been said that [he hath] no day sign. No reward is his; he will live in misery. He will live in poverty upon the earth."

Auh in onquiz y, cempoalli Izcalli, njmã ie ic oalmotlalia in macujlilhujtl in nemõtemj, apoço nenontemj, acampouhquj: Auh in nemontemj, vel imacazoia, mauhcaitoia, aiac teaoaia, aiac maoaia: auh in aca vncã teaoa, qujlmach cenqujcuj. Auh in aquja vncan tlacati: qujtocaiotiaia. Nemo: qujtoaia, qujlmach atle ilhujl, atle imaceoal muchioa, qujhiovitinemja, vmpa onqujztinemja in tlalticpac.

[56] 777

And during [the month of] Izcalli, in the first, second, and third years, nothing [in addition] was done. But on the fourth year, a great [festival] was observed. At that time died those [adorned as] Izcoçauhqui, the impersonators of Xiuhtecutli—ceremonially bathed ones. Sometimes many died; sometimes not many.

Auh in jpan jn Jacalli: injc ce xivitl, yoan ic oxivitl, yoan iquexivitl, atle muchioa : auh quja ic nauhxivitl in moveichioa, qujniquac mjquja in Izcoçauhque, in jxiptlanan Xiuhtecutli: tlaaltilti, in quẽmã mjequjntin in mjquja, in quemã amo mjequjnti.

And upon the morrow, on the morning of [the feast of] Izcalli, the bathed ones entered the sand. They brought them into the sand there at Tzonmolco. All the women carried all their womanly array, and the men carried all their array (as hath been told elsewhere). And they carried for them their paper adornment; it went upon a wooden globe.

[293]

Auh in ie iuh muztla, in ie oallavi Izcalli: in tlaaltilti, otxalaqui, qujmonxalaquja in vmpa tzonmolco: in cioa muchi qujtquj, in jzquich inciostlatquj: yoan in oqujchtin, muchi qujtequj in jzquich intlatlatquj (in juh omjto cecnj): auh in jmamatlatquj, muchi qujmjequjlia: quauhtzontapaioltica ieietiuh.

And when they brought them there, thereupon they arrayed them, [so that] all were ornamented. They put upon them their paper array. And when all were prepared and arrayed even as Izcoçauhqui was arrayed, and the women adorned also in the same manner, thereupon all climbed up to [the Temple of] Tzonmolco, in rows. And when they came reaching there, they circled about the offering stone. Then, once again all came down, likewise walking in rows.

Auh in ie iuh mjquja in Izcoçauhque, in jxiptlanan Xiuhtecutli: tlaaltilti, otxalaqui, qujmonxalaquja in vmpa tzonmolco: in cioa muchi qujtequj, in jzquich inciostlatquj: yoan in oqujchtin, muchi qujtequj in jzquich intlatlatquj (in juh omjto cecnj): auh in jmamatlatquj, muchi qujmjequjlia: quauhtzontapaioltica ieietiuh.

And when they came down, thereupon they took them to the tribal temple, and then took apart [the paper vestments], and put [the victims] in a house and guarded them well. And they fastened the men

Auh in otemoco njmã ie ic qujnvica in calpulco, mec qujnxixitinja, vncan mocencaltilia, vel q'npipia: in oqujchtin qujnxillãmecaiotia, in jquac maxiza qujntitilinjivi. Auh in oncic iocalnepantla: njmã ic

9. Seler (op. cit., p. 256) refers to the "Nemontemi (unnützer Tage) die für nicht geachtet wurden"; i.e., they were dedicated to no god. One meaning of the verb nemi, however, is to rest.

only misery, poverty, vanity, misfortune, and a life of woe.[4]

And if one were born at that time he was looked upon with fear; he was shunned. And if he were a man, they named him Nemon, Nentlacatl, Nenquizqui. Nowhere was he counted; he was not a man. And if it were a woman, [they named her] Nenciuatl.

And when [these days came], nothing was done; the palaces and courts were empty; no suits were judged. All stayed at home. None swept with brooms; they only fanned [the dust] with a fan, or a turkey quill, or with the wing of a bird; or they beat and cleaned with a cloak.

And no one might then quarrel; [for] this was strongly forbidden to people; it was severely forbidden to them. They were charged that none might wrangle. Neither might one sleep during the day. [If so,] it was said: "[So] shalt thou always."

Nor should anyone fall, or trip, or stumble. All walked softly. And to one who stumbled, they said: "Thou hast the Nemontemi; so shalt thou be. Be thou careful."

And whosoever then took sick and was ill, [of him] everyone said: "He hath sickened. Never more will he rise; no more may he have hope. That he will recover there is no hope." No longer had they hope for him.

And if one yet escaped [death], neither would any pay heed to him nor speak to him. It was said: "For it is only that he by whose grace we live hath acted and determined of his own will."

None, therefore, were comforted nor moved. His kin forgot him and laid him on the ground. No more might he be able to leave, to some degree get up [again], and take nourishment. For the setting in of the Nemontemi was terrifying.

For he had no day sign; he had no name; wherefore no one might, in truth, practice medicine and heal one, nor read the meaning of the days. For verily the days were not numbered; they had no count in all these four days.

linjlizth, nenquizcaiuí, nenquiçalizth, lonocatinemjlizth.

Auh in aquin vncan tlacatia, cenca tlamauhcaittililoia, tlatẽnachililoia: auh intla oquichtli quizocaiotiaia Nemõ, nentlacatl, nenquizquj, acan ompouhquj acã, ompovi nenoquich. Auh intla cioatl: Nenciouatl.

Auh in iquac y, atle aiouia, çan cactimẽca in texpan intecculi, aimo tecutlaxoloia, çan calonoaia; aiac tlachpanaia, ochpaoaztica: çan tlaiecapcviloia, ecaceoaztica, anoço totolmamaztica, totolasvitztica, anoço tlavivitequjá, tlapopovaia tilnẽstica:

yoan aiac vel vncan maoaia, cenca tetlacaoaltiloia, cẽca tetlaquauhnaoatiloia, tetepitznaoatiloia, tecocoltiloia injc aiac maoaz: ano ac cemjlhujcochia: vncan teilhujloia. Centicuja:

ano ac vel motlavitequja, moxicujnjaia, motepeslamjaia; nematca, nenemoaia: auh in aquin motepotlamjaia: quilhujaia. Otimonemovi, ocenticcujc, ma ximjmati.

Auh in aquin ipan y, cocolizth quicuja mococoaia: mochi tlacatl quiuoaia, Concocolizcuj, aocmo quiçaz. aocmo motemachia, in aço patia, aocmo teumeciolloti, aocmo itech ca netemachilli:

auh intla aca oc maquiça, aoc ac itlamatian aoc ac itlatoaian: mjua. Ca ça oacnotlama, in jpalnemoanj, ça oquimonomavili, oquimoioculili:

aocmo iuh catca triollo, ca oica netlapaloloc, netlaquaoaloc, oquixcauhque injoaiolque, ca oiquiteca-que: aocmo iuhcan quiaoaill inon oqotlelzaia, meoqiquem, inon oihiio quicujc, ca temauhri ia jpan opeuh ilhujtl Nemõtemj:

ca atle iiuual, ca atle itoca: ipampa aiac vel vncã ticitoca, tepatia, netlapovia: ca nel amo vmpouhquj, atle ipoualio in jaquilhujtl xavilhujtl.

4. The Tovar Calendar (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 30) adds that people did not gather at the temple, and that the priests performed no sacrifices nor other ceremony acts.

Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

Twelfth Chapter, in which is told [the manner of conduct of] all the people when the new fire was taken. And, when this took place, everyone renewed his clothing and all the household goods.

Then, at this time, all renewed their household goods, the men's array, and the women's array, the mats—the mats of large, fat reeds,—and the seats. All was new which was spread about, as well as the hearth stones and the pestles. Also at this time [the men] were newly dressed and wrapped in capes. A woman—[such as she] dressed newly in their new skirts and shifts.

Thus it was said that truly the year newly started. There was much happiness and rejoicing. And they said: "For thus it is ended; thus sickness and famine have left us." Then incense was offered; [quail] were decapitated, and incense was offered. They grasped this incense ladle, and raised it in dedication to the four directions in the courtyard. Then they cast it into the hearth. Thus was incense offered.

Thereupon amaranth seed cakes overspread with honey were eaten. Then all were bidden to fast, and [it was ordered] that no one should drink from the time that it was completely light until it came to be considered midday. And when noon came, then captives and ceremonially bathed ones died. Then all rejoiced and there was feasting. Then once again fires were newly laid and placed.

And [so for] the pregnant women who had been feared, if any of them then gave birth to and bore a child; if a boy was born as her child, they named him Motecuhzoma, Xuihtlalpil, Xiuhtzincapul, Xiuhtli, Tezcatl, Xiuhtlatlac, Quetzalxiuh, Xiuhquen, etc. And if [it was] a girl, Xiuhcomotl, Xiuhcue, Xiuhcapil, etc.

And when, in the time of Moctezuma, our years were bound, he ordered that indeed everywhere should be sought a captive whose name [contained the word] xiuitl. Wherewever [he was], this one was to be seized. And one was taken—a man from Ucxomanco, a well-born man. He was called Xiuhtlamin, Inic matlactlomome, capitulo, vncan mitoa: in quemin in iuquich tlacatl, in icoac omocuic in iancuic tlel: auh in icoac, y, muchi tlacatl, quiitcuilaia in itlaquen, yuan in iuquich calitlaquitl.

Niman icoac, iuquich iancuiia, in calitlaquitl: . oquichtlaquitl, in cioatlaquitl, in petlatl, in tolcuetli, in icpalli: muchi iancuic in moeteca, ioli in temamatli, in tzoloti. No iquac iancuic nequentilo, nelpililo in tilmatli: in cioatl, iancuic omomaquia, in iscue, in iuipil.

Ic mina, ca nel iancuic oapeca in xiuitl: papaca, netlamachtilo: yoan quinoaia, ca ic oquin, ic otechtlalcaui in cocoliztli, in maianalitzli. Niman ic cocopaltemalo, tlacotonalo, tlenamaco: concui in tlemaitl, nauhcampa coniiseq in itholco, çaepan contema tlexicco, inic otlenamacoc copalli:

nimá ic ic necpan tzoxoualquale, vncan ic neçaoalistlalhuilo, inic xioc atlin, ic centlathuis: quincenmomaitinia in nepanola tonatiuh. Auh in cocic, nepanola tonatiuh, niman ic miqui in mamalti, yoan tlaltlilti: quinicoac conpapaca, tlitlacualo: icoac oc cappa ikcuican netlitlecuihtilo, netlitlecuillalilile.

Auh in oimacaxoia oozzi, intla aca icoac omixiuh, otlacochiuh: intla oquichtli iconcuh otlacat, quinocaiaiaia molpili, xiuhtlalpil, xiuhtzitzaqui, xiuhtli, tezcatl, xiuhtlatlac, quetzalxiuh, xiuhquen. Etc.* Auh intla cioatl, xiuhcomotl, xiuhcue, xiuhcapil. Etc.*

Auh in icoac, ipan motechiuh motecuçoma, tonaiuhmolpili, oncca nenitiaa ic tlamoaat, inic tomolon mulli: in iuca xiuitl, in çaqo campa id onca. Auh oc xiioac ueqtzinoatl, tlaçopilli: iuca xiuhtlamin, tlatlilco mulli motechiuh: in tlamaaj iuca iucaia, auh ic tocaiotlac, ic notzalo: xiuhtlamimomi: ca iohuaal

796
372 782

372

[782]

[785]

[551]

[Seb. cat. 116, p. 27 — Analyst]

1796 805 wind. And the fourth place which she entered was ever there at Xolloco. [And] there she stopped.

[For] there were a part of, and carried together, the four year-bearers—Reed, Flint, House, and Rabbit. Thus do the year-bearers go describing circles, whirling around [as a measure of time].

1796 When, at early dawn, Xilonen was to die, all during the night songs were sung after the manner of the women. Vigil was kept. Everyone passed the night watching; they slept not; the women remained [533] sleepless. They sang the songs [of Xilonen].

And when day broke, then began the dancing. Verily, everyone—the leaders of the youths, the leading [532] warriors, and the valiant warriors bore maize stalks. These were named "bird banners."

1796 Likewise the women danced—those who were with Xilonen. They were painted with red feathers. 535 And their faces were painted with yellow ochre. Also 793 they colored their faces in two colors: about their lips they were yellow with ochre, and their fore-[302] heads were stained with the red of anatta seeds.[8] [They bore] their wreaths of flowers upon their [301] heads, and the leaders had garlands of the yellow flowers of the Caryophyllus mexicanus [about their necks].[9]

These women were known as priestesses. They mingled not with the men, but remained at one side. They were describing circles, and enclosing Xilonen. They sang for her after the manner of women. These women were called "the hanging gourd."

And the warriors danced before [Xilonen], following a serpentine course.

1796 And for this reason were [the women] known as "the hanging gourd": the two-toned wooden drum, 793 which they beat as they went, had tied to it a gourd, [534] which was under the drum, which looked as if it were hanging beneath. They who struck the two-toned drum went carrying a little drum under their arms, which they beat, as they went, with rubber-tipped drum sticks.[10]

[534] And the priests, [who] attended them, went blowing horns; they blew shell trumpets as they went. And they went strewing, scattering, and casting incense as they went to meet Xilonen.

And the fire priest, who was to slay [Xilonen] as ecatl: ynic nauhcan aqoja, vmpa xolloco, vmpa omonoquiçaia, çã quijoctiaia, çan qujujcaltiaia, yn nauhtecl xiuhtonalli: yn acatl, in tecpatl, in calli, in tochtli, ynic tlaiaualoctiuh, ynic momalacachoctiuh, in xiuhtonalli.

In ic iuh iuxtrinco miquiz in Xilonen: cejocal in cioapan cujoaia, toçoonia, muchi tlacatl ixtoçoonia, amo cochia, mocochiçoloaia in cioa, quenia quevilisia yn icujc.

Auh yn ic otlatujc, njman ic peoa in netotilo, vel ixqujch tlacatl in tiachcaoan, in telpopuchti, yn iiaquac, yoan in tequjoaque, iacicinnopil: ynjn motocaiotia totopanjzl.

No mjtoia in cioa, yn itechpouja in xilonen, mopopotonjaia tlapalivjtica: yoan motzaoaia tecoçauhtica: no ic qujcotona, yn inxaiac, yn jntenco, tecoçauhtica: auh yn inixquac tlapalachiotica, ynjicpacaochiuh, inxuxochicouaquj cempoalxuchitl yiacatiuh.

Yn ichoã yn, cioa, moteneoa cioatlamacazque, amo qujmonneloaa yn oqujchti, çan nonqua mantiuj, cololujtiuj, qujzepeujtiuj in Xilonen: qujcioapãcujcatiraj: in ichoantin y, cioa moteneoa tecomapilooa.

Auh in tiachcaoan ixpan mjstitiuj, mococolociuj:

auh ynic moteneoa tecomapilooa, ca in teponaztli in qujujtectiuj, itech çaliuhtiuh in atecomatl, yhicampa itepuzaco ietiuh in teponaztli, iuhquja pilcatiuh ic neci: in teponaçoa çã qujciacaujtiuh in teponaztontli in qujujtectiuh olmatica.

Auh in tlamacazque, tenanamjquj tlapitztiuj, tecciztli in qujpitztiuj: yoan yn iauhtextli in qujpipixtiuj, qujcecenmatiuj, qujstepeuhtiuj, conjxnamjctiuj in Xilonen.

Auh in tlenamacac, in tiamjctiz, vel mocencaoa,

---

9. Rosa mollissima L., the anatta shrub (Clark, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 6). Cf. also Seler, op. cit., p. 151.

9. "Estas flores que se llamaban compañalchitl, son semejantes y de buen olor" (Rubiendo ed., Vol. III, p. 273). Tagetes, in Seler, loc. cit. See also p. 99, n. 15.

10. Clark (op. cit., Vol. I, p. 93, n. 2), writing of the teponaztzin (drumming priests), says: "The plaver is called the teponaztli, and the drum, teponaztl. Made from the hollowed-out trunk of the Lonchocarpus cruralinus Bentb. this drum has two notes; the rubber-headed drum-sticks are of chicle." Cf. also Sahagún's description of the temple on the heroes (corresponding Spanish text).

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

fate, to see if the day of birth was lucky or unlucky. Four 787 777 days later the child's family held a feast both to celebrate the birth and to name the child. If the day of birth proved 553 to be unlucky, custom sanctioned a religious fiction where- 777 by the naming ceremony was postponed to a more favorable period. At the feast the guests sprinkled food and pulque 553 over the sacred fire, which had been kindled at the ac- 776 couchement as an offering to the Fire God, the Old God, whose cult originated in the time of the Middle Cultures.
The child, if a boy, was shown toy weapons and tools 553 which the parents placed in his hands, guiding them in the motions of use. If the child were a girl the parents made her pretend to weave and spin with toy instruments. A name, that badge of identity so important to man, was given to the child at this time. A boy was often named for the date of his birth, One Reed, Two Flower, Seven Deer, or for an animal, like "Nezahualcoyotl" (Hungry Coyote), or for an ancestor, like "Montezuma the Younger," or for some event at the time of birth. Often the day name was given with an alternative animal title. Girls' names frequently were compounded with the word for flower, xochitl.

Education began after weaning in the third year. Its pur- [862] pose was to induct the child into the techniques and obliga- 861 tions of adult life as promptly as possible. A world in which handwork is universal offers a child a chance to participate in adult activities far earlier than in our heavily mechanized culture. Fathers supervised the training of sons, and mothers instructed their daughters. Up to six years of age the children listened to frequently repeated homilies and advice, learned the uses of the household implements and performed minor household chores.[8]

X 796
553

During all of these twenty days, until the coming of the next month, they practised singing in the houses which they called cuicacalli. They did not dance; rather, remaining seated, they sang canticles in praise of their gods. Many other rites were performed in this feast which are set forth at length in the accounting of them, fol. 27.

Todos estos veynte dias, hasta llegar al mes que viene: se exercitauan en cantar en las casas, que llamauan cujcacàli, no beylauà, sino estando sentados: cantauan cantares a loor de sus dioses. Otras muchas cerjmonjas, se hazian en esta fiesta: las quales, estan escriptas, a la larga en su historia. fol. 27.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 Besides, it is distinctly implied, if not stated,
[565] that for actions of merit such people might be re-adopted, and thus restored to their original rights. The anonymous conqueror asserts that the performer of any valorous deed was highly rewarded and made a chieftain, "even if he was the vilest slave."[91] But without such formal re-adoption, no outcast could emerge from his inferior and unprotected condition. The overwhelming majority of Mexico's aboriginal people, however, consisted of members of the twenty kins shown to have composed the tribe. These all enjoyed equal rights; consequently all had the same duty. Both right and obligation were governed by the organization of kinship. While it is impossible for us to follow here strictly the order of enumeration of these rights and obligations, established in the admirable researches of Mr. Morgan, we still can distinctly trace all of them in ancient Mexican society, operating with more or less unimpaired vitality.

[618] The kin claimed the right to name its members.[92] A family name
553 was unknown to the ancient Mexicans,[93] and thus our assertion that the modern family was not yet established among them, acquires further support. Within a few days after the child's birth, its mother in presence of all the neighbors (consequently of the "calpulli" or kin) gave the child a name through the medium of the women assisting her delivery. This name, generally taken from that of the day of birth, had a superstitious bearing, and was to accompany the child during the period of its utter helplessness.[94] A second "naming" took place several

[91] "Relatione di alcune Cose della Nuova Spagna" (Col. de Doc., I, p. 371). Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XVII, p. 586): "y Esclavos havia que regian, y mandaban la casa de su Señor, como hacen los Maiordomos."

[92] Morgan ("Ancient Society," pp. 71 and 78).

[93] Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37): "Todos los Niños cuando nacian tomaban nombre del dia en que nacian." Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXII, pp. 454 and 455). The family name was introduced by the Spaniards, who gave other names at the time of baptism.

[94] Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37). Sahagun (Lib. IV, cap. I, pp. 283 and 284, in general the entire fourth Book, which gives a very full idea of all the superstitions connected with birthdays; more especially Cap. XXXV and XXXVI and Lib. VI, cap. XXXVII, pp. 217-221). All the children of the quarter were invited to the festival: "En este tiempo que estas cosas se hacian, juntabanse los mosuelos de todo aquel barrio, y acabadas todas estas ceremonias, entran en la casa del y toman la comida que alli les tenian aparejada. . . . . ." The naming took place in presence of "todos los parientas y parientos del niño, viejos y viejas" (p. 218). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XIX, p. 107): "Estos nombres tomaban de los idolos ó de las fiestas que en aquellas signos caian, y á veces de aves y animales y de otras cosas insensatas, como se les antojaba." (Lib. XIII, cap. XXXV, p. 267). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XX, p. 450: "Luego hacian convocacion de todos los Deudos, y Parientes, de los Padres, y de todos los Amigos, y

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

months later, which was performed by the medicine-man of the 553 kin.[95] Both of these names were preserved, but if the full-grown man ever performed some action of merit in the service of the whole tribe, then the tribe bestowed upon him a third name as an honorable title attached to his person in reward for his deeds.[96]

It was the duty of the kin to educate or train its members to every 871 branch of public life. For all public purposes, man only must be 868 taken into account. This appears obvious from what was said already concerning the position of women in general. Now each calpulli, or localized kin, among the ancient Mexicans had, as we have shown in "Art of War,"[97] its "House of the Youth" ("telpuch-calli") joined to its "medicine-lodge" or temple. Thither the boys were brought at an early age, to be instructed in whatever was needed for after-life. In order to train their bodies they were held to manual labor, and to the ordinary duties of worship. The use of weapons was made a prominent object of teaching; so was the dance and song, the latter coupled with ordinary Indian rhetorics.[98] These houses of education were under the Vecinos, que para este acto se juntavan . . . y entonces le ponian el nombre." Also (Cap. XXII, p. 455; cap. XXIII, p. 456): "De la misma manera, que quando alguna de estas Indias paria, se usaba juntarse toda la Parentela. y las vecinas, y amigas. . . . . De esta misma manera lo acostumbraban hacer para el fingido Bantismo." Gomara ("Conquista," Vedia I. p. 438): "En este lavatorio les ponian nombre, no como querian, sino el del mismo dia en que nacieron.' Vetancurt (Parte II, Trat. III, cap. VIII, p. 402).

[95] This is stated by Gomara (Vedia I, p. 438): "y dende á tres meses, que son de los nuestros dos, los llevaban al templo, donde un sacerdote que tenia la cuenta y ciencia del calendario y signos, les daba otro sobrenombre, haciendo muchas ceremonias, y declaraba las gracias y virtudes del idolo cuyo nombre les ponia, pronosticándoles buenos hados." Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37): "Despues desde á tres meses presentaban aquella criatura en el templo del demonio, y dabanle su nombre, no dejando el que tenia, y tambien entonces comian de regocijo, . . . "

[96] Gomara (Vedia, p. 438). Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXII, p. 436). Clavigero (Lib. VI, cap. XXXVII, pp. 437, 438). Durán (Cap. XI, pp. 96, 97, and 98).

[97] "Art of War," p. 101. Relying on Humboldt, I assumed fifteen years to be the age when military instruction began, but the general instruction began much sooner. See note 98.

[98] Gomara (Vedia, p. 438). Sahagun (Lib. III, cap. IV, cap. V, p. 262): "Habiendo entrado en la casa del Telpuchcali el niño, dábanle cargo de barrer, limpiar la casa, poner lumbre, y hacer los servicios de penitencia á que se obligaba. Era costumbre que á la puesta del sol, todos los mancebos iban á bailar, y danzar à la casa que se llamaba Cuicacalco cada noche, y el muchacho tambien bailaba con los otros mancebos; llegando á los quince años. y siendo ya mancebillo, llevábanle consigo los mancebos mayores al monte á traer la leña, que era necesaria para la casa del Telpuchcali. y Cuicacalco, y cargabànle las rodelas para que las llevase acuestas;" (p. 269): "La vida que tenian era muy áspera . . . " (Cap. VI, pp. 270 and 271; Lib. VI, cap. XXXIX, p. 224), and other incidental notices. Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIV, pp. 124, 125). Torque- happy. He was destitute; on earth misery engulfed him. For verily he brought it on himself — because of his wickedness, disregard, shamelessness, and neglect. No one bequeathed it to him, for by his own will and of his own fault he brought unto himself injury, torment, and pain. Hence he was despised and disregarded. No one any longer obeyed him; no one became his friend; he stood by himself. No one took account of his personality. Everywhere he was hated; nowhere was he liked; nowhere did he give pleasure. But he was regarded as a thing, and looked at, for now he was a vagabond, proscribed, completely outlawed; he was on the outside, lingering on the outskirts; impudent and shameless. He went about haughty[7] and drunk. For truly he was abandoned to evil and feared. His side was sore; his head ached — it was in pain — so that he was incorrigible, suffering, and dejected. For he was full of evil — so perverse was he.

And of anyone who had gained merit and reward being then born, his fathers and mothers said: "Upon a good day sign hath he been born and created and come forth on earth; he hath arrived upon the earth on [the day sign] One Crocodile. Let him be bathed."[8]

Whereupon they gave him a name. They called him Cipac. Or else, they gave him the name of another one of his grandparents. Etc.

And, on the other hand, if it were the wish [of the parents], perchance they passed over the days; perchance they settled upon still another day for him to be bathed. For One Crocodile bore with it all favorable day signs.

And if it were a man who was born, when they bathed him they adorned for him a small shield, upon which they put four small arrows. And to it they bound his umbilical cord. They entrusted it to and sent it in the charge of brave chieftains, who left it at the battlefield. Right there where they fought, where there was fierce battle, at the crossing of the waters, they buried it.

And if it were a woman, when they bathed her, they put into the vessel in which she was bathed, the large earthen bathing vessel, her spindle, her cotton, quitlacamati, xiac icnjuh quichioa, yioca quetzalo, 787X aoc ac iiel quitta, novian tlaelitto, ican velitolo, ican tlapaquiltia, ça tlatto, ça itto, ca ie tlaztlacolli, ie tlaitolli, ie centlaitoll'i, ie te:.nco cica, ie tetenco pipilcac, ie tepan onoc: injc aquen tlatta, injc moquatlaztinemj, mjvintitinen.;, ca nel otlauelcaoaloc, otlaellelaxiti, otlaxillîquauhtili, otlaztonteconquauhtili, otlaztonquauhtili inic auel monotza, ca iiolaçic, iiellelaçic, quimaxilti, ynjc tlaueliloc.

Auh in aca vel mâcoaale, ilhujle, ipan otlacat: nj-man quitoaia in jtahoan, in jnaoan, ca qualli tonalli in jpan otlacat, oieroc, otlalticpacquijx, omotlalticpac-quijxti, ce cipactli: ma njman malti, ic quitocamacaia, ic quinotzaia, cipac: anoço itla [553] oc centlamantli, icolhoan intoca in quimacaia, etc.:

auh tel çan teiollotlama; in açoc conchololtizque, açoc contlalizque oc centetl tonalli, ipan maltiz: ca ie quicenvica in ce cipactli, ca muchi qualli tonalli.

Auh intla oquichtli otlacat: in jquac caltiaia, chi- 787X maltoatli quichichiviliaia, ipâ temj navi mjtotonti: 844 auh itech quilpiaia in jxic, intech quicaoaia, intech quipiloaia in tiacaoan, iaopan concaoaia: vel oncan in necaliua, in tlaiecolo, yn japaniocan contocaia.

Auh intla çioatl otlacat: ynjc caltiaia imalac, ich-cauh, itzaoalcaz, ioan ipopouh, iochpanoaz ipan contemaia yn jnealtilcaz, in jnealtilapaz: yc quinextiaia,

7. Cf. Angel Maria Garibay K.: "Paralipómenos de Sahagún," Tlalocan, II, 3 (1947), pp. 239 and 247 (n. 61), where [illegible] to translated verses in various documentaries.

8. The corresponding Spanish text usually uses "baptism" for malti, etc.; see however, Ch. 37, ciqlva (chapuzamiento, etc.).

X787 And in this way did the readers of the day signs ●553 remedy it: if someone were born on these several 851 days, they passed over them and waited for Seven Rain. At that time they bathed him, that they might give him a name. For in that way they remedied his fate; then they brought him out at a good time and it resulted at a propitious moment. They made it partly good. Thus they expected that perchance his fate and deserts might become something — if he lived, were well reared, and played his part well; because later, there, they had set in Seven Rain,[2] they put their trust in Seven Rain.

ah injc quipatiaia tonalpoohqoc, intla aca ipan otlacat inquilhujtl oc conchololtiaia, qujchieltiaia in chiconqujavid quinjquac caltiaia inic quitocamacaqc, ipampa ic quipatia in itonal, vncan quijeccaquiztia, ieccan quiça, chicoqualtia, ic conjtulia, in aço ça itla ilhujl, imácoual, muchioztiuh intla nemiz, intla uel ospanoz, intla uel moquetzaz ipampa oç vncan in chiconnad quitlaliaia, vel quitemachiaia in chiconqujavitl.

*787 They said it was a good day. Merciful, pitying, and compassionate was the one born precisely upon it. He became fortunate. It was as if his fortune, his deserts, his good luck rained down upon him;
as if it sprinkled on or swirled about him. It was said that verily so was his day sign, Seven Rain.

quitoaia ca qualli tonalli, icnoon, teicnoittanj, tetlacocolianj, in aquin vel ipan tlacatia, tlacnopilhujanj muchioaia, iuhquin ipan tnetzelivi, iuhquin ipan pipizaoj, iuhquin momoloca ilhujl, imácoual, icnopal, mitoa ca nel iuhquj itonal in chiconqujavitl.

[851] And he who was born on it was forthwith bathed, and they gave him a name. No longer did they pass over it, or delay or postpone it.

Auh in aquin ipan tlacatia, çan niman iquac maltia, quitocamaca, aocmo conchololtia, aocmo quitlatvilia, aocmo connechcatlaça:

Nevertheless, the morrow, Eight Flower, which came next and following, was also the same. It, so [851] they said, was also good. If someone were born on it, they also at once bathed him and gave him a name.
For this reason they did so: they feared the one which followed in order — Nine Crocodile.

auh tel no iuhquj in imoztlaioc quiztica, in quitoquilitica. Chicuey suchitl: iuh quitoaia no qualli, intla aca ipan tlacatia: çan niman no iquac caltiaia, quitocamacaia, ipampa iuh quichioaia, y, ieheuatl quimacaçia in oallatoquilia, chicunavi cipactli:

This, so they said, was in no way good; it was perverse, full of vice. It accorded one rags and tatters.
Nothing could become a remedy or cure for the day sign which had followed.

iuh quitoaia niman amo qualli, amo tlacacemelle, motequitica teuhtli, tlaçolli, tmtzomatli, tstapetli, quiteilhujltia, aoc tle ipatica, aoc tle ipaio mochioa, in quitoaltoquilia tonalli,

Only and exclusively immersed in and dedicated to evil was the one then born. He was given only to talking; he went wrapped in discussion. Words were his hair. He was hot-tempered.[3] He twisted words.
Great was his glee if somewhere there was a shout;
there he ran and listened to what was said. If somewhere there was discussion and something was said, he went among the people sowing discord; he went causing disagreements and dissension; he confounded and disunited them.

çaniioca tetlaactica mjxcaujtica, injc amo qualli in aquj ipan tlacatia, çan tlatolli cololotinemj, tiltolli cololhujtinemj, tiltoltzon, tiltolli, itlaqual tiltolnecujl, ozoca ivelmach intla cana neaio, vmpa motlaloa, tecacaquj, intla cana nenonotzalo, itla itolo, tetzalan, tenepantla, motecatinemj, techalanjtinemj, tenetecheuhtinemj, tetlatolçaçaca teiollnocôcoltia:

He disregarded and showed no regret for insinuations, spreading rumors, and continued lying. Falsehood and deceit he went about sowing here and there among the people. He interrupted conversa-atle ipan quitta, amo quitequanmati in ovitlatolli, in tetzauhtlatolli, ihixtlacati, ixtlactli, tenqualactli, tetlaquiquanjtinemj, motlatolcujcujtlavia, quitlatlâtlalilia in tlatolli, tiltotlpiquinj, tlatolcampax, tlatolcacam-

2. We have read chicunavi as chicuace ol, possibly a misreading of Chicuey quiauitl.

3. Tlatelli ihiquac. See Florentine Codex, Book VI, cap. xiii (Sahagún (Guthrey ed.), VI, 41, 10: "Había como gruñido de ahuacate. Este refrán se dice de aquellos que mentalmente en poco son dignos palabra dejaba largo cabaz en cabeza y cabaz pensaba por la boca, y cuando aquí hablar mal de otro largo espadas."

Tezcatlipoca; he only went withdrawing rule and power from others.

And of him who was born on the day sign One Death it was said that he would prosper and be rich, whether a nobleman or only a poor vassal. Many were his gifts. Honor came his way and rested on him when he performed well his penances and humbled himself. But if he did not do well the penances, purely by his own act he forsook and harmed his day sign.

If, at this time, someone were born, then they bathed him and gave him a name. Small children performed the naming ceremony.[1] If a boy had been born, they therefore called forth [as his name] Miquiz, or Yaotl, Cenyaotl, Necoc yaotl, Chicoyaotl, or Yaomauitl. So they placed on him a name of Tezcatlipoca. Of this one it was said: "None may wish him harm: none may wish him to die." If anyone should wish or desire his death, he would simply sicken and suddenly die.

At this time it was the day sign[2] of the slaves, the wretched slaves, whose dwelling places were by the hones for sharpening and the grinding stones. None of the slave-owners could scold them, or abuse them with vile words, or call angrily or indignantly to them when they learned that the morrow would be the day sign of Tezcatlipoca. They then, first, took from them, struck off, and removed from them the wooden collars, the curved ones in which they were held and with which they went about restrained lest they flee. Then they soaped them and bathed them, and made much of and flattered them. They showed them great esteem, because, so they thought, they were his likenesses and representatives:[3] his beloved sons. It was said that they were like the blue cotingas, the trupials, the precious birds of Tezcatlipoca. And those who owned slaves warned and on threat of death[3] ordered their children, youths, and growing sons, commanding them sternly and rigorously, not to chide, deal vainly with, nor strike the slaves.

Auh in aquin ipã tlacatia itonal ce mjquiztli: mjtoaia mocujltonoz, motlamachtiz, intla pilli, anoço çan maceoaltzintli, muchi inemactia, itech açia, itech pachivia, in maviçotl: iquac in tlauellamaceoa, mocnomati: auh intlacamo uellamaceoa, ca çan ynrujian conmocaujlia, qujmjtlacalhuja yn jtonal.

yn jquac, y, tla aca otlacat, njman caltiaia, qujtocamaca, qujxicvenquaqualia in pipiltotonti, intla oquichtli otlacat, ic qujnotza mjquiz, anoço iaotl, ceniaotl, necoc iaotl, chicoiaotl, iaomavitl, ic qujtocamaaia in Tezcatlipoca: injn mjtoaia, aiac vel qujcocoliz, aiac vel qujmjquitlanja, intla aca qujmjquitlanj, qujmjquiztemach... çan iõ in mococolia onmjctuetzi.

Auh in jquac in catca ipan tonalli: in tlatlacoti, in tlatlacotzizinti, in teatexatitlan, temetlatitlan innemjan: aiac vel qujmacoaia, aiac vel qujntenquanviaia, qujntlauelnotzaia, qujnqualancanotzaia, in tlacaoaque, in oqujmatque, ca muztla itonalpan iez in Tezcatlipoca: njman achto qujntomaia, qujtequjlia, qujntlaxilia in qusuhcoacatl, in coliuhqui, injc pieloia, inic ilpitinenca, injc amo choloaque: njman ic quimamoviaia, qujmaltiaia, cenca qujntlaçotlaia, qujnxoxocoioamatia, vel qujnmavizmatia, ipampa iuh qujmatia, ca iziptlaoa, ipatillooa, ytlaçopilhoan, mjtoa iuhqujn iquechollhoan, içaquantotoca, itlaçototoan in Tezcatlipoca: auh in tlacaoaque, vel qujnemachtiaia, qujnmjqujznaoatiaia, qujntlaquauhnoatiaia, qujntepitznaoatiaiaia, in impilhoan, in jntlazcaltilhoan, yn intlaoapaoalhoan: injc amo qujmaoazque qujncuecuenochichioazque, anoço qujnvitequjzque in tlacaoã:

1. Of this ceremony, the Spanish text reads: "Cumplidamente a los xiii ds., y los damas de comer, para q. respiraron el nombre, del que avia nacido y le dieronpuesto a honor, por los ellos." Eduard Seler, in Einige Kapitel aus dem Geschichtswerk des Fray Bernardino de Sahagun (Stuttgart: Strecker und Schröder, 1927), p. 315, translates an explanatory passage from the Academia de la Historia MS: "cuando ya le quitaremonios la capaz-pipilcuemal le apuar amilaqui cuando ya le quitaremonios en tiempo cuando[a] en dicir yaoc ach quintlhuia in aqu yaoal amoqo cuicil ach nimon ya le tomaiiac quakonac cuachaia cuchiaoc cuachiaoquipaqui i yaoal yquac quincapulilia en tiempo ynic mocchi daoal le quimonizac — dauo rufi or dia Kraber. Nachdem sie gekrönnen sind, gab er ihnen die Nahahchaur-Opfergabe und frage (die Angehörigen), wie er heisst, und er nennt ihnen (die Namen) Yaotl oder Uiuitil (Krieger oder Kaliber). Und darauch fangen sie an zu erbrechen und sprechen: "Kommt her, Freunde, das Nahahchaurpfer Yaotl ausen." Dann ersticken die ersten Namen (der Kinder), wie dem ellc er namen rellen.

2. See Florentine Codex, Book VI, fol. 202r.

3. Quinquipiuzcuatlatoc: the term so appears in the Nahuatl column.

34

1 [i.e., One Death.—Analyst]

secret. They were sowers of discord, of gossip,[6] who spoke with tongue in cheek; spreaders of tales. They confused, confounded, and rejected the counsel of elders. They wished not to be deflated. They were not people of honor. These same dedicated themselves to and paid strict attention to constant evil. It was their only labor. All [their] acts and efforts were repeated adultery, thievery, absconding with tribute; making off with many things by trickery, coveting, and deceiving. They were trouble-makers, interpreters of dreams, who brought others into sin, sold goods in secret, sold people in secret, spirited people away, and misled them, calling them by trickery.

None of his own food did he eat. He lived with other people, going from house to house, entering others' dwellings.

As he had been born, so he grew, shameful and deranged. Then at the start of his childhood, as he had grown in years, incorrigible, too lazy to heed the discourse, he answered impudently or blamed someone else. He was one who became wroth, who turned his face aside in rage and tossed his head in anger, who hung his head. Anger was in his face. He was completely full of evil; wickedness was deep in him. He was perverted, rude; of wicked, evil tongue. Everyone dreaded his tongue and his words. None could equal him in conversation nor best him in talking. So it was said of him: "He is perverted; only words are his lot; he is of evil temper." No man's name gave they him. Everywhere he remained aside from people. He was infamous; he remained a burden to people. Hence was he reviled, proscribed, suspected. Everywhere his life and deeds were regarded with dread. For truly, he had been born in a time of vice and sin. That is to say, indeed, only to be reviled was his gift: nothing good, nothing fine.

And the readers of the day signs bettered and remedied the nature of the day sign on which the useless one was born. They arranged that later, upon Ten Rabbit, he would be bathed and given a name. They said that if he should live, perhaps something would be his deserts, though not forthwith. Still by pain and suffering of mind and body, by his penances, he would achieve that which was to be his gift. Later, himself and of his own effort, he would achieve and acquire it, as hath already been said in many places.

6. Tecuecuecueloa in the Real Palacio MS.

icentequjuh in tlatlauelilocaiotl, much ichivil, much inequjuh, tetlâtlanxima, yichtequj, tlâtlaixpachoa, tlatlanzoalchioa, tetlâtlaixtoqujlia, tetlâtlaxiqujtilia, tecovicanaquja, tetlatlanamjctia, tetlatlacolnamjctia, tlatlachtacanamaca, teiichtacanamaca, teiichtacaujca, tenanaoalhujca, tenanaoalnotza, 787[x] much aitlaqual in qujqua, teca nenemj, tecacalpanoa, tepan cacalactinemj:

njman iuh qujça, njman iuh mozcaltia, in aquen tlatta, in atlacacemelle njmâ ipan pilpeoa, njman ipan mozapaoa, in auel monotza, aiel qujcaqujz in tlatolli, çan ie tenananqujlia, tepan qujcuepa, tlatlauelchioanj, mjixlaça, moquaquatlaça, iixcuelloa, mjixcuelloa, vel qujmaxilti, iiolaçic, tlauelilloc, vel iolloxujcujtla, âtentlacatl, tentlauelilloc, muchi tlacatl qujtenjmacaçi, qujtlatolimacaçi, aiac qujtenaci, aiac vel qujtempanavia, iee injc mjtoa: atlacacemelle, çan tlatolli ilhujl, tlatolli itlaqual, aiac itlacatocaia, noviian tetenco caca, tepan onoc, tepan cenmantoc, injc aujlqujzquj, tlaitolli, tlaztacolli, noviian mauhcaitto in jnemjliz in jtlachioal, ca nel iuhcan tlacat, in tlaçoltitlan, teuhtitlan, qujtoznequj: ca çan motqujtica aujlqujzaiotl, in jnemac, atle qualli, atle iectli:

auh in nen ic qujqualtiaia, qujqualtiliaia tonalpouhque, in iuhquj itonal ipan otlacat, qujn ipan quitlatlaliliaia, in matlactetl tochtli: injc ipan maltiz, qujtocamacazque, qujtoaia: intla nemjz aço ça itla imâcoaltiz, iece camo cascanviz, oc totoneoaz, chichichinacaz in jiello, in jnacaio, itla macoaliztica qujcnopilhujz, in jnemac mochioaz, qujn inoma, qujn izcoian qujnjxnextiliz, qujn qujnomaviz, qujn qujmonomaviliz: in iuh ie mjieccan omoteneuh. [851 553]

[p.52 is blank]

X 787 Fourteenth Chapter, which telleth of the good day signs which correspond to the four houses in this sign; and it was said that the day signs of those then born were good.

And the one day sign, the one day count Ten Rabbit, so it was said, was a very good time. Whoever was then born, whether man or woman, was of great deserts, great gifts, and riches. For just so was it said of the tenth position, when [the day sign] became the tenth. On the tenth day sign, it was always a favorable time, of gifts and recompense, as in its separate accounts[1] hath already been told. But not then, at that time, did they bathe him, on the day sign on which he had been born. They always directed their attention there to the closing day sign, later, when they bathed him and gave him a name, on [Thirteen][2] Monkey; because thereby they greatly strengthened the day sign; they improved his day sign. For, so it was said, a very good time was the closing day sign, the ending and concluding day sign, as will be told in its account.

[85] 553

And the following Eleven Water, and Twelve Dog, and the concluding Thirteen Monkey, as many as these were favorable. Ten Rabbit drew, dragged, amplified, and helped all of them, so that all four were good. It was said that anyone who was born upon these various day signs became a highly favored person; he succeeded and endured on earth.

That is to say, he was not deflated; not one of the least nor the last; nor a man without recognition. He was well respected and recognized; he was famed and honored; hence he was one who prospered, enjoyed glory, was compassionate, and served others. As a chieftain, he was strong, daring in battle, esteemed, intrepid, able, sharp-witted, quick-acting[3] prudent, sage, learned, and discreet; an able talker, and attentive. It seemed as if he set forth his dis-

1. Mantenlle. The Nahuatl text could also read tlamatenlle.
2. Read matlactli omei.
3. Cf. yollomatinilli in "Memoriales con escolios," pp. 204, 211.

Injc matlactli on navi capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in qualli, tonalli: in jntech ca in nauhtetl calli: in ipan in machiotl, ioan qujl qualli intonal casca, in aqujque vncan tlacati.

Auh in jpan in cemjlhujtonalli cemjlhujtlapoalli, in matlactli tochtli: iuh mjtoa, cenca qualcan in aqujn vncan tlacatia, in oqujchtli, in çioatl, cenca mâceoale, ilhujle, mocujltonoanj: ipampa no iuh mjtoa, in matlactioaia, in vncâ tlamatlacti, in jpan matlactli tonalli, muchipa qualcan, vncan ca ilhujlli, mâceoalli, in iuh ca itlatlatollo, in ie mjeccan omoteneuh: auh aiamo njman caltiaia, in jpan in tonalli otlacat, qujn cen ompa contlachialtiaia in tonaltzonco, ipan caltiaia, qujtocamacaia: in jpan matlactlonnauj oçomatli ipampa injc cenca qujtonalchicaoaia, qujuecapanoaia itonal, ca iuh mjtoa: cenca qualcan in tonaltzonco, in jca tlantica tonalli, in qujtlamjtica tonalli, in iuh ipan moteneoaz itlatollo.

Auh in qujtoqujlia matlactloce atl, ioan matlactlomome itzcujntli, ioan in tlaçtonqujxtia, matlactli vmej oçomatli, izqujtetl qualli, muchi qujcentilinja, qujcenvilana, qujncenteteoana, qujncentlatalhuja in matlactli tochtli, ic nauhteixtin qualtin. Mitoa: in aqujn vncan ipan tlacatia in jzqujtetl in tonalli: cenca tlacnopilhujanj muchioaia, oalqujçaia, oalnemja in tlalticpac, qujtoznequj: amo patzactzintli, amo çan tetzacuja, amo tlatzinpiloa, amo çan can nenemj, vel ixmacho teixpan icac, moteneiotia momaujzçotia, injc mocujltonoanj, injc maujztli, injc tetlaçocolianj, injc teca muchioanj: auh injc tiacauh injc chicaoac, injc iaotlaueliloc, injc amo tetlaçaltoca, amo ixmauhquj, ioan injc moncalianj, ixe, iollo, iollotecujcujl, iolizmatquj, ioliztlamatquj, tlanemjlianj, toltecatl, mjmatinj: ioan vellatoa, vellacaçtuj, iuhqujn mjtic qujte

441 his statue apeat in his tribal district [temple]. One 765 day it was [there]; one day it remained seated. And 778 then, when it was midnight, they burned it there in [the place] which they called the god's courtyard, at the eagle vessel, [or] on the skull rack.

But if the merchant had only died on the ground[3] — that is to say, if he had not died in battle, if perchance he had only taken sick, in the very same way they prepared his statue, but only in his home did it burn — not at midnight: while yet there shone a little sun, when he already was turning on his left side,[4] when the sun hung low, they burned it.

726 Likewise it was said that at the time of the day sign One Serpent, if it was established precisely at that time, when war was declared and proclaimed among the people, when, it was said, war was announced, at that very time the war began. At that time all the eagle and ocelot warriors set out to battle; all followed, crowded, and filled the road. They arose, they set out, departed, marched, and hastened.

X787 And if one were born upon the day sign One [Serpent],[5] they said, the readers of the day signs corrected it and bestowed gifts upon him. He would become a receiver of favors, worthy of good deserts and merit; he would prosper and have sustenance. But if he did not do his [illegible]nces well, according to his day sign, his gifts [illegible]avors would not come upon him. He himself would harm and destroy it. It was said that by his own act he neglected it and destroyed it by vice, etc.

[851 He who was then born they did not yet bathe;
●553 they bathed him later, or Three Deer, and then gave him a name, for the reason already many times told: the day sign of the third place, when they waited for the day, the readers of day signs considered favorable. So they took this following one for him; this time they arranged and postponed it in order to give him a very strong day sign.

And Two Death, which followed, so they said, was evil; at this time there was nothing of merit. But Three Deer, so they said, was a good day sign; this is already related. The third place was always a good time; it was a time of attainment of merit, as the readers of day signs told one. And Four

3. Ordinarily, ibid., "If it is it had quarrelsome wounds, he all unfortunately."
4. Molina, op. cit. (Spanish Nahuatl), Lado derecho.
5. The sun rising symbol. It is of course in the Red Sunrise MS.

ioh intla çã othlauic ostomecatl, quijtoznequi: iztlacamo oiacouic, in aço çan ococolincuic, çan ic ao ivi in quichichiouia icujllo, iece çan ichan in tlalqia, amo iohuepantla, oc achi tonatiuh, iquac in ic omocacaloa, qomopiloa tonatiuh quijhtoua.

No iceu mjtoa: in jquac ypan in ce cuatl tonalli, intla ipanti, ipan motlalia, in jquac oiautlatoloc, oeiacotlalhujloc, in qmjto, in oococaquijtiloc iaoiotl, vel iqua ipan vapeuaia in iaoc: vaçan iacoquijtoaia, ipan otlatocoia, ipan vnacotemalaia, vnaocteua, oemaococoj, oomolinja, oua, nhueuj, icxiouaua, in jaqujch quauhtlocelotl:

ioh in aquja ipan otlacat ce ocelotl tonalli, quitoaia, quijhtoaia, quijnemactiaia in tonalpouhque, tlacnopilhujanj, ilhujle, mococole muchiouz, mococjltecoua, vnca quijquanj iez: ioh intlaca ximoillamacoua, in iohqui itoua in, amo ipan muchiua in jnemac, in jcaopil: çan ichoatl quijnitlacalhuja, quijnepopollinja, mjtoa: iaoviian conmocaujlia, quijmotlçolmjctilia. Er.

yn aquja ipã otlacat in, xiuuo calitoia, quja ipã calitoia in Ey mapatl: iquac quijnecauaca, ipampa ic mjtoccan omjto: in citiouian tonalli, in jquac tlacoilhujtilia, quijqualitoia in tonalpouhque: ichoatl ic cocthuotoquijtoia, vnapa quijtocquijtoia, vnapa cocthachictoia, injc cenca quijnonelchicoouia.

Auh in quijnequjlia, vnic mjquijtli, ioh quijoa: amo qualli, atle vncã ca nakoualli. Auh in cy mapatl: ioh quijoa qualli tonalli, ic omjto: in citiouia ruuchipa quaxcan, vncan ca tlacnopilhujltzli in ioh quijcilhujoia tonalpouhque. Auh in nauj tochtli, in tlamahcoiotia tonalli, in nauhcuiopa tlaviza, tlacoa-

And one then born they hence regarded as fortunate and said that he would be rich. Our lord would reward him; through his grace he would buy slaves and ceremonially bathe them for sacrifice. Or many times he would have others sing and dance. And[4] when they gave him a name, they arranged it for Four Reed. Then they gave food to the young boys and had them perform the naming ceremony.[5] This was because that time was the time of the election rites, of the election of the rulers of the cities.

And also it was said that on One Dog the owners and breeders of dogs rubbed ochre on all the dogs' heads.[6]

And [the day signs] which followed it were Two Monkey, and Three Grass, Four Reed, Five Ocelot, Six Eagle, Seven Vulture, Eight Motion, Nine Flint Knife,[7] Ten Rain, Eleven Flower, Twelve Crocodile, Thirteen Wind. These were all the group of day signs.

All were as in their account, as mentioned. Each day went related as to the manner of gifts of those then born. This is already explained; in many places hath it been made quite apparent. And when [these had] ended, thereupon set in — auh in aquin ipan tlacatia, injc qujtonalittaia, qujtoaia: mocujtonoz, ipal icz, qujtlamanjçalhujz in totecujo: aço tecuaz, tealtiz, aço quezaquipa cujcujcaz teotiz: uh inic qujtocamacaia, quja no ipan qujmattiuja in naoscatl, iquac qujtlatlaqualiaia, qujxicwenquaqualiaia in pipiltotonti: ipampa in vncah motlatocapaca, in netlatocapoicaian tlatoque, altepeme.

No ioan mjtoa: in jpan in ce itzcujntli, in jzquijchtin chichime, qujnquatlaviaia in itzcujneque, in jtzcujnnemjtique.

Auh in qujtoquijlia vme oçomatli, ioan ey malinalli, navi acatl, mucujlli oçelotl, chiquacen quauhtli, chicome coxcaquauhtli, chicuei olin, chicunauj tecpac, matlactli qujauitl, matlactlooc xuchitl, matlactlomome cipactli, matlactli vmei hecatl, in jaquijtztl in cencalpā tonalli, ça ie much iuhquj in jtoloca omoteneuh, injc cecemjlhujpā tlapoaltitiuh, in quenamj innenemac ipan tlacati, ie ōmomelauh mjeccan vel omonenezti: auh in jquac onquiz in njman ic oalmoquetza.

---

4. Ms. and a name.

5. See Chapter 9, n. 1.

6. Corresponding Spanish text: "Tambien tenian una ceremonia: que en este signo, los que criaban los perrillos, que hacian dueso: los almagraban las cabezas."

7. Tecpatl, serpent's tooth.

851 Thirty-fifth Chapter. Here is told what was done
553 when they bathed their children, and how food was eaten when they gave them their names; and the discourse which the old people gave when they addressed the child and the mother.

Inic ompoalli on caxtolli cuptinlo: vncan mjtoa yn tlein muchioaia, yn iquac quimaltiaia impilhoan, yoan inic tlaqualoia yn iquac qujntocamacaia: yoan in tlatolli in qujtoaia vevetque, in quilhuiaia, pilhuatli: yoan in tenã.

553 And when he was bathed, quite early in the morning, in the morning light, when the sun appeared, they had the small children perform the naming ceremony. They went out shouting and panting on the roads; to the entrances they ran. Thus they went calling out what he had been given as a name, as hath already been mentioned, in a certain place. They took the naming ceremony gift, parched maize toasted with beans. They provided it with beans, many beans, offered in a vessel:

Auh in iquac maltia, çan iooztzinco, tlavizcalpã, iquac yn oalmomã tonatiuh, quixicvenquaqualia im pipilhotonti tzatzatzitiui, yhicaoaca, yn vtlicapa, quiaoecpa, motlatlaloa, ic quinotztiui, in tlein ẽtocaiotiloc piltontli, in juh ic omoteneuh, cecẽ quinanamoia, in xicventli, izquitl in quicequi, hexio, quẽeiotia, moca ietl, xicaltica quimana.

851 And it is said that so was the custom if someone were born on a day sign beginning in the first position, [illegible] hath been said in many places). If it were a good time, then at once they quickly bathed him. Or later, they set it aside and skipped a day, so that they could make good the feasting and drinking for the child.[1]

Yoã mjtoa iuh tlamanca intla aca ipã oclacat ynic cemilhuitl vmpeoa tonalli (ca mjeccã omãio). yntia qualcan njmã iciuhca conaltitiveztzi, auh quin nonqua, contlalilia oc cocchololtia, ynic quitlatlaqualia, pillaqualo, pillacano:

But if they could not do so then, they bathed him later, on the third day sign. As here it appeareth in [the series of] One Eagle, the one perhaps then born they would bathe later, on Three Movement.

auh intlaca ie moveliti, quin ipã caltia yn Ey tonalli, yn juh nican neci-ipã ce quauhtli, yn aquin tla ipã oclacat, quin ipã caltizque in Ey olin,

Those whose fathers and mothers were poor, the indigent, who were in misery, and had nothing to use, with which to gather together and assemble people, only with affliction, sickness, and misery bathed their child. For they only aggravated and worsened it when they did not delay, defer, retard, procrastinate, or postpone [the day of bathing].

icheõ in çã tlacoocavia ytaboan ynãoã in çan icnotlaca, in ça quitzacuis icnoiotl, atlezzin in polivifi, in tecentlaliloni, in tenechicoloaj, ic çan cococatzin, cococaiotica, icnotlacaiotica conaltia yn jnoneuh, ipãpa in çan quitoztivezzj, quitoztiquiça, in aocmo cõvecatlaça, cõtlecatilia, cõnechcatilia, cõnechcatlaça, cõchololtia,

But if the fathers were rich and prosperous, if there was wherewith to eat, they selected for one a later date, on the seventh day sign; at that time they bathed the child and placed him in the cradle. This was because, as hath been said, they always considered the seventh day sign good. At that time they held an important banquet. There was drink and auh intla motlacamati, mocuitonos teuhcõ, in vncã quiquanj, quin ce vmpa quimattivi yn ipã chicome tonalli, yquac caltia, yoan quicoçolaquja im piltontli, ypampa yn juh omjto muchipa quiqualizzaia yn 7. tonalli, yquac quivejchios in tecomocaliztli, atlioa, tlaqualo, novjampa, xonochitlano, oalhuj in nochicauhque, nequequeçalo, nepopotzoio, auh in

1. Cf. Sahagún (Gardner ed.), I, 15, 11, and II, 38, 7-9; also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit. Book II, "The Ceremonies," pp. 152-158.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

562 alliance. Moreover, marriages were carefully arranged be-[584] tween families, so that for a husband grossly to neglect his wife's rights was a breach, if not of etiquette, certainly of [793] social contract. The priesthood may have offered a modest field of influence and attainment to women. However, history records no mention of any advantage deriving from temple service.

554 Men had the chief opportunities, and these lay in various 555 directions. The early chroniclers, conditioned by their mediæval Spanish background, spoke of hereditary classes. In all probability, judging from Indian communities as a whole, there was rank but not class in the hereditary sense. As in our own society, a man could attain high rank through his own efforts, and through his eminence his children would consequently profit in their own social adjustment. Yet they could not reach their father's position unless they earned it through
[556] equivalent tribal service. Wealth did exist, and property in the form of rights to use land, tools and other possessions
[642 421] created a social and economic stratification. In theory and practice Aztec society was democratic, and the communal ownership of productive property was its economic base.[4]

555 A man attained rank through the measure of his tribal service. The wise farmer, the wily hunter, the brave warrior or the dexterous artisan gained admiration from his fellows because of superior skill. If his wisdom and judgment were conspicuous he might be elected as the clan representative to the tribal council, or even as chief. Similarly an individual who dedicated himself to learning the magic rituals to placate the gods, could become a medicine man or priest. However, in the populous and advanced city-states activities tended to become specialized, and greater opportunity led to a more

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 finely graded scale of social eminence. (See Plates 33–36.)

425 511 A married man received a plot of land directly from the clan or else took over his father's fields if the latter were too old to work. Diligent husbandry, eked out by making stone tools, pottery or practicing some such craft for barter, could produce a good living. Unmarried men helped their fathers and were able to add to their prestige by taking part in the numerous military campaigns.

[721] 555 Since the capture of victims for sacrifice was the chief glory of war, an able soldier who could subdue his enemies and drag them to the rear received much honor. According to the number of captives taken, a warrior had the right to wear an increasingly elaborate costume. Consistently success-[575] ful warriors could enter an order, like the Knights of the Eagle or the Ocelot (often referred to as Tiger), which performed special dances and rituals. Sometimes a warrior of unusual prowess received additional grants of land or more often obtained an increased portion of the clan's share of tribute. Having reached an established position by this means, he had a more important voice in clan councils and might attain a seat in the council itself. A special honorific, tecuhtli [554] (grandfather), which corresponds to chief among the North American Indians, distinguished these men. The title signified high social, but not official, rank, and from these men who had distinguished themselves by probity, bravery and religious observance, high elective and appointive posts were filled.[8]

624 In this stratum there were many positions of honor and influence, which, like petty political offices in small North American towns, were held in connection with some other means of livelihood. There were officials who kept order in the markets and tribunals which settled disputes in clan

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

346 Each temple usually had a chamber and an antechamber, and in some cases two or even three shrines rested on the same platform. This platform or substructure gave height and mass to the temple. The usual practice was to lay up rough stone, set in adobe or lime, into a truncated pyramid, the sides of which were broken up by three narrow setbacks and by a steep ramp leading to the top. The surface was of veneered cut-stone slabs, and additional blocks were laid along the ramp to make the stair. Wide balustrades bordered the staircase and often ended in gigantic serpent heads. Aztec construction was the simplest type of engineering, but imposing architectural effects were gained by the consummate artistic sense and superb craftsmanship of the builders.[19] (See Plates 50–51.)

291 554 The adequate, even imposing, housing of the Aztecs and their gods by no means eclipsed their dress. Clothing, besides protecting man from the weather, has an important social function. It is a guide to the sex, age, group, occupation, rank and even character of its wearer. The simple and standardized clothing of our modern society performs the same service, and with a moment's observation one can tell much about a stranger from his clothes. The Aztecs, like many peoples of the world, strove by their dress to accentuate the social differences between people, and pomp and panoply dominated their costume. Or the barbaric splendor of high civilian dress superimposed the fantastic garb of the priests and priestesses in their impersonation of the complex and ornately represented divinities in their pantheon.[20]

[302] The macehual, or ordinary tribesman, left his head uncovered, his hair long, and customarily wore a maxtli, or loincloth, a mantle knotted over one shoulder, and sandals of

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

leather or woven maguey fiber in cold weather. Women 291 wrapped about their loins a finely woven cloth, which they 554 sustained with a narrow belt. A sleeveless slipover, or huipil, completed their costume. They plaited their hair into braids, [302] sometimes interlacing them with ribbons, and these they wrapped around their heads. This woman's costume may still be seen in many parts of Indian Mexico. (See Plates 33–36.)

The poor made their garments of maguey fiber or coarse cotton. The rich wore the same clothing fashioned from finer textures and decorated with elaborate embroidery. The many names given to the different kinds of mantles show their interest and importance to the wearers. Wool was almost never made into cloth, since dog hair was all they had, but feather cloaks were highly esteemed. Chiefs wore a fillet of leather [292] from which hung two tassels, and administrative chiefs had a sort of diadem of gold or jade and turquoise as a badge of office.

The warriors frankly gloried in their costumes. Rich man- 292 tles and ornate feather headdresses were not enough for some, who carried on their shoulders a harness of wicker supporting an elaborate structure in feather mosaic. Others wore costumes modeled on the appearance of an ocelot or an eagle. On specified occasions the priests assumed the dress of the gods and goddesses, whose costumes were sumptuous and ornate and defined by exacting ritualistic marks of identification. (See Plate 61.)

Jewelry consisted of ornaments of copper, gold and silver, 301 shell, various-colored stones, like jade, turquoise, emeralds, 304 opals or moonstone, and mosaics laid on a backing of clay, wood or reed. Large plugs were inserted in the ear lobes of

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

776 much of a blond god who, after taking leave of his people, 173 promised to return from the east by sea. Yet the Quetzalcoatl of the Valley of Mexico manuscripts was never blond but usually black in beard and face paint, when he was not shown as the masked Wind God, Ehecatl.

554 As if the confusion between a man and a god of many 174 guises were not baffling enough for the historian, we find 177 to our dismay that the title Quetzalcoatl not only was given to the rulers of the Teotihuacan Toltecs but also was borne at Tenochtitlan by the chief priests who exemplified the learning of the time. Distinguished authority has supported the hypothesis that a Mexican named Quetzalcoatl went to Yucatan where he attained high office and absorbed the civilization of the Maya. Later he returned to Mexico and taught a version of the calendar, as well as many other useful arts, to the peoples of the plateau. Others, more romantic, see in Quetzalcoatl an Irishman, Norseman or even Atlantean, who popped into Mexico and spread sweetness and light. I, personally, believe that the introduction of superior culture elements and the creation of local arts as well might not only lead to the invention of a God of Civilization but also endow individual innovators with the name of that god. The conflicting data suggest to me that the name and concept did not originate in any one person but resulted, rather, from the experience of many peoples over a long period of time in explaining and honoring the introduction of those benefits which ensured their corporal and spiritual well-being.

776 The great gods of the sky played an important part in the duality of the Aztec world in which an eternal war was fought symbolically between light and darkness, heat and cold, north and south, rising and setting sun. Even the stars

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

no kind of dignity, was, among the Mexicans, transmissible by *in-*701 heritance. Merit alone, on the battlefield, could promote to the rank 555 of war-chief, by inducing and influencing the elections held for that purpose.[83] The civil-chief ("Tecuhtli," from "Tecul," *grandfa-*565 ther) secured his office through rigorous religious observances and 643 age.[84] There was no nobility of any kind at Mexico, the chief being chief only as long as he was by his constituents deemed worthy of that position.[85]

Above the common warrior ("yaoquizqui") there were two 701 classes of superiors: the distinguished braves, and the war-chiefs proper.

Of the distinguished and meritorious braves, which had not, however, attained the chieftainship, we know three different kinds: the "fierce cutters," or "beasts of prey" ("Tequihua"), the "strong eagles," or "old eagles" ("Cuachic," or "Cuachimec"), and the "wandering arrows" ("Otomitl").[86] These titles were 701 merely honorific, and could be obtained exclusively through the 554 capture, in actual combat, of one or more prisoners. In token of these dignities the hair of the head was cropped closely over the ear; they wore, chiefly, but not exclusively, the masks or helmets

[83] Anonymous Conqueror (p. 371) "They used to reward highly those who distin-"guished themselves in war by any valorous action, for even if he was the vilest slave, "they made him captain and lord, and gave to him slaves, and esteemed him so much, "that wherever he went they attended to him and paid him such regards as if he had "been the chief himself."

[84] Mendieta (Lib. II, caps. XXXVIII and XXXIX). Ternaux-Compans ("Recueil de "Pièces, etc.," "Des cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient "un tecle." Zurita ("Rapport, etc.:" p. 47). "The chiefs who, as we have said, were "called Tec Tecutzcin, or Teutley, held their office only during life-time." (p. 49.) "If "one of them died, the prince gave the office to one who had proven himself worthy of "it, for the sons of the deceased did not inherit of his dignity, unless they had been "invested with it."

[85] See, further on, the case of the last Monterzuma.

[86] These definitions we give for what they may be worth, without in the least insisting upon their absolute correctness. "Tequihua" may derive from "nitla-tequi," to cut, or from "tequani," wild beast. "Cuachic," from "quauhtli," eagle, and "chicactic," an old man, or a strong object, or, also (though this is hardly probable), "chimalli," shield. "Otomitl" probably derives from "N. otoca," to travel, and "mitl," arrow. But this was also the name given to the "Otomies," a well-known savage tribe, expert hunters, found scattered over Mexico, among or around the sedentary Indians. It looks strange for the Mexicans to give to one of their meritorious braves the title of a wandering horde, far below the Mexicans in culture. But the Otomies were good hunters, skilled in the use of the bow, and it is therefore likely that they were named thus by the Mexicans themselves, and that their name is not, as Mr. Brasseur de Bourbourg intimates, derived from a supposed god, "Odon," or "Oton" ("Popol Vuh," Introd., pp. 76 and 110). The Otomi word for God was "Oqhá," their word for man, "na nyéké" ("Grammatica ragionata della Lingua Otomi," of Count Piccolomini, Rome, 1841, after Neve y Molina).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 554 imitating wild animals' heads, and sometimes even the skins of those animals.[87] Their post was in the van of the army, as scouts and skirmishers, but they also acted as leaders of smaller bodies, like four to twenty men, and even larger subdivisions, at the option of their superiors.[88]

701 555 Neither of the above three grades could be obtained through appointment or election; every warrior became entitled, as soon as he had accomplished certain feats in war, to one or the other thereof.[89]

[87] Tezozomoc (Cap. XCVI, p. 171). After the successful raid of the Mexicans against Tuctepec (under the last Montezuma) it was found that 200 of the "tequihua" had made prisoners, and that an equal number were made "tequihua." "Anonymous Conqueror" (p. 373.) "To him who thus distinguished himself they made a mark, by a "peculiar cut of the hair, that he might be known for his deeds, and that everybody "might see it, since they did not accustom to wear the head covered. Every time that "he accomplished another notable action they put another similar mark on him . . ." See also Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. V, p. 543). Durán (Cap. XIX, p. 169) is very positive, too. Clavigero (Lib. XII. cap. XXIII). "The commanders . . . . the head "was inserted in a wooden head of a tiger or of a snake, its mouth wide open, and "with large teeth, to appear more frightful."

[88] Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 289). " . . . . Aviendo puesto en delantera todos "los soldados viejos y señores y capitanes y todos aquellos que ellos llamaban Cua-"chic, que eran una órden de caballeria que no auia de voluer piè atras ó morir . . " . ." Tezozomoc says of the "Otomies, Cuachi, and Tequihuaques . . . . being "always leaders" ("siendo siempre delanteros." Cap. XXXVIII, p. 60, also, cap. LVII, p. 97). The same author (Cap. XXXVIII, p. 61, and cap. LI, p. 83) affirms that they had to care for the freshmen or young braves (Id., Cap. LXXI, p. 121). The same (Cap. LI, p. 83) says: " . . . . and you will, as it is customary, place to every five youths "a Cuachic, to five others an Otomi, then again an Achcauhtli, and a Tequihua; all "conquerors." This was done immediately before the opening of the engagement. The "Otomitl" is also called by Tezozomoc a "general" occasionally, but this merely shows that, at the option of the war-chiefs, one or the other of the above warriors of merit might be placed at the head of a larger body of men, though he was always considered as of a lower rank. Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. VI, p. 264). "El hombre ò varon "fuerte llamado Coachic, tiene estas propiedades; es el amparo y muralla de los suyos "etc., etc." Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XCIX, p. 565) calls the "Quachicque" bullies ("matasiete").

[89] By this we wish to say that neither personal favor nor other prominent qualities could procure the titles which we now regard, to any one who had not distinguished himself in war. The titles were conferred immediately after the engagement, or after the return to Mexico. Who conferred them, and what ceremonies, aside from the hair-
[685] cutting mentioned, accompanied the act, we are unable to say. The Mexicans were extremely careful to allow each man the prisoner he had taken, and the "penalty for "abstracting a captive to his rightful conqueror was death." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, p. 132). "El que llevaba algun prisionero, si otro se lo hurtaba de dia ò de "noche, ò tomaba por fuerza, por el mismo caso moria como cosario ladron que se "adjudicaba y queria para si el precio y la honra del otro." The reason for this vigorous chastisement was, not only because the original captor lost thereby his object of sacrifice to the gods, but really more because the thief stole away his rank and title.

Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXVI, p. 434). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXI). Both mention three "military orders," "orders of chivalry." The latter calls them "achcautin," "quauhtin," and "ococelo," translating these terms by "princes," "eagles," and "tigers," respectively. Acosta is not so far from the truth when he asserts that each of

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 formation regarding the title of the principal war-chief of Tlatilulco, the names given occasionally being personal.[102]

701 The distinctive mark of these chieftains consisted in having the 554 hair tied behind or above the occiput with a strap of red leather;

"by few only." "Cuauhnoctli," therefore, being "Chachi," or "Quachictin," whereas "Tiillancalqui" is but a civil or religious chief, as it is furthermore shown by his being sent as a delegate to Cortés, to the coast (Tezozomoc, Cap. CVII, p. 191). I have ventured to substitute the former as one of the four war-chiefs, each commanding the warriors of one of the four great quarters of Mexico. It may be objected that, aside from Tezozomoc, I have not adduced any other direct proof of the actual existence of these four chieftains. I have already alluded to the probable reason why they are not mentioned as such by the sources of Mexican aboriginal history. Their true position, the nature of their office was simply overlooked. But we know that the tribe of Mexico had divided into four quarters; we know, further, that not only in Mexico, but all over Central America, this same division existed, for civil as well as for military purposes. Each of these four great sections must have had, therefore, its civil and its military [555] head, and it is but natural to admit, that those heads were the most distinguished warriors of the tribe, since merit, and not descendancy or wealth, entitled alone to promotion in rank and office. Therefore the military chiefs of the four quarters must have been the four "chachi" of Mexico. On the other hand, those four dignities were each elective, and not filled by appointment. But, for an election, there must be electors, and a constituency. We know that the "captains were elected (by the kin which they should "command)", and it is but logical to admit that the four greatest military chiefs of the tribe were elected to command its four greatest subdivisions. Therefore, again, the "chachi" of Tezozomoc must have been the military chiefs of the four quarters of Mexico. Besides, we may ask: Why four chiefs, and not any other number? if not that these four principal chieftains corresponded to, and actually represented, a like number of greatest fractions of the whole tribe.

If the older authors observe a certain uniformity in their enumeration of these four chiefs, always beginning with the "Tlacochcalcatl," we must not infer from it that one or the other of the four was inferior or superior to the others. They were all alike in rank, although Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXI) places the "Tlacochcalcatl" above the others. The very confusion among some of the statements shows that no reliance can be placed upon their assertions in that respect. (Compare, for inst.: Torquemada, Lib. II, cap. LXII, p. 185, with cap. LXV, p. 189, and lib. IV, cap. 13, p. 379.) It results from all these statements, but especially from the positive and consistent assertions of Tezozomoc, that while the four were equal in rank, it still sometimes happened that one or the other, from age or experience, took the superior command according to emergency. Their influence was even decisive, sometimes, with the head war-chief of Mexico himself. See the part played by "Tlacochcalcatl" in the attack upon Tlatilulco (Tezozomoc, Cap. XLV, p. 73), and the resolute action of "Tlacateccatl" in the battle against the Tarasca of Michhuacan, which occurred in 1477, when he compelled Axayaca to retreat before the victorious enemy (Tezozomoc, Cap. LII, p. 84). Also, the assertion of Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXV), "without whose consent he could do nothing."

[102] "Itzquauhtin" is mentioned by Torquemada (Vol. IV). This would be "eagle [554] of obsidian," or "flint-eagle." We must always distinguish personal names from titles. In most cases only the latter were given, and the presumption therefore arises that the title took the place of the name. Says my friend Sr. J. M. Melgar y Serrano, of Vera Cruz: "Creo deber aconsejar a V no tome como nombres de las personas muchas "de las palabras con que estaban designadas, pues eran el que se los daban el titulo "del cargo que tenian." (Letter under date of 26 January, 1873.)

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

a distinction reserved exclusively for them and for the head war-chiefs of the Mexican tribe.[103] 701 554

Highest in military command, as head war-chief of the Mexican tribe, was the "chief of men" ("Tlaca-tecuhtli"),[104] represented to us as the king or emperor[105] of Mexico. But he was neither a monarch nor an autocrat, nor a despot. Elected out of a certain kin or descendancy[106] for life, but upon the condition of good behaviour, he could be deposed and degraded, should he incur the 643 701

[103] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI, p. 57). Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. V, p. 543). Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXVI, p. 434). "Los mas preeminentes destos eran, los que tenian "atada la corona del cabello con una cinta colorada, y un plumaje rico, del qual col-"gauan unos ramales hazia las espaldas con unas borlas del mismo al cabo; estas "borlas eran tantas en numero, quantas hazañas auia hecho. Desta orden de Caualle-"ros era el mismo Rey tambien, y asi se hallaba pintado, con esto genero de plumajes, "y en Chapultepec, donde estan Moteçuma y su hijo esculpidos en unas peñas que son "de ver, ..." Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXI) condenses the statement of Acosta only. Humboldt ("Vues des Cordillères, etc.," Vol. I): "il (Montezuma) a les cheveux "réunis au sommet de la tête, et liés avec un ruban rouge, distinction militaire des prin-"ces et des capitaines les plus vaillants." The figure is from the "Codex anonymous," of the Vatican.

[104] This title is given by Tezozomoc, and also by Ramirez de Fuenleal, in Ternaux-Compans ("Recueil de pièces," p. 247): "Mutizuma portait le nom de 'tacatecli,' "'tetuan,' 'jutlacal.'" It is easy to discern "tlacatecuhtli," and "tlatoani,"—of the latter title we shall hereafter speak. Also: "Il existe parmi eux une espèce de chef à "qui ils donnent le nom de tacatecle on tlatuan."

[105] The Mexican language has no word for emperor (Molina I, p. 51). But Tezozomoc renders the expression "cemanahuac tlatoani" by "emperor of the world." It signifies, however, simply "speaker for what dwells near the water."

[106] The question of succession in office among the Mexicans is a very difficult one. Still, it certainly never descended from father to son, but was always transmitted by election, either to a brother or to a nephew of the former incumbent. The manner of electing the "Tlaca-tecuhtli" of Mexico is very fully described by Sahagun: "When "the king or lord died, all the senators, called Tecutlatoques, and the old men of the "tribe, called Achcacauhti, and also the captains and old warriors, called Yautequioa-"ques, and other prominent captains in warlike matters, and also the satraps (priests), "called Tlenamacaque and Papaoaqui,—all these assembled in the royal houses. "There they deliberated and determined upon who had to be lord, and chose one of "the most noble of the descendancy (lineage) of the past lords, who would be a val-"iant man, experienced in warlike matters, daring and brave, who should not drink "wine, should be prudent and wise, raised in the Calmecac, a good speaker, of good "understanding, esteemed and loving. When they agreed upon one, they at once nom-"inated him as lord, but this election was not made by ballot or votes, but, all confer-"ring together, they at last agreed upon the man." Durán (Cap. XI, p. 103), speaking of the four war-chiefs: "y muerto el rey, de aquellos auia de ser electo Rey y no de otros, "y tampoco podian ser puestos en este cargo y ditados sino eran hijos ù hermanos de "reyes; . . . . nunca heredaron los hijos, por via de herencia, los ditados ni los "señorios, sino por election." "Y asi nunca salia de aquella generacion aquel ditado "y señorio, eligiéndolos poco a poco." Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXIV, p. 431): "Lo pri-"mero en que parece auer sido muy politico el govierno de Mexicanos, es en el orden "que tenian, y guardauan inviolablemente de eligir Rey." Whether we are authorized to go any further than to say that the Tlacatecuhtli had to belong to a certain kin, is very doubtful.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 golden tubes enclosing his ankles.[120]— they were all of a more 643 elaborate workmanship, and only he and the "Cihua-cohuatl" were 293 entitled to wear them thus.[121]

But the distinctive mark of either of them on the field of battle
554 was a long tress or braid of featherwork (the "Quachiatli") hanging down from the occiput to the waist or girdle.[122] Besides, they carried a small drum, on which they gave signals to their men.[123]

000 A very fair representation of this costume, especially of the characteristic headdress, is found at Palenqué, in the beautiful figures on the bas-reliefs of the "altar," and "tablet of the cross." These tablets and figures show, in dress, such a striking analogy with what we know of the military accoutrements of the Mexicans, that it is a strong approach to identity.[124]

[120] "Cozcatl," or "cozcapetlatl," or "cozehuatl." "Cozcatl" is a jewel, or a chain, or a collar, hung with precious stones.

[121] The "king" and the "cihuacohuatl" both wore the same dress and ornaments. Durán (Cap. XXVI, p. 215): "Ordenose que solo el rey y su coadjutor Tlacaclel pudiesen "traer çapatos en la casa Real" (p. 216). "Iten, que solo el rey, y los reyes de las pro-"vincias y grandes señores pudiesen usar de braçaletes de oro y de calcetas de oro en "las gargantas de los piés, y ponerse en los piés cascabeles de oro à piés y guirnaldas "y cintas de oro a' la caueça con plumeria." Every Mexican tribe had this duality of the chief military office, as Tezozomoc distinctly states. Besides, it appears also distinctly in Central America. The "Popol-Vuh" mentions "Hun-Camé" and "Vukub-Camé" as the two chiefs of "Xibalba." (Part II, cap. I, p. 173) "Then they all took "advice together, and these: 'Hun-Camé' and 'Vucub-Camé,' are the chief judges." (Also, Cap. LXII.) See Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XVIII, p. 141.) A similar duality was found among the Itzaes inhabiting Lake Peten, when they were conquered by Ursua, in 1698. "Canek" and "Quincanek" were the titles of the two chiefs. They called each other cousins. ("Historia de la conquista de la provincia de el Itza, re-"duccion y progressos de la de el Lacandon, etc., etc.," by Juan de Villagutierre Sotomayor. Madrid, 1701.)

[122] The term "Quachiatli" is from Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. V, p. 543). Molina has no mention of this word. Clavigero describes it, without giving a name, as "a very "subtle piece of featherwork, hanging down the entire back" (Lib. VII, cap. XXII). See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXVI, p. 129).

[123] Clavigero (Lib. III, cap. XVIII). Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXVI, p. 129). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVI, p. 130). Durán (Cap. XXXV) p. 277: "y yendo el rey Axayacatl "vfloriose tocando un tambor de oro que à las espaldas llevaba, lo qual se usaba "quando iba en alcance." (Idem, Cap. XLVI, p. 372) "y à las espaldas un atambor de "oro, con qüe los reyes hazian señal al arremeter y en el retirar, de suerte que los reyes "servian de atambor, o sus generales, los quales tocauan al arma y à recoger de los "exercitos."

[124] Especially the left hand figure of the so-called "altar-piece." The right hand figure may be a priest, but we would suggest that both figures are those of chiefs, one representing the equivalent to the "Tlaca-tecuhtli," and the other,—the right hand figure—the equivalent to the "Cihuacohuatl." (See: "Travels in Central America, "Yucatan, and Chiapas," by J. Stephens; also, the plates from Dupaix, in Lord Kingsborough.) Count Miuutoli ("Beschreibung einer alten Stadt in Guatimala." Berlin, 1832) has, Tab. I, a fair representation of the "tablet of the cross," also. The left hand figure is evidently a chieftain of the highest grade, as the "Quachiatli" of Torquemada,

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

armament.[140] Thus the largest bodies were assembled, furnished 726 with weapons, and organized under their respective leaders of all grades on very short notice, awaiting the signal from the chief commander to sally forth, either by canoes across the lake,[141] or along the causeways, to the mainland. Each warrior carried 726 mostly his own frugal provisions[142] which the women of each 724 household had prepared; "corn-bread, meal-cakes, ground beans, "corn-meal seasoned with pepper;"[143] but special carriers also accompanied the force, loaded with a surplus of food, with robes for tents, reeds for huts and bowers, and with cooking utensils like kettles, pans, baskets; also with mats.[144] Sometimes these [140] It also happened that an interval of twenty days (a Mexican month) elapsed between the proclamation of war and the final departure. At least, in most cases, a few days were spent in preparations, since the Mexicans had to give time to their outside allies or subjects to prepare, also. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI): "The Mexicans in "the interval prepared the arms in all the quarters,—shields, swords, and made and "finished many rods ("tlatzontectli"), also slings, and pebbles to be thrown with "cords." (Id., Cap. LVII) "Within twenty days they prepared and fitted out all kinds "of arms, first in the five quarters of Mexico-Tenuchtitlan: Moyotlan, Teopan, Ytza-"cualco, Cuepopan, and Tlatiluico, now called Santiago." In many cases, however, an instantaneous mobilization of the whole force became necessary. Mexico, in times of peace, had to be always ready for war. See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[141] Canoes, "acalli" (water-houses, from "atl," water, and "calli," house), were used for the traffic with the main land, but also largely for the carrying of warriors. It is well known what important part they played against the Spaniards during the siege. For the movements of the Mexicans against a hostile tribe, both on land and water, see Durán (Cap. XIV, p. 121), wherein he describes the attack upon Cuitlahuac, both by canoes and on dry land. 505

[142] Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "porque demas de lo que los reyes proueyan de sus "grandes trojos y graneros, cada soldado llevaua á questas su particular comida, "todo lo que podia llevar, atada á la carga el espada y la rodela, etc., etc."

[143] The women prepared the food, but it also occurred that the stewards dispensed it. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 49): "With this the stewards and calpixques of the tribes "gave to their quarters maize for to make biscuit, tlacactutopochtli, pinole, ground "pepper, chian, beans, and all what pertained to it, providing themselves with every-"thing necessary for certain day stated." The "tlaxcaltotopochtli" (from "tlaxcalli," corn-bread, and "totopochtli," burnt-bread) would be biscuit of maize-meal, and it is therefore called "vizcocho." The pinolli, or pinole, corn-meal mixed with pepper, was an important victual. The food of the Mexicans, in general, outside of the meats (exclusively fowl and some game) and aquatic animals, consisted of maize in various forms, and of pepper, "chilli," as seasoning. Cacao furnished their main beverage, and stores of it were taken along. See, also, Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369: "maiz tostado "y otro molido y hecho harina, frijol molido, pan biscochado, tamales mohosos y cura-"dos al sol, grandes fardos de chile, cacao molido hecho en pellas"). They also used maize to compose a beverage called "yolatl," which possessed particularly vivifying qualities (See note of Sr. Ramirez to p. 290 of Durán), and which they dispensed even on the battlefield (Durán, Cap. XXXVII; Tezozomoc, Cap. LII). 262 272

[144] These carriers are called "tamemes," and are generally regarded as having been slaves. But they probably were outcasts from the bond of kinship, or the men of newly conquered tribes (like Tlatiluico for a time after its capture), upon whom this degrading work (because woman-like!!) was imposed as a penalty. Slaves were not nu- 554 558

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

pan, we shall not attempt to discuss here, reserving it for a future opportunity;[147] it is sufficient to establish that all those tribes, whether regarded by history, as it now appears, as confederated or allied to the Mexicans, or as their subjects, were at any rate under the military supremacy of Mexico.[148] Whenever, therefore, from any cause whatever, the Mexican chief-council agreed upon war, delegates were sent to all tribes connected with Mexico,[149] calling upon them to send their forces, with supplies and ammunition, to a certain place where the Mexicans would meet them, and whence all together would proceed, under Mexican command, on the foray determined upon by the tribe of the lake-centre.[150]

Such notifications were never disregarded by the valley-pueblos,[151] still less by those of different stock-languages outside of the valley, and held by the Mexicans as tributary subjects.[152] The force, [147] It is not to our purpose to determine here whether a league or confederacy existed between Mexico, Tezcuco, and Tlacopan, or whether the latter two tribes were subjects of the former. There is a great deal of contradiction among the authors on the subject, and we intend, if possible, to make it the subject of a future discussion.

[148] Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 135): "Con Mexico estaban confederados "los Señores de Tezcuco, i Tlacopan, que hora llaman Tacuba, i partian lo que gana-"ban, i obedecian al Señor de Mexico, en lo tocante à la guerra." This is also confirmed by the fact that, when Cortés moved towards Mexico from the coast, he was everywhere told of the great power of the Mexicans only, without any reference to the others. On a joint expedition or foray, the Mexican chief commanded the others, even if he was inferior in rank to the "Tlacatecuhtli." (Zurita, p. 11).

[149] This fact is so numerously mentioned by Tezozomoc, that we forbear encumbering with detailed quotations. Almost every other chapter of the Cronica Mexicana, after the 20th about, has a reference to it. Also Durán.

[150] When the Mexicans sallied forth on their unlucky expedition against Mechoacan, in 1479, all the tribes were directed to meet at "Matlatzinco-Toluca" (Tezozomoc, cap. LI, p. 83). Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 286). Axayacatl: "mandó partiese el exercito de "la ciudad y que en sus capitanias fuesen à los términos de los Matlatzincas, y que alli "se hiciese junta de la gente entre estos terminos de Matlatzinco y Tlaximaloyan." On the foray against "Xiquipilco y Xilotepec,"—Chilocan was appointed meeting-place,—"commenced to move the Mexicans, all the others having set out already two or three "days before, for the same place of Chilocan" (Tezozomoc, cap. LXI, p. 102). Durán, speaking of the foray against Meztitlan (Cap. XL, p. 313): "El rey, que mientras le tu-"rana la uncion y estar velando salvo sus insinias y en ayuno y penitencia, que toda la "gente que estuviese aperceuida y aparejada se recogiesse en Atotonilco, y que alli "aguardasen todos al demas exercito y en Itzmiquilpan."

[151] There is not a single instance on record that, up to the time the Spaniards arrived, any pueblo had ever ventured to refuse such assistance to the Mexicans. Only when Cortés moved upon Mexico for the second time, did such acts of open rebellion occur.

[152] Some difference existed between the relations of the Mexicans with kindred tribes speaking the same ("Nahuatl") language, and with those of other stock. Thus, the "Totonaca" of the coast were held in great subjection, while the Chalca of the valley were treated almost like allies. It is not impossible that the so-called empire of Mexico (or of Anahuac, as it is very erroneously called) may yet prove to have been but a confederacy of the Nahuatlac-tribes of the valley, with the Mexicans as military leaders.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

618 It was not necessary to become a chief in order to fill certain offices. Still it is evident that, as chiefs were always men of peculiar ability, the higher charges were generally filled by chieftains.

618 554 555 The title and rank of "grandfather" ("Tecuhtli,")[167] which was the Mexican term for chieftain in general, was open to any one who strove to deserve it. It was conferred:

1. In recompense for warlike prowess, and actions of personal intrepidity and superior shrewdness. Courage alone could not secure it; therefore the "distinguished braves" were not always chiefs.[168]

2. In reward for actions denoting particular wisdom and sagacity, and in acknowledgement of services in the councils, or as traders.[169]

sonal merit, and died with the individual." I have selected the term "officer" as a substitute for Mr. Morgan's "sachem," because the latter is a northern Indian word, whereas the former, while it expresses the nature of the charge and dignity, is more widely known, and therefore better understood. It is out of the union of the attributes, of both officer and chief, that nobility and monarchy have been claimed to exist. Among the Mexicans, in fact among the most highly advanced Indian tribes (the Inca of Peru not excluded), the dignity of chief was still a personal matter, and not necessarily connected with office. The chiefs are the "knights," mentioned by Garcilasso de la Vega ("Histoire des Yncas," Lib. VI, cap. XXIV, XXV, XXVI) and Herrera (Dec. V, Lib. IV, cap. VII, p. 63; Lib. IV, cap. I, p. 83). With the Muyscas of Bogotá, compare H. Ternaux-Compans ("L'ancien Cundinamarca," § XXVII, pp. 57 and 58). Oviedo y Valdés (Lib. XXVI, cap. XXXI. p. 410). Herrera (Dec. VI, Lib. V, cap. VI, pp 116 and 117). Compare also, in regard to the dignity of "military chief" among the wild tribes of the Rio Orinoco and of its tributaries, P. José Gumilla "Histoire naturelle, civile, et géographique de l'Orénoque," translated by Mr. Eidous, 1758, (Vol. II, chapter XXXV, pp. 280-298). Very important.

[167] Molina (IIa p. 96), "abuelo," "tecul." It evidently should be "abuelo," and is therefore only a misprint. The older reports have the word "tecle," and only the later writers (those after the year 1580) begin to write it "tecutli," "tecuhtli," "teuctli." Whether the "teules" meant really "gods," or rather "tecuhtin," as plural of "tecutli," is yet doubtful. It is almost a truism to recall here the Roman "senex," and the German "grave" or "Graf." Among American tribes we have, in QQuiché, "ana," old, "ahau,"—chief; in Maya, "Hachyum,"—father, and "ahau,"—chief—also "achi,"—brave.

[168] Sahagun (Lib. VIII, cap. XXXVIII, pp. 329-332): "De Los grados por donde subian hasta hacerse Tequitlatos," especially (p. 331): "y á los que por si prendian cuatro cautivas, mandaba el rey que los cortasen los cabellos como á capitan, llamalbanle tal diciendo . . . . el capitan mexicatl. ó el capitan tolnaoacatl, ú otros nombres que cuadraban á los capitanes. De alli adelante se podian sentar en los estrados que ellos usaban de petates é icpales en la sala donde se sentaban los otros capitanes y Valientes hombres, los cuales son primeros y principales en los asuntos, y tienen barbotes largos, orejeras de cuero, y borlas en las cabezas conque están compuestas;" Zurita ("Rapport," p. 47): "Les chefs qui, comme nous l'avons dit, se nommaient Tec Tecutzcin, ou Teutley au pluriel, n'exerçaient le commandement qu'à vie, parce que les souverains suprêmes ne les élevaient à ces dignités qu'en récompense des exploits qu'ils avaient faits à la guerre, et des services rendus à l'état ou au prince"). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXVIII, p. 156). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXIX, p. 361). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XIII, pp. 471 and 472), and others.

[169] Zurita ("Rapport," p. 47). Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. II, p, 362): "Estos mercaderes

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

In both the above instances (or kinds of instances) actions of particular merit facilitated, at least, the acquisition of the title; but it could, also, be obtained:— 618 554 555

3. By the observance of rigorous and even cruel rites of "medicine" for a stated time, which put the courage, fortitude, and self-control of the candidate to the severest tests.[170] Although a detailed account of these rites might perhaps be withheld for a subsequent sketch of ancient Mexican worship, yet they equally deserve a place here. 555 785 618

The candidate appears to have been presented at the great central place of worship by the representatives of his kin, perhaps, also, by the other chiefs of his tribe. There he underwent four days and four nights of the most cruel torments. While but little nourishment was allowed him (some went even so far as not to eat anything at all during this time), his blood was drawn freely, and no sleep was permitted to settle on his weary eyes. From time to time he was exposed to taunts, to injurious words, to blows and even to stripes. While he was thus hungry and thirsty, weakened from loss of blood through self-sacrifice, others ate and drank plentifully before his eyes. Finally, his clothes were torn from his body, and with nothing on but the breech-cloth or diaper, he was at last left alone at the "calmecac," there to do the rest of his penance. When these four initiatory days were past, the candidate went back to his calpulli, to spend the remainder of the time (about a full year), in retirement, and abstinence, frequently attended with more or less self-inflicted bodily suffering. When the kin had secured the necessary amount of articles to be offered up in worship, or given to the medicine-men, officers, chiefs, and guests attending the installation, this final solemnity was allowed to take place, provided always that the courage and personal strength of the novice had not forsaken him. Another period of fasting, sacrifice, and torture, similar to the one at the opening of the career of preparation, closed the probation. Some of the ordeals were again of the most trying nature. Finally the store of gifts was distributed; eating and drinking alternated with era ya como caballeros, y tenian divisas particulares por sus hazañas." . . . Fray Alonso de Montufar ("Supplique," etc., 20 Nov., 1554. "Troisième relation d'Ixtlilxochitl," Appendix, p. 257). "Des Cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient un Tecle." (1st "Recueil," p. 222). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXVIII, p. 156).

[170] Gomara ("Conquista," Vedia I, p. 425). "Des Cérémonies observées," etc. (pp. 222, etc.). Mendieta (p. 156). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXIX and XXX, etc.).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 solemn dances to the monotonous rythmic noise called Indian music.
785 The candidate was, at last, once more dressed in becoming apparel, 618 and could recuperate, being himself now the "feasted one."[171]

618 Men, however young in years, who had successfully endured such 554 great trials, certainly deserved to be looked upon thereafter as persons of uncommon fortitude. Hence indeed the chiefs or "tecuhtli" were particularly fitted for responsible offices of any kind. They were looked upon with deference, their voice was heard and listened to, and it is no wonder if higher charges, especially those of a military nature, were filled by such as had, in one way or another, achieved this distinction.[172] But no privilege was connected with their dignity, except that of wearing certain peculiar ornaments, and none was transmitted through them to their descendants.[173] That the "tecuhtli," besides, did

[171] For the above description of the formalities of creating a "Tecuhtli," I refer to the sources quoted in the preceding three notes. It is interesting to compare similar ceremonies used by the Indians of the Orinoco, Gumilla ("Histoire," etc., Vol. II, cap. XXXV). Of the Yncas, Garcilasso de la Vega (Lib. VI, cap. XXIV to XXVI). Cristoval de Molina ("An account of the Fables and Rites of the Yncas," translated by C. R. Markham, in Hackluyt Society's Volume of 1873). "Narratives of the Rites and Laws of the Yncas." Herrera (Dec. V, lib. III, cap. VII, p. 63, etc.). We are forcibly reminded of the words of the quaint old poet and soldier, Alonzo de Ercilla.

"Los cargos de la Guerra, y prehemineneia
No son por flacos medios proveidos,
Ni vàn por calidad, ni por herencia,
Ni por hacienda, i ser mejor nacidos;
Más la virtud del brazo, y la excelencia,
Esta hace á los hombres preferidos,
Esta ilustra, habilita, perficiona,
Y quilata el valor de la persona."

("La Araucana." Parte Ia, Canto I°. Edition of 1733, p. 2).

[172] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXIX, p. 161: "Los que tenian el ditado de Tecutli, tenian muchas preeminencias, y entre ellas era que en los concilios y ayuntamientos sus votos eran principales." Gomara ("Conquista" Vedia I, p. 436). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXX, p. 306). It should always be remembered, that the dignity of Tecuhtli appears most prominent in Tlaxcallan. This people however, was but a league, very similar to that of the northern Iroquois, only consisting of four, instead of six tribes. Among them, the peculiar nature of the dignity of chief became more evident than it was among the Mexicans to the Spaniards. But there is no difference between the "Tecuhtli" of Tlaxcallan, and the "Tecuhtli" of Mexico or Tezcuco. That the head-chiefs of Mexico were always "Tecuhtli" themselves, previous to their election, needs hardly any proof. Domingo Munoz Camargo ("Histoire de la République de Tlaxcallan." Translation by Mr. Ternaux-Compans, in Vol. 88 and 90 of "Nouvelles Annales des Voyages," 1843. See Vol. 88, p. 178, etc.)

[173] About the privileges of the Tecuhtli, compare Gomara ("Conquista" Vedia I, p. 436), Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXIX, p. 161), Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXX, p. 306), Zurita (p. 48, etc.). It is evident however, that the latter confounds the rank of chief with the particular office which might have been entrusted to him, else the "cultivation of lands" could not be included in the list of advantages derived from the position. Compare "Tenure of Lands," Bustamante ("Tezcoco," etc., p. 235). Sr. Bustamante frequently copies Zurita. Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 135). In regard to the non-heredity of the dignity, I refer to the above authorities, and more especially to A. de Zurita ("Rapport," p. 49: "Lorsqu'un de ces chefs mourait, le prince accordait

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

not form as it is often stated, an order of chivalry, is amply proven 618 by the fact that the bond of kinship interposed a barrier between 554 them and such an imaginary association and furthermore, because their number could not be very great. The formalities required were so numerous and dilatory, the material for distribution in the shape of gifts was so large, that a frequent repetition of the occurrence lay beyond the power of the kin.[174] After this necessary digression, we return once more to the Mexican calpulli.

Besides being as already established in "Tenure of Lands," 618 the unit of territorial possession, we found the Mexican kin to be a self-governing, therefore democratic cluster. Every one of these clusters had, within itself, all the elements required for independent existence as an organized society. Except for assistance and protection against outsiders, it needed no associates. Hence it follows, that since we find twenty Mexican kins aggregated into a tribe, this tribe was a voluntary association, formed for mutual protection.

Three attributes of the tribe are next to self-evident: 619

1. A particular territory;
2. A common dialect;
3. Common tribal worship.[175]

sa charge á celui qui s'en était rendu digne par ses services, car les fils du défunt n'en héritaient pas s'ils n'en étaient investis." The very fact of the election, and the manner in which it was performed is also evidence. See the various documents in Ternaux-Compans, 2d Recueil.

[174] That such a festival or ceremony necessitated the accumulation of much provision and many articles for presents and offerings, is proven by numerous authorities. Gomara ("Conquista" Vedia I, p. 436): "En fin, en semejantes fiestas no habia pariente pobre. Daban á los señores tecutles y principales convidados plumajes, mantas, tocas, zapatos, bezotes, y orejeras de oro ó plata ó piedras de precia. Esto era mas ó menos, segun la riqueza y animo del nuevo tecuitli, y conforme á las personas que se daba. Tambien hacia grandes ofrendas al templo y á los sacerdotes." Zurita ("Rapport sur les différentes classes de chefs etc.," p. 28): "Ces solennités occasionnaient de grandes dépenses, car les assistants étaient fort nombreux; c'étaient les parents, les alliés et les domestiques du nouveau dignitaire. L'on faisait aussi des aumones considérables aux pauvres." "Des Cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient un Tecle." (1st Recueil, p. 233): "Celui que l'on nommait Tecle, devait d'abord posséder de grands biens, qu'il put donner aux prêtres et aux autres nobles." (P. 237): "Un grand nombre ne pouvait pas se procurer en si peu de temps la quantité suffisante, etc., etc." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXVIII, p. 156): "Y asi les costaba excesivo trabajo y gasto, como aqui se dirá." (Id., cap. XXXIX, pp. 160 and 161.) Veytia ("Historia Antigua," Lib. II, cap. IX, pp. 65 and 66): "Y era exhorbitantisimo el gasto, por cuya causa algunos, cuyas facultades y caudal no era suficiente á reportarlos, dejaban de tomar este dictado." H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II, p. 199): "As before remarked, the vast expenses entailed upon a Tecuhtli debarred from the honor many who were really worthy of it."

[175] For these three attributes of tribal organization I refer to Morgan ("Ancient Society," p. 113).

everyone ate and drank? The old merchants lay guarding and watching, smoking, inhaling the fragrance, and taking their pleasure. Smoke drifted upward and was overspread. Food was spread out in abundance; nothing was lacking. Of this it was thus said: the merchants heated things; they placed them in the sun.

puctli mantoc, tlaqualli qujqujztoc, atle monectoc, ichoatl injc mjtoa, ca tlatonaltia, tlatotonja, in puchteca. 441 527 556

And when it grew dark, there was drinking. All of the old merchant men and women assembled. When they became drunk, then they vaunted, boasted, and blustered over their wealth, their achievements, their valor, and especially wheresoever they had set foot; that is to say, wheresoever they had gone to arrive; the things which they had discovered, the manner of their return, their coming back. So they had gone to perform their labors and to circle about the surrounding provinces, to encounter the waste lands, to descend into the gorges — everywhere entering places of danger and drawing into fields of battle. And verily in some places they were besieged and ambushed. Perhaps only one or two escaped the hands of the enemy, coming to leave word with and inform the people that they had first broken and scattered the rampart and enclosure of eagle and ocelot warriors.

Auh in oiooac tlatlaoano, mocecentlalia in puchteca veuetque, in puchteca ilamatque, intla otlaiujntic, vncan qujmopopoaltia, qujmeeoaltia, ic mjxmotlatoque, yn innecujltonol, yn intlaiecoliz, yn jmoqujchtiliz, oc cenca ichoatl: in canjn icac imjcxi, qujtoznequj: in canjn acitinemj, in quexqujch ic conmati, in quexqujch imjloch, innecuepal, ic quichiuhtinemj, injc qujlacatzotinemj anaoatl, injc ixtlaoatl qujnamjctinemj, injc atlaubtli quitemovitinemj, in noviian calactinemj, in ovica, in iaotitlan qujztinemj: auh in nel cana imoan calmotzaqua, qujnpoiomjctia, aço ça ce, vme, in tematitlampa qujça, in qujoalcaoa tlatolli, in oalteitoa, ichoan achtopa qujpetla, qujxitinja, in quauhtenamjtl, quauhtlatzacujlli, ocelotenamjtl, ocelotlatzacujlli. 441 527 554 521

So there they made light of, scoffed at, exposed, revealed, abused, and tortured those who knew no places, who had gone nowhere, who nowhere in any degree had set foot anywhere; who only at the ashes of his fire called himself a warrior[19] and lived prudently[20] and impudently only here in the market place. Only here, the market place, did he frequent, buying, selling, and deceiving. And this was when, because of their suffering, these cast into the fire — or it fell by the wayside — their rearing, because they were troubled and moved by the counsel of their fathers and mothers. So there at the place of congregating there was dispute, discussion, abuse, faultfinding, and belittling. They sat jostling and besmearing one another, disputing and quarreling among themselves, contending, refuting, and bragging. They paid no heed to others' answers; they did not consider others to be superior.[21] They chattered.[22] Likewise, they were often arrogant; each one had his own opinion; they made little of and ic vncan qujquequeloa, ica maujltia, qujtlatlacaqujtia, qujcocoa, qujtotoneoa, qujcocolhuja, qujchichinachilia yn jiollo, in acan onmati, in acampa ianj in acan quentel, in acan icac icxi, in çan njcam inextitlan mooqujchitoa, çan njcan tianqujzco in mjmantinemj, tlaxtlapalotinemj, çan njcan in motitianquja, tlatlanecujloa, tlatlaxiccuj, auh ie vncân in jtoneuhcacopa, motlecomaiavi vevetzteoa, yn intlazcaltilhoan, in jntlaoapaoalhoã, injc vel imjtic oaçic intecoco, in teitic aaçic intlatol, in jntahoan, yn jnnaoin, injc vncan in necentlaliaia maaoa, mononotza, moquequeloa, mopâpatla, mopapatzaoa, moquezicçatoque, moçoqujmotlatoque, motlatzoujlitoque, moquâquatoque, mjxquâquatoque, motlatolxopeuhtoque, moichoatocatoque, âmotenaqujlmatque amo motenpanavillanj, chachalacatoque, no çac in jzmoquixtia: muchi tlacatl cecenteti itlatol, atle ipan qujmoztilitoque, amo commopovilitoque in jnnecujltonol, yn jnnetlamachtil: huel nononqua mutachcauhnequj, mocecentecpoa, cecentecuti, cecenme mo-

19. Moequipaí-hiua in the Real Palacio MS. Nicaw: niaw is meant.
20. Mindiaoui in loc. cit.
21. Possibly amotenqujlmatque and amo motenpanavillanj are intended.
22. Chachalacatoque in the Real Palacio MS.

441 527 554 521

held in no esteem the riches and prosperity of others. Indeed, each one alone wished to be best; each one thought himself a lord, a superior person; each one thought of himself as the only one, the best. Each spoke for himself; none would talk to them or say a word in their behalf, unless he were a vanguard merchant, one who knew distant lands; unless he were very rich, dealt in goods in his house, or were a buyer of slaves,[23] a ceremonial bather of captives to be sacrificed; unless in his house were carrying frames stuffed and creaking; unless in his house one drank from black jars, gourd vessels, etc.

This was because each one of the merchants himself placed things in the sun at his own house on the day sign Four Wind.

mati, mocecocamati, nononqua motlatalhuja, aiac vel inoan tlatoa, aiac vel inpal onmocencamavia: intlacamo oztomecatl, intlacamo veca matinj: ioan intlacamo cenca mocujltónoa, intlacamo ontlaaaquj ichan, intlacamo tecoanj, intlacamo tealtianj, intlacamo cácatzcatoc, nánatzcatoc ichan cacaxtli: intlacamo poctecontica, aiotectica atlioa ichan et.[a].

Ipampa injc ceceniaca tlatonaltiaia, puchteca in jncacalitic: in jpan jn tonalli navecatl.

23: Or "one who summoned guests."

574 as] the vessels to carry, keep, and transport the leavings.[4]

851 Then, for a short time, all sat relaxed, watching; all sat content in the place of lingering, in the banqueting place. But if some were not well satisfied, nor happy, nor content, with the chocolate, the food, the flowers, and the tobacco, etc., they only ran away angry. They quickly arose and sprang to their feet, leaped up, glared in rage at the drink and food, and went about chattering, babbling, jabbering, multiplying it and shouting, doing it in crescendo.[5] Thus oppressed and troubled, they went to seat themselves at their homes and in their houses. And those who had left in such a manner, those who had only become enraged, if they were noted, later, next day, once more they received them[6] and brought them in, consoled them, when it was the time of finishing the food.[7] In their behalf it was celebrated; they were consoled and made joyous.

vncã achitzinca ompacoatoc, nepielotoc, vellamachotoc in nepieloian, in tecoanotzaloian: auh in cequjn in amo cenca tlavelmati, vellamati, movelmati, yn atica, tlaqualtica, xochitica, yietica et.[8] çan motlavellaloa, moquetzteoa, moquetztiquiça, cholotecoa, maçoma, motlaqualçoma, tlãtlatotivj, popolocativj, tlatetotiuj, tlãtlanauhtiuj, tlanauhtiuj, tlanauhpactiuj, ic oallatepachoticate, motixicoticate, yn omotlalito inchã, yn jncalitic: auh intla oittoque in iuh oquizque, in çan oqualantiaque, quin imuztlaioc oc cepps qujnana, qujmonjcxiana, qujniolocuja, in iquac ic apeoalco, inca nechioalo, iollalilo, papaquiltilo, [262] And the women only drank a gruel, perhaps a gruel of wrinkled chia cooked with maize, or a drink of pinole mixed with chia,[9] which they drank.

[263] They gave them [gruel] topped with honey, or with chilis, yellow chilis, small hot ones, or hot green ones, or with squash seeds on it.

auh in cihoa çan tlayia, açe chiantzotzolatolli, anoço chianpinolli in quia, in qujnmaca, necpanj, anoço chilpanj, chilcozpanj, chiltecpimpanj, chilchopanj, aiocachpanj, 574 273 851 And when it grew dark, the old men and women drank wine. They gathered around and congregated. They set up before them that from which they drank, called the flower vessel, and their drinking bowls and wine cups, the serving vessels.[9] auh yn oioac in vevetique, yn ilamatque, tlatlacoani, mohololoa, mococentlalia, ymjxpan quicoalquetza yn intlacoanaia, yn jtoca xochcomitl, yoã yn intlacoancax, in jntetlacõ, in tetlamamaconj, [554] The wine server, the server, first began: so he went to the one of highest rank, the first in rank, the one in first place. So he went in order, going in line, and so were left those of lesser rank, of inferior station, in last place. He continued serving the wine, perhaps white, or watered, or honeyed;[10] those which were stored and prepared for the drinking ceremony. It was carried there in jars for dregs, in wine jars and dipping vessels.

achto iẽ vmpeoa in tetlacoanti, in tetlamamacac, njmã ic ic iauh yn jiacac, in tlaiacac, yn jiacaiocã, ic tevipãtiuh, tecempilotiuh, ic ommocaoa in icuitlapilco, in tlacuitlapilco, in tlatzaccan, quicoaltecatimanj in vetli, açe iztavetli, anoço aivetli, tlachicoalvetli, yn otlaliloc ochichioaloc ic pillacoanoz, ontlaçaço inxaiocomjc, inococomjc, intlatemovilcomjc,

4. Interpretation is provisional. For this, Sahagún, in the corresponding text, writes: "y las sobras del curso, dauan a sus criados." See n. 2.

5. The term is apparently incompletely corrected to read desapparecia; cf. Real Palacio MS.

6. Or cerpps quimocaoa in ibid.

7. Corresponding Spanish text: "a esta dia llamauan, Apeualco: porque en el, se acabaua todo el combite." Cf. also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, "The Gods," p. 23. and Sahagún (Garibay ed.), Vol. IV, p. 321. In ibid., I, 21, 24, it is referred to as "olualdiera a lo que estaba comido y bebido."

8. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book VIII, "Kings and Lords," p. 39; Book II, "The Ceremonies," p. 91 (chianpinolli).

9. In the Real Palacio MS. yn tlaxaxaxi, y notlamamaxxi follows notlamamaxxi.

10. Corresponding Spanish text: "berbias de agua, y miel cocido, con la raya: al qual llamauan ayacolli, que quiere decir, pulque de agua: lo qual tenia aparejado, y guardado el señor del combite: de alguna dias atras." See also Oswaldo Gonçalves de Lima: El maguey y el pulque en los códices mexicanos (México: Fondo de Cultura Económica, 1956), passim, and esp. pp. 107 ff.

57 all the things which had been set aside and placed 431 apart [by the host]—this hath been told. They would be given tobacco; they would be plied with and provided tobacco; they would be plied with and given flowers. They would be feasted; they would be given to drink. They would be plied with gifts—capes, clothing, vestments, mantles, and breech clouts. And after they had rejoiced for a little while, they would be provided with dancing, and they would set out in the sun for them the flowers, the tobacco, the capes, and the breech clouts, in order to meet the obligations of banqueting, lest it be said [of the host] that the guests were slighted and found discontent there.

que, mitztiquc, yiztilozque, mozochimaczque, mozochitizque, xiçhimaczque, tlaquizque, atlizque, motlauhtizque, motilmatizque, moquentiçq̃, motlaquentizque, motlalpilizq̃, momaxtlatizque: auh çatepã ymellel onquiçaz achitzinca, õmitozque, ontlatotonizque, yn xochitl, yn jietl, iñ tilmatli, in maxtlatl, injc conjxtlaoa, cooxiotl, ontlaiolpachivitia, injc amo itolozque, ca çã moiolitlacoa, ahtlavelmati.

57 And where, in this manner, there was consider-
4 able congregating, one augmented, increased, and multiplied the flowers and edible things. It was as if his nourishing goods rested everywhere, covered and spread over the ground, spread all about; as if the food brought there spread souring; all the tamales became mouldy. Musty were the tamales which had been set out.

Auh in cana tel çan ic no yui, vel moveichioa, tonacatica miequia, tlapiviia, ỉ xuchitl, in quaknj, iuhquin papachivi, tlalpan aci, tlalpan actimoteca, tlalpan acitimoteca, yn jococauh ipalnemoanj, iuhquin tlaxoxoçoiaxtoc, yn vmpa oalquiça tlaqualli, ixquich pupuxcavi in tamalli, tamalpupuxcauhqui, yn itemaco,

57 But there at the flower places, where the flowers
554 were placed and arranged, the pleasing odor and fragrance spread to all parts. No one wished to be deflated or to lose stature. All persons wished[3] that they be given recognition, fame, and distinction: that they might not, on the contrary, be shamed, receive blame, be embarrassed, confused, belittled, confounded, or excluded from others. Each and everyone paid attention to, took great care with, [and] gloried in his invitations to others. Each and everyone therefore made him resplendent and admirable, each one separately proceeding with exclusive and undivided attention to feasting. They exalted and raised themselves; they surpassed and much exceeded themselves. There was vying and competition.

auh in vmpa yonoia, itecõia, ivipanaloian xuchitl, iuhquin tlaveveliztimanj, tlaxvjxxtimanj, aiac mopatzaoallanj, aiac patzactzintli iezuequi, muchi tlacatl iuh connequi, in ma ça vel onixpatlaoa, onteioua, onitzuhcaiooa, in maca tle ic õmopinauhti, ompinavizcui, ompinaviztlamati, ommomamati, ontzinquiça, ommixtilquetza, ic teviçpa ontzicolo, muchi tlacatl cecentetl ic quimati, quitlamachia, quiveilia, yn itecpanotzaliz, muchi tlacatl cecẽtetl ic quicueponia, ic tetlamaviçoltia, nonõqua micauhtiuh, micauhcaiauh in cooiotl, macoctiuh, macoquetztiuh, mopanavitiuh, mopapanavitiuh, nepanaviltoco, nepapanavilo,

On the other hand, one might not wish to do it, preferring not to enter into it, and not desiring it, lest his favors should fall away or fail. And if it was not brought about, everyone wondered, was chagrined, and made much of it. This same one, when he learned of it, became troubled and continued in fear[4] that possibly his efforts would fail, pass away, or miscarry. O that none might ever speak to him of noçac yn ãconnequj, acõãquinequi, aquin maca quinequi, yn ma vel onvetzi, onquiça itlaocul, auh yn aiamo muchioa muchi tlacatl, motẽmati, tlatẽmati, tlaveymati, çan iẽ in quimati, ic motequipachoa, q'nmattinẽmi, in quẽmach nenti onquiçaz, contlalcaviz ynetequipachol, macaiac tle ic conitotiaz, conixaoatiaz, conjxmotlatiaz, onahioz, onteputzcoonoloz.

3. In ibid., "y no se [illegible] pesarse hallasen [illegible]."
4. Quizá [illegible] in ibid.

it, or reproach or revile him; [that he not be] cried out at, or in bad grace.

And when already it had dawned, guests would be procured; there would be receptions, and there would be invitations to dine. There was much preoccupation and bustling. All was put thoroughly in order. Paths were adorned; the courtyard was prepared; the ground was leveled and smoothed; earth was scattered on it; it was wet and sprinkled; sand was strewn on the surface; reed tips were arranged, suspended, laid out, and draped. There where there was to be dancing they were scattered.[5] This was the task and obligation of the musicians, who were in charge.

auh in ic oallathui coatioaz, nepiclos tecoanotzalos, cẽca ncahamanalo, netetequipacholo, tlatlacencaoalo, vchichioalo, ithoalchichioalo, tlatlaitmanalo, tlatlaltemalo, tlatlacujcujoa, tlaatemalo, tlazvililo, tlaatzelhujlo, tlaixxalhujlo, tolquatecteco, tlapipilolo, tolquatectli moteca, mopipiloa, ĩ vncã netotilos, tlatzetzelolo, ỹin ichoã intequjuh incocol, cõcoltilo, in cujcanjme. 574 [554]

And some plucked and removed the feathers from birds, and dressed them; or slew, singed, and dressed dogs; or prepared and cooked meat, and braised it in pots. Some ground and powdered tobacco and with a heavy straw filled tubes with it. And among the ashes was the labor of the old women. They made tamales and wrapped them in husks. They made tamales using dried grains of maize; they made white ones with beans forming a seashell on top, and meat cooked with maize. They made tamales of meat. Some cooked the tamales in an olla. Some washed the maize grains which had been cooked in lime. Some carried and drew water, or poured it. Some broke up, ground, and pulverized cacao beans. Some mixed cooked maize with chocolate. Some cooked stews, or roasted chilis — different kinds of chilis. All night they remained there. Vigil was kept. They kept watch. There was constant awaiting of the light. They sat holding vigil and chattering.

auh in cequjn tlavivitla, totolhuivitla, totolchichioa, itzcujnmjctia, itzcujnchichinoa, itzcujnchichioa, nacachichioa, nacapaoaci, cõcontlatia, in cequjn yietlalchioa, yietlalxaqualoos, yietema teçacatica, auh in nextitlan, ichoan intequjuh, chilamatque quichioa tamalli, piqui, tamaloa, tlatlapaotia, quatecuicuilli quichioa, nacatlaoio, nacatamalli quichioa, cequjn tamalpaoaci, cequjn nextamalpaca cequjn açaça, atlatlacuj, ateteca, cequjn cacaoatl quixamanja, cacaoateci, tlacuechoa, cequjn tlanextlamalneloa, cequjn molchichioa, chilixca, chichilixca, çan iuh ceiocal in nemoa tozçolo, tozçoa totozçolo tlavilli quiztoc, chachalacoatoc, 574 252 [887]

And when it had dawned, thereupon there was sweeping in all parts, the laying out of straw mats in all places, and the setting out of seats. Straw beds were spread out, frayed and interwoven at the edges. Already was prepared and lined up all which might be required.

auh yn otlavizcalleoac, njman ie ic tlatlachpano, petlateteco, icpalteteco, çacapechtli moteteca, motevimoloa, tlatenvimollolli, ie ic tlaonoc, ie omocuecuentilli, in ixujch monenequiz, 574

Already arranged in order, in their respective places, and assigned to their proper tasks, were those who were to be waiters, who were to serve. No longer was the host, he who had invited the guests, concerned; the care, all provision of comfort to others, had been assumed and taken over for him, so that there would be no neglect or carelessness.

ie omotetecpanque, ie in mãmania, omotẽtequippantique, in tlatequipanozque, in tenamiquizque, aocmo quen ipã in tecoanotzqui, in tecoinotzanj, ça ixujch ynecuitlavil in teca mochioã, ĩ tepantlatoa, in maca omxiccaoalo, omjacaoalo, 574 357

5. In Ibid., subordinate follows dominant.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

562 alliance. Moreover, marriages were carefully arranged be-
[584] tween families, so that for a husband grossly to neglect his wife's rights was a breach, if not of etiquette, certainly of [793] social contract. The priesthood may have offered a modest field of influence and attainment to women. However, history records no mention of any advantage deriving from temple service.

554 Men had the chief opportunities, and these lay in various 555 directions. The early chroniclers, conditioned by their mediæval Spanish background, spoke of hereditary classes. In all probability, judging from Indian communities as a whole, there was rank but not class in the hereditary sense. As in our own society, a man could attain high rank through his own efforts, and through his eminence his children would consequently profit in their own social adjustment. Yet they could not reach their father's position unless they earned it through
[556] equivalent tribal service. Wealth did exist, and property in the form of rights to use land, tools and other possessions
[642 421] created a social and economic stratification. In theory and practice Aztec society was democratic, and the communal ownership of productive property was its economic base.[4]

555 A man attained rank through the measure of his tribal service. The wise farmer, the wily hunter, the brave warrior or the dexterous artisan gained admiration from his fellows because of superior skill. If his wisdom and judgment were conspicuous he might be elected as the clan representative to the tribal council, or even as chief. Similarly an individual who dedicated himself to learning the magic rituals to placate the gods, could become a medicine man or priest. However, in the populous and advanced city-states activities tended to become specialized, and greater opportunity led to a more

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 finely graded scale of social eminence. (See Plates 33–36.)

425 511 A married man received a plot of land directly from the clan or else took over his father's fields if the latter were too old to work. Diligent husbandry, eked out by making stone tools, pottery or practicing some such craft for barter, could produce a good living. Unmarried men helped their fathers and were able to add to their prestige by taking part in the numerous military campaigns.

[721] 555 Since the capture of victims for sacrifice was the chief glory of war, an able soldier who could subdue his enemies and drag them to the rear received much honor. According to the number of captives taken, a warrior had the right to wear an increasingly elaborate costume. Consistently success-[575] ful warriors could enter an order, like the Knights of the Eagle or the Ocelot (often referred to as Tiger), which performed special dances and rituals. Sometimes a warrior of unusual prowess received additional grants of land or more often obtained an increased portion of the clan's share of tribute. Having reached an established position by this means, he had a more important voice in clan councils and might attain a seat in the council itself. A special honorific, tecuhtli [554] (grandfather), which corresponds to chief among the North American Indians, distinguished these men. The title signified high social, but not official, rank, and from these men who had distinguished themselves by probity, bravery and religious observance, high elective and appointive posts were filled.[8]

624 In this stratum there were many positions of honor and influence, which, like petty political offices in small North American towns, were held in connection with some other means of livelihood. There were officials who kept order in the markets and tribunals which settled disputes in clan

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER VIII

CRAFTSMANSHIP

A consideration of how the Aztecs attained a high degree of skillful craftsmanship with relatively few mechanical aids

CRAFTSMANSHIP allows an exercise of the creative impulse, |8| satisfying the individual through his domination of the raw material. In our modern mechanized age most of us suffer from the lack of opportunity to create, since almost everything we use comes machine-made, and not even the skilled mechanic feels that his ingenuity and craftsmanship alone have produced a useful and attractive object. The ordinary modern floats like Mohammed's coffin, without contact with the earth on which he lives or the universe of which he is an infinitesimal part. The Aztec, however, lived in the most intimate contact with nature in its finite and infinite manifestations. Because his conscious being was set in terms of the group mind, he seldom felt that sensation, common to the Western intellect, of having cut himself from the tree of natural existence with the saw of his own reason.

The home production of articles for daily use gave an 556 impetus to craftsmanship, since wealth and prosperity lay 555 in a man's possessions, not in the abstract ownership of rights to the work of others. Thus a successful man had a well-made house, finely fashioned and decorative clothing, care-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

556 555 fully worked utensils and tools and well-tended and productive fields, while an unsuccessful man had a small and miserable equipment. Yet except for the intervention of natural disaster the differential was largely due to the ability of a man and his household to produce with their own hands the symbols of his wealth or to exchange his specialized product for equivalent superior equipment made by others. The entrepreneur and broker had small place in the undertaking of production and its distribution.[1]

771 The gods also stimulated good craftsmanship. Every home had an altar, and every act was accomplished through the favor of some deity. Ceremonies to appease these custodians of natural force were of frequent occurrence. Thus the use of symbols, referring to the god whose favor was sought, came to exercise an important influence on design. Since a man does reverence with his most esteemed social attitudes and his best material possessions, each household must try to surpass its previous efforts to honor the gods. The temple equipment, therefore, tended to represent the cream of local craftsmanship.

324 Work in stone, the most durable natural substance available, is a common gauge of human ability. Since the tools last forever, it is possible to compare the technical abilities of peoples over an enormous span of human history. However, for basic equipment like projectile points, axes, grinding stones, and the like, satisfactory forms are reached fairly early and do not change in proportion to cultural advances in other directions. Thus the arrow or the dart points of Aztec times were not technically better than those used by the Middle Culture peoples. However, the technical demands of the sacrificial cult called for a heavy broad-bladed flint

793 Ninth Chapter: here is told how were established and chosen the high priests, the Quetzalcoatl priests, the first of whom was [named] Totec Tlamacazqui and the second Tlaloc Tlamacazqui;[1] and [how] these whom they set up were especially wise and prudent.

And one who had distinguished his way of life and otherwise [had followed] the precepts and ordinances of the priests, this one was set apart and chosen, to be made a keeper of the god.[2] The chief, and the great judges,[3] and all the nobles chose him and gave him the name of Quetzalcoatl. There were two Quetzalcoatl priests: one was called Totec Tlamacazqui, one was called Tlaloc [Tlamacazqui].

The Quetzalcoatl priest [called] Totec Tlamacazqui was dedicated to Uitzilopochtli; the Tlaloc was dedicated to the lord of Tlalocan, the [god of] rain. These [were] exactly equal [in station].

●555 793 And although he might be poor, or miserable; though his mother and father might be the poorest of the poor, if he well ordered his life and [kept] the commandments of the priests, he was taken to be named this Quetzalcoatl priest. He was called either Totec Tlamacazqui or Tlaloc.

No lineage was considered; only a good life was noted. One was sought of saintly life, of righteous life; of pure heart, good, and humane; who was resigned; who was firm and tranquil; a peace-maker, constant, resolute, brave; caressing, welcoming, and friendly to others; who was compassionate of others and wept for them; who had awe in his heart. He was called divine of heart, pious, god-fearing—one who wept, who was sad, who sighed.

793 And when he began this [training], he was still called an acolyte; then a priest; then a fire priest[4]—already due reverence. Then from these were chosen those named Quetzalcoatl priests.

Iaje chiconauj capitulo: vncan motenoa yn quenjn motialiaia pepanaloia in vevej tlamacazque in quequetzalcoa, ynjc ce totecu tlamacazqui, ynjc vme tlaloc tlamacazqui, oc cẽca muchipa ieboan qujntlalia in vel ixtlamatque muzcalianj.

Auh in aqujn vel qujmonemiliztia, y, yoan in oc cequi in jnnaoatil tlamacazque, yn jnnemiliz, ichoatl ano, ichoatl pepenalo, in teupixqui muchioa, qujpepena in tlatoani yoã in tecutlatoque, yoan muchintin in tlatoque, Quitlatocaiotia Quetzalcoatl: vmentin in quetzalcoa, ce itoca totec tlamacazqui, ce itoca tlaloc, in quetzalcoatl totec tlamacazqui itech povia in Vitzilobuchtli, in tlaloc itech povia in tlalocan tecutli, yn qujiavitl, ynique, y, çan vel neneuhque, auh in manel motolinja, in manel icnotlacatl, in manel quicentzacuj icnotlacatzintli, vnãtzin, ytatzin, intla ie vel quichioa, in jnnemiliz, yn jnnaoatil, tlamacazque ichoatl ano, ichoatl quetzalcoatl tocaiotilo, aço totec tlamacazquj, anoço tlaloc motocaiotia, amo tlacamecaiotl motta ça qualnemilizli, vel ie motta, vel ie motemoa. in qualnemilice, in iecnemilice, in chipaoac yiollo, in qualli yiollo, in jcnoioyiollo, in tlapaccaihjiovianj, in tlatepitzvianj, in tlaiolicvianj, in ãmo mocivianj, in iollochicaoac, in iollotztl, yn iollochichic, in tepepepetlanj, in temacochoanj, in tetlaçotlanj, in teltaoculianj, in teca chocanj, ymauhquj yiollo, in mjtoa teutl yiollo, in tlateumatini, in teuimacacinj, in chocanj, in tlaocuianj, in elcicivinj;

Auh injc oalpeoa y, oc itoca tlamacazqui, njman ie tlamacazqui, njman ic tlenamacac, ie mavizti, y, njman ic vncan ano, y, in mjtoa quetzalcoatl.

1. "El sacerdote de Quetzalcoatl [sic] debe a veces, es por necesario del dios que se considerada por los mexicanos como el arquetipo del sacerdote" (Cline, op. cit., p. 43). Interrelations among these high priests and the lower hierarchy are given briefly in ibid., pp. 47f.; see also Torquemada, op. cit., pp. 178f. The responsibilities of various functionaries are also suggested in the Appendix of Book II of Sahagún, for which cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book II, pp. 195ff. Torquemada, op. cit., pp. 221-2, mentions only one Quetzalcoatl priest: "Tenian un Sacerdote, en un Convento, que se llamaba del nombre de su Dios, Quetzalcoatl, el qual estaba cuarto cabe su guarida, y dormiaba, reforçando la religion, y amonestando los obispos, y hablaba continuadamente."

2. The terms of reciprocal use used (god) and pie (guard). Cf. Simeon, op. cit. The dictionaries define the term as priest.

3. Torquemada: Sahagún describes them as "los senadores jueces . . . entre mexicanos son gente diligente los senores que eran a sus tiempos"; on the death of chiefs, they were among the electors of a new one (Sahagún, Bustamante ed., II, pp. 318, 321).

4. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book II, p. 74, n. 7.

And when they already were to rise against the city to destroy it, first was awaited tensely the moment when fire flared up—when the priests brought forth [new] fire—and for the blowing of shell trumpets, when the priests blew them.

And when the fire flared up, then as one arose all the warriors. War cries were raised; there was fighting. They shot fiery arrows into the temples.

And when they first took a captive, one fated to die, forthwith they slew him there before the gods; they slashed his breast open with a flint knife.

And when the city had been overcome, thereupon were counted as many captives as there were, and as many Mexicans and Tlatilulcans as had died. Then they apprised the ruler that they had been orphaned for the sake of Uitzilopochtli; that men had been taken captive and been slain. And the ruler then commanded the high judges to go to tell and inform all in the homes of those who had gone to die in war, that there might be weeping in the homes of those who had gone to war to die. And they informed those in the homes of as many as had gone to take captives in war that they had received honors there because of their valor. And they were rewarded according to their merits; the ruler accorded favors to all—costly capes, breech clouts, chocolate, food, and devices, and lip rods and ear plugs. Even more did the ruler accord favors to the princes if they had taken captives. He gave them the offices of stewards, and all wealth without price—honor, fame, renown.

And if some had done wrong in battle, they then and there slew them on the battlefield; they beat them, they stoned them.

And if several claimed one captive, and one man said, "He is my captive," and another man also said, "He is my captive": if no man verified it, and also if no one saw how they had taken the captive, the lord of the sun decided between them. If neither had an advantage of the two who claimed the captive, then those who had taken four captives, the masters of the captives, decided that to neither one would the captive belong. He was dedicated to the Uitzcalco[4] [or] they left him to the tribal temple, the house of the devil.

And when the city which they had destroyed was attained, at once was set the tribute, the impost. [To the ruler who had conquered them] they gave that ponjz: injc tlequauhtlaça tlamacazque: ioã in tlapitzalli in tecuciztli, in oquipitzque tlamacazque: 726 ioan in ocuepon tletl, njman ic cemeoa, in jxqujch iauquizquj, motempupauja, mjcali, qujtlemjna in teucalli.

Auh in achto in caçi malli in maliacatl, çan njman vncan, imjxpan qujmjctiã, in tetetu, tecpatica queltetequjj.

Auh in jcoac ompoliuh altepetl, njmã ic ic nemalpoalo, in quexqujch malli: ioan in quexqujch omjc mexicatl, in tlatilulcatl, njman muchi qujcaqujtia in tlatoanj, injc tepal oicnopiltic vitzilobuchtli injc otlamaloc, ioan omjcoac: auh in tlatoanj njman qujnnaoatia, in tecutlatoque: injc qujtemachtitiuj, injc qujtecaqujtititiuj, in jnchan in jxqujnti, oiaumjqujto, injc choqujlilozque in jnchachan, in oiaumjqujto: ioan qujtecaqujtia in jnchan, in quezquj otlamato iauc, ic vncan qujcujia in maujziotl, in jpampa oqujchiotl: ioan qujmomaceujaia in jxqujch iteicneliaia in tlatoanj, in tlaçotilmatli, in maxtlatl, in atl, tlaqualli, ioan tlaujztli, ioan teçacatl, nacochtli: oc cenca qujmjcneliaia in tlaçopipilti, in tlatoanj intla otlamato, qujmaca calpixcantli: ioan in jxqujch tlaçotli necujltonolli, in maujziotl, in tleiotl, in teiotl. 727 [555]

Auh intla acame qujtlacoa iauiotl, njman vmpa qujnmjctia in iauc qujnviujtequj, qujntetepachoa. 687

Auh intla acame, qujmocujcujlia ce malli, qujtoa ce tlacatl, ca nomal, in oc ce tlacatl no qujtoa ca nomal: intlacamo ce tlacatl itech nelti, aiac no qujmjttac, in quenjn tlamaque: ichoantin qujntlatzontequjlia, in tonatiuh itlatocahoan: aiac tle onquiça in jmomextin in qujmocujcujlia in malli: iuh qujtzontequj, in quauhtlatoque, in mallatoque, aiac ce itech pouhquj iez in malli: vitzcalli qujpoaia, calpolco qujcaoaia, in jchan tlacateculotl. 727

Auh in jcoac oaxioac altepetl in ovmpoliuh, njman icoac motlalia, in tequjtl, in tlacalaqujlli itech mana in tlein vmpa muchioa, auh njman no iquac iaque- 728 651

4. Cf. ibid., pp. 331-332, referring to the heroic of Cuauhtli, where down bought and died in succlaer: "Este era en el patio del templo que se dice Uitzcalco."

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 numbers.[78] They in turn subdivided into squads of from two to 619 four hundred warriors each,[79] being, in all probability, the able-701 bodied males (priests excepted in many cases) of one particular "kin."[80] These lesser bodies had each their own peculiar "livery,"[81] they carried their own emblem, visible, like a banner, "high above the troop," and finally they disaggregated into fractions of about twenty men.[82] On the eve of an engagement a further sub-division, into groups of four to six, took place, as we shall hereafter see.

701 Having thus sketched, as far as we can, the division or arrange- 555 ment of the Mexican forces, we have yet to investigate how, and by whom, the warriors of the tribe were commanded, how those leaders obtained their offices, and what was the order of their rank and dignity. But here we must premise: that no office whatever, many small ones, according to the number of idols, which they called Calpulteona" (should be "Calpulteotzin"). But their division into at least seven such "barrios," or kindred groups, existed already before this event (Tezozomoc, Cap. I, p. 6. Durán, Cap. III, p. 20). "Rapport sur les differentes classes de Chefs de la Nouvelle-Espagne," par Alonzo de Zurita, French translation by Mr. Ternaux-compans. This important authority, among other statements, makes the striking remark: "Finally, what is called "in New-Spain a calpulli corresponds to what the Jews called a tribe" (p. 53).

[78] Tezozomoc (Cap. XCI, p. 161). When, under the last Montezuma, the fight against Huexotzinco was begun "Cuauhnoctli took charge to assemble together the four lead-"ers of the four quarters for that the arms might be held in readiness."

[79] Anonymous Conqueror (p. 371). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXIV).

[80] These bodies of two to four hundred men are those mentioned by Durán (Cap. XIX, p. 169) as "cuadrillas," "escadrones," carrying each the "emblem" ("bandera") of its "quarter" ("barrio"). In this case he refers to the "minor quarters." See note No. 82, below.

[81] "Anonymous Conqueror;" also, Bernal-Diez, quoted in text, above.

[82] Anon. Conqueror (p. 371), "ha ogni compagnia il suo Alfiere con la sua insigna "inhastata, en tal modo ligata sopra le spalle, che non gli da alcun distorbo di poter "combattere ni far cioche vuole, y la porta cosi ligata bene al corpo, che se non fanno "del suo corpo pezzi, non se gli puo sligare, ne torglielamai." Clavigero says (Cap. XXIV, lib. VII): "The banners were more like the "signi" of the Romans than our "flags." The following paragraph of Durán makes it plain that they represented the token of each original body of kindred: "After having eaten, the captains said to their "people: behold, men, that being intermingled with the enemy, some of you might "lose sight of his squadron, therefore Tlacaelel ordains that of each quarter there shall "be an emblem, carried high above the troop, with the arms of such quarter on it, and "that all shall be careful to rally around that banner and flag, and that, besides, they "should call out the names of their respective quarter, so as to be known" (Cap. XIX, p. 169). We have ample descriptions of the emblems of the four quarters of Tlaxcallan, but none of those of Mexico. It is doubtful if there was a national emblem, or central ensign. The statement, that the capture of that central "emblem" decided the fate of the battle, is also very doubtful, notwithstanding Bernal-Diez' pompous description of the fight near Otumpan. See hereafter. It may not be devoid of interest to note here that the Mexican sign for the number twenty (20,—"pohualli") was a flag. Still, the name for the latter was "quachpanitl," from "quachtli," mantle, and "pani," above.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

no kind of dignity, was, among the Mexicans, transmissible by in- 701 heritance. Merit alone, on the battlefield, could promote to the rank 555 of war-chief, by inducing and influencing the elections held for that purpose.[83] The civil-chief ("Tecuhtli," from "Tecul," grandfa- 565 ther) secured his office through rigorous religious observances and 643
age.[84] There was no nobility of any kind at Mexico, the chief being chief only as long as he was by his constituents deemed worthy of that position.[85]

Above the common warrior ("yaoquizqui") there were two 701 classes of superiors: the distinguished braves, and the war-chiefs proper.

Of the distinguished and meritorious braves, which had not, however, attained the chieftainship, we know three different kinds: the "fierce cutters," or "beasts of prey" ("Tequihua"), the "strong eagles," or "old eagles" ("Cuachic," or "Cuachimec"), and the "wandering arrows" ("Otomitl").[86] These titles were 701 merely honorific, and could be obtained exclusively through the 554 capture, in actual combat, of one or more prisoners. In token of these dignities the hair of the head was cropped closely over the ear; they wore, chiefly, but not exclusively, the masks or helmets

[83] Anonymous Conqueror (p. 371) "They used to reward highly those who distin-"guished themselves in war by any valorous action, for even if he was the vilest slave, "they made him captain and lord, and gave to him slaves, and esteemed him so much, "that wherever he went they attended to him and paid him such regards as if he had "been the chief himself."

[84] Mendieta (Lib. II, caps. XXXVIII and XXXIX). Ternaux-Compans ("Recueil de "Pièces, etc.," "Des cérémonies observées antrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient "un tecle." Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," p. 47). "The chiefs who, as we have said, were "called Tec Tecutzcin, or Teutley, held their office only during life-time." (p. 49.) "If "one of them died, the prince gave the office to one who had proven himself worthy of "it, for the sons of the deceased did not inherit of his dignity, unless they had been "invested with it."

[85] See, further on, the case of the last Monteruma.

[86] These definitions we give for what they may be worth, without in the least insisting upon their absolute correctness. "Tequihua" may derive from "nitla-tequi," to cut, or from "tequani," wild beast. "Cuachic," from "quauhtli," eagle, and "chicactic," an old man, or a strong object, or, also (though this is hardly probable), "chimalli," shield. "Otomitl" probably derives from "N. otoca," to travel, and "mitl," arrow. But this was also the name given to the "Otomies," a well-known savage tribe, expert hunters, found scattered over Mexico, among or around the sedentary Indians. It looks strange for the Mexicans to give to one of their meritorious braves the title of a wandering horde, far below the Mexicans in culture. But the Otomies were good hunters, skilled in the use of the bow, and it is therefore likely that they were named thus by the Mexicans themselves, and that their name is not, as Mr. Brasseur de Bourbourg intimates, derived from a supposed god, "Odon," or "Oton" ("Popol Vuh," Introd., pp. 76 and 110). The Otomi word for God was "Oqhá," their word for man, "na nyéké" ("Grammatica ragionata della Lingua Otomi," of Count Piccolomini, Rome, 1841, after Neve y Molina).

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 554 imitating wild animals' heads, and sometimes even the skins of those animals.[87] Their post was in the van of the army, as scouts and skirmishers, but they also acted as leaders of smaller bodies, like four to twenty men, and even larger subdivisions, at the option of their superiors.[88]

701 555 Neither of the above three grades could be obtained through appointment or election; every warrior became entitled, as soon as he had accomplished certain feats in war, to one or the other thereof.[89]

[87] Tezozomoc (Cap. XCVI, p. 171). After the successful raid of the Mexicans against Tuctepec (under the last Montezuma) it was found that 260 of the "tequihua" had made prisoners, and that an equal number were made "tequihua." "Anonymous Conqueror" (p. 373.) "To him who thus distinguished himself they made a mark, by a "peculiar cut of the hair, that he might be known for his deeds, and that everybody "might see it, since they did not accustom to wear the head covered. Every time that "he accomplished another notable action they put another similar mark on him . . ." See also Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. V, p. 543). Durán (Cap. XIX, p. 109) is very positive, too. Clavigero (Lib. XII. cap. XXIII). "The commanders . . . . the head "was inserted in a wooden head of a tiger or of a snake, its mouth wide open, and "with large teeth, to appear more frightful."

[88] Durán (Cap. XXXVII, p. 289). " . . . . Aviendo puesto en delantera todos "los soldados viejos y señores y capitanes y todos aquellos que ellos llamaban Cua-"chic, que eran una órden de caballeria que no auia de voluer piè atras ó morir . . " . ." Tezozomoc says of the "Otomies, Cuachi, and Tequihuaques . . . . being "always leaders" ("siendo siempre delanteros." Cap. XXXVIII, p. 60, also, cap. LVII, p. 97). The same author (Cap. XXXVIII, p. 61, and cap. LI, p. 83) affirms that they had to care for the freshmen or young braves (Id., Cap. LXXI, p. 121). The same (Cap. LI, p. 83) says: " . . . . and you will, as it is customary, place to every five youths "a Cuachic, to five others an Otomi, then again an Achcauhtli, and a Tequihua; all "conquerors." This was done immediately before the opening of the engagement. The "Otomitl" is also called by Tezozomoc a "general" occasionally, but this merely shows that, at the option of the war-chiefs, one or the other of the above warriors of merit might be placed at the head of a larger body of men, though he was always considered as of a lower rank. Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. VI, p. 264). "El hombre ò varon "fuerte llamado Coachic, tiene estas propiedades; es el amparo y muralla de los suyos "etc., etc." Torquemada (Lib. IV, cap. XCIX, p. 503) calls the "Quachicque" bullies ("matasiete").

[89] By this we wish to say that neither personal favor nor other prominent qualities could procure the titles which we now regard, to any one who had not distinguished himself in war. The titles were conferred immediately after the engagement, or after the return to Mexico. Who conferred them, and what ceremonies, aside from the hair-cutting mentioned, accompanied the act, we are unable to say. The Mexicans were [685] extremely careful to allow each man the prisoner he had taken, and the "penalty for "abstracting a captive to his rightful conqueror was death." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, p. 132). "El que llevaba algun prisionero, si otro se lo hurtaba de dia ò de "noche, ò tomaba por fuerza, por el mismo caso moria como cosario ladron que se "adjudicaba y quexia para si el precio y la honra del otro." The reason for this vigorous chastisement was, not only because the original captor lost thereby his object of sacrifice to the gods, but really more because the thief stole away his rank and title.

Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXVI. p. 434). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXI). Both mention three "military orders," "orders of chivalry." The latter calls them "achcautin," "quauhtin," and "ococelo," translating these terms by "princes," "eagles," and "tigers," respectively. Acosta is not so far from the truth when he asserts that each of

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

The war-chiefs proper furnished the higher commanders of the 701 Mexicans. We meet with three classes thereof in ascending or- 565 ders. The chiefs of kindred, or captains; also chief of the "minor quarters." The chiefs of the great subdivisions (principal quarters); also mentioned as "captain-generals." The head war-chief of the tribe, or so-called "king." All these chiefs were elected, and their office was not transmissible by inheritance.[90]

The captains, "commanders of the quarters,"[91] teachers of the 701 young "men,"[92] properly called "elder brothers"[93] ("teachcauh- 702 tin," or "achcacauhtin," and "tiacanes," by corruption), commanded the subdivisions of two to four hundred men each, com-these subdivisions had its peculiar place of sitting in the official house, or "tecpan" (the "palace" of the older sources. Tecpan derives from "tecuhtli," chief, and "pan," affixum denoting a place), since, at a general council of the tribe (of which this may be an indication), the different grades of warriors would naturally cluster together. But the names given to these three "orders" are erroneous. "Achcauhtin" (which, as we shall see, never meant princes, for which the Mexicans had no adequate word) was the title of a class of war-chiefs only. "Quauhtin" is the "Cuachic," "ocelotl" evidently the "tequihua." But the last two titles were never used for the higher grades of warriors except in a general way; "quauhtin-ocelotl" designated the valorous braves in general (Torquemada, Lib. XI, cap. XXIX, p. 362; lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 537), and corresponds to the "daring eagles, tigers, and lions," as Tezozomoc often calls the three grades now under discussion.

Torquemada, who, notwithstanding his unquestionable credulity, is extremely important on all questions of Mexican antiquities, says (Lib. XIV, cap. V, p. 543): "Los Capitanes tenian por insignia de honra una labor, etc., etc., ... guarnecidas, con "pinturas, e' insignias, conforme cada uno havia mostrado el valor, y valentia en las "guerras, en que se havia hallado, porque no sacaba otra cosa del peligro de ellas; y "asi como cosa ganada, por sus proprias personas, las estimaban en mucho." Every [555] one had to gain his own rank, merit his own title.

[90] All these offices were elective, and we shall endeavor to prove it in each particular case.

[91] Ternaux-Compans ("Recueil de pieces relatives à la conquête du Mexique." Anonymous MSS. from the Uguina collection, headed "De l'ordre de succession observé "par les Indiens relativement a leurs terres et de leurs territoires communaux," p. 225) says: "Les tribunaux de ces officiers étaient établis dans la capitale." Clavigero calls them "princes." Torquemada: "captain of the guards." Sahagun: "old men." Mendieta, even: "chief abbott." This very confusion shows that neither of them paid much attention to the subject, since Sahagun also calls the "tiacauh" (which is the same as "achcacauhtin") "el hombre valiente" (Lib. IX, cap. VI, p. 263), and Torquemada the "achcauhtli," "alguacil maior." Tezozomoc alone is consistent with himself, in mentioning the "achcacauhtin," frequently, as leaders in the fight, commanding the three grades of distinguished braves (Cap. XXXVIII). He is confirmed by Molina (I, p. 25), who translates "teachcauhtin" as "capitan de gente." Tezozomoc further calls them; "principals, masters at arms, and of doctrine and example" (Cap. XXXVIII, p. 61), "chiefs of the quarters, masters of the youth" (Cap. LVII).

[92] Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVIII and cap. LVII).

[93] Molina (II, p. 113), "tiachcauh,"—"hermano mayor, y persona, o cosa aventajada, "mayor, y mas excelente que otra." Zurita ("Rapport," p. 60) calls the "chiefs of the calpullis" major parents ("pariente mayor"). This corresponds with the definition of Molina.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

701 formation regarding the title of the principal war-chief of Tlatilulco, the names given occasionally being personal.[102]

701 The distinctive mark of these chieftains consisted in having the 554 hair tied behind or above the occiput with a strap of red leather;

"by few only." "Cuanhnoctli," therefore, being "Chachi," or "Quachictin," whereas "Tillancalqui" is but a civil or religious chief, as it is furthermore shown by his being sent as a delegate to Cortés, to the coast (Tezozomoc, Cap. CVII, p. 191). I have ventured to substitute the former as one of the four war-chiefs, each commanding the warriors of one of the four great quarters of Mexico. It may be objected that, aside from Tezozomoc, I have not adduced any other direct proof of the actual existence of these four chieftains. I have already alluded to the probable reason why they are not mentioned as such by the sources of Mexican aboriginal history. Their true position, the nature of their office was simply overlooked. But we know that the tribe of Mexico had divided into four quarters; we know, further, that not only in Mexico, but all over Central America, this same division existed, for civil as well as for military purposes. Each of these four great sections must have had, therefore, its civil, and its military head, and it is but natural to admit, that those heads were the most distinguished warriors of the tribe, since merit, and not descendancy or wealth, entitled alone to promotion in rank and office. Therefore the military chiefs of the four quarters must have been the four "chachi" of Mexico. On the other hand, those four dignities were each elective, and not filled by appointment. But, for an election, there must be electors, and a constituency. We know that the "captains were elected (by the kin which they should "command)", and it is but logical to admit that the four greatest military chiefs of the tribe were elected to command its four greatest subdivisions. Therefore, again, the "chachi" of Tezozomoc must have been the military chiefs of the four quarters of Mexico. Besides, we may ask: Why four chiefs, and not any other number? if not that these four principal chieftains corresponded to, and actually represented, a like number of greatest fractions of the whole tribe.

[555]

If the older authors observe a certain uniformity in their enumeration of these four chiefs, always beginning with the "Tlacochcalcatl," we must not infer from it that one or the other of the four was inferior or superior to the others. They were all alike in rank, although Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXI) places the "Tlacochcalcatl" above the others. The very confusion among some of the statements shows that no reliance can be placed upon their assertions in that respect. (Compare, for inst.: Torquemada, Lib. II, cap. LXII, p. 185, with cap. LXV, p. 189, and lib. IV, cap. 13, p. 379.) It results from all these statements, but especially from the positive and consistent assertions of Tezozomoc, that while the four were equal in rank, it still sometimes happened that one or the other, from age or experience, took the superior command according to emergency. Their influence was even decisive, sometimes, with the head war-chief of Mexico himself. See the part played by "Tlacochcalcatl" in the attack upon Tlatilulco (Tezozomoc, Cap. XLV, p. 73), and the resolute action of "Tlacateccatl," in the battle against the Tarasca of Michhuacan, which occurred in 1477, when he compelled Axayaca to retreat before the victorious enemy (Tezozomoc, Cap. LII, p. 84). Also, the assertion of Acosta (Lib. VI, cap. XXV), "without whose consent he could do nothing."

[554]

[102] "Itzquanhtin" is mentioned by Torquemada (Vol. IV). This would be "eagle of obsidian," or "flint-eagle." We must always distinguish personal names from titles. In most cases only the latter were given, and the presumption therefore arises that the title took the place of the name. Says my friend Sr. J. M. Melgar y Serrano, of Vera Cruz: "Creo deber aconsejar a V no tome como nombres de las personas muchas "de las palabras con que estaban designadas, pues eran el que se los daban el titulo "del cargo que tenian." (Letter under date of 26 January, 1875.)

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 Besides, it is distinctly implied, if not stated,
[555] that for actions of merit such people might be re-adopted, and thus restored to their original rights. The anonymous conqueror asserts that the performer of any valorous deed was highly rewarded and made a chieftain, "even if he was the vilest slave."[91] But without such formal re-adoption, no outcast could emerge from his inferior and unprotected condition. The overwhelming majority of Mexico's aboriginal people, however, consisted of members of the twenty kins shown to have composed the tribe. These all enjoyed equal rights; consequently all had the same duty. Both right and obligation were governed by the organization of kinship. While it is impossible for us to follow here strictly the order of enumeration of these rights and obligations, established in the admirable researches of Mr. Morgan, we still can distinctly trace all of them in ancient Mexican society, operating with more or less unimpaired vitality.

[618] The kin claimed the right to name its members.[92] A family name
553 was unknown to the ancient Mexicans,[93] and thus our assertion that the modern family was not yet established among them, acquires further support. Within a few days after the child's birth, its mother in presence of all the neighbors (consequently of the "calpulli" or kin) gave the child a name through the medium of the women assisting her delivery. This name, generally taken from that of the day of birth, had a superstitious bearing, and was to accompany the child during the period of its utter helplessness.[94] A second "naming" took place several

[91] "Relatione di alcune Cose della Nuova Spagna" (Col. de Doc., I, p. 371). Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XVII, p. 566): "y Esclavos havia que regian, y mandaban la casa de su Señor, como hacen los Malordomos."

[92] Morgan ("Ancient Society," pp. 71 and 78).

[93] Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37): "Todos los Niños cuando nacian tomaban nombre del dia en que nacian." Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXII, pp. 454 and 455). The family name was introduced by the Spaniards, who gave other names at the time of baptism.

[94] Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. V, p. 37). Sahagun (Lib. IV, cap. I, pp. 283 and 284, in general the entire fourth Book, which gives a very full idea of all the superstitions connected with birthdays; more especially Cap. XXXV and XXXVI and Lib. VI, cap. XXXVII, pp. 217-221). All the children of the quarter were invited to the festival: "En este tiempo que estas cosas se hacian, juntabanse los mosuelos de todo aquel barrio, y acabadas todas estas ceremonias, entran en la casa del y toman la comida que alli les tenian aparejada. . . . . ." The naming took place in presence of "todos los parientes y parientos del niño, viejos y viejas" (p. 218). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XIX, p. 107): "Estos hombres tomaban de los idolos ó de las fiestas que en aquellas signos caian, y á veces de aves y animales y de otras cosas insensatas, como se les antojaba." (Lib. XIII, cap. XXXV, p. 267). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XX, p. 450: "Luego hacian convocacion de todos los Deudos, y Parientes, de los Padres, y de todos los Amigos, y

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

618 It was not necessary to become a chief in order to fill certain offices. Still it is evident that, as chiefs were always men of peculiar ability, the higher charges were generally filled by chieftains.

618 554 555 The title and rank of "grandfather" ("Tecuhtli,")[167] which was the Mexican term for chieftain in general, was open to any one who strove to deserve it. It was conferred:

1. In recompense for warlike prowess, and actions of personal intrepidity and superior shrewdness. Courage alone could not secure it; therefore the "distinguished braves" were not always chiefs.[168]

2. In reward for actions denoting particular wisdom and sagacity, and in acknowledgement of services in the councils, or as traders.[169]

sonal merit, and died with the individual." I have selected the term "officer" as a substitute for Mr. Morgan's "sachem," because the latter is a northern Indian word, whereas the former, while it expresses the nature of the charge and dignity, is more widely known, and therefore better understood. It is out of the union of the attributes, of both officer and chief, that nobility and monarchy have been claimed to exist. Among the Mexicans, in fact among the most highly advanced Indian tribes (the Inca of Peru not excluded), the dignity of chief was still a personal matter, and not necessarily connected with office. The chiefs are the "knights," mentioned by Garcilasso de la Vega ("Histoire des Yncas," Lib. VI, cap. XXIV, XXV, XXVI) and Herrera (Dec. V, Lib. IV, cap. VII, p. 63; Lib. IV, cap. I, p. 65). With the Muyscas of Bogotá, compare H. Ternaux-Compans ("L'ancien Cundinamarca." § XXVII, pp. 57 and 58). Oviedo y Valdés (Lib. XXVI, cap. XXXI. p. 410). Herrera (Dec. VI, Lib. V, cap. VI, pp 116 and 117). Compare also, in regard to the dignity of "military chief" among the wild tribes of the Rio Orinoco and of its tributaries, P. José Gumilla "Histoire naturelle, civile, et géographique de l'Orinoque," translated by Mr. Eidous, 1758, (Vol. II, chapter XXXV, pp. 290-298). Very important.

[167] Molina (IIa p. 96), "abuelo," "tecul." It evidently should be "abuelo," and is therefore only a misprint. The older reports have the word "tecis," and only the later writers (those after the year 1580) begin to write it "tecutli," "tecuhtli," "teuctli." Whether the "teules" meant really "gods," or rather "tecuhtlin," as plural of "tecutli," is yet doubtful. It is almost a truism to recall here the Roman "senex," and the German "grave" or "Graf." Among American tribes we have, in QQuiché, "aua," old, "ahau,"—chief; in Maya, "Hachyum,"—father, and "ahau,"—chief—also "achi,"—brave.

[168] Sahagun (Lib. VIII, cap. XXXVIII, pp. 329-333): "De Los grados por donde subian hasta hacerse Tequitlatos," especially (p. 331): "y á los que por si prendian cuatro cautivas, mandaba el rey que los cortasen los cabellos como á capitan, llamalbanle tal diciendo . . . . el capitan mexicati. ó el capitan tolnacacati, ú otros nombres que cuadraban á los capitanes. De alli adelante se podian sentar en los estradios que ellos usaban de petates é icpales en la sala donde se sentaban los otros capitanes y Valientes hombres, los cuales son primeros y principales en los asuntos, y tienen barbotes largos, orejeras de cuero, y borlas en las cabezas conque están compuestas;" Zurita ("Rapport," p. 47): "Les chefs qui, comme nous l'avons dit, se nommaient Tec Tecutacin, ou Teutley au pluriel, n'exerçaient le commandement qu'à vie, parce que les souverains suprêmes ne les élevaient à ces dignités qu'en récompense des exploits qu'ils avaient faits à la guerre, et des services rendus à l'état ou au prince"). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXVIII, p. 156). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXIX, p. 361). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XIII, pp. 471 and 472), and others.

[169] Zurita ("Rapport," p. 47). Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. II, p, 341): "Estos mercaderes

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

In both the above instances (or kinds of instances) actions of 618 particular merit facilitated, at least, the acquisition of the title; 554 555 but it could, also, be obtained:—

3. By the observance of rigorous and even cruel rites of "medi- 555 cine" for a stated time, which put the courage, fortitude, and self- 785 control of the candidate to the severest tests.[179] Although a 618 detailed account of these rites might perhaps be withheld for a subsequent sketch of ancient Mexican worship, yet they equally deserve a place here.

The candidate appears to have been presented at the great central place of worship by the representatives of his kin, perhaps, also, by the other chiefs of his tribe. There he underwent four days and four nights of the most cruel torments. While but little nourishment was allowed him (some went even so far as not to eat anything at all during this time), his blood was drawn freely, and no sleep was permitted to settle on his weary eyes. From time to time he was exposed to taunts, to injurious words, to blows and even to stripes. While he was thus hungry and thirsty, weakened from loss of blood through self-sacrifice, others ate and drank plentifully before his eyes. Finally, his clothes were torn from his body, and with nothing on but the breech-cloth or diaper, he was at last left alone at the "calmecac," there to do the rest of his penance. When these four initiatory days were past, the candidate went back to his calpulli, to spend the remainder of the time (about a full year), in retirement, and abstinence, frequently attended with more or less self-inflicted bodily suffering. When the kin had secured the necessary amount of articles to be offered up in worship, or given to the medicine-men, officers, chiefs, and guests attending the installation, this final solemnity was allowed to take place, provided always that the courage and personal strength of the novice had not forsaken him. Another period of fasting, sacrifice, and torture, similar to the one at the opening of the career of preparation, closed the probation. Some of the ordeals were again of the most trying nature. Finally the store of gifts was distributed; eating and drinking alternated with era ya como caballeros, y tenian divisas particulares por sus hazañas." . . . Fray Alonso de Montufar ("Supplique," etc., 30 Nov., 1554. "Troisième relation d'Ixtlilxochitl," Appendix, p. 257). "Des Cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient un Tecle," (1st "Recueil," p. 222). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXVIII, p. 156).

[179] Gomara ("Conquista," Vedia I, p. 478). "Des Cérémonies observées," etc. (pp. 222, etc.). Mendieta (p. 156). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXIX and XXX, etc.).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

555 solemn dances to the monotonous rythmic noise called Indian music.
785 The candidate was, at last, once more dressed in becoming apparel,
618 and could recuperate, being himself now the "feasted one."[171]

618 Men, however young in years, who had successfully endured such 554 great trials, certainly deserved to be looked upon thereafter as persons of uncommon fortitude. Hence indeed the chiefs or "tecuhtli" were particularly fitted for responsible offices of any kind. They were looked upon with deference, their voice was heard and listened to, and it is no wonder if higher charges, especially those of a military nature, were filled by such as had, in one way or another, achieved this distinction.[172] But no privilege was connected with their dignity, except that of wearing certain peculiar ornaments, and none was transmitted through them to their descendants.[173] That the "tecuhtli," besides, did

[171] For the above description of the formalities of creating a "Tecuhtli," I refer to the sources quoted in the preceding three notes. It is interesting to compare similar ceremonies used by the Indians of the Orinoco, Gumilla ("Histoire," etc., Vol. II, cap. XXXV). Of the Yncas, Garcilasso de la Vega (Lib. VI, cap. XXIV to XXVI). Cristoval de Molina ("An account of the Fables and Rites of the Yncas," translated by C. R. Markham, in Hackluyt Society's Volume of 1873). "Narratives of the Rites and Laws of the Yncas." Herrera (Dec. V, lib. III, cap. VII, p. 62, etc.). We are forcibly reminded of the words of the quaint old poet and soldier, Alonso de Ercilla.

"Los cargos de la Guerra, y prehominencia
No son por flacos medios proveidos,
Ni vàn por calidad, ni por herencia,
Ni por hacienda, i ser mejor nacidos;
Más la virtud del brazo, y la excelencia,
Esta hace á los hombres preferidos,
Esta ilustra, habilita, perficiona,
Y quilata el valor de la persona."

("La Araucana." Parte Ia, Canto I°. Edition of 1733, p. 9).

[172] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXIX, p. 161: "Los que tenian el dilado de Tecutli, tenian muchas preeminencias, y entre ellas era que en los concilios y ayuntamientos sus votos eran principales." Gomara ("Conquista" Vedia I, p. 436). Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXX, p. 366). It should always be remembered, that the dignity of Tecuhtli appears most prominent in Tlaxcallan. This people however, was but a league, very similar to that of the northern Iroquois, only consisting of four, instead of six tribes. Among them, the peculiar nature of the dignity of chief became more evident than it was among the Mexicans to the Spaniards. But there is no difference between the "Tecuhtli" of Tlaxcallan, and the "Tecuhtli" of Mexico or Tezcuco. That the head-chiefs of Mexico were always "Tecuhtli" themselves, previous to their election, needs hardly any proof. Domingo Munoz Camargo ("Histoire de la République de Tlaxcallan." Translation by Mr. Ternaux-Compans, in Vol. 98 and 99 of "Nouvelles Annales des Voyages," 1843. See Vol. 98, p. 176, etc.)

[173] About the privileges of the Tecuhtli, compare Gomara ("Conquista" Vedia I, p. 436), Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXXIX, p. 161), Torquemada (Lib. XI, cap. XXX, p. 366), Zurita (p. 48, etc.). It is evident however, that the latter confounds the rank of chief with the particular office which might have been entrusted to him, else the "cultivation of lands" could not be included in the list of advantages derived from the position. Compare "Tenure of Lands," Bustamante ("Tezcoco," etc., p. 235). Sr. Bustamante frequently copies Zurita. Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 125). In regard to the non-heredity of the dignity, I refer to the above authorities, and more especially to A. de Zurita ("Rapport," p. 49: "Lorsqu'un de ces chefs mourait, le prince accordait

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

562 alliance. Moreover, marriages were carefully arranged be-
[584] tween families, so that for a husband grossly to neglect his wife's rights was a breach, if not of etiquette, certainly of [793] social contract. The priesthood may have offered a modest field of influence and attainment to women. However, history records no mention of any advantage deriving from temple service.

554 Men had the chief opportunities, and these lay in various 555 directions. The early chroniclers, conditioned by their mediæval Spanish background, spoke of hereditary classes. In all probability, judging from Indian communities as a whole, there was rank but not class in the hereditary sense. As in our own society, a man could attain high rank through his own efforts, and through his eminence his children would consequently profit in their own social adjustment. Yet they could not reach their father's position unless they earned it through
[556] equivalent tribal service. Wealth did exist, and property in the form of rights to use land, tools and other possessions
[642 421] created a social and economic stratification. In theory and practice Aztec society was democratic, and the communal ownership of productive property was its economic base.[4]

555 A man attained rank through the measure of his tribal service. The wise farmer, the wily hunter, the brave warrior or the dexterous artisan gained admiration from his fellows because of superior skill. If his wisdom and judgment were conspicuous he might be elected as the clan representative to the tribal council, or even as chief. Similarly an individual who dedicated himself to learning the magic rituals to placate the gods, could become a medicine man or priest. However, in the populous and advanced city-states activities tended to become specialized, and greater opportunity led to a more

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

tions. The original inventors and innovators are lost in the 249
black obscurity of American history, but the fruit of their ingenuity plays an important part in our modern economy.

As opposed to this wealth of plants, the Aztecs were poor 231 in domesticated animals. They had several varieties of dog, one of which was bred for food, but they never used this [492] animal for transport as did Indians of our Northern plains. The turkey was their chief domesticated fowl, although [235]
there is some evidence that they bred geese, ducks and quail also. In plantations of the nopal cactus they carefully tended [237] the cochineal bug for the rich crimson dye it yielded when crushed. A second insect, the maguey slug, still retains its 262 place as a delicacy of the Mexican table, served with another typically Aztec dish, guacamole,* a thick mixture of tomato, alligator pear and chile.

Hunting, when possible, produced food, but as early as 224
Upper Middle Culture times the deer were nearly all killed 222 off. The seasonal migrations of the birds, which still visit 226
the lakes of Mexico, offered a profusion of geese, ducks and 223
other wild fowl. Small fish, netted or speared with a trident, were sometimes consumed, and the eggs which a certain fly lays on the lakes were made into a paste still eaten in Mexican communities. The high functionaries, since they were 262 supported by the community, kept a much better table than 556
the poor, who lived meagerly off the produce of their own fields; the daily repast of Montezuma was described by the Spanish conquerors as the height of Lucullan luxury.[18]

Tools showed relatively little variation from Middle Cul- 412
ture to Aztec times. The coa, or digging stick, was the chief farming instrument, and the metate and mano even now re-

*Wah-ca-mo'-lay.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

CHAPTER VIII

CRAFTSMANSHIP

A consideration of how the Aztecs attained a high degree of skillful craftsmanship with relatively few mechanical aids

CRAFTSMANSHIP allows an exercise of the creative impulse, |8| satisfying the individual through his domination of the raw material. In our modern mechanized age most of us suffer from the lack of opportunity to create, since almost everything we use comes machine-made, and not even the skilled mechanic feels that his ingenuity and craftsmanship alone have produced a useful and attractive object. The ordinary modern floats like Mohammed's coffin, without contact with the earth on which he lives or the universe of which he is an infinitesimal part. The Aztec, however, lived in the most intimate contact with nature in its finite and infinite manifestations. Because his conscious being was set in terms of the group mind, he seldom felt that sensation, common to the Western intellect, of having cut himself from the tree of natural existence with the saw of his own reason.

The home production of articles for daily use gave an 556 impetus to craftsmanship, since wealth and prosperity lay 555 in a man's possessions, not in the abstract ownership of rights to the work of others. Thus a successful man had a well-made house, finely fashioned and decorative clothing, care-

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

556 555 fully worked utensils and tools and well-tended and productive fields, while an unsuccessful man had a small and miserable equipment. Yet except for the intervention of natural disaster the differential was largely due to the ability of a man and his household to produce with their own hands the symbols of his wealth or to exchange his specialized product for equivalent superior equipment made by others. The entrepreneur and broker had small place in the undertaking of production and its distribution.[1]

771 The gods also stimulated good craftsmanship. Every home had an altar, and every act was accomplished through the favor of some deity. Ceremonies to appease these custodians of natural force were of frequent occurrence. Thus the use of symbols, referring to the god whose favor was sought, came to exercise an important influence on design. Since a man does reverence with his most esteemed social attitudes and his best material possessions, each household must try to surpass its previous efforts to honor the gods. The temple equipment, therefore, tended to represent the cream of local craftsmanship.

324 Work in stone, the most durable natural substance available, is a common gauge of human ability. Since the tools last forever, it is possible to compare the technical abilities of peoples over an enormous span of human history. However, for basic equipment like projectile points, axes, grinding stones, and the like, satisfactory forms are reached fairly early and do not change in proportion to cultural advances in other directions. Thus the arrow or the dart points of Aztec times were not technically better than those used by the Middle Culture peoples. However, the technical demands of the sacrificial cult called for a heavy broad-bladed flint

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

463 compelled him to do it.[70] It is true, that such as formed gold or silver into pleasing or (as viewed from eastern notions of taste) rather striking shapes, enjoyed some particular consideration; but this was not so much in deference to their skill, as to the material upon which they exerted it. Gold ("teo-cuitlatl") and silver ("Iztac-teo-cuitlatl") were regarded as "offal of gods." Thus they became objects of "medicine," and those who wrought them into useful or decorative articles, were near to the "medicine-men" themselves.[71] Furthermore, the manner and method of working was so slow, it relied so exclusively upon that patient [556] disregard of time which characterizes even the manufacture of a simple arrowhead, that no accumulation of wealth could result from it.[72] Besides, the artisan had, like any other member of the kin, to furnish his share towards the requirements of public

[70] Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," p. 129). "Les chefs inférieurs et les personnes du peuple élevaient aussi leurs enfants avec beaucoup de soin, leur inspiraient l'horreur du vice, leur recommandaient le respect des dieux, les conduisaient aux temples et les faisaient travailler suivant leurs dispositions; cependant, en général, le fils embrassait la profession de son père." Gomara ("Conquista, etc.," Vedia, Vol. I, p. 438). "Los pobres enseñaban á sus hijos sus oficios, no porque no tuviesen libertad para mostralles otro, sino porque los aprendiesen sin gastar con ellos." Carlos María de Bustamante. Tezcoco en los últimos Tiempos de sus antiguos Reyes," 1826. Parte tercera. (Cap. III, p. 212). "Enseñaban ademas los oficios á que tenian aficion." Clavigero (Lib. VII, [564] cap. V, p. 482). "The sons generally learned the trade of their fathers," but they were not bound to do it, and therefore no "caste."

[71] The words are composed of: "Iztac," white object (Molina II, p. 49). "Teotl" god (II, p. 101), "Cuitlatl" filth, therefore gold was "offal of God," and silver, "white offal of God."

325 The working of gold and silver was regarded, by the Mexicans, as an invention of "Quetzalcohuatl." Sahagun (Lib. III, cap. III, p. 243). "y los vasallos que tenia eran todos oficiales de artes mecánicas, y diestros para labrar las piedras verdes, que se llaman chalchivites, y tambien para fundir plata, y hacer otras cosas; y estas artes todos tuviéron principio y origen de l dicho Quetzalcoatl." (Also Lib. X, cap. XXIX, [685] p. 113, etc.). Theft of gold or precious stones was punished by death through sacrifice. Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 487). Velancurt (Parte IIa, Trat. I°, p. 484. "Leyes de los Mexicanos").

287 [72] A very remarkable way of manufacturing their most admired works—those made of feathers—is reported by Mendieta (Lib. IV, cap. XII, pp. 405 and 406): "And there is, besides, something else to notice of this featherwork, namely: that if there are twenty artisans, they will undertake jointly the manufacture of one piece ("imágen"), for, dividing among themselves the figure of the image in as many parts as there are of their number, each one takes his piece home and finishes it there. Afterwards they all meet again and put their pieces together, thus finishing the figure in as perfect a manner as if one alone had made the whole." (Copied by Torquemada, Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 480, and, with slight variations, also by Velancurt, Vol. I, p. 389.) In regard to the manner of working, Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 487), makes the pertinent remark: "All this they worked (as we have said) with other stones, and with flint; and according to the subtlety of the work, I think they must have spent long time in finishing it." See in general E. B. Tylor ("Researches into the Early History of Mankind," Cap. VII, pp. 187 and 188), also Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. IV, pp. 31 and 32).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

441 pomp, second only to that of the tribal forces returning from a 527 successful campaign or foray. The traders went first to the central place of worship, there to stoop before the idols in token of adoration. From the great "medicine-lodge" the band repaired to the "tecpan," where they met the council of the tribe and its leading officers. Sometimes in presence of a concourse of people, and again if required, in "secret session" the traders communicated, for the benefit of the tribe, any results of their explorations. After this their particular quarters gave them appropriate receptions also, and in some instances even the whole tribe celebrated their return with solemn dances, and a distribution of victuals corresponding to what in our time would be called a popular feast.

439 In order to realize the substantial results of such expeditions
441 we must bear in mind, that whatever they brought back had to 556 be carried by men. As already intimated, the number of these men was limited. They could not, without jeopardizing the object of their mission or enterprise, take large bodies of assistants along. Besides, as these assistants also had to carry their own food, providing for many journeys through uncultivated ("neutral") wastes, this also restricted the amount of material brought home. However precious that material might be to the Mexican tribe, it was certainly limited in quantity. Finally, custom demanded that the most highly priced articles should be offered up to worship, to the stores of the tribe and of the kins. Little material gain therefore, remained to the courageous travellers themselves. The proceeds of their enterprise were largely for the benefit of the community and the reward bestowed upon them by that community rather than the profits derived from any traffic, composed the personal gain of the participants. This reward consisted of presents out of the public stores, and especially in the marks of distinction bestowed upon them.

441 Thus the so-called "merchants" of ancient Mexico became 556 equivalent to distinguished braves, and their deeds entitled them
565 frequently to the rank of chiefs. But if, on one hand, they had no opportunity to secure anything like personal wealth, on the other the rewards of merit did not attach to their offspring. No class of traders, no caste of merchants, can therefore have existed, and if a certain well-earned consideration attached itself to the person of those who embraced occasionally such a hazardous and important occupation, this consideration did not go beyond the persons themselves, and was in proportion to the value of the achievements.[78] 441 556 565

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

[78] Prescott ("Conquest," Book I, cap. V, p. 147). Bancroft (Vol. II, cap. XII, p. 387, etc.). Bastian ("Culturlaender," Vol. II, pp. 697 and 698) and others like Brasseur de Bourbourg ("Histoire des Nations civilisées du Mexique et de l'Amérique Centrale," 1857–1859, Paris, Vol. III, p. 612, etc.), have given more or less detailed descriptions of the Mexican mode of traffic and commerce. Among the older sources, and those which necessarily formed the basis of my imperfect sketch, the leading position is occupied by Father Sahagun (Lib. IX, Vol. II, "Historia general de la Cosas de Nuevo-España). From these statements we gather, what has already been said (note 58), that the Tlatilulca were the leading traders (Cap. I, pp. 335, 336), and that they were organized and directed by particular chiefs of their own. The venerable father is not very clear in the matter of these particular officers, as (Cap. I) he names first two (p. 335), then five (p. 337, cap. II), and lastly (Lib. X, cap. XVI, p. 40), one: "Señor ó Principal entre ellos," whom he calls: "puchtecatlailotlac, ó acxôtecatl, que es tanto, como si dijésemos que es gobernador de los mercaderes, y estos dos nombres y otros muchos que están puestos en la letra, se atribuyen al que es mayor principal gobernador ó señor ó que es casi padre y madre de todos los mercaderes." (Lib. IX, cap. III, pp. 348 and 349), he speaks of "the principals," "los mercaderes viejos" as "speakers of the traders" "pochtecatlatoque." Further on (Cap. X, p. 372), he speaks of the "pochtecatlailotlac" as the principals. We must infer from this that there were a number of these leading traders, and not one chief of the "caste." This evidence or rather indication of a possible separate organization is not noticed by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XXVII, p. 588), who simply speaks of the "old traders who remained at the pueblo." Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XXXVIII, pp. 526 and 527) merely mentions the older and the younger traders, but says nothing of a peculiar organization. It is singular, besides, that those authors or more properly chroniclers, in whose annals of Mexican warfare the Mexican traders play a very conspicuous part, make no mention at all of this peculiar caste-like organization which Sahagun seems to imply. Those authors are Durán and Tezozomoc. (In this instance I need not resort to detailed quotations, since the references in their works are far too numerous). Furthermore, Zurita, who is very detailed in his "Rapport," or rather as the full title has it "Breve y Sumaria Relacion de los Señores, y maneras y diferencias que había de ellas en la Nueva España," while enumerating carefully the different kinds of chiefs and officers, is rather reticent about any such organization of the merchants. Compare for instance, p. 223, where he distinctly says that, they had a chief to treat with the "Lords and governors" in their name, and p. 240, where he incidentally mentions a "chief of the merchants" only. Sahagun goes further yet, however, in stating (Lib. IX, cap. V, pp. 356 and 357), that the merchants had their own jurisdiction over themselves, apart from that of the tribe or kin: 'y los señores mercaderes que regian á los otros, tenian por su jurisdicion y judicatoria, y si alguno de estos hacian algun delito, no los llevaban delante de los senadores á que ellos los juzgasen; sino que estos mismos que eran señores de los otros mercaderes juzgaban las causas de todos por sí; si alguno incurria en pena de muerte ellos le sentenciaban, y mataban ó en la carcèl, ó en su casa, ó en otra parte segun que lo tenian de costumbre." This he distinctly applies to the "pochtecas" of Tlatilulco, and to the time when "wrathy chief" (Montezuma the last), was at the head of the Mexicans. Not content with this he relates (Cap. II, pp. 339–342), how the merchants of Tlatilulco alone conquered several tribes, subjecting them to tribute for the benefit of the Mexicans. In all these statements Father Sahagun stands quite alone, and, if not directly contradicted, he is, at least so unsupported as to make his reports rather doubtful so far as they concern the organization and power of these traders as a distinct class. The story has a suspiciously Tlatilulcan coloring. Compare note 58. It is interesting to note, in connection with this, that Sahagun derived the information, the which he laid down in his "Historia general," almost exclusively [651 648]

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 After this review of the question of stratification, so to say, among the ancient Mexicans, it may appear strange on our part

441 from Tlatilulcan sources ("Prologo," pp. 4 and 5, Vol. I). This diminishes necessarily 556 in this instance, the value of his otherwise very full and highly important testimony.
565 The existence of such a body, powerful through wealth as well as through mental and intellectual faculties would, even as much as nobility, at once have destroyed the tribe as such, by breaking up the kins. The inconsistency of such a picture with the historical facts is glaring, and is shown even by the statements of modern writers. Compare for instance, Mr. H. H. Bancroft's statement of the condition of Tlatilulco after its capture by the Mexicans (Vol. V, p. 431), "heavy tributes were imposed, including many special taxes and menial duties of a humiliating nature" with his description of the state of its "merchant princes" (Vol. II, pp. 380 and 381). One fact is evident: if the traders formed occasionally, for certain purposes, clusters of their own, they selected their own leaders or directors and this was the case with trading expeditions as well as with feasts. See on feasts: Sahagun, Lib. IX, cap. III to XIV inclusive, Lib. I, cap. XIX, pp. 29 to 32. Motolinia, Trat. I, cap. VIII, p. 47. Acosta, Lib. V, cap. XXIX, p. 359, etc. Torquemada, Lib. VI, cap. XXVIII, pp. 57 and 58. Lib. XIV, cap. XXVII, pp. 586 and 587. Clavigero, Lib. VI, cap. VII, p. 360. Lib. VII, cap.
[681] XXXVIII, p. 536, etc., and others. But as to any separate, permanent government of their own, this rests exclusively upon the authority of Sahagun, whereas it is amply proven, on the other hand, that any crime committed in trade or barter, was summarily disposed of by the regular officers of the kin or tribe without regard to the traders or [618] merchants. We shall furnish the evidence in regard to this point in another note.

That the "pochtecas" occupied but one calpulli, that of Pochtlan, is also disproved, and even by Sahagun himself (Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 31). "En este calpulli donde se contaba el mercader." (Lib. IX, cap. III, p. 347): "respondiante los mercaderes principales de los barrios que son uno que se llama Pochtlan, otro Acachtlan, y otro Atlauhco como está en la letra"). (Cap. III, p. 349) "convidaban á solos los mercaderes de su barrio; pues el que habia de ir por capitan de la compañía de los que iban, no solamente convidaba á los de su barrio, sino tambien á los que habian de ir con él." Also by Burtin ("Rapport," etc., pp. 223 and 224).

Lastly the question of wealth amassed in such quantities as to become an influential power in the merchants' hands, is also summarily disposed of by Sahagun. However often he speaks of riches gathered by them, the following quotations show how it must be understood: (Lib. IX, cap. II, p. 338, Speech of one of the traders) "Cuando lleguemos á nuestro tierra, será tiempo de usar los barbotes de ambar, y las oregeras que se llaman quetzalcoyolnacohtli, y los aventadores y ojeadores de moscas, las mantas ricas que hemos de traer, y los maxtles preciados, solo esto será nuestra paga, y la señal de nuestra valentia," (p. 341) "y que las otras presias que les dió que arriba se dijéron, solo ellos las usaseen en las grandes fiestas . . . ." It thus appears that hoarding of any actual wealth was not to be expected. The lack of currency alone made it almost impossible for want of space, and gold and silver being only used for ornamental purposes and as a part of "medicine," we should mistake in expecting anything like "treasures." Here, as anywhere else, the supply was regulated by the demand, and this demand was in turn created by the numbers of the population, and by the use made of the metal. Since the latter was used only in a few ways, this had its effect on the amount also. Another cause, which is not sufficiently estimated, is found in the fact that carriers had to be used for everything, including food. Now, even if thousands went along (of which there is hardly any proof), the load of each [482] hardly exceeded sixty pounds: "y daban á cado uno de estos que tenian alquilados, para que llevasen acuestas la carga que tenian señalada, y de tal manera las comparaban que no eran muy pesadas" (Cap. III, p. 350, Lib. IX). Don Antonio de Mendoza ("Avis sur les prestations personnelles et les Tamemes, 1er Recueil of Ternaux-Compans), says in 1550, "They must not carry any loads heavier than two arrobas," or about fifty pounds. Bartolomé de las Casas ("Brevissima relacion de la destruycion de las Yndias," Venetia, 1545, Italian and Spanish, p. 101), complains of three to four arobas or to concede, that nevertheless there were two very distinct classes 565 within the area occupied by the tribe enjoying each a very different quality of rights. Now equality of rights is the fundamental principle of kinship;[79] if therefore there was a body connected with the tribe whose rights and privileges were inferior, it follows that the members of this body must have stood outside seventy-five to one hundred pounds, as an excessive load. Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. [492] XL, p. 389), sixty pounds.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

To conclude, I advert to the fact that the traders were held to tribute and especially 441 to offerings for worship, as strictly as any other members of the tribe. I merely refer 556
to Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. IV, cap. XVII, p. 136), who embodies in a few words the 565 statements of other writers. Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. IV, p. 76), "No se desvelan en adquirir riquezas," and further on to p. 77; also (Trat. I, cap. IV, p. 31), "otros trabaja ban y adquirian dos ó tres años cuanto tenian, mas aun se adeudaban". The picture of the trading expedition is mainly taken from Sahagun (Lib. IX, cap. II, III, IV) and Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XXVII). The reception only applies to cases of great importance. But every departure of a merchant as well as his return was feasted by the traders of his "barrios," sometimes with the concurrence of other barrios and of the chiefs and officers.

That, in consequence of their deeds, the merchants and traders were treated with distinction and created chiefs, follows from Sahagun (Lib. I, cap. XIX, pp. 30 and 31), "para que fasse honrado en el pueblo, y tenido per valiente: ponianle un barbote de ámbar, que es una piedra larga amarilla trasparente, que cuelga del beso bajo, ahujerado, en señal de que era valiente y era noble, y esto se tenia en mucho." But especially (Lib. IX, cap. II, pp. 338-341), "Estos mercaderes eran ya como caballeros, y tenian divisas particulares por sus hazañas"). "Des Cérémonies observées autrefois par les Indiens lorsqu'ils faisaient un facte" (Ternaux, 1er Recueil, pp. 233 and 234). The custom of giving the rank of chief ("tecuhtli") to traders remained after the conquest when the chief became transformed into the Spanish hidalgo in consequence of a misconception of the former dignity. This is shown plainly by the arch-bishop, Fray Alonzo de Montufar ("Suppliques à Charles V en faveur des Macéhales, Mexico, 30 Nov. 1554, French translation by Mr. Ternaux, Appendix to his "Cruautés horribles des Conquérants du Mérique," p. 257). It was done to evade taxation.

The true position of the Mexican traders in their tribe and society is also stated plainly by Sahagun (Lib. I, cap. XIX, p. 30): "Son estos mercaderes sufridores de muchos trabajos, y osados para entrar en todas las tierras (aunque sean las de enemigos) y muy astutos para tratar con los estraños, asi aprendiendo sus lenguas, como tratando con ellos con benevolencia para atraerlos asi con su familiaridad." (Lib. IX, cap. II, p. 338) "pues que aunque nos llamamos mercaderes y lo parecemos, somos soldados que disimuladamente andamos á conquistar." (Id., p. 341) "Los dichos mercaderes del Tlaltelolco se llaman tambien capitanes y soldados disimulados en hábito de mercaderes que andaban por todas partes." (p. 343) "Cuando quiera que el señor de Mexico queria enviar á los mercaderes, que eran capitanes y soldados disimulados á alguna provincia para que la atalayasen." Burtin ("Rapport," etc., p. 223) "ils jouissaient de certains priviléges, parceque leur profession était utile à l'état." This is textually copied by Bustamante ("Tezcoco," Parte IIIa, cap. V, p. 232). They were frequently but official spies and used as such, not only by the Mexicans, but against the Mexicans by foreign tribes. Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, p. 130) copied by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. II, p. 534).

[79] L. H. Morgan ("Ancient Society," Part II, cap. II, p. 85, in relation to Iroquois more particularly). Among the ancient Germans or Teutons, see Heinrich Luden ("Geschichte des teutschen Volkes," 1825, Vol. I, Lib. III, cap. V, on the "Gau," pp. 402 and 403).

Twelfth Chapter, which telleth of still other houses. Some were only indifferent and some were in no way good.

Injc matlactlomome capitulo: itechpa tlatoa, in oc cequj calli, cequj çan tlanepantla ca, cequj vel njman amo qualli. 787X

The time of the day sign Four Wind was said to be good and bad. For then were slain those called doers of evil, the adulterers. They placed their heads in a noose and choked, strangled, or hanged them, or struck them on the back of the head, or crushed their skulls under a rock. Only at night were they killed; when it dawned, and they were already bloated, they cast them each into the water. Likewise then died some of the captives. Through them, so it was said, Moctezuma received new life (as hath been told) on [the day sign] One Rain, when [the Goddesses] descended. And this was also the time that the [aforementioned] demons and sorcerers destroyed people. And since there was fear on this day sign, Four Wind, everywhere they put cardoon[1] into the smoke openings [of the houses]. They stuffed and crammed it in. Thereby, so it was said, they frightened them away.

Jn jpan nauhecatl tonalli, mjtoa qualli, ioan amo qualli, ca vncan mjctiloia, quinquechmecanjaia, quinquechtzonviaia, quinmecanjaia, quinpiloa, quincuexcochvivitequj, quinquatepipitzinja, in motepeua tlaçolchiuhque, in tetlaxinque, çan ioean in mjctiloia, in oallatvi ie tlacujtlapoçaoa, atlan quimonmamaiavi. No ioan cequjn vncan mjquja in mamalti, iuh mjtoa: ca iehoan inca motzcaltiaia in Motecuçoma (in iuh omoteneuh) ipan ce qujauitl in vncan temoa: auh ie no vncan tepopoloaia, in omoteneuhque tlatlacateculo, in nanaoalti, auh injc imacaxoia, in ipan in tonalli nauecatl in tlecaico noujian caaqujaia, in tlacateculoxocovitztli, quipopotzaqujaia, quicacacatztzaia: iuh mjtoa ca ic quinpeviaia. 681 684 727 761 789 824

But the merchants,[2] those known as distinguished traders[3] and vanguard merchants,[4] who were rich, greatly esteemed and honored this [day sign]. For then they laid out in the sun[5] all the precious things which they had hidden away — the green stone, the objects made of [ordinary] green stone and resplendent green stone; the round ones, round like

Auh in iehoantin pochteca, in moteneoa: acxoteca, in ostomeca, in motlacamati, iê quivcimatia, quimaviztliaia, ca vncan quitotonjaia, in ixquich tlaçotli quitlatiaia, in chalchiujtl, in chalchiuhtli, in quetzalchalchiuhtli, in ololiuhquj, in tomatic, in acatic, in ie ixquich cozcatl, in concapetlatl, in putlaoac, in pitzaoac, xiujtl: auh in jxquich nepapan iviul, in quetzalli 441 527 556

1. Xuxuhtli. — Francisco J. Santamarina: Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), Vol. II, p. 154: Jumicia — Bromelia pinguin L. "En México, nombre vulgar de una planta de las regiones tropicales, que crece como un matorro de abrazo y erizo hojas semejantes a las de la piña. . . . propiedad antiestorbática."

2. Tlamatinime also as "men of Pedition," a barrio of Tenochtitlan occupied by merchants, whose gods were Tlipan, Mamalinalnôl, Xihui, Tlati, Xilo, Tepanecatl, Coyotlinahual, Chiuaua nahuiâ, Xochiquetzal, Yacatecutli (Arturo Monzón, op. cit., p. 98). See also Alfonso Caso: Instituciones indígenas precortesianas (México: Instituto Nacional Indigenista, 1954), pp. 23-24, for a résumé of the social and economic importance of the pochteca.

3. Acxotlatl or pochtecatlahtoke, "mayor o principal entre los mercaderes . . . tanto como si diéramos que es gobernador de los mercaderes, y entre los nombres . . . es antiquísimo al que es mayor principal, gobernador, o señor, o que es como padre y madre de todos los mercaderes" (Sahagún, Garibay ed., X, 16, 5).

Jens, op. cit., p. 248 (citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 60): "aber eigentümlicher Volksnamen in der eigentlich der Sinn von Meerkopf gelegenen Landschaft Chalco." Acxotlan was a merchant's barrio in Tenochtitlan; gods were Nanâ Ehecatl, Chicomquiauitl, Xoxoauhqui, Cochimetl, Yacapitzactoc, Macuitl, Chalmecatecutli (Monzón, loc. cit.).

4. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., Book I, "The Gods," p. 18 and n. 5. Jens, op. cit., p. 238, citing Seler, Ges. Ab., II, 1070: "Meere aus dem Grie Oceanus . . . , der auf Wanderschaft gehende Klein und Marktkaufleute rasch als der auf weite Reisen gehende Grosskaufmann, auch Kaufmann i. A."

5. Ibid., p. 145.

441
527
556

tomatoes, the cylindrical ones;[6] and all the neck bands, and the matted neck bands; and large and small pieces of turquoise; and all the different kinds of feathers — quetzal tail feathers: the well-pointed ones, the well-curved ones, the wide ones, the long ones, which, they said, indeed extended a fathom. And these were just the tail feathers. And those they called down feathers,[7] the very small ones, the chili-green ones and the crest feathers of the quetzal;[8] and feathers of the red spoonbill[9] [teoquechol], which is now called tlauhquechol; and the blue cotinga, the amethyst-colored ones,[10] the yellow parrot,[11] the multicolored parrot, the trupial,[12] the red and yellow parrot,[13] the scarlet parrot,[14] the blue parrot,[15] the dove; and aquamarine feathers, etc. And skins of wild animals, and mats of wild animal [skins]; and wooden chocolate-beaters; and gourd stoppers.[16]

Verily, all their goods, which lay strewn [and scattered in the tribal quarter] temples[17] they arranged in order and in rows upon precious capes. They sorted, ordered, and disposed them. Then they offered incense and beheaded quail. Of this it was thus said: "They place things in the sun." And when they had placed them in the sun, and when they had offered incense during the day, later,[18] in vel iaque in vel vitoliuj, in patlaoac, in viiac, in qujlhuja cezciacatl içan moteca: auh in çan totocujtlapiltic, ioan in qujlhuja quetzaliacatl, in çan tepitoton, in chilchotic, ioan in tzinjtzcan, in teoquechol: in axcan mjtoa tlauhquechol, ioan in xiuhtototl, in aiopal, in tozcli, in tozcujcujl, in çaquan, in cochovitl, in chamolin, in cujtlatexotli, in coçôtli, in xiuhapalli. Etc. yoan in tequaneoatl, in tequanpetlatl, auh in aquaujtl, in atzaccaiotl:

in ie mochi intlatquj in teintoc, [ỹ pixauhtoc. yn calpulco] in teucali, tlaçotilmapan qujcentecaia, qujcuecuentiliaia, qujtlatlamantiliaia, qujviujpanaia, qujtetecpanaia, vncan tlenamacaia, tlacotonaia, iehoatl injc mjtoa: tlatotonja, auh in jquac otlatotonjque, in otlenamacaque, cemjlhujtl, catepan tlatlaqualo, aatlioa, mopixtoque, in pochteca veuetque, nepielotoc, tlachichinalotoc, tlanecutoc, tlaaujaxtoc, puctleoatoc,

---

6. Cf. Florentine Codex, Book XI, cap. viii, fol. 205: injc tlatlalili, olohir, oxtic xictic, tomatic, chiquinolco, tlachiquinaloztli, tlachiquinalli, tlacomomoli, tlacolocolxiuhtlalli, for which the corresponding Spanish text reads: "Labrean otras piedras unas redondas y agujeradas, otras largas y rollizas, y agujeradas, otras trianguladas, otras cortadas al sesgo, otras cuadradas."

7. Quetzal tail plug, in jaua, loc. cit.

8. Tzinitzcan. Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 2 and 4, describes both the crest of the quetzal and a bird of the same name: Tragonorus mexicanus, 7. ambiguus (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 366). In Seler, Collected Works (; Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Richardson, eds.; Cambridge: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1959), Vol. V, p. 2, it is quetzal tail and shoulder feathers of dark green with metallic sheen; in ibid., Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 137, a bird with black and green feathers.

9. Tlauhquechol. In ibid., Vol. IV, p. 62, white and red spoonbill; Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 63, red heron; p. 124, red spoonbill; p. 137, rose-colored heron. Cf. also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 5; Ajaja ajaja (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 356).

[136]

10. Sahagún (op. cit., XI, 2, 9) mentions an oyoqua found in mountains about Cuetzlan and Michuacan — of painted, black beak and black feathers except those of the tail, which are half-white; another bird of the same name is a waterfowl of yellow beak; feathers at joint of wing are green; long wing and tail feathers are brassy, with white and green; body feathers are red. Agamia agami (ibid., Vol. IV, p. 324).

In "L'orfèvrerie des anciens mexicains et leur art de travailler la pierre et de faire des ornements en plumes," Congrès International des Américanistes, Compte-Rendu de la Huitième Session Tenue à Paris en 1890 (Paris: Ernest Leroux, 1892), note to § 68, Eduard Seler translates oyoqua as tapaxo enfumée, referring to Molina, op. cit., chvtiul amarillo — oyopalwiloal.

11. Seler, Collected Works, Vol. IV, p. 33. Cf also Sahagún (Garibay ed.), XI, 2, 16; Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. III, p. 210.

12. Seler, op. cit., Vol. II, Pt. 3-4, p. 114. Gymnostinops Montezumae (Sahagún, Garibay ed., Vol. IV, p. 372).

13. Seler, op. cit., Vol. IV, p. 33. Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 371: "especie de loro, del género Chrysotis." Cuelo or cuehol — "Papagayo roja y morada." Amazona albifrons albifrons (Sahagún, op. cit., Vol. IV, p. 328).

14. Ibid., IX, 1, 2. Cf. also, however, chamolin (chamol) in Santamaría, op. cit., Vol. I, p. 461: "Nombre vulgar que en el Estado de Guerrero, en México, se da al tabachín o charalitchid." Chamolitchid: Aztl., chamolli (pimiento) — "tabachín o flor del amarillo (Poinciana pulcherrima)."

15. Cf. Sahagún, loc. cit.

16. Corresponding Spanish text: ampolletas de galapagos para tecomates.

17. An omission in the Florentine Codex, to be noted in comparing the passage with the text of the Real Palacio MS, placed in brackets, brings the Nahuatl closer to Sahagún's corresponding Spanish.

18. Catepan: the cedilla is missing in the original.

everyone ate and drank. The old merchants lay guarding and watching, smoking, inhaling the fragrance, and taking their pleasure. Smoke drifted upward and was overspread. Food was spread out in abundance; nothing was lacking. Of this it was thus said: the merchants heated things; they placed them in the sun.

puctli mantoc, tlaqualli qujqujztoc, atle monectoc, ichoatl injc mjtoa, ca tlatonaltia, tlatotonja, in puchteca. 441 527 556

And when it grew dark, there was drinking. All of the old merchant men and women assembled. When they became drunk, then they vaunted, boasted, and blustered over their wealth, their achievements, their valor, and especially wheresoever they had set foot; that is to say, wheresoever they had gone to arrive; the things which they had discovered, the manner of their return, their coming back. So they had gone to perform their labors and to circle about the surrounding provinces, to encounter the waste lands, to descend into the gorges — everywhere entering places of danger and drawing into fields of battle. And verily in some places they were besieged and ambushed. Perhaps only one or two escaped the hands of the enemy, coming to leave word with and inform the people that they had first broken and scattered the rampart and enclosure of eagle and ocelot warriors.

Auh in oiooac tlatlaoano, mocecentlalia in puchteca veuetque, in puchteca ilamatque, intla otlaiujntic, vncan qujmopopoaltia, qujmeecoaltia, ic mjxmotlatoque, yn innecujltonol, yn intlaiecoliz, yn jmoqujchtiliz, oc cenca ichoatl: in canjn icac imjcxi, qujtoznequj: in canjn acitinemj, in guexqujch ic conmati, in quexqujch imjloch, innecuepal, ic quichiuhtinemj, injc qujlacatzotinemj anaoatl, injc ixtlaoatl qujnamjctinemj, injc atlauhtli quitemovitinemj, in noviian calactinemj, in ovica, in iaotitlan qujztinemj: auh in nel cana impan oalmotzaqua, qujnpoiomjctia, aço ça ce, vme, in tematitlampa qujça, in qujoalcaoa tlatolli, in oalteitoa, ichoan achtopa qujpetla, qujxitinja, in quauhtenamjtl, quauhtlatzacujlli, ocelotenamjtl, ocelotlatzacujlli, 441 527 554 521

So there they made light of, scoffed at, exposed, revealed, abused, and tortured those who knew no places, who had gone nowhere, who nowhere in any degree had set foot anywhere; who only at the ashes of his fire called himself a warrior[19] and lived prudently[20] and impudently only here in the market place. Only here, the market place, did he frequent, buying, selling, and deceiving. And this was when, because of their suffering, these cast into the fire — or it fell by the wayside — their rearing, because they were troubled and moved by the counsel of their fathers and mothers. So there at the place of congregating there was dispute, discussion, abuse, fault-finding, and belittling. They sat jostling and besmearing one another, disputing and quarreling among themselves, contending, refuting, and bragging. They paid no heed to others' answers; they did not consider others to be superior.[21] They chattered.[22] Likewise, they were often arrogant; each one had his own opinion; they made little of and ic vncan qujquequeloa, ica mauijltia, qujtlatlacaqujtia, qujcocoa, qujtotoneoa, qujcocolhuja, qujchichinachilia yn jiollo, in acan onmati, in acampa ianj in acan quentel, in acan icac icxi, in çan njcam inextitlan mooqujchitoa, çan njcan tianqujzco in mjmantinemj, tlaxtlapalotinemj, çan njcan in motitianquja, tlatlanecujloa, tlatlaxiccuj, auh ie vncan in jtoneuhcacopa, motlecomaiavi vevetzteoa, yn intlazcaltilhoan, in jntlaoapaoalhoã, injc vel imjtic oaçic intecoco, in teitic aaçic intlatol, in jntahoan, yn jnnaoan, injc vncan in necentlaliaia maaoa, mononotza, moquequeloa, mopâpatla, mopapatzaoa, moquezicçatoque, moçoqujmotlatoque, motlatzoujlitoque, moquâquatoque, mjxquâquatoque, motlatolxopeuhtoque, moichoatocatoque, âmotenaqujlmatque amo motenpanavillanj, chachalacatoque, no çac in jzmoquixtia: muchi tlacatl cecentetl itlatol, atle ipan qujmotztilitoque, amo commopovilitoque in jnnecujltonol, yn jnnetlamachtil: huel nononqua mutachcauhnequj, mocecentecpoa, cecentecuti, cecenme mo-

19. Moqueiquichtiuc in the Real Palacio MS. Nicuac: nicuac is meant.
20. Mimdiiiuni in loc. cit.
21. Possibly amotenanpaltiuque and amo motenpanavillanj are intended.
22. Chachalacatoque in the Real Palacio MS.

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

armament.[140] Thus the largest bodies were assembled, furnished 726 with weapons, and organized under their respective leaders of all grades on very short notice, awaiting the signal from the chief commander to sally forth, either by canoes across the lake,[141] or along the causeways, to the mainland. Each warrior carried 726 mostly his own frugal provisions[142] which the women of each 724
household had prepared; "corn-bread, meal-cakes, ground beans, "corn-meal seasoned with pepper;"[143] but special carriers also accompanied the force, loaded with a surplus of food, with robes for tents, reeds for huts and bowers, and with cooking utensils like kettles, pans, baskets; also with mats.[144] Sometimes these [140] It also happened that an interval of twenty days (a Mexican month) elapsed between the proclamation of war and the final departure. At least, in most cases, a few days were spent in preparations, since the Mexicans had to give time to their outside allies or subjects to prepare, also. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXVI): "The Mexicans in "the interval prepared the arms in all the quarters,— shields, swords, and made and "finished many rods ('tlatzontectli'), also slings, and pebbles to be thrown with "cords." (Id., Cap. LVII) "Within twenty days they prepared and fitted out all kinds "of arms, first in the five quarters of Mexico-Tenuchtitlan: Moyotlan, Teopan, Ytza-"cualco, Cuepopan, and Tlatilulco, now called Santiago." In many cases, however, an instantaneous mobilization of the whole force became necessary. Mexico, in times of peace, had to be always ready for war. See, also, Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, pp. 49 and 50).

[141] Canoes, "acalli" (water-houses, from "atl," water, and "calli," house), were used for the traffic with the main land, but also largely for the carrying of warriors. It is well known what important part they played against the Spaniards during the siege. For the movements of the Mexicans against a hostile tribe, both on land and water, see Durán (Cap. XIV, p. 121), wherein he describes the attack upon Cuitlahuac, both by canoes and on dry land. [505]

[142] Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369): "porque demas de lo que los reyes proueyan de sus "grandes trojos y graneros, cada soldado llevaua á questas su particular comida, "todo lo que podia llevar, atada á la carga el espada y la rodela, etc., etc."

[143] The women prepared the food, but it also occurred that the stewards dispensed it. Tezozomoc (Cap. XXXII, p. 49): "With this the stewards and calpixques of the tribes "gave to their quarters maize for to make biscuit, tlacactutopochtli, pinole, ground "pepper, chian, beans, and all what pertained to it, providing themselves with every-"thing necessary for certain day stated." The "tlaxcaltotopochtli" (from "tlaxcalli," corn-bread, and "totopochtli," burnt-bread) would be biscuit of maize-meal, and it is therefore called "viscocho." The pinolli, or pinole, corn-meal mixed with pepper, was an important victual. The food of the Mexicans, in general, outside of the meats (exclusively fowl and some game) and aquatic animals, consisted of maize in various forms, and of pepper, "chilli," as seasoning. Cacao furnished their main beverage, and stores of it were taken along. See, also, Durán (Cap. XLVI, p. 369: "maiz tostado "y otro molido y hecho harina, frijol molido, pan biscochado, tamales mohosos y curs-"dos al sol, grandes fardos de chile, cacao molido hecho en pellas"). They also used maize to compose a beverage called "yolati," which possessed particularly vivifying qualities (See note of Sr. Ramirez to p. 290 of Durán), and which they dispensed even on the battlefield (Durán, Cap. XXXVII; Tezozomoc, Cap. LII). [262] [272]

[144] These carriers are called "tamemes," and are generally regarded as having been slaves. But they probably were outcasts from the bond of kinship, or the men of newly conquered tribes (like Tlatilulco for a time after its capture), upon whom this degrading work (because woman-like!!) was imposed as a penalty. Slaves were not nu- [554] [558]

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

connected, through stock-language or even dialect, with the Mexicans, but they were actually "kin of their own kin." Their punishment therefore was that of a crime committed against kinship and tribe. As we shall hereafter attempt to show, such delicts entailed death. Instead of exterminating a whole settlement however, the Mexicans treated the survivors as outcasts from the bond of kinship, degrading them to manual, therefore female labor.[58]

[58] The descriptions of the capture of Tlatilulco by the Mexicans, while "Face in the Water" (Axayacatl) was the latter's head war-chief, are so numerous, and in their features as far as the subject of this paper is concerned, so generally concordant, that I may be permitted to forego quotations. I simply refer to the best known authors on ancient Mexico in general. Still, these authors seem to report but the "Tenuchcan" side of the story. Although Boturini ("Idea" "Catalogo del Museo Indiano," p. 23), mentions the copy of "Un Mapa en papel Européo, donde estan pintados los Reyes de Tlatilulco, y de México" as the only specifically "Tlatilulcan" document of which he knows, there still is preserved to us a tale of the overthrow of the pueblo of Tlatilulco, which bears distinctly the stamp of a genuine Tlatilulcan version. We owe it to Oviedo y Valdés ("Historia general y nat. de Indias," Lib. XXXIII, cap. XLVI, pp. 504 and 505). "Avia dos parcialidades ó bandos en aquella república, la una se decia Mexicanos, é la otra Tlatebulcos, como se dice en Castilla Oneçinos i Gamboinos, ó Giles é Negretes. Y estos dos apellidos tenvieron grandes diferencias: é Montecuma, como era mañoso, fingió grande amistad con el señor principal del bando Tlatebulco, que se decia por sus nombré proprio Samalce, é tomóle por yerno, é dióle una su hija, por le asegurar. Con este debdo, en cierta fiesta é convite á este Samalce, é á todos sus capitanes é parientes é hombres principales, hizolos embeodar: é desque estuvieron bien tomados del vino, hiçolos atar é sacrificarlos á todos, sacándoles los coraçones vivos, como lo tienen por costumbre. E los que padescieron esta crueldad passaban de mil hombres, señores principales; é tomóles las casas é quanto tenian, é poblólas de sus amigos é de los de la otra parçialidad Mexicana. É á todos los que tuvo por sospechosos, desterrólos de la ciudad, que fuéron mas de quatro mil hombres; y en los bienes é moradas destos hiço que viviessen los quel quiso enriquesar con bienes agenos. É aquellos que desterró, hiço que poblassen quatro leguas de alli, en un pueblo que de aquella gente se hiço, que se llama Mezquique, é que le sirvirssen de perpétuos esclavos. É assi como la cibdad se deçia, y es su proprio nombre Temistitan, se llamó é llama por muchos México dende aquella maldad cometida por Montecuma." This story is repeated by him with less detail (Cap. I, p. 533). Although manifestly incorrect, it is still interesting to compare with the current version.

The punishment which the Tlatilulca received, is also mentioned by a number of authors. The prominent sources, however, are: Durán (Cap. XXXIV, pp. 270 and 271), Tezozomoc (Cap. XLVI, pp. 74 and 78). Both of these relate that, besides, the great market place of Tlatilulco about which the latter says: "that the tianguis (market) was esteemed beyond, as if they had gained five tribes." The Tlatilulca were, as we shall hereafter see, mostly traders and, as one of their old men is made to say to "Face in the Water," by Tezozomoc (p. 74): "We are traders, merchants, and will give you (follows a long list of articles promised) . . . . . since by force of arms this tianguis has been gained." Durán, (p. 270): "After this was done, the King commanded that this place and market which they had gained should be distributed among the lords, since the Tlatilulca had no other soil." Compare also the statements in regard to trading and bartering in aboriginal Mexico, and to the beginning of the traders at Tlatilulco, in Sahagun (Lib. IX. cap. I, pp. 335 and 336).

"Kin of their own kin." In regard to this statement I beg to refer to one made by Veytia (Lib. II, cap. XV, p. 135): "Some modern national writers say that this separation did not occur precisely as between nobles and plebeyans, but that eight families adultery. They accused him before Moctezuma, who then condemned him to be stoned before the people.

FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is discussed the council chamber of the brave warriors devoted to war.

Tequiuacacalli or Quauhcalli: there were the brave warriors, the generals, and the commanding generals,[9] whose personal charge was command in war.

Achcauhcalli: there were the constables, the brave warriors who were the ruler's executioners. These who brought to an end [the life of] any upon whom sentence had fallen [were] the Quauhnochtli, Atempanecatl, and Tezcacoacatl. And if they erred in something, they exacted the penalty of them and they died.

Cuicacalli: there were the masters of the youths and the rulers of the youths, there established in order to oversee what was by way of work. And every day, when the sun had already set, they turned their attention to dances. They went quite naked. So they went to the house of songs; so they danced with song, proceeding with, about their necks, only [a cape] made like a net. They set in place and proceeded with their forked heron feather ornaments and the red cord with which they bound their hair: and [they had] their turquoise ear plugs and sea shell lip pendants. All the youths, when they danced and sang, ceased when it was well into the night, when for the first time the fire priests and [other] priests blew the shell trumpets. None of [the youths] entered their homes; none slept at home. Rather, they went straight to the young men's houses, which were everywhere. There they slept, stretched out quite naked. Only little did they sleep. On the morrow, when it was still dark, they set forth, to lodge in the house of the ruler.

And when the ruler knew something ill of them—either drunkenness or concubinage;[10] or that they wrought something to their advantage behind the back of the ruler; [or] that without his command they levied tribute on the town, perchance of chocolate, or of food, which became a tribute, and it was done without leave, and [that] they exacted as tribute whatsoever they wished, then the ruler commanded that they be jailed in wooden cages. He condemned them to pay the penalty; perchance they strangled

pan motecuçuma, njman qujoallatzontequjli, injc teixpan tetepacholoc. 692 565 684

IC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa in jnnenonotzaia in tiacahoan in jpampa iaujotl. 692

Tequjoacacalli, quauhcalli, vncan catca in tiacaoan tlacochcalcatl tlacatecatl, in jnneixcaujl iautequj: 701

Achcauhcalli vncan catca in achcacauhti in tiacahoan in jtemjcticaoan catca tlatoanj, iehoantin qujtzonqujxtiaia in aqujn tlein ipan omotzontec, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl, tezcacoacatl, auh in jtla qujtlacoaia, qujtzacutiuja mjquja. 696

Cujcacalli, vncan catca in tiachcahoan, in telpuchtlatoque vncan tlatecpanoaia injc qujchiaia tlein tequjtl, auh in momuztlae, in jquac ie calaquj tonatiuh: tlamaçeoaliztli ipan qujmatia, çan petlauhtiuja, injc viia cujcacali, injc oncujcoanooaia çanijo inquech in onactiuja, iubqujn matlatl ic tlachiuhtli, imaztaxel conmantiuj, tochacatl injc qujlpia intzonchichilicpatl: ioan ixiuhnacoch, ioan intempilol eptli, ixqujch in telpuchtli in oncujcoanoia icoac necaoaloia in tlaquauh tlapoiaoa, in jcoac iancujcan tlapitzaia tlenamacaque tlamacazque, amo ac ichan calaquja, amo ac ichan oncochia, ca njman vmpa tlamelaoaia, in noujian telpuchcalli mamanca: in oncan cochia, çan pepetlauhtoca, çan achi in concochia, momoztlae in oc ioboan qujça in ontecpanoa, yn ichan tlatoanj. 561 [624] 535 [291] [301] [342] [513]

Auh in jcoac itla qujnmachilia in tlatoanj, açoanaliztli, anoço nemecatiliztli, anoço itla icampa qujqujxtia, in tlatoanj: in amo itencopa, itla qujtetequjtia in calla açoatl, tlaqualli tequjpan iecauj, moiocoia, qujtetequjtia injc intech monequj, njman tlanaoatia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco qujntlalia, qujntlatzontequjlia, injc qujtzacutiui, açoquinmecanja, anoço qujntetepachoa, anoço quauhtica qujnujujtequj teixpan, injc mjctilo, injc maujztli qujteca tlatoanj. 561 681

9. Tlacochcalcatl, tlacatecatl: see Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 27; Jens, op. cit., p. 70; Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 182, n. 3; III, pp. 57-58.
10. After nemecatiliztli, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has amoçe tetlacuiniliztli—or adultery.

561 681 them with a cord, or they stoned them, or before the people they beat them with wooden [staves], so that they were slain. Thus the ruler implanted fear.[11]

251 FIFTH PARAGRAPH, where is told how they stored all the food.

Petlacalco: there was stored all the food. Dried maize grains thus were kept in wooden grain bins; more than two thousand [measures of] grains of dried maize—a store of twenty years for the city. And in wooden storage bins were dried beans, chía, amaranth seeds, wrinkled chía, salt jars, coarse salt, baskets of chilis, baskets of squash seeds, and large squash seeds. And there was kept the jail, the [697] wooden cage,[12] where they imprisoned and confined evildoers.

IC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa injquipiaia in jxqujch qualonj.

Petlacalco, vncan mopiaia, in jxqujch qualonj, in tlaolli, injc mopiaia quauhquezcomatl, amo çan macujltzontli, vncatca tlaolli: cempoalxiuhcaiotl, in jtetzon altepetl, ioan quauhcuezcontica mamanca in etl, in chian, in oauhtli, in chiantzotzol, iztacomjtl, iztaxalli, chilpetlatl, aiocachpetlatl, quauhaiocachtli: ioan vncan mopiaia in teilpilcalli, quauhcalli, in vncan qujmjlpiaia, qujncaltzaquaia tlatlacoanj.

624 651 681 344 SIXTH PARAGRAPH, in which is described the house of the majordomos and stewards.

Calpixcalli:[13] or Texancalli: there assembled all the majordomos and tribute gatherers. There they were lodged [to await the command of the ruler, (lest) he require something, or] to bring down and put in order that which was their trust as tributes, [and there they arranged in order the various foods] which every day they gave the ruler. And if the ruler knew something ill of a majordomo, perchance of something he stole from the tributes; or that all his charge, the tributes, perhaps did not equal the correct count when all his store was tallied and examined; then he jailed the majordomo in a wooden cage; he exacted the penalty, that he die. Then he cast out his women [and his children from his home]. Then quickly the house of the majordomo was closed up, and all his goods remained in the house. All belonged to the ruler.

IC CHIQUACEN PARRAPHO, vncã mjtoa: in jnchan mayordomos in calpixque.

Calpixcalli, texancalli, vncã cenqujçaia: in jxqujch çalpixquj, ioan tequjtquj, vncan tecpanoaia injc [quitlatolchixticatca tlatoani,- aço tlein quinequiz, aço] tlein qujtemoz qujcencauhticatca, in tlein inpiel tlacalaqujlli, [yoan uncan quicenquixtiaya y nepapan tlaqualli,] in momoztlae qujmacaia tlatoanj. Auh intla tlatoanj, itla qujmachili, ce calpixquj, aço itla qujmaoalchioa tlacalaqujlli: ioan in jxqujch in jpiel, in tlacalaqujlli: acaçomo caçi in tlapoaliztli: in jcoac mopoa, mocxitoca, in jxqujch in jpiel; njman quauhcalco qujtlalia, in calpixquj: qujzzacutiuh, mjquj, njman qujnqujxtia, in jçioahoan [yoan in ipilhoan yn ichan]: njman içiuhca motzaqua, in jcal calpixquj ioan in jxqujch in jtlatquj, calitic onoc: moch itech compoã tlatoanj.

565 574 431 344 Coacalli: there were established all the lords from everywhere—friends of the ruler, and all the lords unfriendly to him. He gave and bestowed upon them all manner of costly goods: valuable capes and breech clouts, golden lip plugs, golden ear plugs, green stone lip plugs, green stone necklaces, and green stone bracelets.

Coacalli vncan tecpanoaia, in jxqujchtin, noujian tlatoque: in jicnjhoan tlatoanj, ioan in jxqujchtin, iiauhoan tlatoque: qujnmacaia, qujntlauhtiaia, in jxqujch tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in teucujtlatentetl, in teucujtlanacochtli, in chalchiuhtentetl, in chalchiuhcozcatl, in chalchiuhmacuextli.

---

11. At the end of this paragraph, the Real Academia de la Historia MS contains an account of the Calmecac, which is lacking in the Florentine Codex. (See Appendix A.)

12. Teilpilcalli, quauhcalli: Orozco y Berra, op. cit., I, pp. 268-269, writes: "Las prisiones eran de dos especies. La llamada teilpilcayan, lugar de presos, en que estaban detenidos los delincuentes de penas leves; el quauhcalli, casa de madera, especie de jaula fuerte de vigas, en que se guardaba los condenados á la muerte y prisioneros de guerra destinados al sacrificio."

13. In the Real Academia de la Historia MS, three passages appear which are not in the Florentine Codex. Because they change the sense to a degree, they are here inserted in brackets.

577 And he who took no captive with others' help
578 when, perchance, he had returned three or four times
701 to the wars, they called "Big tuft of hair over the back of the head." And if this was so said of him, he was much ashamed of it. Wherefore he cast himself [into the fray] in order to take a captive with others' aid.

Auh in aquin amo tepallama in aço ic espa anoço ic nappa yloti in iaoc quitocaiotia cuespalchicacpul auh in iuh ipan mitoa y ic pinaoa, quin icoac teca momotla inic tepallama.

729 And if he made a captive with the help of others, 577 then his head was pasted with feathers. And he who then did not take a captive with the aid of others might not remove his lock of hair; neither was his head pasted with feathers. Thus was his hair shorn: it was cut like a ring-shaped carrying pad; they shaved only the crown of his head.

Auh intla tepal otlama icoac mopotonia, auh in aquin çan niman amo tepallama, amo uel mocuespallaça amono mopotonia, inic moxima moquaiacoalxima çaniio inicoa nepantla quichichiqui.

And [whether] worldly goods and riches were his lot, or he was only poor, yet if his back tuft of hair had been removed, he never took, and never did they [292] place upon him, an embroidered cape, [but] only another small, white, maguey fiber cape, and his small breech clout.

Auh im aço ie imaceoalti in tlalticpacaiotl, in necuiltonolli, auh anoço can motolinia auh inomocuespallaz aic tle quicui, aic tle itech quitlalia tlamacho tilmatli çan oc ce in iztac in ichtilmaton iztac in imastlaton,

And he who had acted indeed alone and had taken captives, if he took one, was therefore named a leading youth and a captor. And when this came to pass, then they took him before Moctezuma, there at the palace. And by his command he was then stained [302 with yellow ochre; his face was colored with red 336] ochre. They applied it to all of his face. And the majordomos of Moctezuma anointed his temples with yellow ochre.[1] auh i aquin uel oquimiscaui otlama in oce cacic ic motocaiotia telpochiiaqui tlamani. Auh in iquac y quinicoac ispan quiuica in motecoçoma in umpa tlatocân. Auh itencopa inic motecuçauhtiltia mistlapalhoatzalhuia quicemaquia in ixaiac, auh in icanaoacan quitecozauhuia in icalpiscahoan motecuçoma.

And at that time Moctezuma granted him favors;
[431 he gave him an orange cape with a striped border
242] and a scorpion design to bind on, and a carmine colored breech clout with long ends, and a breech clout of many colors.[2] And then he began to wear capes with designs.

Auh quinicoac quitlauhtia in motecuçoma in quimaca camopaltencoaoanqui ioan centetl colotlalpilli ioan centetl nochpalmastlatl iacauiac ioan centetl centzonmastlatl tlatlapalli, auh icoac compeoaltia in tlacuiloltilmatli quiquemi.

And when he had taken two, likewise they took him there before Moctezuma, at the palace, and likewise his gifts were provided as hath been told.

Auh inic ome caci çan no vmpa quiuica in ispan motecuçoma in tlatocan auh çan no iuhquj in inetlauhtil mochioaia in omito.

624 And when he captured three, likewise his gifts 729 were provided, and he took [the office] of, and they 861 established him as, a master of the youths, a leading
● 561 youth. He entered a place of dignity, the young men's house, there to nurture and rear [them]. There he reared the young men, there where there was song and dance at night, there in the song house.

Auh inic ei caci çan ie no iuhqui in inetlauhtil mochioa, auh oncan canaia in quitiachcauhtecaia in telpochiiaqui quicalaquiaia inuchican in telpochcali inic vmpa tlacaoapaoa tlacazcaltia vmpa quimizcaltia in telpopochti, on cuicoianooaia in ioaltica in vmpa cuicacali.

1. Following quitocaiotia, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has yuan vmpa quimpotonia—and there they pasted feathers on their heads. This passage is missing in the Florentine Codex.

2. The corresponding Spanish was made: "vna manta con vnas listas labradas de color morado; y otra manta labrada, de otras cintas labradas de colorado que se llamauan colotlapalli: y . . . vn mantle labrado de colorado, largo que cumpliese hasta colgado, y otro mantle labrado de todas colores."

And when the chieftains had beheld what now [the foe] did and intended, thereupon they deliberated as to what they would do. And when they had decided, thereupon went a boat, very carefully, which they poled rapidly. It came to a stop at the road's edge. No war device showed; it only came covered over. Another came. Just so, cautiously, they poled it forth rapidly. And once more came two boats, so making four. Then arose two eagle and two ocelot [warriors]. The first eagle [warrior] was Topantemoctzin; the second, Tlacotzin. And the first ocelot [warrior] was Temilotzin; the second, Coyoucuetzin. Thereupon broke forth one ocelot and one eagle [warrior], poling their boats furiously—as if the boats flew. They went cautiously to Teteuhtitlan, in order to intercept and cut off the advance [of the foe]. And when they had gone, once again, also, two—another eagle and another ocelot [warrior]—sped forth to hurl themselves into the midst [of the fray]. And when they had already gone, the flutes were blown, and thereupon people were robbed. And some from there approached to cut off the advance of the chieftains.

And when our foes saw this, they would have fled. Many died in the water, sunk and submerged, only piled up one on another, as if no longer conscious, as if stunned, fallen, soaked. Those who in vain tried to flee, only fell between the beams. They were pulled out, it is said, completely smeared with mud, slippery with mud, well soaked and completely drenched. Very many perished; there they died in myriads. And this was the last time that there our foes, the various people [allied to the Spaniards] died in numbers. And when our foes had died, the next day was quite calm.

And thus came the Spaniards here to Amaxac. They went to and reached where the common folk had taken refuge.[8] They had completely surrounded us. The battle spread all around, there at Amaxac and on the road which led to Tepeyacac. Then [the Spaniards] went to and entered the young men's house named Ueican,[9] for there assembled all the young men. Then they climbed up to the roof terrace. And all the common folk thereupon jumped down behind the young men's house, and then all dispersed into the water. And a great seaquimopictia: njman ie ic quinemjlia in quenjn vel quichioazque: auh in ovel quinemjlique, njman ie ic ce vitz in acalli, cencā yiolic, in quitlanelhuitivitze, contecaco vtenco, amo valnezttia in tlavizttli, ça vallepachiuhtia, ie no ce valla, ça ie no ivi in jiolic quivallanelhuitiaque: auh ie no ceppa valla vme in acalli ic onnauhtetix. Nimā ic valmevatiquetz vntetl quauhtli, onietl ocelutl: injc ce quauhtli, ieholtl in Topāltemoctzin: injc vme, ieholtl in Tlacutzin. Auh injc ce ocelutl ieholtl in Temjlotzin: injc vme, ieholtl in Coiovevetzin: njmā ic ic oneoa: ce ocelutl, ce quauhtli, quintequitlanelhuja, iuhquin patlanj acalli, vmpa tlamattiuh in teteuhtitlan in q'niacacotonazque, in quinvilitequizque. Auh in jquac oiaque ie no ceppa no contlazque in omentin no ce quauhtli, auh no ce ocelutl quintlacomotlazque: auh in jquac ie vi nec tlapitzalo, njman ie ic tenamoielo: auh ceq'ntin njpa quiniacatzacujlico in tiiacaoan.

Auh in oquittaque tiiacaoan in ie tlein quichioa, 726

Auh in oquittaque in toiaovan motlalouzquja mjec in atlan mjc, in polacq̄ in illacque, ça netech ommotilinjaia, iuhquin aocmo quimati, ça iuhquin çoçotlaoa ça iuhquin chachapantivetzi, in oc nen motlaloznequj ça quauhcamac activetzi, tevivilano, omach moçoquinelogue, omach moçoquipetzcoque, vel chachaquanque, vel popolacque, vel mjec in ixpoliuh, oncan vel tonacamjcoac: auh ça yioppa in vncā ontonacamjcque in toiaovan in nepapan tlaca: auh in jquac ommjquico in toiaovan, in jmuztlaioc, ça cactimanca:

auh ic vallaque in Españoles in vncan amaxac, vel vmpa acito, in vmpa tlanfoque in macevaltin, vel techiaoaloque, vel motetemmā in iauiotl, in vel vncā amaxac yoan ipan vtli in tepeiacac iaticac: njmā ic calaquijo in telpuchcali: motencoa veican: iehica ça vncan monechicoaia in jxquich telpuchtli: njman [561 ● ic tlezoque in tlapanco. Auh in jxquich macteoalli: 344] njman ie ic ommotepeoa in jcampa Telpuchcalli, nec atla onnetepevalo. Auh ce vel tiiacauh quachic itoca, Vitzilhoatzin tlapanco moquetz, icpac in telpuchcalli, oc iuhquin tenamjtl muchiuh, oc ic achi cen-

8. Corresponding Spanish text: "donde eran la iglesia de la christiandad."
9. Ibid.: "Juntaronse Huyendo a donde estaua el cuarto de los muchachos."

14:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

When fifteen years old, the youth was placed in charge of certain chiefs[19] (the "telpuchtlato" or "achcacautin") who kept them under their oversight until they married. They were educated in communities "for the service of the tribe and for warlike purposes;"[20] were allowed, even at the age of fifteen, to go to war either armed or as carriers only,[21] and had their respective "school houses" ("telpuchcalco," houses of the youth); one in each of the four quarters of Mexico which formed the basis of the tribe's military organization, as we shall hereafter see. At these houses they were gradually trained to the handling of weapons.[22]

There were no regular times set for military practice. But every twenty days, at least, there occurred a religious festival, at which the warriors appeared in full costume, and, their chiefs included, they "skirmished," showing and practicing their skill in handling arms.[23] The youth were not only invited to such occa-

[19] Idem: "A quinze ans, le père présente deux fils à deux différents maîtres du temple et du collège militaire, . . . " The boy (Mexican "piltontli") then became a youth ("telpuchtli"—Alonzo de Molina. "Vocabulario en lengua Mexicana y castellana." Mexico, 1571. Parte IIa, p. 97).

[20] Bernardino de Sahagun ("Historia universal de las cosas de Nueva España." in vol. VII, of Lord Kingsborough, lib. III. Appendix, cap. IV, p. 118. "Y asi ofrecian "la criatura, á la casa de telpuchcalli; era su intencion que alli se criase con los otros "mancebos para servicio del pueblo y cosas de guerra." Also cap. V, 119). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIV, p. 124. "Los otros se criaban como en capitanias, porque en cada "barrio habia un capitan de ellos, llamado telpuchtlato, que quiere decir "guarda ó "capitan de los mancebos. . . . . Tambien tenian por si su comunidad, sus casas "y tierras, etc., etc.") Telpuchtlato signifies "Speaker to the youth" (from "Telpuchtli," youth, and "tlatoani," speaker. Molina, II, p. 141). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. III). Acosta (Lib. VII, cap. XXVII, p. 444. Para este efecto avia en los templos casa "particular de niños, como escuela, o pupilaje distincto del de los moços y moças del "templo"). Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXI, p. 121 and LXXVIII, p. 134). "Telpuchcalli" is derived from "telpuchtli," youth, and "calli," house. The "achcauhtli," to which we shall refer hereafter, are variously designated, even as priests (by Mendieta), as "cap-"tains of the guard" (by Torquemada), as "an officer, to whom they (the youth) were entrusted" (by Clavigero).

[21] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIV, p. 124). "Some of these youth, the strongest ones, "went to war, and the others, also, went to see how the force practiced at arms." Tezozomoc (Cap. LXXI, p. 121) "and all the youth examined, such as had not gone, went "along, carrying arms and supplies, and to become encouraged by the feats they might "witness."

[22] Mexico divided into four "calpulli" ("barrios"), each of which had its "telpuchcalli,"—"where the achcacauhtin showed and taught them the use of arms and how "to combat valorously." (Tezozomoc, cap. LXXI and LXXVIII, p. 134.)

[23] For the long list of religious festivals of the Mexicans, ordinary as well as extraordinary, we beg to refer to almost any one of the authors of the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries, on Mexico. As to the military displays and exercises during the feast, I refer particularly to Antonio de Herrera ("Historia general de los Hechos de los Castel-"lanos en las Islas y la Tierra Firme del Mar Oceano." Edition of 1730. Decada II. lib. VII, cap. XI, p. 187). "Nobody was allowed to carry arms about the city, but only "to war, to the chase, or when on guard to the King. On days of festivities, and at

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

585 at last a feast, liberally lubricated with pulque, took place.
[834] The bride and the groom, after this merciless treatment, retired for four days of penance and fasting, and not until that period elapsed did they consummate their marriage.

595 As is often the case in a warrior nation which suffers from 586 reduced man power, polygamy was prevalent. Yet the first wife took precedence over the others, and her children alone had the right to inherit. Concubines were permitted and there was, likewise, prostitution. Desertion was frowned upon, but a court would grant a decree of divorce under certain conditions. A man could obtain the right to cast out his wife if she were sterile, were subject to prolonged ill temper or neglected the household duty. The wife could be freed from a husband who failed to support her or educate the children or who ill-treated her in the physical sense, for the [587] Aztecs had not invented mental cruelty. A divorced woman could remarry as she chose, but a widow had to marry a brother of her deceased husband or one of his clansmen.[8]

562 Women had definite rights, but they were inferior to those of men. They could hold property, enter into contracts and go to courts to obtain justice. In matters of sexual morality
[834] girls had to be chaste and wives faithful to their husbands. A [837] man transgressed the rules of propriety only when his illicit relations involved a married woman. Otherwise his wife could not formally demand his fidelity. While the legal position of women was relatively low, judged by modern standards in the United States, personal influence was great, and there were several instances where a woman acted as regent when her son was too young to assume the office of chief. In mat-[648] ters of tribal alliance we have seen how the marriage of a chief's daughter or sister to another ruler cemented an alliance.

1:Vaillant A-5 (1928-1936)1941 NU7 Aztec NU7

562 alliance. Moreover, marriages were carefully arranged be-
[584] tween families, so that for a husband grossly to neglect his wife's rights was a breach, if not of etiquette, certainly of [793] social contract. The priesthood may have offered a modest field of influence and attainment to women. However, history records no mention of any advantage deriving from temple service.

554 Men had the chief opportunities, and these lay in various 555 directions. The early chroniclers, conditioned by their mediæval Spanish background, spoke of hereditary classes. In all probability, judging from Indian communities as a whole, there was rank but not class in the hereditary sense. As in our own society, a man could attain high rank through his own efforts, and through his eminence his children would consequently profit in their own social adjustment. Yet they could not reach their father's position unless they earned it through
[556] equivalent tribal service. Wealth did exist, and property in the form of rights to use land, tools and other possessions
[642 421] created a social and economic stratification. In theory and practice Aztec society was democratic, and the communal ownership of productive property was its economic base.[4]

555 A man attained rank through the measure of his tribal service. The wise farmer, the wily hunter, the brave warrior or the dexterous artisan gained admiration from his fellows because of superior skill. If his wisdom and judgment were conspicuous he might be elected as the clan representative to the tribal council, or even as chief. Similarly an individual who dedicated himself to learning the magic rituals to placate the gods, could become a medicine man or priest. However, in the populous and advanced city-states activities tended to become specialized, and greater opportunity led to a more

302 tance upon their heads; it was dyed with indigo,[3] so
386 that their hair shone. The teeth were stained with cochineal; the hands and neck were painted with designs—the necks were covered [with painting]. The stomach and breasts were [also] painted with designs.

515 They bathed in the sweat house and with [soap
562 and] water. They were held in esteem. They were modest, good, and of noble [mien]. Thus did they [343] speak—attentively, and respectfully of others; they were diligent and considerate.

1 v [i.e. the Aztec women -- Analyst]

Motema, mahaltia, momamauizmati: pinaoanj, qualli mauiztic, injc tlatoa: temauhcaittanj, teimacaçinj, hiçiuhcaioque, moiolitlacoanj.

3. Xuchquilitl. Urbina (op. cit., p. 56) mentions two kinds: xuchquilitl pitzahuac, Indigofera atil Linn., and xuchquilitl patlahuac, Coldenia procuba Kunth—both producing a blue dye.

15:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

Granada.[105] It was different, however, in Mexico, where we meet 428 with traces of a decided progress. Not only had descent been changed to the male line,[106] but heirship was limited, to the exclusion of the kin and of the agnates themselves, to the children of the male sex.[107] Whatever personal effects a father left, which were [768 not offered up in sacrifice at the ceremonies of his funeral,[108] they 764] were distributed among his male offsprings, and if there were none, they went to his brothers. Females held nothing whatever, beyond [562] their wearing apparel and some few ornaments for personal use.

The "tlalmilli" itself, at the demise of a father, went to his oldest son, with the obligation to improve it for the benefit of the entire family until the other children had been disposed of by marriage.[109] But the other males could apply to the chief of the calpulli for a "tlalmilli" of their own:[110] the females went with [105] Gomara ("Historia de las Indios," Vedia I, p. 201). Garcia ("Origen de los Indios," Lib. IV, cap. 23, p. 247). Piedrahita (Parte 1, lib. I, cap. 5, p. 27). Joaquin Acosta ("Compendio historico del Descubrimiento y Colonisazion de la Nueva-Granada," Cap. XI, p. 201). Ternaux-Compans ("L'ancien Cundinamarca," pp. 21 and 38).

[106] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Gomara (p. 434). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XIII). Zurita (pp. 12 and 43).

[107] Letter of Motolinia and Diego d'Olarte, to Don Luis de Velasco, Cholula, 27 Aug., 1554 ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 467). "The daughters did not inherit, it was the principal, wife's son . . . ." Besides, nearly every author designates but a son, or sons,—as the heirs. There is no mention made of daughters at all. In Tlaxcallan, it is also expressly mentioned that the daughters did not inherit (Torquemada, Lib. XI, cap. XXII, p. 348). In general, the position of woman in ancient Mexico was a very inferior one, and but [562] little above that which it occupies among Indians in general. (Compare the description of Gomara, p. 440. Vedia I, with those of Sahagun. Lib. X, cap. I, p. 1; cap. XIII, pp. 30, 31, 32 and 33. The fact is generally conceded). H. H. Bancroft, "Native Races." Vol. II, Cap. VI, p. 224, etc.

[108] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120). Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XLII to XLVIII, pp. 515 to 529). Acosta (Lib. V, cap. VIII, pp. 320, 321 and 322). Gomara (pp. 436 and 437. Vedia, I). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XI., pp. 102 and 103). Clavigero (Lib. VI, cap. XXXIX. "They burnt the clothes, arrows, and a portion of the household utensils . . . . .")

[109] Motolinia (Trat. II, cap. V, p. 120), "el cual hacer de testamento no se acostumbraba en esta tierra, sino que dejaban las casas y heredades á sus hijos, y el mayor, si era hombre, lo poseia y tenia cuidado de sus hermanos y hermanas, y yendo los hermanos creciendo y casándose, el hermano mayor partia con ellos segun tenia; y si los hijos eran por casar, entrábanse en la hacienda los mismos hermanos, digo en las heredades, y de ellas mantenian á sus sobrinos y de la otra hacienda." Gomara ("Conq. de Méjico," p. 434). "It is customary among tributary classes that the oldest son shall inherit the father's property, real and personal, and shall maintain and support all the brothers and nephews, provided they do what he commands them. The reason why they do not partition the estates is in order not to decrease it through such a partition . . . . ." Simancas M. S. S ("Recueil, etc., etc.," p. 234). "Relative to the calpulalli . . . . the sons mostly inherited."

[110] Zurita (p. 55). "He who has no land applies to the chief of the tribe (calpulli), who, upon the advice of the other old men, assigns to him a tract suitable for his wants, and corresponding to his abilities and to his strength." Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 155).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

174 the Mexican tribe in a more direct manner. It was the overthrow 648 and capture, after a short but bloody struggle, of the pueblo of Tlatilulco.[56] Owing to the close connection of the latter with the Mexicans both had remained on a non-hostile footing; for the suspicious watchfulness with which each viewed the other did not comport with any more intimate relations, those of trade and exchange excepted. When the confederacy came into existence, Tlatilulco was counted in as a part of Mexico, since its people acknowledged themselves to be Mexicans; but there is no evidence authorizing the conclusion that the Tlatilulca played any other role, beyond that of auxiliaries to their kindred of Tenuchtitlan.[57] The rash attempt of the former at the organization of a conspiracy to become "Mexico alone" terminated fatally; their place was taken and barbarously sacked, their leaders were killed in the fray or sacrificed afterwards, and the Mexicans, exasperated at the conduct of their treacherous kinsmen treated them in an unusually severe manner. We have seen already that, in any conquest, the conquered tribe, if not exterminated, was only subjected to more or [562] less heavy tribute. But the Tlatilulca were dealt with far worse:
174 they were degraded to the rank of "women," their public market
648 was ordered closed, their council-house left to decay and their 727 young men, expressly debarred from the privilege of carrying arms in aid of the Mexicans, were required to become the carriers of supplies to their captors. Such a punishment was unknown in the annals of Indian conquest, and appears even to militate against our views of aboriginal society in Mexico; still it was in perfect harmony with the institutions of the latter. The Tlatilulca were, as we should never forget, not only a tribe

[56] The "Codex Telleriano-Remensis" (Plate XIV, also explanation Vol. VI, p. 138), concurs in this date, or the year seven "calli" which is indeed 1473.

[57] This acknowledgment—"to be Mexicans"—on the part of the inhabitants of Tlatilulco, was in the nature of a claim, and with a spirit of jealousy and envy. Although Durán says (Cap. XXXII, p. 257), "aviendo estado hasta entonces sujetos á la corona real de Méjico," this affirmation is utterly disproven, not only by all the other sources, but by his own statements (Cap. V, pp. 43 and 46). The confused and contradictory tales about the state of war preceding the formation of the confederacy still make the Tlatilulca always appear as assisting their neighbors of Tenuchtitlan, more or less. Sometimes they were neutral only, and at times they may have felt inclined to foster attempts at destruction of their rivals by outsiders, but they still were afraid of the consequences of it for their own independence. Durán (Cap. V, p. 46). The singular statement that the Tlatilulca even attempted, though fruitlessly, to withdraw the Tezcucans and Tlacopans from Tenuchtitlan, inducing them to become their associates in the work of its overthrew, is significant. See Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LVIII, p. 176) "Quisose aliar con los de Tlacupa, y Tetzcuco, los quales no le acudieron."

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

565 of any connection by kin. This presupposes a class of outcasts from the bond of kinship.

There is no evidence of the formation of such a cluster prior to the permanent settlement of the tribe. Neither can we trace its gradual increase from a given time. But a glance at some of the rules of kinship, and at the practical working of these rules finally crystallizing into an equivalent for laws, will enable us to discern its origin.

121 The relation of sexes being at the bottom of society based upon kin, it follows that sexual intercourse gradually assumed a regulated shape, proportionate to the progress in institutions. The ancient Mexicans had, as we have already established, advanced into descent in the male line, and had secured a nascent state of the modern family. Marriage was well known to them [581] as a rule. But so powerful was the influence exercised by the kin, as unit of public life that, once the ritual union of a couple acknowledged as a necessity for future joint life, it exacted of its male members the obligation to marry for the purpose of propagating and increasing the kin. Only such as were naturally helpless, and such as in view of "medicine" made vows of permanent [587] chastity, were excused. Any other youth therefore, who refused to take a wife at the proper age, was treated with contempt and consequently expelled from the kin.[80]

562 Woman, among the aboriginal Mexicans, was in a singular predicament. Through the establishment of descent in the male line she lost her hold on public life, (which she latterly regained through the establishment of the family proper) and thus remained little else than a chattel in the power of man. Still, the ritual act 562 of marriage being once adopted, the same obligation to marry, 589 which we have already found incumbent upon the male, also devolved upon the female, and any girl therefore, who did not "take vows" for "medicine," or who was physically not mis-

[80] Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. V, p. 461). Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," pp 133 and 134) "s'ils ne voulaient pas prendre des femmes, ou les congédiait." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIV, p. 125), "Llegados á la edad de casarse, ... Si pasando la edad se descuidaban, y veian que no se querian casar, tresquiláhanlos, y despedianlos de la compañia de los mancebos." This meant exclusion from the kin since, as soon as they were married, "they were classified, since, according to their custom, they were divided into sections each of which had a chief or captain, as well for the collection of taxes as for other reasons." These "chiefs or captains" were those of the calpulli. Zurita, (p. 135), also Bustamante, ("Tezcoco," Part III, cap. III, p. 215), "Cuando se casaban los empadronaban. . . . ." Torquemada (Lib. IX, cap. XII, p. 186, almost a copy of Mendieta).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

shapen, if she did not join a husband at the proper age, was also regarded as a reprobate.[81]

To these two kinds of outcasts others should be added. It is a known fact that, if any member of a calpulli failed to cultivate his garden lot for two years, or if he failed to have it cultivated under his name, then he lost every and all rights thereto. This implied expulsion from the calpulli, consequently again, expulsion from the bond of kinship. Any one who removed from the quarter or calpulli to which he belonged, lost his rights thereby; in other words he became an outcast.[82]

The lot of such people, thrust, as they were, outside of the pale of regular society, was an unenviable one. Removal to foreign tribes was not only dangerous, but even impracticable in the earlier times, when the class came into existence. Still they had to live. Therefore the males bargained their services to such members of the kins, as could afford to nourish them in return for manual labor.[83] No other remuneration but subsistence could be thought of. For the sake of subsistence therefore the outcast became, what the majority of authorities have called a slave.

Fray Juan de Torquemada writes as follows; — "The manner, in which these Indians made slaves, was very different from that of the nations of Europe and other parts of the world. It was very difficult at the outset of their conversion to understand it properly, but to make it clear (especially as the customs of Mexico, and Tetzcuco had it, since other Provinces not subject to these king-

[81] Anonymous Conqueror (Vol. I, Col. de Doc., p. 387): "A gente che stima meno le donne di quanti nationi sono al mondo, perchi non gli comunichereble mai i fatti loro, anchora che conoscuse che il farlo gli potesse melter conto." Oviedo (Lib. XXXIII, cap. LI, p. 326). See Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. III, p. 368), on "mancebas" in general in regard to women who refused to marry, though living a dissolute life. Also Sahagun (Lib. X, cap. XV, p. 37); Durán (p. 129). If a girl abandoned her house, she might finally be disposed of as a slave, or be abandoned ("on les abandonnait").

[82] Durán (p. 56): "Le propriétaire qui ne cultivait pas pendant deux années, par sa faute ou par négligence, sans juste cause, ... était averti de les cultiver; et s'il ne le faisait pas, l'année d'ensuite on les donnait à un autre." (Id. p. 54): "Si, par hazard, le membre d'un calpulli le quittait pour aller demeurer dans un autre, on lui retirait les terres qui lui avaient été assignées. . . . . Adopted also by Herrera (Dec. III, lib. IV, cap. XV, p. 128). Compare "Tenure of Lands" (p. 426).

[83] Gomara ("Conquista," Vedia I, p. 441): "Los hombres necesitados y haraganes se vendian. . . ." Cortés ("Carta Segunda," Vedia I, p. 34): "Hay en todos los mercados y lugares públicos de la dicha ciudad, todos los dias, muchas personas trabajadores y maestros de todos oficios, esperando quien los alquile por sus jornales." Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. XVI, pp. 564 and 565; and Cap. XVII, pp. 565 and 566). Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVIII, p. 488).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

tants of the valley of their annual crops. In order to escape 567 threatened famine, fathers bartered their services and those of their 731 children for food, to such tribes as possessed sufficient stores.[87]

If the consequence of expulsion from the bond of kinship or 562 of voluntary abandonment of the rights as members, were, for 565
the male, a degradation to work for others, it was altogether 837 different for the female. The position of women was, as we have already intimated, little better than that of a costly animal, and protection was awarded them only in so far as they represented a part of their husbands' property. This the kin itself was obligated to defend and protect. The wife, however, had no other right than that. She could not complain if her lord and master increased his "family-stock" by the addition of one or more concubines, nor if he strayed about to satisfy his desires with other females. Such acts were even subservient to the kins' interest, since they led to an increase of numbers. But the women themselves who gave their persons away for such [634] purposes could only belong to the class of outcasts; for illicit intercourse with wives and daughters of the kins was, as we shall hereafter see, severely punished. Through the formation of the class of outcasts, or at least along with it, prostitution became [548
tolerated among the ancient Mexicans, while polygamy in 595]
the shape of concubinage was introduced as a legitimate custom.[88]

[87] Besides the famines recorded since the conquest, the older authors and sources in general notice several (at least two) previous to 1500. It is not to our purpose to discuss their dates. They are given with the usual variation and discordance. Thus for instance, the "Codex Telleriano Remensis" (Kingsborough, Vol. I, plate VII, and Vol. VI, p. 196) mentions one in 1404 (1 Tochtli), which is evidently incorrect, since 1 Tochtli would be 1402. The Ce-Tochtli thus mentioned, is 1451. In that year, Durán (Cap. XXX, p. 245) places the beginning of the great drouth which, after three years duration, so completely exhausted the Mexican stores and supplies that "wrathy chief" the older, ("Huehue Motecuzuma") told the people "que cada uno vaya á buscar su remedio" (p. 247). In consequence of it, it is reported that many people "sold their sons and daughters to the merchants and principals (señores) of the tribes that had wherewith to give them to eat, and they gave for a baby (or boy rather, "niño") a small basket of corn (maiz) to the father or mother, obligating themselves to sustain the child as long as the famine might last, for that if afterwards the father or mother might wish to redeem it, they should be obligated to pay these alimonts." This is, as usual, also stated by Tezozomoc (Cap. XL, p. 94), though with less details. Torquemada (Lib. II, cap. LXXIII, p. 96) reports the same, but placing it fifty years later, under the last "wrathy chief" (Cap. CX, p. 233) in 1505, A. D. Sahagun (Lib. VIII, cap. I, p. 269), agrees with Durán and Tezozomoc, so does Clavigero (Lib. IV, cap. XII, p. 268): "Many sold themselves for food." This date is also 1451-1454. It is singular that Torquemada (Lib. II. cap. XLVII, p. 156) also relates the famine under the older "wrathy chief," and his words are almost textually copied by Clavigero.

[88] The possession of more than one woman, or rather the enjoyment of more than

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

582 It is beyond our purpose, at present, to dwell on the [562] ritual details themselves, but we must lay particular stress on the fact, that the wife became the property of her husband and that she was, as such, placed under the direct protection of his kinsmen. Such marriages could be annulled by mutual consent, [586] provided the kin gave its approbation. In such a case the woman was at liberty to marry again, and also to return to the calpulli from which she issued.[110]

764 We might now be expected to cast a glance at the funeral rites of the ancient Mexicans since it was one of the attributes of the kin to enjoy common burial.[111] But this question is so intimately connected with that of creed and belief that we refrain from trespassing too much on that field. The Mexicans practised cremation and, in the case of warriors slain in battle, at least, it is known that the exercises were conducted by the officers and leaders of each kin, all its members, and not the special relatives and friends only of the deceased, attending the ceremony.[112] Our knowledge of the burial places of aboriginal Mexico is still very indefi-

583 was given by their hand, out of which there arise great discomforts, and marriage 584 among free persons is not as free as it should be, therefore, we ordain and command: that no Indian principal of whichever condition or rank ("estado,") shall of his own accord or authority give away any wife to anybody whatsoever, nor shall he prevent any Macegual from marrying freely the woman whom he may wish, and who may like him,— under penalty of thirty days of imprisonment, and other penalties which the Judge may determine upon."

("Concilios Provinciales, Primero y Segundo, celebrados por la muy noble, y muy Leal ciudad de México etc., etc. Dados á Luz el Ill'mo Sr. D. Francisco Antonio Lorenzana Arzobispo de esta Santa Metropolitana Iglesia Año de 1769). The "principales Indios" are the officers of the "Kins," and thus we have, thirty five years after the conquest, a formal recognition of the custom among the Mexican Indians that marriage was controlled by the Kin. How the "encomenderos" subsequently interfered with that custom, in order to conceal their own criminal doings, is plainly told by Fray Antonio de Remesal "Historia de la Provincia de San Vicente de Chyapa y Guatemala, etc., etc." Madrid, 1619 (Lib. VII, cap. XV, p. 327).

[110] It is singular that some of the earliest ecclesiastical writers imply that there was no rule of repudiation or divorce among the ancient Mexicans. Mendieta (Lib. III, cap. XLVIII, p. 303). The same authority, however, attributes this to the baneful effects of contact with the Spaniards, in consequence of which the customs of the natives grew more or less dissolute and immoral (p. 304). Durán (p. 97) confirms, and Torquemada (Lib. XVI, cap. XXIV, p. 196), copies Mendieta literally. For the customs of divorce see Durán (p. 97), Mendieta (Lib. III, cap. XLVIII, p. 304), Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XV, pp. 441 and 442). Gomara (Vedia I, p. 440). Herrera (Dec. III, Lib. II, cap. C, XVII, pp. 72 and 73), Bustamante ("Tezcoco," p. 196), and others. The division of property mentioned as accompanying the divorce, applies only to personal effects, since the wife brought nothing else. See "Tenure of Lands" (p. 429, and note 107).

The matrimonial customs of the ancient Mexicans will be more thoroughly discussed by me in another monograph, subsequent to one on "Religious Beliefs."

[111] "Ancient Society" (pp. 71 and 83).

[112] Compare Durán (Cap. XVIII, pp. 134 and 136), and Tezozomoc (Cap. XXV, pp. 37 and 38).

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date)1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

procuresses were severely punished, though not with loss of 689
life.[126]

While clandestine relations between young men and girls were [836] known to exist and, if not sanctioned, still were not punished,[127] 684 it was different if a married man attempted to seduce a maiden who was not an outcast. The seducer was invariably punished.[128] Intercourse between unmarried people was tolerated, as a preliminary to marriage and the consequent increase of kinship, but if a husband, in contravention of the obligation "not to marry in the kin," endeavored to satisfy his lusts upon one of that kin's wards, as the daughters of members all were, then he committed

VII, cap. XVII, p. 488). all affirm, besides, that young people, while yet in care of the "houses of training," if intoxicated, were killed. This is also confirmed by Sahagun (Lib. III. appendix, cap. VI, pp. 270 and 271). Except by Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. II, pp. 22 and 23), it is generally conceded that drunkenness was well controlled in aboriginal Mexico.

[126] Although prostitution was tolerated, still, houses of ill-fame did not exist. Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. II, p. 376): "Esto parece, porque permitieron, que huviese Mugeres, que se daban à los que querian, y se andaba á esta vida suelta, y ganancioza, como las de nuestra España, y otros Reinos; puesto que no tenian casa señalada, ni publica para la execucion de su mal oficio, sino que cada qual moraba donde le parecia, y el acto deshonesto, en que se ocupaba, servia de lugar publico. y en el mismo vicio se hacia publica y se manifestaba." Vetancurt (Vol. I, p. 480): "Permitian los mexicanos, mujeres que ganasen con sus cuerpos, aunque no tenian lugares señalados." It is, therefore, not quite clear what may be meant by the term "alcahueta." In the sense of the French word "entremetteuse," alone, they were amenable to punishment, since it was the duty of the man to hunt his "female," although he sometimes employed women called "cihuatlanqui" for that purpose I suppose that such women were punished, not for the immorality of their conduct, but for their unauthorized forwardness in [562] addressing themselves to men, and thus trespassing upon the dignity of that superior being. In regard to authorities on the mode of punishment, I but refer to those quoted by Mr. H. H. Bancroft (Vol. II, p. 469, note 101). [548]

[127] I have already shown that young people held intimate relations with each other before the formalities of marriage were arranged. Thus, while he was yet at the "Telpuchcalli," the youth had his female friend, "amiga" or "manceba," outside. This is positively stated by Sahagun (Lib. III, appendix, cap. VI, p. 271): "y estos mancebos tenian sus amigas cada uno dos ó tres, la una tenian en su casa, y las otras estaban en las de sus familias." and Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. III, p. 376). That these female "friends" were regarded with more than a feeling of platonic love, is dryly expressed by Sahagun (Id: cap. V, p. 270): "y los que eran amancebados ibanse á dormir con sus amigas." It is also asserted by Torquemada (see above): "que despues que aquel mancebo havia un Hijo, en la dicha manceba, luego le era forzoso, ó dejarla, ó recibirla por muger legitima." Vetancurt (Vol. I, p. 480): "los mancebos antes de casarse tenian sus mancebas, y solian pedirlas á las madres." This almost establishes promiscuity among the ancient Mexicans, as a preliminary to formal marriage.

[128] Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 485) says that the punishment was not like that of the adulterer, "because the husband was not required to the same amount of conjugal fidelity as the wife." With "slaves" concubinage was permitted, and the result of childbirth was freedom to the child. Death was invariably the punishment of those who held, or attempted to hold, intercourse with girls in care of the house of worship. Durán (p. 106, etc.). Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIX, p. 130): "El que hazia fuerza à virgen, ora fuese en el campo, ora en casa del padre moria por ello."

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

684 a crime which the calpulli was bound to punish in the most exemplary manner.

689 While we are not at all surprised at such severity in the cases 562 above stated, it cannot fail to astonish us, that such apparently harmless acts as those of a man wearing female dress and of a woman appearing in male attire were visited upon the offenders with death.[129] Still, the ancient Mexicans could assign from their peculiar point of departure good cause for such cruel punishments. The position of woman was so inferior, they were regarded as so far beneath the male, that the most degrading epithet that could be applied to any Mexican, aside from calling him a dog, was that of "woman." It was more injurious than coward. Now, for a man to assume the garb of such an inferior being became almost equivalent to a crime against nature. It was an act of wilful degradation which was a deadly insult to his own kin. On the other hand, if a woman presumed to don the dress of her lord and master, it again was a crime of an equally heinous nature. In both cases the dignity of the whole consanguine group became deeply affected, and death alone could satisfy its honor. After this, it is needless to say how the actual crimes against nature were regarded and punished.[130]

687 It was also a capital crime for any man, to assume the dress or ornaments peculiar to an office, without being himself that office's lawful incumbent. Besides being a grave insult to the rightful officer, it was a dangerous offence towards the kin, especially in case of war, when it amounted to actual treason.[131]

684 Since it was the kin's duty to protect, not only the persons, but also the property of its members, it follows that adultery committed with a married woman entailed deadly punishment upon the male, whether he was married or not. His crime was that of stealing the most precious chattel of one member of the calpulli.

[129] This is so generally mentioned by all authors, that special references are superfluous.

[684] [130] All authors insist that incest was punished with death. Torquemada (Lib. XII, cap. IV, p. 380): "Todos los que cometian incesto en el primer grado de consanguinidad, tenian pena de muerte, si no eran cuñados, y cuñadas." Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXIX, p. 137). Vetancurt (Vol. I, p. 481). All these authors appear to have gathered their information from the same source, or rather Torquemada is frequently Mendieta's plagiary, while Vetancurt often copies Torquemada. To avoid superfluous quotation, I beg to refer, on the subject of "unnatural crimes," to Bancroft (Vol. II, pp. 466, 467 and 468, "Native Races").

[131] Mendieta (Lib. II, cap. XXVII, p. 132), copied by Torquemada (Lib. XIV, cap. III, p. 540), Durán (Cap. XXVI, pp. 214, 215 and 216), and others.

16:Bandelier E-4 (no date) 1880 NU7 Aztec NU7

463 compelled him to do it.[70] It is true, that such as formed gold or silver into pleasing or (as viewed from eastern notions of taste) rather striking shapes, enjoyed some particular consideration; but this was not so much in deference to their skill, as to the material upon which they exerted it. Gold ("teo-cuitlatl") and silver ("Iztac-teo-cuitlatl") were regarded as "offal of gods." Thus they became objects of "medicine," and those who wrought them into useful or decorative articles, were near to the "medicine-men" themselves.[71] Furthermore, the manner and method of working was so slow, it relied so exclusively upon that patient [556] disregard of time which characterizes even the manufacture of a simple arrowhead, that no accumulation of wealth could result from it.[72] Besides, the artisan had, like any other member of the kin, to furnish his share towards the requirements of public

[70] Zurita ("Rapport, etc.," p. 129). "Les chefs inférieurs et les personnes du peuple élevaient aussi leurs enfants avec beaucoup de soin, leur inspiraient l'horreur du vice, leur recommandaient le respect des dieux, les conduisaient aux temples et les faisaient travailler suivant leurs dispositions; cependant, en général, le fils embrassait la profession de son père." Gomara ("Conquista, etc.," Vedia, Vol. I, p. 438). "Los pobres enseñaban á sus hijos sus oficios, no porque no tuviesen libertad para mostralles otro, sino porque los aprendiesen sin gastar con ellos." Carlos María de Bustamante. Tezcoco en los últimos Tiempos de sus antiguos Reyes," 1826. Parte tercera. (Cap. III, p. 212). "Enseñaban ademas los oficios á que tenian aficion." Clavigero (Lib. VII, [564] cap. V, p. 462). "The sons generally learned the trade of their fathers," but they were not bound to do it, and therefore no "caste."

[71] The words are composed of: "Iztac," white object (Molina II, p. 49). "Teotl" god (II, p. 101), "Cuitlatl" filth, therefore gold was "offal of God," and silver, "white offal of God."

325 The working of gold and silver was regarded, by the Mexicans, as an invention of "Quetzalcohuatl." Sahagun (Lib. III, cap. III, p. 243). "y los vasallos que tenia eran todos oficiales de artes mecánicas, y diestros para labrar las piedras verdes, que se llaman chalchivites, y tambien para fundir plata, y hacer otras cosas; y estás artes todos tuviéron principio y origen de l dicho Quetzalcoatl." (Also Lib. X, cap. XXIX, [685] p. 113, etc.). Theft of gold or precious stones was punished by death through sacrifice. Clavigero (Lib. VII, cap. XVII, p. 487). Vetancurt (Parte IIa, Trat. I°, p. 484. "Leyes de los Mexicanos").

287 [72] A very remarkable way of manufacturing their most admired works — those made of feathers — is reported by Mendieta (Lib. IV, cap. XII, pp. 405 and 406): "And there is, besides, something else to notice of this featherwork, namely: that if there are twenty artisans, they will undertake jointly the manufacture of one piece ("imágen"), for, dividing among themselves the figure of the image in as many parts as there are of their number, each one takes his piece home and finishes it there. Afterwards they all meet again and put their pieces together, thus finishing the figure in as perfect a manner as if one alone had made the whole." (Copied by Torquemada, Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 489, and, with slight variations, also by Vetancurt, Vol. I, p. 389.) In regard to the manner of working, Torquemada (Lib. XIII, cap. XXXIV, p. 487), makes the pertinent remark: "All this they worked (as we have said) with other stones, and with flint; and according to the subtlety of the work, I think they must have spent long time in finishing it." See in general E. B. Tylor ("Researches into the Early History of Mankind," Cap. VII, pp. 187 and 188), also Motolinia (Trat. I, cap. IV, pp. 31 and 32).

776
796 goods]." Thus it was made known to the people that they 567 would be offered up as sacrifices.

At this time they gave gifts and had a feast.

And their victims they set up in a good place, all in costly mantles which had been placed upon them. [And] they made them dance upon the roof-tops or in the market place. [And] they went singing, ending their song mocking death.

And if any were noted who were very subtle, among [565] those to be offered up as sacrifices; one skilled in songs, one who was ingenious, who was intelligent and able, the noblemen set him aside and put another in his place.

Likewise, if a woman could sew, or if she prepared food
[595] well, or made good cacao—from whose hand good food and drink came; [or if she was] a good interpreter; her also they set aside. The nobles took [such women] as wives.

776 [Yiacatecutli's] array [was thus] put on: his face was covered with white pyrites. He had a tuft of hair on the front of his head like a pillar of stone and a headband with bunches of quetzal feathers. He wore golden ear-plugs. A blue knotted cloth was his cape.[110] He had a costly breech-cloth. He had little bells and shells. He wore princely sandals. His shield bore a coil pattern like a gourd vessel,[111] in quetzal feathers. His traveling staff was in his hand; he had a cane staff.

Twentieth Chapter, which telleth of the god whose name was Lord of the Four Directions (Napa tecutli).

776 It is said that he also belonged among the Tlalocs. He 467 was the special [god of] the mat-makers' guild, who worshipped him as a god.[112]

And he was also [god] of those who fashioned mats of large, fat reeds, and of those who made frames of reeds.[113]

[773] They spoke in this wise: "For it was he who first taught and showed them how to weave mats and make seats."

He it was who owned, ruled, discovered, began, and initiated [mat-making].

And they spoke thus: "For he it is who causeth the reeds to sprout and grow—the fine thin ones, the coarse ones, the long, fat reeds and the round, white ones, those with spikeets, the black ones, the sharp ones, the thin ones."[114]

776 And when it was his feast day, they spoke thus: "He 796 washeth and bathesh men; he shaketh and sprinkleth rain 467 upon them." [For] greatly they importuned [rain] of him.

And also each year they slew a man who represented him, [567] a slave.

iquac tetlauhtia, tetlaqualtia.

Auh yn jtlaaltilhoan, iccan, quinquetza: mùch tlaçotilmatli, yn jntech quintlalilia: ipã mjztoiaia in tlapanco, anoço tianquizco: cujcatinemj, tlatlahdamj yn jncuje, ynjc momiquinquequeloa.

Auh intla aca oittoc, in cenca mjmati tlaaltilli, yn cujcamatinj, in iolizmatquj, yn jne, yn iollo: qujqujxtiaia in pipilti, ipan tlaçaquetzala:

no iuhquj, intla cioatl, intla tlamachiuhquj, anoço vellaqualchioa, vel achioa, in qualli yiauh, in qualli intlaqual ymac quiça; vellatolmelaoac: no qujrtiloia, quinmotlacaçoanaiaia in pipilti.

Jn jnechichioal motlatlatlali, mixapetzvi, ytemjlo, izquatzo, izquatzone, quetzallalpile, tencujtlanacoche, xiuhtlalpilli yn jtilma, tlaçomaxtle, tzitzile, eiooale, teccaque, quetzalxicalcoliuhquj yn jchimol, ytlaçaia ymac omoc, ozlatepile.

Jnic cempoalli capitulo, ytechpa tlatoa yn teutl yn jtoca catca Napa tecutli.

Juh mjtoa, ca no intech pouj yn tlaloque: iehoan ymjzcoian, incatjan, in calpolloc, quimoetutiaia in petlachiuhque:

yoan tolcuechiuhque, in tlacuechjuhque, ytech moposia:

iuh quitoaia, ca iehoatl achto quinmachti, quimittiti, in petlachiualiztli, yn icpalchiualiztli:

iehoatl axcaua cuecueioaia, tlatquioa, tlanextile, tlatzintile, tlapoualtile.

Joan iuh quitoaia ca iehoatl quimaltia, quiquixtia, in toli in tolpitzaoac, in tolpatlactli, in tolmjmjlli, aztapili, in tolquijtol, in tolcaputl, yn jztoli, xomali:

yoan yn iquac illuiztuhquiçaia, iuh mjtoa, tepapaca, tealtia, tepan quiztemoloa, tepan quipizca, yn aoachtli, cenca tlaihtlaxjliloia.

Auh no ce tlacatl, ipan quizcoaia, tlacotli, in quimictiaia cexiuhtica:

110. Corresponding Spanish version states that "este cabezon, con una manta igual, y sobre el igual, una red negra: de numero igual igual, se parecen, por los medios de la red."

111. The xiuhtlalpilli also has been referred to as a conventionalized serpent-head design.

[618] 112. Calpolli—this or gens, which connoted, probably, of heads of old families, controlled domestic affairs, distributed its common lands among members (Siller: op. cit., Vol. II, pt. I, p. 85, citing Alonso de Zurita: Breve y sumaria relacion, Vol. II, pp. 72-227). In various of his writings Siller uses the word "guild" when the context suggests its membership.

113. Corresponding Spanish text says, "hacen cestos de juncos: que llaman ocoxcatl."

114. Cf. Sahagun: op. cit., Vol. I, p. 149 and Vol. III, p. 272.

The seventeenth month they called Tititl. In this month they celebrated a feast to a goddess whom they named Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, and by [still] another name, Cozcamiauh. In honor of this goddess they slew a woman, and as soon as they had torn out her heart they struck off her head and performed a dance with it. He who went before carried the head by the hair, in his right hand, making [with it] the gestures of the dancer.

Al mes decimo septimo llamauan Tititl. En este mes haziã fiesta a vna diosa que llamauã Jlamatecutli, y por otro nombre Tona, y por otro nombre cozcamjauh, a honrra desta diosa: matauan vna muger, y desque le aviã sacado el coraçon cortauanle la cabeça y hazian areyto con ella, el que yva adelante lleuaua la cabeça por los cabellos en la mano derecha, haziendo sus ademanes de bayle.

796X
[805
776]
[535]

Chapter 17
Tititl

This woman whom they slew in this feast they arrayed in the adornments of that goddess whose likeness [she was], called Ilamatecutli, and by another name, Tonan, which meaneth "Our Mother." This woman, thus bedight with the adornments [which are] set forth in the description, danced alone. A number of old men made music for her; and, dancing, she sighed and wept, mindful that soon she was to die. After midday, the priests arrayed themselves in the ornaments of all the gods, and went before her, and took her up to the pyramid where she was to die. Having stretched her out upon the sacrificial stone, they tore out her heart, and they struck off her head. Then one of those who went adorned as a god took [it], and, [with him] foremost, carrying it by the hair, they performed a dance with it. He who bore it in his right hand guided [them], and he made the dance gestures with it.

On the same day that the servants of the idols slew this woman, they performed certain mock-battles, and made merry, running—some behind the others—up and down the pyramid, enacting certain ceremonies.

On the next day, all the common folk made a number of sacks, like pockets, with some cords attached, as much as a fathom long. They filled these

1. Marginal notation: Jamaniac de dios muy.

Cap. 17:
Tititl.

1 c KL
2 d A esta muger que matauan en esta
3 e fiesta: componjanla con los ataujos de
4 f aquella diosa cuya ymagen tenja que
5 g se llama Jlamatecutli y por otro nom-
6 A bre Tona qujere dezir nuestra madre
7 b esta muger ansi compuesta con los 8 c ataujos estan puestos en la historia,
9 d baylaua sola: hazianla el son vnos vie-
10 e jos, y baylando suspiraua y lloraua,
11 f acordandose que luego auja de morir:
12 g pasando el medio diã, componjanse los 13 A satrapas con los ornamentos de todos
14 b los dioses, y yvan delante della, y su-
15 c bianla al cu, donde auja de morir:
16 d echada sobre el taxon de piedra, sa-
17 e cauanla el coraçon, y cortauanla la ca-
18 f beça, tomaua luego vno de aquellos
19 g que yva adornado como dios, y delan-
20 A tero de todos y lleuandola por los ca-bellos: hazian areyto cõ ella gujaua el que la lleuaua en la mano derecha y hazia sus ademanes de bayle con ella.

c 19
d 20
e 21
f 22
g 23
A 24
b 25 c 26
d 27
e 28
f 29
g 30
A 31
b 1[1]
c 2 d 3
e 4
f 5[2]
g 6
A 7

796X
535

El mesmo dia que mataua esta muger los mjnjstros de los ydolos, haziã ciertas escaramuças y regozijos: corriendo vnos tras otros el cu, arriba y el cu abazo haziendo ciertas cerimonjas.

796X

El dia sigujente todos los populares hazian vnas talegas como bolsas, con vnos cordeles atadas tan largos como vn braço: hinchian aquellas talegas de

796X
565
524
[415]

2. Marginal notation: Ejercicio demonjo.

X 796
565
524

sacks with soft things, like wool, and they carried them hidden under their capes, and they struck, with the bags, all the women whom they might meet in the streets. This game reached such lengths that the boys also made bags and with them mauled the girls so much that they made them weep. Many other ceremonies were performed in this celebration, which are set forth at length in the account of this feast.

cosas blandas como lana y llegauanlas escondidas debaxo de las mantas, y a todas las mugeres que topauan por la calle, dauanlas de talegazos: llegaua a tanto este juego, que tambiẽ los muchachos hazian las talegas y aporreauan con ellas a las muchachas tãto que las hazian llorar. Otras muchas cerimonjas se hazian esta fiesta q̃ estan a la larga puestas en la historia desta fiesta.

The Thirteenth Movable Feast

In the sign which they called ce itzcuintli, [which] they said was the sign of fire, they held a great festival in honor of Xiuhtecutli, god of fire. In it they offered him much copal [incense] and many quail. They arrayed his image in many kinds of papers and with many rich adornments. Among the rich and powerful, they celebrated a great feast in honor of the fire, in their own houses; they held dinners and banquets in honor of the fire. In this same sign they held elections of lords and consuls, and in the fourth house of this sign they enacted the formalities of their elections, feasts, dances, and gift [giving]. After these feasts, they forthwith proclaimed war against their foes.

La trezena fiesta mouible.

En el signo que llamauan ce jtzcujtli: dezian que era el signo del fuego: hazian gran fiesta a honrra de xiuhtecutli, dios del fuego: en ella le ofrecian mucho copal, y muchas codornizes: componjan su ymagen, con muchas maneras de papeles, y con muchos ornamentos ricos: entre las personas ricas y poderosas, hazian gran fiesta, a honrra del fuego, en sus mjsmas casas, hazian combites, y vanquetes, a honrra del fuego. En este mjsmo signo: hazian la election de los señores y consules, y en la quarta casa deste sino: hazian la solẽnjdad, de sus electiones, combites, y areytos, y dones. Despues destas fiestas apregonauan luego la guerra contra sus enemigos.

796x [314] [289] 778 [565] 666 431 721

The Fourteenth Movable Feast

In the sign named ce atl, in the first house of this sign, they celebrated a feast to the goddess of water, named Chalchiuhtli icue. All those who dealt in water celebrated the festival—those who sold water, as well as those who fished, and those who gained other livelihoods which there are in the water. These arrayed her image and laid offerings before her, and revered her in the house called calpulli.

La catorzena fiesta mouible

En el signo llamado ce atl: en la primera casa deste signo, hazian fiesta, a la diosa del agua llamada chalchiuhtli ycue: hazian la fiesta, todos los que tratauan en el agua: ansi vendiendo el agua, como pescando, como haziendo otras gragerias, que ay en el agua. Estos componjan su ymagen, y la ofrecian, y reuerenciauan, en la casa llamada Calpulli.

[776] [463]

The Fifteenth Common Movable Feast

The lords, leading men, nobles, and rich merchants, when a son or daughter was born to them, paid much heed to the sign, the day, and the hour in which he was born. And of this they forthwith set out to inform the judicial astrologers, and to ask as to the good fortune or ill of the child who was born. And if the sign in which he was born was propitious, they had him baptized at once; and if it was adverse they sought the most favorable house of that sign [in which] to baptize him. When they baptized him, they banqueted the kinsmen and friends, so that they would be present at the baptism, and then they gave food and drink to all the guests, and also to the children of the whole suburb. They baptized him at sunrise in the house of his father. The midwife baptized him, uttering many prayers and performing much ceremony over the child. This [same] feast they also observe today in the baptism of their children, as to feasting, eating, and drinking.

La quinta decima fiesta mouible comũ.

Los señores, y principales, nobles, y mercaderes, ricos quando les nacia algun hijo o hija; tenjan gran cuẽta con el signo en que nacia; y el dia, y la hora en que nacia: y desto yuan luego a ynformar a los astrologos, judiciarios: y a preguntar por la fortuna buena o mala de la criatura que nacia. Y si el signo, en que nacia era prospero, luego le hazian baptizar, y si era aduerso buscauan la mas prospera casa de aquel signo para le batizar. Quando le batizauan, combidauan a los parientes, y amigos: para que se hallassen presentes al batismo: y entonce dauan comjda, y beujda, a todos los presentes, y tambien a los njños, de todo el barrio: baptizauanle, a la salida del sol, en casa de su padre, baptizauale la partera, diziendo muchas oraciones: y haziendo mucha cerimonja sobre la criatura. Esta fiesta, tambien la vsan agora, en los baptismos de sus hijos, en quanto al combidar, y comer, y beuer.

777 787 565 852 [759]

The Sixteenth Movable Feast

As soon as the parents saw that their son was of La sexta decima fiesta mouible.

Desque los padres vian que su hijo era de edad para

584

Twenty-third Chapter, which telleth of the feast and of the honors which they performed on the feast day in the fourth month, which was known as Uei toçoztli.[1]

This [feast of] Uei toçoztli was thus carried out: to begin with, for four days there was fasting in the houses. [There] the young men set up the cattails,[2] covered and sprinkled with blood, everywhere [in the houses].

They arranged them all in the houses, and offered, erected, and set up, the cattails before their gods; they cut, severed, and reaped [the grass] near the [white] ends. These [ends] they anointed with blood.

And anyone [who was a] young man drew blood, quite of his own will, from his leg or from his ears.

And where there were riches, where there was prosperity—in the houses of the lords, the leaders, the chiefs, the merchants, [the youths] laid out [a bed of] fir branches[3] for the cattails, and balls of grass whose outer edges were woven into a fringe.

In the middle of these they placed magney[3a] thorns; these they set on them, also anointed and sprinkled with blood, at eventide, when a little sun [still shone], when the sun had not yet entered his house. Then they made their offerings.

And at night, the women made [a gruel of ground maize called] atolli—either a thick, white atolli[4] or an atolli made of a dough of maize softened with lime, or a fruit atolli.[5] This atolli was known as aquetzalli.

Then they swept their tribal temple. And when they had swept, then they poured the atolli into the atolli vessels.

It spread out shining; it spilled over, sending off heat; its vapor diffused. And when it had cooled,

Jnic cẽpoualli omei xapirulo, ytechpa tlatoa in ilhujtl: yoan in tlamauiztililiztli, in qujchioaia, yn jpan ic cemilhujtl, yc nauj metztli: in mitoaia vey toçoztli. 796*

Inin vey toçoztli, ynic muchioaia, oc achtopa naujlhujtl neçaoalo, in techachan: qujquequetza telpopochti tolpactli, tlachezujlli, beezço, tlaezçotilli noujã: [824] qujcentzacutimanca, in techacha, ymixpan qujmamanaia , qujquequetzaia, qujtitilquetzaia, yn jnteuoan in tolpactli, qujtzinichpeloa qujtacaloa, qujtzinixcoloa, vncan conalaoa in eztli.

Auh in eztli, çan teiollotlama, yn aqujn telpuchtli, itech qujqujxtiaia, ytlanitzco, anoço ynacazztitech. 796* 785

Auh in necujltonoloia, in netlacamachoia: yn aço tetecuti, teiacanque, achcacauhti, puchteca, yn inchachan cacxoiatema, in tolpatlactli, çacatapaiolli, tlatenvimololli, tlatenxinepanolli: [565] [352] [824] tlanepantla qujtlalia: vitztli, itech qujmamana no tlaezujlli, tlaezçotilli teutlacpa, oc achiton tonatiuh, iquac yn aiamo vncalaquj tonatiuh, in qujmamanaia.

Auh in ioaltica, yn oqujchiuhque cioa atolli: aço quauhnexatolli, anoço nextamalatolli, anoço xocoatolli: injn atolli moteneoa, aquetzalli: 796* [262] njman ie ic tlatlachpana yn jncalpulco. Auh yn otlachpanque njmã ie ic qujteteca in atolli, izqujatecomac, vel pepeiontimanj, pepetlantimanj, totontlapetztic, hypotoc quiztimanj: auh yn oceuh, yn oiztix, yn

1. Ginet Vigil (Ginet Valadez), according to Gurbay (op. cit., p. 296). Durán (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 276) refers to Uey tepeilli as gran personaje, and to Tepeilmacatl as "personaje . . . personaje cuyo alguna cosa de una parte á otra."

2. Sahagún describes these as espadañas. Cf. Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (Mexico: Pedro Robredo, 1938), Vol. III, p. 272. Seler, in Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 78, has Rohrkolben (Typha sp.), and in Einige Kapitel, p. 83, n. 1, offers Rohrkolben or Kolbenrohr as alternatives.

3. Fr.—Bois religieux (H. B. K.) Schlecht & Cham, in Clark's Mendoza Codex (James Cooper Clark, ed. and tr.; London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), Vol. II, p. 72; pine, in Seler, Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 4, p. 83, citing Molina (ahora, dejad de que se cuece al cabo de ahora) and Hernández (Madrid, 1790, I, 24)—"arbol que arrojan al comienzo, dificil quemarse que cuelgan, que congeman." He equates ocoxcuil with cipresal, as does Gurbay (Libro del calendario, p. 212). Sahagún used the term bosque silvestre, Seler says, and adds that ocoxcuil was a name given to a variety of green branches. It is pictured in No. 371 of Paso y Troncoso's edition of the Historia de las cosas de Nueva España, Vol. VII (Lib. XI).

3a. Agave americana or century plant. The Mexican name magney is used in this translation.

4. Sahagún, in op. cit., Vol. II, p. 286: "quichiuhcuatlli, que es hecho con harina muy espesa y muy blanca, hecho con nopalquilitl." In Einige Kapitel, p. 84, Seler specifies that the grains of maize were "mit Pottasche gekochten."

5. A sour gruel, in Seler, loc. cit. Sahagún (op. cit.) states that an acid fruit, such as tamarin, was used.

X 796 Twenty-fifth Chapter, which telleth of the feast and of the offerings which they made upon the feast day of the sixth month, which was called Etzalqualiztli.[1]

Jnic cenpoalli ommacuilli capítulo, itechpa tlatoa yn ilhujtl, yoan yn jntlamanaliz in quichioaia, yn ipan ic cemilhujtl, ynic chiquacen metztli, in motenoaia Etzalqualiztli.

Etzalqualiztli: Before the arrival of this feast, which was celebrated, first the priests fasted for the rain god. Before the four days of their fast began, first they gathered reeds there at Citlaltepec. For verily at that place were formed very long reeds called aztapilin or tolmimilli[2]—very long, very high, and very white at the roots; and rounded, like a stone column.

And these they pulled up, cutting them at their white ends, at a place in the water called Temilco, or Tepexic Oztoc.

And when they had plucked them, thereupon they arranged them, they tied them in bundles, they bound them up in their capes, they girt the bundles of reeds in their capes.

Thereupon they took up [each bundle] in a tump line; they took them up in tump lines. Then [the reeds] were borne upon their backs, carried in the tump lines. And so they lifted up [the reeds]: they were lifted, and [the priests] departed; the departure was made, and they went on their way. None carried the reeds crosswise upon their backs; all bore them quite upright upon their backs.

And when the priests went to pluck the reeds, and when they returned, the road [which they followed] was deserted. No others took [the path]; travelers followed it no more.

And if they came upon any men, then they despoiled them of their possessions, they robbed them, they stripped them, they wrested from them all that they had; they snatched away their goods. And if these defended themselves, then [the priests] abused them: they threw them upon the ground, they

Etzalqualiztli: ynin ilhujtl, yn aiamo onaxioa, in ipan muchioaia: achtopa motlalocaçaoaia in tlamacazque: nahuilvitl yn aiamo vmpeoa, inneçaoaliz achtopa ontolanaia, vmpa in citlaltepec: ichica ca cenca viiac yn vmpa muchioaia tullin, itoca aztapilin, anoço tolmjmjlli: cenca viac, cenca vitlatztic, yoan cenca tziniztac: yoan mjmjltic temjmjltic.

Auh yn vmpa conanaia, qujtezcopina, itocaiocan in atlan, temjlco, tepexic, oztoc:

auh yn oconanque, njnã ie ic qujchichioa, qujcujcujtlalpia, qujqujmiloa, qujtotolqujmjloa:

njman ie ic qujmecapallotia, qujmemecapallotia, njman netlamamaltilo, tlamamalo, tlaizquamamalo: njman ie ic oaleoa, oaleoalo, viloatz, aiac qujxtlapalmama yn aztapili, çan moch queoacamama.

Auh ynic vih tolanazque, tlamacazque, yoan inic oalmocuepa, cactimoquetza in vtli, aocac qujtoca, aocmo qujtoca in nenenque:

auh yntla acame oqujnnamjcque, njman vncan qujntlacujcujlia, qujntlanamoielia, qujntlacencujlia, qujntlatlaçaltia: auh intla momapatla, njman qujnmjctia, qujntetentimaiaui, qujmihicça qujtitilicça, impan chocholoa, tlalli ic qujujujtequj, qujntlatlal-

---

1. Sahagún (Robredo ed., Vol. I, p. 92) says: "hacían una manera de parches, o palanduras, que se llama etzalli"; and in ibid., p. 149: "son etzalli era hecho de maíz cocido, a manera de arroz, y era muy amarillo." Durán, op. cit., Vol. II, p. 216, defines etzalli as boiled corn and beans. Pino y Tornanzo (op. cit., p. 116), in his interpretation of the Codex Borbonicus' account of this month, —then to "los palanduz de etzalli hechos de frijol, crysol semillas negras como alli sobre la cuaya, y de maiz, crysol grosso blanco alderman con los cowe negros." Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 112) has Bohnenpfannkuchen for Etzalqualiztli. Clark (op. cit., Vol. II, p. 89) regards Etzalqualiztli as derived from etl (bean), malan (intermingled or), and qualiztli (eating). In "Bohnen brei," p. 298, Gardner has "Comida de manojo de frijoles," and in his Libro del náhuatl vocabulary, "etzalli de parches."

Tower (Kubler and Gibson, op. cit., p. 25) identifies the beans of this month as those of the working people and lower class, were eating after agricultural work. Hence the offering of etzalli to them.

2. In the Spanish text, Sahagún translates aztapilinalli as "tronco redondo de jaraiz blanco y verde." Tolmimilli, in the Robredo edition, Vol. III, p. 272, is a kind of jaraiz. Seler, in Collected Works, Vol. II, Pt. 1, p. 53, equates aztapilin with aztapilli, and quotes Molina ("jaraiz largo, grande y redondo"). Joachim and Sandoz, in their translation (p. 104, n. 1) write that it is the equivalent of aztapilli, "de etzali, sigo de maíz cocí, o pilli, principal, grand"; of tolmimilli, they write: "cocer de tollin, junil, o maíz, cilindro redondo" (loc. cit.).

his vassals. Because verily there was much hunger; when dried maize was costly, then there was much want, [and] it was hard to gain a livelihood; [and] many then were our dead.

And until the time that the Feast Day of the Lords came, upon every day there was song. When singing and dancing began, [it was] toward evening, when only little sun shone. Thereupon fire was laid in the braziers; flame was put upon the braziers.

And the braziers were arranged and ordered in six rows, and in each row were ten [braziers] and [each] brazier was two fathoms thick; and each was as tall as one's hip.[3]

And thereupon all went forth from the house of song, coming singing and dancing. Between [pairs of men] came the women. Light women, harlots, chosen —picked out, set apart.

And they went together, they went taking by the hands the honored ones—the young chieftains, the leaders of the young men, and those with shorn hair, the Otomí, and the noblemen [not warriors. These last] were not arranged in order; of their own free will they placed themselves near the others.

And richly were the women arrayed and bedight; all good were the skirts and shirts which they had put on. Of their skirts, some had [designs of] hearts, some were [embroidered] with a mat design like birds' gizzards, some were ornamented like coverlets, some had spiral or leaf [designs], some were of plain, fine weave. All had borders and fringes; all [the women] wore skirts with borders.

And of their skirts, some had brown [streamers] hanging, some had smoke symbols, some had black [streamers] hanging, some had house designs, some had fish [patterns], some were of plain, fine weave. And the neck [openings] were all large, and their borders were also deep and wide.

And when they danced, they unbound their hair; their hair covered them like a cloak. But they brought braids of their hair across their foreheads.

And they were not decked with feathers; neither were their faces adorned with paint.

And thus were bedecked the chieftains: their array consisted of the cloak of netting. And the brave warriors, they who had straw lip plugs, they had white net cloaks with shells set in fish patterns. [These] were called their vermillion net cloaks.

cenca maianaloia, in jquac cenca tlaçotia in tlaolli, cenca oncã mjhiiovisia, mociavia: cenca vncã tomjquian catca. 796[3] 736

Auh in jxqujchica oalaci tecujlhujtl, izqujlhujtl cujcoia: im peoaia cujcoanaliztli, cenca ça achiton tonatiuh, cenca ça pepetzcatica in tonatiuh: njman ie ic tleteco tlaviltec, ipan in tlaviltetl motlatlalia tletl.

Auh in tlaviltetl viuipantoca, tetecpantoca, chiquacenpantitoca: auh in cempantli, matlatlatetl, actimanca: auh ynjc totomaoac catca tlaujltetl, hoontlacujtlanaoatectli: auh ynjc quaquauhtic catca, cecen quapantli: 372

auh in ie iuhquj, mec oalqujxoa, in cujcacali, cujcatiujtze, mjtotitiujtze, intzatzalan actiujtze in cioa: iehoantin in maaujltia, yn aujenjme: iehoantin in tlatzonanti, in tlapepenti, in tlacenqujxtilti: 548

auh yn qujnnanamictia, yn inmatitech qujmantiuj, çan iehoantin in mauiztililonj in teachcaoan, yoan in telpochtequjoaque, yoan in quaquachicti, yn otomj, yoan in pipilti: amo tehoan motecpana, çan jllotlama, incãpa onmoquetza tetlan. 302 565

Auh in cioa uel mocencaoa, vel moiecchichioa, much qualli in conmaquja, yn jncue, yn jvipil: yn incue cequj iollo, cequj totolitipetlaio, cequj cacamoliuhquj, cequj ilacatziuhquj, anoço tlatzcallotl, cequj çan petztic, muchi tene, muchi tlatenio, muchi cuetenio. 796[4] 292

Auh yn invipil, cequj quappachpipilcac, cequj pocuipilli, cequj pocujpilli, cequj iapalpipilcac, cequj cacallo, cequj mjmjchcho, cequj çan petztic. Auh yn jtoxquj much uetei: yoan yn iten cenca no papatlatac, papatlactic.

Auh yn iquac mjtotia, qujtoma yn jntzon, çan intzon qujquequentinemj: auh yn jntzon ipiloaz, ymixquac qujoalteca. 302

Auh amo mopetonja, amono moxaoa.

Auh ynic muchichiotia in teachcaoan, yn jnnechichioal catca, ichoutl in cuechintli: auh in tiacaoan, in teçacaoaque, ymiztaccuechin cilin ynic mjmjchcho, motocaiotia innochpalcuechin. 622 301 304 701

3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text. Literally, [illegible] may be rendered "two can take [it] in their embrace." For [illegible], Sahagún has "an estado."

X 796 space], once more they circled back and returned [whence they had started].

[535] And when it all ceased, already it was late at night, [512] already time for all to sleep, as when one noddeth; today [that would be] at about the ninth hour.

[531] And when all had stopped, when the ground drum was undone, then all dispersed, all went, all betook themselves to their homes. The great noblemen, [373] when it was done, were accompanied by torches; they went lighted by torches, carried for them, to their homes.

And the women who had danced then were assembled, after there had been the song and dance, and they led them off. Even so was done with the leaders of the youths. They gathered [the women] together, grouped them, rounded them up, placed them together, assembled them, hunted them out,—lest they might go off somewhere, lest someone might accompany them, lest some debauched youth might go with [one of them].

[565] None the less, the noblemen addressed the matrons, that they might go and release some [of the women] or go and leave [one]. Not of their free will did [the women] go elsewhere; it was done on persuasion.

[431] And when they released them, [the girls] were given presents. Gifts were given, and food was given. And likewise, favors were offered the leaders of the women, the matrons. They kept for themselves and carried that which they saved to their homes.

X 796 And the young warriors, the young warriors who 836 had distinguished themselves, who were worthy of 684 honors, made their plea for the women only in secret, not before others; perchance in his home [such an one] awaited her, perchance elsewhere he called her. Just so, they ate privily.

[548] And the woman came forth only at night and spent only the night [with him]; she departed when it was well into the night.

And if one was noted living in concubinage, thus he aroused anger; thus he gave offense. For this all assembled and held council there in the song-house.

Here, before everyone, they punished him. Because of [his crime] they cut off his warrior's hair dress; they took from him all his belongings—his [831] adornment, his lip plug. Thereafter, they beat him sorely with a pine stick, verily causing him to swoon; they singed his head with fire; smoke rose, and blisters formed on his body.

And when they had indeed caused him to swoon, then they cast him forth.

vmpa tlantoc, oc cepa momalacachoa, in cujtlaujc, oalmocuepa.

Auh in necaoaloa, ie tlaquauhioua, ie netetequizpan: yn iuh mixtlaxilia axcan aço ie chicunauj ora.

Auh in ie ixqujch, yn onecacaoaloc, yn ompet veuetl, mec cecenmanoa, viujloa, yn ixqujchtin viuj yn inchachan: in veuei pipilti, onca caoalo, tlavilpan, tlaujlilotiuj, qujntlatlaujlitiuj yn inchan.

Auh yn cioa yn otenaoaque, njman mocentlalia, in ie oncujcoianoloc, in qujiacana, yn iuhq' yn tiachcaoan muchioa, qujnnechicoa, qujntecpichoa, qujmololoa, qujncenquixtia, qujcentecpichoa, vel qujmixpepena, yn ma aca canapa ia, yn ma aca moteujcalti, in ma aca telpuchtlaueliloc qujujca:

tel in pipilti, qujmonilhujaia in cioa tlaiacanque, ynic cequjntin qujncaoatiuj, tecaoatiuj: amo çan moiocoiaia yn canapa via, tetencopa muchioaia.

Auh yn ontecaoaia, vmpa motlauhtiaia, vmpa tlauhtiloia, yoã vmpa tlamacoia: auh no tlatlauhtiloia, in cioatachcaoan, in cioateiacanque, motlacauja, motlatlacauja, quitquj yn inchachan innetlacaujl.

Auh in teachcaoan, inteachcauh, tlaiacatia, in mauiztililonj, çan ichtaca in qujnnaoatia cioa, amo teixpan, aço ichan in qujchietiuh, anoço canapa in qujnaoatia: çan iuhquj, yn ichtacaquaia.

Auh in cioatl, çan oalioualquiça, çan moiocalpoloa, oc ueca ioan in qujça:

auh intla aca ittoz, in momecatitinemj, ic tlaqualanjaia, ic tlaiolitlacoaia, ica necentlalilo, yca nenonotzalo, in vncan cujcacali:

vncan teixpan qujtlatzacujltia, ic qujtzotzocoltequj, muchi qujcujlia in ixqujch ytlatquj, yn inechichioal, yn itempilol: çatepan qujujujtequj, ocoquauhtica, vel qujhiiocaoaltia, qujquatlechichinoa, tlẽtlecaleoa, haaquaqualaca, yn inacaio.

Auh yn ouelqujhijocaoaltique, yca oalmaiauj:

Fourth Chapter, in which it is related how the common folk left their sons in the young men's house, and what customs existed there in the young men's house, so that all were trained and reared.[1]

Injc navj capitralo: vncã mjtoa, in quenjn macehoaltin, qujmoncaoaia in inpilhoan yn vmpa telpuchcali, yoan in quenjn tlamanja vmpa telpuchcali in juh nezcaltiloia neoapacaloa.

874

When a boy was born, then they placed him in the priests' house or the young men's house. That is to say [the parents] promised [the child], gave him as a gift, and brought him as an offering to the temple of the priests' house in order that [the boy] become a priest, or a young [warrior].

In iquac otlacat piltontli njmã caquja yn calmecac, in anoço telpuchcali, quitoznequi, quinctoltia, vmpa quivenchioa, quivenmana in teupan in calmecac injc tlamacazquj iez, yn anoço telpuchtli.

If he entered the young men's house, [the parents] promised him to it; they prepared drink and food. They summoned, assembled, and addressed the leaders of the young men. They who had sons [thus] prayed. They said:

Jntla telpuchcali caquja, qujnetoltia qujcẽcaoa, in atl in tlaqualli, qujnnotza qujncentlalia, qujntlatlauhtia in telpuchtlatoque, tlatlatlauhtia in piloaque. Quitoa,

"Our lord, savior and protector of all, hath been pleased to place you here. For here you know and are told that our lord hath given [us one like] a precious stone, a quetzal feather. For a child hath come down [to us. Perhaps] he will have that which he hath need of that he may mature. Already he [is like] a jewel. Shall we perchance lay in his hand a spindle and a weaving stick? [For] he is yours; he is your child, your son.

Ca njcan amechoalmotlalilia in totecujo in tloque naoaque. A ca njcan anquimocuilia anquimocaquitia, ca oqujmomacavili in totecujo ce coxcatl quetzalli, a, omecavi piltzintli, aviz nelle axcan motetzaoaltiznequj, ie peioctzintli, cujx malacatl tzotzopaztli, ymac tictequilizque, ca amaxcatzin, ca amoconetzin, ca amopiltzin,

"It is by your grace that we place him [among] your beloved sons, that you may rear, and train, and make of him a brave man of war, raising him to serve our mother and our father, Tlaltecutli and Tonatiuh.

amocuexantzico, amomamaloaztzinco tocontlalia ca amopilhoantztitzin, ca ãtlacazcaltia, ca antlacaoapaoa, ca anquatubchioa, amocolochioa, anquitlacaoapavilia, in tonan in tota in tlaltecutli tonatiuh.

"And now to him we dedicate [the boy]—to the shadow and the wind, the lord, the young [god], Yaztzin, Titlacauan, Tezcatlipoca.[2] Perchance our lord may sustain him a little.

auh in axcan ca ivic tiquitoa in iovalli in ehecatl in tlacatl in telpuchtli in iaoztzin in titlacaoan in Tezcatlipuca, açn achitzin qujmotoctiliz in ichoatzin totecujo,

"We leave him [with you that] he may become a young [warrior]; that he may dwell there in the house of penances, of weeping, of tears—the young ticcaos telpuchtiz, vmpa nemiz in tlamacecaliztcali, yn choquiztcali, yn jiaiocali, in telpuchcali, in vncã

1. Francisco Javier Clavigero, in Historia antigua de México (México: Editorial Porrúa, S. A., 1945), II, pp. 199ff., says they were taken to the telpuchcalli (as well as the calmecac) at the age of fifteen. He cites Codex Mendoza, Plates 53 ff. All went for three years of instruction (religion, good usage, good behavior). All who attended, he says, continuation—nobility going to one type, commoners to another. Some trained children, some youths, and some girls. The sons were segregated. Men remained until the age of twenty or twenty-two, women until seventeen or eighteen. Attaining his majority, by his request or by arrangements made by his parents, a youth left this training to marry. Men usually followed their fathers' occupations.

The telpuchcalli, according to Cruz (op. cit., p. 54) prepared the young men for war. Discipline was less severe than in the calmecac and education less intensive. Torquemada (op. cit., pp. 220-21) indicates a certain amount of laxity.

Clavigero (loc. cit.) and Torquemada (op. cit., p. 471) agree that girls were raised in seclusion and had no contact with boys or men. They slept and they went out only under the supervision of old women. They were taught how to address their elders with respect. Specifically, Clavigero mentions simple duties (sweeping, offering of incense three times during the night, preparing food for the idols); weaving and other womanly arts; and general preparation for marriage. Torquemada enumerates some of the punishments for misbehavior.

2. Tezcatlipoca was the patron of the telpuchcalli and the education of warriors (Cruz, op. cit., p. 27). Cf. also Torquemada, op. cit., pp. 220-21.

[565]

4: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1952 NU7 Aztec NU7

Seventh Chapter, in which it is told how the chiefs and noblemen left their children there at the priests' house, and what manner of customs were observed at the place called the priests' house.

Chiefs, noblemen, and others besides who were well born, these same took their sons, and promised them, to the priests' house; and also any others [did so] who wished it.[1]

All became priests—the noblemen because the place of rearing in the priests' house, the school, the place of instruction, [was] a place of chastity, a place of reverence, of reflection, of prudence, of virtue, of righteousness. For then [there was] no filth nor vice, nothing blamable in the lives of the priests [and] in the training [given in] the priests' house.[2]

A chief, nobleman, lord, or anyone who was rich, when such vowed to bring his sons [to the priests' house], prepared drink and food. He summoned and assembled the priests, and invited the old priests, and gathered those who were well born.[3] The old men made an entreaty; the old ones besought the priests, and said to them:

"Our lords, priests, you have been pleased to bring yourselves here; you have taken your noble feet [through various places]. Perchance straw or grass you have somewhere touched with your feet; perchance in some place you may have injured or knocked something against your revered feet.

"Our lord hath placed you here. You must know and hear, verily, [that] now our lord, savior and protector of all, hath given one [who is as] a jewel, a quetzal feather.

"We have dreamed; we have quickly arisen. Now, what will the boy, [this] small child, be? Surely we shall not offer him a spindle and a batten. For he is your chattel, your charge. We now pray to the lord Topiltzin, Quetzalcoatl,[4] to him who is feathered in Injc chicome capítulo: vncan moteneoa, yn quenjn tlatoque, pipiltin qujmõcaoaia, inpilhoan yn vmpa calmecac, yoan in quenamj tlamanitiliztli, ynjc tlamanja in vmpa moteneoa calmecac.

In tlatoque in pipilti, yoan in oc cequjntin vel nanti, vel tati, çan ien vmpa in qujmaquja in qujnnetoltia in jnpilhoan, yn calmecac: yoan in oc cequjntin in-aqujn quinequi, muchistin tlamacazque muchioa in pipilti ypampa, in nezcaliloian calmecac, in tenonotzaloia, in teiçcaltiloian, chipaoaca nemoouiã, necxiiiecoloia, nẽmachoia, ixtlamachoia, qualtioaia, iectioaia: çan njmã hatzoio, hateuhio, atle iniaioca in tlamacazque innemiliz, yn calmecac neoapaoaliztli.

Jn tlatoanj, pilli, tecutli, yn anoço aca mocuiltonoa in iõc quinetoltia in caquja jnpiltzin quicencaoa yn atl, in tlaqualli, qujnnotza qujncentlalia in tlamacazque, yoan qujnnotza in quaquacujlti, yoã qujncentlalia yn nanti, yn tati, in vevetque, tlatlatlauhtia in vevetlaca, qujntlatlauhtia in tlamacazque quimilhuja.

Totecujooane, tlamacazquee, nican anoalmouicatiaque amocxitzin anquioalmanilique, aço tlacotl, çacatl cana oanquioalmocxinamiquilique, aço cana amocxitzin oanquioalmocuelhuique, oanquioalmotecujnilique;

ca njcan amechoalmotlalilia in totecujo, anquijmocuilia, anquijmocaquiltia, a ca nelle, axcan centetl cocotl quetzalli, oquijmomacavili in totecujo, in tloque naoaque titemiqui, tiocchitleoa, a ca nelle axcan tle oniez, in piltõtli, in conetontli: cujx malacatl, tzotzopaztli, atícmacazque, ca amaxcatzin, ca amotlatquitzin, yn axcan ivictzinco tiquitoa in tlacatl in topiltzin in Quetzalcoatl, in tilpotõqui, calaquiz in calmecac, in 874

565
793

[875]

1. Torquemada, op. cit., p. 22, says they were taken by the cuhuaxic at the age of four. Clavigero, op. cit., pp. 199, 200, says the age for these entering both the cuhuaxic and the telpochcalli was fifteen.

2. Training and standards of conduct were much more rigorous in the cuhuaxic than in the telpochcalli. Cf. Cruz, op. cit., p. 54.

Cruz (ibid., pp. 57) points out that all learning was in priestly hands—science, star lore (magic, science, time-reckoning), the calendar (prediction of the future, astrology), mythology, history, hieroglyphic writing, law. These bodies of knowledge may indicate a curriculum for the cuhuaxic. Priests also participated in the wars and were the formal educators.

3. Yn nenni, yn nati: an alternative meaning could be "those with fathers and mothers." Seler (Einige Kapitel, p. 347), translates: "in ganzen Verhältnissen sich befindenden Männer (und) Väter."

4. Quetzalcoatl was patron of the cuhuaxic and of the education of priests and noblemen (Cruz, op. cit., p. 20).

814
793
565

black, that he may enter the priests' house, the house of weeping, of tears, and of sadness, where grow and ripen the sons of our lords.

"And there prayers are raised to the savior and protector of all; there he poureth forth prayers to our lord; there he is importuned with weeping, tears, and sighs. There one is given [gifts], and is chosen for him [our lord]. For there we speak in his worthy house—there where [the shell trumpet] is blown, where the fire is bored, where the children of our lords are reared—where there is sweeping, the clearing of trash; where [sin] is put to one side. [This] disposition our lord will bring about.[8]

"In your noble laps, on your revered backs, in your valued protection we place the child. Grant him [your love], for we give you our child. Grant him your love; give him [your protection]. May he be planted here that he may be reared and wax strong; that he may do penances all night and all day, going about on elbow and on knee, calling and crying out to our lord, weeping, sad, and sighing.

"This is all which you have been caused to know and to hear, O priests."

Behold how the priests responded and replied:

"Here we have taken and received your valued spirit and words. Although we are unworthy, although we do not deserve it, although we do not merit it, your valued spirit and words have come forth [telling] how and why you are anguished over your jewel, your quetzal feather. But we only hear [on behalf of] our lord Topiltzin, Quetzalcoatl, of him who is feathered in black. What will he require of your jewel, your quetzal feather? What will he wish of you? What will become of your jewel and quetzal feather?

"Without doubt we would be foolish [to say] that thus this [is], that this one [is] thus. Let us all trust in our lord, savior and protector of all. What will he wish of us? Let us put our trust in him."

choquizcali, in jtaiocali, in tlaoculcalli, in vncan izcaltilo, oapacalo in totecujoan in tepilhoã.

auh in vncan tlaitlanililo, in tloque naoaque, in vncan ixillã, itoxcatlan mamaiaoca in ichoatzin totecujo, in vncan tlamatataquililo, in choq'xtica, in jxaiotica in elciciuilizticа: auh in vncan motetlamamaquilia, in vncan motepepenilia in ichoatzin, ca vmpa toconitoa in ichantzinco, in vncã pitzalo, mamaiioa in izcaltilo ĩ totecujoa, in tepilhoan, in vncan ochpanouztli, tlacuicuilizzli, chico tlanaoac, tlatequilizzli qujmochivililiz in totecujo:

amocuexantzinco, amoteputzinco, amomamalhouztzinco, tocontlalia, manoço tlacaoa in amoiollotzin, ca tamechtoconemaquilia, ma tlacaoa yn amoiollotzin ma xiqualmanilican, ma quimontoca, ma quimonnelo, in izcaltilo, in oapacalo, in tlamaceoa in ceioal, cemilhujtl, in jmolicpitzin, in jntetepontzin ic tlaçatimj in qujmonochilia, in qujmotzatzililia in totecujo, in choca, in tlaocuia, in elcicivj;

ca inquijch y, anquimocujlia, anquimocaqujtia tlamacazquehe.

Jucatqui, injc tlananquiliaia, ynjc quicuepaia tlatelli in tlamacazque.

Ca njcan tonconcuj tocoanana in amihjiotzin, in amotlatoltzi ma çã tehoan titottati, ma tictolhuiltocati, ma tictomactocati, in njcan oalquiça in amihjiotzin, in amotlatoltzi injc ica, injc ipampa, ammoñetlamachitia, in amoconquj, in amoquetzal, ca çan tictotlacaquililia in totecujo in tepiltzin in Quetzalcoatl, in tilpotonqui anca quen qujmonequililia, in amoconquj, in amoquetzal. auh anca quen amechmonequililia yn amehouantzin, anca quenami ica, in cuacatl, in quetzalli, mach tocontetenitalhuizque in ma iuhqui, y, in ma ichoatl, y, ma tictocentemachilicã in totecujo, in tloque naoaque, quen techmoqueqililia, ma oc titlacentemachica,

8. Mention of the protection of the god and the priests, and of expected rewards, is probably a reference to the fact that from the unknown time the priesthood and high military, administrative, and judiciary officials (Ibid., pp. 32 ff.). Durán (op. cit., pp. 174-5) writes: "*La segunda manera de labradores los hombres era por la ejercicio alhegadolos al aquellosio de dando despues de honor servido en los templos con gran concepto y prosiguiendo y reconociendo yo siempre conforme los oficiales y dignidades y cargos honrosos en las republicas que oy en dia tienen como alcaldes diversos como alguaciles y mandones que habiendo en nuestra manera y cargos de respeto y reconocido mucho hasta y oy en dia se les hace es como dicho reciben despues o mas quenos oficiales o arrendiqui ot. pues con ellos se calabanan los cuerpos y se tomaban los parentesco y respeto se jamaban a los caballeros y jentes. Los reyes dia el consejo y parecer dicenos no tocaban hasta como cual al mismo mundo que los consejos que en magnanal dicen para descargo de su real conpliendo así a la manera mesmo como estos parentes en aquellos dignidades despues de largos predicadas y trabajos y servicio a los quales quando los dicen sobre dignidades y vicesalcaldes hasta mandan conformarse mandados aquel largo consejo honorables la dicen con que diengan conformes conformados de manera que pudieran dalle al nombre de determinadamente para con aquellos conformarse cofrarnos grandes predicadores y cantidad de consejeros hasta grande fiesta y banquetes y oy en dia se hace al mas conjuntos la qual pueden aplicar como consejo de hizo pues no he hallado en mas de quatro grandes decires y pues que los que oidos y considerados al fruto dicen quiere decirlos los dichos quedan con conforme a mucho discretamente mandadamente discreto dichosamente magnanimal honorosamente dichosamente aquenos."

Then they bore the child to the temple. The parents carried paper and incense. Chiefs or noblemen [took] breech cloths, capes, precious neck bands, quetzal feathers, and green stones, which they offered as gifts. The poor took only [their] paltry papers and incense, or sweet smelling herbs, which they used as their gifts.

When they had taken [the children] there, they then anointed them with black; they covered their faces well with a black paste. They then gave them neck bands of the roots of the birthwort.[6] A poor [child] they only provided a neck band of loose cotton. Then they cut his ears and cast the child's blood before the image of the devil. If he was yet a small child, then the parents took him [away]. If he was a chief's son, they left his neck band there at the temple; the priest took it away.

Then [the priests] taught him all the manner of living and rules by which they lived in the priests' house.

Niman quivica in piltontli in teupan, amatl, copalli in quitquj in pilhoaque, in tlatoque anoço pipilti, maxtlatl, tilmatli, cozcatl, quetzalli chalchivitl, in quivenchioaia. Yn jcnotlacatl çan amatzintli, copaltzintli, anoço yiauhtli in quitquj in jnvem muchioa, yn oconvicaque, njman cohça tlitica, vel quiztlilpopotza, njman tlacopatli quicozcatia, yn jcnoiiaca çan ixquich potonquj quicozcatia, njmã quinacaztequi, contlatlaxilia in ixiptla Diablo in iezio piltõtli, intla oc piltontli oc quivica in pilhoaque, intla tlatooanj ipiltzin, icozquj vmpa ..ncaoaia in teupan, conana in tlamacazque, njman quimachtia yn ixquich nemiliztli, njc nemoa calmecac, in tlatecpantli.

[874 793 565]

[302] [301]

6. Aristolochia maxima (Hernández, op. cit.).

[p. 62 is blank]

S: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1953 NU7 Aztec NU7

The Eighth Chapter telleth how they held in dread hunger and famine when One Rabbit ruled the year count, and what they first did when the year count of One Rabbit had not yet begun.

Ioíc chicuey capítulo, itechpa tlatoa: inic quimacaciz apiztli, in maiana[illegible]tli, in iconc tlauicaia, in xiuhtlaposalli in ce tochtli: yoan in tlein achtopa quichiouia, in aiamo vmpeua xiuhtlapoálli, ce tochtli.

And [even] when [the year] One Rabbit had not yet set in, first provision was made; our food was hidden away, stored, saved up, and placed in bins. Nothing was thrown away; all then was saved—wild seeds not commonly eaten: inmey maize; corn silk; corn tassels; pulp scraped from maguey tappings, tuna cactus flowers; cooked maguey leaves; heated maguey sap.

Auh in iconc, aiamo moquetza ce tochtli: achtopa nenemachiloia, netlatlatililo, nettzontilo, netacatilo, mocuacuamatema in tonacaiotl: auc tle mozlaça, muchiconc netlatililo in polocatl, in popoiotl, in xilotzõtli, in miiacatl, in metzolli, in nochxochitl, in mescalli, in necutlatotonilli.

Everything was taken into account: [with] amaranth, even the weeds[12] were threshed; [as for] the beans, likewise were stored and put away unripened ones and the dried, withered ends of the green beans. and when they had used all, they satisfied and quickened themselves [with] bird seed, bitter amaranth or bright red amaranth, and yacacolli maize.[13]

Auh inic muchi temachiloia, in auhtli çan yul moscoma in ipolocaio: in etl çan yoan motlatiaia, mocalaquiaia in iaxaoacaio, yoan in jexococoloio in opetzaoac. Auh iconc, muchi tlaiecoa, tlaacotlaça tlahiiocuiaia in petzicatl, in chichic auhtli, anoço teuauhtli, iacacolli:

This was the time when they bought people;[14] they purchased men for themselves. The merchants were those who had plenty, who prospered; the greedy, the well-fed man, the covetous, the niggardly, the miser, who controlled wealth and family, guardians, the mean, the stingy, the selfish. In the homes of [such men] they crowded, going into bondage, entering house after house—the orphan, the poor, the indigent, the needy, the pauper, the beggar, who were starved and famished; who just as they went to sleep, just so awoke; who found nothing and got nowhere; who in no place found their rest, relief or remedy. At this time one sold oneself. One ate oneself; one swallowed oneself. Or else one sold and delivered into bondage his beloved son, his dear child.

ie iconc tecoa, motlacacouia, in vnca quicoani, in mocuiltonoa, in motlacamati, in tlãtlamcti, tlaixtotiani, atle quiscaoa, tlaixamachiuhqui, tlaçaloani, tlapachoani, tlamalhuiani, teuie, taotzoca, motzol: ichan maaquia, mihitoa, mocacalaquia in icnotlacatl, in motolinja, in quiciaui, in quihiiouia: in aoneoztinemi, in aonmacitinemi, in apizmicqui, in tructuhque: in iuhqui cochi, in iuhqui meoa, in aualnecini, in aoccan vitz, in aoccan quiitta ihiiocuiia, icuihca, ipatica: ie vncan in monamaca, in moqua, in motolua: anoço quinamaca, quimonamaquilia in ipiltzin, in iconetzin:

805
262

805
567
565
735

12. Ie xocohli can yul ie ipolocaio: cf. Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia general de las cosas de Nueva España (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1938), II, p. 260: "Xocohli quiere decir, es la semilla de las verduras sin Sazonar, como todas las hierbas silvestres." Jones, op. cit., p. 69. has "Ripened [sic] seeds [sic] of the Vegetable [sic]."

13. Some of these terms are identified in Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., p. 63. Yacacolli is described in Bernardino de Sahagún: Historia de las cosas de la Nueva España (D. Jourdanet and Rémi Simeon, eds.; Paris: G. Masson, Editeur, 1880), p. 118, n. 2, as "especie de ajo." See also the Rabinal edition, Vol. I, p. 159.

14. The translation of this passage differs in some details from that of Jones (op. cit., pp. 69-71), q. v.
(Quiscaoa appears in the Real Palacio MS as quiqcaoa. The term could be translated, "those who are people." Cf. ie ueopoa (see ne ueoaqui), toward the end of the paragraph.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

565
531
292

Eighth Chapter, in which are told the various articles with which they adorned the rulers and noblemen—which they placed on them when they were bedight in capes and breech clouts.

Injc chicuei capitulo, vncan mjtoa in jaquitlamantli: in nechichioaia tlatoque in pipilti in jntechquitlaliaia, injc mocencaoaia in tilmatli in maxtlatl.

The cape with the serpent mask design, bordered with eyes;[1] — Couxiacaio tilmatli, tenjxio,

The cape with the conch shell design, bordered with eyes;[2] — tecucizio tilmatli tenjxio,

The cape with a design of stone discs, bordered with eyes;[3] — temalacaio tilmatli tenjxio,

The cape with the obsidian serpent design, bordered with eyes;[4] — itzcoaio tilmatli tenjxio,

The cape with wine-god jar design, bordered with eyes;[5] — vmetochtecomaio tilmatli tenjxio,

The cape with the butterfly design, bordered with eyes; — papaloio tilmatli tenjxio,

The cape with an eagle's face painted on it, bordered with eyes;[6] — xocalquauhio tilmatli tenjxio,

The red-bordered ocelot cape, in the middle of which stood an ocelot;[7] — ocelotentlapalli iitic icac oçelotl,

The cape of dark green diagonally divided, in the middle of which stood an obsidian eagle;[8] — chicoiapalli nacazmjnoquj iitic icac itzquauhtli,

The cape of blue knots diagonally divided,[9] on which a spear-eagle stood; — xiuhtlalpilnacazmjnoquj, tlacochquauhtli vncan icac,

The maguey fiber cape, with an ocelot tail pendant; — quetzalichtilmatli ocelocujtlapillo

The cape of shining maguey fiber [ornamented with] fluttered heads; — quetzalichpeztli, quapatlacio tilmatli,

The orange cape with the wind jewel[10] [design] and the feathered border; — camopalecacoxcaio, tenjujio tilmatli,

The orange cape with a striped border; — camopaltecoaxanquj tilmatli,

The light blue cape with a wind jewel design, which had a border of feathers with spirals; — apalecacoxcaio tilmatli, injtica tenelaiaoalo,

The carmine-colored cape with an eye border; — nochpaltilmatli tenjxio,

1. Fol. 16v of Book VIII of the Florentine Codex defines the border with eyes as ocelots. Also see corresponding Spanish text.
2. Cf. James Cooper Clark: Codex Mendoza (London: Waterlow and Sons, 1938), III, fol. 46.
3. Cf. corresponding Spanish text.
4. Cf. Clark, op. cit., fol. 31.
5. Cf. loc. cit.
6. Cf. ibid., fol. 49. An alternative translation might be "the colored eagle border cape."
7. Cf. ibid., fol. 31. See also Seler, Gesammelte Abhandlungen, II, p. 522.
8. Respecting this, however, Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 161.
9. Xiuhtlalpilli might refer to a design suggested by the ceremony of tying the years.
10. But, however, corresponding Spanish text, in which quetzalcoatl is described as a flower; see also Book VIII of the Codex, fol. 16a.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

565	The tawny cape with a spiral border;	quappachtentlaiocalo tilmatli,
292	The coyote fur cape with a spiral border;	cuiochcatentlaiocalo tilmatli,
531	The tawny, knotted cape;	quappachtelalpilli tilmatli,
	The cape with scorpion design stripes;	calotlazochio tilmatli,
	The tawny cape with the water spider;	quapachatocaio tilmatli,
	The tawny cape with the butterfly;	quappapaloio tilmatli,
	The ocelot cape;	ecelotilmatli,
	The cape with the eagle's leg;	quauhtetepeio tilmatli,
	The cape with the ocelot skin step design;[11]	ecelotxicalcoliuhquj tilmatli,
	The ocelot cape;	ocelotilmatli,
	The half-ocelot, half-eagle cape;	ecelequauhtlatlapanquj tilmatli,
	The tawny cape provided with the design of an eye upon a hooked element;[12]	quappachtzcoliuhquj tilmatli,
	The cape with the design of a ladder on the earth;	tlallecacuazio, tilmatli,
	The cape with an embroidered, radiating design;	tlamachmoiaoac tilmatli,
	The cape of duck feathers with a colored border;	xomoiujtilmatli tentlapallo,
	The cape of duck feathers with [a design of] flattened heads;	xomoiujtilmatli quappatlacio,
	The white duck feather cape, bordered with eyes;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli tenjxio
	The duck feather cape, with [a design of] young ears of maize;	xomoiujtilmatli elotic
	The wolf skin cape;	cujtlaichujtilmatli,
	The blue knotted [cape], bordered with eyes;	xiuhtlalpilli tenjxio,
	The cape with a sun [design], bordered with eyes;	tonatiuhio tilmatli tenjxio,
	The old cape with the eagle head design;[13]	quauhtzonteconio tilmatli mamanquj,
	The cape with the war symbol;	tenatl tlachinoltilmatli,
	The cape with the basket flower design;[14]	eacalxuchio tilmatli,
	The cape with the young maize ear flower design;[15]	elotxuchio tilmatli,
	The cape with the colored prince's flower design;	tlapaltecuxuchio tilmatli,
	The cape with the dahlia design;[16]	acucuxuchio tilmatli,
	The cape with the plumeria flower design;[17]	cacalotxuchio tilmatli,
	The cape with the poinsettia design;[18]	cuetlaxxuchio tilmatli,
	The white duck feather cape, diagonally divided;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli nacazmjnquj,
	The white duck feather cape, with the face of a wolf;	iztac xomoiujtilmatli cujtlachixio,

11. Cipoticalcoliuhquj (cuetlat, cicatl, coliuhquj—malin, quauj, tecuitl): gourd vessel with curved decoration. The nature of weaving makes it a stepped design.

12. Cf. representation in Primeros memoriales, Cap. IV.

In the Real Academia de la Historia MS, yapalcoliuhquj chiuatl follows quappachtzcoliuhquj tilmatli.

13. Cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, p. 161 (quauhtecuitl).

14. Pioneer flower design, in Edward Seler: Collected Works (J. Eric S. Thompson and Francis B. Thompson, eds.; Cambridge, Mass.: Carnegie Institution of Washington, 1939), Vol. II, Part 3, p. 95 (Amberiana sp.?). Emily Walcott Emmart, in The Badianus Manuscript (Codex Barberini, Latin 241) (Baltimore: The Johns Hopkins Press, 1940), p. 204, calling it a basket flower, says it is a species of xanthoxylum. Francisco de Santamaría, in Diccionario general de americanismos (México: Editorial Pedro Robredo, 1942), II, p. 102, identifies the huauhtlchal (-xochitl) as Phyllanthus niflur, Humal.

15. Seler, op. cit., p. 96 (Magnolia sp.?). Emmart, op. cit., p. 275, mentions similar elotxochitl belonging to the Compositae.

Yellow-xochitl, here listed in the Real Academia de la Historia MS, is omitted in the Florentine Codex.

16. In Francisco Hernández: Historia de las plantas de Nueva España (México: Imprenta Universitaria, 1942), I, p. 24, this is Dahlia excelsa Cav.; in Seler, loc. cit., D. variabilis; in Emmart, op. cit., p. 389, Dahlia sp.

17. In Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 806, Plumeria acutifolia Poir; in Seler, loc. cit., P. rubra; in Emmart, op. cit., p. 308, P. rubra L. Santamaría, op. cit., I, p. 251, identifies the cacalotxochitl as P. rubra L., P. bicolor R. & P., and P. acutifolia Poir. Cecile Helm Mitchell, in Mexican Plants for American Gardens (Boston and New York: Houghton Mifflin Company, 1935), pp. 23, 177, lists P. acuminata, and refers to it as "frangipani" and "temple flower."

18. In Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 958, Euphorbia (Poinsettia) pulcherrima Willd; in Seler, loc. cit., Poinsettia pulcherrima.

•565	The cape of colored feathers, with embroidery;	tlapaliujtilmatli tlamachio,
292	The cape with the face of a wolf;	cuitlachixio tilmatli,
531	The cape with the tips of eagle wings;	quauhhauitzaio tilmatli,
	The cape with a border of popcorn flowers;	tenjaquixochio tilmatli,
	The cape with the ivy design;[19]	quazoncoilmatli,
	The bed covering cape;	vevej tilmatli pepechtli,
	The mattress;[20]	quachpepechtli,
	The large cape used to keep oneself dry;	vevej tilmatli neoatzalonj,
	The breech clout with the ivy design embroidered at the ends;[21]	quazoncacatlamachio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout with the market place design;	tianquizio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout with the eagle's leg design;	quauhtetepeio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout with the turquoise mosaic mirror design;	xiuhtezcaio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout with the butterfly design at the ends;[22]	acapapaloio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout striped in many colors;	centzonmaxtlatl tlatlatlapalpoalli,
	The breech clout made of twenty pieces,[23] with the wind jewel design at the ends;[23]	cempoalçtl acabecacozcaio,
	The tawny colored breech clout with embroidered ends;	qiauhpachmaxtlatl acan tlamachio,
	The carmine-colored breech clout with the ocelot head;	nochpalmaxtlatl, ocelotzontecoio
	The ocelot breech clout with a step design;	ocelotzicalcoliuhquj maxtlatl,
	The coyote fur [breech clout] with the eagle head;[23]	quauhtzontecoio,
	The breech clout with feathered discs at the ends;	acaiujtemalacaio maxtlatl,
	The breech clout with radiating embroidery at the ends.	acatlamachmoiaoac maxtlatl.

19. Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 257; IV, p. 257.
20. Vevej tilmatli pepechtli; quachpepechtli; cf. Alonso de Molina: Vocabulario de la lengua mexicana (Julio Platzmann, ed.; Leipzig: B. G. Teubner, 1880), Spanish-Nahuatl section—alfombra, colchon.
21. Seler, op. cit., p. 97, reads yaca- lar ace-.
22. Cf. Spanish text, fol. 16v.
23. The Florentine Codex omits cequichtemacatlal before quauhtezcaio, found in the Real Academia de la Historia MS.

[p. 26 is blank]

565
262

Thirteenth Chapter. Here are told the foods which the lords ate.[1]

Ic matlactli vnaej capítulo: vncan mjtoa, in jntlaqual in qujquaia, in tlatoque.

Hot, white, doubled tortillas;[2] large tortillas; large, thick, coarse tortillas; folded tortillas[3] of maize treated with lime, pleasing [to the taste]; tortillas formed in rolls; leaf-shaped tortillas;

Iztac totonquj tlaxcalli, tlacuelpacholli, vei tlaxcalli quauhtlaqualli, tlaxcalpacholli iztac, nexiopapaio, tlaxcalmjmjlli, tlacepoalli tlaxcalli,

White tamales with beans forming a sea shell on top;[3] white tamales with maize grains thrown in;[4] hard, white tamales with grains of maize thrown in; red tamales with beans forming a sea shell on top; tamales made of a dough of maize softened in lime, with beans forming a sea shell on top; tamales of maize softened in wood ashes; turkey pasty cooked in a pot, or sprinkled with seeds; tamales of meat cooked with maize and yellow chili; roast turkey hen; roast quail.

quatecujcujlli tamalli, iztac tlatzincujtl, iztac tetamalli tlatzincujtl, chichiltic quatecujcujlli tamalli, nexiotamalli quatecujcujlli, tamalatl quauhnextli, totolnacaqujmjlli xocco tlapaoaxtli, anoço tlatentli, nacatlaoio tamalli chilcozio: cihoatotoli tlatleoatzalli, çolin tlatleoatzalli,

Market food: white tortillas with a flour of uncooked beans; turkey with a sauce of small chilis, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; turkey with red chilis; turkey with yellow chilis; turkey with green chilis; venison sprinkled with seeds; hare with sauce; rabbit with sauce; meat stewed with maize, red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; venison with red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; birds with toasted maize; small birds; dried duck; duck stewed in a pot; the atzitzicuilotl bird stewed in a pot; roast of meat; fried meat in a sauce of red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; portage of yellow chili; sauces of ordinary tomatoes and small tomatoes and yellow chili, or of tomatoes and green chili; diluted [sauces] with tomatoes; white fish with yellow chili; grey fish with red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; frog with green chilis; newt with yellow chili; tadpoles with small chilis; small fish with small chilis; winged ants with savory tianqujztlaqualli, iztac tlaxcalli etica tlaoio, totolin patzcalmolli, chiltecpiio, totolin, chilcozio totolin, chilchoio totolin, maçanacatl tlatentli, citli molli, tochtli molli, nacatlaolli patzcallo, maçanacatl patzcallo, totoizqujtl tepitoton totome, canauhtlaoatzalli, canauhtlapaoaxtli, atzitzicujlotlapaoaxtli, nacatlacectli, tlatetzoionjlli nacamolli patzcallo, chilcoztlatonjlli, chiltecpinmolli xitomaio, chilcozmolli xitomaio, chilchomolli xitomaio, tlamamollalli xitomaio, iztac amjlotl chilcozio, tomaoac xoujli, patzcallo, cujatl chilchoio, axolotl chilcozio, atepocatl chiltecpiio, mjchpili chiltecpijo, tzicatanatli inamjc papaloqujlitl, chapolin chichiaoa, meocujli chiltecpinmollo, chacali patzcallo, topotlimjchi patzcallo, tlacamjchin patzcallo, maçaxocomolli iztac mjchio

1. Sahagún's Spanish sometimes varies somewhat from dictionary and other definitions of the foods named in the Aztec text. In the main, our translation follows Sahagún's; footnotes take account of the most noticeable variations.

2. Tlaxcalpacholli, totonquipacholli: hot, white tortillas, doubled, arranged in a large basket, according to the corresponding Spanish text. In Molina, op. cit., the word means "cosa doblada, o plegada."—If the root of -pacholli is pachoa, the term could indicate that the tortillas were covered, or could refer to the way they were beaten out. See also note 3, infra.

3. In Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 347, Dr. Ignacio Alonso translates quatecujcujlli tamali patzcalmoli iztac as Tamales de carne cocina y onde espriniole jonas. Alonso Tezozomoc, in Histoire du Mexique (tr. Terrien-Compans; Paris: P. Jaun, 1853), I, p. 269, has this explanation: "les mets appelés quatequicuil-tamalli, bouy-tlacolli [bouillon tlacolli?], tlaxcal-pacholli, grands gâteaux de farine de fèves et de farine de maïs qui sont donc pulvrus d'épaisseur, ainsi que tout cuphas d'aliments et de gâtes."

4. Cf. Molina, op. cit.

565
262

herbs;[5] locusts with chia; maguey grubs with a sauce of small chilis; lobster with red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; sardines[6] with red chili, tomatoes, and ground squash seeds; large fish with the same; a sauce of unripened plums with white fish;

tlatlaubquj teçontzapotl izochiqual maçazocotl chichiltic, coztic, tlaxtlecoaltic, chciozzapotl, xicotzapotl, quauhcamotli, camotli, aoacatl, atzizapotl,

Red, rough sapotas;[7] red plums; yellow or vermillion plums; ashen sapotas;[8] small sapotas;[9] manioc;[10] sweet potato; avocado; yellow sapotas;[11] tuna cactus fruit of many hues—white, yellow, bright red, green, orange; anonas;[12] guanábiles;[13] American cherries; tender maize;[14] green maize; string beans;

nochtli, tlatlatlapalpoalli, iztac, coztic, chichiltic, zozoctic, camopaltic, matzatli, quammochil, capoli, xilotl, elotl, ezotl,

Tamales made of maize flowers with ground amaranth seed and cherries added; tortillas of green maize or of tender maize; tamales stuffed with amaranth greens;[15] tortillas made with honey, or with tuna cactus fruit; tamales made with honey; tortillas shaped like hip guards; tamales made of amaranth seed dough; [cakes made of] amaranth seed dough; rabbit with toasted maize; squash cut in pieces; olchicalli; green maize cooked in a pot and dried; amaranth greens cooked with dry land chili; sauce of purslain with dry land chili; green amaranth seeds with dry land chili;

mjiaoztamalli tlaiznamjctilli ozuhtli ioan capoli, elotlaxcalli, anoço xantlaxcalli, xilotlaxcalli, ozuhqujtamalli, necutlaxcalli, nochtlaxcalli, necutamalli, queçeoatlaxcalli, tzoallaxcalli, tzoalli, tochizqujtl, aiotlatlapanalli, olchicalli, elotl tlapaoaxtli tlaoztzalli, ozuhqujlmolli tonalchillo, itzmjqujlmolli, tonalchillo, ozuhtzontli tonalchillo,

Water greens; onions;[16] the evil-smelling herb; the eloquilite herb;[17] the mozoxe herb;[18] rabbit-ear greens; achochoquilitl;[19] thistle; sow thistle; sorrel of various kinds; a water-edge plant called acuitlacpalli; squash flowers; tender, young squash; small squash; garden cress; raphanui; small tuna cactus fruit with fish eggs;

tzaianalqujlitl, zonacatl, hijacaqujlitl, eloqujlitl, moçoqujlitl, nacaztochqujlitl, achochoqujlitl, ujtzqujlitl, chichicaquilitl, iztac xozocoioli, xozocoiolujujlan, axozoco acujtlacpalli, aiozochqujlitl, aionanacatl, aioiacaqujlitl, aiotepitoton, mexixqujlitl, popoizuhqujlitl, nopaltepitoton mjchteuhio,

---

5. In Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 746, this is Pseudophilinus macrocephalus DC.

6. Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 194) says of tapalli: "son pardillas crianas en los manantiales, son buenas de comer y sabrosas."

7. Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 274: Lucuma mammosa Gaertn. Cf. also Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 314—"zapotezapote o zapotezolcuado que es el verdadero zapote." Sahagún (op. cit., III, p. 225) describes the matamalqui as "de hechura y grandor del corazón de carnero; tienen la corteza áspera y tesa, son colorados por de dentro, son muy dulces y muy buenos de comer, y tienen los corazones negros muy lindos y relucientes." Cf. zapotes in Molina, op. cit.: "hazer zapote alguna cosa."

8. "Son las amarillas" (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 225); also corresponding Spanish text.

9. "Llamanles los espada, y parecenose [wild or chuba pear tree]. Son muy dulces, blancas en tierra colorada" (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 224). In Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 273, this is Achras sapota L.

10. Ibid., II, p. 525: Manihot aculeatus Crantz; Sahagún, op. cit., p. 335: guacamote or camote. Manihot utilissima Pohl; in ibid., p. 337, "las raíces de estas árboles cuécense y blancean como batatas, y son de buen comer."

11. Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 267 (amapul): Lucuma salicifolia Kunth: Sahagún, op. cit., p. 224: "son amarillas de dentro y de fuera; son muy dulces, tienen a manera de pezon de buena comida, tienen encima de color cenizo oscuro."

12. Anona squamosa, posiblemente cimarilla, in Sandoz, op. cit.; Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 260: Anonas cutiras, Schult; Anona cherimola.

13. Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 799: Psidium guajava dulce (Rumph.) Benth.; cf. also Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 52 (Guanábil).

14. Cf. Molina, op. cit. Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 149: "Jilote: Cabellitos de la mazorca de maíz tierno."

15. Cf. Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., I, p. 12; II, p. 154; op. ibid., I, p. 12, n. 44 (amaqualitl).

See also Jonathan D. Sauer: "The Grain Amaranths: A Survey of Their History and Classification," Annals of the Missouri Botanical Garden, 37: 561-632 (Nov., 1950), where it is suggested that cuauhtli may refer to either the chenopods or amaranths (p. 564).

16. Allium sp., in Sahagún, op. cit., p. 339.

17. Baldera palmata L.—of de milpa (Sahagún, op. cit., p. 338). See also Santamaría, op. cit., III, p. 337.

18. Mozoxe in Santamaría, op. cit., II, p. 318. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 338, has "Yerba del Angel, Esperanza deleitosa. Inca, Campanita"; quauhtlaquatl is the same.

19. Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 361: Rubus chrysanthemifolius Michx.; Sahagún, op. cit., p. 338: Rubus corragua D. C.

Rats with sauce; hot maize gruel of many kinds; maize gruel with honey, with chili and honey, with yellow chili; white, thick gruel with a scattering of maize grains; sour, white maize gruel; sour, red maize gruel with fruit and chili; small, green tomatoes[20] with a maize gruel made with anonas; maize gruel made with amaranth and toasted maize; maize gruel with fish-amaranth seeds and honey; cold maize gruel; maize gruel with wrinkled chía,[21] covered with green chilis or small, hot chilis;[22] white maize gruel with chía,[23] covered with yellow chilis; maize gruel with chía, covered with squash seeds and with chili; maize gruel made of tortilla crumbs, and with ordinary and wrinkled chía, covered with small chilis.

toçanmolli, totonquj atolli, mjiec tlamantli, nequatolli, chilnequatolli, chilcozio, quauhnexatolli tlatzincujtl, iztac xocoatolli, chichiltic, chilxocoatolli, mjltomatl inamjc chciostolli, ouuhatolli izqujo, mjchioaoatoll· necuio, iztic atolli, chiantzotzolatolli, chilchopanj, anoço chiltecpinpanj, iztac chiauatolli chilcozpanj, chianpitzaoac atolli, aiohoachpanj chillo, tlaçiocuepalatolli chiantzotzollo, ioan chianio chiltecpinpanj

565
262

All these foods came forth from within the house of the ruler.

in jxqujch tlamantli, y, tlaqualli icalitic, calquiça tlatoanj.

643

And daily a man, the majordomo, set out for the ruler his food—two thousand kinds of various foods; hot tortillas, white tamales with beans forming a sea shell on top; red tamales; the main meal of roll-shaped tortillas and many [foods]: sauces with turkeys, quail, venison, rabbit, hare, rat, lobster, small fish, large fish; then all [manner of] sweet fruits.

Auh in momoztlae, ice tlacatl calpixquj qujtequjlia in tlatoanj, in jtlaqual macujltzontli in nepapan tlaqualli, in totonquj tlaxcalli in jxtac quatecujcujlli: in chichiltic tamalli, in vej tlaqualli, tlaxcalmjmjlli: ioan cenca mjiec tlamantli in jmollo in jvical in totoli, çolli, maçanacatl, tochi, çitli, tuçan, chacali, topotli, tlacamjchin, njman iee in jxqujch necutic xochiqualli.

[644]
262

And when the ruler had eaten, then all the food was divided. Apart, in the city, the lords ate, and all the people from surrounding lands—the ambassadors, the war messengers, the princes, the judges, the high priests, the seasoned warriors, the valiant men of war, the masters of the youths, the rulers of the youths, the keepers of the gods, the priests, the singers, [the ruler's] pages, his servants, his jugglers, and the various artisans, goldsmiths, feather workers, cutters of precious stones, setters of mosaic, sandal makers, and turquoise cutters.[24]

Auh in jquac in otlaqua tlatoanj, njman ic motezteloa, in jxqujch tlaqualli: nononqua tlaqua in altepetl ipan tlatoque, ioan in jxqujch cemanaoacatl in tlatocatitlanti, in moiautitlãque, in tlaçopipilti, in tecutlatoque, achcacauhti, tequjoaque, tiacahoan, tiachcahoan, telpuchtlatoque teupixque, tlamacazque, cujcanjme, in quezqujtlamantli, izoloa, iiahachhoan, tetlauetztzqujtique: ioan nepapan toltecatl, teucujtlapitzque, amanteca, tlatecque, chalchiuhtlacujloque, cacçoque, teuxinque.

264
[645]
463
565

Then, in his house, the ruler was served his chocolate, with which he finished [his repast]—green, made of tender cacao; honeyed chocolate made with ground-up dried flowers—with green vanilla pods; bright red chocolate; orange-colored chocolate; rose-colored chocolate; black chocolate; white chocolate.[25]

Niman moteca in jcalitic: iecauj in jcacaoauh, zozouhquj cacaoçintli, quauhnecujo cacaoatl, xochiocacaoatl, zozouhquj tlilxochio, chichiltic cacaoatl, vitztecolcacaoatl, xochipalcacaoatl, tiltic cacaoatl, iztac cacaoatl

643
264
272

20. Ibid., p. 237; small tomatoes: Ramírez, op. cit., green; Hernández, op. cit., III, p. 69?: "ha mole chiene millomatoma, es decir, de tomates."

21. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 364: "Chia arrugada. Salvia yyl" Remondo, op. cit., III, p. 66: Salvia polyantha? Hernández, op. cit., I, p. 210: Salvia hispanica Linn.

22. Remondo, op. cit., I, p. 496: Capsicum microcarpum Du.—"Es Mejiro, chile redondo, como del tamaño de una pulga y muy picante." In Hernández, op. cit., II, p. 435, it is identified as C. frutescens L., var. baccatum L.: "del tamaño de las compulsas, o las que parecen tomar en la pequeñez y en el color."

23. Sahagún, op. cit., p. 364: "Salvia hispánica. L. Sahdor"; Remondo, op. cit., I, p. 98: Salvia chian, S. hispánica L.

24. The Spanish text has barbaros, which would require tenlopan.

25. Tiltic and iztac are as they appear in the Codex; chiltic and tzaac are probably meant.

6: Sahagún M-5 (1529-1590) 1954 NU7 Aztec NU7

692 nounced. And in what was there made known, the 695 lords did nothing for friendship's sake; they exacted nothing as reward; nor delayed [any case].

vncan caqujtiloia tlatoque ate quicnjuhchionia ate tlaxtlaujltica quixpachonia, anoço quijuecaoia.

SECOND PARAGRAPH, which telleth of the court, the place of discussion, where spoke the judges.

INJC VME PARRAPHO, itechpa tlatea in audencia in tlatoloian in vncan tlatoaia tecutlatoque.

[693] Teccalli,[5] or Teccalco: there were the judges and noblemen.[6] Every day the common folk and vassals laid complaints before them. Calmly and prudently [212] they heard the plaints of the vassals; in the picture writing which recorded the case, they studied the complaints. And when they tested their truth, they sought out and inquired of informers and witnesses who could size up the plaintiffs, [who knew] what had been stolen and what was charged.

Teccalli, teccalco, vncan catca in tecutlatoque, in tetecuti, in momuztlae imixpan motecilhujaia, cujtlapilli atlapalli maçeoalli, iujian iocuzca, in quicaquja in jnneteilhujl maçeoalli: tlapallacujlolpan in quipoaia, in quittaia neteilhujlli: auh injc quinnelchiaia, quinteoaia, quimjtlanja in machiceque, in tlanelchiianj, in quimachilia motecilhujque, in tlein quimecujcujlia, in tlein ipan motecilhuja.

687 And the ruler, if he knew anything ill of these judges—perhaps that they needlessly delayed the case of common folk, that they deliberated two years or even four—[that] they could not pronounce judgment because of either a bribe or kinship,—he then seized them and jailed them in wooden cages, exacted the penalty, and slew them, so that the judges might walk in dread.

Auh in tlatoanj, intla itla quinmachili in ichoantin tecutlatoque, aço çã tlapic quiuecaoa, in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli, atlapalli, aço ie uetzujtl, anoço ie nauhxiujtl quinocmjtia in amo uel quiztontecuj, aço çan ipampa tlaxtlaujlli, anoço hosiolcaiotl: njman quimjlpia, quauhcalco quimtlalia, quiztacutiuj, quimjctia, injc mauhca ieaque tecutlatoque.

[When] Moctezuma was lord, he learned many ill things of the judges Mixcoatlailotlac, Teicnotlamachti, Tlacochcalcatl, Itzlaca mixcoatlailotlac, Umaca, Toqual. Uictlolinqui, [all] of Tlatilulco—that they had unjustly discharged their office of judge. Then he seized them, jailed them in wooden cages, exacted the penalty, and slew them.

Tlatecati motecuçuma, mjiec tlamantli in quinmachili tecutlatoque mixcoatlailotlac teicnotlamachti, tlacochcalcatl, itzlaca mixcoatlailotlac vmaca, toquai, victlolinquj, tlatilulco in amo melauac quichiouia in jntequjuh tecutlatolli: njman quimjlpi, quauhcalco quimtlali, quiztacutiaque, quinmjcti.

692 THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which is described the 565 place of discussion where were the brave warriors
684 and the noblemen.

INJC EI PARRAPHO: vncan nijtoa in tlatoloian, in vncan catca in tiacaoan, ioan in pipilti.

Tecpilcalli: there were [to be found] and were established the noblemen, the brave warriors,[7] the valiant men, wise in war. If the ruler knew something ill of some nobleman—although he were a great prince,[8] or brave warrior—if he had committed adultery, then he sentenced him to be stoned before the people, to die stoned.

Tecpilcalli, vncan catca, vncan tecpanoaia in pipilti, tiacahoan oquichti, in iauc matinj, in tlatoanj intla aca itla quimachili pilli, in manel cenca tlaçopilli tiacauh intla otetlaxin, njman quitlatzontequjlia, injc teixpan tetepacholo tetica mjquj

[When] Moctezuma was lord, one who was a prince, named Uitznauatl ecamalacotl, committed motecuçuma tlatocati, ce tlacatl tlaçopilli itoca vitznauatl ecamalacotl tetlaxi in oconteixpanique in-

5. Iohagún, in the corresponding Spanish text, refers to all of these places as "another hall"—"otra sala."

6. Manuel Orozco y Berra, in Historia antigua y de la conquista de México (México: Tipografía de Gonzalo A. Esteva, 1880), I, p. 267, explains that "En cada barrio de México había un tecalli, clase ennoblecida por los nuestros; determinados de cuatro linajes, donde cuatro diversos ancianos á los cuales superiores." Clark, loc. cit., I, p. 97) writes: "The four ruled figures behind the judges, called tecali, are young men of rank who attend the courts for instruction, so that in time they might rise to the position of judge." (See also II, 47; and the of the Mendoza Codex.)

7. Tecuauh, pilli, oquichti: cf. Iohagún, op. cit., III, p. 26; Jones, op. cit., pp. 34, 68.

8. Tlaçopilli: cf. Jones, op. cit., p. 34.

adultery. They accused him before Moctezuma, who then condemned him to be stoned before the people.

FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is discussed the council chamber of the brave warriors devoted to war.

Tequiuacacalli or Quauhcalli: there were the brave warriors, the generals, and the commanding generals,[9] whose personal charge was command in war.

Achcauhcalli: there were the constables, the brave warriors who were the ruler's executioners. These who brought to an end [the life of] any upon whom sentence had fallen [were] the Quauhnochtli, Atempanecatl, and Tezcacoacatl. And if they erred in something, they exacted the penalty of them and they died.

Cuicacalli: there were the masters of the youths and the rulers of the youths, there established in order to oversee what was by way of work. And every day, when the sun had already set, they turned their attention to dances. They went quite naked. So they went to the house of songs; so they danced with song, proceeding with, about their necks, only [a cape] made like a net. They set in place and proceeded with their forked heron feather ornaments and the red cord with which they bound their hair; and [they had] their turquoise ear plugs and sea shell lip pendants. All the youths, when they danced and sang, ceased when it was well into the night, when for the first time the fire priests and [other] priests blew the shell trumpets. None of [the youths] entered their homes; none slept at home. Rather, they went straight to the young men's houses, which were everywhere. There they slept, stretched out quite naked. Only little did they sleep. On the morrow, when it was still dark, they set forth, to lodge in the house of the ruler.

And when the ruler knew something ill of them—either drunkenness or concubinage;[10] or that they wrought something to their advantage behind the back of the ruler; [or] that without his command they levied tribute on the town, perchance of chocolate, or of food, which became a tribute, and it was done without leave, and [that] they exacted as tribute whatsoever they wished, then the ruler commanded that they be jailed in wooden cages. He condemned them to pay the penalty; perchance they strangled

pan motecuçuma, njman qujoallatzontequjli, injc teixpan tetepacholoc. 692 565 684

IC NAUJ PARRAPHO, vncan mjtoa in jnnenonotzaia in tiacahoan in jpampa iaujotl. 692

Tequjoacacalli, quauhcalli, vncan catca in tiacaoan tlacochcalcatl tlacatecatl, in jnneixcaujl iautequj:

Achcauhcalli vncan catca in achcacauhti in tiacahoan in jtemjcticaoan catca tlatoanj, iehoantin qujtzonqujxtiaia in ixqujn tlein ipan omotzontec, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl, tezcacoacatl, auh in jtla qujtlacoaia, qujtzacutiuja mjquja. 696

Cuicacalli, vncan catca in tiachcahoan, in telpuchtlatoque vncan tlatecpanoaia injc quichiaia tlein tequjtl, auh in momuztlac, in jquac ie calaquj tonatiuh: tlamaçeoaliztli ipan qujmatia, çan petlauhtiuja, injc viia cuicacali, injc oncujcoanoaia çanijo inquechin onactiuja, iuhqujn matlatl ic tlachiuhtli, imaztaxel conmantiuj, tochacatl injc quilpia intzonchichilicpatl: ioan ixiuhnacoch, ioan intempilol epdli, ixqujch in telpuchtli in oncujcoanoia icoac necaoaloia in tlaquauh tlapoiaoa, in jcoac iancujcan tlapitzaia tlenamacaque tlamacazque, amo ac ichan calaquja, amo ac ichan oncochia, ca njman vmpa tlamelaoaia, in noujian telpuchcalli mamanca: in oncan cochia, çan pepetlauhtoca, çan achi ih concochia, momoztlac in ec ioboan qujça in ontecpanoa, yn ichan tlatoanj. 561 [624] 535 [291] [301] [342] [513]

Auh in jcoac itla qujnmachilia in tlatoanj, açotlaoanaliztli, anoço nemecatilixtli, anoço itla icampa qujqujxtia, in tlatoanj: in amo itencopa, itla qujtetequjtia in calla açoatl, tlaqualli tequjpan iecauj, moiocoia, qujtetequjtia injc intech monequj, njman tlanaoztia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco qujntlahia, qujntlatzontequjlia, injc qujtzacutiui, açoqujnmecanja, anoço qujntetepachoa, anoço quauhtica qujnujujtequj teixpan, injc mjctilo, injc maujztli qujteca tlatoanj. 561 681

9. Tlacochcalcatl, discussed: see Sahagún, op. cit., III, p. 27; Jones, op. cit., p. 79; Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 102, n. 3; III, pp. 57-58.
10. After nemecatilixtli, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has amoçe tzahuatzinolli—or adultery.

561 681 them with a cord, or they stoned them, or before the people they beat them with wooden [staves], so that they were slain. Thus the ruler implanted fear.[11]

251 FIFTH PARAGRAPH, where is told how they stored all the food.

Petlacalco: there was stored all the food. Dried maize grains thus were kept in wooden grain bins; more than two thousand [measures of] grains of dried maize—a store of twenty years for the city. And in wooden storage bins were dried beans, chía, amaranth seeds, wrinkled chía, salt jars, coarse salt, baskets of chilis, baskets of squash seeds, and large squash seeds. And there was kept the jail, the [497] wooden cage,[12] where they imprisoned and confined evildoers.

IC MACUJLLI PARRAPHO: vncan mjtoa injquipiaia in jxqujch qualonj.

Petlacalco, vncan mopiaia, in jxqujch qualonj, in tlaolli, injc mopiaia quauhquezcomatl, amo çan macujltzontli, vncatca tlaolli: cempoalxiuhcaiotl, in jtetzon altepetl, ioan quauhcuezcontica mamanca in etl, in chian, in ouuhtli, in chiantzotzol, iztacomjtl, iztaxalli, chilpetlatl, aiocochpetlatl, quauhaiocochtli: ioan vncan mopiaia in teilpilcalli, quauhcalli, in vncan qujmjlpiaia, quijncaltzaquaia tlatlacoanj.

624 651 681 344 SIXTH PARAGRAPH, in which is described the house of the majordomos and stewards.

Calpixcalli[13] or Texancalli: there assembled all the majordomos and tribute gatherers. There they were lodged [to await the command of the ruler, (lest) he require something, or] to bring down and put in order that which was their trust as tributes, [and there they arranged in order the various foods] which every day they gave the ruler. And if the ruler knew something ill of a majordomo, perchance of something he stole from the tributes; or that all his charge, the tributes, perhaps did not equal the correct count when all his store was tallied and examined; then he jailed the majordomo in a wooden cage; he exacted the penalty, that he die. Then he cast out his women [and his children from his home]. Then quickly the house of the majordomo was closed up, and all his goods remained in the house. All belonged to the ruler.

IC CHIQUACEN PARRAPHO, vncã mjtoa: in jnchan mayordomos in calpixque.

Calpixcalli, texancalli, vncã cenquijçaia: in jxqujch calpixquj, ioan tequjtquj, vncan tecpanoaia injc [quitlatolchixticatca tlatoani, aço tlein quinequiz, aço] tlein qujtemoz qujcencauhticatca, in tlein inpiel tlacalaqujlli, [yoan uncan quicenquixtiaya y nepapan tlaqualli,] in momoztlae qujmacaia tlatoanj. Auh intla tlatoánj, itla qujmachili, ce calpixquj, aço itla qujnaoalchioa tlacalaqujlli: ioan in jxqujch in jpiel, in tlacalaqujlli: acaçomo caçi in tlapoaliztli: in jcoac mopoa, mocxitoca, in jxqujch in jpiel; njman quauhcalco qujtlalia, in calpixquj: qujtzacutiuh, mjquj, njman quinqujxtia, in jçioahoan [yoan in ipilhoan yn ichan]: njman içiuhca motzaqua, in jcal calpixquj ioan in jxqujch in jtlatquj, calitic onoc: moch itech compoã tlatoanj.

565 574 431 344 Coacalli: there were established all the lords from everywhere—friends of the ruler, and all the lords unfriendly to him. He gave and bestowed upon them all manner of costly goods: valuable capes and breech clouts, golden lip plugs, golden ear plugs, green stone lip plugs, green stone necklaces, and green stone bracelets.

Coacalli vncan tecpanoaia, in jxqujchtin, noujian tlatoque: in jicnjhoan tlatoanj, ioan in jxqujchtin, iiauhoan tlatoque: qujnmacaia, qujntlauhtiaia, in jxqujch tlaçotli, in tlaçotilmatli, in tlaçomaxtlatl, in teucujtlatenteti, in teucujtlanacochtli, in chalchiuhtenteti, in chalchiuhcozcatl, in chalchiuhmacuextli.

11. At the end of this paragraph, the Real Academia de la Historia MS contains an account of the Calmecac, which is lacking in the Florentine Codex. (See Appendix A.)

12. Teilpilcalli, quauhcalli: Orozco y Berra, op. cit., I, pp. 248-249, writes: "Las prisiones eran de dos especies. La llamada teilpilcayan, lugar de presos, en que estaban detenidos los delincuentes de poca leve; el cuauhcalli, casa de madera, especie de jaula, fuerte de vigas, en que se guardaba los condenados á la muerte y prisioneros de guerra destinados al sacrificio."

13. In the Real Academia de la Historia MS, three passages appear which are not in the Florentine Codex. Because they change the sense to a degree, they are here inserted in brackets.

728 651 which was there made. And likewise, forthwith a steward was placed in office, who would watch over and levy the tribute.

tzalo in calpixqui, in quimocuitlauix, in ipan tlatoz in tlacalaqujlli.

SECOND PARAGRAPH, in which it is described how they chose judges.

643 693 565 The ruler watched especially over the trials; he heard all the accusations and the complaints, the afflictions, and the misery of the common folk, the orphans, the poor, and the vassals.

And in order that the ruler might verify one's accusations and guilt, there were placed in office, and [the ruler] chose, as his judges,[5] the princes, those who were endowed with the necessities of life, those provided with drink and food—the rich; and the brave warriors and men [at arms], who had been reared in war and had gloried in all kinds of suffering and misery. In all things had their upbringing, their rearing, been sound. In their infancy they had been taught [according to] the upbringing in the priests' house, or the rearing by the masters of the youths, growing up with others, living in the [same] houses as others, engaging in war, taking captives.

And likewise the ruler thus chose and placed in office judges of the Mexicans who were not noblemen—those of sound and righteous upbringing, who had been reared in war: brave warriors and men [at arms] who in many ways had won glory by the favor of the ruler. By his grace they drank and ate. He gave them contentment and he gave them gifts; he bestowed upon them whatsoever they needed.

[577] Such as these the ruler gave office and chose as his judges—the wise, the able, the sage; who listened and spoke well; who were of good memory; who spoke not vainly nor lightly; who did not make friends without forethought nor were drunkards; who guarded their lineage with honor; who slept not overmuch, [but rather] arose early; who did nothing for friendship's or kinship's sake, nor for enmity; who would not hear nor judge a case for a fee. The ruler might condemn them to death; [681] hence they performed their offices as judges righteously. For otherwise, these judges could find excuse for the wrongs which they might do.

And when the ruler placed his judges in office, he gave them two court rooms, the Teccalli, where they INJC VME PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa, in quenjn qujnpepenaia luezes.

In tlatoanj oc cenca quimocujtlaujaia in tetlatzontequjlilizti, quicaquja in jxqujch in jnetcilhujl: ioan in jchoquix, in jnentlamachiliz in jnetolinjliz in cujtlapilli, atlapalli in jcnotlacatl, in motolinja in maçeoalli:

auh injc uel qujnehtilizia in tlatoanj in tenetcilhujl anoço tetlatlacul quimjxquetzaia, quinpepenaia in jtecutlatocahoan: ichoantin in tlaçopipilti, in tlaiecultilo in oncã in qujnj, in qujquanj, in mocujltonoa, ioan tiacaoan, oquichti, in iauc omoxcaltique, mjiec tlamãtli tecoco netolinjlizti, oquimaujçoque: auh in jxquj tlamantlj qualli neoapaoalizti, nezcaltilizti, in jnpaltian oquimomachtique, in calmecac neoapaoalizti, in tiachcapa neoapaoalizti, in tetlan neoapaoalizti, in calpan tetlan nemjlizti, iauqujçalizti, tlamalizti.

Auh çan no iuhq̃, injc quinpepenaia tlatoanj, inic quimjxquetzaia in tecutlatoque, in mexica, in amo pipilti ichoantin in qualli iectli, inneoapaoaliz, innezcaltiliz, in iauc omoxapaouhque, in tiacaboan in oquichti, in mjiec tlamantli oquimaujçoque, iteicneliliz tlatoanj, in jpal atli, tlaqua, in quinpaequjltia, in quintlauhtia, ioan in quinmaca, in jxqujch intech monequj:

iuhque in in quimjxquetzaia, in quinpepenaia tlatoanj, in jtecutlatocahoan, in mjmatinj, in mozcalianj, in tlanemjlianj, in vellacaquj, in vellatoa, in motlaiollotianj, in amo ahaujllatoa, in amo cacamanaloa, in amo iliuiz moocnjuhtia, amo tlaoananj, cenca quimaujxpia in tecuiotl, amo cochinj; cenca cochiçanj amo tle quicnjuhchioa: amo tle quioaiolcachioa: amo tle quitecocolicachioa, amo tlaxtlaujltica quicaquj, anoço quitzontequj: quimjxquiznaoatiaia, in tlatoanj: injc melaoac quichioatque in jntequjuh, in tecutlatollj: auh intlacamo, ca ichoantin conmotzacujlitiaxque in tecutlatoque, in tlein quitlaconque.

Auh in jcoac, oquinjxquetz in tlatoanj: in jtecutlatocahoan quinmacaia vntetl in tlatocacalli, in tec-

5. Intendencyphone: cf. ibid., p. 318 (los mayores jueces) and p. 325 (consejeros).

were to remain, to make judgments, and to hear all manner of testimony.

The name of one Teccalli was Tlacxitlan. There they tried princes and great lords. At once, swiftly, they passed judgment on their complaints or wrong doing.

And the second place where justice was done was named Teccalli. There were the Mexican judges. Sagely they heard the complaints of the common folk. They defined and verified the complaint, they recorded it in paintings so that they might take it there to Tlacxitlan, where they informed the judges who were princes, so that there judgment might be pronounced.

And if something was difficult, they took it to the ruler so that he might judge it [with] those judges[6] whose names were Ciuacoatl, Tlacochcalcatl, Uitznauatlailotlac, Ticociauacatl, Pochtecatlailotlac, Ezuauacatl,[7] Mexicatl tezcacoacatl, Acatliacapanecatl, Milnauatl, Atlauhcatl, Ticociauacatl, Ciuatecpanecatl, and Tequixquinaoacatl. These same judges meditated and pondered upon, and examined, the testimony. They sought out the witnesses, those who bore testimony. Perchance [the charge] was true; or else that which the ruler had heard was false, so that, perhaps, by error[8] someone had been held in jail.

And if the ruler condemned someone to die, then his executioners slew him—the Achcacauhti,[9] the Quauhnochtli, and the Atempanecatl. Thus did these slay him: with a cord they strangled the evildoer, or they stoned him before the people, or they cut him to pieces.

THIRD PARAGRAPH, in which is described how all were to dance.

The ruler was greatly concerned with the dance, the rejoicing, in order to hearten and console all the peers, the lords, the noblemen, the brave warriors, and all the common folk and vassals.

First the ruler announced what song should be intoned. He commanded the singers to rehearse and practise the song and [to prepare] the two-toned calli, in vncan ienque, in vncã tetlatzontequjliaque, 643 in vncan qujcaqujzque in jxqujch tlamãtli tlacatlatolli, 693 in centerl teccalli, itoca tlacxitlan, in vncã tetlatzontequjliaia tlaçopipilti, tlatocapipilti, çan njman içiuhca qujtzontequja inteneteilhujl, anoço tetlatlacul. 565 [344]

Auh injc vccan tecutlatoloia, itoca teccalli, vncan catca in tecutlatoque mexica: iujian iocuzca qujcaquja, in jneteilhujl cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in oqujchipauhque, in oqujiectilique neteilhujlli, tlapallacujlolpan qujtlalia, injc vmpa qujtquj tlacxitlan in jpã qujntlapoujlia in tecutlatoque in tlaçopipilti, injc vmpa motzontequj. 693 [344] 565 695 [212]

Auh intla itla oujlitica iujc qujtquj in tlatoanj injc ichoanti qujtzontequj in jntoca catca tecutlatoque. Çiacoatl tlacochcalcatl, vitznaoatlailotlac, ticociaoacatl, pochteca tlailotlac, ezoaoacatl, mexicatl tezcacoacatl, acatliacapanecatl, mjlnaoatl, atlauhcatl, ticociaoacatl, çiouatecpanecatl, tequjxqujnaoacatl, ichoantin, y, in tecutlatoque qujnemjliaia, qujchiquja, qujpetlaoaia in tlacatlatolli, qujntemoaia in machiceque, in tlaneltilianj, in aço ie nelli, anoço tlatolchichioalli in caqujtilo tlatoanj, in aço can tlapic aca quauhcalco otlaliloc. 695 643

Auh intla aca qujtlatzontequjlia tlatoanj mjqujz, njman qujmjctia, in jtemjcticaoan achcacauhti, quauhnochtli, atempanecatl: injc ichoantin qujmjctia, qujmecanja in tlatlacoanj, anoço teixpan qujtetepachoa, anoço qujtetequj. 693 696

INJC EI PARRAPHO: ipan mjtoa in quenjn netotilor.

In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia, in maçeualiztli, in papaqujliztli, injc qujmellaquaoa, injc qujnjollalia, in jxqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipilti, ioan tetecuti, ioan tiacahoan: ioan in jxqujch in cujtlapilli, atlapalli, in maçeualli: 535 643

acheopa qujtoaia in tlatoanj, in tlein cujcatl mecoaz qujnnaoatiaia in cujcanjme: injc qujichecoazque injc qujchicaoazque in cujcatl, ioan teponaztli, olmaitl, 643 533 534

6. The corresponding Spanish text reads: "Y los oyan, muy diligentemente, y graues, llamandos el señor; para que los entendiesse juntamente con sus principales, muy cuidadosos, que eran el embaxador, y prudentes."
7. After the word pochtecatlailotlac, the Real Academia de la Historia MS includes ezoaoacatlailotlac; ezoaoacatl appears as ejuauacatl.
This title Tlaxitlanecatl is repeated in the Aztec text of the Florentine Codex.
8. Cas dispar: pas is probably spanish (cf. ibid.).
9. Achcacauhti: cf. Sahagún, op. cit., I, pp. 166, 291, 293; II, pp. 318, 321; also Anderson and Dibble, op. cit., II, p. 180, and III, p. 53.

643 drums, the rubber drum hammers, and the ground
533 drums, and all the properties used in the dance. And 534 [he appointed the kind of] dance, him who would give the pitch, those who would lead, him who would beat the two-toned drum, him who would play the ground drum. All was first arranged, so that nothing would be left out.

vesetl: ioan in iztqujch maçeoallatqujtl, ioan netotilizti, aqujn cujcaitoa, aqujque in teiacanaazque, aqujn teponaçoa, aqujn vesetzonaz, mochi achto mocencaoaia injc atle itlacauja.

643 And when there was a dance, the ruler [decided]
535 the day. At this time, he adorned and arrayed him-
292 self, [in his] head band with sprays of quetzal
301 feathers and gold, with which he bound his hair; a yellow labret, or a green stone lip plug, which he inserted in his [lower] lip; golden ear plugs, which he inserted in [the lobes of] his ears; and he laid on a neck band, either a neck band of green stone or a collar with turquoise inserted; he placed on his wrist a bracelet with a large green stone upon it, or a large turquoise; or a golden arm band; and a quetzal feather fan. With [these] costly goods he went in procession and danced. With a priceless cape he covered and wrapped himself, and in a costly breech clout he girt himself.

Auh in ie iconac maçeoa tlatoanj, in tlein ilhujtl ipan mocencaoa, mochichioa quetzallalpilonj coztic teucujtlaio, injc qujlpia itzon, coztic teçacatl, anoço chalchiuhtentetl in conaquja itenco, coztic teucujtlanacochtli, in caquja inacazco: auh in cozcatl conteca, aço chalchiuhcozcatl, anoço coxcapetlatl, teuxiujtl itlaactoc, macuextli imac qujtlalia vei chalchiujtl ipan ca anoço vej teuxiujtl, anoço coztic teucujtlamatemecatl, quetzalcaccoeztli, tlaçotlanquj injc mjtotia injc macoa, tlaçotilmatli in qujmololoa, in qujmoquentia, tlaçomaxtlatl in qujmomaxtlatia,

565 Then also they arrayed and accorded favors to all
535 the lords, and noblemen, the men [at arms], brave warriors, and the high judges, and the [lesser] judges, and brave warriors, men [at arms], and masters of the youths, and singers. And the ruler gave them drink and food, all the things which have been mentioned.

njman ic no qujcencaoa qujntlauhtia: in iztqujchtin tlatoque, ioan pipiltl, in oqujchti, tiiacaoan, ioan tecutlatoque, ioan achcacauhti, ioan tiiacaoan oqujchtin, ioan tiachcaoan, ioan cujcanjme, ioan qujnmaca in jiauh, in jtlaqual tlatoanj in jzqujtlamantin omoteneuhque.

687 And if the singers did something amiss—perchance a two-toned drum was out of tune, or a ground drum; or he who intoned, marred the song; or the leader marred the dance—then the ruler commanded that they place in jail whoever had done the wrong; they imprisoned him, and he died.

Auh intla itla qujtlacoa cujcanjme: aço teponaztli qujchalanja, anoço vesetl, anoço cujcaitoa, qujpoloa cujcatl: anoço teiacana, in qujpoloa netotiliztli: njman tlanaostia in tlatoanj, quauhcalco contlalia in aqujn tlatlacoa, qujtzacutiuh mjquja.

643 FOURTH PARAGRAPH, in which is told how 726 he who was the ruler kept vigil; how he kept guard at night and all day, because of war.

INJC NAUJ PARRAPHO: vncã mjtoa injc iztoçoaia in aqujn tlatoanj, injc tlapiaia in ioeltica: ioan in cemjlhujtl in jpãpa iauiotl.

The ruler was especially concerned with the keeping of watch against enemies and the guarding of the city, all day and all night. Hence he gave stern commands that guard should be kept faithfully. For at times, suddenly, the City of Mexico was circled by foes; perchance somewhere for this they were gathered together, and were laying a snare. Therefore the ruler kept careful vigil. He did not become besotted. He himself sometimes set forth by night, circled the city, and beheld what was done: perhaps the priest

In tlatoanj oc cenca qujmocujtlaujaia in iautlapializtli, ioan altepepializtli, cemjlhujtl cecioal, ic tlatlaquauhnaoatiaia, injc cenca tlapialoa: ma quenmanjan atenemachpan iauiaoalolo in altepetl mexico, aço cana ica necentlalilo, tlachichiujlilo, ipampa cenca iztoçoaia in tlatoanj, amo tlaoanaia, iioma in iohoaltica quenmanjan qujçaia qujiaoaloa in altepetl qujtta tlein muchioa, acaçomo tlapia in tlamacazquj in tiachcauh aço ie necujtlaujlo in mjxitl in tlapatl in octli ioan oc cenca qujntlaquauhnaoatiaia in tlatoanj

565 Twentieth Chapter, in which is told how they reared the sons of lords and noblemen.

And here is described the rearing of the sons of those who were lords, and of all the princes, who were the sons[1] of lords and noblemen.

854 Their mothers and fathers nourished and raised them, or nursemaids raised them while they were 855 still small children.

565 And when they could run, when they were per-855 haps six years old, thereupon [the boys] went [forth] to play. Their pages—perhaps two, or three—accompanied them that they might amuse them. [The child's] father or mother charged these [pages] that [the boy] not behave ill, that he not taint himself with vice, as he went along the streets.

565 And also they took great care that he should con-867 verse fittingly with others—that his conversation should be proper; that he should respect and show reverence to others—[when] perchance he somewhere might chance to meet a judge, or a leading militia officer, or a seasoned warrior, or someone of lesser rank; or a revered old man, or a respected old woman; or someone who was poor. He should greet him and bow humbly. He said: "Come hither, my beloved grandfather; let me bow before thee." And the old one who had been greeted then said: "O my beloved grandson, O precious stone, O precious feather, thou has shown me favor. May it go well with thee."

And when the young boy thus saluted others, they praised him highly for it. They rejoiced greatly over it; they were joyful because of it. They said: "How will this beloved child be, if he shall live? He will in sooth be a nobleman. Mayhap his reward will be something [great]."

565 And when he was already maybe ten, twelve, or 871 thirteen years old, they placed him in the priests' house; they delivered him into the hands of the fire priests and [other] priests, that he might be reared

Ic cempoalli capitulo: vncan mjtoa, in quenjn qujnoapacia in inpilhoan tlatoque, ioan pipilti.

Auh njcan mjtoa: in jnneoapaoaliz in ichoantin in tlatoque impilhoan, ioan in jxqujchtin in tlaçopipilti, in jnpilhoan tlatoque, pipilti.

ichoantin in jnnaoan, in jntaoan qujmjzcaltia, qujnoapaoa, anoço chichioame in qujnoapaoa in oc pipiltotonti:

auh in jcoac ie uel nenemj, aço ie chiquaceuxiuhtia, njman ie ic iauh in maaujltiz, in qujnujca ixolooa aço ome anoço ei in caaujltiz, ichoantin qujnocultia in jtatzin in jnantzin injc amo tlauelilocatiz, injc amo qujmocujtlaujz tlauelilocaiotl: in jcoac otli qujtocaz.

Auh no cenca qujcujtlaujltiaia injc vel tenotzaz, injc qualli iez in jtlatol, injc teimacaçiz, injc temauhcaittaz, aço cana qujnamjqujz aço tecutlato, anoço achcauhtlaiscati, anoço iautequjoa, anoço çan aca tlapaltzintli, anoço veuentzin, anoço ilamatzin, anoço aca motolinja, qujtlapaloz cenca mopechteca, qujlhuja, xioalmoujca nocultzine, ma njmjtznotlaxili: auh in ichoatl oqujtlapalo veuentzin njmã qujlhuja notujuhtzine cuzcatle quetzalle otinechmocnelili ma ximonenemjti:

auh injc iuh tetlapaloa, y, in piltontli, ic cenca qujiecteneoa, cenca ic papaquj, ic motlamachtia. qujtoa: quenamj ietiuhi in piltzintli intla nemjz ca tel pilli, aço itla imaçeoal iez.

Auh in jcoac ie matlacxiuhtia aço ie vmome, anoço ie omej, icoac qujcalaquja in calmecac, inmac qujmoncaoaia in tlenamacaque, in tlamacazque, injc vmpa izcaltiloz nonotzaloz, tlachieltiloz inic vel

1. After pipiltoan, the Real Academia de la Historia MS has the following, omitted from the Florentine Codex: "Inic mocuepaoaz inic mocaltia ça ye no yuc in omoioo in tlacatilotl, yuc oc"—"they were reared and brought up just as had been told in the [section] on birth."

565 871 there, corrected, and instructed; that he might live an upright life. They constrained him to do the penances, setting fir branches [on the city altars] at night, or there where they went to place the fir branches on mountain tops—there where sacrifices were made at midnight. Or else he entered the song house; they left him in the hands of the masters of the youths. They charged him with the sweeping, or with dancing and song—with all which was concerned with the performance of penances.

565 868 701 And when he was already fifteen years old, then he took up arms; or, reaching twenty years of age, then he went forth to war. First [his parents] summoned those who were seasoned warriors. They gave them to eat and to drink, and they gave gifts to all the seasoned warriors. They gave them large, cotton capes, or carmine colored breech clouts, or capes painted with designs. And then they besought the seasoned warriors; in just the same way as hath been told above, so they entreated them.

And then they took him to the wars. The seasoned warriors went taking great care of him, lest somewhere he might be lost. And they taught him well how to guard himself with a shield; how one fought; how a spear was fended off with a shield. And when a battle was joined, when already there was fighting and perhaps already captives were being taken, they taught him well and made him see how he might take a captive. Perhaps then he took a captive with the aid of others, or he [alone] could take one.[2] For truly it was well seen to that many men become brave warriors.

[202] And when captives were being taken, then at once couriers, of marriageable age, quickly went forth, called victory messengers, who speedily went to inform Moctezuma.

